VIRGINIA MILITARY BOUNTY LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JULY 31, 1789.

Mr. WHITE, from the committee to which it was referred to examine into the measures taken by Congress and the State of Virginia, respecting the lands reserved for the use of the officers and soldiers of the State, on continental and State establishments, in the cession made by the said State to the United States of the territory northwest of the Ohio river, made the following report :

That the Legislature of Virginia, by their act of the 2d of January, 1781, resolved that they would yield to the Congress of the United States, for the benefit of the said States, all the right, title, and claim, which the said commonwealth had to the northwest of the River Ohio, upon condition (among others in the said act expressed) that, in case the quantity of good lands on the southeast side of the Ohio, upon the waters of Cumberland river, and between the Green river and Tennessee river, which have been reserved by law for the Virginia troops upon continental establishment, should, from the North Carolina line, bearing in further upon the Cumberland lands than was expected, prove insufficient for the legal bounties, the deficiencies should be made up to the troops in good lands, to be laid off between the Rivers Scioto and Little Miami, on the northwest side of the River Ohio, in such proportions as have been engaged to them by the laws of Virginia.

That Congress, by their act of the 13th of September, 1783, agreed to accept the said cession, on the condition above mentioned.

That the Legislature of Virginia, by their act of the 20th of October, 1783, authorized their delegates in Congress to convey, transfer, and assign to the United States, the right, title, and claim, of the said State, to the lands within her charter, and northwest of the River Ohio, on the terms agreed to by Congress, including the above mentioned condition, which conveyance the said delegates accordingly made.

That, on the 17th of July, 1788, Congress resolved that the State of Virginia be informed that Congress consider all locations and surveys which shall be made by, or on account of, the said troops, on the said lands between the Scioto and Little Miami, before the said deficiency, if any, on the southeast side of the Ohio, shall be ascertained and stated to Congress, invalid, and that the executive of the State of Virginia be requested to inform Congress whether there has been any deficiency of good lands, reserved by the laws of that State, on the southeast side of the Ohio, for the Virginia troops upon continental establishment; and if there has been any deficiency, what is the amount; and, also, what checks have been provided by the said State to prevent the said troops taking up more lands than are actually due to them; in order that measures may immediately be taken for laying off, for the benefit of such troops, a sufficient quantity of good land between the Rivers Scioto and Little Miami, and that Congress may be prepared to dispose of the remaining land between those rivers, for the general benefit of the Union.

That the council of Virginia, on the 4th of August, 1788, took the said resolutions into consideration, and, thereupon, advised that the acting superintendent, appointed by virtue of an act of Assembly, entitled "An act for surveying the lands given by law to the officers and soldiers on continental and State establishments, and for other purposes," do state to that board the quantity of good lands on the southeast side of the Ohio; whether all the good lands were located or surveyed before they proceeded to locate on the northwest side of the Ohio; how much has been located or surveyed on the southeast side for the Virginia troops on State establishment; how much for the Virginia troops on the southeast side; what is the real deficiency of good lands on the southeast side; what locations or surveys have been made for the Virginia troops on continental establishment, on the northwest side; and what quantity on the southeast side is allotted to the continental and State lines, by the agreement of their respective deputations, on the 17th of December, 1783; that an answer be written to Congress, in the words by the said advice recommended; and that copies of the said advice shall be immediately despatched, by express, to the superintendents aforesaid, together with the copies of the above mentioned resolution; and that a copy of that advice be transmitted to the delegates of the State in Congress.

In compliance of which advice the governor of Virginia, on the said 4th of August, 1788, wrote to the president of Congress a letter, of which an attested copy is produced. [No. 1.]

The governor also transmitted to the superintendents, before mentioned, copies of the said resolution of Congress and advice of council, from whom he received a letter, dated 17th November, 1788, the original of which is produced. [No. 2.]

That, on the 1st of September, 1788, Congress resolved that the executive of the State of Virginia be informed that the act of Congress of 17th July, 1788, was not meant, nor is it to be interpreted, to infringe any stipulation in the cession made by Virginia to the United States; and that it is not the intention of Congress to take any further measures, at present, respecting the lands between the Scioto and Little Miami, but to allow a reasonable time for the returns mentioned in the act of Congress aforesaid; and for all other measures which may be requisite for ascertaining and carrying into effect, on fair and liberal principles, the intention of the parties to the said act of cession.

That the Legislature of Virginia, on the 30th of December, 1788, resolved, that the protest of the executive against the right of the United States to interfere in the locations and surveys of the officers and soldiers of the Virginia line on continental establishment, as expressed in the letter of the said executive to the president of Congress, of the 4th of August, 1788, ought to be approved, as containing the sense of the General Assembly upon the true construction of the terms of cession of the western territory by this commonwealth to the United States, and that the other proceedings of the said executive upon that subject ought also to be approved.

That the governor of Virginia, in a letter dated 6th January, 1789, transmitted to the delegates in Congress for the State of Virginia, the letter from the superintendents before mentioned; also, a certificate from T. Meriwether, dated 30th December, 1788, stating that certificates for land warrants had issued to the late officers and soldiers of the Virginia line, on continental establishment, for two millions eight hundred and sixty thousand acres, and to the officers and soldiers of the State line and navy, for one million one hundred and seven thousand seven hundred and seventy-four acres. [No. 3.]

RICHMOND, August 4, 1788.

SIR: Our desire to comply with the request of Congress induces us to hasten an answer to their act of the 17th ultimo, without waiting for that full, official information which we shall immediately endeavor to procure, and shall transmit as soon as it may be received. We, therefore, trust that no definitive measures may be pursued by your honorable body, with respect to the lands between the Scioto and Little Miami, until that full official information shall arrive.

But, sir, we are compelled to protest, that nothing contained in this communication, made at the special instance of Congress, is to be interpreted into an acquiescence of Virginia under that resolution, which invalidates locations and surveys between those two rivers, or into an abandonment or diminution of rights existing under any act of this commonwealth; we are compelled thus to protest, because we have grounds for believing, that this resolution will excite an alarm highly injurious to the tranquillity of the Union, as those adventurers who will be affected by it have already incurred heavy toil and expense.

We do not yet possess any formal documents, upon which we can positively assert that there is a deficiency of good land on the southeast side of the Ohio. But we are thoroughly persuaded, from the number of acres for which warrants have already issued, that a deficiency, great, indeed, does exist. For ascertaining the fact, we shall immediately despatch an express to the superintendents appointed, under the authority of law, to regulate the surveys for the benefit of the Virginia troops. Congress will, doubtless, allow a sufficient time for obtaining an answer from persons at so great a distance as the neighborhood of the Mississippi or Ohio.

The law to which we have now alluded is entitled, "An act for surveying the land given by law to the officers and soldiers on continental and State establishments, and for other purposes." It was passed at the same session with another act, under which the United States succeed to the rights of Virginia to the territory northwest of the Ohio, and which is entitled "An act to authorize the delegates of the State in Congress to convey to the United States, in Congress assembled, all the right of this commonwealth to the territory northward of the River Ohio;" and is prior in order. Congress, then, have accepted our cession, subject to the operation of the first mentioned law; a part of the fourth clause in which runs in these words: "And be it further enacted, That the surveyors, under the direction of the superintendents, and the claimants having a right to survey from the priority of their numbers, shall proceed, in the first place, to survey all the good lands, to be adjudged of by the superintendents in that tract of country lying on the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers, as set apart by law for the said officers and soldiers; and then proceed, in the like manner, to survey on the northwest side of the River Ohio, between the Rivers Scioto and the Little Miami, until the deficiency of all military bounties in lands shall be fully and amply made up."

The superintendents and principal surveyors, therefore, having adjudged all the good lands on the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers to be exhausted, and having proceeded to locate on the northwest side of the Ohio, it would seem that Congress cannot annul their locations or surveys, if any have been made in that district.

The checks provided to prevent the troops taking up more lands than are actually due to them, will be found in the law, of which a copy is now sent. The summary of proceedings, according to that law, is as follows:

The documents of the officer or soldier are submitted to Colonel Meriwether, (an officer appointed for this, and other military purposes,) examined, and reported by him to the governor, who certifies the claim of the party, if entitled to the bounty, to the land office, upon which certificate the register issues his warrant, directed to the principal surveyor of the lands set apart for military bounties, and makes a record of the warrant.

The party then carries the warrant to the surveyor's office, makes his location, and leaves the warrant with the surveyor, who has it registered, and filed away till the survey is made, when he returns it, with the survey, to the land office, where it is again examined with the record in the land office, and cancelled. The survey remains six months in the land office, and, if no better right is asserted within that time, by caveat is then carried into grant.

I have the honor to be,

EDM. RANDOLPH.

The Honorable the PRESIDENT of Congress.

P. S. The honorable delegates of Virginia will receive, by this mail, a printed copy of the laws referred to; and I have taken the liberty of requesting them to furnish Congress with the laws herein referred to.

RICHMOND, November 17, 1788.

SIR: We have received from the executive a copy of a resolution of Congress, together with an order of a council of the 4th of August last, requiring from the acting superintendents appointed by law for locating and surveying the lands allotted to the officers and soldiers of the late army and State navy, a report of the quantity of good lands on the southeast side of the Ohio; whether all the good lands were located and surveyed, before they proceeded to locate on the northwest side of the Ohio; how much has been located and surveyed on the southeast side for the Virginia troops on State establishment; how much for the Virginia troops on continental establishment, on the southeast side; what locations and surveys have been made for the Virginia troops on continental establishment on the northwest side; and what quantity on the southeast side is allotted to the continental and State lines by the agreement of their respective deputations on the 17th of December, 1783.

Without an actual survey of the whole of the country within the boundaries described by the laws reserving the lands on the southeast side of the Ohio, including that between the Tennessee and the Mississippi, it is impossible to ascertain the quantity contained therein, or the quantity allotted to each of the lines by the agreement above alluded to; but from the best estimate we could make, it was adjudged that the whole country contained about six millions of acres, and the dividing line agreed on left, as was estimated, about two millions five hundred thousand acres in that part allotted to the continental line, and about three millions five hundred thousand to the State line, which, on our exploring it, was found to be far inferior in quality to what was expected, from the description that had been given of it; fully one-third of it being extensive open barrens, which are large tracts of land, without timber, covered with a coarse sedge, and not more than one-tenth fit for cultivation, and a great proportion of the wood land mountainous, poor, and stony. It was estimated that not more than one-third of the whole could be called good land.

From this calculation, the quantity of good lands within the part allotted to the continental line, would be eight hundred and thirty-three thousand three hundred and thirty-three and one-third acres, or thereabouts; from which, considerably upwards of one hundred thousand acres are taken by the grant to William Henderson and company, at the mouth of Green river; and it appears, from the return made by the surveyor for the continental line, that seven hundred and twenty-four thousand forty-five and one-third acres have been located on those lands, some part of which have been located on lands of an inferior quality, by individuals, on account of salt springs, or other natural advantages. And from our own observations, while engaged in the business, and from the best information, we are well assured that the whole of the good lands in that district are taken; from the same estimation, it will appear that the quantity of good lands within the allotment to the State line would be one million one hundred and sixty-six thousand six hundred and sixty-six and two-third acres, or thereabouts, of which, as appears from the report of the deputy surveyor of that line, eight hundred and sixty-seven thousand six hundred and seventy-two and two-third acres have been located, which leaves one hundred and ninety-eight thousand nine hundred and ninety-four acres remaining unlocated, which, from the amount of warrants issued, will be no more than sufficient to answer the whole of these claims. Moreover, it is probable there will be a great deficiency of good lands to the State line, as near three hundred thousand acres of the lands between the Tennessee, part of which were located by the superintendents, were covered with treasury warrants, previous to that country being reserved to them by the Legislature, in 1781, the right to which is now in dispute, depending, as we are informed, before the high court of appeals; and, if it is decided in favor of the treasury claimants, the deficiency will, by so much, appear wanting to the military claimants.

We cannot undertake to determine what the deficiency to the continental line may be, because we have not been informed of the amount of the warrants issued from the register's office; therefore, we can only say what is deficient on the warrants already lodged in the surveyor's office. It appears, by the report from the surveyor of the continental line, that the amount of the warrants filed in his office is two millions seven hundred and sixty-nine thousand and seventy-nine and one-third acres, seven hundred and twenty-four thousand and forty-five and one-third acres of which are located on the southeast side of the Ohio, which leaves a deficiency of two millions forty-five thousand and thirty-four acres; and we are well assured, that warrants, to a considerable amount, have issued from the register's office, which have not been lodged in the surveyor's office. Our locations on the southeast side of the Ohio commenced on or about the 1st of August, 1784, from which time the office was kept open, and the business continued until all the good lands in that country, within the continental boundary, which could be found, were located and entered on, to the amount before stated; and finding that there would be no more within the State boundary than sufficient to satisfy their claims, and a great probability of a deficiency, the locations on the northwest side commenced by the directions of the superintendents on the 1st day of August, 1787; and it appears, by the report from the surveyor, that one million three hundred and ninety-five thousand three hundred and eighty-five and one-third acres have since been located in that country; and we beg leave to observe, that it is our opinion, from the extent of the area of the reserved lands between the Scioto and Little Miami, that there will be found a deficiency of good lands there, to satisfy the claims now to be located.

We cannot close this address without observing that, in transacting the whole of this business, we have endeavored to do the strictest justice to the public, as well as the individuals for whom we were trustees; and, notwithstanding the difficulties and dangers which we have unavoidably encountered, we hope it will be found that we have discharged the trust with fidelity; and if it should be found that we have fallen short, it will be attributed to the difficulties attendant on a business which we were obliged to pursue in a country far distant from any inhabitants, which none can rightly judge of but those who have experienced them.

We have the honor to be,

Your most obedient humble servants,

M. CARRINGTON,

A. PARKER,

R. ARCHER,

Superintendents for the Continental Line.

CESSIONS FROM NEW YORK AND MASSACHUSETTS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JULY 31, 1789.

Mr. HUNTINGTON, from the committee to which was referred the petition of Nathaniel Gorham, of the State of Massachusetts, stating that he and Oliver Phelps are interested, by purchase from said State, in certain lands, which will be materially affected by the line directed to be run between the United States and the State of New York, and praying that such measures may be taken therein as shall be consistent with a due regard to the rights of himself and the said Phelps, made the following report:

That, on the 1st day of March, 1781, James Duane, William Floyd, and Alexander McDougal, esquires, by virtue of powers given them by the State of New York, made and executed to the United States, in Congress assembled, a deed of cession, by which they ceded to the United States the right and claim of the said State of New York to a large territory in the western country, restricting the western boundary of the said State, with respect of jurisdiction, as well as the right of pre-emption by the lines, and in the manner following, that is to say: By a line from the northeast corner of the State of Pennsylvania, along the north bounds thereof to its northwest corner, continued due west until it be intersected by a meridian line to be drawn from the forty-fifth degree of north latitude, through the most westerly bent or inclination of Lake Ontario; thence, by the said meridian line, to the forty-fifth degree of north latitude; and thence, by the said forty-fifth degree of north latitude.

But if, on experiment, the above meridian line shall not comprehend twenty miles due west from the most westerly bent or inclination of the river or strait of Niagara, then, by the said deed of cession, the western boundary of the said State of New York is limited in manner following, that is to say: by a line from the northeast corner of the State of Pennsylvania, along the north bounds thereof, to its northwest corner, continued, until it shall be intersected by a meridian line, to be drawn from the forty-fifth degree of north latitude, through a point twenty miles due west from the most westerly bent or inclination of the river or strait of Niagara; thence, by the said meridian line, to the forty-fifth degree of north latitude; which said deed of cession was accepted by Congress on the 29th day of October, 1782.

That, at the time of accepting the said deed of cession by Congress, the northwest corner of the State of Pennsylvania was not known, but was supposed to be east of the meridian lines above mentioned, and has since been found to be within the waters of Lake Erie, and is now supposed to be some miles west of both the above mentioned meridian lines.

That, on the 18th day of April, 1785, Congress accepted of a cession from the commonwealth of Massachusetts, of the same western territory ceded by the State of New York, restricted and bounded by the same meridian lines described in the cession of the last mentioned State, with this difference only: that the said cession of the State of Massachusetts has no reference to any boundary of the State of Pennsylvania; but describes the eastern boundary of the territory ceded to be a meridian line to be drawn through the most westerly part of Lake Ontario, in case such meridian line shall comprehend twenty miles due west from the most westerly bent or inclination of the river or strait of Niagara, and thence, by the said meridian line, to the most southerly side line contained in the charter of Massachusetts.

That it is the opinion of your committee that the western boundary of the State of New York is limited by one of the aforesaid meridian lines, to be found by experiment, as is by the said deeds of cession expressed.

That the memorialist proposes, in behalf of himself and partner, to agree, so far as concerns the property of the land in question, to submit the principles of the said cessions, and the ascertaining of the said meridian lines, to commissioners, whose determination, on the hearing of all parties, shall be conclusive.

That the said meridian line, when ascertained, will be the line of property between the United States and the lands of the said memorialist and partner, and will also be the line of jurisdiction between the United States and the State of New York.

From the foregoing statement of facts, your committee beg leave to recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That the President of the United States be authorized and requested to take proper measures for ascertaining the eastern boundary of the aforementioned cessions from the States of New York and Massachusetts, in conformity to the descriptions therein contained.

2d SESSION.

PLAN FOR DISPOSING OF THE PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JULY 22, 1790.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, July, 20, 1790.

In obedience to the order of the House of Representatives, of the 20th of January last, the Secretary of the Treasury respectfully reports:

That, in the formation of a plan for the disposition of the vacant lands of the United States, there appear to be two leading objects of consideration: one, the facility of advantageous sales, according to the probable course of purchases; the other the accommodation of individuals now inhabiting the western country, or who may hereafter emigrate thither. The former, as an operation of finance, claims primary attention; the latter is important, as it relates to the satisfaction of the inhabitants of the western country. It is desirable, and does not appear impracticable, to conciliate both. Purchasers may be contemplated in three classes: monied individuals and companies, who will buy to sell again; associations of persons who intend to make settlements themselves; single persons, or families now resident in the western country, or who emigrate thither hereafter. The two first will be frequently blended, and will always want considerable tracts. The last will generally purchase small quantities. Hence, a plan for the sale of the western lands, while it may have due regard to the last, should be calculated to obtain all the advantages which may be derived from the two first classes. For this reason, it seems requisite that the General Land Office should be established at the seat of Government. It is there that the principal purchasers, whether citizens or foreigners, can most easily find proper agents, and that contracts for large purchases can be best adjusted.

But the accommodation of the present inhabitants of the western territory, and of unassociated persons and families who may emigrate thither, seems to require that one office, subordinate to that at the seat of Congress, should be opened in the northwestern, and another in the southwestern Government.

Each of these offices, as well the general one as the subordinate ones, it is conceived, may be placed with convenience under the superintendence of three commissioners, who may either be pre-established officers of the Government, to whom the duty may be assigned by law, or persons specially appointed for the purpose. The former is recommended by considerations of economy, and, it is probable, would embrace every advantage which could be derived from a special appointment. To obviate those inconveniences, and to facilitate and insure the attainment of those advantages which may arise from new and casual circumstances springing up from foreign and domestic causes, appear to be an object for which adequate provision should be made, in any plan that may be adopted. For this reason, and from the intrinsic difficulty of regulating the details of a specific provision for the various objects which require to be consulted, so as neither to do too much nor too little for either, it is respectfully submitted, whether it would not be advisable to vest a considerable latitude of discretion in the Commissioners of the General Land Office, subject to some such regulations and limitations as follows, viz:

That no land shall be sold, except such in respect to which the titles of the Indian tribes shall have been previously extinguished.

That a sufficient tract or tracts shall be reserved and set apart for satisfying the subscribers to the proposed loan in the public debt, but that no location shall be for less than five hundred acres.

That convenient tracts shall, from time to time, be set apart for the purpose of locations by actual settlers, in quantities not exceeding, to one person, one hundred acres.

That other tracts shall, from time to time, be set apart for sales in townships of ten miles square, except where they shall adjoin upon a boundary of some prior grant, or of a tract so set apart, in which cases there shall be no greater departure from such form of location than may be absolutely necessary.

That any quantities may, nevertheless, be sold by special contract, comprehended either within natural boundaries or lines, or both.

That the price shall be thirty cents per acre, to be paid either in gold or silver, or in public securities, computing those which shall bear an immediate interest of six per cent. as at par with gold and silver; and those which bear a future or less interest, if any, they shall be at a proportionate value. That certificates issued for land upon the proposed loan shall operate as warrants within the tract or tracts which shall be specially set apart for satisfying the subscribers thereto, and shall also be receivable in all payments whatsoever for lands by way of discount, acre for acre.

That no credit shall be given for any quantity less than a township of ten miles square, nor more than two years credit for any greater quantity.

That in every instance of credit, at least one quarter part of the consideration shall be paid down, and security, other than the land itself, shall be required for the residue. And that no title shall be given for any tract or part of a purchase, beyond the quantity for which the consideration shall be actually paid.

That the residue of the tract or tracts set apart for the subscribers to the proposed loan, which shall not have been located within two years after the same shall have been set apart, may then be sold on the same terms as any other land.

That the commissioners of each subordinate office shall have the management of all sales, and the issuing of warrants for all locations in the tracts to be set apart for the accommodation of individual settlers subject to the superintendency of the Commissioners of the General Land Office, who may also commit to them the management of any other sales or locations which it may be found expedient to place under their direction. That there shall be a surveyor general, who shall have power to appoint a deputy surveyor general in each of the western Governments, and a competent number of deputy surveyors, to execute, in person, all warrants to them directed by the surveyor general or the deputy surveyors general, within certain districts to be assigned to them respectively. That the surveyor general shall also have in charge all the duties committed to the geographer general, by the several resolutions and ordinances of Congress. That all warrants issued at the General Land Office shall be signed by the commissioners, or such one of them as they may nominate for that purpose, and shall be directed to the surveyor general. That all warrants issued at a subordinate office, shall be signed by the commissioners of such office, or by such one of them as they may nominate for that purpose, and shall be directed to the deputy surveyor general within the Government. That the priority of locations upon warrants shall be determined by the times of applications of the deputy surveyors; and, in case of two applications for the same land at one time, the priority may be determined by lot. That the Treasurer of the United States shall be the receiver of all payments for sales made at the General Land Office, and may also receive deposits of money or securities for purchases intended to be made at the subordinate offices; his receipts or certificates for which, shall be received in payment at those offices. That the secretary of each of the western Governments shall be the receiver of all payments arising from sales at the office of such Government. That controversies concerning rights to patents or grants of land, shall be determined by the commissioners of that office under whose immediate direction or jurisdiction the locations, in respect to which they may arise, shall have been made. That the completion of all contracts and sales, heretofore made, shall be under the direction of the Commissioners of the General Land Office. That the Commissioners of the General Land Office, surveyor general, deputy surveyors general, and the commissioners of the land office in each of the western Governments, shall not purchase, nor shall others purchase for them in trust, any public lands.

That the secretaries of the western Governments shall give security for the faithful discharge of their duty as receivers of the land office. That all patents shall be signed by the President of the United States, or by the Vice President, or officer of Government acting as President, and shall be recorded in the office either of the surveyor general, or of the clerk of the Supreme Court of the United States. That all officers acting under the laws establishing the land office, shall make oath faithfully to discharge their respective duties, previously to their entering upon the execution thereof. That all surveys of land shall be at the expense of the purchasers or grantees. That the fees shall not exceed certain rates, to be specified in the law, affording equitable compensations for the services of the surveyors, and establishing reasonable and customary charges for patents and other office papers for the benefit of the United States. That the Commissioners of the General Land Office shall, as soon as may be, from time to time, cause all the rules and regulations which they may establish, to be published in one gazette at least, in each State, and in each of the western Governments where there is a gazette, for the information of the citizens of the United States. Regulations like these will define and fix the most essential particulars which can regard the disposal of the western lands, and, where they leave any thing to discretion, will indicate the general principles or policy intended by the Legislature to be observed; for a conformity to which, the commissioners will of course be responsible. They will, at the same time, leave room for accommodating to circumstances which cannot, beforehand, be accurately appreciated; and for varying the course of proceeding, as experience shall suggest to be proper, and will avoid the danger of those obstructions and embarrassments in the execution, which would be to be apprehended from an endeavor at greater precision and more exact detail.

All which is humbly submitted.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON,
Secretary of the Treasury.

LAND CLAIMANTS IN THE NORTHWESTERN TERRITORY.

COMMUNICATED TO CONGRESS DECEMBER 23, 1790.

UNITED STATES, December 23, 1790.

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Reps:

It appearing by the report of the Secretary of the Government northwest of the Ohio, that there are certain cases respecting grants of land within that Territory, which require the interference of the Legislature of the United States, I have directed a copy of said report, and the papers therein referred to, to be laid before you, together with a copy of the report of the Secretary of State upon the same subject.

G. WASHINGTON.

VINCENNES, COUNTY OF KNOX, July 31, 1790.

SIR, The absence of the governor having made it my duty to carry into effect, as far as possible, the resolution of Congress of the 29th of August, 1788, respecting the inhabitants of Post Vincennes, I beg leave to report not only my proceedings under that resolution, but some circumstances which, in my opinion, ought at this time to be communicated, as very materially concerning the interests of the United States as well as individual settlers.

The claims and pretensions of the people have very generally been exhibited; but, notwithstanding they were early advertised upon this business, by proclamation of Governor St. Clair, given at Kaskaskias, in March last, and have since been repeatedly called upon by me, yet I have no doubt there are a few instances of inattention and neglect, which I have provided for by publication No. 8, a copy of which is herewith annexed.

For all the possessions which appear to have been made by French or British concessions, I have issued warrants of survey, as by the last page of Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7, of the land records for the county of Knox, copies of all which accompany this report.

I have also directed that the four hundred acre lots to be given to every head of a family, should be laid off for the persons named in Nos. 1 and 2, and allotted, excepting those that might fall to the absentees mentioned in the pages b and c of No. 2, which are to be retained as there set forth, until the pleasure of Government is known.

I beg leave, sir, to observe that there are a few instances where the ancient inhabitants (by removing from Vincennes to the Illinois country, or from that country to this place) cannot be included under the description of persons entitled to donation lands, and they humbly solicit that Congress would be graciously pleased to consider their situation, and permit them to participate in the general bounty.

I think it necessary here to remark, sir, that although the lands and lots which have been ordered to be surveyed appear, from very good oral testimony, to belong to those persons under whose names they are respectively entered, either by original grants to them made, purchase, or inheritance, yet there is scarcely one case in twenty where the title is complete, owing to the desultory manner in which public business has been transacted, and some other unfortunate causes.

The original concessions by the French and British commandants were generally made upon a small scrap of paper, which it has been customary to lodge in the notary's office, who has seldom kept any book of record, but committed the most important land concerns to loose sheets; which, in process of time, have come into the possession of persons that have fraudulently destroyed them, or, unacquainted with their consequence, innocently lost or trifled them away; for, by the French usage, they are considered as family inheritance, and often descend to women and children. In one instance, and during the government of Mr. St. Ange here, a royal notary ran off with all the public papers in his possession, as by a certificate produced to me; and I am very sorry further to observe, that, in the office of Mr. Le Grand, which continued from the year 1777 to 1778, and where should have been the vouchers for important land transactions, the records have been so falsified, and there is such gross fraud and forgery as to invalidate all evidence and information which I might otherwise have acquired from his papers.

In addition, sir, to the ancient possessions of the people of Vincennes, under French and British concessions here, is about one hundred and fifty acres of land, constituting a part of the village, and extending a mile up the Wabash river, in front of their improved claims, which was granted by Mr. St. Ange to some of the Piankeshaw Indians, allotted into small divisions for their wigwams, and by them occupied and improved until the year 1786, when the last of them moved off; selling, individually, as they took themselves away, their several parts and proportions. The inhabitants now hold this land, parcelled out amongst them in small lots, some of which are highly improved, and have been built upon before and since 1783. But imagining that a confirmation of any Indian purchase whatever might virtually involve some future questions of magnitude in this Territory, I have postponed all order upon the subject until the pleasure of Congress can be known; in the mean time giving to the claimants my private opinion that they would be permitted to retain them, either by free gift or for some small consideration.

A court of civil and criminal jurisdiction, established at this place by J. Todd, esq., under the authority of Virginia, in June, 1779, and who eked out their existence to the summer of 1787, have, during that long period, continued to make large grants of land, even by their own acknowledgments, and without more authority for so doing than is set forth in No. 9. Many of the concessions which have been exhibited to me in their name, they deny to have had any knowledge of; and, indeed, there are some reasons to conclude they may have been forged in the office of Mr. Le Grand, before mentioned, who was a servant of the court, and in whose handwriting the deeds have all been made out.

I cannot find, from any information I have been able to acquire, that Mr. Todd ever delegated any power of granting land in this country, or, in fact, that he was endowed with it himself. On the contrary, I find by the acts of Virginia of 1779, that the lands northwest of the River Ohio were expressly excepted from location, and that it was declared no person should be allowed pre-emption, or any benefit whatever, from settling this side the said river; and the governor was desired to issue his proclamation, requiring all persons to remove themselves; and, in case of disobedience, to make use of an armed force. This is not to extend to French and other old inhabitants actually settled on or before that time in the villages of Post Vincennes and upon the Mississippi. It appears, however, by a proclamation of Mr. Todd's, No. 10, given at Kaskaskias, the 15th day of June, 1779, that a kind of authority was meant to be implied somewhere in the country to grant lands, not only upon the river bottoms and prairies under the French restrictions, but in large quantities, and with more latitude at a distance therefrom; and twenty-six thousand acres have been granted away from that time to 1783, inclusive; and to the year 1787, (when General Harmar checked the abuse,) twenty-two thousand more, though generally in parcels of four hundred acres, though some are much smaller, and do not exceed the size of house lots. The court also granted to individuals, in some instances, tracts of many leagues square; but a sense of the impropriety of such measures has prevented the bringing forward those claims. Notwithstanding that some of the four hundred acres and small lots, on or before 1783, yet the authority whence they were derived has been such that I could not consider them as "rightful claims." They are, however, sir, in a few instances, under considerable cultivation and improvement, and some of the plantations and many of the small lots which have been granted by the court since that time, are now cultivated in tillage, and have been possessed by the present claimants at much expense; but by far the greatest number of them were obtained at the cost of office fees only, and remain to this hour in a state of nature, or with no other alteration than has been necessary to convert them into sugar camps.

Upon the subject of those lands, sir, a petition has been presented to me, by and in behalf of eighty Americans, setting forth that they were induced to come into this country by the court of Post Vincennes, with every assurance of their authority to make grants. That, in good faith of this, they have formed their establishments at considerable expense, and must be involved in ruin, unless the generosity of Congress shall permit their holding them.

The French inhabitants have also petitioned me upon the subject of court grants; some of which are now under cultivation, at no small expense and labor.

I beg leave, sir, to lay the situation of those people before Government, most respectfully representing that the welfare and prosperity of a number of industrious and good citizens in this Territory must depend very much upon their order.

A petition has also been presented by the inhabitants of Vincennes, praying a confirmation of their commons, comprehending about two thousand four hundred acres of good, and three thousand acres of sunken lands. They have been, it appears, thirty years under a fence, which is intended to confine their cattle within its boundaries, and keep them out of their wheat fields; for, contrary to the usage of farmers generally, the cattle are enclosed and the cultivated lands are left at large, except those parts which immediately approach the commons. But this fence, and quiet possession under the French and British Governments, they seem to imagine entitles them to a good prescriptive right. It has been the usage of the commandants to make all their grants in writing; and, as this has not been produced, or any evidence of it, I think it my duty to refer the matter to Congress, as I am not authorized to decide upon it.

One other petition, sir, I am constrained to introduce. It has been signed by one hundred and thirty-one Canadian French and American inhabitants, all enrolled in the militia, setting forth that many of them were heads of families soon after the year 1783. That, from their situation, they are liable to, and willing to perform, an extraordinary proportion of military duty, and soliciting that Congress would be pleased to make them a donation of lands. In justice to the petitioners, I think it incumbent on me to observe, that the commanding officer of the regular troops here has been obliged in some instances to demand their services for convoys of provisions up the Wabash river; and, from the weakness of the garrison, and the present difficulties of communication with other posts and the Ohio, that he may have frequent occasion for their aid, which I have no doubt will be yielded at all times with the greatest cheerfulness.

Before I close this letter, sir, I must take the liberty of representing to Congress, by desire of the citizens of this country, and as a matter which I humbly conceive they should be informed of, that there are, not only at this place, but in the several villages upon the Mississippi, considerable claims for supplies furnished the troops of Virginia before and since 1783, which no person yet has been authorized to attend to, and which is very injurious to the interest and feelings of men who seem to have been exposed to a variety of distresses and impositions by characters pretending to have acted under the orders of that Government.

The people of Vincennes have requested me to make known their sentiments of fidelity, and attachment to the sovereignty of the United States, and the satisfaction they feel in being received into their protection, which I beg leave to communicate in their own words, by the copy of an address presented me on the 23d instant.

If, in this long letter of report and representation, I may appear to have tediously dwelt upon the claims and pretensions of the people of this country, I request, sir, that it may be attributed to that desire which I feel at all times faithfully to execute the attentions necessary to individual interests, and the great duty I owe to Government.

With every sentiment of respect to your excellency and Congress, I have the honor to be, sir, your most obedient humble servant,

WINTHROP SARGENT.

The PRESIDENT of the United States.

TOWN AT POST VINCENNES, July 13, 1790.

SIR: From the best information I have been able to acquire, confirmed by the testimony of the gentlemen of the courts of quarter sessions of the peace and common pleas, as well as judge of probate, given me in the presence of yourself, Major Hamtramck, and Major Vigo, I believe the following to be an accurate list of the heads of families settled at Post Vincennes, on and before the year 1783, and residents here at this time: consequently, they are entitled to the donation lands promised them by Congress; and you will please to consider this as your sufficient warrant for surveying and allotting them, agreeably to the commission given you for that purpose.

Patents will issue as soon as your returns are made into my office.

The following list of names is certainly within the letter of the resolution of Congress; and it appears to me that they are entitled to donation lands; but the consideration annexed to the grants in the Illinois country, leaves some doubts in my mind as to the propriety of decision until I can refer the matter. You will, however, lay off the necessary number of lots, to be for their use and benefit, if Congress shall so direct, or otherwise to revert to the United States.

WINTHROP SARGENT.

Thomas Dalton. He was a military officer here, on and before the year 1783, head of a family, and owner of lands, which he has not disposed of, but in the last year he went to New Orleans, where he is a tavern keeper.

William Hamilton. A settler and head of a family, in 1783, but now resident in Kentucky; he has lands here.

Joseph Rouse. Head of a family here, in 1783, sold his property and removed to the Illinois, but claims his donation lands at this place.

Joseph Dubé. Head of a family, in 1783, now gone to the Spanish settlements, has lands here, and claims the donation lot.

Guilbaut Charles. A claimant as Dubé, and in similar situation.

The widow of Pierre Peron. Is gone to New Orleans, but left children at this place; her husband was the head of a family, and the donation land is claimed for the children.

N. B. It is observed of these people, that the scarcity of provisions and their poverty forced them away, but that they will return.

François Roussiant. Now living at Kahokia.

Ambrose Dumais. Has property here, but is absent.

SIR: You are also to survey, lay off, and bound the several tracts and parcels of land hereafter specified, for, and at the expense of, the proper claimants, and return plats thereof, as soon as may be, into the office of the secretary of the Territory. And you will please to observe, that the measurements of all ancient rights must be by the French acre or arpent, which has heretofore been the standard of land measure in this as well as the Illinois country.

A tract of two acres in front by forty, in the prairie below the village, one side to park, another to John Baptiste Lafreniere.

John Baptiste Tougas. A tract of land opposite to the village, two acres and a half front by the usual depth. This was originally granted to Noveaux, with the addition of another half acre, which has been transferred. Mr. Tougas claims at this time three acres, half an acre of which having been granted by the court, cannot be confirmed by me at this time.

Antoine Gamelin. A lot of about thirty toises, fronting on St. Honore street and running to the Wabash. This lot, it appears from the certificates, was originally granted to the church, and has been by the church wardens exchanged for the ground upon which the church now stands. It will be confirmed either to the church or Mr. Gamelin.

Proceedings of July 18th, from the Journals.

July 18th, was made the following publication, viz:

All persons who have exhibited their claims to lands in this settlement are desired to call and receive their papers at Major Vigo's, between the hours of twelve and two this morning, or from four to six this evening.

If there be any who have not yet attended to the repeated demands upon this business, they are to leave their papers at the office of the notary public, within sixty days from the date hereof.

Warrants of survey for most of the ancient claims and possessions will be put into the hands of Mr. Baird, and patents of confirmation are to be issued as soon as he shall have completed the surveys, and returned plats thereof into the office of the secretary of the Territory. But where the titles have not yet been properly explained, which is the case in some instances, it will be necessary, that the persons applying for their patents, give the best possible proof that they are entitled to them. There can be no doubt, but many of the ancient concessions may have been lost, and all record of them destroyed. In such cases, it will be proper to produce the testimony of some of the old people, that lands, claimed under such circumstances, have heretofore been occupied, under the authority of the French and British Governments by the persons from whom they pretend to derive their rights or titles. And whenever the original concession is produced, unless by the person to whom it was made, it will be absolutely necessary to show how it was acquired. In several instances concessions have been exhibited by persons of different names and families from those to whom they were primarily made, without any apparent assignment whatever, and it is not impossible that a confirmation to such claimants might be an act of very great injustice.

To the honorable Winthrop Sargent, esquire, secretary in and for the Territory of the United States Northwest of the River Ohio, and vested with all the powers of governor and commander-in-chief.

SIR: As you have given verbal orders to the magistrates who formerly composed the court of the district of Post Vincennes, under the jurisdiction of the State of Virginia, to give you their reasons for having taken upon them to grant concessions for the lands within the district, in obedience thereto, we beg leave to inform you that their principal reason is, that, since the establishment of this country, the commandants have always appeared to be vested with the powers to give lands. Their founder, Mr. Vincennes, began to give concessions, and all his successors have given lands and lots. Mr. Legras was appointed commandant of Post Vincennes, by the lieutenant of the county and commander-in-chief, John Todd, who was, in the year 1799, sent by the State of Virginia for to regulate the government of the country, and who substituted Mr. Legras, with his power. In his absence, Mr. Legras, who was then commandant, assumed that he had, in quality of commandant, authority to give lands according to the ancient usages of other commandants, and he verbally informed the court of Post Vincennes that, when they would judge it proper to give lands or lots to those who should come into the country to settle or otherwise, they might do it, and that he gave them permission so to do. These are the reasons that we acted upon, and if we have done more than we ought, it was on account of the little knowledge which we had of public affairs.

We are with the greatest respect,
Your honor's most obedient

And very humble servants,

PROCLAMATION.

ILLINOIS, to wit:

Whereas, from the fertility and beautiful situation of the lands bordering upon the Mississippi, Ohio, Illinois, and Wabash rivers, the taking up the usual quantity heretofore allowed for a settlement by the Government of Virginia, would injure both the strength and commerce of this country; I do, therefore, issue this proclamation, strictly enjoining all persons whatsoever from making any new settlement upon the flat lands of the said rivers, or within one league of said lands, unless in manner and form of settlements as heretofore made by the French inhabitants, until further orders herein given.

And, in order that all the claims to lands within the said county may be fully known, and some method provided for perpetuating by record the just claims, every inhabitant is required, as soon as conveniently may be, to lay before the persons in each district, appointed for that purpose, a memorandum of his or her land, with copies of all their vouchers, and where vouchers have never been given, or are lost, such depositions and certificates as will best tend to support their claims. The memorandum to mention the quantity of land, to whom originally granted, and when, deducing the title through the various occupants to the present possessor.

The number of adventurers who will shortly overrun this country, renders the above method necessary as well to ascertain the vacant lands as to guard against trespasses, which will probably be committed upon lands not of record.

Given under my hand and seal, at Kaskaskia, the fifteenth day of June, in the third year of the [L. s.] Commonwealth, one thousand seven hundred and seventy nine.

JOHN TODD, Jr.

The Secretary of State, having had under his consideration the report made by the Secretary of the Government northwest of the Ohio, of his proceedings for carrying into effect the resolution of Congress of August 29th, 1788, respecting the lands of the inhabitants of Post Vincennes, makes the following report thereon, to the President of the United States:

The resolution of Congress of August 29th, 1788, had confirmed in their possessions and titles, the French and Canadian inhabitants, and other settlers at that post, who, in or before the year 1783, had settled there, and had professed themselves citizens of the United States, or any of them; and had made a donation to every head of a family, of the same description of four hundred acres of land, part of a square to be laid off adjoining the improvements at the post.

The secretary of the Northwestern Government, in the absence of the Governor, has carried this resolution into effect, as to all the claims to which he thought it could be clearly applied. There remain, however, the following descriptions of cases on which he asks further instructions:

1. Certain cases within the letter of the resolution, but rendered doubtful by the condition annexed to the grants of lands in the Illinois country; the cases of these claimants, fifteen in number, are specially stated in the paper hereto annexed, No 2, and the lands are laid off for them, but remain ungranted until further orders.

2. Certain persons, who, by removals from one part of the Territory to another, are out of the letter of the resolution; but within its equity, as they conceive.

3. Certain heads of families, who became such soon after the year 1783, who petitioned for a participation of the donation, and urge extraordinary militia service, to which they are exposed.

4. One hundred and fifty acres of land within the village, granted under the former Government of that country, to the Piankeshaw Indians, and, on their removal, sold by them in parcels to individual inhabitants, who, in some instances, have highly improved them before and since 1783.

5. Lands granted both before and after 1783, by authority from the commandant of the post, who, according to the usage under the French and British Governments, thinking himself authorized to grant lands, delegated that authority to a court of civil and criminal jurisdiction, whose grants, before 1783, amounted to twenty-six thousand acres, and between that and 1787, (when the practice was stopped,) to twenty-two thousand acres; they are generally in parcels from four hundred acres down to the size of house lots; and some of them under considerable improvement. Some of the tenants urge that they were induced by the court itself to come and settle these lands, under assurance of their authority to grant them, and that a loss of the lands and improvements will involve them in ruin. Besides these small grants there are some much larger, sometimes of many leagues square, which a sense of their impropriety has prevented the grantee from bringing forward; many pretended grants, too, of this class, are believed to be forgeries, and are, therefore, to be guarded against.

6. Two thousand four hundred acres of good land, and three thousand acres of sunken land, held under the French, British, and American Governments, as commons for the use of the inhabitants of the village generally, and for thirty years past kept under enclosure for these purposes.

The legislature alone being competent to authorize the grant of lands in cases as yet unprovided for by the laws, the Secretary of State is of opinion that the report of the secretary of the Northwestern Government, with the papers therein referred to, should be laid before Congress for their determination. Authentic copies of them are herewith enclosed to the President of the United States,

LAND CLAIMANTS IN THE NORTHWESTERN TERRITORY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 6, 1791.

Mr. STRONG made the following report:

The committee appointed to take into consideration the message of the President of the United States, of the 23d December, respecting grants of land within the Territory of the Government Northwest of the Ohio, together with the papers accompanying it, and report what is proper to be done thereon, beg leave to report: That, in their opinion, the heads of families who were at Vincennes in the year 1783, and afterwards removed without the limits of the said Territory, are, notwithstanding, entitled to the donation of four hundred acres of land, made by the resolve of Congress, of August 29, 1788.

That four hundred acres of land should be given to each of those persons who, in the year 1783, were heads of families at Vincennes, or in the Illinois country, on the Mississippi, and who, since that time, have removed from one of the said places to the other; and that the Governor of the said Territory be directed to cause the same to be laid out for them, at their own expense, either at Vincennes, or in the Illinois country, as they shall severally choose.

That a donation should be made, of one hundred and fifty acres of land, heretofore in possession of the Piankeshaw Indians, and now under actual improvement, and constituting a part of the village of Vincennes, to the persons who are severally in possession of the said land.

That a tract of land, containing about five thousand four hundred acres, which for many years has been freed and used by the inhabitants of Vincennes as a common, should be confirmed to the said inhabitants, to be used as a common, until a division thereof in severalty among the said inhabitants shall be directed by law.

That, when lands have been actually improved and cultivated at Vincennes, or on the Mississippi, under a supposed grant thereof by any commandant or court claiming authority to make such grant, the Governor of the said Territory should be authorized to confirm to the persons who made such improvements, their heirs, and assigns, the lands supposed to have been granted, as aforesaid, or such parts thereof as he, in his discretion, may judge reasonable, not exceeding, to any one person, four hundred acres.

That the said Governor should also be authorized to make a grant of land, not exceeding one hundred acres, to each person who hath not obtained any donation of land from the United States, and who, on the first day of August, 1790, was enrolled in the militia at Vincennes, and has done militia duty.

And, in the opinion of the committee, it would be proper to direct that a bill be brought in for the purposes above mentioned.

All which is submitted.

VIRGINIA MILITARY BOUNTY LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO CONGRESS JANUARY 17, 1791.

UNITED STATES, January 17, 1791.

Gentlemen of the Senate and of the House of Representatives:

I lay before you a copy of two resolutions of the Legislature of Virginia, and of a petition of sundry officers and assignees of officers and soldiers of the Virginia line on continental establishment, on the subject of bounty lands allotted to them on the northwest side of the Ohio.

G. WASHINGTON.

Extract of a letter from the Governor of Virginia to the President of the United States, dated

"COUNCIL CHAMBER, Jan. 4, 1791.

"I beg leave also to lay before you copies of two other resolutions of the General Assembly, together with the petition of sundry officers of the Virginia line on continental establishment, on the subject of the bounty lands allotted to them on the northwest side of the Ohio.

"I have the honor, &c.

"BEVERLY RANDOLPH."

VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF DELEGATES,

Monday, December 20, 1790.

Resolved, That the act of Congress, entitled "An act to enable the officers and soldiers of the Virginia line on continental establishment to obtain titles to certain lands lying northwest of the River Ohio, between the Little Miami and Scioto," renders the entries and surveys made for the officers and soldiers of the continental line of this State, on the northwest side of the Ohio, doubtful and precarious, and destroys the rights of their assignees, which rights have been sanctioned by the laws of this Commonwealth.

Resolved, That the expression of the said act is so vague as to leave it uncertain whether officers having title to lands under the acts and resolutions of the General Assembly of this Commonwealth, but who have not continued in service to the end of the war, shall have grants on the warrants which have been issued to them.

Resolved, That the Executive be requested to transmit a copy of the foregoing resolutions, together with the petition of the officers and soldiers of the Virginia line, to the President of the United States.

December 22d, 1790. Agreed to by the Senate.

Test:

CHARLES HAY, C. H. D.

To the honorable the General Assembly of Virginia, the petition of sundry officers of the Virginia line on continental establishment, and of sundry assignees of officers and soldiers of the same line in behalf of themselves and others, sheweth:

That the interposition of Congress by their act of the 17th of July, 1788, annulling the entries and surveys made for the continental line of this State on the northwest side of the Ohio, has occasioned great uneasiness and delay to your petitioners, inasmuch as we apprehend it to be an infraction of the terms of the cession made to Congress, and an interference in judging ex parte of private property, which we think ourselves secured in by the laws of this State, antecedent to the cession; and an act of the last session of Congress, relative to the said land, instead of quieting, contributes to increase our uneasiness, and greatly perplexes your petitioners by totally deranging the business.

The process heretofore established by the State, under whose authority those bounties were derived, for obtaining the lands, are as follows, viz. The document of the officer or soldier to be submitted to Col. Meriwether, an accurate officer, appointed for this and other military purposes, examined and reported by him to the Governor, who certifies the claim of the applicant, if entitled to the bounty, to the land office, upon which certificate the register issues his warrant, directed to the principal surveyor, appointed for the special purpose of surveying those lands, authorizing him to survey, in one or more surveys, for the claimant, his heirs or assigns, the quantity of land to which he is entitled. Of this warrant the register makes a record; the claimant or his assignee then carries his warrant to the surveyor's office, makes or causes to be made his location, leaves the warrant with the surveyor, who has it registered and filed away till the survey is made, when he returns it, with the survey, to the land office, where it is again examined with the record, and cancelled. The survey remains six months in the land office; and if no better right is asserted within that time, by caveat is carried into grant, in conformity to this mode; warrants for all claims have long ago issued, many of them have been assigned, the holders have lodged them with the surveyor; and, in many instances, have deposited with him considerable sums of money for completing the whole business, and in addition to the fees for location and survey, the assignees have uniformly deposited with the surveyors, to be applied to contingent purposes, a tax, imposed by law, of one dollar for every one hundred acres by them lodged: hence have the assignees had and paid for a second sanction for their purchases. Your petitioners further show that the second and third sections of the act of Congress totally annul these proceedings, and direct a process to be undertaken anew, thereby depriving the persons concerned, not only of the great labor and toil already bestowed on the business, but of all the moneys they have expended. Your petitioners apprehend great delays will be occasioned by the mode prescribed in the fourth section of the said law, as no return can be made to the office of the Secretary of State till the whole business is finished, which may not be in many years, as some of the present claimants are infants, some live at considerable distances, and numbers, from indolence or other causes, will not attend, nor can your petitioners know in what manner, or where, in case of interference or other disputes, they are to be settled, and by whom. If letters patent issue in the name of the original claimants, notwithstanding there having assigned their claims, the assignees will be subjected to extraordinary inconvenience, and remediless, except by tedious and expensive suits, as numbers of the original claimants are dead, others removed to considerable distances, dispersed in remote places, unknown to the assignees. This will bear uncommonly hard on a part of your petitioners, viz. the assignees, who were countenanced and secured in their purchases by the laws of the State, as is fully expressed on the face of the warrant; nor have your petitioners any more certainty respecting the surveyor's fees and surveyor; they know not what officer is to execute that business, where he is to reside, what laws he is amenable to, or what penalties attend his malfeasance or misfeasance.

Another great inconvenience will be occasioned by the delay in transmitting from the seat of the General Government to the Executive of this State, the President's letters patent, and the industrious will have no incitement to execute their surveys, as they cannot obtain their titles, by their most strenuous exertions in encountering toil or danger, sooner than the most supine or fardy.

Your petitioners, therefore, pray the interposition of your honorable body, to have the acts of Congress relative to the premises revised and amended so as the business may go on in the old mode, as the most convenient, or to devise some other relief for your petitioners, such as to the wisdom of the Legislature may seem meet, and your petitioners, &c., &c.

3d SESSION.

LAND CLAIMANTS IN THE NORTHWESTERN TERRITORY.

COMMUNICATED TO CONGRESS FEBRUARY 18, 1791.

UNITED STATES, February 18, 1791.

Gentlemen of the Senate and of the House of Representatives:

I have received from the Secretary of State a report on the proceedings of the Governor of the Northwestern Territory, Kaskaskia, Kahokia, and Prairie, under the resolution of Congress of August 29, 1788, which, containing matter proper for your consideration, I lay the same before you.

G. WASHINGTON.

The Secretary of State, having received from Arthur St. Clair, esquire, Governor of the Northwestern Territory, a report of his proceedings for carrying into effect the resolve of Congress of August 29th, 1788, respecting the lands of the inhabitants of Kaskaskia, la Prairie du Rochers, and Kahokia, which report was enclosed to him in a letter bearing date the 10th instant, and observing therein several passages proper to be laid before the Legislature, has extracted the same, and, thereupon, makes to the President of the United States the following report:

In that which he made on the 14th of December, 1790, relative to the execution of the same resolution of Congress at Post Vincennes, he brought under certain general heads of description the claims to lands at that place, which had not been provided for by the said resolution of Congress. To keep the subject simplified as well as short, he will observe that the cases at Kaskaskia, described in the extract, marked A, belong to the fourth class of the said report for Vincennes; that those at Kaskaskia, of the extract B, belong to the fifth class of the report for St. Vincennes; and that those of Kahokia, in the extract C, belong to the sixth class of the same report, and may be comprehended in the provision to be made for them.

The extracts marked D, E, F, G, and H, describe other cases, out of the provision of the resolution, which have arisen at Kaskaskia and Kahokia, differing from each other, as well as from all the former classes.

The extracts marked I, K, state that the line which, by the resolve of Congress, of June 20th, 1788, had been so described as to place the lands to be allotted to the inhabitants of Kaskaskia and Kahokia in a fertile and convenient situation, had been so shifted, by the resolution of August 29th, 1788, as to throw those allotments into parts too distant and dangerous to be cultivated by them, and pray that the line of June 20th may be re-established.

The extract L brings into view the purchase of Flint and Parker, in the Illinois country, which may need attention in the formation of a land law.

The extracts M, N, O, with the papers they refer to, contain the reasoning urged by the inhabitants of Kaskaskia, Prairie, and Kahokia, against the demand of the expenses of certain surveys made of their lands, neither at their desire nor for any use of theirs.

P explains certain demands for the revoked emissions of continental money remaining in the office of a notary public of Kaskaskia, and Q, the expediency of having a printing press established at Marietta.

Which several matters the Secretary of State is of opinion should be laid before the Legislature for their consideration.

FEBRUARY 17, 1791.

Extracts from the report of the Governor of the Territory of the United States Northwest of the Ohio.

A. Among the claims for land that have been rejected, there are several that are founded on purchases made from individual Indians, and the conveyances set forth that they were inherited from their parents, and were not the property of the nation. It could not, however, be discovered that any division of the lands of the Kaskaskia Indians had ever taken place among themselves, and the chief of that nation has applied to be confirmed in a tract of land of about five or six thousand acres, where their village was situated not long ago, and which would take in the parcels that have been sold and applied for as above. On this claim, no decision has been made. It appeared to be a subject that ought to be referred to Congress; but I may be allowed to observe, if one Indian sale is approved, it is probable that a great many will be brought forward.

B. A gentleman of the name of Todd had been appointed by the Governor of Virginia lieutenant of the county of Illinois, and some few grants of land are said to have been made by him, although by his instructions, which he put upon record at Kaskaskia, he had no authority to that purpose, but seems rather to have been restrained. A copy of those instructions were transmitted by the secretary. On Mr. Todd's leaving that part of the country, a person of the name of De Numbrun was substituted, who made grants of land without number. The power of granting lands was also assumed by the civil courts that had been established, and that assumed power they used very liberally, still pretending, however, that they had been authorized so to do by Mr. Todd, who is styled Grand Judge for the United States. It is most probable that such power was never delegated to the courts by Mr. Todd; at least, it does not appear. All those grants have been rejected; but I beg leave to suggest, that it might be proper to allow a right of pre-emption to those who have actually settled and made improvements under them. Some of the parties seem, respectively, to have had two different objects in view—the applicants, the engrossing lands for a very small consideration, and the grantors, the accumulation of perquisites, the courts and sub-lieutenants having exacted four dollars for each grant. There are a number of American settlers in possession of such grants, whose claims have been equally rejected; their case seems to be a hard one. Not doubting the authority of the courts, which they saw every day exercised, they applied for lands, and obtained them, and made settlements, in consequence, distinct from those of the French; but, having removed into that country after the year 1783, they do not come within the resolution of Congress, which describes who are to be considered as ancient settlers, and confirmed in their possessions. As Americans, they have been the peculiar objects of Indian depredation, while their neighbors, the French, from having had much intercourse with the Indians, and frequently intermarrying with them, until very lately, were generally safe; they have, in consequence, been driven off of the lands they had improved, and have lost both their time and their labor. No. 7 is a representation from them upon this subject.

C. No. 14 is a representation of the inhabitants of Kahokia respecting their common. What they set forth is true, both with respect to their having been long in the occupation of it, and the quality of what they ask for upon the hills.

D. At Kaskaskia the Jesuits held valuable possessions; the buildings are gone entirely to ruin, but the lands are still of some value. On the suppression of the order in France, the officers of the French King disposed of their property at that place, by public sale; but before the sale took place the country had been ceded to Great Britain—a circumstance that was not known there. The British officer who took possession for that Crown considered the sale as illegal, and laid hold of the property; and the purchaser, a Mr. Beauvais, and his descendants, have been kept out ever since. A son of Mr. Beauvais now lays claim to it in virtue of the purchase, and throws himself upon the United States to be confirmed in what yet remains of the property for which his father paid a very large sum of money.

E. The same steps were taken to obtain a knowledge of the lands that were claimed by the people at Kahokia as at Kaskaskia, and, after due examination, orders of survey for such as fell within the resolution of Congress were put into the hands of Mr. Girardin, the only person that could be found in all that country who understood any thing of surveying. There are a good many persons in that quarter, also, whose claims have been rejected, who, nevertheless, may be properly considered as having an equitable right, at least, to the pre-emption.

F. No. 24 is the request of a Mr. Gibault for a small piece of land that has been in the occupation of the priests at Kahokia for a long time, having been assigned to them by the French; but he wishes to possess it in propriety; and it is true that he was very useful to General Clarke upon many occasions, and has suffered very considerable losses. I believe no injury would be done to any one by his request being granted, but it was not for me to give away the lands of the United States.

G. No. 9 is a plot of the reserved tract, including Fort Chartres. It is, however, to be observed, that part of this tract appears to have been granted before the country was in possession of the French.

H. Great numbers of people have abandoned the Illinois country, and gone over to the Spanish territory. A claim, however, is still kept up by them to their ancient possessions; but it is to be remarked, that very few grants were made by the French in fee simple. When any person quitted their possessions, the soil seems to have reverted, of course, to the domain of the King, and was regranted at the pleasure of the officers commanding. It is presumed that, strictly, the possessions of all those who have so expatriated themselves are fallen to the United States, had they even been granted originally in fee simple, and may be disposed of as they shall see fit; but the loss of the people is severely felt. May I be permitted to suggest that a law declaring those possessions escheated, unless the former owners return and occupy them within a certain time, would not be an improper measure?

I. Mr. Samuel Baird was appointed to survey the lands held by the people of Kaskaskia, and to run the lines that had been directed by Congress to embrace the donations. On examination of the claims, however, it was found that many grants of land had been made which would fall to the eastward of the line to be drawn from the mouth of the River au Marie, and as all grants that proceeded either from the Government of France, that of Great Britain, or of the State of Virginia, on or before the year 1783, were to be confirmed, the running of that line was delayed until Congress should be informed that it would not take in all the claims, and, therefore, appeared to be incurring an unnecessary expense.

K. The donations to the ancient settlers have not been laid out, because, at Kaskaskia and the Prairie du Rocher, no person could be found to do it. At Kahokia an authority was given to Mr. Girardin for that purpose, but nothing, I presume, has been done in consequence of it: for the alteration that was made in the location of these donations by the act of the 29th of August, from the west to the east side of the Hills or Ridge of Rocks, throws them at such a distance from their present possessions (the hills being of a considerable breadth and not very fit for cultivation) that, in the existing circumstances of the country, they could not possibly occupy them. They humbly pray that the location pointed out by the act of the 20th June, 1788, may be restored.

L. A contract subsists between Flint and Parker and the late Board of Treasury for a great tract of land in the Illinois country. No part of the contract has, I believe, been complied with on their parts, and probably never will; but if it is not attended to before a law passes for erecting an office for the sale of the lands, it may create embarrassments hereafter.

M. Orders of survey were issued for all the claims at Kaskaskia that appeared to be founded agreeably to the resolution of Congress, and surveys were made of the greater part of them. A part only of those surveys, however, have been returned, because the people objected to paying the surveyor, and it is too true that they are ill able to pay. The Illinois country, as well as that upon the Ouabash, has been involved in great distress ever since it fell under the American dominion. With great cheerfulness the people furnished the troops under General Clarke, and the Illinois regiment, with every thing they could spare, and often with much more than they could spare, with any convenience to themselves; most of the certificates for those supplies are still in their hands, unliquidated and unpaid; and, in many instances, where application for payment has been made to the State of Virginia, under whose authority the certificates were granted, it has been refused. The Illinois regiment being disbanded, a set of men, pretending the authority of Virginia, embodied themselves, and a scene of general depredation and plunder ensued. To this succeeded three successive and extraordinary inundations from the Mississippi, which either swept away their crops or prevented their being planted. The loss of the greatest part of their trade with the Indians, which was a great resource, came upon them at this juncture, as well as the hostile incursions of some of the tribes which had ever before been in friendship with them; and to these was added the loss of their whole last crop of corn by an untimely frost. Extreme misery could not fail to be the consequence of such accumulated misfortunes. The paper No. 5 contains the orders for a compensation to the surveyor; and No. 6 is the representation of the people praying to be excused from paying it.

N. Having finished the business at Kaskaskia, as far as it was possible at that time, on the fifth day of April I embarked, and proceeded up the Mississippi to Kahokia, having stopped at Fort de Chartres, and visited the village of the Prairie du Rocher, which is about a league distant from it, by land, on the way. Mr. Baird had been directed to make the surveys there as well as at Kaskaskia, and the same objections to paying for them were raised there as at the latter place. No. 8 is a power to certain of the inhabitants to make representations to me on the subject, which was done.

O. No returns of survey from Kahokia are as yet come to hand, and it is probable that not many have been made, as the same objections to paying for them were raised here as elsewhere, and the inhabitants of that place are joined in the remonstrances which have been made by those of the other villages.

P. When the two emissions of paper money were called in by Congress, a considerable sum of those emissions were lodged in the office of a notary public at Kaskaskia, by the direction of the lieutenant of the county of Illinois; there it yet remains, and the owners have received no satisfaction for it of any kind. They complain of this, and, it would seem, not without reason.

Q. Before I close this report, it may be necessary to mention the necessity there is for a printing press in the western territory. The laws adopted, or made by the Legislature, are declared to be binding upon the people until they are disapproved by Congress. There is no way of giving them any publicity but by having them read at the courts, and but few people become thereby acquainted with them; even the magistrates who are to carry them into execution are strangers to them, for the secretary does not conceive it to be his duty to furnish them with copies. Indeed, the business of his office increases so fast, that it would be impossible to do it; besides, they are in English, and the greatest part of the inhabitants do not understand a word of it; the translation of them, therefore, seems to be necessary, and that a sufficient number of them should be printed in both languages; and that can only be done in the territory where the original rolls are deposited. Every public act and communication, of what kind soever, I was myself obliged to translate into French; and, having no person to assist me, it made the business extremely troublesome and laborious.

GREAT RUN, May 23, 1790.

We, your petitioners, beg leave to represent to your excellency the state and circumstances of a number of distressed but faithful subjects of the United States of America, wherein we wish to continue, and that, under your immediate government; but, unless our principal grievance can be removed by your excellency's encouragement, we shall despair of holding a residence in the State we love. The Indians, who have not failed one year in four past to kill our people, steal our horses, and at times have killed and drove off numbers of our horned cattle, render it impossible for us to live in the country any way but in forts or villages, which we find very sickly in the Mississippi bottom; neither can we cultivate our land, but with a guard of our inhabitants equipped with arms; nor have we more tillable land, for the support of seventeen families, than what might be easily tilled by four of us: and as those lands whereon we live are the property of two individuals, it is uncertain how long we may enjoy the scanty privileges we have here; nor do we find by your excellency's proclamation that those of us which are the major part, who came to the country since the year 1783, are entitled to the land we improved, at the risk of our lives, with a design to live on. Those, with many other difficulties which your excellency may be better informed of by our reverend friend, Mr. James Smith, hath very much gloomed the aspect of a number of the free and loyal subjects of the United States. In consideration of which your petitioners humbly request, that, by your excellency's command, there may be a village, with in-lots and out-lots sufficient for families to subsist on, laid out and established in or near the Prairie de Morivay. We know the other American settlers near the Mississippi to be in equal deplorable circumstances with ourselves, and, consequently, would be equally benefitted by the privileges we ask; and that those of us that came to the country and improved land since the year 1783, may be confirmed in a right of pre-emption to their improvements, is the humble request of your petitioners; and we, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

SIR: The inhabitants of the villages of the Cohos, and Prairie du Pont, take the liberty of informing you that, in consequence of the connexion which you have been pleased to make of the seigniorship of the Cohos with the domain of the States, in which are included the lands and commons set apart for their cattle, which they have possessed for several years, which lands you have led them to hope would be continued to them; it is found that, by adding this seigniorship to the domain, they are deprived of a sufficiency of land on which to support their cattle, and of wood not only for building, but for fuel.

It is for these reasons, sir, that they have recourse to your clemency and bountiful authority, that you may be pleased to grant them a sufficient common surrounding their lands, which shall commence by a line drawn between the land called Ottach, at the end of the morass along the coasts, running at two-thirds of a league above the coasts to the Mississippi, and taking the said line above the coasts in returning northeast, one-fourth north, to the end of the bounty lands granted to them by Congress, and which are bounded by a straight line drawn from the Mississippi to that running two miles above the coasts. This small portion of land above the coasts n'étant remplie d'entonnoirs et bas fond, which render it unfit for cultivation, at the same time, it is of great utility to them on account of the wood, which they cannot do without.

We request you, sir, that when you shall be pleased to put us in possession of the four hundred acres of bounty land which the Congress has granted to each family, you will order a certain breadth of front, in order to furnish each with four hundred acres, from the Mississippi to the line which shall run two miles above the coasts, observing that, if these four hundred acres were given by a square of twenty acres, some of them would be found to fall totally in morass, others in wood, and others in meadow; and, that each person may suffer no injury, lots may be cast for each parcel.

We, who are faithful subjects of the United States, expect every thing from your equity.

KAHOKIA, May 1, 1790.

The undersigned memorialist has the honor to represent to your excellency that, from the moment of the conquest of the Illinois country by Col. George Rogers Clarke, he has not been backward in venturing his life on the many occasions in which he found that his presence was useful, and sometimes necessary, and at all times sacrificing his property, which he gave for the support of the troops at the same price that he could have received in Spanish dollars, and for which, however, he has received only paper dollars, of which he has had no information since he sent them addressed to the commissioner of Congress, who required a statement of the depreciation of them at the Belle Riviere in 1783, with an express promise, in reply, that particular attention should be paid to his account, because it was known to be no ways exaggerated.

In reality, he parted with his fithes and his beasts only to set an example to his parishioners, who began to perceive that it was intended to pillage them, and abandon them afterwards, which really took place. The want of seven thousand eight hundred livres, of which the non-payment of the American notes has deprived him the use, has obliged him to sell two good slaves, who would now be the support of his old age, and for the want of whom he now finds himself dependent on the public, who, although well served, are very rarely led to keep their promises, except that part who, employing his time in their service, are supported by the secular power, that is to say, by the civil government.

The love of his country and of liberty have also led the memorialist to reject all the advantages offered to him by the Spanish Government. And he endeavored by every means in his power, by exertions and exhortations, and by letters to the principal inhabitants, to retain every person under the dominion of the United States, in expectation of better times, and giving them to understand that our lives and property being employed twelve years in the aggrandizement and preservation of the conquests of the United States, would at last receive an acknowledgement, and be compensated by the enlightened and upright ministers who, sooner or later, would come to examine into, and relieve us from, our sad situation. We begin to see the accomplishment of these hopes under the happy government of your excellency, and as your memorialist has reason to believe, from proofs which would be too long to explain here, one of the number who has been the most forward in risking his life and fortune for his country.

He also hopes that his demand will be listened to favorably. It is this: The missionaries, like lords, have at all times possessed two tracts of land near this village, one three acres in front, which produces but little hay, three-quarters being useless by a great morass; the other of two acres in front, which may be cultivated, and which the memorialist will have cultivated with care, and proposes to have a dwelling erected on it, with a garden and orchard, in case his claim is accepted. Your excellency may think, perhaps, that this might injure some of the inhabitants; but it will not. It would be difficult to hire them to cause an enclosure to be made of the size of these tracts, so much land have they more than they can cultivate. May it please your excellency, then, to grant them to the memorialist as belonging to the domain of the United States, and give him a concession, to be enjoyed in full propriety in his private name, and not as to a missionary and priest, to pass to his successor; otherwise, the memorialists, not wishing to labor for others, would not accept it. It is for the services he has already rendered, and those which he still hopes to render, as far as circumstances may offer, and he may be capable, and particularly on the bounty with which you relieve those who stand in need of assistance, that he founds his demand. In hopes of being soon of the number of those who praise Heaven for your fortunate arrival in this country, and who desire your prosperity in every thing, your memorialist has the honor of being, with the most profound respect,

Your excellency's most obedient,

And most humble servant,

P. GIBAULT, Priest.

KASKASKIA, June 5, 1790.

BY THE GOVERNOR.

Mr. Baird, the surveyor appointed to survey the lands held by the inhabitants at the Prairie du Rocher, having executed that business as far as claimants appeared, is to be paid for his services at the rate of two dollars and a half per mile, reckoning upon one line in the length of each survey, and two dollars for each lot in the village. When that expense is defrayed, new concessions will be made out for the proprietors as soon as possible.

ARTHUR ST. CLAIR.

To the inhabitants of the Prairie du Rocher.

Extract of a letter to Major Hamtramck, at Post St. Vincennes, dated Port Steuben, January 23, 1790.

"It is with great pain that I have heard of the scarcity of corn which reigns in the settlements about the post. I hope it has been exaggerated, but it is represented to me that, unless a supply of that article can be sent forward, the people must actually starve. Corn can be had here in any quantity, but can the people pay for it? I entreat to inquire into that matter, and, if you find they cannot do without it, write to the contractor's agent here, to whom I will give orders to send forward such quantity as you may find to be absolutely necessary. They must pay for what they can of it, but they must not be suffered to perish; and though I have no direct authority from the Government for this purpose, I must take it upon myself."

No. 6.

To his excellency Arthur St. Clair, esq., Governor and Commander-in-chief of the Territory of the United States Northwest of the River Ohio, the memorial of the inhabitants of Kaskaskia, la Prairie du Rocher, and Kahokia, county of St. Clair, humbly sheweth:

That, by an act of Congress of 20th June, 1788, it was declared that the lands theretofore possessed by the said inhabitants should be surveyed at their expense; and that this clause appears to them neither necessary nor adapted to quiet the minds of the people. It does not appear necessary, because, from the establishment of the colony to this day, they have enjoyed their property and possessions without disputes or lawsuits on the subject of their limits; that the surveys of them were made at the time the concessions were obtained from their ancient kings, lords, and commandants; and that each of them knew what belonged to him, without attempting an encroachment on his neighbor, or fearing that his neighbor would encroach on him. It does not appear adapted to pacify them, because, instead of assuring to them the peaceable possession of their ancient inheritances, as they have enjoyed it till now, that clause obliges them to bear expenses which, in their present situation, they are absolutely incapable of paying, and for the failure of which they must be deprived of their lands.

Your excellency is an eye-witness of the poverty to which the inhabitants are reduced, and of the total want of provisions to subsist on. Not knowing where to find a morsel of bread to nourish their families, by what means can they support the expense of a survey which has not been sought for on their parts, and for which it is conceived by them there is no necessity? Loaded with misery, and groaning under the weight of misfortunes, accumulated since the Virginia troops entered their country, the unhappy inhabitants throw themselves under the protection of your excellency, and take the liberty to solicit you to lay their deplorable situation before Congress; and as it may be interesting for the United States to know exactly the extent and limits of their ancient possessions, in order to ascertain the lands which are yet at the disposal of Congress, it appears to them, in their humble opinion, that the expense of survey ought more properly to be borne by Congress, for whom alone it is useful, than by them who do not feel the necessity of it. Besides, this is no object for the United States; but it is great, too great, for a few unhappy beings who your excellency sees yourself are scarcely able to support their pitiful existence.

To these motives they venture to add that of the generosity worthy of a great people: the taking upon them a burthen too heavy for a small number of unhappy individuals, will give lustre to their dignity.

They venture to hope that the paternal goodness of your excellency towards your adopted children will induce you to present their humble supplication to the honorable Congress, and that you will second it with your protection.

They will ever pray to Heaven for the preservation and prosperity of your excellency.

3d SESSION.

VIRGINIA MILITARY BOUNTY LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE MARCH 3, 1791.

Mr. MONROE, from the committee appointed to take into consideration the extract of a letter from Governor Randolph to the President of the United States, containing a resolution of the Legislature of Virginia, relative to the bounty lands to the officers and soldiers of the Virginia line; and to which was also referred the resolutions of the same Legislature upon the claims of sundry individuals, with the papers accompanying them, made the following report:

That it appears to your committee that the provisions made by the act, entitled "An act to enable the officers and soldiers of the Virginia line on continental establishment to obtain titles to certain lands lying northwest of the River Ohio, between the Little Miami and Scioto," are, in the opinion of your committee, sufficiently extensive to enable the said officers and soldiers, or their legal representatives, to obtain patents for the bounty lands promised them by acts of the United States, and by the laws of the Commonwealth of Virginia; and that further legislative interference seems unnecessary.

1st SESSION.

UNCLAIMED LANDS IN THE TERRITORY CEDED BY NORTH CAROLINA, IN THE NORTH AND SOUTHWESTERN TERRITORIES.

COMMUNICATED TO CONGRESS NOVEMBER 10, 1791.

UNITED STATES, November 10, 1791.

*Gentlemen of the Senate
and of the House of Representatives:*

The resolution, passed at the last session of Congress, requesting the President of the United States to cause an estimate to be laid before Congress, at their next session, of the quantity and situation of the lands not claimed by the Indians, nor granted to, nor claimed by, any of the citizens of the United States, within the territory ceded to the United States by the State of North Carolina, and within the territory of the United States northwest of the River Ohio, has been referred to the Secretary of State; a copy of whose report on that subject I now lay before you, together with a copy of a letter accompanying it.

G. WASHINGTON.

PHILADELPHIA, November 8, 1791.

SIR: I have now the honor to enclose you a report on the lands of the United States within the Northwestern and Southwestern Territories, unclaimed either by Indians or by citizens of these States.

In order to make the estimate of their quantity and situation, as desired by the Legislature, it appeared necessary, first, to delineate the Indian boundaries which circumscribe those territories, and then to present a statement of all claims of citizens within the same; from whence results the residuary unclaimed mass, whereon any land law the Legislature may think proper to pass may operate immediately, and without obstruction.

I have not presumed to decide on the merits of the several claims, nor, consequently, to investigate them minutely; this will only be proper, when such of them as may be thought doubtful, if there should be any such, shall be taken up for final decision.

I have the honor to be, with sentiments of the most perfect respect and attachment,

Sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

TH. JEFFERSON.

The PRESIDENT of the U. States.

The Secretary of State, to whom was referred, by the President of the United States, the resolution of Congress, requesting the President "to cause an estimate to be laid before Congress, at their next session, of the quantity and situation of the lands not claimed by the Indians, nor granted to, nor claimed by, any citizens of the United States, within the territory ceded to the United States by the State of North Carolina, and within the territory of the United States, northwest of the River Ohio," makes thereon the following report:

The territory ceded by the State of North Carolina to the United States, by deed bearing date the 25th day of February, 1790, is bounded as follows, to wit: Beginning in the boundary between Virginia and North Carolina, that is to say, in the parallel of latitude $36\frac{1}{2}$ degrees north from the equator on the extreme height of the Stone mountain, where the said boundary or parallel intersects it, and running thence along the said extreme height, to the place where Watauga river breaks through it; thence a direct course to the top of the Yellow mountain, where Bright's road crosses the same; thence along the ridge of the said mountain, between the waters of Doe river and the waters of Rock creek, to the place where the road crosses the Iron mountain; from thence along the extreme height of said mountain to where Nolichucky river runs through the same; thence to the top of the Bald mountain; thence along the extreme height of the said mountain to the Painted rock on French Broad river; thence along the highest ridge of the said mountain to the place where it is called the Great Iron or Smoky mountain; thence along the extreme height of the said mountain to the place where it is called Unaka mountain, between the Indian towns of Cowee and Old Chota; thence along the main ridge of the said mountain to the southern boundary of the said State of North Carolina, that is to say, to the parallel of latitude 35 degrees north from the equator; thence, westwardly, along the said boundary or parallel to the middle of the River Mississippi; thence up the middle of the said river to where it is intersected by the first mentioned parallel of $36\frac{1}{2}$ degrees; thence along the said parallel to the beginning; which tract of country is a degree and a half of latitude from north to south, and about three hundred and sixty miles, in general, from east to west, as nearly as may be estimated from such maps as exist of that country.

The Indians, having claims within the said tract of country, are the Cherokees and Chickasaws, whose boundaries are settled by the treaties of Hopewell, concluded with the Cherokees on the 28th day of November, 1785, and with the Chickasaws on the 10th day of January, 1786, and by the treaty of Holston, concluded with the Cherokees July 2d, 1791. These treaties acknowledge to the said Indians all the lands westward and southward of the following lines, to wit: beginning in the boundary between South and North Carolina, where the South Carolina Indian boundary strikes the same; thence, north, to a point from which a line is to be extended to the River Clinch, that shall pass the Holston at the ridge which divides the waters running into Little River from those running into the Tennessee; thence up the River Clinch to Campbell's line, and along the same to the top of the Cumberland mountain; thence, in a direct course towards the Cumberland river, where the Kentucky road crosses it, as far as the Virginia line or parallel aforesaid of $36\frac{1}{2}$ degrees; thence westwardly or eastwardly, as the case shall be, along the said line or parallel to the point thereof, which is due northeast from another point, to be taken on the dividing ridge of Cumberland and Duck rivers, forty miles from Nashville; thence southwest to the point last mentioned on the said dividing ridge, and along the said dividing ridge northwardly to where it is intersected by the said Virginia line or parallel of $36\frac{1}{2}$ degrees. So that there remained to the United States the right of pre-emption of the lands westward and southward of the said lines, and the absolute right to those northward thereof, that is to say: to one parcel to the eastward, somewhat triangular, comprehending the counties of Sullivan and Washington, and parts of those of Greene and Hawkins, running about one hundred and fifty miles from east to west on the Virginia boundary as its base, and between eighty and ninety miles from north to south, where broadest; and containing, as may be conjectured, without pretending to accuracy, between seven and eight thousand square miles, or about five millions of acres; and to one other parcel to the westward, somewhat triangular also, comprehending parts of the counties of Sumner, Davidson, and Tennessee, the base whereof extends about one hundred and fifty miles also from east to west, on the same Virginia line; and its height, from north to south, about fifty-five miles, and so may comprehend about four thousand square miles, or upwards of two and a half millions of acres of land.

Within these triangles, however, are the following claims of citizens, reserved by the deed of cession, and consequently, forming exceptions to the rights of the United States:

I. Appropriations by the State of North Carolina for their continental and State officers and soldiers.

II. Grants, and titles to grants, vested in individuals by the laws of the State.

III. Entries made in Armstrong's office, under an act of that State of 1783, for the redemption of specie and other certificates.

The claims covered by the first reservation are,
1st. The bounties in land given by the said State of North Carolina to their continental line, in addition to those given by Congress. These were to be located within a district bounded northwardly by the Virginia line, and southwardly by a line parallel thereto, and fifty-five miles distant; westwardly by the Tennessee, and eastwardly by the meridian of the intersection of the Virginia line and Cumberland river. Grants have accordingly issued for one million two hundred and thirty-nine thousand four hundred and ninety-eight acres, and warrants for the further quantity of one million five hundred and forty-nine thousand seven hundred and twenty-six acres, making, together, two millions seven hundred and eighty-nine thousand two hundred and twenty-four acres. It is to be noted that the southwestern and southeastern angles of this district, constituting, perhaps, a fourth or a fifth of the whole, are south of the lines established by the treaties of Hopewell and Holston, and, consequently, in a country wherein the Indian title is acknowledged and guaranteed by the United States. No information is received of the exact proportion of the locations made within these angles.

2d. Bounties in land to Evans's battalion, raised for State purposes. These were to be taken west of the Cumberland mountain. The locations are not yet made.

The second reservation covers the following claims:

1st. Lands for the surveyor general's fees for laying out the military bounties, to be located in the military district. The grants already issued on this account, amount to thirty thousand two hundred and three acres.

2d. Grants to Isaac Shelby, Anthony Bledsoe, and Absalom Tatum, commissioners for laying out the military bounties; and to guards, chain-carriers, markers, and hunters, who attended them, already issued to the amount of sixty-five thousand nine hundred and thirty-two acres, located in the military district.

3d. Entries in Washington county, amounting to seven hundred and forty-six thousand three hundred and sixty-two and a half acres, for two hundred and fourteen thousand five hundred and forty-nine and three quarters of which grants have already issued. Of the remaining five hundred and thirty-one thousand eight hundred and twelve and three-quarters acres, a considerable proportion were declared void by the laws of the State, and were particularly excluded from the cover of the reservation in the deed of cession by this clause in it, to wit: "Provided, That nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to the making good any entry or entries, or any grant or grants, heretofore declared void, by any act or acts of the General Assembly of this State." Still it is to be considered, that many of these persons have settled and improved the lands, are willing, as is said, to comply with such conditions as shall be required of other purchasers, form a strong barrier on the new frontier acquired by the treaty of Holston, and are, therefore, objects meriting the consideration of the Legislature.

4th. Entries in Sullivan county, amounting to two hundred and forty thousand six hundred and twenty-four acres; for one hundred and seventy-three thousand three hundred and thirty-two acres of which grants have already issued. Of the remaining entries, many are certified to be void, and others understood to be lapsed, or otherwise voidable, under the laws of the State.

5th. Certain pre-emption rights granted to the first settlers of Davidson county, on Cumberland river, amounting to three hundred and nine thousand seven hundred and sixty acres.

6th. A grant of two hundred thousand acres to Richard Henderson and others on Powell's and Clinch's rivers, extending up Powell's river in a breadth of not less than four miles, and down Clinch's from their junction in a breadth not less than twelve miles. A great part of this is within the Indian territory.

Among the grants of the State now under recapitulation, as forming exceptions out of the absolute rights of the United States, are not to be reckoned here two grants, of two thousand acres each, to Alexander Martin and David Wilson, adjacent to the lands allotted to the officers and soldiers; nor a grant of twenty-five thousand acres on Duck river, to the late Major General Greene; because they are wholly within the Indian territory, as acknowledged by the treaties of Hopewell, and Holston.

The extent of the third reservation in favor of entries made in Armstrong's office, is not yet entirely known, nor can be till the 20th of December, 1792, the last day given for perfecting them. The sum of certificates, however, which had been paid for these warrants into the treasury of the State, before the 20th day of May, 1790, reaches, in all probability, near to their whole amount. This was three hundred and seventy-three thousand six hundred and forty-nine pounds six shillings and fivepence currency of that State, and at the price of ten pounds the hundred acres, established by law, shows that warrants had issued for three millions seven hundred and thirty-six thousand four hundred and ninety-three acres. For one million seven hundred and sixty-two thousand six hundred and sixty of these, grants have passed, which appear to have been located partly in the counties of Green and Hawkins, and partly in the country, from thence to the Mississippi, as divided into eastern, middle, and western districts. Almost the whole of these locations are within the Indian territory. Besides the warrants paid for, as before mentioned, it is known that there are some others outstanding and not paid for; but, perhaps, these need not be taken into account, as payment of them has been disputed, on the ground that the lands, being within the Indian territory, cannot, now, be delivered to the holders of the warrants.

On a review of all the reservations, after making such conjectural allowance as our information authorizes, for the proportion of them which may lie within the Indian boundaries, it appears probable that they cover all the ceded lands susceptible of culture, and cleared of the Indian title, that is to say, all the habitable parts of the two triangles before mentioned, excepting only the lands south of French, Broad, and Big Pidgeon rivers. These were part of the tract appropriated by the laws of the State to the use of the Indians, whose title, being purchased at the late treaty of Holston, they are now free to be disposed of by the United States, and are probably the only lands open to their disposal, within this southwestern territory, which can excite the attention of purchasers. They are supposed to amount to about three hundred thousand acres, and we are told that three hundred families have already set down upon them without right or license.

The territory of the United States northwest of the Ohio is bounded on the south by that river, on the east by Pennsylvania, on the north and west by the lines which divide the United States from the dominions of Great Britain and Spain.

The part of this territory occupied by Indians is north and west of the following lines, established with the Wyandots, Delawares, Chippewas, and Ottawas, by the treaty of Fort McIntosh, and, with the Shawanese, by that of the Great Miami, to wit: beginning at the mouth of the Cayahoga, and running up the river to the portage between that and the Tuscarora branch of the Muskingum; then down the said branch to the forks at the crossing place above Fort Lawrence; then, westwardly, towards the portage of the Big Miami, to the main branch of that river; then down the Miami to the fork of that river next below the old fort, which was taken by the French in 1752; thence due west, to the River de la Panse, and down that river to the Wabash. So far the lines are precisely defined, and the whole country southward of these lines, and eastward of the Wabash, cleared of the claims of those Indians, as it is also of those of the Pottawatamies and Sacs, by the treaty of Muskingum. How far, on the other side of the Wabash the southern boundary of the Indians has been defined, we know not. It is only understood, in general, that their title to the lower country, between that river and the Illinois, has been formerly extinguished by the French while in their possession. As to that country, then, and what lies still beyond the Illinois, it would seem expedient that nothing be done till a fair ascertainment of boundary can take place by mutual consent, between us and the Indians interested.

The country within the Wabash, the Indian line before described, the Pennsylvania line, and the Ohio, contains, on a loose estimate, about fifty-five thousand square miles, or thirty-five millions of acres.

During the British government, great numbers of persons had formed themselves into companies under different names, such as the Ohio, the Wabash, the Illinois, the Mississippi, or Vandalia companies, and had covered with their applications a great part of this territory. Some of them had obtained orders on certain conditions, which, having never been fulfilled, their titles were completed by grants. Others were only in a state of negotiation, when the British authority was discontinued. Some of these claims being already under a special reference by order of Congress, and all of them, probably, falling under the operation of the same principles, they will not be noticed in the present report.

The claims of citizens to be here stated will be,

I. Those reserved by the States in their deeds of cession.

II. Those which have arisen under the Government of the United States themselves.

Under the first head presents itself the tract of country from the completion of the 41st degree to 42° 2' of north latitude, and extending from the Pennsylvania line before mentioned one hundred and twenty miles westward, not mentioned in the deed of Connecticut, while all the country westward thereof was mentioned to be ceded. About two and a half millions of acres of this may, perhaps, be without the Indian lines before mentioned.

2d. A reservation in the deed of Virginia of the possessions and titles of the French and Canadian inhabitants, and other settlers of the Kaskaskias, St. Vincent's, and the neighboring villages, who had professed themselves citizens of Virginia; which rights have been settled by an act of the last session of Congress, entitled "An act for granting lands to the inhabitants and settlers at Vincennes, and the Illinois country, in the territory northwest of the Ohio, and for confirming them in their possessions." These lands are in the neighborhood of the several villages.

3d. A reservation in the same deed of a quantity not exceeding one hundred and fifty thousand acres of land for General George Rogers Clarke, and the officers and soldiers of his regiment, who were at the reduction of Kaskaskias and St. Vincennes, to be laid off in such place, on the northwest side of the Ohio, as a majority of the officers should choose. They chose they should be laid off on the river, adjacent to the rapids, which accordingly has been done.

4th. A reservation in the same deed, of lands between the Scioto and Little Miami, to make up to the Virginia troops on continental establishment, the quantity which the good lands in their southern allotment might fall short of the bounties given them by the laws of that State. By a statement of the 16th September, 1788, it appears that seven hundred and twenty-four thousand and forty-five acres and two-thirds had been surveyed for them on the southeastern side of the Ohio; that one million three hundred and ninety-five thousand three hundred and eighty-five acres and one-third had been surveyed on the northwestern side; that warrants for six hundred and forty-nine thousand six hundred and forty-nine acres more, to be laid off on the same side of the river, were in the hands of the surveyor, and it was supposed there might still be some few warrants not yet presented: so that this reservation may be stated at two millions forty-five thousand and thirty-four acres and one-third, or perhaps some small matter more.

II. The claims of individual citizens, derived from the United States themselves, are the following:

1st. Those of the continental army, founded on the resolutions of Congress of September 16th, 1776, August 12th, and September 30th, 1780, and fixed by the ordinance of May 20th, 1785, the resolution of October 22d, 1787, and the supplementary ordinance of July 9th 1788, in the seven ranges of townships, beginning at a point on the Ohio due north from the western termination of a line then lately run, as the southern boundary of Pennsylvania; or in a second tract of a million of acres, bounded east by the seventh range of the said townships; south by the lands of Cutler and Sargent; north, by an extension of the northern boundary of the said townships, and going towards the west so far as to include the above quantity; or, lastly, in a third tract of country, beginning at the mouth of the Ohio, and running up the Mississippi to the River au Vause; thence up the same, till it meets a west line from the mouth of the Little Wabash; thence along that line to the Great Wabash; thence down the same and the Ohio to the beginning. The sum total of the said military claims is one million eight hundred and fifty-one thousand and eight hundred acres.

2d. Those of the individuals who made purchases of land at New York, within the said seven ranges of townships, according to the resolutions of Congress of April 21st, 1787, and the supplementary ordinance of July 9th, 1788, which claims amount to one hundred and fifty thousand eight hundred and ninety-six acres.

3d. The purchase of one million and a half acres of land by Cutler and Sargent, on behalf of certain individuals associated under the name of the Ohio Company. This begins where the Ohio is intersected by the western boundary of the seventh range of townships, and runs due north on that boundary one thousand three hundred and six chains and twenty-five links; thence due west, to the western boundary of the seventeenth range of townships; thence due south, to the Ohio, and up that river to the beginning: the whole area containing one million seven hundred and eighty-one thousand seven hundred and sixty acres of land, whereof two hundred and eighty-one thousand seven hundred and sixty acres, consisting of various lots and townships, are reserved to the United States.

4th. The purchase by the same Cutler and Sargent, on behalf also of themselves and others. This begins at the northeastern angle of the tract of their purchase before described, and runs due north to the northern boundary of the tenth township from the Ohio; thence due west, to the Scioto; thence down the same, and up the Ohio, to the southwestern angle of the said purchase before described, and along the western and northern boundaries thereof, to the beginning: the whole area containing four millions nine hundred and one thousand four hundred and eighty acres of land; out of which, however, five lots, to wit, Nos. 8, 11, 16, 26, and 29, of every township of six miles square, are retained by the United States; and out of the whole are retained the three townships of Gnadenhutten, Schoenbrunn, and Salem, and certain lands around them, as will be hereafter mentioned.

5th. The purchase of John Cleves Symmes, bounded on the west by the Great Miami; on the south, by the Ohio; on the east, by a line which is to begin on the bank of the Ohio, twenty miles from the mouth of the Great Miami, as measured along the several courses of the Ohio, and to run parallel with the general course of the said Great Miami; and on the north, by an east and west line, so run as to include a million of acres in the whole area; whereof five lots, numbered as before mentioned, are reserved out of every township by the United States.

It is suggested that this purchaser, under color of a first and larger proposition to the Board of Treasury, which was never closed, (but pending that proposition,) sold sundry parcels of land between his eastern boundary before mentioned and the little Miami, and that the purchasers have settled thereon. If these suggestions prove true, the settlers will, perhaps, be thought to merit the favor of the Legislature as purchasers for valuable consideration, and without notice of the defect of title.

The contracts for lands, which were at one time under consideration with Messrs. Flint and Parker, and with Colonel Morgan, were never so far prosecuted as to bring either party under any obligation. All proceedings thereon were discontinued at a very early stage, and it is supposed that no further views exist with any party. These, therefore, are not to be enumerated among existing claims.

6th. Three townships were reserved by the ordinance of May 20th, 1785, adjacent to Lake Erie, for refugees from Canada and Nova Scotia, and for other purposes, according to resolutions of Congress made, or to be made, on that subject. These would, of course, contain sixty-nine thousand one hundred and twenty acres.

7th. The same ordinance of May 20th, 1785, appropriated the three towns of Gnadenhütten, Schoenbrunn, and Salem, on the Muskingum, for the Christian Indians formerly settled there, or the remains of that society, with the grounds round about them; and the quantity of the said circumjacent grounds for each of the said towns was determined by the resolution of Congress of September 3d, 1788, to be so much as, with the plat of its respective town, should make up four thousand acres; so that the three towns and their circumjacent lands were to amount to twelve thousand acres. This reservation was accordingly made out of the larger purchase of Cutler and Sargent, which comprehended them. The Indians, however, for whom the reservation was made, have chosen to emigrate beyond the limits of the United States; so that the lands reserved for them still remain to the United States.

On the whole, it appears that the United States may rightfully dispose of all the lands between the Wabash, the Ohio, Pennsylvania, the forty-first parallel of latitude, and the Indian lines described in the treaties of the Great Miami and Fort McIntosh, with exceptions only of the rights saved by the deed of cession of Virginia, and of all rights legally derived from the Government of the United States; and supposing the part south of the Indian lines to contain, as before conjectured, about thirty-five millions of acres, and that the claims of citizens before enumerated may amount to between thirteen and fourteen millions, there remain at the disposal of the United States upwards of twenty-one millions of acres in this northwestern quarter.

And, though the want of actual surveys of some parts, and of a general delineation of the whole on paper, so as to exhibit to the eye the locations, forms, and relative positions of the rights before described, may prevent our forming a well defined idea of them at this distance, yet, on the spot, these difficulties exist but in a small degree; the individuals there employed in the details of buying, selling, and locating, possess local informations of the parts which concern them, so as to be able to keep clear of each other's rights; or if, in some instances, a conflict of claims should arise, from any want of certainty in their definition, a local judge will doubtless be provided to decide them without delay, at least provisionally. Time, instead of clearing up these uncertainties, will cloud them the more, by the death or removal of witnesses, the disappearance of lines and marks, change of parties, and other casualties.

No. 10.

1st SESSION.

VIRGINIA MILITARY BOUNTY LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO CONGRESS JANUARY 24, 1792.

UNITED STATES, January 23, 1792.

Gentlemen of the Senate
and of the House of Representatives:

Having received from the Governor of Virginia a letter enclosing a resolution of the General Assembly of that State, and a report of a committee of the House of Delegates respecting certain lands located by the officers and soldiers of the Virginia line, under the laws of that State, and since ceded to the Chickasaw Indians, I lay copies of the same before you, together with a report of the Secretary of State on this subject.

G. WASHINGTON.

VIRGINIA.

IN THE HOUSE OF DELEGATES,

December 12, 1791.

Mr. Johnson reported, from the Committee of Propositions and Grievances, that the committee had, according to order, had under their consideration the petition of Charles Russel, to them referred, and had agreed upon a report, and come to a resolution thereupon, which he read in his place, and afterwards delivered in at the clerk's table, where the same was again twice read, and is as followeth:

It appears to your committee that the petitioner, in the year 1776, entered into the service of this State and joined the continental army; that he continued in service from that period until the end of the war, during which time he was with the troops to the northward and southward.

It further appears to your committee that, by an act of Assembly, passed in the year 1781, entitled "An act to adjust and regulate the pay and accounts of the officers and soldiers of the Virginia line on continental establishment, and also of the officers, soldiers, sailors, and marines in the service of this State, and for other purposes," it is stated that a considerable part of the tract of country "allotted for the officers and soldiers by the act of Assembly, passed in the year 1779, entitled 'An act for establishing a land office and ascertaining the terms and manner of granting waste and unappropriated lands,' hath fallen into the State of North Carolina, whereby the intention of the act is, so far, frustrated; and that, by the said act, it is enacted that all that tract of land included within the Rivers Mississippi, Ohio, and Tennessee and the Carolina boundary line, shall be, and the same is thereby, substituted in lieu of such lands so fallen into the State of North Carolina, to be in the same manner subject to be claimed by the said officers and soldiers." That, under the said laws, the petitioner obtained warrants to locate the quantity of two thousand six hundred and sixty-six and sixty-ninetieths acres of land, which he directed to be laid off into two equal lots of one thousand three hundred and thirty-three and thirty-ninetieths acres each, to wit: lot No. 4, on the Mississippi, near the intended town of Columbia, and lot No. 484, on a branch of Clark's river, on the south side of Tennessee river, and that the said two tracts or lots of land are within the bounds of the lands claimed by the Indians, so that the petitioner is unable to obtain a right thereto.

It also further appears to your committee that, by a proclamation issued in the year 1785, by Patrick Henry, esq., then Governor, all lands south of the Ohio river should be and remain to the native Indians, unless fairly purchased from them; and that, by another proclamation of the Congress of the United States, part of the said lands, including those located by the petitioner, was ceded to the neighboring Indians.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this committee that such parts of the petition of the said Charles Russel as pray that the bounty in lands allowed by law to a lieutenant may be secured to him, is reasonable.

And the said resolution being read a second time, was, on motion made, ordered to be committed to a committee of the whole house on the state of the Commonwealth.

Extract from the journals.

Test, CHARLES HAY, C. H. D.

VIRGINIA.

IN THE HOUSE OF DELEGATES,

December 16, 1791.

Resolved, That the Governor of this Commonwealth be requested to transmit to the President of the United States a statement of facts in the case of Charles Russel and others, officers and soldiers in the Virginia line, who located their bounty lands between the Mississippi, Ohio, and Tennessee rivers, which lands have been since ceded to the Indians, and to request the President of the United States to lay the same before the Congress of the United States.

Test, CHARLES HAY, C. H. D.

December 17, 1791.

Agreed to by the Senate.

H. BROOKS, C. S.

RICHMOND, January 7, 1792.

SIR: I do myself the honor to transmit herewith a resolution of the General Assembly, with respect to certain lands located by the officers and soldiers of the Virginia line, under the laws of the Commonwealth, and since ceded to the Chickasaw Indians, together with a report of a committee of the House of Delegates on the same subject.

Permit me, sir, to express my hope that some general regulations will take place during the present session of Congress, relieving Mr. Russell, and all others in the same situation, from the difficulties into which they have been innocently involved.

I have the honor to be, sir,

With entire respect,

Your most ob't humble servant,
HENRY LEE.

The Secretary of State, to whom was referred, by the President of the United States, the letter of the Governor of Virginia of January 7, 1792, with the report of a committee of the House of Delegates of that Commonwealth, of December 12, 1791, and resolution of the General Assembly thereon, of December 17, on the case of Charles Russell, late an officer in the service of the said Commonwealth, stating that a considerable part of the tract of country allotted for the officers and soldiers, having fallen into the State of North Carolina, on the extension of their common boundary, the Legislature of the said State had, in 1781, passed an act substituting in lieu thereof the tract of country between the said boundary and the Rivers Mississippi, Ohio, and Tennessee, and subjecting the same to the claims of their officers and soldiers; that the said Charles Russell had, in consequence thereof, directed warrants for two thousand six hundred and sixty-six and two-thirds acres of land to be located within the said tract of country; but, that the same belonging to the Chickasaws, he is unable to obtain a right thereto, and that there are other officers and soldiers of the said Commonwealth under like circumstances, reports:

That the tract of country, before described, is within the boundaries of the Chickasaw nation, as established by the treaty of Hopewell, the 10th day of January, 1786.

That the right of occupancy of the said lands, therefore, being vested in the said nation, the case of the said Charles Russell, and other officers and soldiers of the said Commonwealth, becomes proper to be referred to the Legislature of the United States for their consideration.

ILLINOIS AND WABASH LAND COMPANIES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE MARCH 26, 1792.

Mr. STRONG, from the committee of the Senate, to which was referred the memorial of the Illinois and Wabash Land Companies, made the following report:

That the claims of the petitioners are founded on two deeds mentioned in the said petition, one of which, to William Murray and others, who are called the Illinois Company, is dated July 5th, 1773, and the other, to Lord Dunmore and others, who are styled the Wabash Company, bears date October 18, 1775.

That the said petitioners have proposed to surrender and convey to the United States, all the lands described or meant to be described in the above mentioned deeds from the Indians, on the proviso that the United States reconvey to the companies one-fourth part of the said lands.

That, in the opinion of the committee, deeds obtained by private persons from the Indians without any antecedent authority, or subsequent confirmation, from the Government, could not vest in the grantees mentioned in such deeds a title to the lands therein described.

That the said petitioners do not suggest any such antecedent authority, or subsequent confirmation, in the present case; and, therefore, in the opinion of the committee, the said petitioners have not a legal title to the said lands.

That the proceeds of sales of lands in the western territory, belonging to the United States, are appropriated towards discharging the debts for the payment whereof the United States are holden.

The petitioners allege, that the considerations specified in the said deeds were paid to the Indians, and were at least as valuable as any that were given on similar occasions, and that the Indians named in the said deeds were owners of the land. On these points the committee give no opinion. But, for the reasons above expressed, they think it would not be expedient in the Government of the United States to accede to the aforementioned proposition of the petitioners.

To the honorable the Senate of the United States, the memorial of the Illinois and Wabash Land Companies most respectfully sheweth:

That, during the years 1773 and 1775, your memorialists purchased from n different Indian tribes, aborigines and possessors of the country, lying on part of the waters of the Rivers Illinois and Wabash, two parcels of land, as described in the deeds now in their possession, and which, when required, are ready to be produced.

That the consideration, as specified in the aforementioned deeds, was at least as valuable as any that was given on similar occasions; that the negotiation was of the most public notoriety; that the meaning and intention of the parties were interpreted and explained by persons duly qualified, of whom his Britannic majesty's interpreter was one, all deposing that they were present, either at the delivery of the bargained property to the Indians, or at the execution of the deed, as will be found authenticated by Hugh Lord, esq., captain in the 18th British regiment, and then commanding in that territory. The registry of Kaskaskias will also show the record of the whole transaction.

That further formalities (if from the British Government more were necessary to be obtained) were prevented by the almost immediate rupture with Great Britain.

That the property of the lands in question was, at the time of purchase, in the natives.

That, however clear the claim of the company to the whole of their purchase may be, they hesitate not to express their willingness and desire that a reasonable compromise upon the subject may take place between the United States and them.

They, therefore, pray that your honorable House may appoint a committee to hear and report upon the justice of their case, and such proposals as they shall lay before it.

This prayer they, with confidence, hope will be complied with, both from your known love of justice, and the evident advantage that must result to the community, if, by a compromise with the company, the necessity of a second purchase from the natives would be precluded. Of this, but little doubt can be entertained, since the Indians never have denied, and are still ready, as the company are credibly informed, to acknowledge, the honesty of the purchase made from them by your memorialists.

By order, and on behalf of the company,
JAMES WILSON.

ILLINOIS AND WABASH LAND COMPANIES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES APRIL 3, 1792.

Mr. LIVERMORE, from the committee to which was referred the memorial of the Illinois and Wabash Land Companies, made the following report:

That the claims of the petitioners are founded on two deeds mentioned in the said petition; one of which, to William Murray and others, who are called the Illinois Company, is dated July 5th, 1773, and the other, to Lord Dunmore and others, who are styled the Wabash Company, bears date October 18th, 1775.

That the said petitioners have proposed to surrender and convey to the United States all the lands described or meant to be described in the above mentioned deeds from the Indians, on the proviso, that the United States reconvey to the company one-fourth part of the said lands.

That, in the opinion of the committee, the said deeds, being given by the Indians, proprietors of the soil, before the declaration of the Independence of the United States, for a valuable consideration, bona fide paid, are sufficient to extinguish the Indian title to the lands therein described: and, therefore, that, on principles of justice and equity, the United States should agree to the proposal aforesaid made by the petitioners.

REFUGEES FROM CANADA AND NOVA SCOTIA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 19, 1793.

Mr. DAYTON, from the committee to which was referred the petition of John Blake, Joseph Bindon, John D. Mercier, and Benjamin Thompson, Canadian refugees, made the following report:

That the prayer of the petitioners is, that compensation be made to them for the loss of property, and sufferings, in the cause of American liberty.

In detailing the reasons in justification and support of their application, they allege that, "in consequence of their espousal of the American cause, they were driven to the necessity of flying from Canada, and of taking refuge within these United States; and that, finding themselves, at the close of the late American war, in very distressed circumstances, especially as they seemed precluded from all hope of returning to Canada, to recover their property and effects, no notice having been taken of their interests, nor any provision made for them in the treaties of peace between the United States and Great Britain, they did, in behalf of themselves and others, refugees from Canada, in the month of April, 1783, present a memorial to Congress, praying that honorable body to take their unhappy case into consideration, and to grant them such relief as should be deemed just and proper. That, accordingly, on the 23d of the same month, Congress were pleased to pass several resolves in their favor, to which they would beg to refer, and which they were then given to understand fully included themselves and their fellow sufferers. That, with unlimited faith in the justice of Congress, and satisfied with the assurances given to them by the resolves before referred to, they have patiently waited the convenience of the public to fulfil the promised relief till the present day."

The resolutions of Congress of the 23d of April are in the following words, viz: "That the memorialists be informed that Congress retain a lively sense of the services the Canadian officers and men have rendered the United States, and that they are seriously disposed to reward them for their virtuous sufferings in the cause of liberty."

"That they be further informed, that whenever Congress can consistently make grants of lands, they will reward, in this way, as far as may be consistent, the officers, men, and other refugees from Canada."

These resolutions unequivocally acknowledge the meritorious services and sufferings of that description of men whose case is referred, and contain a promise that they shall be rewarded by grants of land, whenever it may consistently be done. Although there may not exist a doubt of the merit of those in whose favor the petition has been made, and of the justice of their claim upon the United States for the stipulated retribution, yet the resolution above recited, and the petition itself, which directly refers to them, neither render it proper, nor, indeed, leave the committee at liberty, to report in favor of a compensation in any other species of property than lands.

Under this impression and restriction, the committee have sought for that kind of information which might, as far as possible, enable them to form a right judgment, as to the number of acres, and the situation and value of the land which ought to be set apart for that purpose, or, at least, what value in specie should be established as the measure of the donation. In this inquiry, they confess that they have not received as full satisfaction as they had hoped for from the undertaking. Although estimates of the actual losses and sacrifices of some individuals have been made out, and laid before the committee, they are, however, so few in number, and bear so small a proportion to the whole, that they afford no satisfactory rule by which a tolerably accurate decision may be made as to the aggregate of the losses sustained. From the best information which the committee have obtained, there appear to have been about two hundred and twenty-nine refugees from Canada, some with and others without families, twenty-two of whom are suggested to have been the principal sufferers, and the rest to be sufferers in a small degree. Of both descriptions, some, as has been suggested and is believed, have been already compensated, either wholly or in part, and not a few returned to Canada, both before and since the peace, to possess their property, or to pursue their business, neither the names nor numbers of whom have been exactly ascertained. It appears from returns, the originals of which are in the War Office, that two hundred and ninety-two men, women, and children, were victualled at Albany and Fishkill, from the public stores, in 1784; and that, in the following year, rations were drawn for ninety-three only. It also appears, from another voucher, in the same office, that two hundred and five were returned for, and entitled to, lands in the State of New York, pursuant to an act of the Legislature thereof, of the 11th of May, 1784. In this state of uncertainty, not only as to the extent of the losses or sufferings of the Canadian refugees, but as to the number of those who remain uncompensated, or whose compensation was inadequate, it is not easy for the committee to decide, with satisfactory precision, what specie value the lands to be distributed among them should bear, and still more difficult to ascertain the number of acres which ought to be allotted to them, because this must altogether depend upon their goodness and situation.

Having thus acknowledged the insufficiency of the materials upon which they are to found an important part of their report, they propose, with a diffidence which arises from that circumstance, the following resolutions, viz:

Resolved, That provision ought to be made by law for donations of land to the Canadian and Nova Scotia refugees, in conformity with the resolutions of Congress of the 23d of April, 1783, promising the same.

Resolved, That the lands, so as aforesaid to be given, ought not to exceed, in their specie value, at a reasonable estimate, the sum of ——— dollars.

REFUGEES FROM CANADA AND NOVA SCOTIA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 2, 1793.

The Secretary of the Department of War, to whom were referred the petitions hereinafter enumerated, with instructions to examine the same, and report his opinion thereon, respectfully reports:

That, from the evidence produced, it appears, that Thomas Faulkner, Edward Faulkner, and Simeon Chester, are refugees from the province of British Nova Scotia; and that Joseph Green, Prisque Trepagnie, Augustine Trepagnie, and Gregoire Trahan, also Mary, the widow of François des Jardins, and Margaret, the widow of François Rebutaille, are refugees from the province of Canada.

That the petitioners are persons who, from attachment to the American cause, were constrained to abandon their residences, and probably their property, in Canada and Nova Scotia, and take refuge within the United States. The object is, to obtain from the United States grants of lands, as some compensation for the losses and injuries they have sustained by their political conduct.

It appears that the resolve of Congress, of the 23d of April, 1783, being in the words following, involves an obligation of a grant of lands to the Canadian refugees, to wit:

"That the memorialist (Brigadier General Hazen) be informed that Congress retain a lively sense of the services the Canadian officers and men have rendered the United States, and that they are seriously disposed to reward them for their virtuous sufferings in the cause of liberty.

"That they be further informed, that, whenever Congress can consistently make grants of land, they will reward in this way, as far as may be consistent, the officers, men, and others, refugees from Canada."

And it further appears by the ordinance for ascertaining the mode of disposing of lands in the Northwestern Territory, passed by Congress, on the 20th of May, 1785, that Congress ordained "that the three townships adjacent to Lake Erie be reserved, to be hereafter disposed of by Congress for the use of the officers, men, and others, refugees from Canada, and the refugees from Nova Scotia, who are, or may be entitled to grants of land under resolutions of Congress now existing, or which may hereafter be made respecting them, and for such other purposes as Congress may hereafter direct."

That, independent, however, of these resolutions, it would seem that the principles of justice and policy unite to render the compliance with the prayer of the petitioners, and others similarly circumstanced, by granting them reasonable quantities of land. But as claims of this nature may be liable to considerable abuse, it will be necessary to establish guards for the prevention thereof.

All which is humbly submitted.

FRENCH SETTLERS AT GALLIOPOLIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE MARCH 24, 1794.

The Attorney General of the United States, to whom was referred the petition of the French settlers at Galliopolis, with the instructions to report to the Senate "upon the validity of their claims to lands under purchases from the Ohio, or Scioto Company, or other persons, together with his opinion on the means proper to be pursued for the obtainment of justice," respectfully reports, that, in his examination of these claims, the following facts presented themselves for consideration:

In the month of July, 1787, upon the application of certain persons associated for the purpose of purchasing lands on the Ohio River, Congress, by their resolve of that date, authorized the Board of Treasury of the United States to contract with any person or persons for a grant of a tract of land (bounded by the Scioto, the Ohio river, the western boundary of the seventh range of townships, and the northern boundary of the tenth township, continued due west to the Scioto) upon the terms therein mentioned.

On the twenty-sixth day of the same month proposals were made by the agents of that company, in behalf of themselves and their associates, for the purchase of the whole tract of land thus described, provided the payments were so regulated, that half a million of dollars only should be paid when the contract was executed, another half million when the whole should be surveyed, and the remainder in six equal half yearly payments, from the date of the second payment.

To these proposals Congress, with some qualifications, acceded on the following day, and directed the Board of Treasury to take order thereon.

On the 27th of October, 1787, the same agents for the Ohio Company contracted, on behalf of themselves and their associates, with the Board of Treasury, for one million and a half acres, part of the said tract, the northwestern boundary whereof is found to strike the Ohio river, about midway between the mouths of the Great Kanaway and Scioto rivers. On the same day another contract was made with the Board of Treasury for the purchase of the residue of the tract which they were authorized by the resolves of Congress to grant. This contract is stated to be made with Winthrop Sargent and Manasseh Cutler, and their associates; but some parts of that contract, as well as the subsequent conduct of the parties, leave it doubtful whether these associates were the Ohio Company or other persons. But as that company had the pre-emption right granted to them—as the Board of Treasury were authorized to contract in that manner with their agents only—as both instruments form in substance, but one contract, and as the payments to be made by the Ohio Company were the consideration of the long credit given for the payment of the residue purchase money—the legal and equitable construction, it is apprehended, must be, that they purchased as agents for the company, and not for themselves or others. This is corroborated by the sense of the company, as expressed in certain resolutions passed on the 4th day of October, 1788, in which they declare "that their right of pre-emption of the whole land mentioned in the resolves of Congress cannot be justly called in question."

By articles of agreement, dated the 29th day of October, in the year 1787, made between Manasseh Cutler and Winthrop Sargent, for themselves and their associates, on the one part, and William Duer, and his associates, on the other part, a moiety of the residue land (described in the second contract with the Board of Treasury) is assigned to William Duer and his associates, who agree to interest Messrs. Cutler, Sargent, and their associates, in the profits arising from the sales of these lands in Europe, or elsewhere; William Duer being thereby authorized to make such sales, and employ an agent for that purpose. But, in order to secure the right of pre-emption which was dependent on the second payment to be made by the Ohio Company, William Duer engaged to advance, on account of that company, one hundred thousand dollars, part of which was to be repaid out of the first money that these agents of the Ohio Company might receive from subscriptions.

From certain expressions in these articles (in which the second contract with the Treasury Board seems to be represented as the contract of Messrs. Sargent and Cutler, and the land therein mentioned stated to be at their disposal) it again becomes doubtful whether, by the term "their associates," the Ohio Company, or other persons, were intended. But as this inchoate title to the land was really vested in the company, and as Messrs. Sargent and Cutler could not convey a moiety of these lands, except in the quality of agents, it is conceived, that, to give any legal effect to this instrument, it must be considered as the grant of the Ohio Company by their agents, provided these agents had sufficient authority so to convey. How far they were so authorized does not appear; but from the proceedings of the company above referred to, they seem to be of opinion that their agents had no such power.

In consequence of this agreement, Joel Barlow was sent to Europe as the agent of the contracting parties, to dispose of these lands. What instructions he had does not appear; but for the purpose of aiding the sale, a company was formed under the name of the Scioto Company, to whom these lands were conveyed, and their agent, in conjunction with Barlow, disposed of considerable quantities of these lands to companies and individuals in France. The lands intended to be sold were represented (on a general map of the whole tract, comprised in the resolve of Congress) as divided from the lands of the Ohio Company, (that is, from the million and a half of acres,) by a line striking the Ohio, nearly opposite the mouth of the Great Kanaway. The purchasers, on their arrival in America, were received by William Duer, as agent for the Scioto Company, and by him directed to Gallipolis, which was laid out about three miles below the mouth of the Great Kanaway. Each settler was presented by William Duer with two lots in the town, and one four-acre out-lot, and the adjacent country was represented as that where their respective rights were to be located. But though this was the spot described on the map, and referred to in their deeds, yet it appears that it is within the limits, not only of the tract comprised in the first contract with the Treasury Board, but even within that portion of it which has been confirmed by act of Congress, passed on the 21st day of April, in the year 1792. Notwithstanding this, no objections were made by the Ohio Company to this settlement, nor was any notice given of their claim for a considerable time. This is accounted for by the information communicated by a member of the House of Representatives, who certifies, that in order to accommodate the French settlers with land, without carrying into execution the second contract with the Board of Treasury, (which had become burthensome, by the rise in the price of certificates,) Messrs. Duer and his associates purchased of the Ohio Company one hundred thousand acres on the west end of their tract, (comprehending the site of Gallipolis, and a part of the tract of land originally pointed out to the French settlers.) The deed between the parties was seen by a committee of the House of Representatives, and is believed to have contained words of absolute conveyance, and not to have been articles merely executory. But this deed has been since delivered up and cancelled, the purchase money, as is alleged, not having been paid. It is further certified, that the agents of the Ohio Company, at the time that they solicited a bounty of one hundred thousand acres from Congress, stated this grant, and the loss they were likely to sustain in consequence of it, in order to enforce their claims before the committee of the House of Representatives.

These are the facts relative to the claims of the French settlers at Gallipolis, as far as the Attorney General has been able to ascertain them; but it is proper to observe, that, as no agent on behalf of the Ohio Company has appeared since the papers came into his hands, he has not been able to attain such satisfactory information on some points as the case seemed to require. But, assuming the above state of facts to be accurate, he is of opinion, that the French settlers at Gallipolis have a valid equitable title to the settlement so made, and a right to locate their respective purchases within the bounds of the one hundred thousand acres conveyed to Wm. Duer and his associates, by the agents of the Ohio Company. That company can make no title to these lands, because they parted with them to Wm. Duer and his associates; and Wm. Duer and his associates would be stopped from setting up the deed against their own precedent sales. The act of Congress confirming the title of the Ohio Company, does not affect the individual rights of the purchasers under the Ohio Company, nor (as the contract with Wm. Duer and his associates is stated) can any failure of payment on their part, or the destruction of the deed, impair the equitable claims of the settlers. On the contrary, it is apprehended relief may be had in a court of equity, where a bill may be filed for a discovery, and compelling the execution of another deed in the place of that which is destroyed.

Again, if the agents of the Ohio Company were fully authorized to enter into the deed of the 29th of October, 1787, and if the Ohio Company were comprehended under the general term "associates," they thereby became parties to the sales in Europe, and, in such case, cannot impeach the title of the settlers: for those lands, though not comprehended within the description of the above mentioned deed, were represented by the agent to be so; and, by a reference to the map, are contracted for. There is reason, however, to believe that the Ohio Company cannot be considered as parties to these sales; but that fact may be fully ascertained, if necessary, by a bill of discovery in a court of equity.

But if, upon a full disclosure, the Ohio Company should not appear to be parties to those sales, and if the contract between the company and Wm. Duer, and his associates, should be found to be of such a nature as to convey no title till the payment of the purchase money, in such case the French settlers have no remedy but by action at law, against the parties contracting with them by their agents, and who guaranteed them against "eviction or impeachment of title."

It is but justice, however, to observe that great inconveniences will result to the settlers in prosecuting their claims, either at law or in equity. There is no court within the western Territory with jurisdiction competent to sustain a bill for discovery, for perpetuating testimony, or from compelling the renewal of a cancelled deed. And, although the courts of equity in the other parts of the United States, proceeding in personam and not in rem, have jurisdiction in this case, yet difficulties may arise if the parties should not be within the reach of their process. At law each purchaser must bring his separate suit; and against whom it ought to be brought is rendered somewhat doubtful by the interposition of the Scioto Company (whoever they were) between the purchasers and those who were the parties of the deed of 1787. So unavailing do the settlers consider any proceedings at law, that their agent, in his letter of the 26th of December last, declares "that the settlers at Gallipolis are by no means able to prosecute at law the authors of their misery; and, admitting that the prosecutions should be carried on in the name of the United States, the length of time requisite to bring such a prosecution to an issue is such, that he considers the ruin of the settlement as unavoidable. That the circumstances of the settlers are such, that the least uncertainty or delay must quite wear out their constancy, almost exhausted by the many disappointments and difficulties which they have had to struggle with for the space of three years. And they offer to cede to the United States all their rights and pretensions, both on the Ohio or Scioto Companies, if the grant they solicit should be made.

All which is respectfully submitted.

CLAIMS ON THE LANDS CEDED BY NORTH CAROLINA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 19, 1794.

Mr. WILLIAM SMITH, from the committee to which was referred the message of the President of the United States, enclosing the copy of a letter from the Governor of North Carolina, covering a resolution of the Legislature of that State; as also, the petitions of Thomas Person, and others, proprietors of lands in the territory of the United States, south of the River

Ohio, and of the trustees of the university of North Carolina,* made the following report:

That, in the cession of a certain district of territory by the State of North Carolina to the United States, it is made a condition of the said cession, "that all entries made by, or grants made to, all and every person or persons whatsoever, agreeable to law, and within the limits thereby intended to be ceded to the United States, should have the same force and effect as if such cession had not been made; and that all and every right of occupancy and pre-emption, and every other right reserved by any act or acts, to persons settled on, and occupying lands within the limits of the lands thereby intended to be ceded, should continue in full force, in the same manner as if the said cession had not been made, and as conditions upon which the said lands were ceded to the United States." That it further appears, that the boundary which has been guaranteed to certain Indian tribes, by a treaty made between the United States and those tribes at Holston, does interfere with some of the rights reserved by the said act of cession to certain citizens of the State of North Carolina, and others, who have heretofore delivered into the treasury of the said State, or into the land office thereof, certificates in payment for lands, which, by that treaty, have been relinquished to said Indian tribes; which certificates were originally issued for services and supplies during the late war.

That it appears to the committee that, such being the case, the said certificates ought of right to be restored to their former proprietors, and that they should be assumed and provided for as a part of the debt of the United States, and that the said proprietors should moreover be reimbursed all expenses incurred in entering, locating, and surveying the said land.

The committee, therefore, submit the following resolutions:

1st. Resolved, That it shall be lawful for the Executive of the State of North Carolina to subscribe, by way of loan, to the United States, the amount of all such certificates as have been deposited in payment for any lands (reserved by the act of cession aforesaid) which may have been relinquished to the Indians by the treaty aforesaid, in trust for the persons by whom they were so deposited, according to their respective rights and interests.

2d. Resolved, That the United States ought to reimburse the said persons the money which they have expended in having entries and surveys made, and in obtaining grants, and any other incidental charges which they have necessarily incurred, with interest; and that they should, moreover, make a reasonable allowance for the loss and damage which the petitioners have sustained, by having possession of the said land withheld from them.

3d. And whereas, The grants to the aforesaid lands, made by virtue of an act of the Legislature of North Carolina, are valid to all intents and purposes, as coming fully within the purview of a condition contained in the act of cession from the said State to the United States: Therefore,

Resolved, That whenever the United States shall think proper to extinguish the Indian claim to the said lands, by purchase or otherwise, it will be just and reasonable that the several persons who have obtained grants, or made surveys or entries, should have such rights confirmed and established, and their titles perfected, in preference to any other persons, on repaying to the Treasury of the United States the amount of what they may now receive, as a compensation for their disbursements and losses, in case such persons shall think proper to make such repayment within a certain time, to be limited by Congress for that purpose.

REFUGEES FROM CANADA AND NOVA SCOTIA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES APRIL 1, 1794.

Mr. GREENUP, from the committee to which were referred the petitions of Thomas Faulkner, Edward Faulkner, Simeon Chester, William Lawrence, and Joseph Green, and others, refugees from Nova Scotia and Canada, made the following report:

That your committee have examined the resolution of Congress, of the 23d of April, 1783, on the memorial of Brigadier General Hazen, promising that, whenever Congress can consistently make grants of land, they will reward in this way, as far as may be consistent, the officers, men, and others, refugees from Canada, as recited by the Secretary in his report, but which does not apply to the petitioners from that province, who, as they set forth in their petition, do not claim as refugees, but for services rendered in Canada by the orders of General Schuyler and Colonel Livingston, for which they say they were promised pay, and some a bounty in lands. From all the inquiry your committee could make, they cannot find that those officers had any authority to promise bounty in lands to be paid by the United States to the petitioners; nor are there returns or vouchers filed by which the pay claimed can be ascertained. Your committee also find a resolution of Congress of the 13th April, 1785, (which has been omitted by the Secretary,) in the following words, viz:

Resolved, That Jonathan Eddy, and other refugees from Nova Scotia, on account of their attachment to the interest of the United States, be recommended to the humanity and particular attention of the several States in which they respectively resided, and that they be informed that, whenever Congress can consistently make grants of land, they will reward in this way, as far as may be consistent, such refugees from Nova Scotia as may be disposed to live in the western country. That the petitioners, Thomas Faulkner, Edward Faulkner, and Simeon Chester, were inserted in the list returned by the said Jonathan Eddy, as refugees from the British province of Nova Scotia, and had abandoned their property there on account of their attachment to the cause of America. That William Lawrence has produced sufficient proof that he is also a refugee from the said province, and has abandoned his property there from the same cause. That, in the ordinance passed by Congress the 20th of May, 1785, it is ordained, "That three townships adjacent to Lake Erie, be reserved, to be hereafter disposed of by Congress for the use of the officers, men, and others, refugees from Canada, and the refugees from Nova Scotia, who are or may be entitled to grants of lands under resolutions of Congress now existing, or which may hereafter be made respecting them; and for such other purposes as Congress may hereafter direct." From the exposed situation of those townships, a grant there, at present, would afford but little relief to the petitioners; but, from the best information the committee could obtain, the United States possessed no lands adjacent to Lake Erie, which they can now grant or dispose of. On consideration whereof, your committee submit the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioner, Joseph Green, and others, from Canada, praying a bounty in lands, and other pay, for services rendered in the late war with Great Britain, ought not to be granted.

Resolved, That a tract of land not exceeding _____ acres, northwest of the Ohio river, beginning at the mouth of the Great Miami, and extending down the Ohio, not exceeding three times the breadth in length, be immediately appropriated to compensate the refugees from the British provinces of Canada and Nova Scotia, pursuant to the resolves of Congress of the 23d of April, 1783, and the 13th of April, 1785.

Resolved, That each refugee be entitled to five hundred acres of land.

Resolved, That the following conditions and restrictions ought to be observed, to entitle the applicants to a grant of lands:

1st. That the applicant shall make proof before some court of record of his actual residence in one of the provinces aforesaid, previous to the day of _____.

2d. That he was compelled to abandon his residence aforesaid, in consequence of his attachment to the American cause.

3d. That all such applications be made and lodged with the Secretary for the Department of War within _____ years.

INDIAN GRANTS TO THE INHABITANTS OF POST VINCENNES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, APRIL 15, 1794.

Extract from a paper dated at Post Vincennes, 20th November, 1793, addressed to George Washington, President of the United States of America, and signed by Pierre Gamelin and fifteen others.

The petition of the inhabitants of Post Vincennes humbly sheweth, that your petitioners, having lately heard of the publication of the laws of Congress, made for the regulation of the commerce with the Indians, and of your proclamation in consequence, forbidding any person whomsoever to establish himself upon lands belonging to them, being ignorant whether we are comprised therein, wishing to second, as much as possible, the good and just intentions of the United States, and to avoid drawing on ourselves any reproach, by precipitating the views we had of going upon limits which those same Indians gave to us, as soon as the peace between them and the United States should permit, we would submit to the equity of Congress this exposition of our titles to those lands, in the hope that that tribunal will guarantee to us the peaceable possession, by a solemn act, and, by that means, enable us to commence an establishment which we have for some time had in contemplation, and so flattering, after having groaned within the limits of a small village.

In 1742, some time after the foundation of this post, the natives of the country made the French and their heirs an absolute gift of the lands lying between the point above (pointe coupée en haut) and the River Blanche, below the village, with as much land on both sides of the Wabash as might be comprised within the said limits. At first, the ignorance of the value of those lands was the reason why there have been no authentic writings concerning this donation; but such as were in existence an unfortunate register carried off, with several other consequential papers; afterwards, the war of 1759 prevented the obtaining of them. However, the donors ratified the gift in all the councils which have since been held both with the officers of France and with those of his Britannic majesty; and when the English agents, in 1774, came to purchase lands of the Indians, the donors, at that time, also ratified anew the said donation. We observe, that, at the time of the purchase made by the English, as they wished to deceive the unfortunate Indians, by inserting in the contract both sides of the river instead of one, which the latter consented to dispose of, they would not to subscribe to it.

The last year, in councils, the first which have been held between the United States and these Indians, they unanimously spoke of the donation in these terms: "Americans, this is the first time I have come to see you, and to hearken to you. I shall, however, tell you the truth. Our fathers gave to the French and their heirs all the lands from la pointe coupée and the River Blanche, on both sides of the Wabash river, to enable them to live, and for the pasturage of their animals. The French and we are but one people; our bones are mingled in this earth; we are not now come to take it from them; on the contrary, we say that all those who are here dwell here; these lands are theirs; we have never sold lands. I do not think that there is a son capable of selling the grave of his mother. Were we to sell our lands, the Grand Source of Life would be displeased, for we should also sell the bones of our fathers and the roebucks, and we should die with hunger. I do not come to jest with you, or to ridicule our brethren the French. I refer to the writings of what our fathers have given to the French; writings, properly drawn, never deceive. Tell the great chief what I have just said; they are our unanimous sentiments."

It would doubtless be advantageous to us, also, to state here, in detail, the endless difficulties we have surmounted; the dangers we have braved on the part of the Indian enemies of our neighbors, because we were not willing to abandon this country; the reiterated and expensive efforts we have used since our establishment, to keep our neighbors within the limits of moderation, and to prevent their inroads on our brethren; the favorable disposition towards the United States in which General Clarke found us, as well as our neighbors, by the means of our councils: in a word, the considerable losses we have experienced, principally because we had fraternized with the Americans, and took the advantage of supporting our rights with them. But we had rather appeal to the equity of the United States than to all these considerations, however dear they may be to our recollection; persuaded as we are, that Congress will dissipate our doubts by an act in which regard will be had to these circumstances; to the little knowledge we possess of affairs of this nature; to the antiquity of our titles; and, above all, to our truly deplorable situation.

INDIAN GRANTS TO THE INHABITANTS OF POST VINCENNES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES APRIL 3, 1794.

MR. CLARK, from the committee to which was referred the petition of the inhabitants of Post Saint Vincennes, communicated by a written message from the President of the United States, of the 15th instant, made the following report:

That Congress, by their act of the 29th of August, 1788, directed measures to be taken for confirming, in their possessions and titles, the French and Canadian inhabitants, and other settlers at Post Saint Vincennes, who, on or before the year 1783, had settled there, and had professed themselves citizens of the United States, or any of them; and for laying off to them, at their own expense, the several tracts which they rightfully claimed, and which might have been allotted to them according to the laws and usages of the Government under which they have respectively settled:

That four hundred acres of land should also be reserved and given to every head of a family of the above description, settled at Post Saint Vincennes:

That the governor of the Western Territory should cause to be laid out, at the public expense, in the form of a square, adjoining to the present improvements at Post Saint Vincennes, and in whatever direction the settlers shall prefer, a tract of land sufficient for completing the above donations; which tract should afterwards be divided by lot among the settlers who were entitled to any part of the same, in such manner as they should agree: that, in pursuance of the above act of Congress, it appears that the claims of the settlers at Post Saint Vincennes have been examined, and surveys made, both of the land they were originally entitled to, and also of the donation of four hundred acres to each head of a family; which surveys have been returned into the office of the secretary of the territory; but that no grants or confirmations have been issued. No complaint of a failure in the execution of the above act of Congress, as far as the same respects individuals, has, to the knowledge of the committee, been made; but the petitioners state a claim to a tract of land among the settlers in common, founded on what they call a gift from the Indians, made in the year 1742. The lands then granted, the petitioners describe as follows: "Lying between the point above, and the River Blanche below, the village, with as much land on both sides of the Wabash as might be comprised within the said limits."

This grant had not been produced to the committee;

but in case of such a grant, the bounds, limits, and quantity of the land, as described in the petition, cannot, in the opinion of the committee, be ascertained; besides, whatever might have been intended as to the bounds and quantity of the land, your committee are informed that the grant or gift in question, was made to the French Government, and not, in particular, to the inhabitants of Post St. Vincennes; but that in consequence of this grant, it is probable that the respective claims of the inhabitants settled as above, under the act of Congress, were founded by grants under the French Government; and could the land mentioned in the grant be ascertained, and any part thereof should now remain unlocated to the inhabitants, such surplusage would now belong to the United States, having been ceded by France to Great Britain, and by Great Britain to the United States, at the treaty of peace.

The committee, therefore, upon as full an investigation of the claim of the petitioners as they have been able to make, are of opinion that they have no legal or equitable claim to any land from the United States other than what have already been allowed to them.

CLAIMS ON THE LANDS CEDED BY NORTH CAROLINA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 10, 1796.

Mr. HILLHOUSE, from the committee instructed to inquire whether any, and what relief ought to be granted to persons claiming lands in the territory of the United States south of the river Ohio, under purchases made from the State of North Carolina, which have been since secured to the Indians by treaty, made the following report:

That the chartered limits of North Carolina extend westerly to the Mississippi, and comprehend a large tract of country occupied and used by the Indians for their residence and hunting ground. That, on the 2d of May, 1778, the General Assembly of North Carolina passed a law, therein and thereby ascertaining and declaring the western boundary of the said State, and running a line which comprehended all the lands claimed at that time to have been ceded by the Indians, or conquered from them; which line did not extend so far westerly, or into the Indian country, as the present boundary line between the United States and the Indian tribes; and by the said law all past entries or surveys which had been made over and beyond the said line, were declared void, and all future entries or surveys were prohibited. Another law of the said State, passed on the 13th of September, 1780, recognized the same boundary line, and prohibited entries of surveys beyond it. On the 17th of May, 1783, another law of the said State was passed, declaring it to be expedient to extend the western boundary of the State; and did, in and by the said law, extend the same to the Mississippi, including all the lands within the chartered limits of the State; and opened a land office for entering and surveying the same, for the purpose of discharging certain debts contracted during the late war; excepting from such entry or survey a certain tract bounded and described in the said act, and declared to be reserved for the Indians, and certain other tracts reserved for special purposes. In pursuance of, and in conformity to, the provisions of this act, and an act of June 2d, 1784, the claimants did enter and survey the lands in question; but the principles or grounds upon which North Carolina founded the said act for thus extending their western boundary, are not made known to the committee, nor have they the means of information on that subject; it appears, however, that the same session of Assembly that passed the said land office law, also passed a law directing a treaty to be holden with the Indians, and providing for the expense of such treaty, and presents to be given to the Indians, in consideration of the lands by them to be ceded to the State; but it does not appear that any such treaty was ever holden. On the 28th day of November, 1785, the United States made the treaty of Hopewell with the Cherokees, and established a line between the United States and the said tribe, excluding a large portion of the lands which had been entered and surveyed under the said act; at which treaty the agent of North Carolina attended, and protested against it, as intrrenching upon the rights of that State; this treaty was, however, agreed to, and ratified by the United States and the said tribe. On the 21st of November, 1789, North Carolina acceded to the present constitution of the United States, and on the 22d of December following, passed an act ceding to the United States all her western territory, including all the said lands; in which cession it is, among other things, made a condition, "that all entries made by, or grants made to, all and every person or persons whatsoever, agreeable to law, and within the limits thereby intended to be ceded to the United States, should have the same force and effect as if such cession had not been made: and that all and every right of occupancy and pre-emption, and every other right reserved by any act or acts to persons settled on and occupying lands within the limits of the lands hereby intended to be ceded as aforesaid, shall continue to be in full force, in the same manner as if the cession had not been made, and as conditions upon which the said lands are ceded to the United States." Which cession was, by an act of Congress, passed April 2d, 1790, accepted. On the 2d of July, 1791, the treaty of Holston was made with the said Cherokee tribe of Indians; in which the present boundary line between the United States and the said Indian tribe was established, and all the lands lying beyond the said line secured thereby to the said tribe. No documents or proofs have been produced to the committee, nor have they, by their researches, been able to find any satisfactory evidence that North Carolina ever did extinguish the Indian title or claim to any of the lands lying without the said present boundary line between the United States and the said Cherokee tribe of Indians. Should any such proof be hereafter produced, it will merit the attention of Congress. From the most accurate view which the committee are able to take of the subject, from the information now before them, they cannot find that the said claimants have any other than a pre-emptive right to the said lands, and are of opinion that they cannot, of right, claim any thing more of this Government than a confirmation of that title, and an assurance that, whenever the Indian title is extinguished, they shall be permitted to enter into the quiet and peaceable possession and enjoyment of the said lands, and, therefore, recommend the following resolution, viz:

Resolved, That provision ought, by law, to be made, authorizing and enabling every person who, under the laws of North Carolina, and in conformity to the regulations and provisions thereof, have so entered, surveyed, located, or obtained grants of any of the lands ceded by the said State to the United States, as would have vested a good title, under the said State of North Carolina, if such cession had not been made to enter upon, occupy, and possess the same whenever, and as soon as the Indian title or claim to such lands shall be extinguished, under the authority of the United States, by purchase or otherwise; and to confirm and establish such title in as full and ample a manner as if the same had been derived from or under the United States.

1st SESSION.

CLAIMS TO LAND IN THE SOUTHWESTERN PARTS OF THE UNITED STATES, UNDER A LAW OF THE STATE OF GEORGIA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE APRIL 29, 1796.

PHILADELPHIA, April 26, 1796.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit to Congress a report in pursuance of their resolution of the 3d of March, 1795, respecting the title to the land situate in the south-western parts of the United States, claimed by certain companies in that resolution described, under a law of the State of Georgia passed the 7th day of January, in the year 1794. It is accompanied with all the charters, treaties, and other documents relative to the subject which it has been in my power to procure, except the most modern treaties, to which I have taken leave to refer. However imperfect it may be deemed, I have yet supposed it better to obey, without delay, the order of Congress, in the best manner in my power, than to suffer the session to pass without a communication of some kind.

With the most perfect respect,

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,
CHARLES LEE,
Attorney General of the United States.

The PRESIDENT of the Senate of the United States.

To the Congress of the United States:

The attorney general most respectfully reports: That, in obedience to the resolution of Congress, bearing date the 3d day of March, in the year one thousand seven hundred and ninety-five, directing the Attorney General to collect, digest, and report to the next Congress, the charters, treaties, and other documents relative to and explanatory of the title to the land situate in the south-western parts of the United States, and claimed by certain companies under a law of the State of Georgia, passed the 7th day of January, in the year one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four, namely, a tract of land claimed by James Gunn, Matthew McAllister, and George Walker, and their associates; also a tract of land claimed by Nicholas Young, Thomas Glasscock, Ambrose Gordon, and Thomas Cumming, and their associates; also a tract of land claimed by John B. Scott, John C. Nightingale, and Wade Hampton, and their associates; also a tract of land claimed by Zachariah Cox, and Matthias Maker, and their associates; a collection was begun by his predecessor in office, which he has endeavored to complete and digest, and is as follows, to wit:

L. No. 1. The seventh article of the treaty between England and Spain, made in the year one thousand six hundred and seventy, whereby it is stipulated that the King of Great Britain should remain in possession of what he then possessed in the West Indies and America; and prior to this period nothing is known to have been done to settle the pretensions of those Crowns relative to America, and at this time the principal colonies of Great Britain were settled. In this situation the boundaries of the territories in America of those nations remained till the peace of 1763, during which time they were the subject of many disputes, which were not adjusted till the cession of Florida in that year to the King of Great Britain.

L. No. 2. An article of the treaty of Seville, in 1729, referring to commissioners to ascertain the territorial limits of each nation in America, founded on any pre-existing treaty; but this commission does not appear to have been ever executed.

L. No. 3. An extract from the treaty in 1763, relative to the cession of Florida by Spain to Great Britain, it being comprehended in the 19th article.

L. No. 4. The proclamation of the King of Great Britain in 1763, after the aforesaid cession, by which, among other things, an addition is made to Georgia of "all the lands lying between the Rivers Altamaha and St. Mary's."

A. No. 1. An extract from a representation of the board of trade to the King, dated in 1728, in which are cited two grants, one by Charles the 1st, in the fifth year of his reign, unto Sir Robert Heath, of Carolina Florida, of the land lying from the River Matheo in the 30th degree, to the River Passa Magna, in the 36th degree of northern latitude; the other by Charles the 2d, in the seventeenth year of his reign, unto certain persons as proprietors, all that part of North America which lies between the 36th and 29th degrees of northern latitude, and in which Fort King George, on Altamaha, within the bounds of each, is stated to be claimed and contested by Spain.

A. No. 2. A report from the board of trade to the King, respecting the erection, in 1720, of Fort King George, its subsequent abandonment on account of unhealthiness, and recommending it to be again occupied and held as an evidence of his possession. This is dated 1st December, 1727.

B. A surrender dated 25th July, 1729, to George the 2d, of seven parts, into eight equal parts, to be divided of all that territory, situate, &c., extending from the north end of the island called Lucker Island, which lyeth in the southern Virginia seas, and within six and thirty degrees of the northern latitude, and to the west as far as the South seas, and so southerly as far as the River St. Mathias, which bordereth upon the coast of Florida, and within one and thirty degrees of northern latitude, and so west in a direct line as far as the South seas; also of all that territory north and eastward as far as the north end of Carahtuke river or gullet, upon a straight westerly line to Wyonoake creek, which lies within about the degrees of thirty-six and thirty minutes northern latitude, and so west in a direct line as far as the South seas, and south and westward as far as the degrees of twenty-nine, inclusive, northern latitude, and so west in a direct line as far as the South seas.

H. No. 1. Commission to Robert Johnson, Governor of South Carolina, dated 9th December, 1729, in which the limits of the province are not defined, and by which he is authorized to grant lands to individuals.

H. No. 2. Instructions from the board of trade to Governor Robert Johnson, dated 10th June, 1730, concerning grants of lands and laying off townships.

C. No. 1. A report of the board of trade to the privy council, dated 17th December, 1730, advising an incorporation of a society by the name of "the corporation for establishing charitable colonies in America," and a grant to them of "all that tract of land in the province of South Carolina, lying between the Rivers Savannah and Altamaha, to be bounded by the most navigable and largest branches of the Savannah, and the most southerly branch of the Altamaha," who were to be a colony independent of South Carolina, except as to the command of the militia.

C. No. 2. A report of the board of trade to the privy council, dated 22d December, 1731, that the western boundary of the new colony (meaning Georgia) may extend as far as that described in the ancient patents of Carolina, namely, westward.

C. No. 3. An extract from the charter of Georgia, dated in 1732, whereby several undivided eighth parts of that part of South Carolina which "lies from the northern stream of a river, there commonly called the Savannah, all along the seacoast to the southward, unto the most southern stream of a certain other great water or river called the Altamaha, and westward from the heads of the said rivers respectively, in direct lines to the South seas, and all that space, circuit, and precinct of land lying within the said boundaries, &c. are disposed of.

C. No. 4. An extract from a state of the province of Georgia, attested upon oath in the court of Savannah, copied from a printed journal of William Stevens, which was published in London in 1742, vol. 2. "It lies from the most northern stream of the River Savannah, the mouth of which is in the latitude of thirty-two degrees, along the seacoast to the most southern stream of Altamaha, the mouth of which is in thirty and a half degrees, and westward from the heads of the said rivers respectively, in direct lines to the South seas."

D. Additional instructions to Robert Johnson, Governor of South Carolina, dated 6th September, 1732, reciting the charter of Georgia, bearing date the 9th June, 1732, and requiring it to be registered among the records of that province.

E. A surrender of the trustees of Georgia unto the King, of all their rights, under the charter of 1732, for seven-eighths of that territory, and under the deed from Earl Granville, to them of the remaining eighth part, dated 28th February, 1732, which charter and deed are therein recited, and which surrender bears date in the year 1752.

C. No. 5. A commission to John Reynolds, appointing him Governor of the province of Georgia, lying "between the most northern stream of a river, there commonly called Savannah, all along to the seacoast to the southward, to the most southern stream of a certain other great water or river, called the Altamaha, and westward from the heads of the said rivers respectively, in straight lines to the South Seas."

F. No. 1. A letter of the board of trade to Governor Ellis, of Georgia, disapproving of his license to Gray and others, to settle south of the Altamaha, as it was out of his governmental limits, and might provoke a Spanish war, dated 21st April, 1758.

F. No. 2. A letter from the board of trade to Secretary Pitt, dated 1st March, 1758, complaining of the settlement of Gray and his associates south of the Altamaha.

F. No. 3. A letter from the board of trade to Governor Lyttleton, of South Carolina, complaining and remonstrating against the same settlement of Gray, &c., dated 21st April, 1758.

F. No. 4. A letter of James Wright, Governor of Georgia, dated 17th October, 1761, giving information of settlements south of Altamaha without license, which he states out of his jurisdiction; and also, that Oglethorpe had extended his settlements to the south of the true boundary of Georgia.

G. No. 1. A protest of Governor Wright, of Georgia, to Governor Thomas Boone, of South Carolina, dated 30th March, 1763, against his grants of any lands south of the River Altamaha, recorded in the books of grant of South Carolina.

G. No. 2. A letter from the board of trade to Governor Boone, dated 30th May, 1763, disapproving of his conduct in granting lands south of the Altamaha, supposed to be in Florida, and expressing an intention to enlarge the boundaries of Georgia, &c.

G. No. 3. A letter from Governor Boone to the board of trade, dated 17th August, 1763, explaining his reasons for granting the lands south of Altamaha, in which he states that the boundaries of Georgia were fixed, and did not include those lands; that there is a latitude of thirty-eight miles to the south of Georgia, which was not in Florida, and over which the Governor of South Carolina had before exercised jurisdiction; and other particulars are mentioned by him.

G. Nos. 5 & 6. Two letters from Governor Wright to the board of trade, one dated 20th April, 1763, in which he suggests the necessity and expediency of extending the boundaries of Georgia, and of vacating the grants of South Carolina, and of lands south of Altamaha, &c.

G. No. 4. An inquiry of the board of trade respecting the grants of Governor Boone, before mentioned, bearing date 20th December, 1764.

K. No. 1. A report of the board of trade to the King, dated 1st June, 1763, advising the ceded country to be divided into two provinces, East and West Florida, the boundary of each to be the thirty-first degree of north latitude, as far as could be settled without interfering with the Indians, and advising the land north of St. Mary's to be joined to Georgia.

K. No. 2. A commission to James Grant, governor of East Florida, in which are described the bounds of that province, bearing date 4th October, 1763, viz: "to the northward by a line drawn from that part of Appalachicola river where the Chatahoochee and Flint rivers meet, to the source of St. Mary's, thence, by the course of that river, to the Atlantic."

K. No. 3. A commission to John Elliott, governor of West Florida, dated 29th July, 1767, describing its bounds "to the northward, by a line drawn due east from that part of the Mississippi which lies in thirty-one degrees north latitude, to the River Appalachicola, or Chatahoochee, and to the eastward by the said river."

K. No. 4. A representation from the board of trade, dated 23d March, 1764, for altering the bounds of West Florida by an instrument under the great seal, as was done in the extension of the south boundary of Georgia, which should declare West Florida to be bounded on the north by a line drawn from the mouth of the River Yazoo, where it unites with the Mississippi, due east to the River Appalachicola, in order to comprehend settlements.

L. No. 1. A representation from the board of trade on the act of Georgia, passed in March, 1765, respecting grants of land by South Carolina, lying south of Altamaha, in which it is stated, that the cession in 1763, by Spain, had put an end to the disputes concerning the lands south of Altamaha, which had not been previously occupied by either nation, exclusively of the other; that all south of St. Mary's were East Florida, and all north of that river were annexed to Georgia; for which boundaries reference is made to the proclamation bearing date the 7th October, 1763; but the act is objectionable and ought not to receive the royal assent; and that all documents concerning those granted lands should be transcribed, and the transcripts sent from South Carolina to Georgia, and there recorded.

I. No. 2. Additional instructions from the King, in the 7th year of his reign, (that is to say, in the year 1767,) to Montague, governor of South Carolina, in conformity to the representation last mentioned, whereby his approbation thereof is expressed, and the same is carried into effect.

It may be proper to observe here, that no document has come to the hands of the Attorney General by which the extension of West Florida appears to have been made, conformably to the suggestion of the board of trade in the paper marked K. No. 4, herein before mentioned; and perhaps this may be deemed a matter worthy of further inquiry, unless the declaration of George Chalmers be so considered, which will be referred to.

M. A copy of a treaty of peace between South Carolina and Georgia of the one part, and the Cherokee nation on the other, dated 20th of May, 1777, relative to the boundaries of their countries.

N. An agreement for establishing the boundary line between the States of South Carolina and Georgia, bearing date 28th April, 1787.

The Attorney General forbears to transmit the treaty of peace between Great Britain and Spain, in the year 1763, and the treaty of the same date between Great Britain and the United States, as well as the treaty lately concluded, though not yet ratified, by the King of Spain, with the United States, because they are already in possession of Congress and in print; nor need he observe that these establish the present boundaries of the United States; but he prays leave to remark that most of the documents herein reported have been obtained through the aid of George Chalmers, in the office for trade at Whitehall, at the instance of Samuel Bayard, by direction of the late Attorney General Bradford, who, in a long letter accompanying them, has presented his view of their operation, relative to the boundary of Georgia; and, whether correct or otherwise, the same is communicated herewith for the use and consideration of Congress.

P. A note from Judge Pendleton of Georgia, in which he represents that the north boundary of Florida was extended in 1764, but he has not sent any documents to support the assertions. If further time were allowed, perhaps some useful information might be obtained on this point.

All of which is most respectfully submitted.

CHARLES LEE.

7th. All offences, damages, losses, injuries, which the nations and people of Great Britain and Spain have at any time, heretofore, upon what cause or pretext soever, suffered by each other in America, shall be expunged out of remembrance and buried in oblivion, as if no such thing had ever passed.

Moreover, it is agreed, that the most serene King of Great Britain, his heirs and successors, shall have, hold, keep, and enjoy forever, with plenary right of sovereignty, dominion, possession, and propriety, all those lands, regions, islands, colonies, and places whatsoever, being or situated in the West Indies, or in any part of America, which the said King of Great Britain and his subjects do at present hold and possess; so as that in regard thereof, or upon any color or pretence whatsoever, nothing more may or ought to be urged, nor any question or controversy be ever moved concerning the same hereafter.

6th. Commissioners shall be nominated, with sufficient powers, on the part of their Britannic and Catholic majesties, who shall assemble at the court of Spain, within the space of four months after the exchange of the ratifications of the present treaty, or sooner, if it can be done, to examine and decide, what concerns the ships and effects taken at sea on either side, to the times specified in the preceding article. The said commissaries shall likewise examine and decide, according to the treaties, the respective pretensions which relate to the abuses that are supposed to have been committed in commerce, as well in the Indies as in Europe, and all the other respective pretensions in America, founded on treaties, whether with respect to the limits, or otherwise. The said commissaries shall likewise discuss and decide the pretensions which his Catholic majesty may have, by virtue of the treaty of one thousand seven hundred and twenty-one, for the restitution of the ships taken by the English fleet, in the year one thousand seven hundred and eighteen. And the said commissaries, after having examined, discussed, and decided the above said points and pretensions, shall make a report of their proceedings to their Britannic and Catholic majesties, who promise that, within the space of six months after the making of the said report, they will cause to be executed punctually and exactly what shall have been so decided by the said commissaries.

20th. In consequence of the restitution stipulated in the preceding article, his Catholic majesty cedes and guaranties, in full right, to his Britannic majesty, Florida, Fort St. Augustin, and the bay of Pensacola, as well as all that Spain possessed on the continent of North America, to the east or to the southeast of the River Mississippi; and, in general, every thing that depends on the said countries and lands, with the sovereignty, property, possession, and all rights, acquired by treaties or otherwise, which the Catholic King and the Crown of Spain have had till now over the said countries, lands, places, and their inhabitants, so that the Catholic King cedes and makes over the whole to the said King and to the Crown of Great Britain, and that in the most ample manner and form.

BY THE KING, A PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE R.

Whereas we have taken into our royal consideration the extensive and valuable acquisitions in America, secured to our crown by the late definite treaty of peace, concluded at Paris the 10th day of February last; and being desirous that all our loving subjects, as well of our kingdoms as of our colonies in America, may avail themselves, with all convenient speed, of the great benefits and advantages which must accrue therefrom to their commerce, manufactures, and navigation; we have thought fit, with the advice of our privy council, to issue this our royal proclamation, hereby to publish and declare to all our loving subjects that we have, with the advice of our said privy council, granted our letters patent under our great seal of Great Britain, to erect within the countries and islands, ceded and confirmed to us by the said treaty, four distinct and separate Governments, styled and called by the names of Quebec, East Florida, West Florida, and Grenada, and limited and bounded as follows, viz:

First, The Government of Quebec, bounded on the Labrador coast by the River St. John, and from thence by a line drawn from the head of that river, through the Lake St. John, to the south end of the Lake Nipissim; from whence the said line, crossing the River St. Lawrence and the Lake Champlain in 45 degrees of north latitude, passes along the high lands, which divide the rivers that empty themselves into the said River St. Lawrence from those which fall into the sea; and also along the north coast of the Baye des Chaleurs, and the coast of the Gulph of St. Lawrence to Cape Rosieres, and from thence, crossing the mouth of the River St. Lawrence, by the west end of the island of Anticosti, terminates at the aforesaid River St. John.

Secondly, The Government of East Florida, bounded to the westward by the Gulph of Mexico and the Appalachian river; to the northward, by a line drawn from that part of the said river where the Chattahoochee and Flint rivers meet, to the source of St. Mary's river, and by the course of the said river to the Atlantic ocean, and to the east and south by the Atlantic ocean and the Gulph of Florida, including all islands within six leagues of the seacoast.

Thirdly, The Government of West Florida, bounded to the southward by the Gulph of Mexico, including all islands within six leagues of the coast from the River Appalachian to the Lake Pontchartrain; to the westward by the said lake, the Lake Maurepas, and the River Mississippi; to the northward, by a line drawn due east from that part of the River Mississippi which lies in thirty-one degrees north latitude, to the River Appalachian, or Chattahoochee; and to the eastward by the said river.

Fourthly, The Government of Grenada, comprehending the island of that name, together with the Grenadines, and the islands of Dominica, St. Vincent, and Tobago.

And to the end that the open and free fishery of our subjects may be extended to, and carried on, upon the coast of Labrador and the adjacent islands, we have thought fit, with the advice of our said privy council, to put all that coast, from the River St. John's to Hudson's straits, together with the islands of Anticosti and Madelaine, and all other smaller islands lying upon the said coast, under the care and inspection of our governor of Newfoundland.

We have also, with the advice of our privy council, thought fit to annex the islands of St. John and Cape Breton, or Isle Royale, with the lesser islands adjacent thereto, to our Government of Nova Scotia.

We have also, with the advice of our privy council aforesaid, annexed to our province of Georgia all the lands lying between the Rivers Altamaha and St. Mary's.

And whereas it will greatly contribute to the speedy settling our said new Governments, that our loving subjects should be informed of our paternal care for the security of the liberties and properties of those who are, and shall become inhabitants thereof; we have thought fit to publish and declare, by this our proclamation, that we have, in the letters patent under our great seal of Great Britain, by which the said Governments are constituted, given express power and direction to our governors of our said colonies respectively, that, so soon as the state and circumstances of the said colonies will admit thereof, they shall, with the advice and consent of the members of our council, summon and call general assemblies within the said Governments respectively, in such manner and form as is used and directed in those colonies and provinces in America, which are under our immediate Government; and we have also given power to the said governors, with consent of our said councils, and the representatives of the people, so to be summoned as aforesaid, to make, constitute, and ordain laws, statutes, and ordinances for the public peace, welfare, and good government of our said colonies, and of the people and inhabitants thereof, as near as may be, agreeable to the laws of England, and under such regulations and restrictions as are used in other colonies; and in the mean time, and until such assemblies can be called as aforesaid, all persons inhabiting in, or resorting to, our said colonies, may confide in our royal protection for the enjoyment of the benefit of the laws of our realm of England; for which purpose we have given power under our great seal to the governors of our said colonies respectively, to erect and constitute, with the advice of our said councils, respectively, courts of judicature and public justice within our said colonies for the hearing and determining all causes, as well criminal as civil, according to law and equity, and as near as may be agreeable to the laws of England, with liberty to all persons who may think themselves aggrieved by the sentence of such courts, in all civil cases, to appeal, under the usual limitations and restrictions, to us in our privy council.

We have also thought fit, with the advice of our privy council as aforesaid, to give unto the governors and councils of our said three new colonies upon the continent, full power and authority to settle and agree with the inhabitants of our said new colonies, or to any other person who shall resort thereto, for such lands, tenements, and hereditaments, as are now, or hereafter shall be, in our power to dispose of, and them to grant to any such person or persons, upon such terms, and under such moderate quit-rents, services, and acknowledgments, as have been appointed and settled in other colonies, and under such other conditions as shall appear to us to be necessary and expedient for the advantage of the grantees, and the improvement and settlement of our said colonies.

And whereas we are desirous, upon all occasions, to testify our royal sense and approbation of the conduct and bravery of the officers and soldiers of our armies, and to reward the same, we do hereby command and empower our governors of our said three new colonies, and other our governors of our several provinces on the continent of North America, to grant, without fee or reward, to such reduced officers as have served in North America during the late war, and are actually residing there, and shall personally apply for the same, the following quantities of land, subject, at the expiration of ten years, to the same quit-rents as other lands are subject to in the province within which they are granted, as also subject to the same conditions of cultivation and improvements, viz.

To every person having the rank of a field officer, five thousand acres.

To every captain, three thousand acres.

To every subaltern or staff officer, two thousand acres.

To every non-commissioned officer, two hundred acres.

To every private man, fifty acres.

We do likewise authorize and require the governors and commanders-in-chief of all our said colonies upon the continent of North America, to grant the like quantities of land, and upon the same conditions, to such reduced officers of our navy of like rank, as served on board our ships of war in North America, at the times of the reduction of Louisburg and Quebec, in the late war, and who shall personally apply to our respective governors for such grants.

And whereas it is just and reasonable, and essential to our interest, and the security of our colonies, that the several nations or tribes of Indians, with whom we are connected, and who live under our protection, should not be molested or disturbed in the possession of such parts of our dominions and territories as, not having been ceded to or purchased by us, are reserved to them, or any of them, as their hunting grounds; we do, therefore, with the advice of our privy council, declare it to be our royal will and pleasure, that no governor or commander-in-chief in any of our colonies of Quebec, East Florida, or West Florida, do presume, upon any pretence whatever, to grant warrants of survey, or pass any patents for lands beyond the bounds of their respective governments, as described in their commissions; as also that no governor or commander-in-chief of other colonies or plantations in America, do presume for the present, and until our further pleasure be known, to grant warrant of survey, or pass patents for any lands beyond the heads or sources of any of the rivers which fall into the Atlantic ocean from the west or northwest; or upon any lands whatever, which, not having been ceded to, or purchased by us, as aforesaid, are reserved to the said Indians, or any of them.

And we do further declare it to be our royal will and pleasure for the present, as aforesaid, to reserve under our sovereignty, protection, and dominion, for the use of the said Indians, all the land and territories not included within the limits of our said three new governments, or within the limits of the territory granted to the Hudson's Bay Company; as also all the land and territories lying to the westward of the sources of the rivers which fall into the sea from the west and northwest, as aforesaid; and we do hereby strictly forbid, on pain of our displeasure, all our loving subjects from making any purchases or settlements whatever, or taking possession of any of the lands above reserved, without our special leave and license for that purpose first obtained.

And we do further strictly enjoin and require all persons whatever, who have either wilfully or inadvertently seated themselves upon any lands within the countries above described, or upon any other lands which, not having been ceded to, or purchased by us, are still reserved to the said Indians, as aforesaid, forthwith to remove themselves from such settlements.

And whereas great frauds and abuses have been committed in the purchasing lands of the Indians, to the great prejudice of our interests, and to the great dissatisfaction of the said Indians; in order, therefore, to prevent such irregularities for the future, and to the end that the Indians may be convinced of our justice and determined resolution to remove all reasonable cause of discontent, we do, with the advice of our privy council, strictly enjoin and require that no private person do presume to make any purchase from the said Indians of any lands reserved to the said Indians within those parts of our colonies where we have thought proper to allow settlement; but that, if at any time any of the said Indians should be inclined to dispose of the said lands, the same shall be purchased only for us, in our name, at some public meeting or assembly of the said Indians, to be held for that purpose by the governor or commander-in-chief of our colony respectively within which they shall lie; and, in case they shall lie within the limits of any proprietaries, conformable to such directions and instructions as we or they shall think proper to give for that purpose: and we do, by the advice of our privy council, declare and enjoin that the trade with the said Indians shall be free and open to all our subjects whatever, provided that every person, who may incline to trade with the said Indians, do take out a license for carrying on such trade from the governor or commander-in-chief of any of our colonies respectively where such person shall reside, and also give security to observe such regulations as we shall at any time think fit, by ourselves or commissaries to be appointed for this purpose, to direct and appoint, for the benefit of the said trade; and we do hereby authorize, enjoin, and require the governors and commanders-in-chief of all our colonies respectively, as well those under our immediate government as those under the government and direction of proprietaries, to grant such licenses without fee or reward, taking especial care to insert therein a condition that such license shall be void, and the security forfeited, in case the person to whom the same is granted shall refuse or neglect to observe such regulations as we shall think proper to prescribe as aforesaid.

And we do further expressly enjoin and require all officers whatever, as well military as those employed in the management and direction of Indian affairs within the territories reserved, as aforesaid, for the use of the said Indians, to seize and apprehend all persons whatever, who, standing charged with treason, misprisions of treason, murders, or other felonies or misdemeanors, shall fly from justice and take refuge in the said territory, and to send them, under a proper guard, to the colony where the crime was committed of which they shall stand accused, in order to take their trial for the same.

Given at our court at St. James's, the 7th day of October, 1763, in the third year of our reign.

God save the King.

TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

May it please your Majesty:

In obedience to your majesty's commands, signified to us by his grace the Duke of Newcastle's letter of the 9th of the last month, directing us to lay before your majesty a state of the possessions of your majesty and your subjects in America, which are disputed by the King of Spain, particularly those of Fort King George, on the borders of South Carolina, of the island of Providence, and the rest of the Bahama islands; and of the settlement your majesty's subjects have in the bay of Campeachy; as also the complaints upon which redress has not yet been obtained, of injuries done by the Spaniards to your majesty's subjects in America, or trading thither: as the seizing of their ships and effects by the guarda costas, and other depredations and acts of violence and injustice committed on the part of Spain, and the damage sustained thereby; we take leave to represent to your majesty:

That Carolina was formerly known by the names of Florida and Carolina Florida; this province was first discovered by Sr. Sebastian Cabot, in the year 1497, who, by commission from, and at the expense of, King Henry VII, discovered all the coast of America, from the 56th to the 28th degrees of northern latitude, about thirty years before any other Europeans had visited the northern continent of America: and it does not appear that ever the Spaniards attempted any discovery of that part of America till 1527, under Pamphilio Narvaez, nor any conquest till 1533, when Ferdinando Soto landed upon Florida from the Havana, and, wandering over a great part of that country in search of mines, which he could not find, died of grief in May, 1542; and such of his men as were left alive, returned again to the Havana, without making any settlement on that continent.

The first grant that we find of this country by your majesty's royal predecessors was by King Charles I, in the fifth year of his reign, to Sir Robert Heath, his attorney general; in that patent it is called Carolina Florida, and the boundaries fixed for it are from the River Matheo, in the 30th degree, to the River Passa Magna, in the 36th degree of northern latitude.

We have good reason to believe that possession of this country was taken under the said patent, and large sums of money expended by the proprietor and those claiming under him in making settlements there; but whether this grant was afterwards surrendered, or whether the same became vacant, and obsolete by non-user or otherwise, King Charles II, made two other grants of the same country, with some small difference in the boundaries, to the lords proprietors of Carolina.

The last of these grants bears date the 30th day of June, in the seventeenth year of King Charles II's reign, and gives to the lords proprietors all that part of North America which lies between the 36th and 29th degrees of northern latitude.

Fort King George, upon the River Altamaha, now claimed by the Spaniards, lies within the bounds of both the above mentioned grants, to Sir Robert Heath, and to the lords proprietors, who have made and continued many flourishing settlements in Carolina, whereas it is notoriously known that the Spaniards have never maintained or kept possession of any in those parts except St. Augustine; and your majesty might with as much reason contest their title to the settlement, as they dispute your majesty's right to Fort King George, which was neither settled by the Spaniards, nor any other European nation, when your majesty's troops first took possession of that place whereon that fort was afterwards erected.

This is not the first time that disputes have arisen between the Crowns of Great Britain and Spain, concerning their respective dominions in America: but to prevent all contests of this sort in times to come, a treaty was concluded at Madrid, in the year 1670, by the seventh article of which treaty, it was expressly agreed between the then Kings of Spain and Great Britain that the King of Great Britain and his heirs should hold and enjoy forever all those lands and places in any part of America which the said King of Great Britain or his subjects then held or possessed; which treaty is subsequent to the two grants to Sir Robert Heath and the lords proprietors of Carolina, and to the making of several settlements under both the said patents: it is, therefore, matter of surprise that the Spaniards should now pretend a title to a part of a province which they have so long ago given up by the said treaty, which hath been confirmed by many subsequent treaties between the two Crowns.

I hereby certify, that the before written paper is an extract of a representation from the board of trade to the King copied from the trade entry, N, page 347.

TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

WHITEHALL, December 1, 1727.

May it please your Majesty:

His grace the Duke of Newcastle, one of your majesty's principal secretaries of state, having lately transmitted to us the copy of a letter to your majesty's secretary at war, from Captain Edward Massy, who commands an independent company of foot at Fort King George upon the Altamaha river in South Carolina, setting forth divers hardships which the company suffers from the unwholesome situation of the said fort and the badness of accommodation there: and we having, since the receipt of the said letter, seen several other papers from Carolina, by which it appears that Captain Massy, at the request of the council and assembly, has actually withdrawn all his men to Port Royal, and abandoned the fort at Altamaha.

We take leave to acquaint your majesty that, in the year 1720, it being suspected that the French or Spaniards would take possession of the Altamaha river, his late majesty was pleased to order a company of one hundred men, under the command of General Nicholson, your majesty's governor of South Carolina, to secure that river, as being within the bounds of South Carolina; and to erect a fort, as well to maintain his majesty's property there, as to command the navigation of the said river, which runs up the country very near to the French settlements on the Mississippi; a fort was accordingly built, and called Fort King George, which was some time afterwards burnt by accident and rebuilt, but in a very bad manner, at the expense of the province, which is one of the causes why the soldiers complain for want of proper accommodations; though we cannot believe their condition to be so bad as is set forth, because General Nicholson has informed us, that the inconveniences which the garrison labored under there were chiefly owing to the inactive and lazy disposition of the soldiers, who are mostly old invalids, of which the general has given us a remarkable instance, for he says, they could not be prevailed upon to fetch wholesome water for themselves, as the natives did, when they assisted in building the said fort, whereby they preserved themselves in good health.

General Nicholson has also informed us, that he had often proposed to the said company the making of gardens and enclosures, and had offered to send them stocks of cattle, as he had done powder and fishing tackle, by which means, had they been industrious, they might have saved their pay by victualling themselves, there being in that country great plenty of deer, wild fowl, and fish.

This being the true state of the case, although the situation of the fort may not be very healthy, and although there may be some reason to complain for want of proper accommodations, whatever inducements the council and assembly might have to withdraw the garrison for any immediate service from thence to Port Royal, yet we are of opinion that the fort ought not to be abandoned, but that orders should be sent without loss of time for resuming the possession of it, lest the same should fall into the hands of the French or Spaniards; the reasons being at present rather stronger for the maintaining of this fort than they were at first for the erecting of it: this may be done by sending only a detachment of the company to Altamaha; for we look upon this fort at present rather as an evidence of your majesty's possession, than as a place capable of making any considerable defence.

This detachment may, from time to time, be relieved from Port Royal, by which means the soldiers will have the means of preserving or recovering their healths, and it may be left to the discretion of your majesty's governor there, to change the situation of the fort to any other place not liable to the same objections with this, provided the same be situated in a place that may command the navigation of the said river.

We the rather recommend this, because we are informed the Spaniards are equipping several periaugas to cruize upon that coast, and they may probably take possession of this river if not speedily prevented.

At the same time we would propose to your majesty that orders may be sent to your majesty's governor there to furnish the soldiers with all proper conveniences, and to give all possible encouragement for the carrying on so important a service.

It may likewise be necessary that your majesty should be graciously pleased to give directions to your board of ordinance to send some powder and ball to Carolina for the service of the said fort, their stores being entirely exhausted.

All which is most humbly submitted.

JUNE 10, 1730.

Whereas great inconveniences have arisen in many of our colonies in America from the granting excessive quantities of land to particular persons, which they have never cultivated, and have thereby prevented others more industrious from improving the same, more particularly in South Carolina, where several persons claim a right to many thousand acres which they have not yet taken up; you are hereby directed to recommend to the Assembly of our said province to pass an act or acts whereby the owners of all lands already granted by the late lords proprietors shall be obliged, within a reasonable time, to take possession of and cultivate the lands by them claimed, on penalty of forfeiture of such right of claim; and to prevent the like inconvenience for the future, in all grants of lands to be made by you, by and with the advice and consent of our council, you are to take especial care that no grants be made to any person but in proportion to his ability to cultivate the same, and that proper clauses be inserted for vacating the said grants, on failure of cultivation or payment of the quit rents reserved thereon. And as the most probable measures for your judgment in this particular will be to proportion the quantity of land to the number of persons and slaves in each grantee's family, you are hereby directed not to grant to any person more than fifty acres for every white or black man, woman, or child, of which the grantee's family shall consist at the time the grant shall be made. But, in the laying out all lands for the future, where such lands shall be contiguous to rivers, you are to take care that not above one-fourth part of the land granted shall border upon the river, that is to say, there shall be four chains in depth backwards to every chain in front upon the said river respectively, and so in proportion for any larger quantity; and that a free passage to and from the said river be reserved for the use of all his majesty's subjects.

Whereas it has been found, by long experience in our provinces of New Hampshire and Massachusetts Bay, that the settling of such persons as were disposed to become planters there in townships, hath redounded very much to their advantage, not only with respect to the assistance they have been able to afford each other in their civil concerns, but likewise with regard to the security they have thereby acquired against the insults and incursions of the neighboring Indians; we have thought it for our service, and you are hereby required to mark out and set apart eleven townships in our said province on the banks of rivers at sixty miles distance from Charlestown, that is to say:

- 2 townships upon the River Altamaha.
- 2 on the Savannah river.
- 1 on the head of Ponpon river.
- 2 on the Santee river.
- 1 on Watry river.
- 1 on Black river.
- 1 on Pedec river.
- 1 on Wacomace river.

It is our further will and pleasure that each of these townships do consist of twenty thousand acres of land, to be laid out in square plats of ground, one side thereof to front the respective rivers on which they shall be settled. In each of these townships you shall mark out a proper place for the situation of a town contiguous to the river where the township lies, to consist of so many lots, and each lot of such quantity of land as you shall judge convenient; and to each inhabitant at their first settling there, besides their respective town lots, you shall grant fifty acres, part of the above mentioned twenty thousand, for every man, woman, or child of which the grantee's family shall consist; which grants shall be augmented from time to time, as the abilities of the respective inhabitants shall render them capable of cultivating more lands, always taking care to proportion the profitable and unprofitable land in each grant, and to mark the same out in such manner that every grantee, by the situation of his land, may reap equal advantage of access to the river to which the township shall be contiguous; and, to the intent that land near the said townships may not be wanting for the convenience of the inhabitants as their substance shall increase, no person except the inhabitants shall be allowed to take up any lands within six miles of the said townships, respectively, to which the said townships shall be contiguous.

It is our further will and pleasure, that each of these townships, together with all the lands on the same side of the river lying within six miles of the said township, respectively, be erected into a distinct parish, and that, when any of the said intended parishes shall have one hundred householders, they be entitled to send two members to our assembly, and to enjoy all such other privileges as do of right and common usage belong to other parishes in our said province.

And as a further encouragement to such persons as shall be disposed to settle in these townships, we are graciously pleased to allow the inhabitants thereof a right of common and herbage in and through all such lands contained within the extent of the said townships, respectively, as shall not be taken up by particular grants made to the said inhabitants. And that a quantity of land not exceeding three hundred acres, contiguous to the said towns, shall be set apart for a common in perpetuity to each of the said towns, free from quit rent. And it is our will and pleasure that you do, with all convenient speed, lay out these townships, and that no person claiming a right to take up land in South Carolina, by former grants from the late lords proprietors, be allowed to take up lands within six miles of these townships, by virtue of such grants.

And whereas we have been informed that the number of white men in our said province bears too small a proportion to that of the blacks, which is not only a hindrance to the peopling and settling the same, but may be also of dangerous consequence from the attempts of an enemy, and even from an insurrection of the negroes; it is our will and pleasure, that you recommend, in the strongest terms to the assembly, that they pass an act giving suitable encouragement to all who shall import servants into the province, either men or women; and as an encouragement for white servants to go thither, we are graciously pleased to allow you to grant fifty acres of land, free of quit rent for ten years, to all white servants, men or women, who shall have served their masters the whole time of their agreement, and shall be willing afterwards to become planters or settlers in the said province.

And whereas, by our commission, you are empowered to settle and agree, by and with the advice and consent of our said council, with the inhabitants of our said province, for such lands, and tenements, and hereditaments, as now are, or hereafter shall be, in our power to dispose of, and then to grant to any person or persons, upon such terms, and under such moderate quit rents, services, and acknowledgments, to be thereupon reserved unto us, as you, by the advice aforesaid, shall think fit; it is, nevertheless, our will and pleasure, that you do not make any grants of land to any person whatsoever, under a less quit rent than four shillings proclamation money, for every hundred acres, except for the first ten years, to white servants, as mentioned in the foregoing article, and the like term for those who shall undertake to settle the eleven forementioned townships, or any of them.

Report to the lords of the committee of council upon the petition of the Lord Percival, Edward Digby, George Carpenter, esq., &c., about establishing a charitable colony in South Carolina.

DECEMBER 7, 1730.

To the right honorable the lords of the committee of his majesty's most honorable privy council.

MY LORDS: Your lordships having been pleased to refer to us the petition of the right hon. the Lord Viscount Percival, the hon. Edward Digby, the hon. George Carpenter, James Oglethorpe, esq., and several others whose names are thereto subscribed, setting forth that the cities of London and Westminster, and the parts adjacent, do abound with great numbers of indigent persons who are reduced to such necessity, as to become burthensome to the public, and who would be willing to seek a livelihood in any of his majesty's plantations in America, if they were provided with a passage and means of settling there; and humbly proposing to undertake the trouble and charge of transporting all such poor persons and families, provided they may obtain a grant of lands in South Carolina, for that purpose, together with such powers as shall enable them to contract with persons inclinable to settle there, and to receive the charitable contributions and benefactions of all such persons as are willing to encourage so good a design. We have considered the several particulars therein contained, and having discoursed with the petitioners thereupon, we have received certain proposals from them relating to the subject matter of their petition; whereupon, we take leave to represent to your lordships—

That, as the petitioners' design appears to us to be a very laudable one in every respect, and may, if happily executed, produce many good effects to the public, we think it may deserve due encouragement, and are humbly of opinion, that it may be proper for his majesty to grant them all reasonable powers for the promoting and carrying on so good a work, and, therefore, we would propose to your lordships

That his majesty may be graciously pleased to incorporate the petitioners, according to the prayer of their petition, as a charitable society by the name of the corporation for establishing charitable colonies in America, with perpetual succession.

That they may be empowered to purchase lands of inheritance in Great Britain, to the value of one thousand pounds per annum, and estates for lives or years, and goods and chattles to any value; and to receive and take by grant, gift, purchase, or otherwise, any lands in America, with power to make reasonable by-laws, not repugnant to the laws of Great Britain, for the government of their corporation; together with all other clauses, usual and necessary for such a corporation; and to give an annual account of all moneys or effects by them received, or expended for the carrying on this charity in the high court of chancery.

And, as a further encouragement to this design, we are of opinion, his majesty may be graciously pleased to grant to the petitioners, and to their successors forever, all that tract of land in his province of South Carolina, lying between the Rivers Savannah and Altamaha, to be bounded by the most navigable and largest branches of the Savannah, and the most southerly branch of the Altamaha, with the islands in the sea lying opposite to the said land, reserving to his majesty, his heirs and successors, a quit rent, at the rate of four shillings proclamation money, for every hundred acres contained in the said tract, which shall be leased or granted out by the corporation to their under tenants, or taken up, settled, or improved by them or their agents, the said quit rent not to commence or be paid till ten years after such leases, settlements, takings up, or improvements respectively.

And that his majesty may always be duly informed of what quantities of land are granted, taken up, settled, or improved by the said corporation, that a constant register shall be kept by their officers, of all such leases, grants, takings up, settlements, and improvements, and authentic transcripts thereof, annually transmitted to his majesty's auditor of the plantations, or his deputy in South Carolina, and also to his majesty's land surveyor in that province, reserving to the said surveyor in his majesty's behalf, a right of inspecting the lands so leased, granted, taken up, improved or settled, to prevent any abuses with respect to the quit rents hereby intended to be reserved upon such lands.

And whereas it is the desire of the petitioners, that the tract of land, by them petitioned for, which is at present entirely uninhabited, except by some few Indian families, may be separated from the province of South Carolina, and be made a colony independent thereof with respect to their laws, government, and economy, both civil and military, save only in the command of their militia, which is to remain with his majesty's Governor of South Carolina, for the time being. We are humbly of opinion, that his majesty may be graciously pleased to indulge them in this particular likewise, saving always the dominion of the Crown, and the dependence which every British colony ought to have upon his majesty; and for this purpose, we would humbly propose, that the corporation may have the liberty, from time to time, to lay before his majesty lists of all such officers, both civil and military, as shall be thought necessary by them, for the support, conduct, and government of their intended colony, and which are usually appointed by commissions from his majesty, or from his majesty's governors in other colonies in America; and that, when his majesty shall have approved of such officer by his order in council, the corporation may be empowered to give them commissions under their common seal.

And, as it will be necessary that there should be power of making laws for the government of this colony, we would propose that his majesty may empower the corporation, from time to time, to prepare laws for that purpose, to be laid before the King, in council, and if not disapproved by his majesty in thirty days, that they may be sent over, and be in full force until the King shall think fit to signify his disallowance of them.

And as, in process of time, it is to be hoped this colony may prove a flourishing settlement, and thereby become sharers in the trade of South Carolina, it will be necessary that the person who superintends this settlement, although he should not act under the title of governor, should, according to the act of the 7th and 8th of King William, not only be approved of by his majesty, as has been before proposed, but also take the usual oath to observe the acts of trade and navigation; for which purpose, it will be necessary that the usual instructions upon that head, which are given to the Governors in America, should likewise be given to him; and that the corporation do give constant accounts of all proceedings to this office, that we may lay the same before his majesty.

We are, my lords, your lordship's most obedient, and most humble servants,

A report to the lords of the committee of council, about settling a western boundary to the colony to be established in South Carolina by a charter, for which the Lord Percival and others have petitioned.

WHITEHALL, December 22, 1731.

To the right honorable the lords of the committee of his majesty's most honorable privy council.

My Lords: In pursuance of your lordships' order of the 14th of this month, referring to us the following points, viz: the setting a western boundary to the colony to be established in South Carolina, by virtue of a charter petitioned for by the Lord Percival and others, and for ascertaining the distance of the islands upon the eastern shore from the continent; as likewise for fixing the number of acres proper to be granted to each person who shall settle there; we have been attended by some of the petitioners, and take leave to represent to your lordships:

That we think the western boundary of this new charter may extend as far as that described in the ancient patents granted by King Charles II to the late lords proprietors of Carolina, whereby, that province was allowed to extend westward in a direct line as far as the South seas.

With respect to the islands upon the eastern shore from the continent, we think this new charter may include such as lie opposite to, and within twenty leagues of, the coast between the Rivers Savannah and Altamaha, which are not already inhabited or settled by any authority derived from the Crown, and, as to the quantity of land to be granted to each person who shall settle within the limits of this charter, we are humbly of opinion, that the proprietors should be restrained from granting above five hundred acres to any one person.

We are, my lords, &c.

From the Georgia charter in 1732.

Know ye, therefore, that we, greatly desiring the happy success of the said corporation, for their further encouragement in accomplishing so excellent a work, have, of our special grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, given and granted, and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, do give and grant to the said corporation and their successors, under the reservations, limitations, and declarations, hereafter expressed, seven undivided parts (the whole into eight equal parts to be divided) of all those lands, countries, and territories, situate, lying, and being in that part of South Carolina, in America, which lies from the northern stream of a river there, commonly called the Savannah, all along the sea coast to the southward, unto the most southern stream of a certain other great water or river, called the Altamaha, and westward from the heads of the said rivers, respectively, in direct lines to the South seas, and all that space, circuit, and precinct of land lying within the said boundaries, with the islands in the sea, lying opposite to the eastern coast of the said islands, within twenty leagues of the same, which are not already inhabited or settled by any authority derived from the Crown of Great Britain, together with all the soils, grounds, havens, ports, gulfs and bays, mines, as well as royal mines of gold and silver, as other minerals, precious stones, quarries, woods, rivers, waters, fishings, as well as royal fishings of whale and sturgeon, as other fishings, pearls, commodities, jurisdictions, royalties, franchises, privileges, and pre-eminences, within the said territories, and the precincts thereof, and thereunto, in any sort, belonging or appertaining, and which we, by our letters patent, may or can grant, and in as ample manner and sort as we, or any of our royal progenitors, have hitherto granted to any company, body politic or corporate, or to any adventurer or adventurers, undertaker or undertakers of any discoveries, plantations, or traffic of, in or into any foreign parts whatsoever, and in as large and ample manner as if the same were herein particularly mentioned and expressed.

A state of the province of Georgia, attested upon oath in the court of Savannah, Nov. 10, 1740.

The province of Georgia lies from the most northern stream of the River Savannah, (the mouth of which is in the latitude of 32°) along the sea coast, to the most southern stream of the Altamaha, (the mouth of which is 30° 30') and westward from the heads of the said Rivers, respectively, in direct lines to the South seas.

This province was part of South Carolina, but the eastern and southern parts of it inhabited by the Creek Indians, the northern by the Cherokees and Chickasaws; the western by the Choctaws, the Blewmouths, and other Indian nations to the South sea. The Creek Indians, who always acknowledged the King of England for their sovereign, yet made war with the people of Carolina, to obtain satisfaction for injuries done by their peddling traders: the war was concluded by a peace which obliged the people of Carolina not to settle beyond the River Savannah; and no Englishman was settled within this district, that we know of, when the first colony of Georgia arrived. The country was then all covered with woods. Mr. Oglethorpe agreed with the Indians, and purchased of them the limits mentioned in the treaty.

When the east part of the province of Georgia was taken possession of under the trustees' charter by Mr. Oglethorpe, according to the limits of the British dominions in America, forts were erected upon the extremities to keep up marks of possession; the strength and materials were of such a nature as the men he had with him could make, and sufficient for defence against any strength that could be brought against them by the neighboring Indians, or Spaniards in Florida.

E.

This indenture, made the — day of —, in the twenty — year of the reign of our sovereign lord George the Second, by the grace of God of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c., and in the year of our Lord Christ one thousand seven hundred and fifty-two, between our said sovereign lord the King's most excellent majesty, of the one part, and the trustees for establishing the colony of Georgia, in America, of the other part: Whereas, his said most excellent majesty, by his letters patent under the great seal of Great Britain, bearing date at Westminster, the ninth day of June, in the fifth year of his reign, did (amongst divers other matters and things therein contained) for himself, his heirs, and successors, constitute and appoint John Lord Viscount Percival, of his kingdom of Ireland, Edward Digby, George Carpenter, James Oglethorpe, George Heathcote, Thomas Tower, Robert More, Robert Hucks, Roger Holland, William Sloper, Francis Eyles, John Laroche, James Vernon, William Belitha, esquires, Stephen Hales, master of arts, John Burton, bachelor of divinity, Richard Bundy, master of arts, Arthur Bedford, master of arts, Samuel Smith, master of arts, Adam Anderson, and Thomas Coram, gentlemen, and such others as should be elected in the manner therein mentioned, to be one body politic and corporate, by the name of the trustees for establishing the colony of Georgia, in America, with perpetual succession, with divers jurisdictions, powers, franchises, and privileges, therein expressed; and did also give and grant to the said corporation and their successors, under the reservations, limitations, and declarations, therein expressed, seven undivided parts (the whole into eight equal parts to be divided) of all those lands, countries and territories, situate, lying, and being in that part of South Carolina, in America, which lies from the most northern stream of a river there commonly called Savannah, all along the sea coast to the southward unto the most southern stream of a certain other great water or river called the Altamaha, and westward from the heads of the said rivers, respectively, in direct lines to the South seas; and all that space, circuit, and precinct of land, lying within the said boundaries, with the islands in the sea lying opposite to the eastern coast of the said lands, within twenty leagues of the same, which were not then already inhabited or settled by any authority derived from the Crown of Great Britain, together with all the soils, grounds, havens, ports, gulfs, and bays, mines, as well royal mines of gold and silver as other minerals, precious stones, quarries, woods, rivers, waters, fishings, as well royal fishings of whale and sturgeon, as other fishings, pearls, commodities, jurisdictions, royalties, franchises, privileges, and preeminences, within the said territories and the precincts thereof, and thereunto in any sort belonging or appertaining, and which his said majesty by his letters patent, might or could grant, and in as ample manner and sort as his said majesty or any of his royal progenitors had then before granted to any company, body politic, or corporate, or to any adventurer or adventurers, undertaker or undertakers, of any discoveries, plantations, or traffic, of, in, or into, any foreign parts whatsoever, and in as large and ample manner as if the same were therein particularly mentioned and expressed, to have, hold, possess, and enjoy, the said seven undivided parts (the whole into eight equal parts to be divided as aforesaid) of all and singular, the said lands, countries, and territories, with all and singular other the premises therein before by the said letters patent granted or mentioned, or intended to be granted to them, the said corporation, and their successors forever, for the better support of the said colony: to be holden of his said majesty, his heirs and successors, as of his honor of Hampton Court, in his county of Middlesex, in fee and common soccage, and not in capite: yielding and paying, therefore, to his said majesty, his heirs and successors, yearly forever, the sum of four shillings for every hundred acres of the said lands which the said corporation should grant, demise, plant, or settle; the said payment not to commence or be made until ten years after such grant, demise, planting, or settling, and to be answered and paid to his said majesty, his heirs and successors, in such manner, and in such species of money or notes as should be current in payment by proclamation from time to time in his said province of South Carolina: all which lands, countries, territories, and premises, thereby granted or mentioned, or intended to be granted, his said majesty did, by the said letters patent, make, erect, and create, one independent and separate province, by the name of Georgia; and did, by the same letters patent, ordain, will, and establish, that for and during the term of twenty-one years, to commence from the date of the said letters patent, the said corporation should and might form and prepare laws, statutes, and ordinances, fit and necessary for the government of the said colony, and not repugnant to the laws and statutes of England, and to present the same to his majesty, his heirs and successors, in their privy council, which being approved, should be from thenceforth in full force: and his said majesty did, by the said letters patent, will and declare, that after the determination of the said term of twenty-one years, such form of government and method of making laws and ordinances for the better government of the said province of Georgia and the inhabitants thereof, should be established and observed within the same, as his said majesty, his heirs, or successors, should thereafter ordain and appoint, and should be agreeable to law; and that from and after the determination of the said term, the governor of the said province, and all officers, civil and military, within the same, should from time to time be nominated and appointed by his said majesty, his heirs and successors. And whereas by an indenture made the 28th day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and thirty-two, and in the sixth year of his said majesty's reign, between the right honorable John Lord Carteret, baron of Hawnes, in the county of Bedford, (now Earl Granville,) of the one part, and the trustees for establishing the colony of Georgia, in America, of the other part, (reciting as therein is recited,) for the considerations therein mentioned, he, the said John Lord Carteret, did give, grant, bargain, and sell, unto the said trustees, for establishing the colony of Georgia, in America, and their successors, all that one undivided eighth part of or belonging to the said John Lord Carteret (the whole into eight equal parts to be divided) of and in all and singular the lands, countries, territories, and premises, before mentioned and described in the said part recited letters patent, with the appurtenances, and all the part and share, estate, right, title, interest, use, trust, possession, property, claim, and demand whatsoever, both in law and equity, of him the said John Lord Carteret, of, in, and to, all and singular the said lands, countries, territories, and premises aforesaid, lying and being within the limits and boundaries in the above recited letters patent mentioned and described, with the appurtenances and every part and parcel thereof, together with all and singular royalties, rights of government, jurisdictions, privileges, prerogative rights, liberties, immunities, and franchises whatsoever, and of what kind soever, within the said territories and premises, to him the said John Lord Carteret belonging, or in any wise appertaining, and the reversion and reversions, remainder or remainders, rents, issues, and profits thereof: to have and to hold all and singular the said one undivided eighth part of all and singular the said lands, countries, and territories, and all and singular other the premises thereby granted, bargained, and sold, or mentioned or intended so to be, and every part and parcel thereof, with all and singular the appurtenances, unto the said trustees for establishing the colony of Georgia, in America, and their successors, upon the several trusts, and to and for the several intents and purposes, and subject to the several conditions, limitations, and declarations, in his said present majesty's said letters patent specified and contained, and to and for no other use, intent, or purpose whatsoever, yielding and paying therefore to the said John Lord Carteret, and his heirs, yearly, forever, the sum of six-pence for the eighth part of every one hundred acres of the said lands, which the said corporation should grant, demise, plant, or settle; the said payment not to commence or be made until ten years after such grant, demise, planting, or settling, and to be answered and paid unto the said John Lord Carteret, and his heirs, and in such manner and in such species of money or notes as should be current, in payment by proclamation from time to time, in the said province of South Carolina, as in and by the said recited letters patent and indenture (relation being thereunto respectively had) amongst diverse other matters and things therein contained, may more fully and at large appear. And whereas the said trustees have, from their consideration of the present state and condition of the said province, and to the end that proper means may be provided for putting the Government thereof on a more sure foundation, proposed and agreed to make an absolute surrender and grant of the said province, and all the lands, territories, powers, and jurisdictions, to his said majesty, in the manner hereinafter mentioned, which his said majesty has been graciously pleased, by and with the advice of his privy council, to accept. Now this indenture witnesseth, that the said trustees for establishing the colony of Georgia, in America, for themselves and their successors, have, for the considerations and motives aforesaid, and for divers other good considerations them thereunto moving, granted, surrendered, and yielded up, and by these presents do, for themselves and their successors, grant, surrender, and yield up, unto his said most excellent majesty, his heirs and successors, the said recited letters patent and their said corporation, and all right, title, and authority, to be or continue a corporate body, and all the powers of government, and all other powers, jurisdictions, franchises, preeminences, and privileges, therein and thereby granted or conveyed to them, and have granted, and do hereby grant, unto his said majesty, his heirs and successors, all the said lands, countries, territories, and premises, as well the said one-eighth part thereof granted, meant, or intended to be granted, by the said John Lord Carteret, to them as aforesaid, as also the said seven-eighth parts thereof, granted, meant, or intended to be granted, as aforesaid, in and by his said majesty's letters patent or charter above recited, together with all the soils, grounds, havens, ports, gulphs, and bays, mines, as well royal mines of gold and silver as other minerals, precious stones, quarries, woods, rivers, waters, fishings, as well royal fishings of whale and sturgeon as other fishings, pearls, commodities, jurisdictions, royalties, franchises, privileges, and preeminences, within the said territories and the precincts thereof, and thereunto in any sort belonging or appertaining, and all other the premises, and all rents, reversions, remainders, and other profits, reserved, due, or payable, or which may happen upon, or by virtue of, any demise or grant heretofore made of the premises, or any part thereof, and all their estate, right, title, interest, claim, or demand whatsoever, of, in, or to, the said premises, and every part thereof; to have and to hold all and singular the premises to his said majesty, his heirs and successors, to the use of his said majesty, his heirs and successors, subject nevertheless, and without prejudice, to all such grants, leases, contracts, estates, and interests, in law or equity, as have been heretofore lawfully made or granted by the said trustees for establishing the colony of Georgia, in America, or by any acting in authority under them in America, and which are now subsisting according to the said letters patent, which said surrender and grant his said most excellent majesty hath accepted, and by these presents, for himself, his heirs and successors, doth accept. In witness whereof, to one part of this indenture remaining with the trustees for establishing the colony of Georgia, in America, his said most excellent majesty has caused his great seal to be affixed, and to the other part thereof, remaining with his said majesty, the said trustees, with the privy and by direction of the common council of the said corporation, have caused their common seal to be affixed, the day and year above mentioned. Witness, &c.

George the Second, by the grace of God of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c. to our trusty and well beloved John Reynolds, esq., greeting: We, reposing especial trust and confidence in the prudence, courage, and loyalty of you, the said John Reynolds, of our especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, have thought fit to constitute and appoint, and by these presents do constitute and appoint you, the said John Reynolds, to be our captain general and governor-in-chief, in and over our colony of Georgia, in America, lying from the most northern stream of a river there commonly called Savannah, all along the sea coast to the southward unto the most southern stream of a certain other great water or river called the Altamaha, and westward from the heads of the said rivers, respectively, in straight lines to the South seas, and of all that space, circuit, and precinct of lands lying within the said boundaries, with the islands in the sea lying opposite to the eastern coast of the said lands, within twenty leagues of the same.

Extract of a letter from the Board of Trade to Governor Ellis.

APRIL 21, 1758.

The settlement of Gray and his adherents, to the southward of the Altamaha, and their forming themselves into a civil community without the license, and in defiance of the authority of the Crown, appears to us to be a matter of a very extraordinary nature, and of a very dangerous tendency and operation, not only as it is subversive of all legal order and government, but as it lays the foundation of a dispute with the Crown of Spain upon questions of territorial claims, which, at all times, but especially in the present situation of this country, it was to be wished could be avoided. The preventing this man, by proper arguments and persuasions, from putting himself under the protection of the Spanish Government, was certainly a very proper and prudent measure; but we cannot approve your having given him a license to settle at the River St. Mary's, and trade with the Indians there, not only as that place (being greatly to the southward of the Altamaha) is not within your jurisdiction, but as it may be considered by the Spanish governor of St. Augustine as an open declaration of the right of the Crown of Great Britain to those lands, and also as it seems to be a measure which counteracts every other prudent step you appear to have taken to remove the jealousies and suspicions he had entertained of your having secretly encouraged and supported the hostilities which the Creek Indians had committed in the settlements under his protection; for whatever other motives the Indians may have had for attacking the Spaniards, there is great ground to suspect that Gray may have had his views in instigating them to it.

The papers relative to this extraordinary proceeding of Mr. Gray and his adherents, which we have received from yourself and Governor Lyttleton, have been laid before his majesty, and though we cannot yet inform you what steps his majesty may direct to be taken upon it, yet we thought it proper that you should not remain ignorant of our sentiments with respect to your having given a license to Gray to settle at the River St. Mary's, which appeared to us inconsistent with the great prudence and discretion with which you seem to have acted in every other circumstance of this transaction.

A letter to the right honorable William Pitt, one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state.

SIR: We have lately received several letters and papers from William Henry Lyttleton, esq., his majesty's governor of South Carolina, and from Henry Ellis, esq., lieutenant governor of Georgia, giving an account of a settlement which certain of his majesty's subjects, without any license or authority from his majesty, or any acting under his authority, have made to the southward of the River Altamaha, which is the reputed southern boundary of the province of Georgia, and acquainting us with the conduct of the Spanish governor at St. Augustine upon this occasion, and with their own proceedings with respect to the said settlers.

This extraordinary transaction appears to us to be of the greatest importance, not only as it is an open defiance of his majesty's lawful authority, and may, by means of the influence which these people are represented to have with the neighboring Indians, be of very dangerous consequence to the colonies of Georgia and South Carolina, but also, as it may disturb that peace and friendship which at present so happily subsists between his majesty and the King of Spain, no limits having, as we apprehend, ever been finally settled between the two Crowns in this part of America. We, therefore, think it our duty to transmit to you the enclosed extracts and copies of the said letters and papers, which contain all the information we have received upon this subject, and to desire that you will be pleased to lay them before his majesty for his majesty's directions thereupon.

We are, sir, your most obedient

And most humble servants,

The settlement of Gray and his adherents to the southward of the Altamaha, and their forming themselves into a civil community, under the regulations of Government, without the license, and in defiance of the authority of the Crown, appears to us to be a matter of a very extraordinary nature, and of a very dangerous tendency and operation, not only as it is subversive of all legal order and government, but as it may lay the foundation of a dispute with the Crown of Spain upon points of territorial claim, which, at all times, but especially in the present situation of this country, it was to be wished could be avoided: as the matter appeared to us in this light, we thought it our duty to lay all the papers which we have received from you, as well as those received from Mr. Ellis, upon this subject, before his majesty for his directions thereupon, and we have, in consequence thereof, received his majesty's commands to report our opinion what orders it may be most advisable to give for effectually preventing the bad consequences to be apprehended from so irregular a proceeding.

F. No. 4.
SAVANNAH, IN GEORGIA,
October 17, 1761.

My Lords: On the 1st instant, I had the honor to receive your lordships' commands, of the 28th of April, requiring me, from time to time, to give your lordships frequent and very full information of the state and condition of this province, as well with respect to the administration of government and justice, as to the trade and commerce thereof; also, regularly and punctually to transmit the several papers required by his majesty's instructions: all which I shall most carefully and diligently observe. I found the journals a little backward when I came here, but have given strict orders that they be immediately brought up, and shall take care that they are kept up for the future. I have already sent two copies of the bills passed on the 9th of June last. Also, the minutes of the council, as an upper house, and of the assembly, to that time.

Your lordships were likewise pleased to send me a set of queries for my speedy answer thereto, which I have now under consideration, and shall transmit my answer as speedily as the nature of the inquiry will admit of. I think it my duty to acquaint your lordships that it has very lately come to my knowledge that a set of people who, some years ago, settled themselves to the southward of the River Altamaha, at a place by them called New Hanover, and who were, in 1759, by his majesty's command, and in his name, ordered to remove from thence, did only make a show or appearance of so doing, and immediately returned back to their settlements, where they have continued ever since, and yet are. By the best information I can get, these people, in the whole, amount to between seventy and eighty men, and are a mixture of runagates from the two Carolinas, Virginia, &c., &c. They are not settled together, but scattered about the country, and on lands at present not within my jurisdiction or authority. But I must beg leave to observe, that, notwithstanding this nominal boundary by the King's charter to the trustees of the southernmost stream of the Altamaha, yet General Oglethorpe extended his settlements southward without any regard to that boundary, and many plantations were settled far beyond the Altamaha, and marks of possession held, and the lands claimed quite to St. Juan's river. And there has been, and to this day is, by his late majesty's order, a sergeant's guard kept at Fort William, near the south end of Cumberland island, by a detachment from his majesty's independent companies in South Carolina, not under my direction or authority, but of the governor of South Carolina.

The inlet from the seat at the south end of this island is called Amelia, and is at the mouth of the River St. Marys, I believe fifty miles further south than where the New Hanover people are settled. I have acquainted Mr. Secretary Pitt with this matter, and also wrote to the governor of Carolina on the subject, as I think it my duty to do to your lordships; and have the honor to be, with the highest esteem,

My lords, your lordships' most Obliged and obedient servant,
JA. WRIGHT.

G. No. 1.

To Thomas Boone, esq., his majesty's captain general and governor-in-chief in and over the province of South Carolina, and to all others to whom these presents shall come or may concern:

The protestation and caveat of James Wright, esq., his majesty's captain general and governor-in-chief in and over the province of Georgia, against any warrants being issued or attempts made to survey any lands to the southward of the River Altamaha, by pretence or color of any right or authority from or under the said Thomas Boone, as governor of South Carolina, or from or under the said Thomas Boone and his majesty's council in that province, and against any grant or grants being passed or signed by the said Thomas Boone, for any of the lands aforesaid, to any person or persons whatsoever, until his majesty's royal will and pleasure shall be known concerning the same.

Whereas, his late most gracious majesty, by letter from one of his principal secretaries of state, dated the 10th day of June, 1758, was pleased to signify his commands to the governor of the province of Georgia that he should immediately give orders, in his majesty's name, to the inhabitants of a certain settlement to the southward of the River Altamaha, made without his majesty's license or authority, and called by themselves New Hanover, to remove immediately from thence, and that the governor should take all due care that no settlements whatever be made without leave of his majesty or by his authority; in the execution of which orders, the governor of Georgia was directed to act in concert with the governor of Carolina, who had received his majesty's commands to the same purpose.

And although the reasons which possibly induced his majesty not to suffer his subjects to settle the aforesaid lands may now be thought not to subsist, because his Catholic majesty, by the 19th preliminary article of peace, cedes to our most gracious sovereign all that Spain possesses on the continent of North America, to the east or to the southeast of the River Mississippi; yet, as the ratification of the definitive treaty of peace between Great Britain and Spain, if it has taken effect, is not notified, it would be premature in any of his majesty's governors to proceed as though it actually was notified.

And, from the state and light in which these lands have been, for some years past, considered by his majesty, to attempt to intermeddle therein, until his majesty's royal will and pleasure be known, and his commands signified thereon, it is conceived, would be highly improper and contrary to his majesty's intention.

Therefore, for preservation of the rights and claims of the province of Georgia, in and to the premises aforementioned, against any extraordinary or injurious attempts of the said governor and council of South Carolina, for the reasons herein before given, and many others transmitted to Great Britain, to be laid before his majesty, I, the said James Wright, as governor of the province of Georgia aforesaid, do protest against all or any attempts whatsoever, to survey any lands to the southward of the aforesaid River Altamaha, by pretence or color of any authority from or under the governor or the governor and council of South Carolina; and do, by these presents, enter a caveat against any grant or grants being passed or signed by the governor of South Carolina, for any of the lands aforesaid, to any person or persons whatsoever, until his majesty's royal will and pleasure shall be known concerning the same; and, in the most full and solemn manner, protest and declare against all proceedings whatsoever, that have already, or may hereafter be had or done by the said governor and council, in or about the disposal of the lands aforesaid, as expressly contrary to his majesty's royal intention, and null and void.

And, that no person or persons may plead ignorance of this protestation and caveat, I so request and demand that it may be entered in the book of caveats against grants, usually kept in the secretary's office in the province of South Carolina.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal at Savannah, in Georgia, the thirtieth day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and sixty-three.

JAMES WRIGHT.

JOHN TALLEY, Dep. Sec'y.

Letter to Thomas Boone, esquire, Governor of South Carolina.

WHITEHALL, May 30, 1763.

SIR: A report having prevailed that you had, with the concurrence of the members of his majesty's councils in South Carolina, issued orders or warrants for surveying large tracts of land in that part of his majesty's dominions in America which lies to the south of the River Altamaha, in order to pass grants of such lands, as being within your jurisdiction; and the truth of this report having been confirmed by the copy of a protest or caveat of the governor of Georgia against making such surveys and grants, which has been communicated to us by the agent of that province, it is our indispensable duty to avail ourselves of the opportunity by a vessel now ready to depart for Charleston, of expressing to you our surprise and concern that you should have engaged in a measure of this nature, so inconsistent with and prejudicial to his majesty's interests and authority.

The making grants of any part of this country is certainly contrary to the spirit and intention of his late majesty's orders for the removal of Gray and his adherents from the settlement of New Hanover, and must not only embarrass the execution of what general arrangements may be necessary in consequence of the cession of Florida, but will also interfere with those measures it may be reasonably supposed his majesty will now pursue to extend the Government of Georgia, and thereby to remove those obstacles and difficulties which that well regulated colony has so frequently and justly stated to arise out of the narrow limits to which it is confined.

We hope, however, that this letter will reach you time enough to prevent any grants passing in consequence of the surveys; and as to any equitable claims which those persons in whose favor the surveys have been made, may have, in consequence of the expenses they have been at, such claims must remain for his majesty's determination, upon a consideration of each particular case; but, if it shall appear, as it has been suggested, that this measure has been calculated with a view to the particular benefit of those who advised and acted in it, such persons may be assured, that any claims on their part will not only be discountenanced, but that, as officers of the Crown, their conduct will meet that censure and disapprobation it so justly merits.

We are, sir,

Your most obedient humble servants,

CHARLESTON, S. C., Aug. 17, 1763.

MY LORDS: I am excessively concerned to find by your lordships' letter of the 30th of May, which I had the honor to receive yesterday, that any part of my conduct should be deemed by your lordships inconsistent with, and prejudicial to, his majesty's interest and authority; it is the more afflicting to me, as it has been my invariable study to promote the one, and to assert the other. I receive, with the utmost deference, your lordships' reproof, and, though I shall not presume to enter into a justification of what your lordships are pleased to condemn, yet you will, I dare say, forgive me for stating the reasons which led me to offend so undesignedly, by granting warrants for land to the south of the Altamaha river.

By the second charter granted to the lords proprietors by Charles II, the limits of this province were extended southward as far as the latitude of 29°; no sort of alteration, that I know of, was ever made by the Crown: for the grant of Georgia to a corporation was nothing more than a favor conferred upon a number, which his majesty might have gratified an individual with; the boundaries of this corporation were fixed and ascertained, and neither at this time, nor when the King thought proper to take it under his immediate protection, did his majesty, that ever I heard of, restrain the province of Carolina from exercising jurisdiction beyond the Georgia southern boundary. Some provinces in America are surrounded in a manner by others, and some of the greatest powers of the Crown in one province, are, by the King's commission, entrusted to governors of others; besides this, my lords, the King has, and has had for many years, a post to the southward of the Altamaha river, garrisoned by detachments from this province. I am sensible, however, my lords, that admitting the power to be in me to do what I am very sorry to have done, that I had acted wilfully and knowingly against the spirit and intention of his late majesty's order, I should have been, notwithstanding, highly blameable; but the secretary of state's letter, for the removal of Gray and his adherents, I never saw; the journals of the council were searched by my orders, and the clerk applied fruitlessly for a copy to Georgia, upon a supposition the one sent to that Government might be similar. Your lordships, I dare say, will not impute it to me as a crime, that I treated with disregard an insolent letter from a governor, and a caveat in behalf of a province, which, from its vicinity to the lands in question, in prospect perhaps, might be interested, but, upon this occasion, had no more right to interfere than the most distant colony, though it had the presumption, in this very caveat, to recite its rights and claims to lands which it is still to receive from his majesty's mere grace and favor. But, my lords, if I had thought myself obliged to pay regard to the Georgia caveat, I could have collected from thence nothing, but that certain persons who had settled at New Hanover, without his majesty's license or authority, were, by the late King's orders, to be removed, and that no settlements were to be made without leave of his majesty, or by his authority. It was, my lords, upon a presumption that this authority was vested in me, that I exerted it. It could not be exercised by the Georgia governor, for he had not a shadow of right; and the settling without any authority at all was the reason, as I apprehended, of the New Hanover people being dispossessed. If those lands were not granted before, it was owing to the resolution taken here not to give umbrage to the Spaniards; but when war was declared, that reason no longer subsisted, and warrants would then have been issued, could the surveys have been performed with security. The preliminaries gave this security; for I sent a copy to the governor of St. Augustine, as well on this account, as to stop the depredations of their privateers. I was not so ignorant as to suppose these lands to be a part of the cessions intended by the preliminaries, though the author of the Georgia caveat seems to be of that opinion; but the post above mentioned, to the southward of the Altamaha, would determine, if nothing else would, to which Crown the territory belonged. Before I took this step, my lords, I got all the information I could; I mentioned it more than once in council; I desired their recollection of his majesty's orders regarding Gray; and all the light it was possible for me to get, intended to place this intention of mine in an advantageous light to the Crown, and a beneficial one to the province. The council was unanimous in advising me to issue the warrants, nor have I the least reason to believe that on this, or any other occasion, they were biassed in their counsel by any thing but a persuasion of the utility and propriety of the measures proposed or adopted. His majesty's instructions were rigidly complied with, and every person's right made to appear before the grant passed. Long before your lordships' letter came to my hands, I had stopped issuing any more warrants, and I heartily hope that what has been done will not obstruct any arrangement whatever. If the grants passed by me should be declared void by his majesty, any projected alterations may have their full force. Should they be confirmed, by the tenor of the grants the lands must be settled immediately, and as immediately will accrue an accession of revenue to the Crown, of strength to whatever province his majesty thinks proper to allot them, and of income in point of yearly taxes; it can be no disadvantage to any country to have foreign settlers when the present ones are not cramped for room, as is the case of Georgia, in proportion to its numbers. But, besides, my lords, by an observation taken, in consequence of my orders, of the mouth of St. Juan's river, there are thirty-eight miles of latitude, and an immense tract of country westward, of which I have not granted a foot, within the limits of our charter. I hope, my lords, after what I have said, that your lordships will rather look upon it as my misfortune than my fault that I have incurred your displeasure. It has been my ambition to deserve the marks of favor which the King has conferred upon me, and it is beyond measure painful to me to know from your lordships that I have not. But, though I do, and shall, most respectfully submit to your lordships' censure of my conduct, yet I rely on your lordships' candor, that no suggestions will have weight against me without proof. If there is any man ignorant enough of my character, and yet wicked enough to impute an action of mine to a consideration of my interest, I hope, my lords, unless he proves his insinuations, that he will meet from your lordships that discountenance and abhorrence which I should richly deserve were they true. According to the pretensions which his majesty is pleased to allow, I have a family right to eight or ten thousand acres of land; but neither in my own name, nor in that of any other person, have I ever got an acre. Grants to myself would have, of course, been void (though I am told the doctrine is not admitted) in Georgia, and I am too scrupulous in examining other people's claims, not to have every indirect practice of mine own laid open. I have been governor of this province above two years, with as many, or more, opportunities of benefiting myself than any of my predecessors ever had, had I chose to be as remiss in my duty as I have been strenuous in the practice of it; yet I never received twenty pounds, except from the King, and the lawful and established fees of office; these I have often remitted, and have discharged those of other officers, where poor settlers, applying for lands, have been unable to prosecute their grants. These circumstances to my own advantage could only have been extorted from me in vindication of myself, against any malevolence in which I suppose myself comprehended; but I beg your lordships to be persuaded that I would not, upon any account, have granted these lands, could I have supposed that, in the smallest degree, the granting of them was blameable, or that I can be wilfully regardless of my duty to his majesty, or deference to your lordships.

I have the honor to be, my lords,
Your lordships' most obedient
And most humble servant,
THOMAS BOONE.

G, No. 4.

At a meeting of his majesty's commissioners for trade and plantations, 18th December, 1764, present:

Earl of Hillsborough,	Mr. Bacon,
Mr. Jenyns,	Mr. Dyson.
Mr. Gascoyne,

The secretary laid before the board an account of lands granted to the southward of the Altamaha river by Governor Boone, and docketed in the auditor general's office.

Their lordships agreed to take the state of these grants into further consideration on Thursday next, and the secretary was ordered to write to Governor Boone to desire his attendance.

December 20, 1764.

Their lordships took into further consideration the state of the grants of land made by the governor of South Carolina, in the territory to the south of the River Altamaha, and Governor Boone, attending, was desired to inform the board of the foundation of those grants, and how the same are reconcilable to his instructions; whereupon, he referred to a letter from himself to the board, dated 17th August, 1763, containing a full state of this matter, which letter was read; and Mr. Boone, having been asked some further questions, in respect to the survey of the lands, withdrew.

SAVANNAH IN GEORGIA,
April 20, 1763.

MY LORDS: A matter which I conceive to be a very extraordinary procedure of the governor of South Carolina, is the occasion of my troubling your lordships at this time. I was informed that Mr. Boone had come to a resolution to give grants for all the lands to the southward of the River Altamaha, towards St. Augustine, without limits; and although, my lords, I received this account in such a manner as to admit of little or no doubt of the truth of it, yet, as Mr. Boone had not thought proper to take any the least notice of it to me, and considering his majesty's commands signified to the governors of Georgia and Carolina, on the 10th of June, 1758, relative to these very lands, and for a number of other very obvious reasons, I could not think it possible for Mr. Boone to take such a step, and, therefore, desired Mr. Gray Elliott, one of his majesty's council for this province, to go to Charleston, to Mr. Boone, on the occasion, and, in case it should prove true, I furnished him with a protest and caveat to enter against their proceedings, a copy whereof your lordships have here enclosed; and, on Mr. Elliott's return, it appeared that such a resolution was come to, and that, on Tuesday, the 5th instant, warrants were actually issued for upwards of three hundred and forty-three thousand acres of lands to several persons, inhabitants of South Carolina, in the whole not exceeding the number of two hundred persons. The reception my protest and caveat met with from Governor Boone will appear to your lordships from Mr. Elliott's attestation underneath it, and he could not get copies of the several orders for warrants, by which the particular quantities of land, and persons' names, would appear: but if the officers from whom these are to be had are not forbid to give them, (as the secretary was to receive the protest,) I shall very speedily transmit an exact account to your lordships. But Mr. Elliott came to the knowledge of part, viz: that thirty-five thousand acres of land were ordered to four persons; sixteen thousand acres to one Howarth, on account of the estate of James Michie, deceased, eight thousand to Mr. Thomas Smith, sen., seven thousand five hundred acres to Stephen Bull, and three thousand five hundred acres to Mr. James Parsons, and that several other very large tracts had been ordered for other persons.

Your lordships will very well remember the frequent application from this province for an extension of our south boundary, a thing, my lords, absolutely necessary for making this country opulent and considerable; and your lordships, also, well remember the reasons that I conceive prevented its being done, and which now, by the happy peace, do not subsist. And, my lords, when I was in daily expectation of receiving such orders from his majesty as would effectually make the province considerable, and put it in a condition of being useful to the mother country, to receive almost its death wound or destruction by (what with great submission I conceive to be) an extraordinary stretch of power by the governor of Carolina, has occasioned a general discontent and dejection amongst the people. The pretence, my lords, for this measure, is the charter to the proprietors of Carolina, which extends to the latitude of 29° inclusive, and which, my lords, takes in St. Augustine, Pensacola, and Mobile, and, therefore, Mr. Boone may just as well pretend a right to grant those places, as any spot of land to the southward of the River Altamaha; indeed, the persons who have warrants, may actually run out St. Augustine; for Mr. Elliot, who saw and read some of the warrants, says, they are, in general, words without limitation or restriction, but to take up and survey lands to the southward of the River Altamaha; and it is humbly conceived that this charter, being purchased by the Crown from the lords proprietors, could no longer continue to operate with respect to his majesty, and who alone, from the time of that purchase, had, and still has, the right of declaring what shall or shall not be his province of Carolina, without any regard to the limits mentioned in the charter to the proprietors.

I say, my lords, this procedure has struck a general damp and dispirited the whole province. I have called this, my lords, the death or destruction of the province; for an extension of limits to the southward, if the lands were properly parcelled out and granted to people who would really cultivate and improve them, would draw some thousand inhabitants here; whereas, by this step taken in Carolina, great part of the lands, my lords, are ordered in very large tracts to some wealthy settlers in Carolina, who probably will never see it themselves, and some of whom, it is said, have already more lands in that province than they can cultivate or improve. This, my lords, is pretty well known on this side of the water; and who, having a great number of slaves, claim what they call their family right, that is, fifty acres of land for each slave, although it is highly probable that their ancestors have already had land for those very slaves, and it is well understood here that many of those persons, especially those who have the largest tracts, have no intention to remove there or settle them; but probably some years hence, when it begins to be valuable, will sell it, and, in the mean time, those vast tracts of land are to lie waste and unimproved, as very great bodies yet do in Carolina; and if they should do any thing at all with these lands, it is expected it will only be by sending an overseer and a few negroes just to make a trifling settlement, seemingly to comply with the terms of the grant, or by way of taking possession. What I mention here, my lords, is not barely imaginary, but proceeds from a number of instances of the like kind in Carolina, and facts which are well known to every body in these parts, and what, my lords, it is pretty certain will be the consequence of these proceedings in Carolina if they are suffered to take effect. I speak with respect to the large tracts; for possibly some of those who have small tracts may remove and settle them. Your lordships will be pleased to observe that no less than thirty-five thousand acres are ordered to four persons, so that your lordships see that if this procedure is not set aside by his majesty, it will be the ruin of this province; for, my lords, thirty-five thousand acres of land, at four hundred acres to each family, would accommodate eighty-seven good substantial settlers, who would each of them bring a family of white people into the province, besides, perhaps, each as many if not more negroes than the person in Carolina who holds eight thousand acres; and as many of the grants to new settlers would not exceed two hundred and two hundred and fifty acres, your lordships see it might very probably accommodate one hundred and twenty or one hundred and thirty good settlers, instead of being held uncultivated and waste by four Carolina planters; and, my lords, this quantity of land was all ordered in one day, the first day on about two hundred petitions; and I am informed that the surveyor general of Carolina, who is one of the council, has said that it is expected double that number will apply the next land day, or in a short time. And, my lords, give me leave to mention another reason: your lordships will remember an intention, some time ago, to remove the seat of Government from Savannah further south; and although there might not be occasion for that whilst the province remained confined to the River Altamaha, yet, with submission, my lords, it may be a very proper measure when his majesty shall be pleased to extend the province; and the best navigation and most convenient place in every respect, for trade and the seat of Government, is just where these great tracts of land are surveying for the people of Carolina. How then, my lords, is this land to be come at, and what town can ever be settled with advantage in this part of the world, or supported, when three hundred and forty-three thousand acres of land, all around, is held by so few persons, and it is highly probable waste and unimproved, and thirty-five thousand acres of it by only four persons? and this, as I have observed, is only the quantity already ordered, and as much more will be very speedily; possibly by the time this reaches your lordships, a million of acres may be granted to persons now settled in Carolina, and the greatest part of which, it is expected, will continue to live there. Your lordships will be pleased to consider how greatly this will affect his majesty's service in the settlement of this frontier province; and how much it must be weakened and impeded by these vast tracts being held by such a handful of people who live in another province. And this further ill effect it will have, for nobody will think of coming this way when they hear that the Carolinians have engrossed all the lands. And how contrary, my lords, does this step seem to be to his majesty's royal intention. And your lordships will be pleased to observe, that those who have these very great tracts, or any of the persons who are to have these lands, have not one negro or one shilling of property on this side of Savannah river. I have had accounts, my lords, of many hundred families, I may say some thousand people, who were ready to come into this province (chiefly from North Carolina) as soon as it was extended, and I should be authorized to grant these very lands, all which will be prevented if these proceedings are suffered to take effect. I must beg leave, my lords, to mention another objection against these grants, which seems an equitable one, on the side of this province: Mr. Elliott informs me, that one Mr. Young, who has some negroes in Carolina, and also some in Georgia, petitioned for a tract of land for all his negroes; and on his saying that part of these negroes were in Georgia, he was refused lands for them, and told he should only have lands for such negroes as he had in Carolina, so that your lordships see the inhabitants of this province are totally excluded. This, my lords, seems to us here to be very unequitable, that the people of this province, who have borne the brunt and fatigue of settling a new colony, and who have encountered and struggled with innumerable difficulties and hardships, besides dangers from the savages, and during the war from the neighboring French and Spaniards, and who, by great industry and labor, have acquired a few negroes, and are in a capacity of settling out their children or making other settlements for themselves; I say, my lords, it seems to them hard and unequitable that they are not to have an inch of these lands, but that the whole, or most of the best, is to be swallowed up by strangers who never contributed one farthing or one hour's fatigue or hardship towards the support of the province. And for these reasons, and many more that must occur, your lordships will see why I call it the death wound or destruction of Georgia. I have never yet, my lords, granted any lands but to people who actually undertook to settle and improve them forthwith, and only in moderate quantities; for, my lords, it is the number of inhabitants we want here; and although these lands may be annexed to Georgia, yet, if they are engrossed and held by the Carolinians in the manner I have mentioned, it will nevertheless ruin the province; for, my lords, as I have already said, although some of those who have small tracts may probably remove there and settle them, yet those who have large tracts, it is pretty certain have no such intention, and never will; and your lordships will observe, that no less than three hundred and forty-three thousand acres are ordered to less than two hundred persons, and which quantity alone would accommodate a thousand very good families and settlers, and such as are the sinews, wealth, and strength of an infant colony.

It might be impertinent in me to trouble your lordships any further on this subject, the consequence of which your lordships will see with so much more perspicuity and extension than I can. On the one hand, my lords, with great deference, it seems to be a considerable step towards the ruin of a very flourishing province. On the other, the advantage rather of a private nature; and this done (it is humbly conceived) contrary to his majesty's royal intention, and at a time when, even in Charleston, it is the general opinion, and they daily expect to hear that those lands are annexed to this province. All which is submitted to your lordships' consideration.

As his majesty's commands relative to the settlers on these lands was signified in June, 1758, by the secretary of state, therefore, I have now wrote to the secretary of state to the same purpose as I have done to your lordships, in which I hope I have not acted improperly, as my instructions are to correspond with the secretary of state on all matters that come from that office, and as I conceive their proceedings in Carolina are in some measure contrary to those orders.

On the 7th instant I assented to twelve bills and an ordinance, which I have ordered to be copied, and as soon as they are ready, shall transmit them to your lordships, with my observations on them.

I have the pleasure to acquaint your lordships that there is a very good prospect of a fine crop of silk this season.

And have the honor to be,

With the utmost respect, my lords, &c.

SAVANNAH, IN GEORGIA, May 6, 1763.

My LORDS: On the 20th of April I did myself the honor of writing to your lordships on the subject of Governor Boone's granting warrants to survey the lands to the southward of the River Altamaha, in which letter, my lords, I mentioned on the information of Mr. Gray Elliott, several large quantities of lands that had been ordered to some particular persons, amongst others, that sixteen thousand acres had been ordered to one Howarth, on account of the estate of James Michie, deceased, but that I should transmit to your lordships a particular account if I could procure it from the offices; and by a letter I have just received from Charleston, I find that the person I directed to apply has not yet been able to get an authentic account of the lands ordered, and to what persons. I am informed that twenty-seven thousand two hundred and fifty acres were ordered to eleven persons, viz: to one Donnain, on account of Colonel Bee's estate, five thousand acres; to Lord William Campbell two thousand; to Charles Ogilvie, now in England, two thousand; to Henry Middleton three thousand; to one Stephens three thousand; to Henry Laurence three thousand; to William Hopton two thousand; to William Guering two thousand; and to David John Deas and one Vanderhout together, five thousand two hundred and fifty acres. But, my lords, until I can get proper certificates from the officers, it will be impossible for me to come at the exact truth and knowledge in this case. The same information that I received of those tracts being ordered, mentions that Mr. Gray Elliott was mistaken in the accounts he gave me, that sixteen thousand acres were ordered to Mr. Howarth, who, it is said, had only one thousand six hundred acres; but all the other parcels mentioned, I believe will appear to be right, at least they are so, from the best information I am as yet able to come at. What I wrote your lordships relative to the lands ordered to Mr. Howarth, was on Mr. Elliott's information, whom I sent to Charleston on the occasion, and who still says that it was asserted to be so when he was there; but as I have heard from other hands that he is mistaken, and that Howarth has only one thousand six hundred acres, and as my duty and sole intention is only to state facts according to the best information I can get, and it would give me the greatest uneasiness to misrepresent any one circumstance, therefore, take this first opportunity to rectify that matter, which does not now appear to be as Mr. Elliott was informed, and represented to me.

On Tuesday last a great many more warrants were ordered to other persons for lands to the southward of the River Altamaha, to the amount of about one hundred and sixty thousand acres, as appears by their gazette; but it is not in my power to give your lordships any further particulars, I shall only add that those large grants will soon reach St. Augustine. Some, it is said, have already gone far up St. Juan's lake or river; and the Creek Indians are greatly alarmed at seeing a number of armed men surveying those lands and marking trees. They have sent runners all over the nation to assemble them together, and what the consequence may be I cannot yet say, but am apprehensive it may involve us in difficulties; for, my lords, there is a great difference between extending our settlements gradually and easily, and an appearance as though the whole country was to be swallowed up at once, and that by armed people, and this the Indians say is a confirmation of what the French have told them, that we should take all their lands from them, and drive them back and extirpate them in time.

I have the honor to be, &c.

June 8, 1763.

Florida and that part of Louisiana to the eastward of the Mississippi, both which tracts are ceded to your majesty by the late treaty, may be compared to Canada in respect to extent of territory and the number of Indian tribes with which they have immediate communication; but in other respects they seem entirely different; the number of settled inhabitants, either French or Spaniards, we apprehend, has never been considerable, and there is little probability, from the facility of their removal, that any of them will remain after the cessions are completed, though we are of opinion, as well from this circumstance of their paucity, as with a view to the immediate settlement of this country, that every expedient should be used to induce as many to remain as can be prevailed upon. The produce of Canada, with its trade, the navigation of the River St. Lawrence, with its communication to the great lakes of North America, are, from authentic information in these particulars, tolerably well understood; but we are sorry it is not in our power, either from any materials in our office, or from any other to be depended upon, to give your majesty that certain information we could wish, either in regard to the coast, harbors, and rivers of Florida, or as to the variety of produce which there is the greatest probability may be raised in that extended country. We shall, therefore, content ourselves with suggesting at present, that whenever a Government is established in this country, instructions should be given for surveying with all possible accuracy, as well the sea coast and places fit for harbors, as the internal country and rivers, particularly of that part which lies between the great mountains and the Mississippi, of which there are not extant any charts or accounts on which we can depend, for which purpose it will be necessary that a proper number of able and skilful surveyors be appointed.

The great tract of sea coast from St. Augustine round Cape Florida, along the Gulf of Mexico, to the mouth of the Mississippi, makes it, we apprehend, indispensably necessary that this country should be divided into two distinct Governments, and for the present the chief residence of the governor of the one should be at St. Augustine, with orders to give particular attention to Cape Florida, (as that cape commands the whole navigation from the bay of Mexico,) the residence of the other at Pensacola, with particular instructions regarding the Mississippi, the free navigation of which ought, we apprehend, to be most accurately understood, not only in respect to that river being the future boundary between your majesty's dominions and those of the French, but as this river, by its communication with the Ohio, the Illinois, &c., is of the utmost importance to all connexion with the Indian nations, and the only outlet to the great internal trade which may be carried on amongst them.

If it shall be thought proper to divide Florida into two distinct Governments, they may be distinguished by the names of East and West Florida, and may be bounded as follows:

East Florida to be bounded by the coast of the Atlantic sea from Cape Florida to the north entrance of St. John's river on the east, by a line drawn due west from the north entrance of St. John's river to the Chattahoochee or Flint rivers on the north; and on the west and southwest by that part of the Gulf of Mexico which extends from Cape Florida to the mouth of the Chattahoochee river, and from thence following the course of the said rivers to where the north line falls in.

West Florida to comprehend all the sea coast of the Gulf of Mexico, extending west from the Chattahoochee river, or Flint river towards the Mississippi, as far as your majesty's territories extend, and stretching up into the land as far as the 31° of north latitude, which we humbly apprehend is as far north as the settlements can be carried without interfering with lands claimed or occupied by the Indians.

By this plan of division, which is formed with a view to make the two colonies as distinct as possible, by establishing a natural line of separation between them, and by giving to each a due proportion of the natural advantages and conveniences of commerce and navigation, a large tract of land lying between the north boundary line of East Florida and the River Altamaha, the present south boundary of Georgia, which has hitherto been unoccupied as to any permanent settlement either by your majesty's subjects or those of Spain, remains to be put under some proper establishment; and we think it cannot, in any respect, be better disposed of than by putting it under the jurisdiction and within the Government of Georgia; by this means the principal obstacles which have hitherto impeded the progress of that advantageous and well regulated colony will be removed, and its settlements extended to the great benefit and advantage of the mother country.

TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

May it please your Majesty:

By your majesty's royal proclamation of the 7th of October last, and your majesty's commission to your governor of West Florida, it is declared that the said provinces shall be bounded to the north by a line drawn due east from that part of the River Mississippi which lies in thirty-one degrees north latitude, to the River Appalachicola; but it is our duty to represent to your majesty, that we are informed by your majesty's governor, that it appears from observations and surveys made since the said province has been in your majesty's possession, that there are not only very considerable settlements upon the east bank of the Mississippi, above that line, but also that the town and settlement of Mobile itself is some miles to the north of it; and, therefore, we humbly beg leave to propose, that an instrument may pass under the great seal (in like manner as was directed in the case of the extension of the south boundary of Georgia) declaring that the province of West Florida shall be bounded to the north, by a line drawn from the mouth of the River Yazoo, where it unites with the Mississippi, due east to the River Appalachicola, by which we humbly conceive every material settlement, depending upon West Florida, will be comprehended within the limits of that Government.

Which is most humbly submitted.

GEORGE CHALMERS.

I. No. 1.

TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

May it please your Majesty:

We have had under our consideration an act passed in your majesty's colony of Georgia, in March, 1765, entitled

"An act for the better strengthening and settling this province, by compelling the several persons who claim to hold lands within the same, under any grant or grants from his majesty, witnessed by the governor of South Carolina, to bring or send into this province a number of white persons or negroes, in proportion to the lands they claim to hold, agreeably to his majesty's royal instructions for granting lands, and to cultivate and improve the same; and for the better ascertaining the said several tracts of lands, by regulating the surveys, and marking the lines thereof, and recording the several plots, in the surveyor general's office; also, for registering and docketing such grants in the other proper offices in this province."

It will be necessary, before we enter into a consideration of the particular provisions of this act, briefly to state to your majesty the occasion and ground upon which it has been enacted.

The cession made to your majesty, by the treaty of Paris, of all the territories possessed by Spain on the continent of North America, having put an end to the disputes concerning the title to those lands which lay to the south of the Altamaha river, and which, pending such dispute, had never been occupied and settled by either nation, the consideration of what might be expedient to be done, in respect to these lands, necessarily fell under the attention of Government; and it being the opinion of your majesty's ministers, that all the territories to the south of the River St. Mary should be erected into a separate government, under the name of East Florida, and that all the lands between that river and the River Altamaha to the north should be annexed to the colony of Georgia, which, before, was bounded to the south by the last mentioned river, this arrangement was notified by your majesty's proclamation of the 7th of October, 1763. Previous, however, to this signification of your majesty's will and pleasure, as to the disposition of these lands, your majesty's governor of the province of South Carolina thought fit, upon the ground that they lay within the limits of South Carolina, according to the charters of King Charles the Second, to pass patents for a considerable part of them, to many of the opulent planters in the settled part of that province, upon the terms and conditions prescribed in your majesty's royal instructions to the said governor.

This measure, taken by your majesty's governor of South Carolina, was soon followed by complaints on the part of your majesty's governor of Georgia, not only of the irregularity of the measure itself, but also that the surveys, in consequence thereof, had been slightly and incorrectly made, and that in respect to the greatest part of the lands, no steps had been taken, or were likely to be taken, for a proper cultivation of them.

Upon the ground of these representations, and upon a consideration of all the circumstances which accompanied this transaction, this board thought fit to signify to the governor of Georgia, in general terms, that they would readily concur in any law that should be enacted there for obliging the grantees of those lands to cultivate them according to the conditions of their grants, adopting, upon this occasion, a measure which appeared to them not only just, and necessary in itself, but strictly agreeable to former precedents.

In consequence of this signification, the law now in question was passed, with a clause suspending its execution until your majesty's royal will and pleasure should be known.

We need not, upon this occasion, enter into any consideration of such parts of this law as appear, by implication, to draw into question either the propriety of the measure taken by your majesty's governor of South Carolina, or the validity of the grants themselves, but shall confine our observations to the enacting clauses of the act itself, and the objection stated to the particular provisions of it by Mr. Dunning, who appeared before us as counsel on the occasion for the grantees, whose interests are to be affected by this law.

The principal objections were, that this act not only prescribes other terms and conditions than those upon which the lands were granted conformably to your majesty's instructions to the governor of South Carolina, but also in the manner of ascertaining the proof of those requisites, leaves it entirely to the discretion of the governor and council to decide what that proof shall be; and further, does limit the time of adducing such proofs to six months from the receipt and notification in the gazette there of your majesty's confirmation of the act, without any exception in the case of infants, insane persons, or those under other natural disabilities; which exceptions, by the strict rules of law, ought to be provided for in every case of this nature.

These objections do appear to us so essentially to vitiate this act, that we cannot recommend it to your majesty to confirm it.

At the same time, we think it our duty to represent to your majesty that, as there is the greatest reason to believe, as well from the letters we have received from your majesty's governor of Georgia, as from what has been laid before us by his agent, who appeared in support of the act, that not only the surveys made under the warrant of the governor of South Carolina have been incorrect, but also that few, if any, of the grantees have taken any steps for the due and proper settlement and cultivation of the lands, and none have paid the quit-rents due to your majesty, according to the terms of their grants. We do entirely agree in opinion with our predecessors in office, that it is both just and necessary that some effectual means ought to be taken to correct an abuse of this nature, operating to the prejudice, as well of the public interest, as of your majesty's revenue; and, therefore, we humbly beg leave to propose, that your majesty's governor of South Carolina be instructed to give positive directions to the proper officers in that colony forthwith to prepare transcripts, duly authenticated, of all the patents granted under the seal of that province for lands to the southward of the River Altamaha, and also of all orders, warrants, and proceedings thereupon, and to transmit the same, with all convenient despatch, to the governor of your majesty's province of Georgia.

That your majesty's governor of Georgia should be instructed to cause such transcripts, when received by him, to be entered upon record in all the proper offices in that colony.

That if the said governor shall, upon an examination of these documents, or from any other evidence or information, have reason to think that there have been any frauds or abuses in the survey of these lands, he do forthwith issue a warrant to the surveyor general of lands in the province of Georgia, to cause a resurvey to be made thereof, in the presence of the grantees, or of such persons as they shall appoint within a reasonable time for that purpose. And in case it shall be discovered, upon such resurvey, that a greater number of acres has been taken in them than are expressed in the original grant, that the said governor do forthwith grant such surplus to such other persons as shall apply for the same, upon the terms and conditions prescribed by your majesty's instructions to the said governor.

That the said governor be further instructed to recommend to the council and assembly of the province of Georgia, to pass an act for establishing a method of enforcing the cultivation of lands, causing an inquest to be held, on the oaths of a jury of twelve men, before a commissioner of escheats and forfeitures, to be appointed by the said governor for that purpose, and enacting that all lands which, upon a return of such inquests into the office of register of the court of chancery, shall appear not to have been duly cultivated according to the terms and conditions of the grant, be vested in your majesty, your heirs and successors, without any further or other process.

Which is most humbly submitted.

The definitive treaty of peace between South Carolina and Georgia, on the one part, and the Cherokee nation on the other, convened at Dewitt's Corner, in South Carolina, the 20th day of May, in the year of our Lord 1777, and in the first year of the independence of America.

Be it known unto all persons to whom these presents may or shall in any manner belong:

The King of Great Britain, in the prosecution of his unjust design to enslave America, regardless of the means, through his ministers, officers, and superintendants, by false representations, having deceived the Cherokee nation, and persuaded them to massacre indiscriminately, according to their custom in war, the men, women, and children, inhabitants of the western frontier of South Carolina and other States, at the time, last summer, when his forces invaded that State from the sea; and then having abandoned his Cherokee allies, whom he had deceived, urged, and persuaded into the war, to the just resentment of the people: thus, at the same time, suddenly and unexpectedly, attacked on the sea coast and opposite frontier. It has pleased the Master of Breath so to direct the progress of the war, and the inclination of the contracting parties, that, at the conclusion of the last summer, they were disposed to extend mercy and to do justice. And the Cherokee nation having, during the course of the last winter, sent deputies to Charleston to implore pardon, and, thereupon, it being determined to bury the hatchet and to re-establish peace, the contracting parties, for these purposes, named and appointed their respective commissioners and deputies in manner following:

THE SOUTH CAROLINA FULL POWERS.

By his excellency, John Rutledge, esq., President and Commander-in-chief of South Carolina.

J. RUTLEDGE, [L. S.]

To Colonel Andrew Williamson, Colonel Le Roy Hammond, George Galphin, esq., the honorable William Henry Drayton, and Colonel Daniel Horry—greeting:

Whereas, in pursuance of an ordinance of the General Assembly of this State, passed on the 13th day of February last, and entitled "an ordinance appointing commissioners, in manner therein mentioned, to conclude a peace with the Cherokee nation," you, the said

Andrew Williamson, Le Roy Hammond, George Galphin, William Henry Drayton, and Daniel Horry, have been duly elected commissioners for the purpose therein and hereinafter mentioned. Now, know ye, that I have, therefore, and in compliance with the request of the General Assembly of this State, commissioned, and do hereby commission you, the said Andrew Williamson, Le Roy Hammond, George Galphin, William Henry Drayton, and Daniel Horry, or a majority of you, to meet such commissioners as have been or may be appointed by the States of Virginia, North Carolina, and Georgia, or any of them, on the 12th day of May inst. at Dewit's Corner, or at any other time and place which you, or a majority of you, may judge fit, in congress, with the Cherokee Indian, or their deputies, and to conclude a peace with the Cherokee nation upon such terms as may be just and equitable.

Given under my hand and seal at Charleston, in South Carolina, this sixth day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-seven.

THE GEORGIA FULL POWERS.

IN COUNCIL.

SAVANNAH, 16th April, 1777.

Resolved, That Jonathan Bryan, Jonathan Cochran, John Wreath, John Walton, and William Glascock, esquires, or any three of them, be the commissioners appointed by this State, agreeably to the desire of the State of South Carolina, to attend the Indian congress, to be held at Dewit's Corner, on the 7th day of May next, or when or where the same may be so held.

Resolved, That it be an instruction to the commissioners appointed to attend the Indian congress, that they join and concur in all matters that appear likely to insure a firm and lasting peace with the Indians.

A true copy taken from the minutes,

SAMUEL STIRK, Sec'y C.

THE CHEROKEE FULL POWERS.

May 16, 1777.

In open congress with the South Carolina and Georgia commissioners for establishing peace, and in presence of a great number of their own people, Canatiskeetuowie, or the Red-Bird of No-ewee, and Oustassitsee, or the Man-killer of Chote, for themselves, and Skalaluska, or the Second man, Cleeroonakee, Clococheta, Chooconattee, Coskua and Chinistisha, beloved men and warriors of the Cherokee nation, declared that, according to the manner and custom of their nation, they are nominated and appointed, on the part of their nation, deputies with full powers for them, and in their name, to meet the commissioners of South Carolina and Georgia, and of such other States as may be present; and with them to treat of, conclude upon, and make such terms and conditions of peace as may be likely to re-establish peace and friendship between the parties assembled for that purpose.

And the commissioners and deputies, having regularly met and communicated to each other their full powers, have agreed upon the articles of peace, the tenor of which is as follows:

ARTICLE I. The Cherokee nation acknowledge that the troops during the last summer, repeatedly defeated their forces, victoriously penetrated through their lower towns, middle settlements, and valleys, and quietly and unopposed built, held, and continue to occupy, the fort at Esennecca, thereby did effect and maintain the conquest of all the Cherokee lands eastward of the Unacaye mountain; and to and for their people did acquire, possess, and yet continue to hold, in and over the said lands, all and singular the rights incidental to conquest: and the Cherokee nation, in consequence thereof, do cede the said lands to the said people, the people of South Carolina.

ART. II. South Carolina will immediately send a supply of goods into the Cherokee nation and settlements for sale, and permit the Cherokees, during their good behavior, to inhabit the middle settlements and valleys westward of the highest part of Ocunnee mountain; but they shall not, beyond a line extended southwest and northeast across the highest part of Ocunnee mountain, proceed or advance, without permission from the commanding officer at Fort Rutledge; to apply for which, one runner may, at any time, be sent by the Cherokees. Provided, nevertheless, that during this present year, the Cherokees may raise, gather, and remove the corn they have planted on the east side of Ocunnee mountain.

ART. III. The Government of South Carolina will endeavor that the Cherokees shall be furnished with supplies of goods, as usual, and that the trade shall be put under the best regulations. Every person who, without a proper pass or license, shall arrive in the Cherokee nation or settlements, the Cherokees will immediately apprehend and deliver to the commanding officer at Fort Rutledge, and seize to their own use, all the cattle, horses, goods, and effects, conducted into their nation or settlements by every such person.

ART. IV. Each white person who instigated, or endeavored to instigate the Cherokees to the late war, or encouraged or aided them, or endeavored to do so in the prosecution of it, and who now is, or hereafter may be in their power, shall without delay, by the Cherokees, be apprehended and delivered to the commanding officer at Fort Rutledge; and the Cherokees shall take to their own use all the effects which, in their nation or settlements, they may find in the possession of, or belonging to, every such white person, and for every such white person so delivered, shall be paid five hundred pounds weight of dressed leather, or the value thereof.

ART. V. Any Indian who, in the Cherokee nation or settlements, shall murder a white person, shall be immediately apprehended and conveyed to Fort Rutledge by the Cherokees, who, in presence of the commanding officer at that post, shall put the murderer to death. And if any white, or other person, belonging to South Carolina or Georgia, shall, in the Cherokee nation, or any white, or other person shall, in South Carolina or Georgia, murder a Cherokee Indian, every such person, duly convicted thereof, shall suffer death in presence of Cherokee Indians, if any shall attend at the time and place of such intended execution. And that they may have an opportunity of attending, due notice of the time and place of such intended execution shall be sent to the Cherokees.

ART. VI. All white and Indian prisoners shall be set at liberty as soon as possible; all negroes taken during the late war, and who now are, or hereafter may be, in the power of the Cherokees, shall, as soon as possible, be delivered up to the commanding officer at Fort Rutledge, together with the horses, by any of their people, before the late war, stolen from South Carolina, Georgia, North Carolina, or Virginia, and which now, or hereafter may be, in the power of the Cherokees, to the end that restitution may be made to their true owners.

ART. VII. For every runaway negro that shall be apprehended and delivered by the Cherokees to the commanding officer at Fort Rutledge, shall be paid one hundred pounds weight of leather, or the value thereof.

ART. VIII. The hatchet shall be forever buried, and there shall be an universal peace and friendship re-established between South Carolina, including the Catawba, and Georgia, on the one part, and the Cherokee nation on the other; there shall be a general oblivion of injuries. The contracting parties shall use their utmost endeavors to maintain the peace and friendship now re-established, and the Cherokees shall, at all times, apprehend and deliver to the commanding officer at Fort Rutledge, every person, white or red, who in their nation or settlements shall, by any means, endeavor to instigate a war by the Cherokee nation, or hostility or robbery by any of their people, against or upon any of the American States or subject thereof. In witness of all and every thing herein determined between South Carolina, Georgia, and the Cherokee nation, we, their underwritten commissioners and deputies, by virtue of our full powers, severally, and not one for the other, have signed this present definitive treaty in their respective names, and have caused our seals to be hereunto affixed.

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

By his excellency, Thomas Pinckney, esq. Governor and Commander-in-chief in and over the State aforesaid.

To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting :

Know ye, that Peter Freneau, esq., who certifies the writing hereunto annexed, to be and to contain a true copy of the convention entered into, and agreed upon, between the States of South Carolina and Georgia, taken from the original record in the Secretary's office, is Secretary of the State of South Carolina : Therefore, all due faith, credit, and authority, are, and ought to be, had and given to his proceedings and certificates as such.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great seal of the State, in the city of Charleston, this twenty-third day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, and of the sovereignty and independence of the United States of America the twelfth.

[L. S.] THOMAS PINCKNEY.

By his excellency's command.
PETER FRENEAU, Sec'y.

Convention between the States of South Carolina and Georgia, concluded at Beaufort, in the State of South Carolina, on the twenty-eighth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, and in the eleventh year of the Independence of the United States of America.

To all to whom these presents shall come, the underwritten Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, Andrew Pickens, and Pierce Butler, esquires, commissioners appointed by the State of South Carolina, of the one part, and the underwritten John Habersham and Lachlan McIntosh, esquires, a majority of the commissioners appointed by the State of Georgia, of the other part, send greeting :

Whereas the State of South Carolina did heretofore present a petition to the United States in Congress assembled, and did, therein set forth, that a dispute and difference had arisen and subsisted between the States of South Carolina and Georgia, concerning boundaries; the said States claiming, respectively, the same territories, and that the case and claim of the State of South Carolina was as follows, that is to say: "Charles the Second, King of Great Britain, by charter, dated the 24th of March, in the 15th year of his reign, granted to eight persons therein named, as lords proprietors thereof, all the lands lying and being within his dominions of America, between thirty-one and thirty-six degrees of north latitude, in a direct west line to the South seas, styling the lands so described, the province of Carolina: that, on the 30th day of June, in the seventeenth year of his reign, the said King granted to the said lords proprietors a second charter, enlarging the bounds of Carolina, viz: from twenty-nine degrees of north latitude to thirty-six degrees thirty minutes, and from those points on the sea coast, west, in a direct line to the South seas; that seven of the said proprietors of Carolina sold and surrendered to George the Second, late King of Great Britain, all their title and interest in the said province, and the share of the remaining proprietor was separated from the King's and allotted to him, in the north part of North Carolina: that Carolina was afterwards divided into two provinces, called North and South Carolina: that, by a charter, dated the 9th day of June, 1732, George the Second, King of Great Britain, granted to certain persons therein named, all the lands lying between the Rivers Savannah and Altamaha, and between lines to be drawn from the heads of those rivers, respectively, to the South sea, and styled the said colony Georgia: that, by the treaty of peace concluded at Paris on the 10th day of February, 1763, the River Mississippi was declared to be the western boundary of the North American colonies: that the governor of South Carolina, in the year 1762, conceiving that the lands to the southward of the Altamaha still belonged to South Carolina, granted several tracts of the said lands: that the Government of Georgia complained to the King of Great Britain respecting those grants, as being for lands within its limits and thereupon, his majesty, by proclamation, dated the 7th day of October, 1763, annexed to Georgia all the lands lying between the Rivers Altamaha and St. Mary's, the validity of the grants passed by the governor of South Carolina, as aforesaid, remaining, however, acknowledged and uncontested, and the grantees of the said land, or their representative, still holding it as their legal estate: that South Carolina claims the lands lying between the North Carolina line and the line run due west from the mouth of Tugoloo river to the Mississippi, because, as the said State contends, the River Savannah loses that name at the confluence of Tugoloo and Keowee rivers, consequently that spot is the head of Savannah river. The State of Georgia, on the other hand, contends that the source of Keowee river is to be considered as the head of Savannah river: that the State of South Carolina also claims all the lands lying between a line to be drawn from the head of the River St. Mary's, the head of Altamaha, the Mississippi, and Florida, being as the said State contends, within the limits of its charter, and not annexed to Georgia by the said proclamation of 1763. The State of Georgia, on the other hand, contends that the tract of country last-mentioned is a part of that State. The State of South Carolina did, therefore, by their said petition, pray for a hearing and determination of the difference and dispute subsisting, as aforesaid, between the said State of Georgia, agreeable to the articles of confederation and perpetual union between the United States of America. And whereas the State of Georgia was duly notified of the said petition, and did, by its lawful agents, appear, in order to establish its right to the premises in manner directed by the said articles of confederation; and proceedings were thereon had in Congress, in order to the appointment of judges to constitute a court for hearing and determining the said matter in question. And whereas it appeared to be the sincere wish and desire of the said States of South Carolina and Georgia, that all and singular the differences and claims subsisting between the said States relative to boundary should be amicably adjusted and compromised. And whereas, the Legislature of the State of South Carolina, did elect the above named Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, Andrew Pickens, and Pierce Butler, esqs., commissioners, and did invest them, or a majority of them, with full and absolute power and authority in behalf of that State, to settle and compromise all and singular the differences, controversies, disputes and claims, which subsist between the said State and the State of Georgia relative to boundary, and to establish and permanently fix a boundary between the two States. And the said State of South Carolina did declare that it would, at all times thereafter, ratify and confirm all and whatsoever the commissioners, or a majority of them, should do in and touching the premises, and that the same should be forever binding on the said State of South Carolina. And whereas the Legislature of the State of Georgia did appoint John Houston, John Habersham, and Lachlan McIntosh, esqs., commissioners, and did invest them with full and absolute power and authority, in behalf of that State, to settle and compromise all and singular the differences, controversies, disputes, and claims, which subsist between the said State and the State of South Carolina, relative to boundary, and to establish and permanently fix a boundary between the two States. And the said State of Georgia did also declare, that it would, at all times thereafter, ratify and confirm all and whatsoever the said last mentioned commissioners, or a majority of them, should do in and touching the premises, and that the same should be forever binding on the said State of Georgia.

Now, therefore, know ye, That the underwritten commissioners, on the part of the States of South Carolina and Georgia, respectively, having, by mutual consent, assembled at the town of Beaufort, in the State of South Carolina, on the twenty-fourth day of this present month of April, in order to the due execution of their respective trusts; and having reciprocally exchanged and considered their full powers, and declared the same legal, and forever binding on both States, and having conferred together on the most effectual means of adjusting the differences subsisting between the two States, and of establishing, and permanently fixing, a boundary between them, have agreed, and by these presents for, and in behalf of, their respective States, do mutually agree to the following articles: that is to say, ARTICLE I. The most northern branch, or stream of the River Savannah, from the sea, or mouth of such stream, to the fork or confluence of the rivers now called Tugoloo and Keowee, and from thence, the most northern branch or stream of the said River Tugoloo, till it intersects the northern boundary line of South Carolina, if the said branch or stream of Tugoloo extends so far north, reserving all the islands in the said Rivers Savannah and Tugoloo, to Georgia; but if the head, spring, or source of any branch or stream of the said River Tugoloo does not extend to the north boundary line of South Carolina, then a west line to the Mississippi, to be drawn from the head, spring, or source of the said branch or stream of Tugoloo river, which extends to the highest northern latitude, shall forever hereafter form the separation limit and boundary between the States of South Carolina and Georgia.

ART. 2. The navigation of the River Savannah, at and from the bar and mouth, along the northeast side of Cockspar Island, and up the direct course of the main northern channel, along the northern side of Hutchinson's Island, opposite the town of Savannah, to the upper end of the said island, and from thence up the bed, or principal stream, of the said river, to the confluence of the Rivers Tugoloo and Keowee, and from the confluence up the channel of the most northern stream of Tugoloo river to its source, and back again by the same channel to the Atlantic ocean, is hereby declared to be henceforth equally free to the citizens of both States, and exempt from all duties, tolls, hindrance, interruption, or molestation whatsoever, attempted to be enforced by one State on the citizens of the other, and all the rest of the River Savannah to the southward of the foregoing description is acknowledged to be the exclusive right of the State of Georgia.

ART. 3. The State of South Carolina shall not, hereafter, claim any lands to the eastward, southward, southeastward, or west, of the boundary above established, but hereby relinquishes and cedes to the State of Georgia, all the right, title, and claim, which the said State of South Carolina hath to the government, sovereignty, and jurisdiction in and over the same, and also the right of pre-emption of the soil from the native Indians, and all other the estate, property, and claim, which the State of South Carolina hath in or to the said land.

ART. 4. The State of Georgia shall not, hereafter, claim any lands to the northward or northeastward of the boundary above established, but hereby relinquishes and cedes to the State of South Carolina, all the rights, title, and claim, which the said State of Georgia hath to the government, sovereignty, and jurisdiction in and over the same; and also the right of pre-emption of the soil from the native Indians, and all other the estate, property, and claim which the State of Georgia hath in or to the said lands.

ART. 5. The lands heretofore granted by either of the said States, between the forks of Tugoloo and Keowee, shall be the private property of the first grantees and their respective heirs and assigns, and the grantees of any of the said lands under the State of Georgia shall, within twelve months from the date hereof, cause such grants, or authentic copies thereof, ratified under the seal of the State of Georgia, to be deposited in the office of the Secretary of the State of South Carolina, to the end that the same may be recorded there, and after the same shall have been so recorded, the grantees shall be entitled to receive again, from the said secretary, their respective grants, or the copies thereof, whichsoever may have been so deposited, without any charge or fee of office whatsoever, and every grant which shall not, or of which the copy certified, as above mentioned, shall not be so deposited, shall be adjudged void.

ART. 6. The commissioners on the part of the State of South Carolina do not, by any of the above articles, mean to cede, relinquish, or weaken, the right, title, and claim of any of the individual citizens of the State of South Carolina to any lands situated in Georgia, particularly to the lands situated to the south or southwest of the River Altamaha, and granted during the administration of Governor Boone, in the year one thousand seven hundred and sixty-three; and they do hereby declare, that the right and title of the said citizens to the same is, and ought to remain, as full, strong, and effectual, as if this convention had not been made. The commissioners on the part of the State of Georgia do decline entering into any negotiation relative to the lands mentioned in this article, as they conceive they are not authorized so to do by the powers delegated to them.

In testimony whereof, the said Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, Andrew Pickens, and Pierce Butler, for and in behalf of the State of South Carolina, and the said John Habersham and Lachlan M'Intosh, for and in behalf of the State of Georgia, have, to these presents, and a duplicate thereof, both indented interchangeably, set their hands and affixed their seals. Done at Beaufort, in the State of South Carolina, the twenty-eighth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, and in the eleventh year of the independence of the United States of America.

April 14, 1787.

A message was sent to the Senate desiring their attendance in this House, to proceed to the election of three commissioners, to ascertain and settle the boundaries of this State with the State of Georgia. The Senate accordingly attended and voted with this House for the said commissioners. Upon casting up the ballots, it appeared that the following gentlemen, viz. Brigadier General Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, Brigadier General Andrew Pickens, and Major Pierce Butler, had a majority of votes of the members present; Mr. Speaker, thereupon, declared the said gentlemen to be duly elected commissioners to ascertain and settle the boundaries of this State with the State of Georgia.

I certify the above to be exactly copied from the journals of the House of Representatives.

OFFICE FOR TRADE, WHITEHALL,
September 25, 1795.

SIR: I now proceed with pleasure to communicate to you such information, with regard to the questions which Mr. Attorney General Bradford desired you to ask me about the boundaries of South Carolina and Georgia, as it is in my power to give, in so limited a time, amidst the pressure of other business.

It will be necessary to make some preliminary observations, before I answer the main question; namely, "whether the lands west of the Ocmulgee belonged to Georgia or to South Carolina; and whether they have at any time been placed by the Crown under the jurisdiction of any other Government."

When the treaty of peace between England and Spain was negotiated, in 1604, there was an attempt made to settle the pretensions of the two powers in America; but, as the two parties could not agree, either upon the facts or the principles which applied to the point, it was prudently resolved to pass over in silence what could not be adjusted in the treaty by adequate words. At that epoch, England had not any colonies in America. Colonization, however, immediately began; and before the year 1670, all the principal colonies were settled. It was in 1670 that England and Spain entered into stipulations for composing differences in America which stipulations have since been called the American Treaty. It was the 7th article of that treaty, which stipulated that the King of Great Britain and his subjects should remain in possession of what they then possessed in the West Indies and America. In every subsequent period, the American treaty of 1670 was appealed to in the disputes between Great Britain and Spain, as to the boundaries of Carolina and Florida, though there seems to have been no document which, on either side, applied the fact to the principle. Those disputes were frequent during the reigns of George I and George II, from 1714 to 1731: and it was referred by the treaty of Seville, 1729, to commissaries to settle, among other points, the northern boundary of Florida, which was to be the southern limit of Carolina. But no settlement was ever made till Florida was ceded to Great Britain by Spain, at the peace of 1763. These circumstances explain sufficiently the reasons of keeping a small post on the southern point of Cumberland island, where the River St. Mary's mingles its waters with the ocean; in order to retain the possessions of the debatable ground, which neither party would relinquish or define. [On this point, see the papers marked A, Nos. 1 and 2.] This post became still more necessary, if the principle of retaining debatable ground be right, after the grant of Georgia, which fixed its southern boundary by the most southern stream of the River Altamaha: for this had been construed by Spain as a relinquishment of the territory between the Rivers Altamaha and St. Mary's.

The other preliminary observations, which I beg to submit, is, that the right of the Crown to divide and subdivide its American territories (for which charters had not been granted to proprietors) is one of the clearest principles in colonial jurisprudence. And the history of the thirteen colonies, from the successive settlement of each, to the epoch of the independence of all, is a demonstration of the general principle, which is the solid basis whereon the United States rest in full stability, as to boundaries.

I now proceed to more minute observation, both as to fact and principles. In the year 1719, the people of South Carolina revolted against their proprietors. In the subsequent year, Francis Nicholson was appointed by the Crown provisional governor of South Carolina, upon a recital of mismanagements. Neither his commission nor instructions gave him any power to grant lands; because the right to the soil was still in the proprietors. It was in his time that a fort was built at the fork of the Altamaha in order to preserve the possession of the country thus far to the southward. In 1729, the proprietors of Carolina surrendered the sovereignty, and seven-eighth parts of the soil to the Crown, under the authority of the act of Parliament, 2 Geo. II, chap. 34. The deed of surrender was enrolled in chancery, and remains in the chapel of the rolls. [A copy from the roll has been obtained, and is marked B.] Lord Grenville soon after proposed to surrender his one-eighth; but, as the parties could not agree, his share was located in after times along the northern boundary of North Carolina, on the confines of Virginia.

It was in December, 1729, that Robert Johnson was appointed royal governor of South Carolina, with the full authority of captain general and commander-in-chief, in the room of Nicholson. This commission extends over South Carolina, without expressing any boundaries, supposing that the country and its limits were known and ascertained. This indefinite mode of expression, which continued to the present reign, gave rise to the mischiefs of uncertainty, and, in fact, is the cause of the present inquiry. Governor Johnson was also empowered to grant lands on particular terms. The governor's authority on this head, and instructions which, as they remained unaltered to the year 1763, and furnished much matter for this inquiry, may be seen in the papers marked H, Nos. 1 and 2. Governor Johnson was also instructed to re-establish a deserted post on the Altamaha, so as to preserve the navigation of the river.

It was in the year 1730, that an application was made to the British Government, on a principle of charity, for a grant of lands in Carolina, and conceded in 1731, on a principle of policy. The charter of Georgia was granted in 1732, in order to form a barrier to South Carolina. The board of trade settled deliberately the boundaries of Georgia, on the north, by the northern stream of the River Savannah; on the south, by the most southern stream of the Altamaha; and westward, from the heads of the said rivers respectively, in direct lines to the South seas. The context and common sense require that the west line should be run from the heads of the north stream of the Savannah, and from the head of the most southern stream of the Altamaha. And the context and common sense equally reject all other points, from whence to run the west lines to the South sea, than the heads, not of the Savannah and Altamaha, but from the heads of the north stream of the one river and of the most southern stream of the other. The context and common sense are supported by the fact, that it was known, at the epoch of the Georgia grant, that its boundaries on the north and south had more streams than one, and consequently had forks. There had been a fort, or post, at the great fork of the Altamaha, for some years before. A small map, which was prefixed to a quarto pamphlet, that was published at London, in 1733, entitled "Reasons for establishing the colony of Georgia," exhibits distinctly the fork of the Altamaha. In none of the inquiries or reasonings of the board of trade, at any period, is it ever supposed, that the west lines before mentioned, were to run from any other point than the head of the most southern stream of the Altamaha, and the head of the north stream of the Savannah. Add to all these, the State of Georgia, as attested upon oath by several inhabitants of Georgia, at Savannah, on the 10th of October, 1740. [See the papers marked C, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, for proofs of the facts.]

The trustees of Georgia applied to the Crown for directions to the governor of South Carolina, both to record their character and to help their settlers. An additional instruction was thereupon sent to Governor Johnson for that effect, on the 6th of September, 1732. [See the paper D.] This may be deemed legal notice of the charter of Georgia, of the settlement under it, and of the retraction of the southern boundary of South Carolina. In fact, the Government of South Carolina did receive kindly the colonists of Georgia; did effectually help the settlers, who began to form their principal town on the 1st of February, 1733, under the direction of Oglethorpe. It is moreover to be observed that, as Governor Johnson had been instructed to lay out certain townships on the Rivers Savannah and Altamaha, the instruction was withdrawn after the establishment of Georgia, when he received contrary instructions.

It is material to state that the power of commanding the militia of Georgia was reserved to the governor of South Carolina, as the King's officer: yet, on the 20th of June, 1737, James Oglethorpe was appointed commander-in-chief of the troops, both of South Carolina and Georgia; and the governor of South Carolina was thereupon ordered not to meddle with the general's command. Oglethorpe was ordered to keep possession of the country which had been granted by the charters of Carolina. These facts evince that, when Oglethorpe, during the Spanish war, which was ended by the peace of 1748, marched with troops southward of the Altamaha, and built forts on the lands between that river and the River St. Mary's, he acted as the King's general, and not as governor of Georgia. If it be asked whose lands they were which lay between the Rivers Altamaha and St. Mary's, the answer must be, that Great Britain and Spain were fighting for them. The treaty of Aix la Chapelle left the title upon the same footing as it had been left by the American treaty of 1670. The right to those debatable lands was in the Crown. The claim of the proprietors of Carolina no longer existed. The power of the governor of South Carolina could not arise from the King's commission and instruction. The formal communication of the charter of Georgia to the governor of South Carolina was a formal supercession of his commission and instructions, as to the country within its limits. There does not appear, indeed, any formal supercession of the authority of the governor of South Carolina, with regard to the country on the south of the River Altamaha, except as to the power of the sword, which had been put into the hands of Oglethorpe. Whether the establishment of Georgia, and the proceedings which followed in consequence thereof, were a virtual supercession of the power of the governor of South Carolina, as to the country on the south of the Altamaha, is a point for consideration.

The charter of Georgia, and the powers of Government, which were thereby conferred, were established only for a limited time. This term expired in 1752, when the trustees surrendered to the Crown what had been conferred by the charter. [See the paper E.] And a royal government was soon after established over the same country, within the same limits, with the usual powers of the royal governments.

Events are now coming forward which throw additional light on the present inquiry. One Grey, a Virginian by birth, and an enthusiast in principle, after acting a busy part in the first Assembly which met in Georgia, passed the River Altamaha in 1756, and settled, with a few followers, near the River St. Mary's. Governor Ellis, of Georgia, persuaded Grey not to put himself under the protection of Spain, and gave him a license to settle on the south of the River Altamaha. The Spaniards of St. Augustine regarded Grey with their usual jealousy. When the British ministers, who then wished to conciliate Spain, heard of those transactions of Grey, they expressed the greatest discontent. They blamed Governor Ellis for giving him a license to settle without his jurisdiction. The proceedings of Grey, who acted without authority from any power, were considered as of very dangerous consequence. Mr. Secretary Pitt sent orders to Governor Ellis of Georgia, and Governor Lyttleton of South Carolina, to remove Grey by force, if he did not remove by fairness. In 1759, Governor Ellis appointed one Povel, and Governor Lyttleton named one Hern, as commissioners to communicate those orders to Grey, and to persuade him and his followers to obey. Grey did make a show of obedience; but he returned ere long to his first settlement. Governor Wright, of Georgia communicated, in 1761, to the British ministers minute information of the proceedings of Grey and his followers: but the part which Spain had now taken with France made the British Government less zealous to enforce their first orders, by removing Grey from the situation which he had chosen for himself, without the proper jurisdiction of any colony. [See the papers marked F, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4.]

In January, 1762, war was declared against Spain. The preliminary articles of peace were announced in December, 1762. The knowledge that Spain was thereby to cede Florida to Great Britain, was received in South Carolina early in the subsequent year.

During the same moment, wherein the British Government were considering in what manner it might be advisable to dispose of the British acquisitions by the peace, a measure was adopted at Charleston, in South Carolina, for monopolizing the lands on the south of the River Altamaha. Governor Wright, when he heard of that purpose, sent Grey Elliott, one of his council, to Charleston, in order to enter a caveat and protest against that measure, as inconsistent with the King's intentions, and as injurious to Georgia. This protest was treated with disregard. The board of trade soon heard of those transactions; and the board hastened to declare its disapprobation, and to give its directions, that no charters should be issued for any lands which might have been surveyed, under warrants from South Carolina, for lands on the south of the River Altamaha. The orders of the board came too late. The surveys had been made, and charters had issued thereon, before the disapprobation and directions of the board arrived. The governor of South Carolina wrote an apology for his conduct, and was afterwards heard in justification of proceedings which the board of trade deemed unwarrantable. [See the papers marked G, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6.]

The board of trade, on the 8th of July, 1763, applied to the attorney and solicitor general for their opinion, whether the grants of land to the southward of the River Altamaha, by the governor of South Carolina, under all the circumstances, were valid in law. The documents which were laid before the crown lawyers, were the protest of the governor of Georgia, before mentioned; the two charters of Carolina; the statute of the 2d Geo. 3d, ch. 34; an extract of that part of the commission to Governor Johnson, in 1729, authorizing him to grant lands, which had continued the same to all succeeding governors; [see the papers H, Nos. 1, 2.] the secretary of state's order, dated the 10th of June, 1758, for removing Grey and his followers from their settlements on the south of the Altamaha; "a country, which the board were pleased to add, it does not appear the province of South Carolina has at any time exercised any jurisdiction in, or taken any possession of, either while it was under the government of the proprietors, or since it has been in the hands of the Crown;" but it does not appear that the attorney and solicitor general ever gave any opinion.

The board of trade seem at one time to have resolved to vacate, by some process at law, those unwarrantable grants. They, however, finally determined to admit virtually, but not positively, their validity in point of law, and to endeavor to prevent the mischief of them, since they could not abrogate what had been improvidently done. They ordered transcripts of the said grants to be sent by the governor of South Carolina to the governor of Georgia, for the purpose of being recorded in the proper offices of Georgia. These improvident grants were thus, in some measure, legalized, and incorporated into the system of Georgia. [See the papers marked I, Nos. 1 and 2.]

The peace of 1763 was scarcely concluded when the British Government began to deliberate how to make the most of her acquisitions by the war. On the 8th of June the board of trade made a representation as to the state of Florida and the neighboring lands. The country, between the Rivers Altamaha and St. Mary's, was placed under the jurisdiction of Georgia. The northern boundary of the province of East Florida was, in the end, settled to be the River St. Mary's, from the sea to its source, and from its source westward, to that part of the Appalachian, where the Chatahoochee and Flint rivers meet. The northern line of the province of West Florida was at first fixed to be in the latitude of 31 degrees north; but, upon a representation that this latitude was to the southward of Mobile itself, a new boundary was settled in March, 1764, so as to bound West Florida on the north by a line, drawn from the mouth of the Yazoo, where it unites with the Mississippi, due east to the River Appalachian. In lieutenant Hutchin's map of the west parts of Virginia, Carolina, Georgia, &c., published in 1778, he takes notice that the Yazoo is the north boundary of West Florida, but he states erroneously the junction of that river with the Mississippi to be in latitude 32° 30', which is nine minutes too far to the southward, as, indeed, all the maps place the junction of the Yazoo too far to the southward. [See the papers marked K, Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4.]

The definitive treaty of peace between Great Britain and the United States of America, and the definitive treaty between Great Britain and Spain, were both signed on the same day, viz: the 3d of September, 1783. By the treaty with Spain, Great Britain ceded to Spain East Florida and West Florida, without any signification of boundaries, which Spain will contend, I presume, must be the existing limits, at the date of the treaty. By the treaty with the United States, Great Britain ceded to the country on the east of the Mississippi, as far southward as the 31st degree of north latitude. Mr. Faden, the King's geographer, assures me that it appears, from an accurate observation made by the late George Gaul, who surveyed West Florida for the British Government, that the junction of the Yazoo with the Mississippi is in latitude 32° 39'. Here, then, is a fair field of a degree and three quarters for contending nations to fight upon.

Allow me, now, to make a few cursory remarks for the purpose of recapitulation:

1st. There are no documents which can show the heads of the Rivers Altamaha and the Savannah, to be other than what the charter and commissions make them to be, as I have already shown. Every document proves that the heads of those rivers were not at the fork of the Altamaha, where the Oconee and Ocmulgee meet, nor at the junction of the Tugolo and the Keowee, but at the head of the northern stream of the one, and the head of the southern stream of the other.

2d. There are no maps, which had belonged to the trustees of Georgia, in the collections of the board of trade. It was never considered by the British Government, that the country annexed to Georgia, in 1763, was bounded on the west by a line drawn from the source of the St. Mary's river to the junction of the Oconee and Ocmulgee: on the contrary, the British Government considered the south boundary of Georgia to be the north boundary of the two Floridas, as far as the Mississippi. The British geographers have always formed the boundaries of Georgia on this principle of extending it westward to the River Mississippi. There was a boundary line run and established, in 1769, between Georgia and the Creek Indians, which, passing in a northern direction across the frontiers of Georgia, has induced some of the map makers to draw a line in the same northern direction, and which has sometimes been mistaken for the western boundary of Georgia. There is a map of the Creek line, before mentioned, among the papers of the board of trade, but it does not apply to the question.

3d. The boundary of West Florida was not only extended northward to the 31st degree, in 1763, but, in 1764, to 32° and 39', as I have before stated. This leads me to remark what will throw great light on the whole subject. The junction of the Yazoo with the Mississippi being fixed by the British Government, who had a right to do so, as the north line of West Florida, and this junction being in latitude 32° and 39', an east line projected from the junction of the Yazoo, would cross the Savannah river near Hutchin's ferry, as the same is laid down in Faden's map of South Carolina and Georgia, 1780. These positions leave a very narrow frontier to Georgia, contrary to what was intended by the British Government when that boundary was settled. The extent of this frontier can only be, according to those premises, from the point where the latitude of 32° 39' intersects the meridian of the head of the northern stream of the Savannah river, northward to the head of the northern stream of Savannah.

4th. "With respect to the great question, whether the lands west of Ocmulgee belonged to Georgia or to South Carolina, after the grant of Georgia, and whether they have, at any time, been placed by the Crown under the jurisdiction of any other Government," I take the liberty to answer, 1st. That the lands lying westward of the Ocmulgee did not belong to Georgia after the granting of the charter; because, the Ocmulgee being the southern stream of the Altamaha, in the contemplation of the Crown when the charter was granted, the Ocmulgee must be taken as the south boundary of Georgia, the western extent of which was to run the South sea from the head of that southern stream.

2d. The surrender of the rights of the proprietors to the Crown in 1729, and the authority of an act of Parliament, were supposed to suppress the charters granted to them, and to re-invest in the Crown any title which they could claim under them. The new right, which the Crown had thus acquired, was soon exerted in the establishment of Georgia. Georgia was settled upon the very principle of being a southern frontier to Carolina. The northern stream of the Savannah river was virtually made the southern boundary of South Carolina. The British Government, from this epoch, never considered Carolina, or any part thereof, to lie to the southward of Georgia.

3d. The country on the south and west of Ocmulgee was, from 1732 to 1763, considered by the Crown as its waste territories, which were in dispute between Great Britain and Spain, and which, for that reason, had never been placed under the jurisdiction of any colonial government. In fact, neither the governor nor legislature of South Carolina ever performed any act of jurisdiction over those debatable lands from 1732 to 1763.

4th. The grants, which were made of some of those lands by the governor of South Carolina, in 1763, were made in opposition to a strong protest from the governor of Georgia; were made contrary to the intentions of the Crown; and they were made unwarrantably, as the board of trade thought and declared. Whether the law officers of the Crown declined to give their opinion of the legality or illegality, of those unwarrantable grants, from design, or accident, does not appear: the board of trade virtually admitted their legality, for the purpose of quieting settlement. Had ejections been brought for the recovery of the lands thus granted, in the courts of Georgia, where they must have been brought, the judges and juries of Georgia had declared those grants to be illegal.

I have now discussed, in the best manner that I am able, from the documents belonging to the board of trade, and from other notices, the several points, as to which Mr. Attorney General Bradford desired information: and I beg to refer to the several papers which I have quoted, as the proper vouchers; and which will be found to be the same papers, whereof Mr. Attorney Bradford requested to have certified copies. If the research, which I have made with pleasure, shall be found to be answerable to his wishes, this agreeable consideration will be my best reward. You, were, indeed so good as to mention, in your letter to me, that a compensation would be made me for my services. I must, however, desire you to believe, that the only compensation which I can receive, is the real satisfaction of showing my desire of usefulness, and of demonstrating to the United States the liberality of those who are connected with the British Government.

I embrace the opportunity, which this business gives me, of assuring you of the sincere respect wherewith I very truly am,

Your most faithful and most obedient servant,
GEO. CHALMERS.

Note from Judge Pendleton, of Georgia, in respect to the north boundary of Florida.

It appears by what has transpired of the negotiations between the United States and Spain, that our commissioners, as well as those of Great Britain, at the treaty of 1783, took the boundaries of East and West Florida as laid down in the proclamation of the King of England, dated the 7th of October, 1763, to have been the true boundaries of those provinces when they were finally confirmed to Spain, in 1783. Mr. Jefferson, I understand, after all his inquiries on the subject, takes the same proclamation as the foundation of our right to extend to the latitude of 31° north. All our writers on that subject, that I have seen, and all our maps state 31° as our southern boundary, from the same authority. The fact is, that this remained but for a short time the northern boundary of West Florida. In the beginning of the year 1764, Governor Johnstone, the first British governor of that province, obtained an extension of its northern boundary, and a new commission was sent him. On the first of November, 1764, Governor Johnstone published, by proclamation, his instructions for settling the province, in which he describes the northern boundary of West Florida to be "a line drawn due east from the confluence of the Mississippi and the River Yazoo, which lies in thirty-four degrees north latitude, to the River Appalachian, or Chattahoochee." The commissions of Governor Elliott,* who succeeded Johnstone, and Chester, who succeeded Elliot, all fixed on the same boundaries, and they granted near one million of acres of the lands lying north of the latitude thirty-one to individuals. It seems probable that neither Mr. Jefferson nor the Spanish ministers were apprized of this extension of the boundaries of West Florida, but have taken them to be as they were by the proclamation of 1763.

[The following note was made by Mr. Jefferson after the paper was printed, by order of the Senate.]

George the Third, by the grace of God of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c. to our trusty and well beloved James Wright, esquire, greeting:

Whereas we did, by our letters patent under our great seal of Great Britain, bearing date at Westminster, the fourteenth day of May, in the first year of our reign, constitute and appoint you, the said "James Wright, esq. to be our captain general and governor-in-chief, in and over our colony of Georgia, in America, lying from the most northern stream of a river there, commonly called Savannah, all along the sea coast to the southward, unto the most southern stream of a certain other great water or river called the Altamaha, and westward from the heads of the said rivers respectively, in direct line to the South seas, and of all that space, circuit, and precinct of lands lying within the said boundaries, with the islands in the sea lying opposite to the eastern coast of the said lands within twenty leagues of the same, for and during our pleasure," as by the said recited letters patent, relation being thereunto had, may more fully and at large appear. Now, know you, that we have revoked and determined, and by these presents do revoke and determine, such part, and so much of the said recited letters patent, and every clause, article, and thing therein contained, which doth any way relate to, or concern the limits and bounds of our said province as above described. And further know you, that we, reposing especial trust and confidence in the courage and loyalty of you, the said James Wright, of our especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, have thought fit to constitute and appoint, and by these presents do constitute and appoint you, the said James Wright, to be our captain general and governor-in-chief, in and over our colony of Georgia, in America, bounded on the north by the most northern stream of a river there, commonly called Savannah river, as far as the head of the said river, and from thence westward as far as our territories extend; on the east, by the sea coast from the said River Savannah, to the most southern stream of a certain other river called Saint Mary, including all islands within twenty leagues of the coast, lying between the said Rivers Savannah and Saint Mary; and on the south by the said River Saint Mary, as far as the head thereof, and from thence westward as far as our territories extend by the north boundary line of our provinces of East and West Florida; and we do hereby declare, ordain, and appoint that you, the said James Wright, shall, and may hold, execute, and enjoy the office and place of our captain general and governor-in-chief, in and over our colony of Georgia, limited and bounded as above described; together with all and singular the powers and authorities contained in our said recited letters patent, under our great seal of Great Britain, bearing date at

RESERVATIONS IN OHIO.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MAY 3, 1796.

Mr. MADISON, from the committee appointed to inquire into, and make a statement of, the number of lots of land, together with the number of acres they contain, as near as may be, that are reserved for the future disposition of Congress, in the sale of the lands made to the Ohio Company and others, and to consider the expediency for Government, at this time, to make provision for the sale thereof, made the following report:

That they have made such inquiry as, in their opinion, was necessary to enable them to make the statement required, which, however, if not with the greatest degree of precision, yet, perhaps, sufficiently so for the House to act upon.

The committee find that there have been, by letters patent, under the signature of the President of the United States, granted to Rufus Putnam, Manassah Cutler, Robert Oliver, and Griffin Green, in trust for the persons composing the Ohio Company, nine hundred and thirteen thousand eight hundred and eighty-three acres of land, making thirty-nine townships and two-thirds of a township within a small fractional part; in each of which townships three lots of six hundred and forty acres each, for the future disposition of Congress, making in the whole seventy-six thousand one hundred and sixty acres. In the lands granted by letters patent to John Cleves Symmes and his associates, amounting to three hundred and eleven thousand six hundred and eighty-two acres, making thirteen and a half townships and a small fractional part, in each of which townships there are similar reservations, and which amount in the whole to twenty-five thousand nine hundred and sixty acres, making a reservation of one hundred and two thousand one hundred and twenty acres, laid out in lots of six hundred and forty acres each, subject to the disposition of Congress. Your committee having taken into consideration the situation of those reserved lots of land, are of opinion that the public interest will be more promoted by postponing the sale thereof to a future period than by offering of them for sale at the time.

CONTRACT WITH JOHN CLEVES SYMMES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MAY 5, 1796.

The ATTORNEY GENERAL respectfully reports to the House of Representatives of the United States:

That, in obedience to their resolution of the 22d of April last, he has examined the several matters set forth in their resolution, bearing date the 8th day of March last, and is of opinion that the contract, bearing date the 15th day of October, in the year 1788, between the Commissioners of the late Board of Treasury and John Cleves Symmes, for a tract of land situate in the North-western Territory, has not been completely fulfilled; that it appears to have originated from certain proposals of the said John Cleves Symmes to Congress, which were agreed to by their resolution of the 2d of October, in the year 1787, and to have been made in pursuance of that resolution, and another, bearing date the 23d day of the same month; that, substantially, the terms of it were assimilated to those of the contract with Cutler and Sargent; and the United States having, in the year 1793, accepted the whole proportion, payable in military land rights, of the whole quantity of land contained in the contract, and also having passed a law, in 1792, respecting the locality of the tract, thereby allowing the boundaries to be changed, appear, by those acts, to have recognized and confirmed the special terms of the original contract, the nature of which has not been altered by any acts of the parties, so as to render the further interference of Government unnecessary; but, on the contrary, it is indispensably necessary that a law be passed before the thirtieth day of next September, authorizing the President of the United States to reserve, for their use, forever, one mile square, within the distance of four miles of the mouth of the Great Miami, and to cause the same to be surveyed, marked, and located, by some person to be appointed by him; and also authorizing the President of the United States to reconvey and release, unto the said John Cleves Symmes, and his associates, in fee simple, within one year after the passing of the said law, the quantity of fifteen acres, heretofore reserved for the use and accommodation of Fort Washington, and the garrison thereof, as will more manifestly appear by reference to the letters patent, dated 30th September, 1794, altering the locality of the lands contained in the original contract.

The Attorney General further reports that it is necessary, for the completion of the said contract on the part of the United States, that a tract of land, described in the act of the 12th of April, 1792, should be actually surveyed, and the boundaries marked by the geographer, or other officer of the United States, and a map, or plot thereof, returned to the Secretary of the Department of State, who is to be directed to receive it. The period of returning the map, or plot, regulates all the further payments yet remaining to be made by the said John Cleves Symmes, and his associates, and, therefore, it should be returned without delay. Other considerations, pressing for expedition in this business, might be mentioned, if it were necessary.

All which is most respectfully submitted.

CHARLES LEE, Attorney General.

PRE-EMPTION RIGHTS NORTHWEST OF THE OHIO.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MAY 12, 1796.

Mr. WILLIAM SMITH, from the committee to which were referred the petitions of sundry persons claiming pre-emption rights, on the ground of an alleged settlement and improvement, made the following report:

In respect to the petitions of sundry individuals, claiming pre-emption rights on the ground of alleged settlement and improvement, the committee report: That, inasmuch as illegal settlements on the lands of the United States ought not to be encouraged, and, as yielding to the said claims would interfere with the general provisions for the sale of the said lands, in their opinion, the prayer of the said petitions ought not to be granted. In respect to the petition of James Garnett, legatee and executor of James Mercer, deceased, as the subject therein referred to will require more investigation than the lateness of the session will permit, the committee request to be discharged from the further consideration of the same.

THE EXCHANGE OF CERTAIN DONATIONS OF LAND IN THE NORTHWESTERN TERRITORY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MAY 12, 1796.

Mr. COIT, from the committee to which was referred the petition of John Edgar and others, in behalf of the inhabitants of the counties of St. Clair and Randolph, in the Illinois country, made the following report:

That the petitioners pray for some alteration or modification of that part of the ordinance of Congress, passed on the 13th day of July, 1787, for the government of the Territory of the United States Northwest of the River Ohio; which declares it as one of the "articles of compact between the original States and the people and States in the said Territory, and forever to remain unalterable, unless by common consent; that there shall be neither slavery nor involuntary servitude in the said Territory."

The petitioners being only four in number, and producing no power by which they claim to petition, even in behalf of the inhabitants of the said counties; and no evidence appearing of the wishes of the rest of the inhabitants of the said counties; and your committee having information that an alteration of the ordinance, in the manner prayed for by the petitioners, would be disagreeable to many of the inhabitants of the said Territory; they have conceived it needless to enter into any consideration of the policy of the measure, being persuaded that, if it could be admissible, under any circumstances, a partial application, like the present, could not be listened to: they are, therefore, of opinion that this part of the prayer of the petition ought not to be granted.

The petitioners further state that, by a resolve of Congress, passed on the 20th day of June, 1788, provision was made for laying off certain lands to the heads of families residing in the Illinois country; and that a great part, if not the whole, of the locations where the said lands were ordered to be laid out is covered by titles acquired under the ancient Government of the country; and that part of the said locations is rocky and of little value: wherefore, they pray that the said lands may be ordered to be laid out in a different place, and at the public expense.

The committee find that, by the said resolve, the Governor of the Territory of the United States Northwest of the River Ohio was authorized and directed to lay out, as a donation to each of the families residing in the several villages of Kaskaskia, Kahokia, La Prairie du Rochers, Fort Chartres, and St. Philip's, four hundred acres of land, in three parallelograms, adjoining to the villages of Kaskaskia, La Prairie du Rochers, and Kahokia, and between the River Mississippi and a ledge of rocks which runs from the Kaskaskia to the River Illinois, at the public expense. That, by an act of Congress, passed on the 3d of March, 1791, the said Governor was authorized and directed to confirm all lands which had been actually improved and cultivated, at Vincennes or in the Illinois country under a supposed grant of the same, by any commandant or court claiming authority to make such grant to the persons who have made such improvements, or such parts thereof, as he, in his discretion, might judge reasonable, not exceeding, to any person, four hundred acres; and the said Governor was further directed to lay out the said donation lands agreeably to the said resolve of the 20th of June, 1788.

The committee are not informed that any proceedings have been had under the resolve or act aforesaid, as relative to the people living at Kaskaskia, La Prairie du Rochers, Kahokia, Fort Chartres, or St. Philip's; and are informed by the Governor of the Northwestern Territory that the locations pointed out in the said resolve for the said donation lands are nearly, if not entirely, covered by grants made under the ancient government of the country, or by irregular grants, which are confirmed by the act aforesaid.

By the late Indian treaty, Post Vincennes, on the Wabash, and the lands adjacent, of which the Indian title has been extinguished, and the lands at all other places in the possession of the French people, and other white settlers among them, of which the Indian title had been extinguished, are reserved to the United States; whether the lands on which the petitioners pray to have their donations laid are included within these reservations does not appear with certainty, although it is presumed they are not claimed by any Indian tribe.

It not appearing how much of the lands, on which the said donations were originally directed to be laid, is not covered by the said ancient grants, and it being probable that there does not remain uncovered by the said grants a sufficiency for satisfying the said donations, the public faith engaged to the people settled at those villages seems to require that some further provision should be made.

The committee, therefore, submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Governor of the Territory Northwest of the River Ohio be authorized and directed to cause to be laid out certain donation lands to the inhabitants of the villages of Kaskaskia, La Prairie du Rochers, Kahokia, Fort Chartres, and St. Philip's, in manner as directed by a resolve of Congress of the 20th of June, 1788, on any lands of equal value with those in the location directed by the said resolve, in the vicinity of those villages, which are the property of the United States, and to which the Indian title has become extinct.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, the humble petition of the inhabitants of the counties of St. Clair and Randolph, in the Illinois country, respectfully sheweth:

That the sixth article of compact contained in the ordinance of Congress of 1787, for the government of the Territory Northwest of the Ohio, which declares "That there shall be neither slavery nor involuntary servitude in the said Territory, otherwise than in the punishment of crimes," is, as your petitioners humbly conceive, not only contrary to the promise and assurances made them, on behalf of the State of Virginia, by the then Colonel, afterwards Brigadier General George Rogers Clark, on his taking possession of this country in the name of the said State, whose troops he then commanded, but also contrary to an express fundamental principle in all free countries, "that no ex post facto laws should ever be made."

Your petitioners then were, and now are, possessed of a number of slaves, which the article above recited seems to deprive them of, (perhaps inadvertently,) without their consent or concurrence. It may be said, as it is the better opinion, that all such as were slaves at the date of that ordinance are to continue so during their lives; but then it is also said that the issue of such slaves born after that period are absolutely free. Your petitioners, however, humbly contend that such after-born issue are as much slaves as those born before, because the owners of their parents have and, as your petitioners humbly conceive, always had as fixed and incontrovertible a right to, and interest in, the future issue and increase of such slaves as they have to the slaves themselves. That, notwithstanding the articles in the said ordinance are said to be "articles of compact between the original States and the people and States of the said Territory, it is, however, a truth that they were made ex parte by the original States only; for sure your petitioners are that, if the people then in the Territory had been called upon to make such compact, they never would have consented to enter into one that would deprive them of their most valuable property.

Your petitioners humbly hope they will not be thought presumptuous in venturing to disapprove of the article concerning slavery in toto, as contrary not only to the interest, but almost to the existence of the country they inhabit, where laborers cannot be procured to assist in cultivating the grounds under one dollar per day, exclusive of washing, lodging, and boarding; and where every kind of tradesmen are paid from a dollar and a half to two dollars per day; neither is there, at these exorbitant prices, a sufficiency of hands to be got for the exigencies of the inhabitants who, attached to their native soil, have rather chose to encounter these and many other difficulties than, by avoiding them, remove to the Spanish dominions, where slavery is permitted, and consequently the price of labor much lower.

Your petitioners do not wish to increase the number of slaves already in the dominions of the United States; all they hope for or desire is, that they may be permitted to introduce from any of the United States such persons, and such only, as by the laws of such States are slaves therein. This request your petitioners humbly hope will not be objected to as unreasonable, even by the greatest opposers to slavery, seeing they do not pray for the introduction of any foreign slaves into the Territory.

It is laid down by Blackstone, in his Commentaries, vol. 1, pages 424, 425, "That a slave or negro, the moment he lands in England, becomes a freeman, that is, the law will protect him in the enjoyment of his person and property. Yet, with regard to any right which the master may have acquired to the perpetual service of John or Thomas, this will remain exactly in the same state as before; for this is no more than the same state of subjection for life, which every apprentice submits to for the space of seven years, and sometimes for a longer term. And whatsoever service a negro owed to his American master, the same is he bound to render when brought to England." It may then be clearly deduced from the above authority, that any person purchasing, or otherwise acquiring a slave in any of the States, is entitled to his perpetual service in this Territory as a servant; but, as a diversity may happen in the opinions of different judges, your petitioners, therefore, humbly desire and request, should it, in the wisdom of Congress, be thought unadvisable to repeal the article concerning slavery in toto, that a law may be passed declaratory of the above maxim laid down by Blackstone, but under such regulations as may be thought necessary; and that, in such case, it may be thereby declared how far, and for what period of time, the masters of servants are to be entitled to the service of the children of parents born during such servitude, as an indemnity for the expense of bringing them up in their infancy.

This mode, it is humbly conceived, will obviate any objections that may be made to the continuation or introduction of slavery into the Territory, even by its most strenuous opposers; will undoubtedly ameliorate the condition of those who, being slaves in the United States, may be so fortunate as to be brought into the Territory as servants for life; and will be the means, perhaps, in a great degree, of attaining that object so much wished for by some—"a gradual abolition of slavery."

And your petitioners further beg leave to represent, that the resolves of Congress, of 20th June and 29th August, 1788, making a donation of four hundred acres of land to each of those who were heads of families in the Illinois country, in the year 1783, do, generally speaking, direct the same to be laid off on lands the private property of different inhabitants in the respective villages therein, who claim the same by virtue of grants made thereof, in fee, by the former Governments of the country; and that, especially, every foot of land (Fort Chartres excepted) between the ridge of rocks and the River Mississippi, and between the mouth of the River Kaskaskia and the villages of Kaskaskia, Prairie du Rochers, and St. Philip's, and for several miles upwards, is private property, the same having, as before mentioned, been granted and conceded in fee by authority of the French Government, and now owned and occupied by divers private individuals. And they beg leave also to observe that the lands on the face of the said ridge of rocks, and for some distance in the rear, are broken limestone lands, full of sink holes, with, in general, but a very thin soil, and in many places none at all, the rocks appearing on the surface, so that they are not of any present value or utility; that there is, however, a body of good farming lands on the Kaskaskia river, a few miles above the village of that name, at a place called "the Long prairie," where they would wish to lay their donation lands on; and as it was the humane intention of the then Congress to give such of your petitioners as are entitled thereto such lands as would prove a resource to them whenever the Indian trade should be exhausted, and which is now in a manner entirely decayed, they cannot but hope but that they will be permitted to lay the same at that place, the Indian titles to which, they are credibly informed, are extinguished. This method of laying off the donation lands in one compact body will, they humbly submit, be more beneficial to the United States than laying them off, according to the last law, in four different bodies, for the four respective villages.

And your petitioners further show that, by a late law of the United States, it is ordained that the expense of surveying the lands belonging to the inhabitants of Vincennes should be defrayed by the public; and as the same reasons which conduced to the making of that law may be equally applied to the Illinois country, they have every reason to hope that no distinction will be made between the inhabitants of both places, and that, therefore, the beneficial effects thereof will be also extended to them.

Your petitioners, therefore, humbly pray that the sixth article of compact in the ordinance of 1787 may either be repealed or altered, so as to give permission to introduce slaves into the said Territory from any of the original States, or otherwise; that a law may be made permitting the introduction of such slaves as servants for life, and that it may be enacted for what period the children of such servants shall serve the master of their parents. That the expense of surveying their lands may be paid by the United States; that they may be permitted to lay their donation of four hundred acres of land at the said prairie, called the Long prairie, and running up the River Kaskaskia, in such form as may be directed by law for quantity; and that they may have such further and other relief in the premises as to the justice and wisdom of the United States may seem meet. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray, &c.

For and on behalf of the inhabitants of the said counties of St. Clair and Randolph.

MILITARY LAND CLAIMS PRIOR TO THE REVOLUTION.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MAY 17, 1796.

Mr. TRACY, from the Committee of Claims, to which was referred the petition of Alexander Fowler, made the following report:

That this petitioner claims a right to locate certain land warrants, now in his possession, on unlocated lands now belonging to the United States in the Territory Northwest of the Ohio. These warrants he obtained on the 16th day of February, 1781, in Virginia, signed by John Harvie, register of the land office, directed to the principal surveyor of any county within the Commonwealth of Virginia, to the amount of ten thousand acres, on a right he acquired by virtue of a proclamation of the King of Great Britain in 1763, which gave him (the petitioner) a right, as a reduced military officer, to locate lands in any of the then British provinces on the continent of North America.

He further states, that, in the year 1783, he petitioned Congress for a right to locate his warrants in the Western Territory; which petition was referred to a committee, who reported a resolution in his favor. He now prays that he may be allowed to locate his warrants in the Territory Northwest of the River Ohio, in pursuance to the resolution reported by the above mentioned committee.

On an investigation of this claim, the committee find that the King of Great Britain, on the 7th day of October, 1763, issued a proclamation, directing the governors of the then several provinces on the continent of North America to grant, without fee or reward, to such reduced officers as had served in North America during the then late war with France, as were actually residing in North America, and should personally apply for the same, to each subaltern officer two thousand acres, &c. The committee find that this petitioner has in his hands, which are herewith laid before the House, five land warrants, for two thousand acres of land each, signed by John Harvie, register of the land office, directed to the principal surveyor of any county within the Commonwealth of Virginia, dated 16th day of February, 1781; one purporting to have been issued to the petitioner himself, in his own right, and the other four to him as assignee for the several officers therein named, all counting on the proclamation of the King of Great Britain of 1763, and declaring that the petitioner had complied with the act of the Commonwealth of Virginia in such case provided. On the back of these warrants there are endorsements, as follow, viz. on one, Alexander Fowler, six thousand acres, entered February 25th, 1782; on another, five thousand acres, entered December 26, 1783; on another, five thousand acres, entered December 26th, 1783; on another, Alexander Fowler, four thousand acres, entered February 25th 1782.

Another document attends these papers, which is a certificate of A. Breckenridge, surveyor of Jefferson county, in Kentucky, dated 25th June, 1795, certifying that he did, on the 25th day of April, 1794, put into the hands of James Francis Moore, esquire, the warrants now presented herewith, and that they were, at that time, unappropriated, and that no land had been, or could be, obtained in that State by virtue of said warrants.

The above statement contains all the facts proved to your committee, together with the proof itself.

The petitioner has further stated that he could not obtain lands on these warrants in Virginia.

From this statement of facts, the committee do not conceive themselves justified in granting any thing on this petition. The resolution reported by the committee in 1783 contemplates the petitioner having a right "to locate these warrants, on proving his claim under the proclamation of the King of Great Britain in 1763, and not only on proving the same, but on producing a certificate of his having returned into the land office of Virginia those warrants which were issued in consequence of his said claims." All the proof which the committee have been able to extract from the above is, that, in 1781, the petitioner obtained warrants, as has been stated above, for ten thousand acres of land. It is not in proof before the committee, that any timely exertions have been made by the petitioner to obtain lands, or that he has not obtained lands upon them, unless the appearance of the warrants and Breckenridge's certificate shall justify such a conclusion; nor is there proof that the petitioner was a reduced officer. The committee suppose that, when the petitioner had made his option to take land warrants from the State of Virginia, for his claim under any right he might have by virtue of said proclamation of 1763, his right was satisfied, unless it should appear that, by some mistake, he could obtain no lands by said warrants; which last fact does not appear, and even if it did, his claim would be doubtful: and the committee are convinced there was a sufficiency of the best of lands, which might have been obtained in the then State of Virginia on those warrants.

They are, therefore, of opinion the prayer of this petitioner ought not to be granted.

CLAIMS OF CERTAIN COMPANIES UNDER A LAW OF THE STATE OF GEORGIA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE MAY 20, 1796.

Mr. BURR, from the committee to which was referred the report of the Attorney General on the 29th April, respecting the lands situated in the southwestern parts of the United States, made the following report:

Whereas, from documents laid before Congress pursuant to a resolution of the 3d day of March, 1795, questions appear to arise as to a claim of the United States, as well of property as jurisdiction, of certain lands within the bounds following, to wit: North by the cession of South Carolina, west by the Mississippi, south by the thirty-first degree of latitude, and east by the River Chattahoochee, and a line from the head thereof due north to the South Carolina cession; the jurisdiction of which territory is also claimed by the State of Georgia, and the property thereof, or of certain parts thereof, as well by the State of Georgia as by certain individuals claiming under the said State; and whereas it is highly expedient that the rights of the parties, as well to property as to jurisdiction, should be ascertained and declared, and that the minds of those claiming or holding should be quieted, and that provision should be made for the temporary government of the inhabitants of the territory aforesaid: it is, therefore, Resolved, That the President of the United States be authorized to treat and conclude (subject to the ratification or dissent of Congress) with the State of Georgia, for the cession of the claim of said State to jurisdiction in and over the said territory, and to adopt such measures as to him shall seem expedient (subject to the future approbation of Congress) for ascertaining, declaring, confirming, by an agreement to be entered into between the parties aforesaid, their respective claims to the territory aforesaid. 2d. That, as soon as the ratifications of the treaty lately concluded with his Catholic majesty shall be exchanged, the President of the United States be authorized to establish a temporary Government in and over the inhabitants of all that tract of country lying within the territory aforesaid, and bounded as follows, to wit: West by the Mississippi, north by a line to be drawn due east from the mouth of the Yazoo to the Chattahoochee, east by the Chattahoochee, and south by the thirty-first degree of latitude, conformably with the ordinance of Congress of the 13th day of July, 1787; such temporary government to continue until the end of the next session of Congress, without prejudice to the right of any State or individual whatsoever.

APPLICATION FOR LAND AT REDUCED PRICES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MAY 31, 1796.

Mr. TRACEY, from the committee to which was referred the petition of Hannibal William Dobbyn, made the following report:

That the petitioner prays for a special license to purchase lands in the Northwestern Territory of the United States, at as cheap a rate by the acre as he could have done in 1789, if a land office had at that time been opened.

He applied, he says, to Congress, in 1789, for leave to purchase lands for himself and several others, all reputable people of Ireland, and that a committee was appointed, who reported in his favor; and, in consequence, many persons, his associates, sold their property with a view of emigrating to America, and have lived on their capital ever since, in expectation of purchasing lands agreeably to the prayer of the aforesaid petition.

The committee find an application was made to Congress in 1789, by the petitioner, for leave to purchase lands in the western territory; that a committee reported on the said petition, that liberty should be given to purchase a tract not less than fifty thousand acres in one survey, at a price which was left blank in the report.

That the House took up the same, and made no decision, but referred the whole to the Secretary of the Treasury, in July, 1790;* the Secretary of the Treasury reported on the said petition a general plan for the sale of the western lands. In this situation the matter has rested until the present application; and no decision has been made by Congress that could relate to the subject, until this session.

The committee are of opinion no discrimination can be made in favor of the present petitioner, and that to allow any person to purchase at a price lower than the general law provides, would be attended with many evil consequences. They are, therefore, of opinion that the prayer of this petition ought not to be granted.

LAND CLAIMANTS IN THE NORTHWESTERN TERRITORY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 3, 1797.

Mr. GRISWOLD, from the committee to which was referred the petition of Amos Ailes and others, inhabitants of Red Stone settlement, in the State of Pennsylvania, made the following report:

That the petitioners state in their petition that, in the year 1785, they obtained from the district court at Post St. Vincennes a grant of four hundred acres of land each, and, on the payment of the consideration and fees, the said court issued patents therefor, which were recorded; that they employed a person to erect a cabin, and to clear and fence a small piece of ground on each of their lots; that the person whom they employed afterwards fell by the Indians; that, in 1786, they proceeded to the rapids of the Ohio, with an intent to settle said lands, but found the attempt too hazardous; that they have since made two other attempts to settle said lands, but have been prevented by Indian hostilities; that, in 1796, they applied to Governor Sinclair for a confirmation of their titles to said lands; but the Governor, on full consideration, hath declined confirming their titles. They pray for a confirmation of their titles to said lands.

The committee did not find any vouchers accompanying this petition, or any person possessed of vouchers, to establish the facts therein stated; they did not, however, think it necessary to delay their report for the purpose of receiving proofs, as the petition itself, in the opinion of the committee, afforded sufficient consideration on which to ground a report.

The committee have not found any document which authorized the district court at Post St. Vincennes, in the year 1785, to grant the lands of the United States, or issue patents therefor; they are of opinion that every grant, at that time, by that court, was unauthorized and void.

On examining the journals of Congress, the committee find that measures were adopted, soon after the American war, to quiet ancient settlers in the lands they possessed, in the year 1783, at Post St. Vincennes, and to prevent intruders from possessing the lands of the United States in that vicinity; and so early as April, 1787, Congress directed a military force to dispossess certain lawless intruders who had taken possession of Post St. Vincennes.

The committee further find that, in March, 1791, Congress passed an act to quiet the ancient settlers at Post St. Vincennes, in their lands, and likewise, in the same act authorized the Governor of the Northwestern Territory to confirm to the actual settlers at that place such land, or parts thereof, as they had obtained by supposed grants from any court claiming authority to make such grants, not exceeding four hundred acres to each settler.

As these petitioners did not come within the provisions of this act, not having been actual settlers at Post St. Vincennes, their claim was rejected by the Governor of the Northwestern Territory; and the committee are of opinion that Congress have gone as far in that act to quiet the unauthorized settlements at that place as justice or policy requires, and that the claim of these petitioners, having nothing to support it but a grant issued from a tribunal unauthorized to make it, ought to be rejected.

2d SESSION.

ILLINOIS AND WABASH LAND COMPANY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 13, 1797.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the Illinois and Wabash Land Company respectfully sheweth, that your memorialists, with all deference, as becometh good and faithful citizens, have heretofore presented sundry memorials and petitions to Congress, setting forth their claim and title to certain lands lawfully and bona fide purchased, as they conceive, from the native lords and absolute proprietors of the soil, under the sanction of the British Government, prior to the revolution and declaration of American independence; that our first memorial and petition was taken up in the year 1781, by the committee to whom the cessions of New York, Virginia, Connecticut, and the petitions of the Indiana, Vandalia, and the said Illinois and Wabash Land Companies were referred, and a report thereupon made to Congress; but it does not appear that the said report was any further acted upon, under the old confederation, than so far as related to the land cessions of the said three States of New York, Virginia, and Connecticut, the claims of the private companies being postponed or left undetermined; that the Illinois and Wabash Company continued to prosecute their claim, by subsequent memorials and petitions to Congress, until the formation and adoption of the present happy constitution of the United States, and then afterwards took an early opportunity to renew their memorials and petitions to the Senate and House of Representatives, recapitulating their former memorials and petitions and stating anew—

1. That their purchase was made with full notoriety, from Indian tribes, aborigines, and lawful possessors of the soil, who, being free and independent, and having never alienated their property nor the pre-emption thereof, had, at the time of the purchase by your memorialists, an absolute and indefeasible right to sell and convey the same to any persons or companies whomsoever, and that they did sell and convey, accordingly, to your memorialists, no law or prerogative of any power on earth prohibiting, or having a right to prohibit them, by treaty or conquest, or otherwise, in their transactions or doings.

2. That the said purchase was made antecedent to the American revolution, in open council, at a public treaty held under the sanction and authority of the Crown of Great Britain, and when it was well understood that such purchase was lawful from any of the native lords of the soil (the Six Nations only excepted, who had sold the right of their territory to the Crown of Great Britain.)

In support of this doctrine, your memorialists submitted to the committees of both Houses of Congress the following law documents, as set forth more at large in the printed state of their case, which accompanies this memorial, viz.:

The great Crown lawyers of England, Pratt, Yorke, and Dunning, two of whom were afterwards lords chancellors of the realm, gave their opinion to the Crown as followeth, viz.:

“That, with respect to such places as have been or shall be acquired by treaty or grant from any of the Indian princes or Governments, even the King’s letters patents or confirmation was not necessary, the property of the soil vesting in the grantees by the Indian grants, subject only to his majesty’s right of sovereignty over the settlements, as English settlements, and over the inhabitants, as English subjects.”

In the famous case of Major Mason’s purchase of the Mohegan Indians, on the 15th of August, 1659, (which was litigated for near seventy years, and at last determined in England before the highest appellate judicature for the colonies,) the greatest law characters, (some of whom have been mentioned before,) such as Yorke, De Grey, Dunning, Jackson, Wedderburne, &c., being concerned, it was agreed in every stage of the transaction, and decided, after repeated hearings, “that the royal grant, subsequent to Mason’s purchase from the natives, could give no legal title to the lands in dispute; and, although a title might have been unquestionably derived, under the charter of Connecticut, and subsequent patents from the colony, yet that title was deserted by the counsel on both sides, and the title to the lands established upon the foundation of the Indian deeds, and the conveyance made by Major Mason to the colony, (although the deeds from the Indians appeared to be attended with many exceptionable circumstances,) and the payment of the consideration to the natives, at such distance of time and place, could not be fully proved.”

That the purchase made by your memorialists was not only notorious and of recent date, has been stated above; and the consideration specified in the deeds was bona fide paid by the company, in open council, at the said public treaty, the receipt thereof publicly acknowledged in the body of the deeds then publicly executed, and the deeds themselves acknowledged and recorded, in the proper places of record in the country, according to law, in the Government then existing.

That the consideration paid (besides many valuable presents made during the treaty) exceed in value what had ever before been paid for any similar purchase, by States or individuals, and the receipt of the same as well as the validity of the purchase never denied, but on all subsequent public occasions constantly acknowledged by the said tribes and nations, and their descendants, to the present day. Nor have any other nation or nations, tribe or tribes of Indians, set up or pretended any right or claim to the lands in question, nor any State or individual citizen or citizens to the pre-emption right of the same.

That such being the state of your memorialists’ claim and title prior to the declaration of the independence of the United States, they conceive their rights remain sound and unforfeited, and have never been relinquished under the revolution, nor can be touched by any ex post facto ordinance or law, but continue unimpeached and upon the same basis of law and equity as they were under the British Government prior to the revolution, saving to the United States the sovereignty over the citizens and settlers in point of jurisdiction and government.

That your memorialists, nevertheless, considering the extent of their purchase and title, and that from reasons of policy and public good, States as well as individual companies and societies may and ought to accommodate their interests to the interests and good order of the General Government; and, considering further, that subsequent negotiations with the native Indians, notwithstanding the alienation of their property, may be necessary, in order to a complete settlement of their country, with their perfect consent, so far as sold and alienated, your memorialists, in their last (in part) recited memorial proposed “to surrender and convey to the United States the lands described or meant to be described in their deeds from the Indians, on the proviso that the United States reconvey one-fourth part of the said lands to the company, according to such location or locations of the same as may be reasonably agreed upon, whereby the United States may derive from the true and native proprietors of the soil a just and absolute title to a large and valuable tract of country not otherwise treated for nor purchased by them, nor the pre-emption thereof, and this without any new purchase or consideration, except so far as is usual in the recognition of purchases, and brightening the chain of friendship at subsequent treaties.”

That, in pursuance of our former memorial to the effect above stated, the Senate and House of Representatives appointed committees of their respective bodies to take the same into consideration, and report thereon; that the said committees having met jointly and heard them, (your memorialists,) were pleased to report separately, viz.:

The committee of the Senate reported as followeth, viz.:

“The committee of the Senate, to which was referred the memorial of the Illinois and Wabash Land Companies, report:

“That the claims of the petitioners are founded on two deeds mentioned in the said petition; one of which to William Murray and others, who are called the Illinois Company, is dated July 5th, 1773, and the other to Lord Dunmore and others, who are styled the Wabash Company, bears date October 18th, 1775.

“That the said petitioners have proposed to surrender and convey to the United States all the lands described, or meant to be described, in the above mentioned deeds from the Indians, on the proviso that the United States reconvey to the company one-fourth part of the said lands.

“That, in the opinion of the committee, deeds obtained by private persons from the Indians, without any antecedent authority or subsequent confirmation from the Government, could not vest in the grantees mentioned in such deeds a title to the lands therein described.

“That the petitioners do not suggest any such antecedent authority, or subsequent confirmation, in the present case; and, therefore, in the opinion of the committee, the said petitioners have not a legal title to the said lands.

“That the proceeds of the sales of lands in the western territory belonging to the United States are appropriated towards discharging the debts for the payment whereof the United States are holden.

“The petitioners allege that the considerations specified in the said deeds were paid to the Indians, and were at least as valuable as any that were given on similar occasions, and that the Indians named in the said deeds were owners of the land.

“On these points the committee give no opinion; but, for the reasons above expressed, they think it would not be expedient for the Government of the United States to accede to the aforementioned proposition of the petitioners."

The committee of the House of Representatives reported as followeth, viz:

"The committee to which was referred the memorial of the Illinois and Wabash Land Companies, report:

"That the claims of the petitioners are founded on two deeds mentioned in the said petition, one of which, to William Murray and others, who are called the Illinois Company, is dated 5th July, 1773, and the other, to Lord Dunmore and others, who are styled the Wabash Company, bears date October 18th, 1775.

"That the said petitioners have proposed to surrender and convey to the United States all the lands described or meant to be described in the above mentioned deed from the Indians, on the proviso that the United States reconvey to the company one-fourth part of the said lands.

"And that, in the opinion of the committee, the said deeds having been given by the Indians, proprietors of the soil, before the declaration of the independence of the United States, for a valuable consideration, bona fide paid, are sufficient to extinguish the Indian title to the lands therein described.

"And, therefore, that, on principles of justice and equity, the United States should agree to the proposal aforesaid, made by the petitioners."

The foregoing reports have not yet been taken into discussion by either House of Congress, and your memorialists cannot help being urgent that a decision should be speedily had, as the original cost and interest, exclusive of the consideration money to the Indians, amount to forty thousand pounds sterling, at least.

The report of the committee of the House of Representatives is, "That on the principles of equity and justice the United States should agree to our proposal."

The report of the committee of the Senate is, that "deeds obtained by private persons from the Indians, without any antecedent authority, or subsequent confirmation from the Government, vest no title in the grantees." This, we have already shown, from the highest law authorities, was not the doctrine under the Government of Great Britain at the time of the purchase, and that no antecedent authority nor subsequent confirmation was necessary for that Government, except in the case of the Six Nation Indians, who alone had sold their pre-emption rights to that Government.

Your memorialists, therefore, anxious that this business should be brought to a speedy decision, comporting with the magnanimity of the United States and justice to all her citizens, respectfully pray that the reports of the committees aforesaid may be now taken up in their respective Houses, in order that, if a compromise cannot be made, agreeably to the principles of the memorial and the report of the committee of the House of Representatives, the Congress may, in their wisdom and justice, devise some method for a judicial decision of the principles on which the report of the committee of the Senate is founded. And your memorialists shall ever pray, &c.

By order and on behalf of the company.

JAMES WILSON, President.

NOTE. This memorial was referred to a committee consisting of Messrs. Ross, Livermore, Tracy, Tazewell, and Stockton, and on the 3d February, 1797, Mr. Ross reported "That it will be expedient to adopt the report of the committee of the Senate of the United States, made upon the memorial of this Company, on the 26th of March, 1792." (See No. 11.) On this report the Senate passed the following resolution: (February 16, 1797,) "Resolved, That the report be adopted."

EXTENSION OF CREDIT ON LANDS SOLD.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 30, 1797.

Mr. NICHOLAS made the following report:

The committee appointed to inquire into the progress made in carrying into effect the act, entitled "An act providing for the sale of the lands of the United States, in the Territory Northwest of the River Ohio, and above the mouth of Kentucky river," and, also, whether any, and what alterations may be necessary in the same,

Be leave to refer to a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, and sundry papers accompanying the same, for information respecting the proceedings under the said law; and are of opinion that it is expedient to extend the time of credit directed by the said law; and, therefore, submit the following resolution to the consideration of the House:

Resolved, That the act, entitled "An act providing for the sale of the lands of the United States, in the Territory Northwest of the River Ohio, and above the mouth of Kentucky river," ought to be amended so as to require only one-fifth of the amount of any purchase money, including the deposite, to be paid within thirty days from the sale, and to require the payment of the residue of any purchase money only in four equal annual sums.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 24, 1797.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 11th, transmitting the resolution of the House of Representatives, of the 5th instant, I have the honor to inform you, that as soon as the surveys and documents could be collected and arranged, relative to the seven ranges of townships, which were surveyed in pursuance of an ordinance of Congress, passed on the 20th of May, 1785, measures were taken for executing the directions contained in the act of the last session, passed on the 18th day of May, 1796.

The papers marked A and B, herewith transmitted, are copies of the notifications which were published in each of the States. The map C contains a specification of the lots sold in New York, those reserved by the United States, and those directed to be sold at Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.

The accounts of sales at Pittsburgh have not been adjusted: from the returns received, it appears that nearly forty-nine thousand acres were sold, subject to the conditions of the law. The amount of the sales is reported to be one hundred and twelve thousand one hundred and thirty-five dollars and forty-five cents, of which forty thousand six hundred and sixteen dollars and fifty-eight cents have been received. It is represented that some forfeitures have occurred, and that more may be expected: the result cannot be known until the accounts shall have been adjusted. The enclosed statement, marked D, by the auditor, exhibits a general view of the returns already made to the Treasury.

The whole of the sections were repeatedly exposed to sale, at Pittsburgh, but without success, further than has been mentioned; the actual sales were confined to sections near the River Ohio.

The quarter townships, directed to be exposed for sale in Philadelphia, have been repeatedly offered since the 4th instant, but without the least success.

Indeed, it is now certain that none of the quarter townships will be sold.

The resignation of Mr. De Witt, who was first appointed surveyor general; the unavoidable delays which attended a designation of his successor; the want of an appropriation of money; and the constant pressure of more urgent business, have delayed any definitive arrangements, in respect to the new surveys directed by the act of Congress; they are expected to be completed, however, during the present winter.

In the surveys made pursuant to the ordinance of May 20, 1785, only the external lines of the townships were surveyed; the interior divisions into sections were never actually run; of course, the quantities of land in the fractional townships and sections are no otherwise known than by a calculation by a geometrical scale. This calculation cannot be accurate. To prevent future complaints of deception by the public, this circumstance was publicly announced at Pittsburgh, at the time of sale.

It is alleged by some, that the price of two dollars is above the value of the lands, especially for such considerable tracts as quarter townships; this opinion, and the present scarcity of money, are the causes which prevent sales.

I apprehend that the purchasers of sections and fractions of sections, will be exposed to great trouble in ascertaining the situation of their lands, owing to the defective plan upon which the surveys were made, under the ordinance of 1785. This tends to discourage purchasers, not resident in the neighboring country, and to expose the lands belonging to the United States to the hazard of intrusive settlements.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

OLIVER WOLCOTT, Jun.
Secretary of the Treasury.

JOHN NICHOLAS, Esq.,
Chairman of a Committee of the House of Reps.

ILLINOIS AND WABASH LAND COMPANY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 3, 1797.

Mr. JEREMIAH SMITH made the following report: The committee to which was referred the memorial of the Illinois and Wabash Land Companies, recalling to the view of Congress their former memorial, and the reports of the committees of the Senate and House of Representatives thereon, have met a committee of the Senate, appointed on the same subject, and, after hearing the agents of the said companies, both committees have agreed to the following report:

That it will be expedient to adopt the report of the committee of the Senate of the United States, made on the petition of the said companies, on the 26th of March, 1792, as follows:

"That the said petitioners have proposed to surrender and convey to the United States all the lands described, or meant to be described, in the above mentioned deeds from the Indians, on the proviso that the United States reconvey to the company one-fourth part of the said lands.

"That, in the opinion of the committee, deeds obtained by private persons from the Indians, without any antecedent authority, or subsequent confirmation from the Government, could not vest in the grantees mentioned in such deeds a title to the land therein described.

"That the petitioners do not suggest any such antecedent authority, or subsequent confirmation, in the present case; and, therefore, in the opinion of the committee, the said petitioners have not a legal title to the said lands.

"That the proceeds of the sales of lands in the western territory belonging to the United States are appropriated towards discharging the debts for the payment whereof the United States are holden.

"The petitioners allege that the considerations specified in the said deeds were paid to the Indians, and were at least as valuable as any that were given on similar occasions; and that the Indians named in the said deeds were owners of the land.

"On these points, the committee give no opinion; but, for the reasons above expressed, they think it would not be expedient for the Government of the United States to accede to the aforementioned proposition of the petitioners."

The committee, therefore, report the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the memorial of the said Illinois and Wabash Land Companies, cannot be granted.

CONTRACT WITH JOHN CLEVES SYMMES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 9, 1797.

Mr. GALLATIN made the following report:

The committee to which were referred the memorial of John Cleves Symmes, and the report of the Attorney General,* relative to the contract entered into between the said Symmes and the United States, for some western lands, report the following statement of facts:

On the fifteenth of October, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-eight, the late Board of Treasury, by virtue of resolutions of Congress of the twenty-third and twenty-seventh of July, and twenty-third of October, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, contracted with John Cleves Symmes and his associates, for a grant of a tract of land lying in the western country, and bounded westwardly by the Great Miami, southwardly by the Ohio, eastwardly by a line beginning on the Ohio, at a spot twenty miles distant, and above the mouth of the Great Miami, and extending from the said spot, in a course parallel with the general course of the Great Miami, and northwardly by a line running due east and west, from the last mentioned line to the Great Miami, so as to include one million of acres, reserving, however, five lots out of each township, contained in the said million of acres, and agreeing that the United States should cause the said tract to be surveyed, and the boundary lines of the same to be plainly marked; a plat thereof to be returned to the Board of Treasury, and a counterpart of the same to John Cleves

Symmes. For which tract the said John Cleves Symmes agreed to pay at the rate of two-thirds of a dollar per acre (an allowance of one-third of a dollar being made from the sum of one dollar per acre for bad lands and incidental charges) for such quantity of land as should be found to be comprised in the said tract, after deducting the lots to be reserved as aforesaid. The sum of eighty-two thousand one hundred and ninety-eight dollars, (one-seventh in military rights, and the residue in public securities of the United States,) had been paid into the Treasury of the United States by the said Symmes, before the ensembling of the contract, and the remainder was to be paid in manner following, that is to say: the sum of eighty-two thousand one hundred and ninety-eight dollars within one month after the said plat should have been delivered, and the lines and boundaries of the said tract ascertained, as aforesaid, and the residue in six equal payments, to be respectively made at the expiration of six months, one year, eighteen months, two years, two years and a half, and three years after the delivery of the said plat; the said payments to be made in gold or silver, or securities of the United States; provided that, if such payments, or any part thereof, were made in securities, only the principal sums therein specified should be applied to such payments, the said Symmes agreeing to take indents for the interest that might be due thereon, prior to the completion of the plat aforesaid, and that the interest which might have accrued upon the same, after the date of the completion of the said plat, should be the property of the

* See No. 23.

United States, without any allowance to the said Symmes for the same, and should be paid and allowed to the said United States : And provided also, that one equal seventh part of the said payments might be made in rights for bounties of lands, by rendering the same acre for acre, instead of gold or silver, or public securities. It was further agreed that the said John Cleves Symmes should, at his expense, within seven years after the delivery of the said plat, subdivide the whole of the same tract into townships and lots ; that he should have a right to take immediate possession of a part of the same tract, bounded on the River Ohio, including one hundred and twenty-three thousand two hundred and ninety-seven acres ; (still excepting the lots reserved as aforesaid;) that, upon his making the payment of eighty-two thousand one hundred and ninety-eight dollars, specified to be made within one month after the delivery of the plat aforesaid, he should receive a conveyance in fee simple from the United States, for two hundred and forty-six thousand five hundred and ninety-four acres, part of the said tract of land, and that, upon every remaining payment being made, he should receive a similar conveyance for a further proportional part of the said tract.

By a resolution of Congress, passed the twelfth of August, one thousand seven hundred and ninety, the Secretary of the Treasury was authorized to direct the making any surveys that remained to be made, so as to comply, on the part of the United States, with several contracts made with the late Board of Treasury, for lands in the western territory : and, on the twentieth of November, one thousand seven hundred and ninety, the late Secretary of the Treasury did accordingly commit to Mr. Israel Ludlow, the making, amongst others, of the survey of the tract contracted for with Mr. Symmes. But, owing to a variety of incidents and disappointments, caused by the Indian war, detailed in Mr. Ludlow's letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, dated the sixth of May, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two, he had not been able, at that time, to complete the survey. But it appeared that the line intended for the eastern boundary of the survey would cross several times the Little Miami, and interfere with the tract of land reserved by the State of Virginia ; and on the other hand, Mr. Symmes had taken possession of, and, in a great degree, sold a tract not included within the boundaries of his contract, and extending from the upper limit of the same, on the Ohio, up and along the said river to the mouth of the Little Miami.

By an act of Congress, passed the twelfth of April, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two, the President of the United States was authorized, at the request of John Cleves Symmes, or his agent, to alter the contract above mentioned for the sale of a tract of land of one million of acres, in such manner, that the said tract might extend from the mouth of the Great Miami, to the mouth of the Little Miami, and be bounded by the River Ohio on the south, by the Great Miami on the west, by the Little Miami on the east, and by a parallel of latitude on the north extending from the Great Miami to the Little Miami, so as to comprehend the proposed quantity of one million of acres, provided that the northern limits of the said tract should not interfere with the boundary line established by the treaty at Fort Harmar between the United States and the Indians.

On the eleventh of April, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two, a petition was presented to Congress, signed "John Cleves Symmes, by Jonathan Dayton, his agent, and one of his associates," stating, that from the advanced price of certificates, resulted the impossibility of a strict fulfilment of the contract, and requesting that a title might be made to him for so much of the land as had already been paid for, and that he might be indulged with terms as favorable as those granted to the Ohio Company.

And by another act of Congress, passed the fifth of May, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two, the President of the United States was authorized to grant, in fee simple, to John C. Symmes, and his associates : first, as much land as the payments already made by them, under their contract aforesaid, would pay for, estimating the lands at two-thirds of a dollar per acre : secondly, one other tract of one hundred and six thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven acres ; provided, that the said Symmes, his agents or associates, should pay, within six months, warrants which issued for army bounty rights, sufficient for that purpose, according to the provisions of the resolves of Congress, of the twenty-third of July and second of October, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven : and thirdly, a township of six miles square, in trust for the use of an academy, agreeably to a clause of the original contract.

The care of making the survey, in conformity to the act of Congress of the twelfth of April, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two, was, on the twenty-fifth of November, ensuing, committed by the late Secretary of the Treasury to Mr. Israel Ludlow, and this last, by a letter, dated the tenth of July, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-three, informed the Secretary that he had carried into effect, as far as practicable, his instructions, having completed the survey of the tract contained between the two Miami rivers, extending as far northwardly as the head of Little Miami, and had found that little more than five hundred thousand acres were included therein. The plat of the survey itself, as returned to the Treasury Department, and bearing date the tenth of January, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four, is certified by Mr. Ludlow to have been made, according to the said act of the twelfth of April, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two, and to contain five hundred and forty-three thousand nine hundred and fifty acres, within the boundaries designated by that law. No document has been furnished to the committee showing that the counterpart of the plat was officially delivered to Mr. Symmes, although it appears that he is at present possessed of it.

On the 8th of June, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-three, Mr. Symmes, by a letter to the late Secretary of the Treasury, declared that he agreed to alter the contract, in the manner proposed in the act of Congress of the 12th of April, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two, and, on the 29th September, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four, he formally requested the President, that the said contract should be altered, so as to include only the tract mentioned in the act of the 12th of April, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two, butted, bounded, and described, as in the said act was set forth ; and at the same time he, for himself, his associates, and their heirs, remised, released, and quitted claim unto the United States, all right, title, interest, claim, and demand whatever, in and to so much of the lands contained and included within the bounds and limits described in the first contract, as is not contained, meant, and intended to be contained and included within the bounds and limits designated by the above mentioned act of Congress of the 12th of April, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two. On the 30th of September, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four, the President of the United States, by his letters patent, assented to the alteration ; and on the same day, in conformity to the act of Congress of the 5th of May, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two, he also granted to the said Symmes and his associates, all that tract of land bounded on the south by the River Ohio, on the west by the Great Miami, on the east by the Little Miami, and on the north by a parallel of latitude to be run from the Great Miami to the Little Miami, so as to comprehend three hundred and eleven thousand six hundred and eighty-two acres, reserving five lots out of each township contained in the said tract, and further declaring that one complete township of six miles square, to be located nearly in the centre of the tract thus granted, was granted, and should be holden in trust, for the sole purpose of erecting an academy and endowing the same ; the said parallel of latitude forming the boundary of the tract, thus granted, to be run within five years, by the said Symmes, from certain points which shall have been ascertained by Israel Ludlow, on the two Miamis, according to the survey returned to the Treasury Department, on the 24th day of March, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four.

Upon a consideration of those facts, the committee are of opinion :

1st. That the application made by Mr. Symmes to have the original boundaries altered, in conformity to the act of the 12th of April, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two, (which application was made more than nine months after the return of the survey ascertaining the quantity of land contained within the boundaries designated by that act,) and his release of all the lands not included within the new limits set forth in that law, are a complete relinquishment of all the lands not contained in Mr. Ludlow's survey returned to the Treasury Department, and that he has no claim whatever, either in justice or equity, to any part of the land out of the said survey.

2dly. That, although Mr. Symmes has made no payment since the completion of the survey, yet, as he never has formally relinquished his claim to the lands contained within the same, and as there is no proof of the counterpart of the plat having been formally delivered to him, he still preserves an equitable claim on two hundred and thirty-two thousand two hundred and sixty-eight acres, being that part of Mr. Ludlow's survey not included in the patent already granted to Mr. Symmes; from which quantity must, however, be deducted as usual, the lots reserved by the original contract.

The committee further state, that, in settling the accounts of Mr. Symmes and associates, at the time the patent aforesaid for three hundred and eleven thousand six hundred and eighty-two acres was granted to them, they were credited by ninety-five thousand two hundred and fifty acres, in army land warrants, at the rate of one dollar per acre, and having been charged for the lands included in the patent, at the rate of two-thirds of a dollar per acre, according to the terms of the contract, they, in fact, received one hundred and forty-two thousand eight hundred and seventy-five acres for the ninety-five thousand two hundred and fifty acres paid in army land warrants, or at the rate of one acre and a half for every acre in military bounties paid by them. Although this mode of settlement was approved by the then Attorney General, the committee are of opinion, that it was directly in opposition to the original resolutions of Congress, and terms of the contract, by which it is declared, that the purchasers may pay a certain proportion in military bounties, by rendering the same acre for acre; and they further find, by a letter of Mr. Symmes, dated the seventeenth of June, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-one, and by a copy of the propositions and statement of the late Treasury Board to John Cleves Symmes, enclosed in the said letter, that it was well understood by both parties, at the time of making the contract, that the purchaser was to be allowed only one acre for every acre in military bounties paid by him.

The committee also find, that it is essentially necessary that immediate measures should be taken to locate the township reserved for an academy, which is included in the patent granted to Mr. Symmes and his associates; they, therefore, submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That a committee be appointed to bring in a bill, authorizing the President of the United States to grant in fee simple, to John C. Symmes and his associates, that part of the tract of land, the boundaries whereof are ascertained by a survey executed in conformity to the act of Congress, entitled "An act for ascertaining the bounds of a tract of land purchased by John Cleves Symmes," and returned to the Treasury Department, the 10th of January, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four, which is not included within the bounds of the grant already made on the 30th of September, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four, to the said John Cleves Symmes and his associates, excepting and reserving out of the same the lots reserved by the original contract entered into between the United States and the said Symmes and his associates: Provided, that the said John Cleves Symmes and his associates shall, previously, in conformity to the terms of the original contract, make the requisite payments for the tract to be granted to them, and for the forty-seven thousand six hundred and twenty-five acres, part of the grant already made to them on the 30th of September, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four, for which they have not yet paid any consideration. And provided also, that the township reserved for an academy shall have previously been located and secured, according to the terms of the contract, and of the resolutions and law of Congress relative thereto.

CLAIMANTS UNDER JOHN CLEVES SYMMES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 25, 1797.

To the honorable the Senate of the United States, the memorial of the subscribers respectfully shows:

That, by the act of 1792, "for ascertaining the bounds of a tract of land purchased by John Cleves Symmes," the said tract is declared to "extend from the mouth of the Great Miami to the mouth of the Little Miami, and be bounded by the River Ohio on the south; by the Great Miami on the west; by the Little Miami on the east; and by a parallel of latitude on the north, extending from the Great Miami to the Little Miami; so as to comprehend the proposed quantity of one million of acres: Provided, That the northern limits of the said tract shall not interfere with the boundary line established by the treaty of Fort Harmar."

That, afterwards, it appears Mr. Symmes accepted a patent for three hundred thousand acres of this land, without formally relinquishing his right of pre-emption to the remainder.

That he applied to Congress, during their present session, for a grant of the land so remaining; and that a bill has, in consequence, passed the House of Representatives, intending to vest in him a part only of the whole pre-emption he claims; and which bill, should it pass into a law, would prove seriously injurious to your memorialists, who have accepted different releases from Mr. Symmes, of all his right of pre-emption to the following lands lying within the Miami purchase, viz: Those parts of the seventh, eighth, and ninth entire ranges, which lie between the Great Miami and Chillicothe, or Mad river, are released to the subscriber, Peyton Short; and to the subscriber, George Turner, are released the contents of a township in the ninth entire range, bounded westwardly by Chillicothe river: which lands your memorialists have caused to be completely and accurately surveyed; have established, in their respective parts thereof, towns and flourishing settlements, and caused roads of communication to be surveyed and cut. That, in the prosecution of these improvements, your memorialists have severally incurred heavy expenses, as can be made to appear by vouchers in their possession.

That these settlements form the present frontier of the Miami country; and, being but a short distance from Greenville, and other military posts, have proved of real advantage to the public, by furnishing to the army supplies of corn, beef, &c., on cheap terms; and that they are important, besides, to the country in the rear, by contributing to the protection of its inhabitants.

And, lastly, that your memorialists are each allowed, by the above mentioned deeds of release, to accept of a patent for the lands in their own names, without the intervention of Mr. Symmes, on paying the United States for the same the price per acre established by the contract.

Your memorialists, therefore, pray your honorable House to take into consideration the peculiar hardships of their respective cases, and to propose such a modification of the bill, recently passed through the other House, as may entitle your memorialists to patents for the lands in question, upon payment, at a short day, of the contract price for the same.

G. TURNER.
PEYTON SHORT.

Information for the Committee on the Memorial of Jud Turner and Mr. Short.

PHILADELPHIA, February 28, 1797.

I have given to Jonathan Donnel, for surveying and laying off in sections, of one mile square each, a tract of land, lying between the Big Miami and Mad rivers, and containing, by his map, the quantity of eighty-six thousand seven hundred acres, nearly the sum of four hundred dollars. I cannot precisely name the sum, as I have no papers with me relative to that business; not having contemplated that any occurrence might make it necessary for me to produce them in this place.

I have, moreover, established a town on the Big Miami river, about thirteen miles above its confluence with Mad river, to which I have given the name of Livingston, the laying out of which into in and out lots, has cost me a considerable sum of money; and have caused to be cut, from the town of Dayton to the said town of Livingston, a wagon road of about sixteen or eighteen miles in length; the undertaker of which I have not yet fully paid, although I have advanced him upwards of sixty dollars.

As this town was to be the most remote frontier of the Northwestern Territory, to encourage settlers thereon, I was under the necessity of giving them a considerable bounty in the lots thereof, and to sell them, of any lands within the aforesaid survey, to the amount of eight sections, above a line to include twenty thousand acres within the confluence of the Big Miami and Mad rivers, their choice at one dollar per acre; which, in the opinion of the best judges on that subject, would be in a ratio of valuation as one dollar is to thirty-three and a third cents; thereby, to a certain extent, reducing the average value of lands purchased by me at sixty-six and two-thirds cents, fifty per cent; and, in addition to the within recited expenses, making a sacrifice to that amount for the common good of the western country.

These are things, however, which candor directs me to confess I should not have done, had I considered Judge Symmes's contract as standing on questionable ground. Nor did I ever hear more than a faint rumor on this head, until a few months previous to the present session of Congress.

The lands which I have sold, as marked by asterisks in my map, are the following, viz:

The north half of the twenty-second section, first township, ninth range.

The north half of the thirty-third section, second township, ninth range.

The north half of the twenty-fifth section, second township, ninth range.

Southwest quarter of the twenty-third section, first township, ninth range.

Southwest quarter of the ninth section, first township, ninth range.

Southwest quarter of the seventh section, second township, ninth range.

Southwest quarter of the second section, second township, ninth range.

Southwest quarter of the thirtieth section, second township, eighth range.

Southwest quarter of the thirty-third section, second township, eighth range.

Southwest quarter of the twentieth section, second township, eighth range.

Southwest quarter of the twenty-first section, second township, eighth range.

Southwest quarter of the seventh section, second township, ninth range.

Southwest quarter of the second section, second township, ninth range.

Southwest quarter of the twenty-eighth section, first township, ninth range.

On the last mentioned section the town of Livingston is established. The other sections, being partly fractional, make up, in the whole, somewhat more than eight entire sections.

The tenor of my contract with the purchasers of the aforesaid sections, (who are now actual settlers,) is, to the best of my recollection, in this form:

Received of — the sum of —, in consideration for — section, — township, — range of townships in the Miami purchase; and I do oblige myself, my heirs, &c., so soon as Judge Symmes shall be invested with the fee thereof, under title from the United States, to make, or cause to be made, to the said — a good and sufficient title, in fee simple, for the aforesaid section of land.

CLAIMS ON THE LANDS CEDED BY NORTH CAROLINA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE MARCH 1, 1797.

Mr. HILLHOUSE, from the committee to which were referred the letter and enclosures from the Governor of North Carolina, relative to the extinguishment of the Indian title to lands granted to T. Glasgow & Co. by the State of North Carolina, the address of the Legislature of the State of Tennessee on the same subject, and also the petition of J. Glasgow and others, relative to lands entered in the office of John Armstrong, esq., and since ceded to the United States, reported:

That the State of North Carolina did, by a law passed on the 2d day of May, 1778, declare the western boundary, or line of said State, comprehending all the lands then claimed to have been ceded by the Indians or conquered from them, which line did not extend so far westwardly or into the Indian country as the present boundary line between the United States and the Indian tribes; declaring all past entries or surveys to be void, and prohibiting all future entries or surveys over and beyond said line, which was also recognized by a law passed the 13th of September, 1780. On the 17th of May, 1783, said State passed a law declaring it expedient to extend the western boundary of said State, and that the same was in and by said law extended to the Mississippi, including the lands in question, and opening a land office for entering and surveying the same for the discharge of certain debts of said State contracted during the late war; excepting from such entry and survey, certain tracts described in said act, and declared to be reserved for the Indians and other special purposes. The entries and surveys which have been made by the claimants on the lands in question, were under said act and an act of the 2d of June, 1784, but it does not appear that the Indian title to said lands has ever been extinguished. The treaty of Hopewell, between the United States and the Cherokee tribe of Indians, made on the 28th of November, 1785, established a line between the United States and said tribe, excluded a large portion of the lands which are claimed to have been entered and surveyed under said acts; at which treaty the agent of North Carolina attended and entered his protest against it as intrenching upon the rights of that State; this treaty was, however, agreed to, and ratified by the United States and said tribe, on the 21st of November, 1789. North Carolina acceded to the present constitution of the United States, and on the 22d of December following, passed an act ceding to the United States all her claim to territory lying west of a certain line, and including all the said lands; in which cession it is, among other things, made a condition, "that all entries made by or grants made to all and every person or persons whatsoever, agreeably to law, and within the limits thereby intended to be ceded to the United States, should have the same force and effect as if such cession had not been made; and that all and every right of occupancy and pre-emption, and every other right reserved by any act or acts to persons settled on and occupying lands within the limits of the lands hereby intended to be ceded as aforesaid, shall continue to be in full force, in the same manner as if the cession had not been made, and as conditions upon which the said lands are ceded to the United States; which cession was, by an act of Congress of the 2d of April, 1790, accepted. On the 2d of July, 1791, the treaty of Holston was made with the said Cherokee tribe of Indians; in which the present boundary line between the United States and the said Indian tribe was established, and all the lands lying beyond the said line secured thereby to the said tribe. It appears to the committee that whatever right the claimants have, can be no other than a pre-emptive right to said land, and only such of them as by conforming to the laws of the State of North Carolina, so as to have secured to themselves a title under such laws, and cannot claim of the United States any thing more than a confirmation of that title; and, therefore, recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That as soon as the Indian title to the said lands shall be extinguished under the authority of the United States, by purchase or otherwise, provision ought by law to be made to secure to such of the said claimants, as by conforming to the laws of North Carolina have secured to themselves a title to the right of pre-emption under such laws, the occupancy and possession of such lands.

NOTE.—For the papers referred to in this report, see Indian Affairs, No. 75, page 624.

2d SESSION.

CLAIMS TO LAND IN LUZERNE COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE MARCH 2, 1797.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, the petition of the subscribers, holders of land in the county of Luzerne, and State of Pennsylvania, respectfully represents:

That, by the charter of Charles II to the colony of Connecticut, that colony was bounded on the north by the Massachusetts colony, and extending from the Naraganset bay on the east to the South sea on the west, in longitude as the Massachusetts colony. That in the year 1753, a large number of persons, to the amount of six hundred and ninety, relying on the force of that charter, formed themselves into a company, under the name of the Susquehanna Company, who afterwards, by consent of the colony of Connecticut, purchased of the Indians assembled at a council fire at Albany, by a deed dated the 11th day of July, 1754, a large tract of land containing in breadth one degree of latitude, and in length extending from ten miles east of the Susquehanna river, one hundred and twenty miles west. That, in the year 1762, the company made settlements on the land, and ever since, although with some interruptions, have continued to hold and possess the same under the title of the then colony, now State of Connecticut; that the settlers before and during the late war were numerous, so that they furnished the continental army with three hundred men at one time, and they now exceed thirteen thousand persons.

Your petitioners would further represent, that the same lands were claimed by the successors of William Penn, as coming within the charter granted to him by Charles II, nineteen years posterior to the grant to the colony of Connecticut. The colony of Connecticut, however, maintained its jurisdiction, and the settlers were organized into a county, and represented in its Legislature, until the 30th day of December, 1782, when the jurisdiction of the purchase was decreed to be in the State of Pennsylvania, by a court of commissioners formed at Trenton, agreeably to the second clause of the ninth article of the confederation of the United States. That the State of Pennsylvania, soon after that decree, attempted to dispossess the settlers by military force, without a trial for the private right of soil. The Susquehanna Company had no right to a hearing before that court, nor could the settlers be implicated in that decree; but they applied to Congress for a court to be instituted to decide the private right of soil between them and the State of Pennsylvania, and the claimants under that State. That this application was opposed by Pennsylvania, and although once ordered by Congress, through various obstacles and delays which the applicants could not obviate, the court of commissioners never met. That the violence of the measures taken by the State of Pennsylvania prevented the settlers from becoming citizens of that State for several years, although they frequently offered to submit to their laws and jurisdiction, on condition that they might be guaranteed in the peaceable possession of their lands. That afterwards the Legislature of Pennsylvania embraced their offers, and on the 28th day of March, 1787, confirmed to the settlers the lands acquired by them previous to the decree before mentioned, and the inhabitants thereupon adopted the laws, and have ever since demeaned themselves as citizens of the State of Pennsylvania. That, in consequence of that law, many strangers came into that county and purchased the land thus confirmed to the original settlers, whereon great and valuable improvements have been made. That afterwards, on the 1st day of April 1790, the Legislature of Pennsylvania passed an act purporting the repeal of the confirming act aforesaid, by which means the dispute has been procrastinated to this time. The settlers and holders of land under that purchase, now find suits instituted against them before the circuit court for Pennsylvania district, and before the common law courts of the State of Pennsylvania. That the establishment of the new constitution of the United States has superseded the fair and impartial trial provided in such cases under the old confederation, and no law under the former has contemplated a trial by jury, where the whole of the citizens of a State are strongly interested in the suit. As the law now stands, the trials of our titles must be had in Pennsylvania, and the jury must be composed of its citizens. In this situation, those who are to decide on our rights, on the just decision of which depend the comforts and happiness of a numerous people, prejudiced against us as they are, we can have no expectation of that fair and impartial result, which would tend to reconcile us to that fate, which, if unfavorable, must prove our ruin. We, therefore, pray that Congress will take our peculiar circumstances into consideration, and provide us the means of having a trial by an impartial jury in some State which is not interested in the controversy, or in such manner as shall seem to you expedient. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

2d SESSION.

SOUTHERN AND WESTERN LIMITS OF GEORGIA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE MARCH 2, 1797.

Mr. Ross made the following report:

The committee to which were referred the resolutions of the Senate respecting the southern and western boundary of Georgia, having had the same under consideration, beg leave to submit the following report:

Georgia was created by charter from the King of Great Britain, dated in June, 1732, and originally bounded on the north by the northern stream of the River Savannah, on the south by the most southern stream (the Ocmulgee) of the Altamaha, and westward from the heads of the said rivers, respectively, to the South seas. It was intended as a frontier establishment, to strengthen and protect the settlements of South Carolina, and probably to form the southern and western boundary of that province. The country between the Altamaha and St. Mary's, being in dispute between Britain and Spain, was excluded from the Georgia charter.

In 1752, the charter of Georgia was surrendered to the Crown, which, from thenceforward, possessed exclusively over this, as well as over all other colonies which were Crown property, the power of enlarging or diminishing the boundaries of the province. By a proclamation, dated 7th of October, 1763, the lands lying between the Rivers Altamaha and St. Mary's were added to Georgia, and, by the same instrument, "all the lands and territories lying to the westward of the sources of the rivers which fall into the sea from the west and northwest are reserved under the sovereignty, protection, and dominion of the King," which would appear to have excluded and extinguished all jurisdiction in Georgia over the lands beyond the sources of these rivers, and to have vested it in the Crown. Like the country beyond the Ohio, the lands thus reserved west of Georgia, constituted a territory out of which new colonies might, from time to time, be erected. This opinion is fortified by the actual exercise of this species of jurisdiction by the Crown. It enlarged the government of West Florida, by extending its limits northward to a line drawn due east from the mouth of the River Yazoo to the Appalachicola, thereby adding more than a degree and a half in breadth to that province. This was not complained of in Georgia, nor was it considered as an encroachment; nor does it appear from any document that Georgia, before the revolution, ever claimed or exercised any jurisdiction to the westward of the sources of the Ocmulgee river.

The King of Great Britain having, previous to the independence of the United States, severed and annexed to West Florida that portion of the reserved territory which lies to the south of a parallel drawn due east from the mouth of the Yazoo to the Appalachicola, there can be no doubt that this territory did not revert to Georgia by our treaties with Great Britain and Spain, but now belongs to the United States. And, if the foregoing construction of the proclamation is just, Georgia can have no good title to the lands lying west of a line drawn from the head of St. Mary's river to the source of Ocmulgee, or west of the sources of the rivers which fall into the sea from the west and northwest. But, inasmuch as this boundary has never been ascertained, and, in its nature, must, in many places, be uncertain, and as the State of Georgia has claimed and exercised jurisdiction over a great portion of this territory, your committee are of opinion that an amicable and conciliatory plan of accommodating these adverse claims should be adopted by the United States; and for that purpose they recommend the following resolutions:

1. That the President of the United States be authorized to appoint three commissioners, who, or any two of whom, shall have full power to treat, adjust, and determine, with such commissioners as shall be appointed for that purpose by the State of Georgia, all interfering claims of the United States and Georgia to the lands lying west of a line drawn from the head of St. Mary's river to the source of the Ocmulgee, and west of the sources of the rivers which fall into the sea from the west and the northwest.

2. That the President of the United States be requested to take measures for ascertaining the number of inhabitants in this disputed territory, the places of their residence, and their right to the soil they now possess. And that he request from the State of Georgia its consent that a temporary government be established, under the authority of the United States over this territory, to continue no longer than the duration of the present dispute; and it is hereby declared that the assent of the State to this measure shall, in no respect, be construed so as to affect its title to the lands or the jurisdiction of the country.

3d. That, if the consent of Georgia shall be obtained for that purpose, the President is hereby authorized to establish a territorial government in the above described country, similar to that of the western territory, and to appoint all the necessary officers therein, whose commissions shall be in force until the end of the next session of Congress; and they shall respectively enjoy and receive the same compensations for their services as the present officers for the western territory are entitled to receive by law.

APPLICATION FOR LANDS AT REDUCED PRICE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 16, 1798.

Mr. GRISWOLD, from the committee to which was referred the memorial of John Spafford and others, made the following report:

That these memorialists request permission to purchase of the United States a tract of land in the Northwest Territory, on terms different from those prescribed by the law regulating the sale of the public lands. The committee are of opinion that the sale of lands of the United States can, with propriety, only be regulated by established rules prescribed by law; and if the mode of sale now adopted is defective or inconvenient, those defects can only be remedied by a revision of the law already in force.

The committee are likewise of opinion that no individual applications to the Legislature for the purchase of land can be admissible; and that the prayer of this petition ought not to be granted.

VIRGINIA MILITARY BOUNTY LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 23, 1798.

Mr. DWIGHT FOSTER, from the Committee of Claims, to which was referred the petitions of John Nelson, and of Susannah Russell, widow and administratrix of Charles Russell, deceased, made the following report:

That the object of these petitions is to obtain compensation for lands located under the laws of Virginia, before its deed of cession to the United States, in the part of the country ceded to the Indians by the treaty of Hopewell, in the year one thousand seven hundred and eighty-six.

This subject has repeatedly been presented to the view of the House. A report of Mr. Jefferson, when Secretary of State, upon the petition of John Rogers, an officer in the Virginia line, in the same situation with Mr. Nelson and Mr. Russell, stating the situation and merits of these claims, is subjoined. To that report the committee ask leave to refer; and, at the same time, they report, as their opinion, that the United States are not bound to satisfy these claims, or any others of the like kind.

February, 16, 1793.

The SECRETARY OF STATE, to whom was referred, by the House of Representatives of the United States, the petition of John Rogers, setting forth that, as an officer of the State of Virginia during the late war, he became entitled to two thousand acres of land on the northeast side of the Tennessee, at its confluence with the Ohio, and to two thousand four hundred acres in different parcels, between the same river and the Mississippi, all of them within the former limit of Virginia, which lands were allotted to him under an act of the Legislature of Virginia, before its deed of cession to the United States; that, by the treaty of Hopewell, in 1786, the part of the country comprehending those lands was ceded to the Chickasaw Indians, and praying compensation for the same, reports:

That the portion of country comprehending the said parcels of land has been ever understood to be claimed, and has certainly been used by the Chickasaw and Cherokee Indians for their hunting grounds; the Chickasaws holding exclusively from the Mississippi to the Tennessee, and extending their claims across that river, eastwardly, into the claims of the Cherokees, their contiguous neighbors.

That the Government of Virginia was so well apprised of the rights of the Chickasaws to a portion of country within the limit of that State, that about the year 1780 they instructed their agent, residing with the southern Indians, to avail himself of the first opportunity which should offer, to purchase the same from them; and that, therefore, any act of that Legislature, allotting those lands to their officers and soldiers, must probably have been passed on the supposition that a purchase of the Indian right would be made, which purchase, however, has never been made.

That, at the treaty of Hopewell, the true boundary between the United States on the one part, and the Cherokees and Chickasaws on the other, was examined into and acknowledged; and, by consent of all parties, the unsettled limits between the Cherokees and Chickasaws were at the same time ascertained, and in that part particularly were declared to be the high lands dividing the waters of the Cumberland and Tennessee, whereby the whole of the petitioner's locations were found to be in the Chickasaw country.

That the right of occupation of the Cherokees and Chickasaws, in this portion of country, having never been obtained by the United States, or those under whom they claim, it cannot be said to have been ceded by them at the treaty of Hopewell, but only recognized as belonging to the Chickasaws, and retained to them.

That the country south of the Ohio was formerly contested between the Six Nations and the southern Indians for hunting grounds.

That the Six Nations sold, for a valuable consideration, to the then Government, their right to that country, describing it as extending from the mouth of the Tennessee upwards. That no evidence can, at this time and place, be procured, as to the right of the southern Indians, that is to say, the Cherokees and Chickasaws, to the same country; but it is believed that they voluntarily withdrew their claims within the Cumberland river, retaining their right so far, which consequently could not be conveyed from them, or to us, by the act of the Six Nations, unless it be proved that the Six Nations had acquired a right to the country between the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers, by conquest over the Cherokees and Chickasaws, which, it is believed, cannot be proved.

That, therefore, the location of the petitioner must be considered as made within the Indian territory, and insusceptible of being reduced into his possession until the Indian right be purchased.

That this places him on the same footing with Charles

Russell and others, officers of the same State, who had located their bounty lands in like manner within the Chickasaw lines, whose case was laid before the House of Representatives of the United States at their last session, and remains undecided on; and that the same, and no other measure, should be dealt to this petitioner, which shall be provided for them.

THOMAS JEFFERSON.
Secretary of State.

January 22, 1792.

The SECRETARY OF STATE, to whom was referred, by the President of the United States, the letter of the Governor of Virginia, of January 7th, 1792, which, with the report of a committee of the House of Delegates of that Commonwealth, of December 12th, 1791, and resolution of the General Assembly thereon, of December 17th, on the case of Charles Russell, late an officer in the service of the said Commonwealth, stating that a considerable part of the tract of country allotted for the officers and soldiers, having fallen into the State of North Carolina, on the extension of their common boundary, the Legislature of the said State had, in 1781, passed an act, substituting in lieu thereof the tract of country between the said boundary and the Rivers Mississippi, Ohio, and Tennessee, and subjecting the same to the claims of their officers and soldiers; that the said Charles Russell had, in consequence thereof, directed warrants for two thousand six hundred and sixty-six and two-third acres of land, to be located within the said tract of country; but that the same belonging to the Chickasaws, he is unable to obtain a right thereto, and that there are other officers and soldiers of the said Commonwealth under like circumstances, reports:

That the tract of country before described is within the boundaries of the Chickasaw nation, as established by the treaty of Hopewell, the 10th day of January, 1786.

That the right of occupancy of the said lands, therefore, being vested in the said nation, the case of the said Charles Russell and other officers and soldiers of the said Commonwealth, becomes proper to be referred to the Legislature of the United States for their consideration.

PROGRESS OF SURVEYS NORTHWEST OF THE OHIO.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE MAY 3, 1798.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 2, 1798.

The SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY, in obedience to the order of the Senate, passed on the 17th day of April, 1798, respectfully submits the following report:

1st. In March, 1797, soon after an appropriation was made for defraying the expenses incident to the office of the surveyor general, instructions were issued to that officer to take measures for ascertaining the outlines of the lands to which the Indian titles were extinguished by the treaty of Greenville, in August, 1795. In consequence, an agreement was made for running the line from Fort Recovery to Loraine's Stone, and from thence to the Tuskarawas branch of the Muskingum river. Information has been received that the line from the Tuskarawas river to the point mentioned in the treaty near Loraine's Stone, has been actually run and marked, with only a deviation of about twenty-three chains, near the latter place. As the error has happened to be disadvantageous to the Indians, measures for correcting it have been recommended, especially if the Indians shall appear to be dissatisfied.

2d. No contracts have been yet made for surveying the lands below the Great Miami, or between the Scioto, and the purchase made by the Ohio Company, or the lands between the Connecticut claim and the seven ranges of townships surveyed under the ordinance of May 20th, 1785. Surveys in one or more of the above mentioned tracts are, however, expected to be commenced during the ensuing session.

3d. The tract allotted for satisfying the military land warrants, by the act passed on the 1st of June, 1796, entitled "An act for regulating the grants of land appropriated for military services, and for the Society of the United Brethren for propagating the gospel among the heathen, has been principally surveyed. It was expected that the surveys and returns would have been completed before this time.

The delay is to be attributed to the sickness of some of the surveyors, and to the severity of the last winter. Whenever it shall be ascertained that the surveys are finished, the notification required by the second section of the aforesaid act will be immediately published.

4th. The tracts granted to the Moravian Society at Schoenbrunn, Gnadenhutten, and Salem, have been surveyed, and the necessary returns made to the Department of State.

The Secretary respectfully suggests that inconveniences are experienced from the direction contained in the fifth section of the act of May 5, 1796, which requires that the time of commencing sales shall be previously notified for two months in all the States, and in the Northwestern Territory. If the law should be so modified as to authorize sales at certain stated periods it is believed that the good effects of the existing regulation would be secured, while, at the same time, the disadvantages, delay, and expense incident to repeated notifications would be avoided.

It appears necessary that the Senate should be informed that John Cleves Symmes, esq., has requested that a survey may be made, and a map furnished, of the remainder of a tract of one million of acres of land mentioned in a contract made with the Board of Treassury, and not included in the patents granted, pursuant to the acts passed on the 12th day of April, and the 5th day of May, 1793, and that notice has been given of an intention to make a tender at the Treasury under the said contract. No measures have been taken for effecting a survey as requested, nor has the proposed tender been yet made.

All which is respectfully submitted.

Secretary of the Treasury.

APPLICATIONS FOR LAND AT REDUCED PRICES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MAY 19, 1798.

Mr. GALLATIN, from the committee to which were referred the memorial of Hannibal William Dobbyn, and the petition of John Ellyson, made the following report:

That the petitioners respectively applied for a grant of lands in the Territory Northwest of the Ohio, upon terms different from those now provided by law.

That the committee being instructed to inquire generally whether any amendments are necessary in the law providing for the sale of the said lands, are of opinion, that it would be improper to alter the terms of sale in favor of any individual; but that any alterations that may be thought expedient ought to apply generally.

The committee, therefore, submit the following resolution, viz:

Resolved, That the prayer of the memorial of Hannibal William Dobbyn, and of the petition of John Ellyson, ought not to be granted.

SALES OF LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JUNE 13, 1798.

Mr. GALLATIN, from the committee appointed to inquire and report what progress has been made in the execution of the act "providing for the sale of the lands of the United States, in the Territory Northwest of the River Ohio, and above the mouth of the Kentucky river," and whether any and what amendments ought to be made therein; and particularly whether any alteration ought to be made in the rate at which the said lands may be sold under the said act; and also to inquire into the expediency of selling a certain tract extending along the Indian territorial line to actual settlers, made the following report:

That it appears by a letter of the Secretary of the Treasury, hereunto annexed, and to which the committee beg leave to refer, that forty-nine thousand nine hundred and ten and eleven one-hundredths acres, (part of the seven ranges of townships surveyed under the ordinance of Congress, passed on the 20th of May, 1785,) were sold at Pittsburg in sections and fractional parts of sections; that the whole amount of purchase money obtained for the same, was one hundred and twelve thousand one hundred and thirty-five dollars and forty-five cents; that of the above sales, five thousand three hundred and thirty-seven and a half acres, reverted to the public for failure of payment, leaving the amount of lands actually sold forty-three thousand five hundred and seventy-two and sixty-one hundredths acres, which produced (including five hundred and twelve dollars and ninety-six cents forfeited by the purchasers of the above mentioned five thousand three hundred and thirty-seven and a half acres) one hundred thousand six hundred and seventy-four dollars and twenty-one cents. That a quarter township, containing five thousand one hundred and twenty acres, was sold at Philadelphia at the rate of two dollars per acre, payable in funded stock, pursuant to the act passed on the 3d of March, 1797; and that the sections and quarter townships in the seven ranges have been repeatedly offered for sale without success.

It further appears that progress has been made in ascertaining the outlines of the lands to which the Indian title has been extinguished, and in surveying the tract allotted for satisfying military warrants, and that it may be expected that the whole will be completed, and that surveys of the lands designed for sale will be commenced during the course of the summer.

The committee are of opinion that, if it shall be found necessary to alter the terms on which the said lands may be sold, a plan may be better matured, and more correct information may be expected at the ensuing session of Congress than at present, nor would any alteration that might be adopted during this session operate until after the lands shall have been surveyed.

They, therefore, recommend that the further consideration of the alteration which may be necessary in the above mentioned act be postponed until the next session of Congress.

ALTERATIONS SUGGESTED IN RUNNING THE MERIDIAN LINES IN THE SURVEYS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JUNE 13, 1798.

Mr. GALLATIN, from the committee to which was referred the consideration of a letter of Rufus Putnam, surveyor general, suggesting the expediency of repealing that part of the law "providing for the sale of the lands of the United States in the Territory Northwest of the River Ohio, and above the mouth of Kentucky river," which requires that north and south lines, &c. shall be run according to the true meridian, made the following report:

That, in their opinion, it would be improper to repeal the part of the law above mentioned.

MARIETTA, March 10, 1798.

To the Honorable the Congress of the United States:

I conceive it my duty to inform Congress that I find it will be extremely inconvenient and embarrassing, if not altogether impracticable, for the deputy surveyors to run the north and south lines of townships, &c. according to the true meridian, as expressed in the act entitled "An act providing for the sale of the lands of the United States in the Territory Northwest of the River Ohio, and above the mouth of Kentucky river." That there is a difference in the variation of the magnetic needle from the true pole, in different places, and those at no great distance from each other, in the Northwest Territory, as well as other parts of the globe, is a fact well ascertained; so that a compass rectified or adjusted to the true meridian in one place, will not cut that meridian in all parts of the territory, or the tract of country to be surveyed. To be certain, therefore, that the north and south lines, in all instances, are run according to the true meridian, as the express words of the law require, it will be necessary to take very frequent observations, in order to discover whether you are running according to the true meridian or not. The following statement of facts will show that this is altogether impracticable.

From the exception in the aforesaid act in certain cases of running according to the true meridian, I conceived myself not only allowed but required, that, in surveying all the lands from the seven ranges west to the Scioto river, the north and south lines should be run as near as possible parallel to the west boundary line of the seven ranges. Accordingly, I had all the compasses of the surveyors employed in the survey of the military tract rectified to one meridian, corresponding to the west boundary line of the seventh range. At the same time, in order to obtain the variation of the needle in different parts of the tract as far as practicable, and ascertain the practicability or impracticability of running the north and south lines of the townships in all cases according to the true meridian, two of the surveyors, on whose abilities I could depend, were instructed to ascertain the variation of the needle from the true meridian in various parts of their districts; but they both failed in the attempt, by reason of fogs, clouds, &c. Capt. Ludlow observes, "that for six weeks a view of the stars was intercepted by clouds in such a manner that he could not take an observation."

I was myself up the Muskingum last June, at the Moravian towns, and crossing the above Fort Lawrence, and in a whole month obtained but two observations. These facts I conceive prove that, should we attempt to run by the true meridian, it will be impossible to carry it through, in an uniform manner, and the lines will not correspond so well with each other as if we survey by the meridian adopted for the military tract, or any other uniform magnetic meridian. It may be objected that compasses differ from each other, and, therefore, there can be no certainty in trusting to a magnetic meridian. I answer, by adjusting all the instruments made use of to one meridian, the survey throughout will be uniform, except what shall arise from local attraction or variation, which would not be avoided by attempting to run according to the true meridian, unless observations were more frequently taken than there is any probability they can be in the ordinary course of surveying.

Besides, to ascertain the true meridian with such exactness as ought to be depended on, requires much care and attention in taking the observations, and ought to be made more than once in the same place, to justify the surveyor in governing himself thereby. And with respect to ascertaining hereafter any line which shall be run in the present day, it may be obtained by having the variation of the needle noted on the plan, with the date of the survey, as well as if the lines had been run according to the true meridian.

With the utmost deference, therefore, I beg leave to suggest, for the consideration of Congress, the expediency of repealing that part of the law which requires that north and south lines, &c. shall be run according to the true meridian; and to require instead thereof, that the surveyor general cause all instruments made use of in the surveys, to be adjusted to one meridian; that the variation of this meridian with the true meridian, in various parts of the territory, or tracts of land to be surveyed, be ascertained and noted on the plat of each township or district.

Which is humbly submitted by the Government's obedient servant,

RUFUS PUTNAM, S. G.

JONATHAN DRAYTON, Speaker.

2d SESSION.

GRANTS TO THE SETTLERS IN VINCENNES AND THE ILLINOIS COUNTRY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE DECEMBER 17, 1798.

MISSISSIPPI TERRITORY, March 18, 1798.

SIR: The resolution of the honorable Senate of the United States, enclosing copies of petitions from sundry inhabitants of the Northwestern Territory, and requesting the Governor thereof to report a correct and full statement of what had been done in pursuance of the resolves of Congress of the 20th of June, and 29th of August, and of the act of Congress of the 3d of March, 1791, came to my hand just before my leaving that Government, and in the absence of his excellency Arthur St. Clair, with whom the said resolution was left at my departure for this Territory.

All the proceedings of his excellency relative to land claims of the inhabitants in the several districts of the Mississippi, so far as they ever came to my knowledge, have been regularly transmitted to the Secretary of Congress, and the office of the Secretary of State, and the Governor will, no doubt, seasonably advertise the Senate of the same, with all further illustration necessary.

The claims of the inhabitants of Vincennes were by me specially attended to in the absence of the Governor, and my report bearing date the 30th of July, 1790, is now in the office of the Secretary of State, minutely detailing my proceedings at that time, and accompanied by a warrant of survey for all the land which I was authorized to confirm under the resolves of the 20th of June and 29th of August, 1788, to which I beg leave to refer the honorable Senate. With those papers is also an address made unto me by all the principal people of that country, expressing their high satisfaction for my attention to, and decision upon, their land claims, which I take liberty to mention, and oppose to the improper manner and matter of some of the petitions which you did me the honor to enclose, and also to add, that the donation tract, which is represented to embrace many of the old claims and improvements, was laid off, after inspection of the same, by some of the oldest and best informed inhabitants, and assurance given me that one old improvement only could fall within the same, which I agreed should be compensated elsewhere, and which has been done to the perfect satisfaction of the claimant.

The act of Congress of the 3d of March, 1791, which I presume was passed upon my representation, giving a discretionary power for further grants and confirmations of lands, I have exercised with such liberality as I was sometimes apprehensive might be construed into prodigality. From this act, and the example of the Governor, I have confirmed every "concession" of land not exceeding four hundred arpens that had been made on or before 1783, which has been presented unto me, and which was not an arrant forgery. I have, in proportion to actual expense made, and improvements, ordered to be surveyed all subsequent grants under any supposed authority, to the year 1791, with the indulgence of laying warrants for militia services upon the whole of any tract, a part of which only should have been confirmed in consequence of improvements, &c.

I have admitted real testimony in all due latitude to confirm titles where it has been pretended "concessions" have been lost, and even where no record of claim could be produced.

After a notice of years given to the inhabitants of Vincennes to furnish me with complete lists of heads of families, and the militia entitled to donation lands, I permitted an addition of sixty to the former, and fifty-nine to the militia, upon my going to the country in 1797. In fine, I have, to the very best of my abilities, endeavored to carry into execution the beneficent intentions of Congress to their very fullest extent; but the people, I have too much reason to believe, will not all be satisfied short of a grant of the whole country; and at the date last mentioned, they actually made unto me a petition that I would parcel out amongst them all the lands lying between two parallel lines running twelve leagues above and twelve below Vincennes, and lines at right angles with the same thirty leagues east, and forty west, which they said had been given unto them by the Indians, and with all which I have long since made the Secretary of State acquainted.

I enclose, sir, a copy of my last warrants of survey, which it was intended should be delayed until I had got the surveyor's returns. By those and former warrants, there have been confirmed unto the people claiming under France, England, and a court never authorized to make grants, about twenty two thousand five hundred and seventy-two acres.

The very liberal donations from Congress amount to one hundred and three thousand eight hundred acres, almost five times the first mentioned quantity.

If, sir, the Governor of the Northwestern Territory should not make a full and correct statement, &c. agreeably to the resolution of the honorable Senate, and the information contained in this letter or enclosure may be anywise in point, I request of you they may be made use of, or otherwise preserved for my order. Far removed from the records of the Northwestern Territory, where I pledge myself that a faithful journal of all proceedings of the Governor in the executive department, so far as has come to my knowledge, has always been kept, I have it not in my power to be more particular, and I assure you that my present engagements leave me very little time for retrospect.

I have the honor to be, with respectful esteem, your humble servant,

WINTHROP SARGENT.

SAMUEL A. OTIS, Esq.

VINCENNES, KNOX COUNTY,

October 23, 1797.

SIR: The Governor, it seems, permitted, in his instructions to you, that actual improvements, made before his visiting the country in 1795, might be covered by militia rights; and I have further to add that, where parts or portions have been confirmed by me, upon grants of the court since 1783, (in consequence of improvements,) claimants may be permitted to cover by militia rights, not, however, to extend their plantations beyond four hundred arpens; the residue must be laid in one tract, and the concerned consulted as to the situation; but it must not be carried to such a distance as to alarm or render uneasy the Indians, (and with due attention to this consideration, as it seems to be the wish of the concerned,) it may be taken across the White river, near to Derkus station; and although it is intended the militia should have good lands, yet such regard must be paid to the interests of the United States that this location shall not militate with further settlements that may be intended.

The tract to be divided by lot amongst the claimants. I herewith furnish you with a list of the names of persons entitled to lands, from being of the militia, as reported to me; also an additional number of names to my list of those entitled to the donation of four hundred acres, which was made out in the year 1790, and for which lands must be surveyed adjoining the former tract, of good quality, and so as to continue said tract of as regular form as may be; I add, also, a considerable list of lands to be surveyed by you for persons therein named, as appearing to me to have due claims. But, sir, you must consider it a part of your duty, as an officer of Government, to report to me, with the return of surveys, all errors of boundaries, and also of evidence to title, that shall come to your knowledge; for any tracts ordered to be surveyed, in consequence of deeds, on or before 1783, and which may happen to fall within the donation tract, you are to satisfy the persons, upon whose lands they may fall, by surveys elsewhere. The term acres must be considered arpens, excepting where it applies to donations, or is especially signified to be English measure. You are authorized to administer the necessary oaths of qualifications for chain carriers, &c., as also where it may be necessary to give you information of lines and boundaries proper to be known in making your surveys.

For your surveying fees, the establishment of Congress is a good general rule; but, in going a distance to survey a single tract, it cannot be sufficient; and for small town or out lots, there must be some agreement between you and those concerned, as no one rule can apply.

Messrs. Harlein and Dubois have asked permission to lay some militia rights upon the White and Embarras rivers, for the purpose of establishing ferries. A single right may be laid at each place, the public accommodation seeming to require it; a high road to be left in front of the same, and security must be given for keeping up the ferries as long as the public convenience may require them.

WINTHROP SARGENT.

ROBERT BUNTIN,

Four hundred arpens of land on the little river, joining Daniel Sullivan on the west, Francis Bosseron on the north, vacant lands on the east and south; sold him by Pierre Kerre and wife. Mr. Small has no deed for this, but, as it has been proved to Col. Sargent that this (in part) was an ancient concession, you are to satisfy the same with the usual quantity, that is, one hundred and sixty arpens.

It has been proved to Colonel Sargent that there was ancient possession upon this tract of one hundred and sixty arpens; this quantity, therefore, must be surveyed for Wyant.

The heirs of Joseph Tougas, six arpens of land in front and fifty deep, situated at the Terre Noire, bounded by Nicholas Barjaron on one side.

François Mallet, a piece of land at a place called the Fauxchenaille. You must endeavor to ascertain the old boundaries; the quantity must not, however, exceed one hundred and sixty arpens, but upon good proof it was originally more. A piece of land on the River Du Chi, and another at the Boise Jaune. No boundaries for those are mentioned; endeavor to govern yourself by the old ones; they must not, at any rate, exceed one hundred and sixty arpens each.

A piece of land containing, of two fields joining each other in the old Indian village, sixty toises on one side, and forty in the other, bounded in front by the street where Du Betz lives, and, on the rear, partly by the fields of Alebomane, and partly by that of Nisbreche; part of Samuel Bradley's lot on one side, and on the other the field of Saspacona and Nez du Carbin; sold by the Nez du Carbin to Pierre Gamelin. A piece of land, two arpens in front, in the prairie of the Grand Marais, and forty arpens deep, joining, on one side, lands now or late of Jean Baptiste Perrot, and vacant land on the other side.

John Savage, a piece of land, four arpens in front, and forty deep, lying on the mill run; bounded on the east by Bellow, and on the northwest and south by vacant lands.

Charles Chartres, four hundred acres of land upon the River Du Chi, to the east of Cardinal; bounded south by the river, and west by Louis; granted by the court of Vincennes to Jean Marie le Grand, 19th of February, 1781; by him transferred to Small, by Small to Chartiers, and mortgaged to Small for the purchase money; the original concession lost; the record in point apparently falsified, 1785 being changed to 1781. No survey to be made of this till proof of the early date be established—a forgery.

Jean d'Argilleure, called St. Pierre, a lot in Vincennes, twenty-five toises on one side, and twenty on the other, joining Pierre Gamelin on one side, a street on the other, the widow Bosseron on the third; granted by Lieutenant Ramsey to Jacques la Tremouille, 9th November, 1768.

Jacob Pea, one hundred and sixty acres of lands bought of Frederick Bergen, granted by the court in 1783, and on which he lived in 1795.

Benjamin Beckes claims four hundred arpens by a grant to Moses Carter, in the year 1780, and conveyed to him regularly. It seems this, or a part thereof, is within the donation tract; if so, it must be satisfied adjoining the same, or otherwise laid off agreeable to the expression of the concession.

The heirs of Francis Bosseron claim a piece of land, ten arpens by forty, one side to Vaudrey, the other to Lefevre, granted to Bosseron, by the court, in 1785. This has been well improved, and, in the year 1790, it was promised by Colonel Sargent, that, should it fall within the donation tract, he should receive an equal quantity adjoining the same: the survey to be made accordingly.

Four hundred acres of land on the River Du Chi, bounded on the west by Hainton, and on three other sides by vacant lands; granted originally to Thomas Jones. If this has fallen in the additional donation tract, the heirs must be satisfied by lands adjoining the same.

Michael Bronliett, a piece of land upon the northeast of Vincennes, on the Chemin du Glaize, joining Charles Villeneuve and Jacques Cardinal, occupied by permission from the court, in 1777, four arpens by forty.

The widow of Charles Villeneuve claims a grant from the court, in 1777, of one hundred and sixty arpens, about four miles east of Vincennes, and joining Brouillet upon the east. Depositions prove this, and it must be surveyed accordingly.

A claim is made for Joseph Chertier of four hundred acres of land; Chertier knows nothing thereof, but gave a quit claim, verbally, to John Westgall, for two arpens by forty, which was once irregularly given to him by Joseph Lerche, an old inhabitant. This land lies upon the south side of the Island road, and may be surveyed for Westgall, upon his producing regular conveyance thereof from Learché, who appears to have been entitled to the same.

Benjamin Beckes claims four hundred acres of land at the forks of the River Du Chi; the river upon the east, Asturgas on the west, vacant lands on south. This, by a grant from the court, January 22d, 1785: survey for him two hundred acres, English measure.

A piece of land, by purchase from François Mallet, lying on the Poplar Ridge, of four arpens by forty; granted by St. Ange, 1760.

Joshua Harbin; a piece of land on the River Du Chi, and the island Trace, of four arpens by forty, granted by the court, February 16th, 1785, to Bordelaux, by him to Vigo, and from Vigo to Harbin. This piece of land was given by St. Ange to Bordelaux, more than thirty years ago.

For John B. Delorie four arpens by forty, about ten arpens from the lowest concessions in the lower prairie. This from St. Ange to Antoine Mallet, and from Mallet to Deloire.

The heirs of Peter Cannoyer, ten lots, of twenty-five toises square each, situated east of Vincennes, a part of the old Indian lands, and a house and lot, one side to St. Louis street, the other to the Wabash; Vigo to one end, Marshall on the other.

Four arpens by forty, claimed by conveyances from Rouissant and Lemay. By the oath of Mr. Pierre Gamelin, it appears the same was granted upward of thirty years ago, and improved ever since.

Henry Vanderburgh, by a conveyance from the heirs of Jean Baptiste La Guard, four arpens by forty, lying on the front line of the donation allotted by St. Ange to La Guard, thirty-five years ago.

Tousaints Dubois, two arpens by forty, on the southwest by Pierre Carter, on the northeast by Jean Baptiste Oulette, by a concession from the court, 1783, to Pierre Kerre, and from Kerre to him.

Seven arpens by fifty, situated below the little rock on the Wabash, bounded on both sides by vacant lands, and granted in 1759, by St. Ange, to Marie Joseph Richard Widow Autire; by the heirs assigned to Pierre Gamelin, by Gamelin to Dubois and Vigo, and by Vigo to Dubois.

Four arpens by forty, at the rock, beginning on the Wabash, granted by the court to Pierre Gamelin, 1783, and assigned by him to Dubois.

Four arpens by forty, joining the aforesaid tract, granted by the court, 1783, to Pierre Gamelin, jr., and by him also assigned to Dubois.

Isaac Decker claims four hundred arpens on White river, under a concession from the court of June, 1784; from consideration of the improvements, the whole granted.

Joseph Decker claims four arpens by forty, on the north side of the Wabash, granted in 1780, to Hannah Dalton, and assigned to him from Val. Thom. Dalton, and wife Hannah.

Thomas Jones claims one and three-quarters of an arpent of land by forty deep, on the north side of the Wabash, by purchase from Du Charme, who purchased of Ruisissant, who purchased from Bosseron; Bosseron's grant believed to have been from St. Marie, 1772.

Henry Vanderburgh, two arpens by forty, in the lower prairie, purchased from old Louis Leveron, called Mettie. Mrs. Gremare obtained this from St. Marie, and sold to Levron, who sells to Vanderburgh.

Moses Decker claims four arpens by forty, on the north side of the Wabash; this, a grant from the court, in 1783, to Andre Robinson. Dalton assigns it to Decker, but there is no assignment to Dalton. It may be surveyed, but cannot be conveyed to Decker till this error is corrected.

Jean Baptiste Villray, four arpens by forty, on the River Embarras, joining Joseph Page on the south, by a grant from the court, of the 14th of March, 1782.

The heir of Mainard Arturgus, four hundred arpens in the forks of Du Chi, joining Moses Henry on one side, Benjamin Beckes on another, Johnson on another, and Countz on the other; by a grant from the court in 1785. From the state of improvements in 1791, and other causes, the whole of this is granted.

James Johnson, esquire, claims nine acres in front, (more or less,) and forty deep, situated on the fork road, bounded, in front, by Tousant Codere, and, on the other side, by vacant land; purchased from Perodo, who had it in right of his wife, sister to Denoyon, who received it from St. Ange more than thirty years ago.

Robert Mays claims four hundred acres by a grant from the court, in 1784, situated between the River Du Chi and White river, one side to Matsou south, north and east by vacant lands. From the state of improvement certified to me, you are to survey for this claim one hundred acres English measure.

John Small, four arpens by forty, granted by the court to Cardine, the 12th June, 1782, on Saw Mill run, joining Amelin. Cardine sold to Jones, and Jones to Martin, as appears from the testimony of Esquire Johnson and John Doret; and a bill of sale from Martin appears to Thomas Small, whose heir is John Small, the claimant.

Charles Thorn, by a grant from the court, 25th June, 1781, four arpens by forty; front on the Wabash, on the south and southwest by James Bourne, and on the north and northeast by John Beckey.

Michael Thorn, by a grant from the court of the 15th of May, 1783, claims four hundred arpens, which has fallen in the donation tract; the same to be satisfied where he now lives, provided it does not interfere with any legal claim.

Tobias Decker claims four hundred acres, settled upon by permission of the court, which he proves to have been given in 1785, and then, and before 1791, a number of fruit trees had been planted there, and several houses built; some two or more acres of corn planted, and other improvements. One hundred acres of land to be surveyed for him: he now lives upon the land.

Allen Ramsay, a case exactly like the former; living now upon his claim. One hundred acres thereof to be surveyed for him.

Jacques Coteau, by a grant of the court in 1782, at the black grounds on the Embarras, joining to Vilray, four hundred arpens.

Samuel Watkins, by a grant from the court, of 1782, four arpens by forty, on the other side the River Du Chi, joining the Cypress swamp.

William Hall claims four arpens by forty, a grant from the court, of 1780, on the Wabash; one side to Jabeo Ruland, another to Gabriel Le Grand.

William Hall claims four arpens by forty, by a court grant, of 1781, on the Wabash; one side to Louis Paine, another side to Thomas Hall.

Louis Paine, four arpens by forty, granted by the court, 1781, on the Wabash; joining William Hall on one side, and Depree on the other.

Thomas Hall, four arpens by forty, granted in 1781, on the Wabash; joining William Hall on one side, and Henry Cotton on another.

Robert Johnson claims four hundred and forty arpens on the River Du Chi, granted by the court to Felix Countz, December, 1783, assigned to Pierre Gamelin, 16th June, 1789, for four hundred arpens, and by him to Johnson. Four hundred arpens to be surveyed for Johnson.

Four arpens by forty, in the common, and at the end of Lafoe's tract; one side to Moses Henry, the other to vacant land, by a court grant, of 1783, to Henry Stophe, by him assigned to Ann Collins, widow of Moses Henry, now said Johnson's wife. If it should be in the tract reserved by Congress for the commons, it must not be surveyed.

Four arpens by forty, granted, in 1783, to Martin Leche, on the north side of Wabash, below the little village; one side to Martin Spetch, and the other to Henry Spetch, conveyed to the widow Ann Collins, now Johnson's wife.

R. Johnson also claims four arpens by forty, granted to Moses Henry in 1783; bounded northeast by Cardinal, southwest by Johnson, on the north side of Wabash. This to be surveyed and deeded to Moses Henry's heirs.

Barclay Hoche, four arpens by forty, north side of the Wabash, below the Little Prairie, by Dalton on one side, vacant lands on the other. Grant of the court in 1783.

John Rice Jones, four hundred arpens on the north side of the River Du Chi; one side to Countz, south by the said river, the two other sides by vacant lands. By assignment from Dalton, to whom the land was granted, December, 1783.

Four arpens by forty, on the north side of the Wabash, within a league of the village; granted by the court to Dalton, November, 1780, and assigned to Jones, by Dalton.

Thomas Mallet claims two grants from St. Ange, dated in 1760. One of them from St. Ange is four arpens by forty, on the River Du Chi, along the Island tract, and to be surveyed; the other not intelligible. If it can be explained, and should not exceed four arpens by forty, it may also be surveyed. Observe if warrants of survey have not been before entered for those tracts. It is believed the claims were exhibited to the governor.

Daniel Sullivan, four arpens by forty, on the banks of the Wabash, one side to Ruland, and another to William Hall; granted to John Bailey, in June, 1782, assigned to Sullivan.

John Askin, two arpens by forty, north side of the River Wabash, by purchase from Etienne St. Marie, who held under Joseph Rivet. Sold by decree of the court. Rivet purchased of Boisverd. Supposed to have been a part of Bosseron's grant.

Jacques Latramoux, four arpens by forty, at the end of the second concession; one side to Baptiste Dubois.

Angelique Racine, four arpens by forty, at the Big Hill, granted and allotted to her father, François Racine, upwards of thirty years ago, about three miles east of Vincennes.

John Small claims four hundred arpens between the Rivers Bosseron and Marie, on the west to Thomas Small, on the south and east by vacant land, on the north by Richard, granted in '85 by the court. Some small improvements are made to appear. Survey for him fifty acres English.

Thomas Small claims four hundred acres between the Rivers Bosseron and Marie; granted as the former; in the situation also of the former; survey also to satisfy the same, fifty acres. John Small appears the heir of Thomas.

Robert Buntin claims four hundred acres on the big hill, about three miles northeast of Vincennes, on the road leading to the lick, by purchase from Jacques Cardinal. By the oath of Esquire Ediline, it is proved that Cardinal had permission to take up this land, and that in 1782 and 1791, there were upon it twenty acres under good cultivation, to be satisfied by four hundred arpens.

Robert Johnson, four arpens by forty, in the common, at the end of the church land, by a court grant of 1783 to Moses Henry, and Ann, his wife, now the wife of Johnson. If in the tract reserved as commons by the United States, must not be surveyed.

Patrick Simpson claims four hundred acres by purchase from Racine, where he now lives. Seven acres and a half only seem to have been conveyed even by Racine to Simpson. This must be surveyed for Simpson.

The heirs of Paul Gamelin, four arpens by forty, granted in 1783 to Paul Gamelin, being part of a general division of a thirty-two acre tract, which was subdivided into four arpens for eight grantees; lying at the rock above Vincennes.

For the minor children of Antoine Danis, and Josete Naux, a tract of land on the White Oak level, about four miles from Vincennes, four arpens by forty, a grant from St. Ange. If this is out of the commons, it must be surveyed conformably to the ancient boundaries.

CINCINNATI, January 8, 1798.

The following you will be pleased to consider as a supplement to my warrants for survey in Knox county, bearing date the 23d of October, 1797:

For Abraham Decker, claiming four hundred arpens between the River Du Chi and White river, and joining to Benjamin Beckes, by a court grant of March the 20th, 1785, and some small improvements thereupon; the grant was to John Decker, his father, and assigned by Luke Decker, the heir at law, to the said Abraham; survey fifty acres.

For François Barraix, six arpens by forty, in the Cathalinette, one side to Dumais, and another to the common, granted by Lieut. Rumsey, July the 24th, 1768, to St. Perthuion, and by him assigned to the said Barraix; survey the same.

For Guiliam Page, four arpens by forty, on the River Embarras, joining on one side to Joseph Page, by a court grant of the 14th of March, 1782; survey the same.

For Joseph Page, four arpens by forty on the Embarras, joining Guiliam Page, by a court grant 14th March, 1782; survey the same.

For Laurance Bayadone, four arpens by forty, on the north side of the Wabash; one side to Ducharn, and another to Lamotte, and nearly opposite the fort, by purchase from the heirs of Jean Baptiste Racine, once commandant of Vincennes, and who improved the same twenty-five years past; survey the same.

For Joseph Lamotte, four arpens by forty, joining the above tract, by purchase from Racine's heirs also, and proved by him to have been cultivated as the former; survey the same.

For George Rogers Clerk, three hundred and twenty arpens on the north side of the Wabash, in the grand prairie of the little village, beginning on the river, by a court grant in the year 1781; survey the same.

For Antoine Marshall, two arpens by forty, on the west of the village, and joining the lower prairie, beginning on the Wabash and running back to the Cathalinette swamp, on the east to Andrew Montplesure, and on the west to William Page, by purchase from Andrew Coder, to whom it was assigned by the commandant Racine twenty years past; survey the same.

Guiliam Page, two arpens by forty, joining the lower prairie, beginning on the Wabash, and running back to the Cathalinette swamp; one side to Coder, another to vacant lands, granted to him by the commandant, Mr. St. Marie; survey the same.

Laurent Bayadone, one lot in town, twelve toises by twenty-five, joining Cardinal on one side, and Dubois on the other, by purchase from Turner Vachet, who held from Andrew St. Dezier, who possessed by exchange with Mr. Brouillette; to be surveyed, but the right of Brouillette must be determined before a deed will issue.

One other lot, twenty-five toises square, by purchase from Dubois, who purchased from Louis Browne in 1773, one side Bayadone's land, another to Bouche, and two others to streets; this also may be surveyed, but Browne's title must be ascertained before a deed can issue.

The heirs of Peter Barrackman, four hundred arpens on the waters of the River Du Chi, granted by the court the 10th of March, 1782, to John Cardine; by him sold to Saint Pierre, the curé of Illinois; and by him assigned to Elizabeth, the wife of Peter Barrackman; survey the same.

Also one other tract of four hundred arpens on the waters of the River Du Chi, granted by the court 10th of March, 1782, to Louis Cardine, by him assigned to St. Pierre, and by St. Pierre to Elizabeth, the wife of Peter Barrackman; survey the same.

The heirs of Peter Barrackman claim, also, four hundred acres more upon the waters of the River Du Chi, adjoining the before named tracts, by a grant from the court, 10th of May, 1785. As there were early and considerable improvements on this tract, two hundred acres may be surveyed to satisfy the claim.

They claim, also, one lot in the back part of the town, twenty-five toises square, by a court grant of 1785, which is to be surveyed, the same having been considerably improved.

Peter Barrackman, jun., claims a lot joining the same granted also in 1785, upon which are considerable improvements. If it does not exceed the common size of the lots, it is to be surveyed.

Phillip Cott claims four hundred arpens taken up by permission, and an order of court for survey of the same in 1785, in favor of Christian Holk, from whom he has purchased some small improvements, were early made upon this place; therefore, fifty acres may be surveyed to satisfy the same.

Robert Day claims a lot, in the rear of Vincennes, twenty-five toises square, in virtue of a court grant of 1785. If there are improvements upon this lot it may be surveyed.

William Howell claims a lot, under the same authority as the former, of twenty-five toises.

Jacob Howell claims a lot of twenty-five toises, situated and circumstanced as William Howell's; they may both be surveyed if they have been improved.

Nicholas Chappard, two arpens on the Wabash, south of the village, and running back to the Cathalinette swamp, one side to Lalemere, by an old grant from St. Marie; survey the same.

Isaac Miner, four arpens by forty on the north side of the Wabash, at the little village, by a grant of the court, in December, 1783, to Henry Spoch, conveyed by him through his attorney, Antoine Gamelin, to Ann Collins, widow of Moses Henry, and now the wife of Robert Johnson, and by Robert Johnson to said Miner; survey the same.

Antoine Lalemere, two arpens by forty, joining Chappard's tract, and running back to the Cathalinette, by an old grant from St. Marie; survey the same.

Daniel Smith, four arpens by forty, at the Rock, by a court grant of 1783, to Bonday, and sold by him, through his attorney, Gamelin, to Levrie, and by him to Murphy, and by Murphy to the said Smith; survey the same.

Alexander Vallee claims four arpens by forty on the Wabash, below the rock, joining on one side to Latulippe, by a grant from the court, 1785. Some small improvements having been made, survey, to satisfy the claim, twenty-five acres.

Margaret Holon, widow of Antoine Marie, claims four arpens, by forty, on the Wabash, bounded on the southwest, to her husband, by a grant of 1785, from the court to her for services in interpreting the Indian language or tongue; unless some improvements can be proved, or the case be a most special one, it is not probable this claim can be granted.

The one other tract of similar quantity and adjoining, claimed by her as granted unto her husband, is exactly alike circumstanced.

John Day claims a lot of twenty-five toises square, back of the town, by a court grant of 1785, which is to be surveyed if it has been improved.

William Morrison, four arpens by forty, north side of the Wabash, at the little village, granted to Robert Jennings, in the year 1783, and by him assigned to Jones, and by him to the said Morrison; survey the same.

Joseph Baird claims three several tracts of four arpens by forty, each, said to have been granted by the court in 1783, to Nicholas Joseph and Alexis Edeline. Query, Were they then minors? were they capable of improving lands? or was the grant intended as an imposition? The court never possessed the right to make grants, and all confirmations, on or before 1783, (after Virginia had assumed the government,) must be passed to the account of generosity. It is a pity those claims were not before exhibited, and they must be better understood before they are confirmed.

Samuel Baird, one arpent by forty, on the north side of the Wabash; one side to Connoyer, and the other to Joseph Bresaïd, by purchase from St. Jean, called Dardart, who purchased from Louis Lemay 15th of October, 1787, Lemay's title to be proved previous to an order of survey.

Ann Dalton, wife of T. Dalton, four arpens by forty, on the north side of the Wabash, by a grant in 1783, (supposed to be a court grant,) and assigned by T. Dalton, 11th of May, 1784, to Adam Shoemaker, and by him to Daniel Barton, who is supposed to be the claimant if he has not forfeited by absence; it must be surveyed.

The heirs of Jean Baptiste Beaux Chein, one hundred and sixty arpens of land joining the donation; survey the same, agreeably to old boundaries, it appearing to have been very early with the family.

The heirs of Daniel Sullivan claim four arpens by forty in the River Du Chi prairie, where the station formerly stood. It appears from Mr. Decker's testimony that the written claim to this land is supposed to have been lost or mislaid, at the time Colonel Sargent formerly examined the claims at Vincennes. Every paper relating to the lands in that quarter, which was presented, has been recorded or entered; there were very many from Sullivan, but this is not in the number; there would be risk in ordering it to be surveyed for the heirs at this time.

George Cott, two arpens by forty, on the River Du Chi prairie, by concession of the Government, twenty-five years past to Francis Lamar, and who exchanged the same with Pierre Gramaud, who sold it to Luke Decker, from whom the said Cott purchased it; survey the same.

Lawrence Slouter, four arpens by forty, granted by the court in 1781, on the north side the Wabash; one side to Le Grand; survey the same.

Moses Decker, four hundred arpens between White river and Du Chi; although there appears to have been early improvements upon this tract, yet, as no authority is produced for entry or occupancy, it cannot be surveyed.

Abraham Decker, jun., four hundred arpens in the White river prairie, by a court grant of 1784, and adjoining to Isaac Decker. It being proved that there were considerable and early improvements upon this tract, two hundred acres must be surveyed to satisfy the claim.

Patrick Simson's claim of seven and a half arpens by forty, upon which he lives, being an old grant to Racine, from whose heirs he purchased it; you must survey it; and, if I mistake not, this, your application for the same, is a second, and this also my second warrant of survey for Simson's land.

This claim of Simson's is the last you have transmitted me, and, I trust, I am now through this disagreeable business. I have endeavored to do justice to the United States, and also to individuals, and to deal generously by them.

I suppose copies of the claims you have transmitted me are kept; upon those where I have observed silence a total rejection must be understood, and amongst them, for such as were in the donation tract, notwithstanding small improvements which may have been evidenced, it was out of my power to order the smallest compensation, though I did this, in one or two instances, at Vincennes, where I had so pledged myself previous to the order for laying off the tract as a matter of general accommodation.

In all cases, where I have conditionally ordered surveys, it will be necessary that you state to me with your returns that the conditions have been complied with: that is, that improvements are made where such are required, and that the claim of conveyance, &c., is produced to make titles complete.

I am, sir, your humble servant,
W. SARGENT.

5th CONGRESS.

No. 45.

2d SESSION.

GRANTS TO SETTLERS IN VINCENNES AND THE ILLINOIS COUNTRY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 21, 1799.

CINCINNATI, January 7, 1799.

SIR: I have the honor to return to you the paper referred to me by the Senate of the United States, and enclosed in your letter of the 6th March last, together with my report upon them; which I request you will be pleased to lay before the Senate. An accident prevented their coming to my hands so early as they ought to have done, or the report would not have been so late.

I have the honor to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

AR. ST. CLAIR.

SAMUEL A. OTIS, Esq., Secretary of the Senate.

CINCINNATI, January 7, 1799.

To the Senate of the United States:

In obedience to the resolution of the 6th of March last, the Governor of the Territory of the United States Northwest of the Ohio, on the papers referred to him, reports:

That, early in the year 1790, he proceeded to the Illinois country, in order to organize the Government in that quarter, and to carry into effect the resolutions of Congress, of the 20th June and 29th August, 1788.

That, in pursuance of the resolution of the 20th of June, the inhabitants were directed to exhibit their titles and claims to the lands they held and claimed, that they might be examined and confirmed. A great many claims and title deeds were accordingly exhibited, examined, and decided upon, and orders of survey, for such as were found authentic, were issued; which was necessary to be done before patents of confirmation could be made out.

That the several tracts of land ordered to be laid out near the villages in that country, and distributed in pieces of four hundred acres to the heads of families who had been residing there in the year 1783, were neither laid out nor distributed; because the inhabitants represented that, from the change of location, by the resolution of 29th August, they would be thrown into a part of the country entirely unfit for cultivation, and at such a distance from their settlements as to render them useless to them; circumstances which they supposed Congress had not been informed of, and were in the hope that they might be allowed to have them in some more advantageous situation. Their petition on that subject, together with a particular report of all the Governor's proceedings in that country, was delivered to the Secretary of State in 1791, and is in his office; and to that report the Governor begs leave to refer, as he has no copy of it at present within his reach.

That very few returns of the plots of surveys have as yet come into the office of the Secretary of the Treasury; few, indeed, had been made when the Governor returned to that country in the year 1795, owing, in some measure, to the incapacity of the person who had been appointed surveyor, (who was, however, the only person in the country who could run a single line,) and to the ignorance and poverty of the people.

That it became necessary to re-examine many of the claims, the act of the 3d March, 1791, having recognized, under certain restrictions, the grants of lands which had been made by the officers of the State of Virginia posterior to the cession of the country to the United States, and by the courts of justice who had assumed that power, all of which had been rejected. The Governor, therefore, returned to that country in 1795, and many claims were then brought forward which had not been presented before; and it is probable that there are others yet to be presented: for both the old rights and the court grants had become subjects of traffic, and scattered in different parts of the United States. A new surveyor was then appointed, and the warrants of survey unexecuted put into his hands.

That the act of 3d March, 1791, having repealed the resolution of the 28th August, 1788, so far as respected the location of the donations to the heads of families, the original location was restored, and they ought to have been laid out; but it was not done, because it was found that the lands near the villages, to the westward of the ridge of rocks, (which is better known by the name of the Mississippi bottom,) which was intended for them, was nearly all covered by old grants, and the people again petitioned for leave to lay them on other lands, as they have done several times since. Some of those petitions have passed through the hands of the Governor, and were by him transmitted to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, when the Congress were in session, and to the Secretary of State when they were not in session.

That few returns of surveys have come into the Secretary's office since the last appointment of a surveyor for the Illinois country; but the Governor is informed that some progress in the business has been made. The communication with that country is difficult and uncertain, and the surveyor would not trust his returns to casual opportunities; and the moment when he was ready to have come on with them, he was thrown from a horse, and his thigh broken, which confined him for a great length of time. He is expected at Cincinnati in the course of this month.

That there have been only twenty-one patents of confirmation issued, and according to the form herewith transmitted.

That the hostile disposition of the Indians in the year 1791, an attack having been actually made upon the settlement near Kahokia, at the time the Governor was there, and their declining to meet him at St. Vincennes, which had been proposed to them, convinced him that war was determined on by them; and, conceiving that they might be forestalled, he left the Illinois country, and hastened to the head quarters of General Harmer, to concert with him the plan of an expedition, which, should it be approved by the President, might disconcert him, and put the settlements in safety; and committed the execution of the resolutions, relative to the lands and people about St. Vincennes, to Mr. Secretary Sargent, on whom the powers of the Governor devolved in his absence; and he was instructed to consider him as absent as soon as he embarked upon the Mississippi, that his power might be competent. His proceedings were reported on the 31st July, 1790, to the President of the United States. The person, however, who had been appointed surveyor by him, left the country soon after, and little progress was made in the business, except that a tract of land for the donations to the heads of families was laid out. Another surveyor was appointed by the Governor in 1795, and was, by him, directed to lay off the donations of one hundred acres to the militia, as contiguous to the village of St. Vincennes as might be; and that, in case any of them were settled upon lands by a court grant which had been rejected, or without grant, to lay the donation on the lands they were settled upon, so as to cover their improvements.

That, within the tract of land at St. Vincennes, set apart to satisfy the donations to the heads of families, several parcels of land, claimed by the ancient inhabitants as concessions from commanding officers, as well as by court grants, had fallen, and the surveyor was directed to satisfy the claimants by other lands, which would have readily been accepted, in equal quantity.

That, in 1797, the Secretary being again at St. Vincennes, and few of the militia donations laid out, the surveyor was, by him, directed to lay the remainder in a body together on the south side of White river. The Indians have since, and very justly, complained of those surveys; and as the Governor had expressly forbidden any surveys to be made to the southward of that river, and did not know that the Secretary had authorized them, he supposed it had been the act of some private adventurers. He told the Indians that they had been made without authority, and would not be suffered to be occupied. The surveyor has been since at Cincinnati, and produced his authority from the Secretary. He was directed to inform the persons to whom they had been allotted, that they would all be vacated; but as the Governor had submitted the matter to the Secretary of State, he did not choose to give any definitive order until he should receive an answer from him.

That, by the act of 3d March, 1791, the Governor is empowered, where lands have been actually improved and cultivated under a supposed grant for the same, to confirm to the persons who made such improvements, their heirs, and assigns, the lands supposed to have been granted, or such part thereof, as he, in his discretion, may judge reasonable, not exceeding, to any one person, four hundred acres.

That the Governor had taken measures for ascertaining the nature of the improvements which had been made upon those lands; but, perceiving there would be great difficulty in exercising that discretionary power in a satisfactory manner, he had deferred it, and, in a conversation with the Secretary of State, in September, 1797, he stated the difficulties to him. In many cases there would be very small improvements, while the persons were equally deserving of the bounty of Congress as those who had made much larger, and, indeed, were objects of compassion: for, having been intercepted or driven off by the Indians, they had lost their time, and the benefit that would have accrued to them from their labor being bestowed upon the lands they had obtained; and many of them, from the dangerous and unsettled state of the country, were reduced to extreme poverty; while others, who had been able to continue their possession, were wealthy and had fine farms. Many lost their lives, and their widows and children have little left except their claim to that land which the loss of the husband or the father prevented the cultivation of. That it would be impossible for the Governor to do perfect justice; and, even if he could do justice strictly, he would not escape the charge of partiality, when exercising a discretionary power. That it was his opinion, it was not so much the nature or quantity of improvement which should be considered as the intention of the party in making it; and that wherever it could be made to appear that a person had obtained a grant, and began to improve the land, with the intention bona fide to make a settlement, that the whole quantity should be confirmed to him. The opinion of the Secretary coincided with that of the Governor, and he recommended it to him to proceed in that manner. In the mean time the Secretary of the Territory had returned to that country, and proceeded to allot the lands according to his discretion. Some rough minutes of his transactions are left in the office, but it is not easy to discover by what rule they were governed; in some cases four hundred acres are given, in some two hundred, and in some twenty-five acres; and in one, where the improvement was proved to have been worth eight hundred dollars, fifty acres. In the cases where the lands claimed fell within the donation tract, this short note appears: "In the donation tract, and cannot be confirmed." The people are extremely dissatisfied.

That a claim to certain lands near to St. Vincennes was, in the year 1795, presented to the Governor by Benjamin Reed, but the papers, which were the foundation of it, had been so injured by water that, in many parts, they were not legible. They appeared, however, to have been grants, but for what lands it was impossible to make out. But this much the Governor perfectly recollects, that, in no part of them, did it appear that they had ever been transferred to Reed; that he informed Reed that, from any thing that appeared, if the grants could be made out, the land mentioned in them could not be confirmed to him, but to the person named in them, his heirs, or assigns. But the Governor is persuaded that Reed never presented to him any claim as assignee of Bradley, assignee of Languedoc. The circumstance of the grant having been conditioned for the building of a saw mill, would have naturally led to an inquiry whether the condition had been performed; and there could have been no difficulty in ascertaining the fact; neither is there any in it now. If Languedoc obtained a grant from St. Marie on conditions, these conditions having been performed, he is entitled as an ancient inhabitant; and, if the chain of conveyance is perfect, Reed will come in under him. If the chain of conveyance is not perfect, either the heirs of Languedoc, or Bradley, as the case may be, will come in. The Governor presumes that, as the land has fallen within the donation tract, and of course has been allotted to another person, an equal quantity of land, in another place, would be readily accepted in lieu of it.

That the representations of the American inhabitants, and heads of families, are in general just; and, as a former part of this report applies to them, the Governor will not trouble the senate with a repetition.

That a very considerable number of people are settled upon the Scioto river, from its entrance, into the Ohio for more than sixty miles; but the principal settlement is in the upper part, eight or ten miles above and below Chillicothe. There are many families, likewise, upon the Ohio bank, from the Scioto upwards; and likewise below the Great Miami, and on the tract of land claimed by Judge Symmes, beyond what has been granted to him. It is believed their numbers together are upwards of two thousand, and the most of them express a desire to purchase when the lands shall be offered for sale; few of them, it is thought, will be found prepared to pay even for one hundred and sixty acres, at two dollars per acre. In Pennsylvania, under the proprietary Government, the people were indulged in taking up lands, in quantities not exceeding three hundred acres, on credit, at a moderate price, but paying interest for the whole purchase money, and both principal and interest remained a lien upon the land until the whole was paid up; neither could they obtain a patent until that was done. The lands were surveyed by the officers of the Government, at the expense of the applicants; valuable improvements soon followed; and, in time, both principal and interest were paid without inconvenience to any one. Whether such a mode of disposing of the lands in the Northwestern Territory would be eligible, the Governor will not take upon himself to say; but, as the money arising from the sales of those lands is appropriated to the payment of the public debt, though little money would be immediately received, an interest would accrue equal to the value of them, to meet a like sum of interest accruing on the debt. Besides, should it become necessary that those people, already so numerous, and daily increasing in number, should be removed, very considerable difficulty may attend it; and of that the Governor has long been aware, and has often represented it.

All which is respectfully submitted.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE DECEMBER 31, 1799.

UNITED STATES, December 31, 1799.

Gentlemen of the Senate:

I nominate Timothy Pickering, Secretary of State, Oliver Wolcott, Secretary of the Treasury, and Samuel Sitgreaves, esq., of Pennsylvania, to be commissioners to adjust and determine, with commissioners appointed under the legislative authority of the State of Georgia, all interfering claims of the United States and that

State, to territory situate west of the River Chattahoochee, north of the thirty-first degree of north latitude, and south of the cession made to the United States by South Carolina; and also to receive any proposals for the relinquishment or cession of the whole, or any part of the other territory claimed by the State of Georgia, and out of the ordinary jurisdiction thereof, according to the law of the United States, of the 7th of April, 1798.

REFUGEES FROM NOVA SCOTIA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 17, 1800.

The Secretary of War, and the Secretary and Comptroller of the Treasury, in pursuance of the act passed on the seventh day of April, 1798, entitled "An act for the relief of the refugees from the British provinces of Canada and Nova Scotia," respectfully submit to Congress the following special report on the claim of Seth Harding:

The following facts appear to be satisfactorily established:

1st. That the claimant removed from Norwich, in Connecticut, in the year 1771, to Liverpool, in Nova Scotia, and carried with him personal property of the value of about two thousand dollars.

2d. That he was for several years a member of the General Assembly; and in the year 1773 was appointed a justice of the peace, and one of the justices of the court of common pleas for Queen's county, in said province; that he lived in apparently easy and prosperous circumstances, on an income which is declared by the claimant to have amounted to about five hundred dollars per annum.

3d. That he privately retired from Nova Scotia in August, 1775, with an inconsiderable proportion of his property; that the residue left behind was sold at public auction by the commander of a British sloop of war, as the property of an enemy, and that no part thereof was afterwards recovered by the claimant.

4th. That the intention of the claimant, as declared at the time of his return to Connecticut, was, to engage actively on the side of this country, in the war which had then commenced with Great Britain.

5th. That the claimant, during the late war, commanded the brigantine Defence, equipped by the State of Connecticut; also, the States' ship Oliver Cromwell; and was afterwards promoted to command the United States' frigate Confidenciy: that, in every service, he was distinguished as a brave, enterprising, and successful commander, until the year 1781, when the Confidenciy was captured by a greatly superior force; and that the court of inquiry who investigated the causes of said capture, reported, that the conduct of the claimant had been proper and becoming his station.

6th. That, early in 1776, while he was commander of the brigantine Defence, the claimant captured three vessels, having on board a regiment of troops, five thousand stands of arms, besides supplies of ammunition, tents, and military clothing, which, at that time, were of essential importance to the public defence; that subsequently, other valuable prizes were made; and that, during the war, about eleven hundred soldiers and seamen were captured by vessels commanded by the claimant.

7th. That, owing to the depreciation of the public currency, the insolvency of prize agents, and other casualties, the claimant has, at no time, derived the emoluments which might have been reasonably expected as the result of his perseverance, bravery, and good fortune, as a naval commander.

8th. That the claimant is now in a state of poverty, unable, from age, to support himself by exertions of industry; and that the representation made by himself is believed to be true; namely, that he is indebted more than one thousand dollars, chiefly in consequence of sickness in his family.

Upon the facts before stated, and with reference to the scale of compensation established by the act of Congress above recited, we respectfully submit it as our opinion, that a grant ought to be made in favor of Seth Harding, of two thousand acres of land, to be located in such manner as Congress may please to prescribe.

All which is respectfully submitted by

JAMES MCHENRY, Secretary of War.

OLIVER WOLCOTT, Sec'y of the Treasury.

JOHN STEELE, Comptroller of the Treasury.

SALE OF LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 19, 1800.

Mr. HARRISON, from the committee appointed to inquire whether any and, if any, what alterations are necessary in the laws providing for the sale of the lands of the United States, northwest of the Ohio, made the following report:

That, upon inquiring into the situation of the salt springs and licks, the property of the United States, they have been informed, from respectable authorities, that those on the west side of the Scioto, on the east of the Muskingum, and one or two near the Great Miami, are now in the occupancy of a number of persons who are engaged in the making of salt to a very considerable extent; and that those persons, by a destructive waste of the timber in the neighborhood of the springs, are daily diminishing their value. The committee, therefore, think it advisable that measures should be immediately taken to secure to the United States the benefits arising from these springs, and, therefore, submit to the House the following resolution:

Resolved, That all the salt springs and licks, the property of the United States, in the Territory Northwest of the Ohio, ought to be leased for a term not less than ——— nor more than ——— years.

RENEWAL OF A MILITARY LAND WARRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 21, 1800.

Mr. DAVIS, from the committee to which was referred the petition of John Mountjoy, made the following report:

That it appears to the committee that the petitioner was a captain in the service of the United States, in the revolutionary war with Great Britain, and entitled to bounty land. It appears, also, by an extract from the office of the Secretary of War, that the land warrant of the petitioner was cut out of the book; a receipt, dated the 26th day of February, 1793, and not signed, was left in the office. The land warrant, No. 2,492.

The committee are of opinion that, in consequence of the neglect, or the misconduct of an officer in the War Office, no loss ought to fall on the innocent party.

Resolved, therefore, That the Secretary of War be directed to give to John Mountjoy, late a captain in the service of the United States, a land warrant, No. 2,492, for three hundred acres of bounty land.

CONFIRMATION OF AN INDIAN GRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 21, 1800.

Mr. HARRISON, from the committee appointed to inquire whether any and, if any, what alterations are necessary in the laws authorizing the sale of the lands of the United States northwest of the Ohio, and to which was referred the petition of Isaac Zane, have taken into consideration the said petition, and make thereon the following report:

That the petitioner states that he was made a prisoner by the Wyandot Indians, when an infant of nine years of age; with which nation he has ever since remained, having married an Indian woman, by whom he has many children; that his attachments to the white people have subjected him to numberless inconveniences and dangers during the almost continual wars which existed between the United States and the Indians until the peace of Greenville, in 1793.

That, previous to that period, a tract of land on which he now lives had been assigned to him by the Wyandot Indians, and that no idea was entertained, when that treaty was made, that the land which had been given him would fall within the boundary of the United States, (which now appears to be the case,) and, of consequence, that no provision was made in that treaty in his favor. All of which, the committee have reason to believe, is perfectly true; and it further appears from a certificate given by Governor St. Clair, the agent for Indian affairs in the Northwestern Territory, that, at a conference with the chiefs of the Wyandot nation, in the month of October, 1799, the said chiefs declared it to be the wish of their nation that a tract of land four miles square, at a place called the Big Bottom, on Mad river, a branch of the Great Miami, should be confirmed to the said Zane, this land having been set apart for him previous to the treaty of Greenville. Having taken these circumstances into consideration, and having been creditably informed that the petitioner has, in the course of the Indian war, rendered great and repeated services to the frontier settlements, by giving information to them of any hostile design meditated against them by the Indians, at the no small risk of his life; and having, as far as his power extended, protected and sustained the unfortunate persons who were occasionally carried into captivity; the committee have concluded that the petitioner ought to have confirmed to him a tract of land equal, in some degree, to the intentions of the Indians, and to the services rendered by the petitioner to the United States; they, therefore, recommend to the House the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That a committee be appointed to bring in a bill authorizing the President of the United States to convey, in fee simple, to Isaac Zane, two thousand five hundred and sixty acres of land, to be laid off in a square, two miles each way, at a place called the Big Bottom, on Mad river, a branch of the Great Miami river, and where the said Zane now lives.

CONNECTICUT WESTERN RESERVE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 21, 1800.

Mr. MARSHALL, from the committee to which was referred the consideration of the expediency of accepting, from the State of Connecticut, a cession of jurisdiction of the territory west of Pennsylvania, commonly called the Western Reserve of Connecticut, with directions to report by bill or otherwise, made the following report:

That, in the year 1606, on the 10th of April, James I, King of England, on the application of Sir Thomas Gates and others for a license to settle a colony in that part of America called Virginia, not possessed by any Christian prince or people, between the thirty-fourth and forty-fifth degrees of north latitude, granted them a charter. In order to facilitate the settlement of the country, and at the request of the adventurers, he divided it into two colonies. To the first colony, consisting of the citizens of London, he granted, "That they might begin their first plantation and habitation at any place on the said coast of Virginia or America, where they shall think fit and convenient, between the said four-and-thirty and one-and forty degrees of the said latitude; and they shall have all lands, &c., from the said first seat of their plantation, and habitation, by the space of fifty miles, of English statute measure, all along the said coast of Virginia and America, towards the west and southwest, as the coast lieth, with all the islands, within one hundred miles, directly over and against the same sea coast; and also all the lands, &c., from said place of their first plantation and habitation, for the space of fifty like English miles, all along the said coast of Virginia and America, towards the east and northeast, or towards the north, as the coast lieth, with all the islands, within one hundred miles, directly over and against the said sea coast; and also all the lands, &c., from the same fifty miles every way on the sea coast, directly into the main land, by the space of one hundred like English miles; and that no other subjects should be allowed to settle on the back of them, towards the main land, without written license from the council of the colony."

To the second colony, consisting of Thomas Hanham and others, of the town of Plymouth, King James granted the tract between the thirty-eighth and forty-fifth degrees of north latitude, under the same description as the aforesaid grant was made to the first colony. To these grants a consideration was annexed, that a plantation should not be made within one hundred miles of a prior plantation.

By the same charter, the King agreed that he would give and grant, by letters patent, to such persons, their heirs and assigns, as the council of each colony, or the most part of them, should nominate or assign, all the lands, tenements, and hereditaments, which should be within the precincts limited for each colony, to be holden of him, his heirs and successors, as for the manor of East Greenwich, in the county of Kent, in free and common socage only, and not in capite. And that such letters patent should be sufficient assurance from the patentees, so distributed and divided amongst the undertakers for the plantations of the several colonies, and such as should make their plantations in either of the said several colonies in such manner and form, and for such estates, as shall be ordered, and set down by the council of said colony, or the most part of them, respectively, within which the same lands, tenements, or hereditaments, shall lie or be; although express mention of the true yearly value or certainty of the premises, or any of them, or of any other gifts or grants, by the King, or any of his progenitors, or predecessors, to the guarantees was not made, or any statute, &c., to the contrary notwithstanding.

On the 23d of May, 1609, King James, on the application of the first colony for a further enlargement and explanation of the first grant, gave them a second charter, in which they were incorporated by the name of "The Treasurer and Company of Adventurers and Planters of the city of London, for the first colony of Virginia."

In this charter, the King grants to them all the lands, &c., in that part of America called Virginia, from the point of land called Cape or Point Comfort, all along the sea coast, to the northward, two hundred miles; and from the said Point of Cape Comfort, all along the sea coast, to the southward, two hundred miles; and all that space and circuit of land lying from the sea coast of the precinct aforesaid up into the main land throughout, from sea to sea, west and northwest; and also all the islands within one hundred miles along the coast of both seas of the precinct aforesaid.

On the 12th of March, 1611-12, on the representation that there were several islands without the foregoing grant, and contiguous to the coast of Virginia, and on the request of the said first colony for an enlargement of the former letters patent, as well for a more ample extent of their limits and territories into the seas adjoining to and upon the coast of Virginia, as for the better government of the said colony, King James granted them another charter. After reciting the description of the second grant, he then proceeds to give, grant, and confirm, to the Treasurer and Company of Adventurers and Planters of the city of London for the first colony of Virginia, and their heirs, &c., "all and singular those islands, whatsoever, situate and being in any part of the ocean, seas, bordering on the coast of our said first colony in Virginia, and being within three hundred leagues of any of the parts heretofore granted to the said Treasurer and Company in said former letters patent as aforesaid, and being within the one-and-fortieth and thirtieth degrees of northerly latitude, with all the lands, &c., both within the said tract of land on the main, and also within the said islands and seas adjoining, &c. Provided, always, That the said islands, or any premises herein mentioned, or by these presents intended or meant to be conveyed, be not actually possessed or inhabited by any other Christian prince or state; nor be within the bounds, limits, or territories, of the northern colony, heretofore by us granted, to be planted by divers of our loving subjects in the north part of Virginia.

On the 15th day of July, 1624, James I granted a commission for the government of Virginia, in which it is alleged that the charters to the Treasurer and Company of Adventurers and Planters of the city of London, for the first colony of Virginia, had been avoided upon a quo warranto brought, and a legal and judicial proceeding therein by due course of law.

On the 20th day of August, 1624, James granted another commission for the government of Virginia, in which it is alleged, "Whereupon we, entering into mature and deliberate consideration of the premises, did, by the advice of our lords of the privy council, resolve, by altering the charters of the said company, as to the point of government, wherein the same might be found defective, to settle such a course as might best secure the safety of the people there, and cause the said plantation to flourish; and yet, with the preservation of the interests of every planter and adventurer, so far forth as their present interests shall not prejudice the public plantations; but because the said Treasurer and Company did not submit their charters to be reformed, our proceedings therein were stayed for a time until, upon quo warranto brought, and a legal and judicial proceeding therein, by due course of law, the said charters were, and now are, and stand avoided."

On the 13th of May, 1625, Charles I, by his proclamation, after alleging that the letters patent to the colony of Virginia had been questioned in a legal course, and thereupon judicially repealed, and judged to be void, declares that the government of the colony of Virginia shall immediately depend on himself, and not be committed to any company or corporation.

From this time Virginia was considered a royal government, and it appears that the Kings of England, from time to time, granted commissions for the government of the same.

The right of making grants of lands was vested in and solely exercised by the Crown.

The colonies of Maryland, North and South Carolina, Georgia, and part of Pennsylvania, were erected by the Crown within the chartered limits of the first colony of Virginia.

When the King of France had dominions in North America, the land in question was included in the province of Louisiana, but no part of it was actually settled by any of his subjects. After the conquest of the French possessions in North America by Great Britain, this tract was ceded to the King of Great Britain, by the treaty of Paris, in 1763.

In the year 1774, the parliament of Great Britain passed an act, declaring and enacting, "That all the territories, islands, and countries, in North America, belonging to the Crown of Great Britain, bounded on the south by a line drawn from the Bay of Chaluers, along the high lands which divide the rivers that empty themselves into the River St. Lawrence, from those that fall into the sea, to a point in forty-five degrees of north latitude, on the eastern bank of the River Connecticut, keeping the same latitude directly west, through the Lake Champlain, until, in the same latitude, it meets the River St. Lawrence; from thence, up the eastern branch of said river, to the Lake Ontario; thence, through the Lake Ontario and the river commonly called Niagara; and thence, along by the eastern and southeastern bank of Lake Erie, following the bank until the same shall be intersected by the northern boundary, granted by the charter of the province of Pennsylvania, in case the same shall so be intersected; and from thence, along the said northern and western boundaries of said province, until the said western boundary strikes the Ohio. But in case the said bank of the said lake shall not be found to be so intersected, then, following the said bank, until it shall arrive at the point of the said bank, which shall be nearest to the northwestern angle of the said province of Pennsylvania; and thence, by a right line, to the said northwestern angle of said province; and thence, along the western boundary of said province, until it shall strike the River Ohio, and along the bank of the said river westward, to the banks of the Mississippi; and northward, to the southern boundary of the territory granted to the merchants, adventurers of England, trading to Hudson's bay; and, also, all such territories, islands, and countries which have, since the 10th of February, 1763, been made part of the government of Newfoundland, be, and they are hereby, during his majesty's pleasure, annexed to, and made part and parcel of, the province of Quebec, as created and established by the said Royal proclamation of the 7th of October, 1763.

“Provided, always, That nothing herein contained, relative to the boundary of the province of Quebec, shall in anywise affect the boundaries of any other colony.

“Provided, always, and be it enacted, That nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to make void, or to vary, or alter, any right, title, or possession, derived under any grant, conveyance, or otherwise howsoever of or to any lands within the said province or provinces thereto adjoining; but that the same shall be in force and have effect as if this act had never been made.”

In the year 1620, on the 3d of November, King James gave a charter to the second colony of Virginia. After reciting the grants made to the first colony of Virginia, and stating an application from the second colony for a further enlargement of privileges, he proceeded to declare “that the tract of land in America, between the fortieth and forty-eighth degrees of north latitude, from sea to sea, should be called New England; and for the planting and governing the same, he incorporated a council at Plymouth, in the county of Devon, and granted to them and their successors,” all that part of America, lying and being in breadth, from forty degrees of northerly latitude, from the equinoctial line, to forty-eight degrees of the said northerly latitude inclusively, and in length of, and within all the said breadth aforesaid, throughout all the main lands, from sea to sea, together with all the firm lands, &c., upon the main, and within the said islands and seas adjoining. Provided, The said islands, or any of the premises before mentioned, and intended by said charter to be granted, be not actually possessed or inhabited by any Christian prince or state, nor be within the bounds, limits, or territories of the southern colony, granted to be planted in the south part. King James, by said charter, commanded and authorized said council at Plymouth, or their successors, or the major part of them, to distribute and assign such portions of land to adventurers, &c., as they should think proper.

In the year 1628, 4th March, the council of Plymouth, pursuant to the authority vested in them by their charter, granted to Sir Henry Roswell, and others, a tract of land called Massachusetts; and King Charles I, on the 4th of March, 1629, confirmed the sale, and granted them a charter. After reciting the description of the grant to the council of Plymouth, and their grant to Sir Henry Roswell and others, he grants and confirms to them, all that part of New England in America, which lies and extends between a great river there, commonly called Morromack river, alias Merrimack river, and a certain other river there, called Charles river, being in the bottom of a certain bay, there called Massachusetts, alias Mattachusetts, alias Massacusetts bay; and, also, all and singular those lands and hereditaments whatsoever, lying within the space of three English miles, on the south part of the said river, called Charles river, or of any or every part thereof; and, also, all and singular the lands and hereditaments whatsoever, lying and being within the space of three English miles to the southward of the southernmost parts of the said bay, called Massachusetts, alias Mattachusetts, alias Massacusetts bay; and, also, all those lands and hereditaments whatsoever, which lie and be within the space of three English miles to the northward of the said river called Morromack, alias Merrimack; or to the northward of any and every part thereof; and all lands and hereditaments whatsoever, lying within the limits aforesaid, north and south, in latitude and in breadth, and in length and longitude of, and within all the breadth aforesaid, throughout the main lands there, from the Atlantic and Western sea and ocean, on the east part, to the South sea on the west part, with a proviso not to extend to lands possessed by a Christian prince, or within the limits of the southern colony.”

In the year 1631, on the 19th of March, the Earl of Warwick granted to Lord Say and Seal, and others, all that part of New England in America, which lies and extends itself from a river there called Narraganset river, the space of forty leagues, upon a straight line near the sea shore, towards the southwest, west, and by south or west, as the coast lieth towards Virginia, accounting three English miles to the league; and, also, all and singular the lands and hereditaments whatsoever, lying and being within the lands aforesaid, north and south, in latitude and in breadth, and in length and longitude of, and within all the breadth aforesaid, throughout the main lands there, from the Western ocean to the south sea, &c.; and, also, all the islands, lying in America, aforesaid in said seas, or either of them, on the western or eastern coasts, &c. The territory aforesaid having been in the year preceding, by the council of Plymouth, granted to said Earl of Warwick.

In 1635, the 7th of June, the council of Plymouth, after having made sundry other grants, surrendered their charter to the Crown.

In the year 1635, Lord Say and Seal, and other associates, appointed John Winthrop their governor and agent, to enter upon and take possession of their territory, which he accordingly did, and began a settlement near the mouth of Connecticut river. About the same time, a number of English colonists emigrated from the Massachusetts to the Connecticut river, and after having found themselves to be without the patent of that colony, formed into a political association by the name of the Colony of Connecticut, and purchased of Lord Say and Seal, and others, their grant from the Earl of Warwick, made in 1631; and, in 1661, petitioned King Charles II, setting forth their colonization, their adoption of a voluntary form of government, their grant from Lord Say and Seal, and others, and their acquisition by purchase and conquest, and praying him to give them a charter of government, agreeably to the system they had adopted, with power equal to those conferred on Massachusetts, or the lords and gentlemen whose jurisdiction right they had purchased, and to confirm the grant or patent which they had obtained as aforesaid, of the assigns of the Plymouth council, according to the tenor of a draft or instrument, which they say was ready to be tendered at his gracious order.

King Charles II, referring to the facts stated in the petition aforesaid, granted a charter, dated the 23d of April, 1662, in which he constituted and declared John Winthrop and others his associates, a body corporate and politic, by the name of the Governor and Company of the English Colony of Connecticut in New England, in America, with privileges and powers of government, and granted and confirmed to the said Governor and Company and their successors, all that part of his dominions in New England in America, bounded on the east by Narraganset river, commonly called Narraganset bay, where the said river falls into the sea; and on the north by the line of Massachusetts plantation, and on the south by the sea, and in longitude as the line of Massachusetts colony, running from east to west, that is to say, from the said Narraganset bay on the east, to the South sea, on the west, with the islands thereto adjoining; (which is the present charter of Connecticut.)

On the 23d of April, 1664, King Charles addressed a letter to the Governor and Company of Connecticut, in which, among other things, he speaks of having renewed their charter.

On the 12th of March, 1664, Charles II granted to James, Duke of York, “all that part of the main land in New England, beginning at a certain place called and known by the name of St. Croix, next adjoining to New Scotland, in America, and from thence extending along the sea coast, unto a place called Pennique, or Pennequid, and so up the river thereof unto the furthest head of the same, as it tendeth northward, and extending from thence unto the River Kennebeque, and upwards, by the shortest course, to the river called Canada, northward; and, also, all that island or islands called by the several name or names of Mattawacks, or Long Island, situate, lying, and being towards the west of Cape Cod and the Narragansets, abutting on the main lands, between the two rivers there called and known by the names of Connecticut and Hudson’s river; together, also, with the said river called Hudson’s river, and all the lands from the west side of Connecticut river to the east side of Delaware bay, and all the several islands, &c.

As the charter to the Duke of York covered part of the lands included in the charter of Connecticut, and as a part of the country had been settled by Christian nations prior to the charter of Connecticut, for which an exception had been made in the charter to the council of Plymouth, though not in that to Connecticut, a dispute arose between the Duke of York and the people of Connecticut, respecting the bounds of their respective grants. King Charles II having appointed Richard Nicholls and others commissioners to visit the New England colonies, with power to hear and determine all complaints and appeals, and proceed in all things for providing for and settling the peace of the said country.

On the 13th October, 1664, the General Assembly of the colony of Connecticut appointed agents to wait on said commissioners, which appointment was expressed in the following terms, to wit: Mr. Allen, &c., are desired to accompany the governor to New York to congratulate his majesty's honorable commissioners, and, if an opportunity offers itself, that they can issue the bounds between the Duke's patent and ours, (so as in their judgment may be for the satisfaction of the court,) they are empowered to attend the same, &c. Said commissioners undertook the settlement of said bounds, and on the 30th November, 1664, determined as follows:

"By virtue of his majesty's commission, we have heard the difference about the bounds of the patent granted to the Duke of York and the colony of Connecticut, and having considered the same, &c., we do declare and order, the southern bound of his majesty's colony is the sea, and that Long Island is to be under the government of his royal highness the Duke of York, as is expressed by plain words in said charters respectively; and, also, by virtue of his majesty's commission, and by consent of both the governors and gentlemen above named, we do also order and declare that the creek or river which is called Monoromock, which is reputed to be about twelve miles to the east of Westchester and a line to be drawn from the east point or side where the fresh water falls into the salt, at high-water mark, north northwest to the line of the Massachusetts, be the western bound of said colony of Connecticut, and all plantations lying westward of that creek and line so drawn shall be under his royal highness's government; and all plantations lying eastward of that creek and line to be under the government of Connecticut."

To this the commissioners from Connecticut subscribed in the following manner, viz.:

"We, the underwritten, on behalf of the colony of Connecticut, have assented unto the determination of his majesty's commissioners in relation to the bounds and limits of his royal highness the Duke's patent and the patent of Connecticut."

This was a settlement of boundary between the interfering charter of Connecticut and that to the Duke of York, as it respected the eastern extent of the latter.

New York being, in June, 1673, recovered by the Dutch, and their government revived, was, in 1674, ceded on a treaty of peace. The duke obtained a renewal of his patent, and claimed a re-settlement of the same, which was finally effected in 1730, when Biram river, the present line, was established.

Charles the Second, on the 4th day of March, 1681, granted to William Penn, the first proprietary and governor of Pennsylvania, all that tract or part of land in America, with the islands therein contained, as the same is bounded on the east by Delaware river, from twelve miles distance, northward of Newcastle town, unto the three-and-fortieth degree of northern latitude, if said river doth extend so far northward; but if the said river shall not extend so far northward, then, by the said river, so far as it doth extend, and from the head of the said river, the eastern bounds are to be determined by a meridian line, to be drawn from the head of said river, unto the said forty-third degree; the said land to extend westward five degrees in longitude, to be computed from the said eastern bounds; and the said lands to be bounded on the north by the beginning of the three-and-fortieth degree of northern latitude; and on the south by a circle drawn at twelve miles distance from Newcastle, northward and westward, unto the beginning of the fortieth degree of northern latitude; and then, by a straight line westward, to the limits of longitude above mentioned.

On the 27th of November, 1779, the Legislature of Pennsylvania vested the estate of the proprietaries in the Commonwealth.

The charter of Pennsylvania comprehended a part of the land included in the charter of Connecticut, viz.: between the forty-first and forty-second degrees of north latitude, in consequence of which a dispute arose respecting the right of soil and jurisdiction.

This dispute came to a final decision before a court of commissioners appointed pursuant to the articles of confederation, on the 30th day of December, 1782, when it was determined that the State of Connecticut had no right to the lands included in the charter of Pennsylvania; and that the State of Pennsylvania had the right of jurisdiction and pre-emption.

The State of Connecticut acquiesced in the decision aforesaid, respecting the lands claimed by Pennsylvania; and the court of commissioners having final jurisdiction, the claim of Connecticut respecting both soil and jurisdiction, is conclusively settled. But Connecticut did not abandon her claim to lands west of Pennsylvania; and at a General Assembly, holden at New Haven on the second Thursday of October, 1783, the following act was passed, viz.: "Whereas this State has the undoubted and exclusive right of jurisdiction and pre-emption to all the lands lying west of the western limits of the State of Pennsylvania, and east of the River Mississippi, and extending throughout from the latitude 41° to latitude 42° and 2' north, by virtue of the charter granted by King Charles the Second to the late colony, now State of Connecticut, bearing date the 23d day of April, A. D. 1662, which claim and title to make known, for the information of all, to the end that they may conform themselves thereto.

"Resolved, That his excellency the Governor be desired to issue his proclamation, declaring and asserting the right of this State to all the lands within the limits aforesaid; and strictly forbidding all persons to enter or settle thereon, without special license and authority first obtained from the General Assembly of this State."

Pursuant to this resolution, Governor Trumbull issued a proclamation bearing date the 15th day of November, 1783, making known the determination of the State to maintain their claim to said territory, and forbidding all persons to enter thereon, or settle within the limits of the same.

On the 29th of April, 1784, Congress adopted the following resolution:

Congress, by their resolution of September 6th, 1780, having thought it advisable to press upon the States having claims to the western country, a liberal surrender of a portion of their territorial claims; by that of the 10th of October in the same year, having fixed conditions to which the Union should be bound on receiving such cessions; and having again proposed the same subject to those States in their address of April the 18th, 1783, wherein, stating the national debt, and expressing their reliance for its discharge, on the prospect of vacant territory, in aid of other resources, they, for that purpose, as well as to obviate disagreeable controversies and confusions, included in the same recommendations a renewal of those of September 6th, and of October the 10th, 1780, which several recommendations have not yet been fully complied with.

Resolved, That the same subject be again presented to the said States; that they be urged to consider, that the war being now brought to a happy termination, by the personal services of our soldiers, the supplies of property by our citizens, and loans of money from them as well as foreigners, these several creditors have a right to expect that funds will be provided, on which they may rely for indemnification; that Congress still consider vacant territory as an important resource; and that, therefore, said States be earnestly pressed by immediate and liberal cessions to forward these necessary ends, and to promote the harmony of the Union.

The State of Connecticut, prior to the decree of Trenton, offered to make a cession of western territory, but under such restrictions that Congress refused to accept the same. In consequence of the above recommendation of Congress, the Legislature of Connecticut resumed the consideration of a cession of their western territory; and, at a General Assembly of the State, on the second Thursday of May, 1786, passed the following act:

"Be it enacted by the Governor, Council, and Representatives, in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, That the delegates of this State, or any two of them, who shall be attending the Congress of the United States, be, and they are hereby directed, authorized, and fully empowered, in the name and behalf of this State, to make, execute, and deliver, under their hands and seals, an ample deed of release and cession of all the right, title, interest, jurisdiction, and claim of the State of Connecticut, to certain western lands, beginning at the completion of the forty-first degree of north latitude, one hundred and twenty miles west of the western boundary line of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, as now claimed by said Commonwealth; and from thence by a line to be drawn north parallel to, and one hundred and twenty miles west of the said west line of Pennsylvania, and to continue north until it comes to 42° and 2' north latitude; whereby all the right, title, interest, jurisdiction, and claim of the State of Connecticut to the lands lying west of the said line, to be drawn, as aforementioned, one hundred and twenty miles west of the western boundary line of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, as now claimed by said Commonwealth, shall be included, released, and ceded to the United States in Congress assembled, for the common use and benefit of said States, Connecticut inclusive."

On the 26th of May, 1786, Congress resolved, "that Congress, in behalf of the United States, are ready to accept all the right, title, interest, jurisdiction, and claim of the State of Connecticut to certain western lands, beginning at the completion of the forty-first degree of north latitude, one hundred and twenty miles west of the western boundary line of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, as now claimed by said Commonwealth, and from thence, by a line to be drawn north parallel to, and one hundred and twenty miles west of the said west line of Pennsylvania, and to continue north until it comes to forty-two degrees two minutes north latitude, whenever the delegates of Connecticut shall be furnished with full powers, and shall execute a deed for that purpose."

On the 14th of September, 1786, the delegates from Connecticut executed a deed of cession agreeably to the above resolution, and it was resolved "that Congress accept the said deed of cession, and that the same be recorded and enrolled among the acts of the United States in Congress assembled."

The cession from Connecticut was accepted by Congress in the same manner and form as the cessions from Virginia, New York, and Massachusetts.

The Legislature of Connecticut, on the second Thursday of October, 1786, passed an act directing the survey of that part of their western territory not ceded to Congress, lying west of Pennsylvania, and east of the River Cayahoga, to which the Indian right had been extinguished; and by the same act, opened a land office for the sale thereof. Under this act, a part of said tract was sold.

The Legislature of Connecticut, in 1792, granted five hundred thousand acres of said territory, being the west part thereof, to certain citizens of the State, as a compensation for property burned and destroyed in the towns of New London, New Haven, Fairfield, and Norwalk, by the British troops in the war between the United States of America and Great Britain. Many transfers of parts of this land have been made for valuable considerations.

In May, 1795, the Legislature of Connecticut passed a resolve in the words following:

Resolved by the Assembly, That a committee be appointed to receive any proposals that may be made by any person or persons, whether inhabitants of the United States, or others, for the purchase of the lands belonging to this State lying west of the west line of Pennsylvania, as claimed by said State. And the said committee are hereby fully authorized and empowered, in the name and behalf of this State, to negotiate with any such person or persons, on the subject of any such proposals, and also to form and complete any contract or contracts for the sale of the said lands, and to make and execute, under their hands and seals, to the purchaser or purchasers, a deed or deeds, duly authenticated, quitting, in behalf of this State, all right, title, and interest, juridical and territorial, in and to said lands to him or them, and to his and their heirs forever.

"That before the executing of such deed or deeds, the purchaser or purchasers shall give their personal note or bond, payable to the treasurer of this State, for the purchase money, carrying an interest of six per centum per annum, payable annually, to commence from the date thereof, or from such future period, not exceeding two years from the date, as circumstances, in the opinion of the committee, may require, and as may be agreed on between them and the said purchaser or purchasers, with good and sufficient sureties, inhabitants of this State; or with a sufficient deposit of bank stock, or other stock of the United States, or the particular States; which note or bond shall be taken, payable at a period not more remote than five years from the date, or if by annual instalments, so that the last instalment be made payable within ten years from the date, either in specie, or six per cent., three per cent., or deferred stock of the United States, at the discretion of the committee.

"That if the said committee shall find that it will be most beneficial to the State or its citizens, to form several contracts for the sale of the said lands, they shall not consummate any of the said contracts apart by themselves, while the others lie in a train of negotiation only; but all the contracts, which, taken together, shall comprise the whole of the quantity of the said lands, shall be consummated together, and the purchasers shall hold their respective parts, or proportions, as tenants in common of the whole tract, or territory, and not in severalty.

"That the said committee, in whatever manner they shall find it best to sell the said lands, shall, in no case, be at liberty to sell the whole quantity for a principal sum less than one million of dollars in specie, with interest at six per cent. per annum from the time of such sale."

The Legislature, at the same time, appointed a committee to sell said lands, who advertised the same in various newspapers of the United States, and particularly in the Gazette of the United States published in Philadelphia.

Said committee sold said lands to sundry citizens of Connecticut, and of other States, for the sum of one million two hundred thousand dollars; and on the 9th day of September, 1795, executed to the several purchasers, deeds quitting to them and their heirs forever, all right, title, and interest, juridical and territorial of the State of Connecticut, to lands belonging to said State, lying west of the west line of Pennsylvania, as claimed by said State.

The Legislature of Connecticut have appropriated the money arising on the sale of the said lands, for the support of schools, and have pledged the annual interest as a perpetual fund for that purpose. The proprietors have paid the principal part of two years' interest to the State, making about the sum of one hundred thousand dollars.

The purchasers have surveyed into townships of five miles square, the whole of said tract lying east of the river Cayahoga, and to which the Indian right has been extinguished; they have made divisions thereof according to their respective proportions; commenced settlements in thirty-five of said townships; and there are actually settled therein about one thousand inhabitants. A number of mills have been built, and roads cut in various directions through said territory, to the extent of about seven hundred miles; numerous sales and transfers of the land have been made, and the proprietors, in addition to the payments of interest aforesaid, have already expended about the sum of eighty thousand dollars.

While the State of Connecticut was making a disposition of said territory, the following acts took place in the Government of the United States.

In the report of the Secretary of State, respecting the quantity and situation of the lands not claimed by the Indians, nor granted to, nor claimed by any of the citizens of the United States within the territory ceded to the United States by the State of North Carolina, and within the Territory of the United States Northwest of the River Ohio, are the following clauses:

Under the head of lands reserved by States in their deeds of cession, it is said, "that the tract of country presents itself from the completion of the forty-first degree to forty-second degree two minutes of north latitude, and extending to the Pennsylvania line before mentioned, one hundred and twenty miles westward, not mentioned in the deed of Connecticut, while all the country westward thereof was mentioned to be ceded; about two and a half millions of acres of this may perhaps be without the Indian lines before mentioned."

In the act of Congress passed May 18th, 1796, entitled "An act providing for the sale of the lands of the United States Northwest of the River Ohio, and above the mouth of the Kentucky river," is the following section:

SEC. 4. Be it further enacted, That whenever seven ranges of townships shall have been surveyed below the Great Miami, or between the Scioto river and the Ohio Company's purchase, or between the southern boundary of the Connecticut claims, and the ranges already laid off, beginning upon the Ohio river, and extending westwardly; and the plats thereof made and transmitted, in conformity to the provisions of this act, the said section of six hundred and forty acres (excluding those hereby reserved) shall be offered for sale at public vendue, under the direction of the Governor, or Secretary of the Western Territory, and the surveyor general; such of them as lie below the Great Miami, shall be sold at Cincinnati; those of them that lie between the Scioto and the Ohio Company's purchase, at Pittsburg; and those between the Connecticut claim and seven ranges at Pittsburg, &c.*

At a meeting of commissioners from sundry of the then colonies at Albany, on Tuesday the 9th of July, 1754, it was, among other things, agreed and resolved, as follows:

That his majesty's title to the northern continent of America appears to be founded on the discovery thereof first made, and the possession thereof first taken in 1497, under a commission from Henry VII, of England, to Sebastian Cabot. That the French have possessed themselves of several parts of this continent, which, by treaties have been ceded and confirmed to them.

* On the 21st January, 1799, Mr. Read, from a committee to which was referred a bill to accept a cession from Connecticut of the Western Reserve, made a report to the Senate, of which the preceding is a transcript.

That the right of the English to the whole sea coast from Georgia on the south, to the River St. Lawrence on the north, excepting the island of Cape Breton, and the islands in the Bay of St. Lawrence, remains indisputable.

That all the lands or countries westward from the Atlantic ocean to the South sea, between 48° and 34° north latitude, was expressly included in the grant of King Charles I to divers of his subjects, so long since as the year 1606, and afterwards confirmed in 1620, and under this grant the colony of Virginia claims extent as far west as the South sea; and the ancient colonies of the Massachusetts Bay and Connecticut were by their respective charters made to extend to the said South sea: so that not only the right of the sea coast, but to all the inland countries from sea to sea, has, at all times, been asserted by the Crown of England.

In 1751, some settlements were made from Connecticut on lands on the Susquehanna, about Wyoming, within the chartered limits of Pennsylvania, and also within the chartered limits claimed by Connecticut, which produced a letter from the Governor of Connecticut to the Governor of Pennsylvania of which the following is an extract:

WINDSOR, March 13, 1754.

“There being now no unappropriated lands with us, some of our inhabitants, hearing of this land at Susquehanna, and that it was north of the grant made to Mr. Penn and that to Virginia, are upon a design of making a purchase from the Indians, and hope to obtain a grant of it from the Crown. But Mr. Armstrong informs me that this land is certainly within Mr. Penn’s grant. If so, I don’t suppose our people had any purpose to quarrel with Pennsylvania. Indeed, I don’t know the mind of every private man, but I never heard our leading men express themselves so inclined.”

On the same day Lieutenant Governor Fitch wrote from Hartford a letter on the same subject, of which the following is an extract:

“I do well approve of the notice you take of the attempt some of the people of this colony are making, and the concern you manifest for the general peace, &c. I know nothing of any thing done by the Government to countenance such a procedure as you intimate, and, I conclude, is going on among some of our people. I shall, in all proper ways, use my interest to prevent every thing that may tend to prejudice the general good of these governments, and am inclined to believe that this wild scheme of our people will come to nothing, though I can’t certainly say.”

At a General Assembly for Connecticut, holden in May, 1755, the Susquehanna Company, as were styled those who were seating lands on that river west of New York, and within the boundaries claimed by Pennsylvania and Connecticut, presented a petition praying the assent of the Legislature to a petition to his majesty for a new colony within the chartered limits of Connecticut, and describing the lands lying west of New York; whereupon, the Assembly of Connecticut, after reciting the said petition, came to the following resolution:

Resolved by this Assembly, That they are of opinion that the peaceably and orderly erecting and carrying on some new and well regulated colony or plantation on the lands above mentioned would tend to fix and secure said Indian nations in allegiance to his majesty and friendship with his subjects; and accordingly hereby manifest their ready acquiescence therein, if it should be his majesty’s royal pleasure to grant said land to said petitioners, and thereon erect and settle a new colony in such form and under such regulations as might be consistent with his royal wisdom; and also take leave humbly to recommend the said petitioners to his royal favor in the premises.

On the 31st of August, 1779, an agreement was concluded between commissioners duly appointed for that purpose by the States of Virginia and Pennsylvania, respectively, whereby it was agreed “That the line commonly called Mason and Dixon’s line be extended due west five degrees of longitude, to be computed from the River Delaware, for the southern boundary of Pennsylvania; and that a meridian drawn from the western extremity thereof to the northern limits of the said States, respectively, be the western boundary of Pennsylvania forever;” which agreement was ratified and finally confirmed by the Legislature of Pennsylvania, by a resolution bearing date the 3d day of September, 1780, and by the State of Virginia on the — day of 1780. See Journals of Pennsylvania Assembly, vol. 1. page 519.

On the 6th day of June, 1788, Congress directed the geographer of the United States to ascertain the boundary line between the United States and the States of New York and Massachusetts, agreeably to the deeds of cession of the said States, and also directed that the meridian line between Lake Erie and the State of Pennsylvania being run, the land lying west of the said line, and between the State of Pennsylvania and Lake Erie, should be surveyed, and return thereof made to the Board of Treasury, who were authorized to make sale thereof.

The said land having been sold, in conformity with the above mentioned resolution, to the State of Pennsylvania, Congress, on the 3d of September, 1788, passed a resolution relinquishing and transferring all the right, title, and claim, of the United States to the government and jurisdiction of the said tract of land, to the State of Pennsylvania forever.

As the purchasers of the land commonly called the Connecticut Reserve hold their title under the State of Connecticut, they cannot submit to the Government established by the United States in the Northwestern Territory, without endangering their titles, and the jurisdiction of Connecticut could not be extended over them without much inconvenience. Finding themselves in this situation, they have applied to the Legislature of Connecticut to cede the jurisdiction of the said territory to the United States. In pursuance of such application, the Legislature of Connecticut, in the month of October, 1797, passed an act authorizing the Senators of the said State in Congress to execute a deed of release in behalf of said State to the United States of the jurisdiction of said territory.

The committee are of opinion that the cession of jurisdiction offered by the State of Connecticut ought to be accepted by the United States, on the terms and conditions specified in the bill which accompanies this report.

6th CONGRESS.

No. 52.

1st SESSION.

LAND CLAIMANTS IN THE MISSISSIPPI TERRITORY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES APRIL 2, 1800.

Mr. SEWALL, from the committee to which were referred the memorials of Thomas Burling and others, of John Collier and others, and of Cato West and others, made the following report:

On so much thereof as respects the uncertainties and interfering claims, to which the rights and locations of land in the Mississippi Territory are liable, and as to rewarding and encouraging actual settlers by allowances of land to be made to them in consideration of their improvements.

In considering this part of the subjects referred to them, the committee have thought it necessary to examine by whom, and in what manner, the general rights of soil and jurisdiction in the Mississippi Territory, have been heretofore claimed and exercised. They have particularly consulted, for this purpose, the report of the Attorney General to Congress, containing a collection of charters, treaties, and other documents, relative to, and explanatory of, the titles to the lands situate in the southwestern parts of the United States;* and a digest of the laws of the State of Georgia, lately published, and submit the following brief statement of the most material circumstances which have occurred to them in this inquiry.

A contest between England and Spain, respecting the boundaries of their territories in this part of America, commenced with the earliest settlements or colonies which the English attempted in Carolina, and the Spaniards in Florida. At that period, England claimed as far south as the twenty-ninth degree of north latitude.

* See No. 21.

Charles the First, in the fifth year of his reign, granted to Sir Robert Heath, Carolina Florida, lying from the River Matheo in the thirtieth degree, to the River Passa Mana, in the thirty-sixth degree of north latitude.

In 1663, Charles the Second granted the same country, with some small difference of boundary, that is, fixing its southern boundary as within one-and-thirty degrees of north latitude, to Lord Clarendon and others, called the lords proprietors, and established it as a province, by the name of Carolina: and a subsequent charter by the same prince, in 1664, confirming the last mentioned grant, extended it southwards to the twenty-ninth degree of north latitude, inclusive.

In 1670, by the seventh article of the treaty of peace, then concluded, between Great Britain and Spain, it was declared that the King of Great Britain should remain in possession of what he then possessed in the West Indies and America. It is understood, however, that the boundary between Florida and Carolina continued to be a subject of contest, and a disputed jurisdiction between those Powers.

In 1726, seven of the lords proprietors of Carolina (Lord Carteret retaining his share) relinquished, and surrendered to George the Second, then King of Great Britain, seven-eighth parts of the proprietary and their rights, under the two last mentioned charters; and this surrender was confirmed by act of Parliament. About this time, Carolina was divided into South and North Carolina: and after the surrender, a part of the latter province was assigned to Lord Carteret for his share in the original proprietary.

In 1732, George the Second granted and established within the boundary of South Carolina, the colony of Georgia, bounding it from the northern stream of a river called the Savannah, all along the sea coast to the southward, unto the most northern stream of a certain other river called the Altamaha, and westward from the head of the said rivers, respectively, in direct lines to the South seas. South Carolina, after the establishment of the province of Georgia, continued to claim and exercise jurisdiction over the territory lying to the southward of the Altamaha; and in 1753, particularly, the governor of South Carolina encouraged a settlement which had been commenced by one Grey, and his adherents, and granted them patents of land, in that territory.

In ———, the trustees for establishing the colony of Georgia surrendered their charter to George the Second; and in 1754, John Reynolds was appointed governor of Georgia, then constituted a royal province, by the same boundaries which had been given to the colony in the original charter. In 1763, by the treaty of peace concluded between Great Britain and Spain, his Catholic majesty ceded and guaranteed in full right to his Britannic majesty, Florida, with Fort St. Augustine, and the bay of Pensacola, as well as all that Spain possessed on the continent of North America, to the east or southeast of the River Mississippi. In the same year, the King of Great Britain, then possessing entirely the right and control of this part of America, established by his proclamation the provinces of East and West Florida. The northern boundary of the former was declared to be a line drawn from the junction of the Chattahoochee and Flint rivers to the source of Saint Mary's river, and by the course of that river to the Atlantic ocean. The northern boundary of West Florida was declared to be a line drawn due east from that part of the River Mississippi which lies in thirty-one degrees of northern latitude to the River Chattahoochee. By the same proclamation, all the lands lying between the Rivers Altamaha and St. Mary's were annexed to Georgia.

By letters patent dated in January, fourth year of King George the Third, James Wright, who is recited to have been appointed governor of Georgia, in the first year of George the Third, was again constituted governor of that province, of which the southern boundary was described to be "by the most southern stream of the River St. Mary, to the head thereof, and thence westward, as far as our territories extend, by the north boundary of East and West Florida."

In March, 1764, a representation was made by the board of trade to the King of Great Britain, that, upon the information of the governor of West Florida, the northern boundary of that province, as lately established, had been found by actual surveys to exclude some considerable settlements on the Mississippi, and the town of Mobile itself; and, therefore, it was recommended and proposed, that an instrument might pass under the great seal in like manner as was directed in the case of the extension of the south boundary of Georgia, declaring the province of West Florida to be bounded to the north by a line drawn from the mouth of the River Yazoo, where it unites with the Mississippi, due east to the River Appalachicola.

It appears that, by letters patent, dated 21st November, fourth year of King George the Third, George Johnstone, esq., was appointed governor of West Florida, bounded on the north by a line drawn due east from that part of the River Mississippi which lies in thirty-one degrees of north latitude, to the River Appalachicola: and that by other letters patent, dated 6th June, in the same year of the King, so much of the last mentioned commission to Governor Johnstone as related to the bounds and limits of the said province was revoked, and he was appointed governor of West Florida, bounded to the northward by a line drawn from the mouth of the River Yazoo, where it unites with the Mississippi, due east to the River Appalachicola.

In 1765, an act was passed by the Legislature of Georgia, confirming, on certain conditions, the grants which had been made by South Carolina to Grey and others, of certain lands lying south of the Altamaha.

It appears also that, by letters patent, dated in July, 1767, John Elliott was appointed governor of West Florida, comprehended within the limits and bounds which had been established by the commission granted to Governor Johnstone in June, 1764; and that the commission and instructions, which were issued to Peter Chester, esq., on the 2d of March, 1770, constituting him governor of West Florida, gave the same extent to his authority as had been given to Governor Elliot.

In 1777, the Natchez district, so called, described to be on the Mississippi, and to extend from Loftis cliffs up the river to the mouth of the Yazoo, being one hundred and ten miles, now a part of the Mississippi Territory, was purchased by the British superintendent of Indian affairs from the Choctaws.

In May, 1781, the province of West Florida was conquered by Spain. It appears that, from June, 1764, until this conquest, when this province was surrendered by Governor Chester, patents and locations of lands within the Mississippi Territory, were granted and made by the authority, and under the protection, of the British governor of West Florida.

In November, 1782, by the provisional articles of peace between the United States and his Britannic majesty, the southern boundary of the United States is determined to be a line to be drawn from the Mississippi, due east, in the northernmost part of the thirty-first degree of north latitude, to the Chattahoochee; thence to its junction with the Flint river, and thence to the head of the Saint Mary's river, and by that river to the ocean; thereby adopting and coinciding with the northern boundary of East and West Florida, as established by the proclamation of the King of Great Britain, 1763, and his commission to Governor Wright, as before mentioned.

In February, 1783, the State of Georgia, by an act, entitled "An act for opening the land office, and for other purposes," declared the southern boundary of that State to be, a line drawn from the Mississippi, in the latitude of thirty-one degrees, in a due east course to the River Chattahoochee; and in other respects according to the southern boundary of the United States, as settled by the provisional treaty before mentioned.

The definitive treaty between the United States and Great Britain, as concluded on the 3d September, 1783, confirmed the same southern boundary to the United States. The treaty of peace concluded on the same day, between Great Britain and Spain, declared an entire cession, in full right, of East and West Florida, to Spain; but without defining the boundaries of those provinces.

In February, 1785, the Legislature of Georgia established into a county, by the name of Bourbon, a district declared to be within that State, and described within the following lines, viz: Beginning at the mouth of the River Yazoo, where it empties itself into the River Mississippi, thence by a line to be drawn along the middle of the said River Mississippi, until it shall intersect the northernmost part of the thirty-first degree of north latitude; south by a line to be drawn due east from the termination of the line last mentioned in the latitude of thirty-one degrees north of the equator, as far as the lands reach which in that district have been at any time relinquished by the Indians; then, along the line of such relinquishments to the said River Yazoo; and thence, down the said river, to the beginning. By the same act, the said Legislature, considering it as not then proper to grant out the lands within the said district, declared, that whenever that measure should be determined on by any future Legislature, there should be a right of preference reserved to possessors of the said lands, who shall be citizens of the United States, or the subjects of any power that was friendly to the United States during the war: Provided, such persons do actually live on, and cultivate such lands, or a part thereof, and shall apply and present themselves on equal terms with other petitioners. It is also thereby enacted, that when it shall be determined on to grant the said lands, the price thereof shall not exceed one quarter of a dollar per acre. By the same act, certain persons therein named, and among whom the committee notice the names of several of the present petitioners, were appointed justices of the peace there, and provision was made for qualifying them upon such appointments; and the same justices, and any two of them, were authorized to administer to any inhabitant in said district, not proscribed by this or some other of the United States of America, the oath of allegiance to the State of Georgia; and persons who should be qualified by such oaths, were declared to be entitled to vote for and serve as members of Assembly or militia officers.

In March, 1785, a petition in behalf of South Carolina was preferred to the Congress of the United States, setting forth the difference and dispute which had arisen and then subsisted between that State and the State of Georgia, concerning their respective boundaries. By that petition, the State of South Carolina claimed, as within their charters, all the lands lying between a line to be drawn from the head of the River St. Mary, the head of Altamaha, the Mississippi and Florida; and because the State of Georgia contended for the same tract of country as a part of that State, it was prayed that Congress would proceed to have such dispute determined agreeably to the articles of confederation. Georgia was notified, appeared to her agents, and commissioners were appointed.

In 1787, this dispute of boundaries between Georgia and South Carolina was amicably concluded by their respective commissioners. By that convention the northern boundary of Georgia was distinctly ascertained, and it was agreed that the State of South Carolina should not thereafter claim any lands to the eastward, southward, southeastward, or west of the boundary then established; and South Carolina thereby relinquished and ceded to Georgia "all the right, title, and claim which the said State of South Carolina had to the government, sovereignty, and jurisdiction in and over the same; and also the right of pre-emption of the soil from the native Indians, and all other the estate, property, and claim which the State of South Carolina had in, or to, the said land.

In February, 1788, the Legislature of the State of Georgia authorized the delegates of that State in Congress, to cede to the United States all right, title, and claim, as well of soil as of jurisdiction, which that State had to that territory, or tract of country within the limits of Georgia, comprehended within these boundaries, viz., beginning at the middle of the River Chattahoochee or Appalachian, where it is intersected by the 31st degree of north latitude; and from thence, due north, one hundred and forty British statute miles; thence, due west, to the middle of the River Mississippi; thence down the middle of that river to where it intersects the 31st degree of north latitude; and thence along the said degree to the beginning, upon certain conditions recited in said act, to be performed on the part of the United States. By the same act the State of Georgia repealed the act before mentioned, establishing the county of Bourbon within that territory.

"A cession in the terms of the said act of the State of Georgia was accordingly proposed to Congress, and was by them rejected by their resolution of the 15th July, 1788, the terms of such cession being deemed inadmissible. Congress at the same time declared "that, in case the said State shall authorize her delegates in Congress to make a cession of all her territorial claims to lands west of the River Appalachian, or west of a meridian line running through or near the point where that river intersects the 31st degree of north latitude, and shall omit the last proviso in the said act, and shall so far vary the proviso respecting the sum of one hundred and seventy-one thousand four hundred and twenty-eight dollars and forty-five cents, expended in quieting and resisting the Indians, as that the said State shall have credit in the specie requisitions of Congress to the amount of her specie quotas in the past requisitions, and for the residue in her account with the United States for moneys loaned, Congress will accept the cession."

In a representation made to the court of Spain, on the subject of boundary, by the commissioners for the United States, on the 7th of December, 1793, it is stated that the southern boundary of Georgia was fixed by the proclamation of the King of Great Britain in 1763, at a time when no other Power had a claim to any part of the country through which it run, to begin in the Mississippi, in latitude 31° north, and running eastwardly to the Appalachian. A like representation was made in the course of the same negotiation, in August, 1795, and by the treaty which was concluded in that year between the United States and Spain, the southern boundary of the United States was finally agreed to be as it is described in the definitive treaty before mentioned between them and Great Britain. It appears that, after the acquisition of West Florida by Spain, the Spanish governor of that province granted patents and permitted locations of lands within the Mississippi Territory, until, and even subsequent to, the relinquishment of it by Spain, in his treaty with the United States.

The Legislature of the State of Georgia, by an act passed December 22d, 1789, in which it is recited that divers persons from the State of Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina, had made application for the purchase of certain tracts and parcels of land, lying and bordering on the Tennessee, Tom or Donbigbee, Yazoo, and Mississippi rivers, within the State of Georgia, and had offered to engage to settle the same; and that a part of such territory had been already settled on behalf of some of the applicants under and by virtue of the act before mentioned for laying out and establishing the county of Bourbon, granted and engaged to reserve, as a pre-emption for certain companies, which are named in the said act, distinct tracts of the said territory for the term of two years thereafter and to be conveyed to them respectively, in case certain payments of money as a consideration of such grants should be made within that term.

In 1795, the Legislature of Georgia, by an act in which the territorial and jurisdictional rights of the said State, according to boundaries coinciding with the southern boundary of the United States are again recited and declared, granted and transferred for valuable considerations to several companies therein mentioned, all their vacant territory bordering westerly on the Mississippi river, in distinct tracts; and among the others, a tract comprehending a part of the Mississippi Territory. The valuable considerations to the amount of five hundred thousand dollars required by the said act to be paid for the said purchases, it is said, were actually paid into the treasury of the State of Georgia, and patents were made of the said tracts to the respective purchasers, by the then Governor of Georgia, pursuant to the same act.

A succeeding Legislature of the same State, by an act of the 13th February, 1796, declared the last mentioned act and all sales and proceedings by virtue thereof, to be utterly null and void for certain reasons therein set forth.

The committee have not been able to procure any documents relative to the claims of the petitioners or other inhabitants, for particular grants and locations of lands in the Mississippi Territory. Respecting these, the representations in the memorials are probably correct, some claimants will derive their titles, or supposed titles, under the authority of the British Government: while others claim under grants from the Spanish governor of West Florida, and others hold only by settlement and improvement. A list of the disputes known or apprehended to exist, exhibited to the committee by an agent for the petitioners, is herewith submitted.

From this view of the subject, it has appeared to the committee, that, besides the interfering claims between the United States and Georgia, to the soil and jurisdiction of this and the adjacent territory on the Mississippi, other interfering claims to parts of the soil of the same territory, and especially the claims in the Mississippi Territory represented by the petitioners, deserve the immediate attention of Congress.

The committee are, however, aware that Congress ought not to proceed to adjust, under the authority of the United States, any claims of the soil until the jurisdiction of this Territory shall be established in them, in full right, by the determinations or adjustment of the commissioners who have been mutually appointed by the United States and Georgia for this purpose. But considering that an adjustment to this effect will be probably accomplished at an early period between the United States and Georgia; that the petitioners and other claimants will require time to prepare the specifications and evidence of their respective claims; that the anticipation of a summary tribunal, to which the claimants may resort for a determination and adjustment of their numerous disputes, will afford them a desirable relief from their present anxieties and uncertainties; that actual settlers, under whatever jurisdiction they have proceeded, may reasonably expect to be quieted in their improvements, and that the value of what might remain of this territory to the United States, its population and improvement will be increased and promoted by a speedy determination on these subjects; the committee beg leave to recommend the following resolutions to be adopted by the House:

Resolved, That provision be made by law to enable the inhabitants of the Mississippi Territory, and all claimants of land there, to make, as soon as may be, to the Executive Department of the Government of the United States, full and distinct specifications of their respective claims; also to direct the mode of taking and certifying the evidence which shall be required to establish the same.

Resolved, That the President of the United States shall be authorized by law to appoint — commissioners, who shall have authority to inquire into, adjust, and determine, according to justice and equity, and by such rules as shall be prescribed to them by the Congress of the United States, all interfering claims and titles of land in the Mississippi Territory: Provided, That such commissioner shall not proceed herein until the jurisdiction of the said Territory shall be by a determination and adjustment of the interfering claims thereto, or by a cession from the State of Georgia, vested in full right in the United States.

Resolved, That provision be made by law to enable the President of the United States to confirm by letters patent, in the name and behalf of the United States, to the respective claimants who shall be entitled to all such rights and locations of land in the said Territory, as shall be awarded and adjudged to them by the said commissioners, and pursuant to such awards and judgments, which confirmation shall avail to the respective claimants, and shall be effectual against all interfering claims which shall have been determined by the said commissioners, upon the submission of the parties interested, and against all other claims which shall not be pursued in due course of law within — years after the awards and judgments of the said commissioners shall be published in the United States.

An enumeration of claims, as subjoined to a draft of a memorial transmitted to the committee by William Dunbar, Esq., late deputy surveyor under the said Government, in his own handwriting.

Enumeration of the various species of titles and claims of land now existing in the Mississippi Territory.

1. Lands granted by the British Government, and held in possession by their first proprietors, or their assigns, to the present time.

2. Lands granted by the British Government, by virtue of mandamus from the King, and which have never been actually occupied or improved by their proprietors or agents.

3. Lands granted by the British letters patent from the provincial governors of West Florida, containing certain conditions of improvement to be made within three years from the date of the grant, and forfeitable for failure of performances of said improvements; and which said lands have never been occupied or improved by their proprietors or their agents, who have not even resided in the country for many years past.

4. The last description of lands once improved in a small degree during the British Government, but afterwards abandoned for many years to the present time.

Before we come to enumerate Spanish grants, it is necessary to premise that the time granted by the treaty of peace for British subjects to sell, dispose of, convey, or settle their lands, was prolonged, by the indulgence of the Spanish Government, to an unusual length of time, which was made public by reiterated proclamations; and it was not until after the expiration of a period of three years added to the term allowed by the treaty of peace, that the Spanish Government commenced granting of lands, which had formerly belonged to British subjects, who paid no attention to the invitation frequently renewed of the Spanish governors of West Florida.

5. Spanish grants of lands which have always been vacant, under the British Government.

6. Spanish grants laid upon British titles by mandamus; the lands being now established into plantations by the Spanish grantee, but which were never occupied and improved by the British proprietor.

7. Spanish grants on lands formerly granted by letters patent from British governors, but which lands have never been occupied by the British patentee not residing in the country.

8. The last description of title, with this difference, that the British patentee, although he never occupied or improved the lands, was nevertheless a resident in another part of the colony, who, upon resisting this new grant of his lands, by petition to the Spanish Government, has been rejected upon the double principle of non-occupancy and failure of improvement, agreeably to the conditions of his British grant, as well as disobedience to the reiterated Spanish proclamations to the same effect.

Note.—Some of those original proprietors have always resided on the Spanish colony, and some of them in this Territory, and are supposed, in many cases, to have petitioned for, and received of, the Spanish Government compensations by new grants of lands for such of these as had been given to others.

9. Lands purchased at public sale, or otherwise, of the Spanish Government; which lands had been declared forfeited in consequence of an insurrection, or species of rebellion, in favor of the British during the siege of Pensacola, and some time after the Natchez had been surrendered by capitulation. Within the above description, are lands which had been granted by British mandamus, as also by patent from governors of West Florida.

10. Lands, for which warrants of survey had been obtained of the Spanish Government, surveyed, and plantations established long before the Spanish treaty, but by delay, through inattention, not patented until after the ratification of said treaty.

11. Lands, with the above described titles, with this difference, that the proprietors have neglected to complete their titles by taking out patents, now holding the Spanish warrant of survey, with plot and certificate of the district surveyor.

12. Lands for which Spanish warrants of survey were obtained before the ratification of the treaty; surveyed and patented after the treaty.

13. Lands of the last description, with this difference, that they have never been patented.

14. Warrants of survey and patent obtained since the treaty, but during the exercise of the Spanish jurisdiction, assented to by the representatives (then present) of the Government of the United States, viz. Commissioners Ellicott and Lieutenant Pope, as appears by an instrument of writing, containing a convention between the Spanish governor and people, ratified, approved, and guaranteed by Messrs. Ellicott and Pope.

15. Warrant of survey, with plot and certificate of the district surveyor, obtained since the treaty, but no patent.

16. Warrant of survey obtained before the treaty, and improvement, land not measured.

17. Warrant of survey obtained since the treaty, with improvement, including houses, crop, &c., but land not measured.

18. Warrant before the treaty, without improvement or measurement of land.

19. Warrant since the treaty, without improvement or measurement.

20. Improvement by occupancy, including houses, crop, &c. by verbal permission of the Spanish governor, with surveyor's certificate of the land being vacant at the time of taking possession.

21. Similar improvements to those last described, with residence, but without any authority by warrant, written or verbal.

22. Lesser improvements, by raising a small crop, but without residence.

23. To the above list may be added the claims of the New England Company purchasing from the State of Georgia,

CLAIMS ON THE LANDS CEDED BY NORTH CAROLINA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES APRIL 4, 1800.

Mr. PINCKNEY, from the committee to which was referred the petition of William Hill and others, made the following report:

That the limits of the State of North Carolina, which they claimed by charter, previous to the adoption of the Federal Constitution, were the Atlantic ocean on the east, the State of Virginia to the north, the River Mississippi on the west, and the State of South Carolina on the south; within which limits was comprehended a considerable tract of country occupied and used by the Indians for their residence and hunting grounds. That, in the month of November, 1777, the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina passed an act for establishing offices for receiving entries for claims for lands in the several counties within the State, whereby they authorized the granting of any land lying in any county within the State which had not been granted by the Crown of Great Britain nor the lords proprietors of Carolina, before the 4th day of July, 1776, or which had accrued or should accrue to the State by treaty or conquest. That, in the month of May, 1778, the General Assembly passed another act to amend the above mentioned act, and they did therein ascertain and declare the western boundary of the said State, describing a line which comprehended all the lands claimed at that time to have been ceded by the Indians, or conquered from them; which line did not extend so far westward as the present boundary line between the United States and the Indian tribes; and, by that law, all past entries or surveys which had been made over and beyond the said line were declared void; the money which had been received for them by the entry takers, including their own fees, was ordered to be refunded, and all future entries or surveys prohibited.

On the 17th of May, 1783, another law of the said State was passed, whereby the western boundary of the same was extended to the Mississippi, including all the lands within the limits of the State, and a land office was opened for entering and surveying the same, for the purpose of discharging certain debts contracted during the late war; excepting from such entry or survey a certain tract bounded and described in the said act, and declared to be reserved for the Indians, and certain other tracts reserved for special purposes.

That, in pursuance of the provisions of this act, and of an act passed in June, 1781, various entries and surveys were made of the lands in question. It appears, also, that, on the said 17th of May, 1783, another act of the Legislature was passed, whereby, after stating that "holding treaties and appointing agents to keep up a continual friendly intercourse with the Cherokee Indians might prevent future wars, and save expense of blood and treasure," provision was made for holding a treaty with the Indians and providing for the expense of such treaty, and of presents to be given to the Indians, in consideration of lands by them to be ceded to the State; but it does not appear that any such treaty was holden.

On the 28th day of November, 1785, the United States made the treaty of Hopewell with the Cherokees, and established a line between the United States and the said tribe, excluding a large portion of the lands which had been entered and surveyed by virtue of the said acts, at which treaty the agent of North Carolina attended and protested against it, as intruding upon the rights of that State; this treaty was, however, agreed to and ratified by the United States and the said tribe. On the 21st of November, 1789, North Carolina acceded to the constitution of the United States, and, on the 22d of December following, passed an act ceding to the United States all her western territory, including all the said lands; in which cession it is made a condition that "all entries made by, or grants made to, all and every person or persons whatsoever, agreeably to law, and within the limits thereby intended to be ceded to the United States, should have the same force and effect as if such cession had not been made, and that all and every right of occupancy and pre-emption, and every other right reserved by any act or acts to persons settled on and occupying lands within the limits of the lands hereby intended to be ceded as aforesaid, shall continue to be in full force, in the same manner as if the cession had not been made, and as conditions upon which the said lands are ceded to the United States." Which cession was, by an act of Congress passed April 2d, 1790, accepted.

On the 2d of July, 1791, the treaty of Holston was made with the Cherokee tribe of Indians, in which the present boundary line between the United States and the said Indian tribe was established, and all the lands lying beyond the said line secured thereby to the said tribe, whereby a considerable portion of the lands intended and surveyed by virtue of the said acts, and entered to have been secured to the proprietors, by the said deed of cession, is excluded.

The committee having, in compliance with the order of the House, examined and considered the above facts, are of opinion that provision should be made by law, enabling the President of the United States to extinguish by treaty the title of the Indians to the lands, the title whereof was specifically reserved and secured by the above recited condition in the deed of cession of North Carolina, or to so much of the lands ceded by the said State as will be sufficient to satisfy the claims so reserved, by removal of the locations made under the authority of North Carolina. They, therefore, recommend the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the sum of _____ dollars ought to be appropriated by law to defray the expense of such treaty or treaties as the President of the United States may deem it expedient to hold with any nation or nations of Indians southwest of the River Ohio.

Resolved, That provision ought to be made by law, authorizing and enabling all persons who, under the laws of North Carolina, and in conformity to the regulations and provisions thereof, have entered, surveyed, located, or obtained grants of any of the lands ceded by the said State to the United States, in such manner as would have vested a good title under the said State of North Carolina, if such cession had not been made, to enter upon, occupy and possess the same, or to remove thereto their locations from such lands, the titles whereof shall not be extinguished, whenever and as soon as the Indian title or claim to a sufficient portion of the said land shall be extinguished under the authority of the United States, and to possess and enjoy the same in as full and ample a manner as if the same had been derived from or under the United States.

SETTLERS ON THE LANDS CEDED BY SOUTH CAROLINA ASK A RETROCESSION.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES APRIL 7, 1800.

Mr. HARPER made the following report:

The committee to which was referred the memorial of Matthew Patterson and sundry other persons, residing on the western borders of North and South Carolina, having taken into consideration the matter of the said memorial, and such information relative thereto as it has been in their power to obtain, beg leave to submit to the House the following report thereon:

Between the latitude thirty-five, which is the southern boundary claimed by North Carolina, and the northernmost boundary of Georgia, as settled by a convention between that State and South Carolina, in the year one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, there intervenes a tract of country supposed to be about twelve miles wide, from north to south, and extending in length from the top of the main ridge of mountains which divides the eastern from the western waters to the Mississippi. This tract, consequently, remained within the limits of South Carolina, and in the year one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, it was ceded by that State to the United States, who accepted the cession.

On the eastern extremity of this tract, immediately at the foot of the main ridge of mountains above mentioned, are situated the people whose case is now under consideration, and who appear to amount in number to about fifty families. It does not appear at what period they made the settlement, nor have they any title to the lands on which they have settled and made improvements. No such title, indeed, could have been created, as those lands remained within the boundaries of the Cherokees, till the last cession made by them to the United States. It appears that they are included in that cession, and have, thereby, become completely the property of the United States.

It does not appear that the lines which bound the tract of land in question and divide it from North Carolina, on one side, and Georgia on the other, have ever been established by public authority; but they have been so far ascertained, by private surveys of a very authentic nature, as to leave little doubt that the settlement in question is contained within that tract. On this point, and others relative to the subject in general, the committee beg leave to refer to the subjoined extract of a letter from General Pickens, of South Carolina, to one of its members. The high character of that gentleman, and his thorough acquaintance with the subject, leave no room to doubt the accuracy of his representations.

The relief prayed by the memorialists is twofold. First, to be placed under some Government; and, secondly, to have some confirmation of their right to the lands on which they have settled and made improvements.

As to the first, they represent that they prefer the Government of South Carolina, and lie much more contiguous to the settled parts of that than any other State. This the committee find to be the case. They are very remote from the settlements of Tennessee, equally so from those of North Carolina, and so near to South Carolina as to be able to attend one of its courts without great inconvenience. They, therefore, pray to be annexed to that State.

As they are at present wholly destitute of government, it appears to the committee that their request is reasonable, and ought to be complied with, since the settlement is far too inconsiderable and detached to warrant the establishment of a territorial government. This annexation may be effected by a cession of the jurisdiction to South Carolina, which, it is presumed, that State will readily accept. Such a measure the committee recommend.

As to the second point, the confirmation of title, the committee conceive that it would be inexpedient to make any direct confirmation of titles to land under such circumstances; and as the lands belonging to the United States, in that quarter, are too inconsiderable in value and extent to justify the adoption of a general system for the sale of them, a right of pre-emption to these settlers would be of little avail. To grant such a right, might, moreover, tend to the introduction of a principle which ought to be carefully avoided. The best expedient, as the committee conceive, would be to cede the right of soil, as well as of jurisdiction, to South Carolina; which State, should it accept the cession, will no doubt take proper measures for protecting the claims of these people, so far as they may be just and reasonable.

In conformity to this view of the subject, the committee beg leave to submit to the consideration of the House the following resolution, viz:

Resolved, That, for extending the benefits of civil government to the settlers on and near the head of French Broad River, it is expedient to cede to the State of South Carolina the right of soil and jurisdiction in, of, and to such part or parts of any lands which may be found to belong to the United States, contiguous to the western boundary of that State, as will include the lands at present occupied by the said settlers.

Extract of a letter from Major General Pickens, of South Carolina, to the Hon. Mr. Nott, Representative in Congress from that State, dated

JANUARY 1st, 1800.

"There is one other matter which I would wish to draw your attention to, which is the land on French Broad River, which was purchased from the Cherokees, at a treaty held in 1798, by George Walton and Colonel Butler, at Tellico, and the line run last summer by Captain Butler, as commissioner appointed by the President for that purpose. The land is settled by about forty-five or fifty families: they knowing it to be within the Indian claim, and within the ancient limits of this State, but ceded to the United States by this State some years ago.

"But before these people settled on the land, it was surveyed, and grants obtained for most parts of it from the State of North Carolina; and perhaps by men who paid little regard whether it was within the Indian claim or the limits of South Carolina. Those people live, I am convinced, south of the thirty-fifth degree of latitude. When I ran that part of the Indian boundary under the Holston treaty, made by Blount, the South Carolina Indian boundary was to extend N. E. to the North Carolina boundary. The boundary between North and South Carolina had not been extended, by authority, so far as where the northeast line from Toogso river would intersect. I sent the surveyor, Colonel Kirkpatrick, to the place where the commissioners under the British Government for running the boundary between the two provinces, now States, had stopped near Thigon mountain, and run with the compass due west. Two experiments were made, at different times, by different artists, near the intersection of the two lines which I had made, and both made the thirty-fifth degree near a mile north of where I made the junction of the Indian boundary. All which proves to me that those people live on the land which this State has ceded to the United States."

To the honorable the Speaker and other the members of the House of Representatives of the United States of America, the memorial of the undersigners humbly sheweth:

That your memorialists, the uppermost inhabitants near the head of French Broad river, consisting of about fifty families, live south of the thirty-fifth degree of north latitude, and, consequently, without the chartered limits of North Carolina and within the ancient limits of the State of South Carolina, though at present without the bounds of that State, since its cession by act of the Legislature thereof, passed on the 8th day of March, in the year 1787, to Congress, of all claim to the jurisdiction and territory of such part of the said State as lay west of the main ridge of mountains which divides the eastern from the western waters. Your memorialists further show that, by a line lately run by commissioners, under public authority, they are placed within the line of the United States, so run, and without the Indian claims; that the settlement is bounded north by North Carolina, south by South Carolina, and west by the Cherokee nation of Indians. Thus situated, detached from, and without the actual limits of any of the existing States in the Union, they are left unprotected and unguarded by any legal civil authority. Your memorialists, therefore, pray that their perilous and distressed situation may be taken into your most serious consideration, and that they may have relief extended to them, either by annexing to the State of South Carolina, as a part thereof, their before mentioned settlement, for the present, or to afford such other redress as the Federal Legislature, in their wisdom, shall think proper to grant. And your memorialists will ever pray.

MATTHEW PATTERSON, and others.

FRENCH BROAD, January 8, 1800.

CLAIMANTS UNDER JOHN CLEVES SYMMES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES APRIL 16, 1800.

Mr. BRUCE, from the committee to which were referred sundry petitions of persons residing in the North-western Territory, between the Great and Little Miami rivers, on the subject of Judge Symmes's purchase, made the following report:

That on the 15th of October, 1788, the late Board of Treasury, by virtue of resolutions of the 23d and 27th of July, and 23d of October, 1787, contracted with John Cleves Symmes, and his associates, for a grant of a tract of land lying in the western country, and bounded westwardly by the Great Miami; southwardly by the Ohio; eastwardly by a line beginning on the Ohio, at a post twenty miles distant, and above the mouth of the Great Miami, and extending from the said spot in a course parallel with the general course of the Great Miami; and northwardly by a line running due east and west, from the last mentioned line to the Great Miami, so as to include one million of acres; reserving, however, five lots out of each township contained in the said million of acres, and agreeing that the United States should cause the said tract to be surveyed, and the bounding lines of the same to be plainly marked; a plat thereof to be returned to the Board of Treasury, and a counterpart of the same to John Cleves Symmes. For which tract the said J. C. Symmes agreed to pay at the rate of two-thirds of a dollar per acre (an allowance of one-third of a dollar being made from the sum of one dollar per acre, for bad lands and incidental charges) for such quantity of land as should be found to be comprised in the said tract, after deducting the lots to be reserved as aforesaid. The sum of eighty-two thousand one hundred and ninety-eight dollars (one-seventh in military rights, and the residue in public securities of the United States) had been paid into the Treasury of the United States by the said Symmes, before the en- sealing of the contract, and the remainder was to be paid in the manner following, that is to say: the sum of eighty-two thousand one hundred and ninety-eight dollars within one month after the said plat should have been delivered, and the lines and boundaries of the said tract ascertained, as aforesaid, and the residue in six equal payments, to be respectively made at the expiration of six months, one year, eighteen months, two years, two years and a half, and three years, after the delivery of the said plat; the said payments to be made in gold or silver or securities of the United States: Provided, That if such payments, or any part thereof, were made in securities, only the principal sums therein specified should be applied to such payment, the said Symmes agreeing to take indents for the interest that might be due thereon prior to the completion of the plat aforesaid, and that the interest which might have accrued upon the same after the date of the completion of the said plat should be the property of the United States, without any allowance to the said Symmes for the same, and should be paid and allowed to the United States: And provided, also, That one equal seventh part of the said payments might be made in rights for bounties of lands, by rendering the same acre for acre, instead of gold or silver, or public securities. It was further agreed that the said John Cleves Symmes should, at his expense, within seven years after the delivery of the said plat, subdivide the whole of the same tract into townships and lots; that he should have a right to take immediate possession of a part of the same tract bounded on the River Ohio, including one hundred and twenty-three thousand two hundred and ninety-seven acres; (still excepting the lots reserved, as aforesaid;) that, upon his making the payment of eighty-two thousand one hundred and ninety-eight dollars, specified to be made within one month after the delivery of the plat aforesaid, he should receive a conveyance in fee simple from the United States for two hundred and forty-six thousand five hundred and ninety-four acres, part of the said tract of land; and that, upon every remaining payment being made, he should receive a similar conveyance for a further proportionable part of the said tract.

By a resolution of Congress, passed the 12th of August, 1790, the Secretary of the Treasury was authorized to direct the making of any surveys that remained to be made, so as to comply, on the part of the United States, with the several contracts made with the late Board of Treasury for lands in the Western Territory; and, on the 20th of November, 1790, the late Secretary of the Treasury did accordingly commit to Mr. Israel Ludlow the making, amongst others, of the survey of the tract contracted for with Mr. Symmes; but, owing to a variety of incidents and disappointments, caused by the Indian war, and detailed in Mr. Ludlow's letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, dated the 6th of May, 1792, he had not been able, at that time, to complete the survey. But it appeared that the line intended for the eastern boundary of the survey, would cross several times the Little Miami, and interfere with the tract of land reserved by the State of Virginia; and, on the other hand, Mr. Symmes had taken possession of, and, in a great degree, sold a tract not included within the boundaries of his contract, and extending from the upper limit of the same to the Ohio up and along the said river, to the mouth of the Little Miami.

By an act of Congress, passed the 12th of April, 1792, the President of the United States was authorized, at the request of John Cleves Symmes, or his agent, to alter the contract above mentioned for the sale of a tract of land of one million of acres, in such manner that the said tract might extend from the mouth of the Great Miami to the mouth of the Little Miami, and be bounded by the River Ohio on the south, by the Great Miami on the west, by the Little Miami on the east, and by a parallel of latitude on the north, extending from the Great Miami to the Little Miami, so as to comprehend the proposed quantity of one million of acres; provided that the northern limits of the said tract shall not interfere with the boundary line established by the treaty at Fort Harmer, between the United States and the Indians, &c.

On the 11th of April, 1792, a petition was presented to Congress, signed "J. C. Symmes, by Jonathan Dayton, his agent, and one of his associates," stating that from the advanced price of certificates, resulted the impossibility of a strict fulfilment of the contract; and requesting that a title might be made to him for so much of the said land as had been already paid for, and that he might be indulged with terms as favorable as those granted to the Ohio Company.

And, by another act of Congress, passed the 5th of May, 1792, the President of the United States was authorized to grant, in fee simple, to John Cleves Symmes and his associates, 1st. As much land as the payments already made by them under their contract aforesaid would pay for, estimating the lands at two-thirds of a dollar per acre. 2d. One other tract of one hundred and six thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven acres, provided, that the said Symmes, his agents or associates, should pay, within six months, warrants which issued for army bounty rights, sufficient for that purpose, according to the provisions of the resolves of Congress of the 23d of July and 2d of October, 1787. And 3d. A township of six miles square, in trust, for the use of an academy.

The care of making the survey, in conformity to the act of Congress of the 12th of April, 1792, was, on the 25th of November ensuing, committed by the late Secretary of the Treasury to Mr. Israel Ludlow, and this last, by a letter dated 10th July, 1793, informed the Secretary that he had carried into effect, as far as practicable, his instructions, having completed the survey of the tract contained between the two Miami rivers, extending as far northwardly as the head of Little Miami, and had found that little more than five hundred thousand acres were included therein. The plat of the survey itself, as returned to the Treasury Department, and bearing date the 10th of January, 1794, is certified by Mr. Ludlow to have been made according to the said act of the 12th of April, 1792, and to contain five hundred and forty-three thousand nine hundred and fifty acres within the boundaries designated by that law. It does not appear that Mr. Ludlow was instructed by the Treasury Department to deliver the counterpart of that plat to Judge Symmes. But Mr. Ludlow informed the committee that, soon after the survey had been completed, and before the same was returned in the Treasury Department—that is to say, prior to the 10th of January, 1794—he gave information to said Symmes of the contents of that survey; and that afterwards, in the same year, and, he believes, before Mr. Symmes came to the city of Philadelphia in order to obtain his patent, and in order to assent to the alteration of the boundaries of the tract he had originally contracted for, he did give to the said John Cleves Symmes a copy of the plat of the said survey for his own private information.

On the 8th of June, 1793, Mr. Symmes, by a letter to the late Secretary of the Treasury, declared that he agreed to alter the contract in the manner proposed by the act of Congress of the 12th of April, 1792, and, on the 29th of September, 1794, he formally requested the President that the said contract should be altered so as to include only the tract mentioned in the act of the 12th of April, 1792, butted, bounded, and described, as in the said act was set forth; and, at the same time, he, for himself, his associates, and their heirs, remised, released, and quitted claim unto the United States, all right, title, interest, claim, and demand whatever, in and to so much of the lands contained and included within the bounds and limits described in the first contract, as is not contained, meant, and intended to be contained and included, within the bounds and limits designated by the above mentioned act of Congress of the 12th of April, 1792.

On the 30th of September, 1794, the President of the United States, by his letters patent, assented to the alteration; and, on the same day, in conformity to the act of Congress of the 5th of May, 1792, he also granted to the said Symmes and his associates, all that tract of land bounded on the south by the River Ohio; on the west by the Great Miami; on the east by the Little Miami; and on the north by a parallel of latitude, to be run from the Great Miami to the Little Miami, so as to comprehend three hundred and eleven thousand six hundred and eighty-two acres, reserving five lots out of each township contained in the said tract; and further declaring that one complete township of six miles square, to be located nearly in the centre of the tract thus granted, was granted, and should be holden in trust, for the sole purpose of erecting an academy, and endowing the same; the said parallel of latitude forming the boundary of the tract thus granted, to be run within five years, by the said Symmes, from certain points which shall have been ascertained by Israel Ludlow, on the two Miamis, according to the survey returned to the Treasury Department on the 24th of March, 1794.

The township conveyed for the purpose of erecting an academy, &c., must contain twenty-three thousand and forty acres, but has never yet been located and secured for the purposes intended; and part of the township originally designated for the purpose has been sold by Mr. Symmes to private individuals. The five lots reserved in each section were supposed to amount to five thirty-sixth parts of the whole grant, exclusively of the academy township. Deducting twenty-three thousand and forty acres from the three hundred and eleven thousand six hundred and eighty-two acres included in the grant, there remain two hundred and eighty-eight thousand six hundred and forty-two acres, five thirty-sixth parts of which (the supposed amount of reserved lots) are equal to forty thousand and eighty-nine acres, leaving the amount of land actually granted to Mr. Symmes and his associates equal to two hundred and forty-eight thousand five hundred and fifty-three acres. For this land they had paid in public securities seventy thousand four hundred and fifty-five dollars and thirty-eight ninetieths of a dollar, which, at two-thirds of a dollar per acre, paid for one hundred and five thousand six hundred and eighty-three acres. This quantity, deducted from the two hundred and forty-eight thousand five hundred and fifty-three acres granted, leaves one hundred and forty-two thousand one hundred and seventy acres, for which they were to pay in warrants granted for military bounties, made according to the terms of the original contract, acre for acre. They have paid, however, only ninety-five thousand two hundred and fifty acres in military bounties for the said one hundred and forty-two thousand eight hundred and seventy, leaving forty-seven thousand six hundred and twenty acres yet unpaid for, unless they shall be allowed, according to the settlement of the Treasury Department, to obtain one acre and a half of land for every acre of military bounties by them paid.

From the time when the boundaries of the tract originally contracted for were altered, as above mentioned, that is to say, from the 30th of September, 1794, to the present day, no further payments have been made by Mr. Symmes for the lands not included in his patent; and he seems to have insisted, notwithstanding the survey returned by Mr. Ludlow was executed in pursuance of the act of the 12th of April, 1792; and although when he did, as above mentioned, relinquish his claim to all the lands not contained within the limits designated by the said act, he knew the contents of that official survey which had been returned several months before, that he had never relinquished his claim to the original quantity of one million of acres; and that he was not bound to make any further payments until a survey, containing that quantity, had been executed under the authority of the United States.

Congress considering, it seems, his claim as forfeited on account of his failure of payment, did, on the 2d of March, 1799, pass a law giving a right of pre-emption, at the rate of two dollars per acre, to persons who had, before the — day of April, 1797, made contracts in writing with Mr. Symmes for any lands between the two Miamis, not included within his patent, provided they should give notice of their intention before the — day of September, 1799. Very few individuals have availed themselves of that provision; and the petitioners, whose petitions have been referred to this committee, and who live chiefly within the limits of Ludlow's surveys, have generally represented that they were bona fide purchasers; that most of them have paid Mr. Symmes for the land, and are on that account unable to purchase a second time from the United States; that, till very lately, they had not heard any doubt suggested on the validity of Mr. Symmes's title; that the present increase of the price of land in that part of the country is principally due to themselves, who have settled and improved that wilderness, and persisted in their settlements during a long and dangerous Indian war; and that if the United States shall, however, persist in considering Mr. Symmes's claim as forfeited, the time assigned for their notifying their right of pre-emption should be extended, and the price of the land reduced to the original rate agreed on between the United States and Mr. Symmes.

The committee are of opinion that, so far as relates to the lands contained in Ludlow's survey, and not included in Mr. Symmes's patent, which, after deducting the lots reserved and excepted, amount to two hundred thousand acres, the said Symmes has never relinquished his claim thereto, and that if he has forfeited it, it is owing only to his not having made the payments in due time. To exact the forfeiture would be peculiarly hard on the purchasers and settlers under him; and it seems equitable that, in order to enable him to complete their titles, he should be permitted to make payment within a reasonable time, paying interest from the time when the purchase money should have been paid, (that is to say, from one, six, twelve, eighteen, twenty-four, thirty, and thirty-six months, respectively, on each seventh part of the said purchase money, after the 10th of January, 1794, the date of the survey,) and that, upon such payment, a patent should be granted to him in trust for himself and the purchasers under him, on condition, however, that the purchasers shall become entitled, in their own right, to the benefit of the same provision in case of failure on his part. It will be necessary, at the same time, to provide for the securing of the academy township, and for the payment of any balance which, on a due investigation of the subject, may still appear due for the lands included within his patent.

Respecting the lands lying north of Ludlow's survey, to which Mr. Symmes has relinquished every claim as early as 1794, nothing further can be requisite than to extend the time, without charging the terms allowed to purchasers under Mr. Symmes by the act of the 2d of March, 1799.

Upon those principles the committee have prepared a bill, which they submit to the consideration of the House.

No. 57.

1st Session.

SALE OF LANDS ACQUIRED BY THE CESSION FROM NORTH CAROLINA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE MAY 9, 1800.

Mr. ANDERSON, from the committee to which was referred the resolution authorizing an inquiry into the situation and extent of the vacant and unappropriated lands claimed by the United States under the cession of the State of North Carolina, and the expediency of making provision for the disposition thereof, reported:

That the State of North Carolina, on the — day of December, 1789, being then rightfully possessed of the jurisdiction, and also of the soil, (except in particular tracts, which she had previously sold,) in and over all that territory which now forms the territory of the State of Tennessee, did, by her legislative authority, pass an act on the said — day of December, entitled, "An act for the purpose of ceding to the United States of America certain western lands therein described," in the words following, to wit:

Whereas the United States in Congress assembled have repeatedly and earnestly recommended to the respective States in the Union, claiming or owning vacant western territory, to make cessions of part of the same as a further means, as well of hastening the extinguishment of the debts, as of establishing the harmony of the United States; and the inhabitants of the said western territory being also desirous that such cession should be made, in order to obtain a more ample protection than they have heretofore received, now this State, being ever desirous of doing ample justice to the public creditors, as well as of establishing the harmony of the United States, and complying with the reasonable desires of her citizens:

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That the Senators of this State in the Congress of the United States, or one of the Senators and any two of the Representatives of this State in the Congress of the United States, are hereby authorized, empowered, and required, to execute a deed or deeds, on the part and behalf of this State, conveying to the United States of America all right, title, and claim, which this State has to the sovereignty and territory of the lands situated within the chartered limits of this State, west of a line beginning on the extreme height of the Stone mountains, at the place where the Virginia line intersects it; running thence along the extreme height of the said mountain, to the place where the Watauga river breaks through it; thence a direct course to the top of the Yellow mountain, where Bright's road crosses the same; thence along the ridge of said mountain, between the waters of Doe river and the waters of Rock creek, to the place where the road crosses the Iron mountain; from thence along the extreme height of said mountain to where Nolachucky river runs through the same; thence to the top of the Bald mountain; thence along the extreme height of the said mountain, to the Painted Rock on French Broad river; thence along the highest ridge of the said mountain, to the place where it is called the Great Iron or Smoky mountain; thence along the extreme height of the said mountain to the place where it is called Unicoy or Unaka mountain, between the Indian towns of Cowee and Old Chota; thence along the main ridge of the said mountain, to the southern boundary of this State; upon the following express conditions, and subject thereto, that is to say:

First. That neither the lands nor inhabitants westward of the said mountain, shall be estimated after the cession made by virtue of this act shall be accepted, in the ascertaining the proportion of this State with the United States in the common expense occasioned by the late war.

Secondly. That the lands laid off, or directed to be laid off, by any act or acts of the General Assembly of this State, for the officers and soldiers thereof, their heirs and assigns, respectively, shall be and enure to the use and benefit of the said officers, their heirs and assigns, respectively; and if the bounds of the said lands already prescribed for the officers and soldiers of the continental line of this State shall not contain a sufficient quantity of lands fit for cultivation, to make good the several provisions intended by law; that such officer or soldier, or his assignee, who shall fall short of his allotment or proportion, after all the lands fit for cultivation within the said bounds are appropriated, be permitted to take his quota, or such part thereof as may be deficient, in any other part of the said territory, intended to be ceded by virtue of this act, not already appropriated. And where entries have been made agreeably to law, and titles under them not perfected by grant or otherwise, then, and in that case, the Governor for the time being shall, and he is hereby required, to perfect, from time to time, such titles, in such manner as if this act had never been passed. And that all entries made by, or grants made to, all and every person or persons whatsoever, agreeably to law, and within the limits hereby intended to be ceded to the United States, shall have the same force and effect as if such cession had not been made; and that all and every right of occupancy and pre-emption, and every other right reserved by any act or acts to persons settled on and occupying lands within the limits of the lands hereby intended to be ceded as aforesaid, shall continue to be in full force, in the same manner as if the cession had not been made, and as conditions upon which the said lands are ceded to the United States. And further, it shall be understood, that if any person or persons shall have, by virtue of the act entitled "An act for opening the land office for the redemption of specie and other certificates, and discharging the arrears due to the army," passed in the year 1783, made his or their entry in the office usually called John Armstrong's office, and located the same to any spot or piece of ground on which any other person or persons shall have previously located any entry or entries; that then and in that case, the person or persons having made such entry or entries, or their assignee or assignees, shall have leave and be at full liberty to remove the location of such entry or entries to any lands on which no entry has been specially located, or on any vacant lands included within the limits of the lands hereby intended to be ceded; provided, that nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to the making good any entry or entries, or any grant or grants heretofore declared void by any act or acts of the General Assembly of this State.

Thirdly. That all the lands intended to be ceded by virtue of this act, to the United States of America, and not appropriated as before mentioned, shall be considered as a common fund for the use and benefit of the United States of America, North Carolina inclusive, according to their respective and usual proportion in the general charge and expenditure, and shall be faithfully disposed for that purpose, and for no other use or purpose whatever.

Fourthly. That the territory so ceded shall be laid out and formed into a State or States, containing a suitable extent of territory, the inhabitants of which shall enjoy all the privileges, benefits, and advantages set forth in the ordinance of the late Congress for the government of the western territory of the United States, that is to say, whenever the Congress of the United States shall cause to be officially transmitted to the Executive authority of this State an authenticated copy of the act to be passed by the Congress of the United States, accepting the cession of territory made by virtue of this act, under the express conditions hereby specified, the said Congress shall, at the same time, assume the government of the said ceded territory, which they shall execute in a manner similar to that which they support in the territory west of the Ohio; shall protect the inhabitants against enemies; and shall never bar or deprive them of any privileges which the people in the territory west of the Ohio enjoy; Provided always, That no regulations made, or to be made by Congress, shall tend to emancipate slaves.

Fifthly. That the inhabitants of the said ceded territory shall be liable to pay such sums of money as may, from taking their census, be their just proportion of the debt of the United States, and the arrears of the requisitions of Congress on this State.

Sixthly. That all persons indebted to this State, residing in the territory intended to be ceded by virtue of this act, shall be held and deemed liable to pay such debt or debts in the same manner, and under the same penalty or penalties, as if this act had never been passed.

Seventhly. That if the Congress of the United States do not accept the cession hereby intended to be made, in due form, and give official notice thereof to the Executive of this State, within eighteen months from the passing of this act, then this act shall be of no force or effect whatsoever.

Eighthly. That the lands in force and use in the State of North Carolina, at the time of passing this act, shall be, and continue in full force, within the territory hereby ceded, until the same shall be repealed, or otherwise altered, by the legislative authority of the said Territory.

Ninthly. That the lands of non-resident proprietors, within the said ceded territory, shall not be taxed higher than the lands of residents.

Tenthly. That this act shall not prevent the people, now residing south of French Broad, between the Rivers Tennessee and Big Pigeon, from entering their pre-emptions in that tract, should an office be opened for that purpose, under an act of the present General Assembly.

And be it further enacted, by the authority aforesaid, That the sovereignty and jurisdiction of this State, in and over the territory aforesaid, and all and every the inhabitants thereof, shall be, and remain the same, in all respects, until the Congress of the United States shall accept the cession to be made by virtue of this act, as if this act had never passed."

Here follows the deed of cession:

Now, therefore, know ye, That we, SAMUEL JOHNSON and BENJAMIN HAWKINS, Senators aforesaid, by virtue of the power and authority committed to us by the said act, and in the name, and for and on behalf of the said State, do, by these presents, convey, assign, transfer, and set over unto the United States of America, for the benefit of the said States, North Carolina inclusive, all right, title, and claim, which the said State hath to the sovereignty and territory of the lands situated within the chartered limits of the said State, as bounded and described in the above recited act of the General Assembly, to and for the uses and purposes, and on the conditions mentioned in the said act."

The act of Congress, consequent upon this deed, is in the words following, viz:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the said deed be, and the same is hereby, accepted." Approved, April 2d, 1790.

Whence it follows, in the opinion of the committee, that the right of sale, as well as of jurisdiction, which previously belonged to the State of North Carolina, in and over the said territory, was, by the deed aforesaid, vested in the United States, upon the conditions therein specified.

And this opinion, as to the right of soil, is the more fully impressed on the minds of the committee upon an attentive perusal of the third condition stipulated in the aforesaid act of cession, which is in the words following, viz:

Thirdly. That all the lands intended to be ceded, by virtue of this act, to the United States of America, and not appropriated, as before mentioned, shall be considered as a common fund, for the use and benefit of the United States of America, North Carolina inclusive, according to their respective and usual proportion in the general charge and expenditure, and shall be faithfully disposed of for that purpose, and for no other use or purpose whatever."

It being very clear, from this provision in the act of cession, that it was intended the right of sale should pass to the United States, as a common fund, to be disposed of for the benefit of the whole Union.

To question the right of the Legislature of North Carolina to dispose of this sale, is to question the title of every man in Tennessee who holds the soil by deed from North Carolina. Since it is evident, that, if the State of North Carolina had a right to dispose of the soil to individuals, she had an equal right to dispose of it to the United States. And if she could make her terms in the first case, so she could also in the last. She has done so in both; and both have as good a title to their respective parts as North Carolina had before she alienated them.

The fourth condition, in the said act of cession, provides, that the territory so ceded shall be laid out and formed into a State, or States, containing a suitable extent of territory, the inhabitants of which shall enjoy all the privileges, benefits, and advantages set forth in the ordinance of the late Congress, for the government of the western territories of the United States, &c.

Under this provision, the inhabitants of the said ceded territory, first formed into a temporary government, since become a separate State. And, on the first day of June, 1796, by an act of the Congress of the United States, the said ceded territory, so formed into a State, was "declared to be one of the United States of America, on an equal footing with the original States in all respects whatever, by the name and title of the State of Tennessee." Whereby, in the opinion of the committee, the said State of Tennessee acquired the jurisdiction over, but not the right of soil, within the said territory.

And this is the more satisfactorily evinced to the committee, from the consideration, that the Government of the United States held only a limited and temporary jurisdiction over the said territory, determinable on an event foreseen and specified; which the Government of the United States could not control; and upon which, the inhabitants and territory were to become an independent State or States of the Union. Hence the State of Tennessee does not derive even her jurisdiction from the Government of the United States, but has it by operation of the act of cession from the State of North Carolina, after it had been exercised for a time, in virtue of the same act, by the United States.

There is, therefore, no ground for the claim of Tennessee to the soil, upon the principle that a grant of the jurisdiction over territory possesses the right of soil therein; because, in fact, there is no grant of jurisdiction from the United States to the State of Tennessee.

But the right of jurisdiction, and the right of soil, are distinct rights, and may be severed. Thus, North Carolina, while she retained the jurisdiction over the territory in question, disposed of a great proportion of the soil to individuals, and upon various considerations, such as military service, paper money, specie, and other certificates. So, in the aforesaid act of cession, North Carolina authorized the disposition of the soil, on such considerations and conditions as she chose to stipulate to the United States. Many of these considerations were pecuniary; one of the conditions was, that the United States should exercise jurisdiction in a particular way, and determinable on certain events; conformably to which, a deed was executed on the part of North Carolina, and accepted by the United States. Hence the right of soil vested in the United States, for the uses expressed in the deed. And it became a duty in the United States, by virtue of the same deed, to exercise jurisdiction over the territory until it grew into a State. The United States did exercise jurisdiction accordingly, until that event took place; upon which, that duty ceased, and the jurisdiction was of right necessarily in the State; but the right of soil remained in the United States, as well as other rights; therefore, it is presumed that the United States may proceed to dispose of such parts of the soil, to which she has a right, under the deed of cession from North Carolina, as shall have been freed from the Indian claim.

Of this description, it appears to the committee, that, besides other inconsiderable vacancies lying between former appropriations, that much the greater parts of the counties of Blount, and Sevier, lying on the south side of French Broad, between the Tennessee river and Big Pigeon, are not yet legally appropriated, although actually settled, by people who claim a right of pre-emption to the tracts they have settled. The committee have no information which will enable them to ascertain the precise situation, or extent of the residue of the lands claimed by the United States, within the State of Tennessee; nor is it deemed important at this time, since it remains covered by the Indian claim.

The committee, therefore, offer the following resolution, viz:

Resolved, That it is expedient for the United States, by law, to open an office for the sale of the lands to which the United States have the legal right, within the State of Tennessee, so far as the Indian claim thereto has been extinguished; and that the right of pre-emption, determinable by the priority of occupancy, be allowed to all the heads of families, respectively, to any quantity of land not exceeding six hundred and forty acres, to include their actual settlement at the lowest price to be fixed on the sale of the aforesaid lands.

Resolved, That the Attorney General be, and he is hereby, requested to collect all the laws of the State of North Carolina, and such other information as he shall deem material, relative to the rights of individuals to the lands within the said ceded territory, and lay the same before the Senate at their next session.

Resolved, That a copy of the foregoing report be transmitted to the Executive authority of the State of Tennessee, and that any representation, or claim, which may be made to the next session of Congress by the State aforesaid, on the subject of the said lands, will be duly considered.

REFUGEES FROM CANADA AND NOVA SCOTIA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MAY 9, 1800.

Mr. GALLATIN, from the committee to which was referred the report of the Secretary of War, Secretary and Comptroller of the Treasury, on the subject of the refugees from Canada and Nova Scotia, made the following report:

That seventy-three persons have presented claims as entitled to relief under the provisions of the act of April, 1798. That eighteen claims have been disallowed; six are suspended, for want of sufficient proofs; and forty-nine have been allowed. In four special cases, the Secretaries and Comptroller recommend an allowance of two thousand acres. The forty-five other claimants have been arranged in five classes, allowing to those of the first class, five in number, one thousand acres each; to those of the second class, fifteen in number, seven hundred and fifty acres each; to those of the third class, fourteen in number, five hundred acres each; to those of the fourth class, ten in number, two hundred and fifty acres each; and to the only claimant of the fifth class, one hundred acres; making altogether, and including the special cases, thirty-three thousand five hundred acres. The six suspended cases, if allowed, would not increase the quantity of land to forty thousand acres.

The committee, considering that the whole amount of claims falls short of what was generally expected; that all the claimants are original holders; that their losses or sufferings have been considerable; that the greater number are now, and have been, for many years, in indigent circumstances; and that not only they have been thus reduced on account of their having joined the American cause, but have waited twenty years for a compensation, recommend that there should be allowed to those of the fourth class half a section, or three hundred and twenty acres, instead of two hundred and fifty, and to others in the same proportion, which will make a difference of only four thousand seven hundred and forty acres.

On the particular cases, the committee propose only two alterations.

The first relates to the case of L. F. Delesdernier, a Nova Scotia refugee, who is placed in the third class, at the rate of five hundred acres. The claim for his deceased brother John, who enlisted in the army of the United States, and served to the end of the war, and that of his father and mother, have been disallowed. The last is disallowed because "it is not proved that they were obliged to leave Nova Scotia, nor that they came hither with intent to aid the United States." Although it was proper to have rejected the claim for that proof, yet, as it appears that on account of their leaving Nova Scotia during the war, and joining their son, they lost their property, and have ever since been supported by that son; (they being both past seventy, and the father having been deprived of his senses for a number of years;) this appeared to the committee a sufficient reason for raising the son, who was a meritorious and useful officer during the war, from the third to the second class.

The other case is that of the heirs of James Boyd, whose claim is considered by the Secretaries and Comptroller as one of the specific cases, and to whom they have allowed two thousand acres. The Secretaries and Comptroller state that "James Boyd lost fifty thousand acres of land, on which were some improvements, on the east side of what is now known to be the River St. Croix." One of the heirs, who attends to the business, considering the compensation as altogether inadequate, has requested that the claim should not be included amongst those now reported on, rather choosing that it should be referred, with the other suspended cases, to the next session of Congress, when there will be time to investigate its merits. The committee recommend a compliance with his request.

With those alterations, adopting, in every other respect, the report of the Secretaries and Comptroller, the third section of the bill, reported by the committee on the subject of the Nova Scotia and Canada refugees, will stand as follows:

That the following persons be entitled, &c., viz: Martha Walker, widow of Thomas Walker, John Edgar, and Seth Harding, respectively, two thousand two hundred and forty acres each; Jonathan Eddy, Colonel James Livingston, Parker Clark, and John Allan, respectively, one thousand two hundred and eighty acres each; and the heirs of John Dodge, one thousand two hundred and eighty acres.

Thomas Faulkner, Edward Faulkner, David Gay, Martin Brooks, Lieutenant Colonel Bradford, Noah Miller, Joshua Lamb, Atwood Fales, John Starr, William How, Ebenezer Gardner, Lewis F. Delesdernier, John McGown, Jonas C. Minot, and P. Francis Cazeau, respectively, nine hundred and sixty acres each; and the heirs of Simon Chester, nine hundred and sixty acres.

Jacob Vander Heyden, John Livingston, James Crawford, Isaac Danks, Major B. Von Heer, Benjamin Thomson, Joseph Bindon, Joseph Levittre, Lieutenant William Maxwell, Jonathan De Merceir, James Price, Seth Noble, and John Halsted, respectively, six hundred and forty acres each.

David Jenks, Ambrose Cole, James Cule, Adam Johnson, James Duggan, Daniel Earl, jun., John Paskel, Edward Chinn, Joseph Cone, and John Torrey, respectively, three hundred and twenty acres each.

Samuel Fales, one hundred and sixty acres.

Which several tracts of land shall, except the last, be located in half sections by the respective claimants.

APPLICATION FOR THE RENEWAL OF A LOST VIRGINIA MILITARY BOUNTY LAND WARRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 2, 1801.

Mr. HOLMES, from the committee to which was referred the petition of Griffin Taylor, made the following report:

That the petitioner states he purchased from William Eskridge, a lieutenant in the Virginia continental line, a military land warrant, for two hundred acres, granted to the said Eskridge for his military services; that some time afterwards, he casually lost the same, and has never since known what became of it. He further states that, shortly after losing the said warrant, he entered a caveat in the War Office, and at the same time procured a certificate of its number, date, and quantity. On application to the Secretary of War for a renewal of the warrant, he was informed that no relief could be afforded in his case, unless Congress were to pass a law for that purpose.

Your committee were of opinion, that the legislating upon individual cases ought to be avoided as much as possible. It would, in all probability, be productive of invidious distinctions, or create precedents that might prove injurious to the public interest; they, therefore, turned their attention solely to the propriety of recommending a general law on the subject, containing such provisions as would guard the public against fraud and imposition; contemplating this as the only mode advisable to be adopted, they requested the Secretary of War to give them such information as he might suppose would assist the judgments of the committee in forming an opinion, and particularly to let them know what checks there would be against deception in his department, in the event of a general law being enacted. The answer of the Secretary satisfied your committee that no general regulations could, with safety, be adopted. It appears that the most important checks, which might serve to render deception less practicable in that event, were destroyed with the other records in the department. While your committee regret that any part of this misfortune should have fallen upon any of those, or their representatives, who have so dearly earned the bounty in land from their country, by submitting to great danger, toil, and hardship, during the contest for its independence, yet they cannot devise any mode of relief consistent with the public interest. They, therefore, recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petition of Griffith Taylor ought not to be granted.

PRE-EMPTION RIGHTS IN THE NORTHWESTERN TERRITORY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 25, 1801.

Mr. DENNIS, from the committee to which was referred the petition of sundry inhabitants in the Northwestern Territory, made the following report:

That the petitioners state, that, with much labor and difficulty, they have settled upon, cultivated, and improved certain lands, the property of the United States, between the waters of the Scioto and Muskingum rivers, and have thereby not only enhanced the value of the lands upon which they have respectively settled, but of other lands in the vicinity of the same, to the great benefit of the United States, and pray for a pre-emption right to those lands, at two dollars per acre, and such credit as Congress may think proper to extend to them, clear of interest.

They also state, that some of the petitioners have set-led upon, and improved lands reserved by the United States, without knowing of such reservation, and pray for a right of pre-emption on the terms before mentioned.

Your committee are of opinion, that, as there are many others in the situation of the petitioners, if the indulgence prayed for be granted, it ought to be general; but, whatever may be the hardships sustained by the petitioners, and however great our disposition to relieve them therefrom, believing, as the committee do, that granting the indulgence prayed for, would operate as an encouragement to intrusions on the public lands, and would be an unjustifiable sacrifice of the public interest, report, as their opinion, that the prayer of the petition ought not to be granted.

CLAIMS OF GEORGIA IN THE MISSISSIPPI TERRITORY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 28, 1801.

Mr. DANA, from the committee to which was referred the address and remonstrance of the Legislature of the State of Georgia, made the following report:

The remonstrance complains of two acts of Congress respecting the Mississippi Territory; one passed in April, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight; the other in May, one thousand eight hundred; and prays for their repeal.

The tract of country, called the Mississippi Territory, is bounded on the west by the River Mississippi; on the east, by the River Appalachicola, or Chattahoochee; on the south, by the southern boundary of the United States; and on the north, by a line drawn from the confluence of the River Yazoo with the Mississippi, due east, to the before mentioned River Chattahoochee.

For a view of the claim of the United States to the Territory in question, the committee, in the present instance, deem it sufficient to refer to a report of the Attorney General, made to the Senate at the first session of the fourth Congress, (1) and to a report of the committee of the House of Representatives, made at the first session of the sixth Congress. (2) The last mentioned report also contains a summary statement of a variety of individual claims to lands within the Territory.

The claim of Georgia is particularly stated in the remonstrance referred to your committee.

The two acts of Congress, of which the remonstrance complains, have provided for an adjustment of those claims, through the agency of commissioners; and also, for the establishment of a Government over the Mississippi Territory, similar to that established by the ordinance of Congress of July, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, for the Territory Northwest of the River Ohio; saving and reserving to the State of Georgia all her right or claim to the said Territory.

Commissioners have accordingly been appointed on the part of the United States, and also, on the part of Georgia, for negotiating an adjustment of their respective claims. No report has yet been laid before Congress from the commissioners of the United States; but the business of their commission is understood to be yet pending.

Considering this state of things, the committee deem it proper for them to abstain from any particular discussion of the several claims to the Mississippi Territory, while a hope is cherished that an amicable adjustment may be ultimately effected; nor do they think it expedient to adopt any measure which may be prejudicial to an object so desirable.

The committee, therefore, submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That it would not be proper, at this time, for the House to take any further order on the address and remonstrance of the Legislature of the State of Georgia.

PRE-EMPTION RIGHTS TO CLAIMANTS UNDER JOHN CLEVES SYMMES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 14, 1801.

Mr. DAVIS, from the committee to which was referred the petition of James M'Cashen and others, reported:

That on the 15th day of October, in the year 1789, the late Board of Treasury, under resolutions of Congress of the 23d and 27th of July, and 23d of October, 1787, entered into a contract with John Cleves Symmes and certain others, his associates, for a tract of land in the western country, now called the Northwestern Territory, and bounded westwardly by the Great Miami; southwardly, by the River Ohio; eastwardly, by a line beginning on the Ohio, at a spot twenty miles above the mouth of the Great Miami, and extending from the said spot in a course parallel with the general course of the Great Miami; and northwardly, by a line running due east and west, so as to include one million of acres, with certain reservations to the United States, out of each township contained in said tract of land; for which the said John Cleves Symmes agreed to pay at the rate of two-thirds of a dollar per acre (one-third of a dollar being deducted from one dollar for bad land and incidental charges) for such quantity as should be found, on a survey, to be in said bounds as before described; which contract was, at several different periods, altered by consent of Congress, so as to materially change the boundaries from the first original contract; which several alterations can be seen by referring to a statement of facts reported by a committee of the House of Representatives, on the 9th of February, 1797, and contained in the reports of committees of the second session of the fourth Congress.²³ The committee find that one of the petitioners, to wit, John Haggin, contracted with John Cleves Symmes, on the 19th of May, 1789, for two thousand six hundred and eighteen acres of the land in the aforesaid bounds, and paid him for the same two thousand one hundred and eighty-one dollars and seventy-five cents and five-thirteenths, in liquidated certificates; and there are good grounds to believe that the other petitioners have paid money for lands by them purchased of John Cleves Symmes, within the bounds of his original purchase, though no written proof is shown to the committee by them. The committee also find that, after John Cleves Symmes had sold to Haggin two thousand six hundred and eighteen acres of the land contained in his original purchase, and received payment for the same, as before stated, he, at his own request, and request of Jonathan Dayton, his associate and agent, so altered the contract first made by him, as to leave Haggin, one of the petitioners, and several others, out of the patented lands granted him by act of Congress of the 5th May, 1792. The committee find that, on the 3d day of March, 1801, a law passed, giving to the description of purchasers, such as the petitioners represent themselves to be, a right of pre-emption to the lands purchased of John Cleves Symmes, before the passing of the said law, at two dollars per acre; and commissioners were appointed by said law, to adjust the claims to purchasers under John Cleves Symmes, or his associates, to whom the purchasers were to make known their respective claims, on or before the 1st day of November now last past, and on or before the 1st day of January next ensuing, to make the first payment for said pre-emption; or, on failure thereof, the right of pre-emption became forfeited. The commissioners were, by the provisions of the last law herein specified, to meet at Cincinnati, between the first day and the tenth day of November last past, to adjust the right of pre-emption to a certain description of purchasers under John Cleves Symmes; of which meeting three weeks' notice was to be given in a public newspaper, printed at Cincinnati. The committee find the provisions in the law, in this respect, have not been rigidly adhered to in the two following particulars, to wit: 1st, The notice of the meeting of the commissioners was given in small hand-bills; and no proof is before the committee to show that the notice was published in the public newspaper at Cincinnati. 2dly, The notice so given bears date the 23d day of October, and gives notice of the meeting of the commissioners to be on the 9th day of November following, which afforded to the persons entitled to the right of pre-emption only eighteen days' notice, including the date of the notice and day of meeting, instead of twenty-one days, as the law required.

The committee are of opinion, that to demand of the purchasers under John Cleves Symmes the sum of two dollars per acre for land purchased of him prior to the 5th day of May, 1792, under the sanction of the Government, and which had been sold him by the Government at two-thirds of a dollar per acre, is highly injurious to the purchasers; as they contracted with John Cleves Symmes, and paid him for the land before any alteration in the contract took place. The committee, therefore, submit the following resolutions to the House:

Resolved, That so much of the law of the 3d of March, 1801, as requires the purchasers of lands under John Cleves Symmes, or his associates, prior to the 5th day of May, 1792, to pay two dollars per acre for the benefit of the right of pre-emption, and so much of the said law as requires the first payment to be made on or before the first day of January next, ought to be repealed; and the purchasers under Symmes, or his associates, who actually purchased land, and paid money for the same, prior to the fifth of May, 1792, ought to be entitled to the land purchased of Symmes, on the same terms the said John Cleves Symmes was to have had it from the United States, by his original contract.

Resolved, That those persons who purchased land of John Cleves Symmes since the 5th of May, 1792, ought to have further time allowed them to pay the money than is allowed by the act of Congress of the 3d of March, 1801.

INFORMATION.

Whereas, pursuant to a law of the United States, entitled "An act giving a right of pre-emption to certain persons who have contracted with John Cleves Symmes, or his associates, for lands lying between the Miami rivers, in the Territory of the United States Northwest of the River Ohio," (which had been published in the Western Spy, on the 8th and 15th of April last,) William Goforth and John Reily, with the receiver of public moneys, have been appointed commissioners to adjust the claims of persons entitled to pre-emption rights by virtue of said law.

Therefore, notice is hereby given, that the said commissioners will meet at Mr. Yeatman's, in Cincinnati, on the 9th day of November next, to adjust said claims, at which time and place all persons intending to avail themselves of the benefit of the aforesaid act are required to attend, with their proper vouchers and evidences necessary to substantiate their respective claims.

 Agreeably to the above recited act, it is indispensably necessary for all persons intending to avail themselves of the benefit of the same, to file their evidence of claim, or statement thereof, with the receiver of public moneys at Cincinnati, on or before the first day of November next.

[The following documents were subsequently appended to the foregoing report, by order of the committee.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
February 1, 1802.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose a letter from the receiver of the land office at Cincinnati, enclosing a report of the lands applied for, under the act of the last session, a pre-emption right to certain purchasers under J. C. Symmes.

You will thereby perceive that a very full compliance with the terms of the law has taken place. Not less than one hundred and thirty thousand six hundred and ninety acres were applied for; and the one-fourth part of the purchase money was paid on one hundred and two thousand six hundred and sixty-three and a-half acres thereof. For the residue, amounting to twenty-eight thousand six hundred and twenty-six and a-half acres, the applicants, not having paid the fourth part required by law, before the first of January, have lost their right of pre-emption.

It appears to me, that the purchasers, or claimants under J. C. Symmes and associates, who have not yet applied, or who, having applied, have lost their pre-emption, may, without any inconvenience to the public, be permitted to apply to the receiver at Cincinnati, for a term not exceeding, say, three months after the day of notification, paying, however, interest on the first payment, from the first of January, to the date when they shall pay the same, and fixing the dates of subsequent payments on the same days with those who have heretofore applied. And the same privilege might be extended to claimants for lands lying north of Ludlow's survey. But, seeing the successful operation of the act of last session, I think any essential alteration in the terms, or innovation in the general principle, should be carefully avoided.

I have the honor to be,
Very respectfully, sir,
Your obedient servant,
ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. Mr. DAVIS.

Copy of a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, dated "Cincinnati, January 7th, 1802," and signed "James Findlay."

SIR: Your letter of the 4th ultimo came duly to hand, and I must offer the great press of business, under the act giving the right of pre-emption to certain persons who have contracted with John Cleves Symmes, or his associates, as an apology for not taking more early notice of it.

I have the pleasure to inform you, that the commissioners have succeeded in their business equal to their most sanguine expectations, and forfeitures have been made in fewer instances than was generally supposed; some few have made payment in full.

Enclosed you have a short statement, showing the circumstances of that tract of land which comes within the purview of the act above mentioned, which statement is made on the best information which could be obtained, having no document in my possession that will show the quantity contained in the said tract of land. That part of the land which has not been applied for probably appears more than it really is, for this reason: that there are a great many fractions on the two Miami and Mad rivers, which have not been surveyed, and those fractions have been estimated at a much less quantity than they will be found to contain on admeasurement; consequently, this will make the quantity granted more than it appears on the report.

I cannot ascertain what proportion of the land J. C. Symmes, esq., may have sold out of the quantity that remains unapplied for, and the quantity he had retained is uncertain.

I herewith enclose you my report for last month, and my account; it will be some time before I can possibly send you my quarterly return; the people, generally, postponed payment until the last few days of the time they could make payment, and my being one of the commissioners, (who did not finish their business until the 31st ultimo,) put it out of my power to have it prepared.

Permit me to state a case to you, which appears to me a hard one: John Rippey and John Reed purchased a section of land in the above mentioned tract several years ago, and made payment in full; when the law passed, giving them the pre-emption right, they applied for their money, and it could not be returned; one of them went into Virginia for cash to make the payment; on his return, his horse died, and he did not reach this place until the morning on the first instant. He offered the money in payment; I told him, the time of payment having expired the evening before, it could not be received; he asked me to take the money in keeping, and state the case to you; if you could, with propriety, direct me to report the money, it would be doing them great justice. There are five families living on the land, all relations; each of them has a good improvement on the section.

I am respectfully, sir,
Your most obedient servant,
JAMES FINDLAY.

A statement, showing the circumstances of a tract of land granted by a law of the United States, entitled An act giving a right of pre-emption to certain persons who have contracted with John Cleves Symmes, or his associates, for lands lying between the Miami rivers, in the Territory of the United States Northwest of the River, Ohio.

TIME EXTENDED FOR LOCATING MILITARY LAND WARRANTS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 30, 1801.

Mr. DAVIS, from the committee to which was referred the resolutions of the House of Representatives, in relation to the expediency or in expediency of giving further time to the owners and holders of military land warrants, to register and locate the same, made the following report:

That, on the 1st day of June, 1796, Congress, by law, directed the surveyor general to lay off by actual survey a tract of land in the Territory of the United States Northwest of the River Ohio, to be reserved for satisfying claims granted for military services; which said tract of land was to be bounded as follows, to wit: Beginning at the northwest corner of the seven ranges of townships, and running thence fifty miles, due south, along the western boundary of the said ranges; thence, due west, to the main branch of the Scioto river; thence, up the main branch of the said river, to the place where the Indian boundary line crosses the same; thence, along the said boundary line, to the Tuscarora branch of the Muskingum river, at the crossing place above Fort Lawrence; thence, up the said river, to the point where a line, running due west from the place of beginning, will intersect the said river; thence, along the line, to run to the place of beginning: which said tract of land was directed to be laid off into townships of five miles square, by running, marking, and numbering the exterior lines of said townships, and marking corners in the said line, at the distance of two and a half miles, a plat of which was to be sent to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Your committee further report, that the tract of land before described was to be granted to the proprietors or holders of military land warrants, in quarter townships, to contain four thousand acres each. But the committee find the survey aforesaid was not executed with the accuracy the law had intended; but Congress did, by an act, passed the 1st day of March, 1800, establish the said survey in the manner in which it had been executed.

That, owing to the inaccuracy in the survey aforesaid, some of the quarter townships contained more than four thousand acres, and some less; and that provision was made, by law, to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to grant a certificate, in the nature of a land warrant, to the person locating on a quarter township that fell short of four thousand acres, for the deficiency; but no certificate could issue for a less quantity than fifty acres.

The committee find that the number of certificates issued under the act aforesaid, for deficiencies in the quarter townships, are thirty-six in all, and that their aggregate amount is thirteen thousand seven hundred and eighty-one acres. Of the certificates, granted as aforesaid, fifteen of them were outstanding on the 24th day of December instant: their aggregate amount is four thousand five hundred and eleven and six-tenths acres. [See document B.]

Your committee further report, that, after the priority of location had been determined, and the proprietors or holders of military land warrants had designated their respective tracts, the act aforesaid directed the Secretary of the Treasury to designate, by lot, fifty quarter townships, together with the fractional part of townships unlocated, which were reserved to individuals for their military services.

Your committee find that the last mentioned tract of land was to be laid off in lots of a hundred acres each, and no patent can issue for any of the aforesaid lots, except in the name of the person originally entitled, or his heirs. Under the third section of the act before alluded to, the Secretary of the Treasury issued fourteen certificates for fifty acres each, for deficiencies in the one hundred acre lots, the aggregate amount of which is seven hundred acres, as by document C.

Your committee find the total amount of fractional sections open for location, on the 24th day of December instant, was ninety-three thousand two hundred and twenty-five acres, of which three hundred and sixty acres are on the River Scioto; seventy-one thousand one hundred and ninety-two and three-tenths acres on the Indian boundary line; eight thousand one hundred and thirty-four acres on the town of Salem; five thousand two hundred and eighty-one and two-tenths acres on the town of Schœnbrunn; and seven hundred and fifty and seven-tenths acres on the town of Gnadenhutten: besides what remains unlocated of the fifty quarter townships. [See document A.]

Your committee also find that, in dividing the fifty quarter townships into one hundred acre lots, there are sixty-five fractional lots of less than a hundred acres, which, in the aggregate, contain two thousand and twenty-four and three-tenths acres.

Your committee find that a less quantity than four thousand acres cannot be located in the general tract set apart for satisfying military claims, which have been passed from the original holders, as before described; and that not less than a hundred acres can be located in the tract set apart for original holders of warrants, under the 5th and 6th sections of the act aforesaid. That, in many instances, original warrants issued for uneven numbers, when compared with the location number of acres, say, for one hundred and fifty, four hundred and fifty, and eight hundred and fifty acres of military land; and no law exists, under which the odd number of acres can be located, except where they make a component part of a quarter township. Hence, holders of such warrants, or certificates in the nature of warrants, have been unable to locate them.

The committee find the number of acres contained in the unregistered warrants for military services, as outstanding on the 29th day of December instant, amounted to five hundred and fifty-two thousand six hundred and five and three-fourths. [See document D.]

Your committee also find that the time allowed by law for the holders or proprietors of warrants granted for military services, to locate the same, expires on the 1st day of January next ensuing.

Your committee, therefore, submit the following resolutions, to wit:

Resolved, That further time ought to be given to the holders or proprietors of military land warrants, to register and locate the same.

That provision ought to be made by law, authorizing the holders of warrants, or certificates in the nature of warrants, under a hundred acres, to locate the same.

That all warrants or certificates located on a less quantity than four thousand acres, shall be located on the unlocated parts of the fifty quarter townships and fractional quarter townships.

That warrants, or certificates in the nature of warrants, which have or shall issue for a quantity less than a hundred acres, shall be located on the fractional parts of lots that are less than a hundred acres, and in no other place.

That the holders or proprietors of warrants for military services, who shall locate the same on the quarter townships, or fractional part of quarter townships, after the — day of — next, shall obtain patents in their own name.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Register's Office, January 14, 1802.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit, herewith, a statement of the number of acres contained in the fifty townships set apart for satisfying the claims of the original holders of land warrants, the amount located, and the amount which remained unlocated on the 1st January, 1802.

In reply to your inquiry, "if any locations have or could be made by law on the general tract set apart for military services, since the priority of location has been determined, according to the meaning of the fifth section of the act aforesaid," I beg leave to remark, that the fifty sections, together with the fractional sections designed, have invariably been reserved for the location of land warrants issued to original holders, and when locations (in lots of one hundred acres) have been made, patents have been issued in their names; but that, with respect to holders of parcels of land warrants, they have been permitted to deposit land warrants or certificates, issued by the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, to an amount equal to the quarter township applied for by them to be located. Of this description, nine locations have been made upon whole quarter townships since the determination of the priority location by lot. This permission was founded on the third section of the act of 1st June, 1796, and from the construction of the act of 1st March, 1800.

I have the honor to be, with the greatest respect, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

JOSEPH NOURSE.

Honorable THOMAS T. DAVIS.

CONFIRMATION OF AN INDIAN GRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 11, 1802.

Mr. JOHN G. JACKSON made the following report: The committee to which the petition of Isaac Zane was referred on the 7th instant, have taken the same into consideration, and make thereon the following report: That the petitioner states, that he was made a prisoner by the Wyandot Indians, when an infant of nine years of age, with which nation he has ever since remained, having married an Indian woman, by whom he has had many children. That his attachment to the whites has subjected him to numberless inconveniencies and dangers during the almost continual wars which existed between the United States and the Indians, until the peace of Greenville in 1795. That, previous to that period, a tract of land on which he now lives, had been assigned to him by the Wyandot Indians, and that no idea was entertained when that treaty was made, that the land which had been given him would fall within the boundary of the United States, (which now appears to be the case,) and, of consequence, no provision was made in his favor by the treaty; all of which the committee have reason to believe is perfectly true. And it further appears, from two certificates, one given by five Indian chiefs, at a place called the Big Rock, on the 16th day of September, 1800, that the Wyandot nation of Indians allotted the said Zane a tract of land, of four miles square, on Mad river; and that the said Zane had a pre-emption right, ever since the year 1753, to the lands of the Wyandot nation. The second certificate is given by Abraham Chapline, (a gentleman of character in the State of Kentucky,) who certifies, that he was made a prisoner in the year 1780, by the Wyandot Indians; that at that time the British and Indians were marching, with formidable force, to attack the Kentucky country; the said Zane found it out, and gave Mr. Chapline a gun and ammunition, with directions what course to proceed to alarm the whites; and the said Zane also purchased another prisoner from the Mingo Indians, which he gave one hundred bucks for, and furnished him with a gun also, to go with the said Chapline to alarm the Kentuckians; and that the said Zane was very friendly to the prisoners in general. And it further appears, from a certificate which was filed among the reports of the first session of the sixth Congress, given by Governor St. Clair the agent for Indian affairs in the Northwestern Territory, that, at a conference with the chiefs of the Wyandot nation, in the month of October, 1799, the said chiefs declared it to be the wish of their nation, that a tract of land, four miles square, at a place called the Big Bottom, on Mad river, a branch of Great Miami, should be confirmed to the said Zane, this land being set apart to and for him previous to the treaty of Greenville. Having taken these circumstances into consideration, and having been informed by Mr. Wells, the Indian interpreter, now in this city, that he was at the said treaty of Greenville, and that he understood the said Zane was to have a grant of land, at or near the said Big Bottom; and the said Wells knew that the said Zane lived on the said tract of land in the year 1793, and that the Wyandot Indians told him that they had given the said land to the said Zane, and that the said Zane was then very friendly to the prisoners that were taken by the Indians into captivity. Therefore, the committee have considered that the petitioner ought to have confirmed a tract of land, equal in some degree to the intentions of the Indians, and to the services rendered to the United States by the petitioner; they, therefore, recommend to the House, the adoption of the following resolution: Resolved, That a committee be appointed to bring in a bill, authorizing the President of the United States to convey, in fee simple, to Isaac Zane, six sections of land, of one square mile each, within the Northwestern Territory, on any lands not heretofore appropriated, and that the Indian title thereto has been extinguished.

We, the Wyandot nation, having given to Isaac Zane a lot of land, consisting of four miles square, on the heads of Mad river, these five years past, and seems at present to encroach on the American lands; in that case, we, the said Wyandot nation, allow the American Government to take possession of as much land of theirs, to replace the said land given to the said Isaac Zane, although, at same time, the said Isaac Zane has had a pre-emption right since the year 1753.

Signed at the Big Rock, this sixteenth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred.

I do certify, that, in the spring, 1780, I was a prisoner with the Wyandot Indians, and that the British and Indians were marching to attack the Kentucky country with a formidable force, and Isaac Zane furnished me with a gun and ammunition, with instructions what course to proceed to alarm the people in Kentucky; and that he was very friendly to the prisoners in general, and certified to me his friendship to his native country people; and believe that he was, notwithstanding his situation, a friend to the whites; he also purchased another prisoner from the Mingoes, which he gave one hundred bucks for, and furnished him with a gun also to go with me.

PERMIT TO ACCEPT AN INDIAN GRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 5, 1802.

Mr. DAVIS, from the committee to which was referred the petition of George Ash, made the following report: That the petitioner asks the United States to permit him to receive, as a present, from the chiefs of the Shawanese and Delaware Indians, a tract of land four miles square, opposite the mouth of the Kentucky river, which tract of land is claimed by the Indian tribes aforesaid. The committee waited on the chiefs of the Shawanese and Delaware tribes of Indians, and conversed with them, by an interpreter, on the subject of the gift of the land aforesaid. From the information your committee gained, it appeared to them, that the Indians were willing to give the petitioner a tract of land in the following shape: to begin at the Indian boundary line, opposite the mouth of Kentucky river; thence with the Ohio river to the mouth of the Little Kentucky; thence up the same one mile; from thence a direct line, at right angles, to the boundary line aforesaid. Your committee do not know what quantity of land these boundaries will include, nor do they approve of the plan of giving to individuals the right of receiving large tracts of land from the Indians; it may possibly be a source of evil at a future period, should enterprising and intriguing men prevail on the Indians to make those gifts to a large extent. But your committee think it would not be unsafe to permit the petitioner to accept of one mile square from the Indians, to begin where the Indian boundary line touches the Ohio river, thence with the Ohio one mile; which line will form the basis of the mile square.

FRAUDS BY LAND JOBBERS IN THE INDIANA TERRITORY.

COMMUNICATED TO CONGRESS FEBRUARY 18, 1802.

*Gentlemen of the Senate
and of the House of Representatives:*

In a message of the 2d instant,* I enclosed a letter from the Secretary of War, on the subject of certain lands in the neighborhood of our military posts, on which it might be expedient for the Legislature to make some provisions. A letter recently received from the Governor of Indiana presents some further views of the extent to which such provision may be needed. I therefore now transmit it for the information of Congress.

TH: JEFFERSON.

February 18, 1802.

VINCENNES, January 19, 1802.

SIR: The circumstances mentioned in this letter I have considered of sufficient importance to be communicated to the President. The court established at this place, under the authority of the State of Virginia, in the year 1780, (as I have before done myself the honor to inform you,) assumed to themselves the right of granting lands to every applicant. Having exercised this power for some time without opposition, they began to conclude that their right over the land was supreme, and that they could with as much propriety grant to themselves as to others. Accordingly, an arrangement was made, by which the whole country to which the Indian title was supposed to be extinguished, was divided between the members of the court; and orders to that effect entered on their journal, each member absenting himself from the court on the day that the order was to be made in his favor, so that it might appear to be the act of his fellows only. The tract thus disposed of extends on the Wabash twenty-four leagues from La Pointe Coupée to the mouth of White river, and forty leagues into the country west, and thirty east from the Wabash, excluding only the land immediately surrounding this town, which had before been granted to the amount of twenty or thirty thousand acres.

The authors of this ridiculous transaction soon found that no advantage could be derived from it, as they could find no purchasers, and I believe that the idea of holding any part of the land was by the greater part of them abandoned a few years ago; however, the claim was discovered, and a part of it purchased by some of those speculators who infest our country, and through these people, a number of others in different parts of the United States have become concerned, some of whom are actually preparing to make settlements on the land the ensuing spring. Indeed, I should not be surprised to see five hundred families settling under these titles in the course of a year. The price at which the land is sold enables any body to become a purchaser; one thousand acres being frequently given for an indifferent horse or a rifle gun. And as a formal deed is made reciting the grant of the court, (made as it is pretended under the authority of the State of Virginia,) many ignorant persons have been induced to part with their little all to obtain this ideal property, and they will no doubt endeavor to strengthen their claim, as soon as they have discovered the deception, by an actual settlement. The extent of these speculations was unknown to me until lately. I am now informed that a number of persons are in the habit of repairing to this place, where they purchase two or three hundred thousand acres of this claim, for which they get a deed properly authenticated and recorded, and then disperse themselves over the United States, to cheat the ignorant and credulous. In some measure, to check this prac-

CLAIMS ON THE LANDS CEDED BY NORTH CAROLINA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 24, 1802.

Mr. STANLEY, from the committee to which had been referred a petition of Memucan Hunt and others, addressed to the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina, and sundry resolutions of the said Assembly, respecting a claim of the petitioners for the value of certain lands in the State of Tennessee, held under grants from the State of North Carolina, prior to the cession of the said lands to the United States, made the following report:

That the limits of the State of North Carolina under their charter, and as claimed in their bill of rights prefixed to their constitution, previous to the adoption of the Federal constitution, were the Atlantic ocean on the east, the State of Virginia on the north, the River Mississippi on the west, and the State of South Carolina on the south; within which limits was comprehended a considerable tract of country occupied and used by the Indians for their residence and hunting grounds. That, in the year 1777, the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina passed an act for establishing offices for receiving entries for claims for lands in the several counties within the State, whereby they authorized the entering and granting "any lands lying in any county of said State, which had not been granted by the Crown of Great Britain, or the lords proprietors of North Carolina, or any of them, in fee, before the 4th day of July, 1776, or which have accrued or shall accrue to said State by treaty or conquest." That, in May, 1778, the General Assembly passed another act, to amend the above mentioned act, in which they ascertain and declare the boundary eastward of the Indian hunting ground, excluding all the lands at that time claimed to have been ceded or conquered from the Indians, which line did not extend so far westward as the present boundary line between the United States and the Indian tribes, and by that law "all entries and surveys of land which had been made over and beyond the said line are declared void; the money received by the entry takers, with their own fees, was directed to be refunded; and all future entries or surveys prohibited.

That, during the late war, the Cherokee Indians, within the limits of said State, were at open war and declared hostilities with the United States. And the State of North Carolina, in the year — sent an army into their country, and, at great expense of blood and treasure, subdued them. That, after this expedition, to wit, on the 17th May, 1783, another law of said State was passed, whereby the boundary of lands admitted to be entered was extended westwardly to the Mississippi; including all the lands within the limits of the State, and a land office was opened for the purpose of making entries and obtaining surveys of the same, "for the redemption of specie and other certificates, and discharging the arrears due to the army," excepting from such entry or survey a certain tract, bounded and described in the said act, reserved for the Indians, and certain other tracts reserved for special purposes.

That, in pursuance of the provisions of this act, and of an act passed in June, 1784, amending the same, various entries and surveys were made of the lands in question. It further appears that, on the 17th May, 1783, an act of the Legislature was passed; whereby, after stating that "holding treaties and appointing agents to keep up a friendly intercourse with the Cherokee Indians might prevent future wars and save expense of blood and treasure," provision was made for holding a treaty with the Indians, and providing for the expense of such treaty with the Indians, and of presents to be given to the Indians, in consideration of lands by them to be ceded to the State; but it does not appear that any such treaty was holden.

On the 28th May, 1785, the United States made the treaty of Hopewell with the Cherokees, and established a line between the United States and said tribe, excluding a large portion of the lands, which had been entered and surveyed by virtue of the said acts of the Legislature of North Carolina, at which treaty the agent of North Carolina attended and protested against it, as intrenching upon the rights of that State; but it does not appear to your committee that said treaty was ever ratified by the United States.

On the 21st November, 1789, North Carolina acceded to the constitution of the United States, and on the 22d December following, passed an act ceding to the United States all her western territory, including all the said lands; in which cession it is made a condition, "that all entries made by, or grants made to all and every person or persons whatsoever, agreeably to law, and within the limits thereby intended to be ceded to the United States, should have the same force and effect as if such cession had not been made; and that all and every right of occupancy and pre-emption, and every other right reserved by any act or acts, to persons settled in, and occupying lands within the limits of the lands hereby intended to be ceded as aforesaid, shall continue to be in full force, in the same manner as if the cession had not been made, and as conditions upon which the said lands are ceded to the United States;" which cession was, by an act of Congress, passed April 2d, 1790, accepted.

On the 2d July, 1791, the treaty of Holston was made with the Cherokee tribe of Indians, in which the present boundary line between the United States and the said Indian tribes was established, and all the lands lying beyond the said line secured thereby to the said tribe; whereby a considerable portion of the lands, entered and surveyed by virtue of the said acts, and intended to have been secured to the proprietors by the said deed of cession, is excluded.

The committee further report, that, at the first session of the sixth Congress, the petition of persons claiming under the State of North Carolina lands situated as those of the present petitioners, was referred to a committee, who reported the facts nearly as they now appear to your committee, and recommended that a sum should be appropriated to enable the President to extinguish, by treaty, the title of the Indians to the lands, the titles whereof were specially reserved and secured by the condition of the deed of cession, herein before recited; which report was accepted, and an act thereupon passed, entitled "An act to appropriate a certain sum of money, to defray the expense of holding a treaty or treaties with the Indians;" whereby, a sum not exceeding fifteen thousand dollars was appropriated to defray the expense of such treaty as the President of the United States should deem it expedient to hold with the Indians south of the River Ohio.

That, at the last session of Congress, the subject matter of said petition was again referred to a committee, who reported that, having received information that measures had been taken by the Executive, preparatory to holding a treaty under the act before recited, they were of opinion that adequate relief would be extended to the petitioners by the measures proposed by this House, at the first session of the sixth Congress; and that they were, therefore, of opinion, it was unnecessary to adopt any new regulations on the subject, until the result of those already proposed should be known.

Your committee further report, that it appears from the communication of the Executive to the present Congress, that measures have been taken for carrying into effect the act herein before cited, and a treaty has been holden with the said Indians, which failed in effecting the measure contemplated, of extinguishing the Indian title to said lands; nor does there appear from said communication, any ground to hope that any lands can be obtained from said Indians by treaty.

From these circumstances, your committee are of opinion that measures ought to be taken for relieving the petitioners; and recommend the following resolutions:

Resolved, That provision ought to be made by law, authorizing and enabling all persons who, under the laws of North Carolina, and in conformity to the regulations and provision thereof, have entered, surveyed, located, or obtained grants of any of the lands ceded by said State to the United States, in such manner as would have vested a good title under the said State of North Carolina, if such cession had not been made, to receive from the United States a compensation.

Resolved, That commissioners ought to be appointed to ascertain the quantity of lands ceded to the United States by the State of North Carolina, for which such compensation ought to be made.

INSTRUCTIONS TO LAND OFFICERS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES APRIL 6, 1802.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 5, 1802.

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY, to whom was referred Arthur Morrison's petition, respectfully reports:

That the petitioner having previously paid, according to law, to the receiver of public moneys at Steubenville, sixty-four dollars as deposit, and six dollars for surveying expenses, did, on the 26th day of October, 1801, apply to the register of the land office, at the same place, for the purchase of section four, in township No. 8, of range No. 5, containing six hundred and forty acres; that, on the 4th day of December following, being within forty days after the date of his application, he paid to the above mentioned receiver, the sum of two hundred and fifty-six dollars, which, with the preceding payment of sixty-four dollars, was in full of the first instalment of the purchase money of the said section; that he did not produce the receipt for such payment to the register aforesaid within three months after the date of his application; but that he produced the same on or before the 9th day of February last, that is to say, within fourteen days after the expiration of the said three months.

The fifth section of the act of May the 10th, 1800, provides that every purchaser of public lands shall, at the time of purchase, deposit one-twentieth part of the purchase money, to be forfeited if, within forty days, one-fourth part of the purchase money, including the said twentieth part, is not paid. Under that section, the petitioner has not incurred any forfeiture.

The seventh section of the same act provides that the register of the land office shall, three months after the date of each application, if the party shall not have, within that time, produced to him a receipt of the payment of one-fourth part of the purchase money, including the twentieth part above mentioned, enter under its proper date in the book of entries that the payment has not been made, and that the land has reverted to the United States. The petitioner did not produce the receipt within three months, and the entry, stating that the land had reverted to the United States, has accordingly been made by the register.

As neither this nor the other section of the act contemplates the forfeiture of any other part of the purchase money than the deposit of one-twentieth part, the receiver at Steubenville will be instructed to reimburse to the petitioner the sum of two hundred and fifty-six dollars, being the amount of his second payment, unless the land for which he had applied shall not have been applied for by any other person; in which case, the register of the land office may, in the opinion of the Secretary, permit the petitioner to re-enter the said land, and accept, as proper evidence of payment therefor, the receipts of the receiver of public moneys heretofore produced by him.

No doubt is entertained that the instruction to the receiver will accord with the most rigid construction which can be put on the law. It is believed that the decision, included in the instruction contemplated for the register, is not inconsistent with the provision of the seventh section. The object of that provision is only to insure the accountability of the receivers, by causing to be entered, with the registers, an account of all moneys received by those receivers, but not to affect the purchasers otherwise than by laying the land open to new applicants, if the former ones shall neglect to enter the receipts with the register. Under a liberal construction of the law, which appears to be consistent with sound policy, the United States should not derive from that neglect any advantage to themselves, provided that the payment has actually been made, and that the rights of other individuals shall not be affected.

If, however, any other person shall, in this instance, have applied for the land, it does not appear to be consistent with the law, nor eligible on general principles, to reimburse to the petitioner the sixty-four dollars paid as deposit; inasmuch as the admission of such a principle might enable purchasers, without any risk to themselves, to withdraw or vary their applications.

In order to prevent hereafter similar inconveniences which have a tendency to impede the sales of public lands, instructions are preparing for the land officers generally, by which the receivers will be directed to deliver, once every month, to the registers, transcripts of the receipts issued by them for purchase money, and the registers to consider the receivers, in that respect, as agents of the parties, and to act upon those transcripts as if the original receipts had been produced by the purchasers themselves.

Upon a due consideration of the petition referred to the Secretary, he is of opinion that all the relief which ought to be afforded may be given without any legislative interference.

All which is most respectfully submitted by
ALBERT GALLATIN,
The Hon. the SPEAKER of the House of Rep's.

GEORGIA CESSION.

COMMUNICATED TO CONGRESS APRIL 26, 1802.

Gentlemen of the Senate and of the House of Representatives:

In pursuance of the act entitled "An act supplemental to the act, entitled An act for an amicable settlement of the limits with the State of Georgia, and authorizing the establishment of a Government in the Mississippi territory." James Madison, Secretary of State, Albert Gallatin, Secretary of the Treasury, and Levi Lincoln, Attorney General of the United States, were appointed commissioners to settle, by compromise, with the commissioners appointed by the State of Georgia, the claims and cession to which the said act has relation.

Articles of agreement and cession have accordingly been entered into, and signed by the said commissioners of the United States and Georgia; which, as they leave a right to Congress to act upon them legislatively at any time within six months after their date, I have thought it my duty immediately to communicate to the Legislature.

TH. JEFFERSON.

*April 26, 1802.*CITY OF WASHINGTON, April 26, 1802.

SIR: We have the honor to enclose a copy of an agreement entered into between the commissioners of the United States and those of Georgia, in pursuance of the act entitled "An act supplemental to the act, entitled An act for an amicable settlement of limits with the State of Georgia, and authorizing the establishment of a Government in the Mississippi territory."

The nature and importance of the transaction have induced the insertion of a clause which renders it necessary that the subject should be communicated to Congress during their present session.

We have the honor to be, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servants,

JAMES MADISON.
ALBERT GALLATIN.
LEVI LINCOLN.

The PRESIDENT of the United States.

Articles of agreement and cession, entered into on the twenty-fourth day of April, one thousand eight hundred and two, between the commissioners appointed on the part of the United States, by virtue of an act, entitled "An act for an amicable settlement of limits with the State of Georgia, and authorizing the establishment of a Government in the Mississippi territory," and of the act supplemental to the last mentioned act, on the one part, and the commissioners appointed on the part of the State of Georgia, by virtue of an act, entitled "An act to carry the twenty-third section of the first article of the constitution into effect," and of the act to amend the last mentioned act, on the other part.

ARTICLE I. The State of Georgia cedes to the United States all the right, title, and claim, which the said State has to the jurisdiction and soil of the lands situated within the boundaries of the United States, south of the State of Tennessee, and west of a line, beginning on the western bank of the Chattahoochee river, where the same crosses the boundary line between the United States and Spain; running thence up the said River Chattahoochee, and long the western bank thereof, to the great bend thereof, next above the place where a certain creek or river, called "Uchee," (being the first considerable stream on the western side, above the Cussetas and Coweta towns,) empties into the said Chattahoochee river; thence, in a direct line, to Nickajack, on the Tennessee river; then crossing the said last mentioned river; and thence, running up the said Tennessee river, and along the western bank thereof, to the southern boundary line of the State of Tennessee; upon the following express conditions, and subject thereto; that is to say:

First, That out of the first net proceeds of the sales of the lands thus ceded, which net proceeds shall be estimated by deducting from the gross amount of sales, the expenses incurred in surveying, and incident to the sale, the United States shall pay, at their Treasury, one million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars to the State of Georgia, as a consideration for the expenses incurred by the said State, in relation to the said territory; and that, for the better securing as prompt a payment of the said sum as is practicable, a land office, for the disposition of the vacant lands thus ceded, to which the Indian title has been, or may hereafter be extinguished, shall be opened within a twelvemonth after the assent of the State of Georgia to this agreement, as hereafter stated, shall have been declared.

Secondly, That all persons who, on the twenty-seventh day of October, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-five, were actual settlers within the territory thus ceded, shall be confirmed in all the grants legally and fully executed prior to that day, by the former British Government of West Florida, or by the Government of Spain, and in the claims which may be derived from any actual survey or settlement made under the act of the State of Georgia, entitled "An act for laying out a district of land, situate on the River Mississippi, and within the bounds of this State, into a county, to be called Bourbon," passed the seventh day of February, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-five.

Thirdly, That all the lands ceded by this agreement to the United States shall, after satisfying the above-mentioned payment of one million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars to the State of Georgia, and the grants recognized by the preceding condition, be considered as a common fund, for the use and benefit of the United States, Georgia included, and shall be faithfully disposed of for that purpose, and for no other use or purpose whatever: provided, however, that the United States, for the period, and until the end of one year after the assent of Georgia to the boundary established by this agreement shall have been declared, may, in such manner as not to interfere with the above mentioned payment to the State of Georgia, nor with the grants hereinbefore recognized, dispose of or appropriate a proportion of the said lands, not exceeding five millions of acres, or the proceeds of the said five million of acres, or of any part thereof, for the purpose of satisfying, quieting, or compensating, for any claims other than those hereinbefore recognized, which may be made to the said lands, or to any part thereof. It being fully understood, that if an act of Congress making such disposition or appropriation shall not be passed into a law within the above mentioned period of one year, the United States shall not be at liberty thereafter to cede any part of the said lands on account of claims which may be laid to the same, other than those recognized by the preceding condition, nor to compensate for the same; and in case of any such cession or compensation, the present cession of Georgia to the right of soil over the lands thus ceded or compensated for shall be considered as null and void, and the lands thus ceded or compensated for shall revert to the State of Georgia.

Fourthly, That the United States, shall, at their own expense, extinguish, for the use of Georgia, as early as the same can be peaceably obtained, on reasonable terms, the Indian title to the country of Talassee, to the lands left out by the line drawn with the Creeks, in the year one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight, which had been previously granted by the State of Georgia, both which tracts had formally been yielded by the Indians; and to the lands within the forks of the Oconee and Ocmulgee rivers; for which several objects the President of the United States has directed that a treaty should be immediately held with the Creeks; and that the United States shall, in the same manner, also extinguish the Indian title to all the other lands within the State of Georgia.

Fifthly, That the territory thus ceded shall form a State, and be admitted as such into the Union, as soon as it shall contain sixty thousand free inhabitants, or at an earlier period, if Congress shall think it expedient, on the same conditions and restrictions, with the same privileges, and in the same manner, as is provided in the ordinance of Congress of the thirteenth day of July, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, for the government of the Western Territory of the United States; which ordinance shall, in all its parts, extend to the territory contained in the present act of cession, that article only excepted which forbids slavery.

ART. II. The United States accept the cession above mentioned, and on the conditions therein expressed; and they cede to the State of Georgia whatever claim, right, or title, they may have to the jurisdiction or soil of any lands lying within the United States, and out of the proper boundaries of any other State, and situated south of the southern boundaries of the States of Tennessee, North Carolina, and South Carolina, and east of the boundary line hereinabove described, as the eastern boundary of the territory ceded by Georgia to the United States.

ART. III. The present act of cession and agreement shall be in full force as soon as the Legislature of Georgia shall have given its assent to the boundaries of this cession; provided, that the said assent shall be given within six months after the date of these presents; and provided, that Congress shall not, during the same period of six months, repeal so much of any former law as authorizes this agreement, and renders it binding and conclusive on the United States: but if either the assent of Georgia shall not be thus given, or if the law of the United States shall be thus repealed, within the said period of six months, then, and in either case, these presents shall become null and void.

In faith whereof the respective commissioners have signed these presents, and affixed hereunto their seals. Done at the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, this twenty-fourth day of April, one thousand eight hundred and two.

1st SESSION.

CONTRACT WITH JOHN CLEVES SYMMES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE APRIL 29, 1802.

Mr. OGDEN, from the committee to which was referred the petition of John Cleves Symmes, esq., made the following report:

1. That, in the year 1788, the petitioner entered into a contract with the United States, upon a fair consideration, for the purchase of one million of acres of land in the Northwestern Territory.

2. That, in consequence of such contract, the petitioner made a settlement upon the tract, and sold many parcels thereof to adventurers, who went together with him into that new country, and located themselves there.

3. That, in the year 1794, the petitioner obtained a patent, under the authority of a law, which enabled the President of the United States to make the same, for such proportion of the one million of acres which had, at that time, been paid for, pursuant to the said contract, amounting to three hundred and eleven thousand six hundred and eighty-two acres of the said million of acres of land.

4. That the petitioner, after the said in-part fulfilment of the contract, on the side of both the parties to the same, proceeded to make sales, (as he before had done, in respect to the lands for which he had lately received the patent, as above mentioned,) in the residue of the one million of acres, expecting to make the title when he should receive his patent therefor agreeably to his contract, as he had before practised.

5. That no authority has been given, by law, or otherwise, that can be found by your committee, whereby the said contract can be carried into execution, on behalf of the United States, upon the payment of the sums further stipulated to be paid by the petitioner, agreeably to his contract, whereby he is entitled to a patent upon payment of such stipulated sums, which payments the petitioner avers he always has been, and still is, ready to pay and perform, as thereunto required by his contract.

6. That your committee, from the papers and documents laid before them by the petitioner, or from the statement which he has made, do not perceive that the petitioner has done any one act, or omitted to do any act, whereby he has forfeited any right to the full benefit of his contract before stated.

7. That no authority exists, by law, enabling any person to carry into execution the said contract on behalf of the United States; but, on the contrary, that two laws have been passed, predicated upon the idea that the obligation of the United States, under the said contract, has ceased and determined; under the operation of which laws, the said petitioner states, and your committee believe, that the said petitioner is suffering very great hardships, tending to the utter destruction and total waste of his whole property.

8. Your committee, the premises considered, beg leave to recommend the adoption of the resolution accompanying this report:

Resolved, That the President of the United States be requested to direct the Attorney General to examine into the contract entered into between the United States and John Cleves Symmes, esq., and others, bearing date on the 15th October, 1788, and all the contracts and laws relative thereto, and all the transactions which may legally or equitably effect the same, as far as they may come to his knowledge, and to make a report of the same to the Senate, at their next session, together with his opinion, whether the said John Cleves Symmes has any claims, and what, upon the United States, in virtue of the said contract, or any other contract or law predicated upon the same: and that the further consideration of the petition of said John Cleves Symmes, esq., of and concerning the premises, be postponed to the first day of the next session of Congress.

BOUNTY LAND WARRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 12, 1803.

Mr. JOHN COTTON SMITH, from the committee of claims, to which was referred the petition of Samuel Frazer, made the following report:

The petitioner states, that he was justly entitled to bounty land for his services as a private soldier during the revolutionary war; and that the warrant was issued the 24th January, 1792, to one William Thomas, to whom, the petitioner says, he had given no authority whatever for that purpose.

Cases of this kind are not susceptible of satisfactory proof; warrants have doubtless issued, in many instances, on forged powers of attorney; but the impossibility of ascertaining whether the party originally entitled to the land may not have been accessory to the fraud, has hitherto been deemed by Congress a sufficient reason for refusing their interposition. And when it is further considered, that the application for land warrants by attorney is an accommodation to the individual merely, and not to the public, it cannot be thought unreasonable that the party injured by a false power should be left to his remedy at law, against the person by whom he has been thus frauded.

Your committee are of opinion that the prayer of the petition ought not to be granted.

2d SESSION.

CONTRACT WITH JOHN CLEVES SYMMES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 28, 1803.

WASHINGTON, January 26, 1803.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a report, the result of an examination of the contract between the United States and John Cleves Symmes, bearing date October 15, 1788, as altered September 30th, 1794, together with such other documents as I could obtain, having a legal or an equitable relation to the subject.

I am respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

LEVI LINCOLN.

The PRESIDENT of the Senate of the United States.

To the Senate of the United States:

In obedience to their resolution of the thirtieth of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and two, the Attorney General of the United States, having made the examinations therein required, respectfully submits the following report:

Of the various and numerous transactions respecting the sale, or the contracts for the Miami lands, with John Cleves Symmes, those hereafter particularly referred to are alone, under existing circumstances, considered as affecting the question. From his original applications to Congress, their resolutions, and his subsequent communications to the board of commissioners, previous to the making of the contract of the 15th of October, 1788, nothing can be collected materially affecting, at the present time, the legal or equitable view of his case.

By this contract, of the above date, it was agreed that there should be granted to John Cleves Symmes and his associates, a tract of land, situate in the western country, bounded westwardly by the Great Miami; southwardly, by the Ohio; eastwardly, by a line beginning on the Ohio, at a spot twenty miles distant, and above the mouth of the Great Miami, and extending from the said spot, in a course parallel with the general course of the Great Miami, so as to include one million of acres; (with a reservation of five lots out of each township;) and that the United States should cause the said tract to be surveyed, the boundary lines to be plainly marked, and a plat thereof to be returned to the Board of Treasury, and a counterpart of the same, to John Cleves Symmes.

By the same contract, it was further agreed, that the said Symmes should pay at the rate of two-thirds of a dollar per acre (an allowance of one-third of a dollar being made from the sum of one dollar per acre, for bad lands and incidental charges) for the land contained in the said tract, after deducting the lots to be reserved. And eighty-two thousand one hundred and ninety-eight dollars, being then acknowledged to have been previously paid, (one-seventh in military rights, and the residue in public securities,) that he should pay the remainder in the following manner, viz: eighty-two thousand one hundred and ninety-eight dollars, within one month after the said plat shall have been delivered, and the lines and boundaries of the said tract ascertained, as aforesaid; and the residue in six equal payments; one of which, to be made at the expiration of every six months after the payment as aforesaid; the same to be made in gold or silver, or securities of the United States, or, instead thereof, to the amount of one-seventh part of the same, in rights, for bounty lands, by rendering the same acre for acre. It was further agreed by the same contract, that the said Symmes should, within seven years after the delivery of the said plat, as aforesaid, subdivide the whole of the said tract into townships and lots; should also have a right to take the immediate possession of one hundred and twenty-three thousand two hundred and ninety-seven acres, a part of the same land, and bounded on the Ohio-river; and upon his making the said payment of the eighty-two thousand one hundred and ninety-eight dollars, within one month after the delivery of the said plat, he should receive a conveyance, in fee simple, for two hundred and forty-six thousand five hundred and ninety-four acres, part of the said tract; and upon every remaining payment, a similar conveyance for a further proportional part of the said tract. It was also further provided, by the same contract, that the said Symmes, on, or before the return of the said survey, should execute and deposit at the Treasury of the United States, such a power of attorney, as, by counsel, should be judged adequate to the authorizing the parties to the second part of the said agreement for their entering into the same; and, in case of his failure, the whole of the said contract should cease, so far as it respected the said Symmes, and be transferred to the parties of the second part, and that they should be entitled to all the benefits of the covenants therein contained, which the said Symmes would otherwise have been entitled to, and have the same plat made for them, which, by said contract, was to have been made for him. April 11th, 1792, the above mentioned contract remaining in full force, there having been no failure by either party, neither having lost the right of exacting its performance, John Cleves Symmes, by his agent, and one of his associates, represented to Congress, that from the advanced price of certificates had resulted an impossibility of a strict fulfilment of the contract, and for various reasons, on insisting on a strict fulfilment of the original terms of the contract, would have occasioned the dispersion of all, and the ruin of most of the settlers, and, therefore, prayed for indulgencies, and a grant of so much of the land as should be equal to the payments which had been made. Accordingly, the next day, April 12, Congress passed an act authorizing the President, at the request of said Symmes, or his agent, to alter the contract above mentioned, for the sale of one million of acres, in such a manner that the said tract should extend from the mouth of the Great to the mouth of the Little Miami, and be bounded by the River Ohio on the south; by the Great Miami on the west; by the Little Miami on the east; and by a parallel of latitude on the north; extending from the Great Miami to the Little Miami, so as to comprehend the proposed quantity of one million of acres; provided, that the northern limits of the said tract should not interfere with the boundary line established by the treaty at Fort Harmar, between the United States and the Indians.

May the 5th, 1793, Congress passed an act authorizing the President to grant, in fee simple, to Symmes and his associates, as much land as the payments made by them, under their contract, would amount to, estimating the land at two-thirds of a dollar per acre; and one other tract of one hundred and six thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven acres; provided the said Symmes should pay, within six months, warrants which issued for army bounty rights sufficient for that purpose, according to the provisions of the resolves of Congress, of the 23d of July, and the 2d of October, 1787.

Mr. Israel Ludlow, who had been employed by the Government to survey the tract contained within said Symmes's contract, by his letter of the 10th of July, 1793, informed the Secretary that he had carried into effect, as far as practicable, his instructions, having completed the survey of the tract contained between the two Miami rivers, extending as far northwestwardly as the head of the Little Miami; and had found that little more than five hundred thousand acres were included therein.

By the plat of the survey, returned to the Treasury Department, bearing date the 10th of January, 1794, and certified by Mr. Ludlow, it appears that the tract, with its northern boundary, by a parallel of latitude run from the Great Miami to the head of the Little Miami, contained five hundred and forty-three thousand nine hundred and fifty acres.

Mr. Ludlow, in the winter of 1797, on an examination before a committee of the House of Representatives, to whom was recommended a report of the Attorney General relative to the contract between the United States and the said Symmes, together with documents accompanying the same, stated to the said committee, that, soon after the survey had been completed, he gave Judge Symmes information of its contents, and that afterwards, in the same year, when the survey was returned to the Treasury Department, gave to him a copy for his own private use; and that he thinks this was done after he, Ludlow, returned to the western country, and before Judge Symmes went to Philadelphia to obtain his patent.

On the 29th of September, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four, Judge Symmes, having, on the 8th of June, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-three, consented by letter, formally, by deed, requested the President to alter the contract in the manner proposed by the act of Congress, of the 12th of April, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two, so as to include only the tract mentioned in the same act, and bounded and described as was therein expressed; and by the same deed released to the United States, for himself, and, as the instrument purports, for his associates, all right and claim whatever, in and to so much of the land as was contained within the bounds and descriptions of the said contract, and not contained, or meant to be contained, within the limits of the above mentioned act of the 12th of April, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two.

On the 30th of September, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four, the President, by his letters patent, consented to, and made the alteration; and on the same day, in conformity to the act of the 5th of May, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two, granted to the said Symmes and his associates, all the tract of land bounded on the south by the River Ohio, on the west by the Great Miami, on the east by the Little Miami, so as to comprehend three hundred and eleven thousand six hundred and eighty-two acres, reserving five lots out of each township contained in the said contract; and further declaring, that one complete township of six miles square, to be located in the centre of the tract thus granted, was granted, and should be holden in trust for the sole purpose of erecting an academy, and endowing the same; the said parallel of latitude forming the boundary of the tract thus granted, to be run within five years by the said Symmes, from certain points, which shall have been ascertained by Israel Ludlow, on the two Miamis, according to the survey returned to the Treasury Department, on the 24th of March, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four.

In the above mentioned application of Judge Symmes to the President, for the alteration of his contract, he requests, that it might be so altered as to be subject to the same conditions, limitations, and reservations, as were expressed in the original contract, and the act of Congress. Accordingly, the said patent of the 30th of September, after reciting the first mentioned contract substantially, and the application for its alteration, together with the law authorizing such alteration, it expressly provides that the land to be granted to John Cleves Symmes, be on the same terms and conditions as in and by the first contracts were stipulated; and that it should extend from the mouth of the Great Miami to the mouth of the Little Miami, and be bounded by the River Ohio on the south, by the Great Miami on the west, by the Little Miami on the east, by a parallel of latitude on the north, extending from the Great Miami to the Little Miami; so as to comprehend one million of acres.

What were, or ought to have been, the respective effects, rights, and duties, resulting from the several transactions, and the provisions of the acts and contracts contained in the preceding statement, are necessary to be considered.

The original contract of the 15th of October, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-eight, contains provisions, some of which are mutual and independent; others dependent in reference to one of the parties. By this contract, the following articles or particulars were covenanted to be done:

1st. The United States were to cause, as soon as could be, a survey of the land, consisting of one million of acres, its lines marked, and a plat thereof returned to the Treasury Office.

2d. To cause a counterpart of the same map to be delivered to said Symmes, on condition of his having deposited with the Treasurer a power of attorney, as before described, on or before the said return should be made.

3d. On Symmes completing the stipulated payment within one month from the delivery of the said plat, as aforesaid, in gold, silver, or public securities, at the rate of two-thirds of a dollar per acre, or in military rights equal to one-seventh part, acre for acre, the United States were to convey to him to the amount of such payment.

4th. On every after payment which should be made by the said Symmes, in conformity to the covenants, the United States were to make a similar conveyance of such a further proportion of the land as each payment should amount to, until the whole should be conveyed.

5th. The United States were to permit Judge Symmes to take the immediate possession of one hundred and twenty-three thousand two hundred and ninety-seven acres of the land, it being a quantity equal to the payment which had been made.

6th. Symmes was to pay, in manner as expressed in the third article, eighty-two thousand one hundred and ninety-eight dollars, within one month after the said plat should be returned, and one-sixth part of the residue at the expiration of every six months afterwards, until the whole should be paid.

7th. Judge Symmes was, within seven years from the delivery of the said plat, to have subdivided the said land into townships and lots, and to cause the same to be returned to the Board of Treasury, or to some person authorized to receive the same.

8th. And lastly, by the aforesaid patent in fee, Symmes was to have located, with the approbation of the Governor of the territories, within five years from the date of the same, one township six miles square, and as near the centre of the granted land as could be, for the use of the academy and schools.

The design of the parties, and the equitable object and operation of the alteration patent, appear to be merely to substitute the tract of land described therein, for that which was contained in the first contract; and this being done by altering the same so far as it respected boundaries only, and such incidents or particulars as were necessarily connected with or involved in that alteration, they both may be considered as now forming one entire contract; or the first as having the land described in the last, as its subject matter; or the last, which in effect will be the same thing, as adopting the covenants and provisions contained in the first, in respect to the rights or duties created thereby in reference to the parties. In either alternative, from the nature of such a contract, and the character of the parties, as government and citizens, it ought to be subject to a construction on equitable considerations, rather than by rigid legal principles. In viewing the subject, in reference to the first and second articles, it is conceived that the United States are chargeable with no omissions which Judge Symmes can or ought to avail himself of. Before the arrival of the time in which the United States, by the terms of their original agreement, were obliged to survey, mark the lines, and return the plat of the million of acres, and the counterpart, he, by his agent, had informed the United States of the impossibility of that strict performance on his part, on which alone they would have been held to have executed the contract on their part. Symmes, by his letter of the 8th of June, 1793, closed the agreement for the alteration of bounds. This contract, as it destroyed the reason for having the plan stipulated by the first agreement, released the United States from the obligation to make it.

By this new contract, which was consummated on the 29th and 30th of September, Symmes, from the reason of the thing, was released from being liable to forfeit his contract, on his failing to deposit a power as aforesaid, the necessity of it being entirely superseded. To the purpose of deciding on the other articles, it is necessary to consider the effect of the alteration of the contract in reference to the quantity of land contained therein, a plan thereof, its return to the Treasury Office, and a counterpart to Symmes, in conformity to the intent and spirit of the original agreement. By the alteration patent, all the covenants, provisos, and conditions contained in the first contract, were to be preserved, applied, and be operative in the altered contract which could be applicable to the subject matter, and no further changed than that was changed.

By the altered contract of September, 1794, and the adopted or preserved covenants, Government were obliged to cause a plan of the land meant to have been conveyed, and its counterpart to be placed in the stipulated situation, or they were not. If not, then not one of the covenants for the payments could have had any force, although on these payments alone the land was to have been conveyed. This construction would have destroyed the contract altogether. If the United States were thus obliged, then Symmes was entitled to the land contracted for only on his making those payments, which were the precedent conditions, on the performance of which alone Government were held to make the conveyance to him.

The plan, or its counterpart, which was to be placed in the Treasury Office, and in Symmes's hands, respectively, upon which he was to have regulated his payments, was one of the lands described by the altered contract. It is described by its quantity, courses, lines, and monuments; that is, as bounded by the Rivers Ohio, Great and Little Miamis, and northwardly by a parallel of latitude extending from the Great Miami to the Little Miami, and so as to include one million of acres. The quantity of acres, mentioned so far as it respects that contract of the tract, or its description, which is inconsistent with the lines and monuments expressly stated, might, it is conceived, on settled principles, be so construed and so controlled by these lines and monuments as to include that land alone which is contained within their limits. As well might the southerly and westerly boundaries be departed from, as the easterly and northerly be passed over, for the purpose of covering the million of acres; the latter being as clearly fixed by the contract, and in nature, as the former; the legal effect of the contract, as altered on the 30th September, in reference to the quantity and situation of the land, confining it to what was within the three rivers and the most northwardly parallel of latitude, extending from the one Miami to the other. It is certain that Symmes could not have been compelled to have paid for land not included within these limits, or the United States to convey it. And the presumption is, or ought to be, that neither party contemplated such a conveyance. However difficult it may be to account for Government's, or for Symmes's supposing there were a million of acres within these boundaries, or for their actually executing a contract for a million of acres by these bounds, eight months after the former had been furnished with a plan, and the latter had at least been informed that it contained but little more than half that quantity, it is obvious that the above construction, in principle, for some time after the contract was made, would have been considered as beneficial to the purchaser, as in practice it was made still more so. In principle, the constructive and legal contract was more valuable to the purchaser than the supposed one would have been, as he was to pay by the acre, and the lands between, adjoining, and in the neighborhood of those rivers, were better, and their average value much greater, than similar quantities northwardly of them.

This is apparent, not only from their relative situations, but from the purchaser's great and continued solicitude to locate on the first, in preference to the last situations. A construction, which would have given to the purchaser a better bargain than was intended, can have furnished him with no grounds of complaint.

Nor is it perceived that there has been any injury, in fact, to the purchaser, but the reverse from his being limited by the most northwardly waters of the Little Miami, or from the error in supposing there were a million of acres contained within the boundaries of his contract, if a mistake is to be presumed, after the return and inspection of a part of an actual survey. From this erroneous supposition, the purchaser or his associates deduced the right and had the advantage of paying almost two-sevenths of their contract, and above one-half of their actual payments in military warrants of one acre for an acre and a half of the supposed million, instead of one-seventh part of the actual payments. The increased proportion of warrant payments, and their excess in value, from estimating one military for an acre and a half of the supposed million, and above its average value, although they were great practical advantages against the spirit of the contract, and at an expense or loss to the United States of more than thirty thousand dollars; yet, as they were settled by competent authority, and perhaps in balance of some equitable claims against the Government, they ought not to be unravelled against the purchaser. Judge Symmes states, what heretofore he repeatedly has done, that, from these advantages, he derived no personal advantage; it is certain he could no injury, and thus far, on the score of the contract or its execution, he had no cause of complaint.

It appears to be unnecessary to consider what effect the altering of the contract, by the first and third party to it, had on the second, or to their associates, who were not apparently consenting to such an alteration, as no material question from this circumstance attaches itself to the present inquiry. It is, however, perfectly clear, as they were not to make the payments, and as Symmes alone had become responsible to the United States, and they to him, the counterpart of the plan was in no event to be delivered to them, and as they were released from the covenants contained in the first contract which were transferred to the last, that the alteration was for the benefit of Symmes alone.

By the contract thus altered between the United States and Symmes, they were to cause to be placed in the Treasury Office, a plan of the land to be conveyed, and to make the conveyances on his making the stipulated payments, after the plan should be placed as had been agreed. The times, as respectively stated in the first contract, for the several payments, were binding on the purchaser; or there were none stated, and he would have had his whole life to have made his payments in, which has never been pretended.

The question then is, has the month commenced, in a fair and equitable construction of the agreement, at the expiration of which Symmes was to have made his first payment; or, in other words, has a plan been taken and deposited according to the agreement? And if so, when was it done? As, at the time of making the last contract, the survey had been made, and the plan thereby required actually in the office, the month must be considered as commencing, either at this time, or on Symmes's having notice of its being thus placed, or on its counterpart being delivered to him. If, at the time of altering the contract, Judge Symmes knew that the plan, in fact, was in the office, or afterwards had that notice, or was obliged to take notice at his peril, and the delivery of the counterpart was not parcel of the condition, on the performance of which the first payment was to have been made, then the month commenced at the time of altering the contract, or on such notice being had. If the delivery of the counterpart formed a part of the condition, then the periods for the payments are to be determined by such a delivery, if such there has been; and, in either case, the payments not being made or offered, the contract may be considered as void, at the election of the United States.

Considering the interest Symmes had in the Miami lands, in the survey, in its return, and his connexion and frequent opportunities for interviews with Ludlow after he had made the return, both before and after the execution of the deed of alteration, the presumption of his knowing of its return at or about that time is very strong—is violent. Ludlow lived on this very land with Judge Symmes, went out with him, and was with him at Philadelphia, when he was there for the very purpose of returning the plan. Although he was not instructed by the Treasury Department to deliver one to Symmes, the evidence of a presumptive kind is not equally strong of the actual delivery of the counterpart to Judge Symmes, and he denies that it ever was delivered. But Ludlow stated to the committee of 1797, as before related, that in the year in which he made his return, (being in 1794,) having previously informed Judge Symmes of the contents of the survey, he delivered to him a copy of the plan for his own private use. This, if true, on a construction of the contract the most favorable to Judge Symmes, made it necessary for him to have made his payment, as stipulated, within one month from that time, and the other payments semi-annually, to have entitled himself to the benefit of his contract. The reasonings of Judge Symmes, in his various communications on the subject, admit, if he has been furnished with a plan according to the agreement, that he has forfeited his contract. Ludlow's plan being such a one, on the above construction of this contract, renders his testimony important; it is impossible for one, to whom he is a stranger, correctly to appreciate it. His being employed by Government for such an important survey is a strong testimonial in favor of his capacity and integrity. And, if he is honest, his testimony, taken by a very respectable committee of the House of Representatives, about three years after the return was made, although not under oath, demands respect. A transaction so important, requiring so much and such nice attention, involving such various and important interest, and referring to parties and a contract with which he was perfectly acquainted, as the copying and delivering a plan of the Miami lands, could not have been so soon forgotten or confounded with any other transaction of a similar nature; especially as he considered his original plan to be in conformity to the act of April 12, 1792, which appears from his certificate on the same, and also probably knew, by the terms of the contract, a copy thereof was to be delivered to the purchaser.

On the idea that the preceding statements and principles are correct, Government have been chargeable with no omissions in reference to their contract with Judge Symmes, it having been long since released from the obligation to make the conveyances to him, as expressed in the above stated third and fourth particulars, and having permitted him to take the possession, as provided for in the fifth.

It results that the neglect, constructively, legally, and in fact, by which Judge Symmes may have been injured, is chargeable on himself; originating, probably, from a different construction of the contract, at least so far as it respects the sixth and seventh articles.

In reference to the eighth and last before mentioned particular, there appears to have been a total and independent failure on the part of the purchaser. He has neither located the township for the use of an academy and schools, nor will his other dispositions admit of its being now done in the stipulated situation. He states that he has reserved a township near the mouth of the Great Miami, instead of one in the centre of his grant, for the use of these schools.

But to a part or proportion of this township, it seems, there is a claim of a third person, which has been the foundation of a suit in chancery, now pending against Judge Symmes. Of the validity of this claim, or the event of the action, it is difficult to form, and improper to express, any opinion.

One further circumstance requires attention. By the foregoing construction, Judge Symmes's contract covered all the lands between the said three rivers and a parallel of latitude extending from the most northwardly waters of the Little Miami, and, of course, a plan thus extended was the stipulated plan which should have been taken, returned, and its counterpart delivered to him. The Little Miami, from its source, bends round southwardly, then northwardly; so that a plan limited by a parallel of latitude drawn from its head, not extending so far northwardly as one from its most northwardly bend, is not, in strictness, the plan of the land contracted for, but of a part of it. This being undoubtedly true, in fact, and making a difference of ten or fifteen thousand acres, had the exception have been originally taken, and the controversy placed on this point, it would have been a substantial one in favor of the purchaser. He ought not have been abridged in his grant, nor to have been bound by any mistake of the surveyor of the opposite party. But the case is far otherwise. The object was to make a complete plan of the land, as described within its northwardly bounds, limited by the most northwardly waters of the Little Miami. As such it was taken, returned, received, and in the office at the time of altering the contract; as such was Symmes informed of its contents, and its counterpart delivered to him by Ludlow; as such has it remained in the office, and with him as a complete and correct map of the tract of land above described, to every purpose for which such a map could be considered as material has it been viewed by all parties; no exception appears to have been taken on account of this mistake, until since the last session of Congress; no one measure appears of either party to have been in the least influenced by it; nor is it easy to perceive, from the ground on which the respective parties have placed the controversy, that any possible injury has or could result therefrom. Every step of the concerned appears to have been taken on the idea of the plans including all the land between the Miamis and most northwardly parallel of latitude, from the waters of one of them; and their measures have, in fact, been precisely the same, and have had the same effect as they would have been and had, had the parallel been drawn from the most northwardly point. Symmes had no objections to the plan, from its not extending a little further; Government had not, to its being thus extended; about this there was no disagreement; the difference was no object to either party; neither appears to have noticed it, or, if they did, to have been dissatisfied with it. Symmes claimed, in virtue of his contract, a plan extending to a parallel of latitude including a million of acres; he rejected Ludlow's supposing it to extend to those most northwardly waters, not because it did not so extend, but because it did not include the million of acres. And Government, viewing the deposited and its counterpart as the stipulated ones, have rejected the Judge's claims, not on the ground of a non-compliance on its part, but on his part, in his refusal to accept of any plan limited by these waters, as reaching this northern boundary of his contract. Whether he was or was not confined to the most northwardly part of the Little Miami, has been the only question. On this issue have the present demands, as matters of right, been always placed by Symmes and by Government. If the decision is against him, he can have no grounds for equitable or legal claims, under existing circumstances, as claims by contract. The surveyor's returning, the Government's receiving, retaining, and refusing to take another, and Symmes not rejecting a plan having the parallel of latitude marked on it, are proofs that it was viewed by them as conforming to the contract, if that contract did not extend northwardly of the Little Miami; and if so, as such, now it ought to bind him. Every act and word of his touching a map declaring to Government that one extending a little further north than the one delivered would not have been preferable, or have been received as the one contracted for, superseded the equitable, and, it is believed, the legal necessity of producing such a one. If so, the one taken and delivered by Ludlow, from its not having been objected to, on the principles of its stopping short of the most northwardly point of the Little Miami, and from its having been considered as correct, in reference to this northern boundary, ought now to be so considered.

It is from the preceding view taken of the subject, that Judge Symmes appears to have no claims on the Government, founded on a legal right, or a particular equity growing out of a fair and reasonable construction of his contract. If he has claims, they appear to rest on that voluntary justice and liberal and general equity, which Government or an individual will, or ought, always to extend, in a matter of a common concern, towards the unfortunate, whose acts inducing the misfortune, have been to them productive of particular benefits. Generally the establishing a settlement in a large, new, and wilderness country, is attended with trouble, expense, hardships, and danger, to the first settlers, and with profit and various advantages to the proprietors of the country, by increasing its population, the value and sale of their lands, and, as the case has been, the security of a frontier. On these grounds, the judge is pathetic in the statement of his claims. They are, at least, specious, and perhaps deserve the more attention, as his disappointments and sufferings appear to have resulted, in part, from an opinion of the extent of his contract, although differing from Government's, yet at least colorable, and supported by some official reports on the subject.

How far there are countervailing circumstances; how far there was a benefit to the purchaser, in exchanging the land described in the first contract for that contained in the second; what advantage he derived from the payment of military rights, one acre for one and a half, and to the full proportion of a million of acres; what from disposing of the township near the centre of his grant, or from any other source, are submitted to the consideration of the honorable Senate. For this purpose, more and other knowledge than could be collected in the course of this inquiry would be necessary.

The Attorney General has examined, with attention, all the papers and documents accompanying this case, with the communications which Judge Symmes, from time to time, has thought proper to make. He has unreservedly stated to him the principles of this report; and, submitting it to his inspection, heard and considered his remarks thereon, has, nevertheless, remained impressed with a belief of its general correctness.

All which is most respectfully submitted.

VIRGINIA MILITARY LAND WARRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 11, 1803.

Mr. JOHN COTTON SMITH, from the Committee of Claims, to which was referred the petition of Bernard Glenn, made the following report:

This is an application for a grant of land on the north side of the River Ohio, to satisfy a land warrant issued by the State of Virginia to the petitioner, as a lieutenant in the Virginia State establishment. The petitioner states, that the lands appropriated by Virginia for this purpose are situated on Cumberland river, and are now within the limits of the State of Kentucky, whose Legislature have prohibited the location of any warrants within the same, issued by the authority of any other State. He also further represents to your committee, that, in the year 1791, the United States ceded to the Cherokees the land on Cumberland river, so appropriated by Virginia; that this cession, independent of the acts of the Legislature of Kentucky, would have effectually prevented the petitioner, and all others possessing similar claims, from locating their warrants; and that, although in the Virginia reservation of land between the Rivers Miami and Scioto, no provision was made for warrants of this description, yet that a sufficiency of land will remain in that tract to satisfy the warrants issued by Virginia to the troops of her State establishment, after the other objects of the reservation are fully answered.

It is not easy to conceive in what manner the refusal of Kentucky to recognize the rights of grantees under Virginia, can constitute a claim on the General Government. If, by amicable adjustment between those two States, the rights claimed under Virginia cannot be secured, it is presumed that her regard to justice will insure to the concerned an equivalent.

Nor, in the view of your committee, does the treaty made with the Cherokee tribe of Indians, in 1791, materially affect the question. That treaty merely defines the boundaries between the United States and the Cherokees, and only guarantees to that nation the enjoyment of what it was before the acknowledged proprietor. If, when the Indian title to the land on Cumberland river shall be extinguished, provision be made that the holders of military land warrants shall enjoy the benefit of the appropriation heretofore made by Virginia, the General Government will then have shown as much attention to the present claim as, in the opinion of your committee, it is entitled to receive.

Your committee are of opinion that the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted.

2d SESSION.

GEORGIA LAND CLAIMS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 16, 1803.

The commissioners appointed in pursuance of the act, entitled "An act for an amicable settlement of limits with the State of Georgia, and authorizing the establishment of a government in the Mississippi Territory," in obedience to the provisions of the act, supplemental to the last mentioned act, respectfully submit the following report on the claims made by settlers, and other persons to lands within the territory situate west of the River Chattahoochee, and south of the cession made to the United States by South Carolina:

The territory of the United States south of the State of Tennessee, extends in breadth two hundred and seventy-five miles from the thirty-first to thirty-fifth degree of north latitude; from east to west, its greatest length, from the River Chattahoochee to the Mississippi; measures three hundred and eighty miles, along the northern boundary of West Florida; the length of its northern boundary, along the State of Tennessee, is not precisely ascertained, but it is believed that the average length of the whole may, without material error, be estimated at three hundred miles, and the contents of the territory at fifty-two millions of acres.

The only portions of that vast extent, to which the Indian title has been extinguished, are a tract of about one million and a half of acres, extending along the Mississippi, from the mouth of the River Yazoo, southwardly to the Spanish line; and another tract, at least equal in extent, and extending between the Rivers Pascagola and Mobile, or Tombigbee, more than fifty miles north of that line.

The settlements within those two tracts, which are separated from each other by a wilderness of one hundred and twenty miles in breadth, form the whole population of the Mississippi Territory.

The claims to lands within these boundaries are derived either from the British Government of West Florida, from the Spanish Government, from occupancy and settlement, or from the State of Georgia.

The British governors of West Florida, after the boundaries of that province had been extended as far north as the parallel of latitude which crosses the Mississippi at the mouth of the River Yazoo, granted lands south of that parallel, until the year 1781, when the province was conquered by Spain.

A great portion of the lands granted in that manner has since been regranted by the Spanish Government; several tracts have continued in the occupancy of the original grantees or of their representatives; and several remain unoccupied, or are inhabited by persons who have no other claim but that of possession.

The grants of the Spanish Government appear to have been confined to persons actually residing on the lands; but they were made indiscriminately on every unoccupied tract, whether the same had been previously granted by the British Government or not; nor did they discontinue making concessions, even after Spain had, by the treaty of October, 1795, recognized the right of the United States to the whole territory north of the thirty-first degree of north latitude.

Until the evacuation, which was delayed for nearly two years, had taken place, grants were issued, sometimes bearing their real date, and sometimes, as is alleged, antedated.

On the 7th of February, 1785, the State of Georgia passed an act for the purpose of laying out that tract of country extending along the Mississippi, from the thirty-first degree of north latitude to the mouth of the River Yazoo, to which the Indian title had been extinguished, into a county by the name of Bourbon; and declared that, whenever a land office should be opened, there should be a right of preference reserved to the possessors of lands within that district; provided they actually lived on and cultivated the said lands. That act was repealed on the 1st day of February, 1788.

By the articles of agreement and cession between the United States and Georgia, it is provided that the persons who, on the 27th of October, 1795, (being the date of the treaty with Spain,) were actual settlers within that territory, shall be confirmed in all the grants legally and fully executed, prior to that day, by the former British Government of West Florida, or by the Government of Spain, and in all the claims which may be derived from any actual survey or settlement made under the act of Georgia, commonly called the Bourbon act.

The persons in whose favor that clause was inserted, were, at the request of the commissioners, invited by the Governor of the Mississippi Territory to exhibit their claims. This has been partially done in that part of the Territory which lies contiguous to the Mississippi; claims amounting to about two hundred and forty thousand acres, and said to be derived from British and Spanish patents, have been transmitted. A few applications have also been filed for lands claimed under the Bourbon act, most of which, however, are for tracts improved after the act had been repealed. Including even these, the Governor is of opinion that there cannot be, in the whole, more than three hundred and fifty thousand acres on the Mississippi covered by claims confirmed by the articles of agreement. From that part of the Territory which lies on the Mobile, no returns have been received.

The claims derived from the British and Spanish Governments, or from occupancy, and not recognized by the agreement with Georgia, are:

1st. British grants held by persons who were not resident in the Territory on the 27th October, 1795, and have not improved their lands. The West Florida patents were, with but few exceptions, accompanied with a clause of forfeiture, unless the land should be improved within ten years; and the Spanish Government seem to have considered all the unimproved lands as forfeited. It is, however, alleged, on the part of the grantees, that, although a condition of settlement was commonly annexed to the grants in the British provinces under the royal Governments, with a penalty of forfeiture, in case of default, this has never been enforced either by the British Government, or, after the revolution, by the United States; and that the Indians at first, and the Spanish conquest, afterwards, rendered in this case a fulfilment of the condition impossible.

Where the land has been regranted by Spain, the parties must be left to a judicial decision; but where it remains unclaimed by any other person, the commissioners are of opinion that it would be improper for the United States to grant it again, until the amount and nature of the grants shall have been fully ascertained.

2d. British and Spanish incomplete grants.

As lands were granted under both Governments, upon the petition of the party, and as the first evidence of title was a warrant or order of survey directed to the surveyor of the district, it has happened, in many instances, that the Spanish conquest, in 1781, and the treaty with Spain, in 1795, found persons who had only a survey executed, or, perhaps, an order of survey, and who could not, on account of the change of Government, complete their titles.

This circumstance is stated both in the petition of the settlers on Mobile, which has been referred by the House of Representatives to the commissioners, and in the letter of the Governor of the Mississippi Territory, heretofore annexed, (A,) as more particularly involving claimants under Spanish titles; it having been customary, until the American settlers at Natchez requested patents, to consider a Spanish order of survey, when executed and returned, as a sufficient title; whilst, on the other hand, few settlers are obliged to claim under incomplete British titles, as they generally applied, in lieu of them, for Spanish grants, and now claim under these.

3d. Settlement without any evidence of title. It is stated by the Governor of the Territory, that one hundred and thirty heads of families had, prior to October, 1795, formed settlements, without any other title but what might be derived from the Bourbon act; and that seven hundred more have settled in the country since that time, who either have no title whatever, or rest their claims on Spanish orders of survey and grants issued after the date of the treaty. It is apprehended that very few of the claimants of the first description will be found to come strictly within the terms of the Bourbon act. Some stress is laid by those of the last description, who migrated to that country before the Spanish posts had been evacuated, on their ignorance at first of the treaty, and on the subsequent acquiescence of the American Government, in the continued possession by the Spanish Government.

To these three several classes of claims may be added that of persons, principally from Connecticut, styling themselves a Company of Military Adventurers, who, under a mistaken expectation of obtaining a large grant from the British Crown, sent agents, in 1773, to West Florida, for the purpose of exploring the country. The governor of that province promised to grant lands to such as should become settlers, on as advantageous terms as he was authorized to do, and to reserve till next spring, for that purpose, nineteen townships, which had been selected and surveyed by the agents. A number of emigrants from Connecticut, accordingly removed to the Mississippi in 1774; the war prevented the progress of the settlements; and one hundred and forty of the settlers left the country in 1781, when the Spanish conquest took place, and traversing the Choctaw and Cherokee country, reached the inhabited parts of Georgia. The claim which is now set up in the name of the company for the nineteen townships, has no foundation. Such of the settlers as had obtained grants, or have continued on the lands, will be embraced by the provisions made for other claimants of a similar description. It will remain for Congress to decide whether any special provision should be made for those who abandoned the lands in the manner above stated.

It would require more correct information than has been obtained by the commissioners, to enable them to offer a plan perfectly satisfactory to themselves, on the subject of those various and clashing claims. The following outlines are with diffidence submitted to the consideration of Congress.

1st. That persons who were resident in the territory on the 27th day of October, 1795, be confirmed in their claims to those tracts of lands then actually cultivated and inhabited, for which they had received orders of survey, dated before that day, either from the British or Spanish Governments, in the same manner as if their title had been completed; provided that no such incomplete title shall be ratified unless the person in whose favor such order had issued was of full age at the time of its date.

2d. That every head of a family (including single persons of twenty-one years of age and above, who did not reside with their parents,) who was a resident in the territory on the — day of — 1797, when the Spanish garrisons were evacuated; who claims no land in the territory under British or Spanish grants; and who did, on that day, occupy and cultivate a tract of land not otherwise claimed, shall be confirmed in the possession of such tract, not exceeding six hundred and forty acres.

3d. That every head of family who resided in the territory on the — day of — 1802, when the articles of agreement with Georgia were ratified by that State, and who did on that day occupy and cultivate a tract of land not otherwise claimed, shall have a right of pre-emption to such tract, not exceeding six hundred and forty acres.

4th. That commissioners be appointed with a fixed salary, and without fees, who shall immediately proceed to the settlements on the Mississippi and on the Mobile, with power to receive, examine, and decide on all claims embraced by the articles of agreement with Georgia, and by the preceding provisions, and to issue certificates stating, as the case may be, that the party is entitled to the land or to a right of pre-emption to the same; but no patents shall issue until after the lands shall have been surveyed, and the interferences arising from clashing claims ascertained; nor shall any other evidence of title but the commissioner's certificate issue in cases where the land is claimed by either a British or Spanish title fully and completely executed.

5th. That all claims derived from the agreement with Georgia, from British or Spanish grants, or from occupation, which shall not be filed with the commissioners within a twelvemonth, shall forever after be barred.

6th. That the commissioners shall make a full report to Congress of the British grants filed with them, on which no improvement had been made by or for the grantees, and which are not claimed under subsequent Spanish grants.

7th. That so much of the five millions of acres reserved for that purpose by the agreement with Georgia, as may be necessary to satisfy the claims not confirmed by that agreement, and which are embraced by the preceding provisions, and all those which may be derived from British grants, be appropriated for that purpose.

The last class of claims consists of those which are derived, or pretended to be derived from Georgia. On the 21st December, 1789, the Legislature of that State passed an act, entitled "An act for disposing of certain vacant lands or territory within that State;" by which it is enacted that two tracts of land comprehending together the whole tract of country lying between the Mississippi and Tombigbee, and extending from the parallel which crosses the Mississippi at the mouth of Cole's creek (about 31° 45') to the northern boundary of the State, together with a third tract lying on the Tennessee river, shall, for two years from and after the passing of that act, be respectively reserved as a pre-emption for three companies called the South Carolina Yazoo, the Virginia Yazoo, and the Tennessee Company; and that the Governor shall issue grants for the said tracts to the said companies, if they shall, within the terms of two years, pay into the public treasury of the State the following sums, that is to say: the South Carolina Yazoo Company the amount of sixty-six thousand nine hundred and sixty-four dollars; the Virginia Yazoo Company the amount of ninety-three thousand seven hundred and forty-one dollars; and the Tennessee Company the amount of forty-six thousand eight hundred and seventy-five dollars.

An inconsiderable sum was paid, in the paper medium of the State, by the two first mentioned companies, and they did, within the two years, tender in payment to the Treasurer of the State the whole amount of the purchase money in evidences of the public debt of the State. The payment was refused on the part of Georgia.

The money which had been deposited by the Virginia Yazoo Company was withdrawn; but the South Carolina Company instituted, before the Supreme Court of the United States, a suit against the State, which was terminated by the amendment to the constitution relative to the stability of States.

Both companies now claim at least an indemnification on account of the expenses and damages incurred by reason of what they consider as a violation of contract on the part of Georgia. There is nothing on the face of the act which justifies the construction contended for by the claimants; and it is by collateral evidence only that they attempt to prove that it was the intention of the Legislature, when the law was passed, that the payments should be made in evidences of the public debt of the State. In support of that construction they bring their own petitions to the Legislature, applying for the land, which petitions are referred to in the preamble of the act, and the protest of the minority in the Legislature who voted against the law, principally, as they allege, because the payments were to be made in depreciated certificates.

Upon a full view of the subject, the commissioners do not perceive that those companies have any equitable claim either for the land or for compensation from the United States.

On the 7th day of February, 1795, the State of Georgia passed an act, hereunto annexed, (K) authorizing the sale of four tracts of land therein described, and comprehending the greater part of the country lying west of the River Alabama, to four companies, called the Georgia, the Georgia Mississippi, the Upper Mississippi, and the Tennessee Companies; for which they were to pay five hundred thousand dollars.

To the Georgia Mississippi Company was assigned all that tract lying between the Mississippi and Tombigbee rivers, and bounded by the parallels of latitude 31° 18', and 32° 40', for which they were to pay one hundred and fifty-five thousand dollars.

The tract designated for the Georgia Company was bounded on the north by the thirty-fourth degree of latitude; on the east by the Alabama river; on the west and south by the Mobile or Tombigbee, from the Spanish line to the northeast corner of the lands assigned to the Georgia Mississippi Company, by the northern boundary of the said lands, and by the Mississippi; for which they were to pay two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

The Tennessee Company were to pay sixty thousand dollars for a tract lying between the northern boundary of the State and the parallel of latitude passing by the head spring of Bear creek, and bounded on the west by Tennessee and Bear creek, and on the east by a meridian crossing the last mentioned parallel, one hundred and twenty miles east from the source of Bear creek.

And the Upper Mississippi Company were, in consideration of thirty-five thousand dollars, to receive a tract of twenty-five miles in breadth, adjoining the northern boundary of the State, and extending from the Mississippi to Tennessee and Bear creek, its boundaries on the east.

Two millions of acres were reserved out of these several tracts for the use of such citizens of Georgia as chose to subscribe on the original terms of the purchase, the moneys paid by those citizens to the State being considered as part of the purchase money of the companies in whose territory they subscribed; the quantities thus reserved out of each tract being one million of acres in the Georgia Company; six hundred and twenty thousand acres in the Georgia Mississippi Company; two hundred and forty-two thousand acres in the Tennessee Company; and one hundred and thirty-eight thousand acres in the Upper Mississippi Company. The price paid by the citizens who did subscribe, was two cents and one third per acre, it being the price then supposed to have been paid by the companies; which (five hundred thousand dollars being the purchase money) would give about twenty-one millions five hundred thousand acres for the estimated quantity of land in the four tracts. It was further declared by the act, that the lands lying westward of the eastward boundary of the several companies' purchase, were estimated at one third of the lands within the purchase, and were supposed to contain seven millions two hundred and fifty thousand acres, which would give twenty-one millions seven hundred and fifty thousand acres for the quantity intended to be sold. The land contained within those purchases amounts, however, to nearly thirty-five millions of acres; and the present claimants estimate the quantity at nearly forty millions of acres.

The several companies did, it is understood, pay the purchase money and obtain grants from the Governor of Georgia, for the several tracts designated in the law; the lands have since passed through several hands, and, so far as has come within the knowledge of the commissioners, the title derived from the grants appears to be now held in the following manner.

The whole tract granted to the Georgia Mississippi Company was divided into sixteen hundred equal undivided shares, and the president and directors of the company, in January, 1796, sold the whole, with the exception of the six hundred and twenty thousand acres reserved for citizens' subscriptions, to certain individuals in Massachusetts, who style themselves the New England Mississippi Company. The title has been conveyed to trustees for the use of the company, which consists of two thousand two hundred and seventy-six equal shares.

It is urged by sundry associates or sharers of the original Mississippi Company, that they have not been paid, and that they are still entitled to a portion of the land.

The tract granted to the Upper Mississippi Company appears to be divided into twelve equal undivided shares, and to be unentangled by militant claims.

The tract granted to the Tennessee Company was, by the grantees, Mathias Maher and Zachariah Coxe, divided into four hundred and twenty equal shares. Several hundred thousand acres are, besides, claimed under deeds signed by Z. Coxe alone, and which appear to be exclusively of the shares which he held. The greater part of the original shares are held by trustees for the use of the proprietors.

The Georgia Company consisted of ten shares, exclusively of a number of sub-shares, and of money shares, which have been either purchased in by the company, or absorbed in the payment of certain tracts sold by them. That company, however, no longer exists, having sold the greater part of the territory by metes and bounds, and surrendered the remainder to the State of Georgia. Instead, therefore, of being held by trustees, or in undivided shares, the lands originally assigned to that company are claimed by several individuals, each claiming distinct tracts in their own name. There are a number of militant claims in that part of the tract which lies between the Alabama and Tombigbee rivers, south of the parallel thirty-three degrees twenty minutes of north latitude.

On the 13th day of February, 1796, the Legislature of Georgia passed an act (L.) declaring the act of the 7th January, 1795, above mentioned, null and void, as having been obtained by fraud and corruption; directing all records of grants or conveyances, relating to the sale, to be expunged; and forbidding the recording, thereafter, of any such conveyances or contracts. The document (F.) contains the evidence on which the Legislature acted.

By the articles of agreement of the Georgia Company, and schedule thereunto annexed, bearing date 1st and 10th of January, 1795, a copy of which (B. No. 9,) was transmitted to the commissioners, amongst other documents, by the attorneys of Hugh Rose and Valentin Jones, two of the claimants under that company, it appears that the company had disposed of a considerable quantity of the lands they intended to purchase, to divers persons, (whose names, with the amount in dollars paid by each, appear in the schedule,) for the purpose of raising a fund to effect the purchase of the lands, and that they had also found it necessary to distribute, to a variety of citizens of the State, certain sub-shares or quantities of land, in order that the benefit should be as generally diffused as possible.

By the form of the sub-share (C.) it appears that the holders were entitled to a certain quantity of land, without making any immediate payment, but on paying, within seven months, what was supposed the original purchase money, viz. two cents and a third per acre.

A comparison of the schedule annexed to the articles, and which is declared to be a part of the agreement, with the yeas and nays on the passage of the act authorizing the sale, (E.) shows that all the members, both in the Senate and House, who voted in favor of the law, were, with one single exception, (Robert Watkins, whose name does not appear,) interested in, and parties to, the purchase.

The articles of agreement and list of associates of the Tennessee Company, which have been voluntarily furnished by one of the trustees, show that a number of members of the Legislature were also interested in that company.

It is also proper to state, that all the deeds given by the companies, which have been exhibited to the commissioners, as well as all the subsequent deeds, with only two or three exceptions, not only give a special instead of a general warranty, but have also a special covenant in the following words: "And lastly, it is covenanted and expressly agreed and understood, by and between the parties to these presents, that neither the grantors aforesaid, nor their heirs, executors, or administrators, shall be held to any further or other warranty than is hereinbefore expressed, nor liable to the refunding of any money in consequence of any defect in their title from the State of Georgia, if any such there should hereafter appear to be."

The act of Georgia, of the 13th February, 1796, as well as several subsequent acts, had made provision for the repayment of the money deposited as the consideration of the purchase; and the document (G) shows that three hundred and ten thousand six hundred and ninety-five dollars and fifteen cents have been withdrawn under those laws. The commissioners have not been able to procure the evidence on which those sums were paid; it is, however, understood, that, supposing the title from Georgia to have been valid, not more than five or six millions of acres have been fairly surrendered by the parties who have received that money. A great majority of the persons who claim the lands not surrendered, have signed the propositions of compromise hereunto annexed, (H.) by which they offer to relinquish their claims, provided that the United States shall pay them at the rate of twenty-five cents per acre, for the nominal quantities of land claimed by them; which, after making the proper deductions for lands which have been surrendered, would make a gross sum of about eight millions five hundred thousand dollars, with interest from the year 1806; provided, however, that the principal and interest shall not exceed the proceeds of those five millions of acres in the territory which shall ultimately be sold for the highest price.

The commissioners think those propositions inadmissible; and, without pretending to affirm that the Legislature of the State of Georgia was competent to make the decision, they feel no hesitation in declaring it as their opinion, that, under all the circumstances which may affect the case, as they have come within their knowledge, and as herein stated, the title of the claimants cannot be supported.

But they, nevertheless, believe that the interests of the United States, the tranquility of those who may hereafter inhabit that territory, and various equitable considerations which may be urged in favor of most of the present claimants, render it expedient to enter into a compromise on reasonable terms.

Under that impression, a plan is respectfully submitted to the consideration of Congress, which, although it does not give a full indemnity to every claimant, is believed, from such information as has been received, to give, in the aggregate, nearly as much as has been paid, in the whole, by all the present claimants.

As it is understood, and generally agreed, that the five millions of acres reserved by the agreement with Georgia, constitute the fund from which the indemnity is to be paid, it is of primary importance, in order to guard against any depreciation, that the nominal sum in money which may be offered as an indemnity, should not exceed what the fund may be thought amply sufficient to discharge. The probable amount of the annual sales, and the price affixed to the land by Congress, furnish the only data by which that sum can be determined. The commissioners have supposed that the sales could not reasonably be estimated to yield more than three or four hundred thousand dollars annually; and, although it has been presumed that, in opening a land office, the price of the land will, at present, be fixed at two dollars per acre, they have believed that it would be improper to assume the payment of any sum out of the proceeds of the lands, which would bind Congress not to reduce the price hereafter, if other considerations shall render that reduction expedient.

It is after having considered the subject in that point of view, that the commissioners have been induced to submit the following propositions as the basis of a compromise:

1st. That so much of five millions of acres as shall remain after having satisfied the claims of settlers, and others, not recognized by the agreement with Georgia, which shall be confirmed by the United States, be appropriated for the purpose of satisfying and quieting the claims of the persons who derive their claims from an act of the State of Georgia, passed on the 7th day of January, 1795; for which purpose the several companies, or claimants under those companies, shall be permitted to locate the quantity of land allotted to them, on any part of the territory they claim, to which the Indian title has not yet been extinguished: Provided, however, that the whole shall be located in no more than six tracts: And provided also, that each tract shall extend the whole breadth or length of the territory claimed by the parties respectively, and shall not have a greater proportionate front on the rivers than the whole territory thus claimed.

2d. That the claimants may, nevertheless, receive, in lieu of the said lands, certificates, bearing interest from the 1st January, 1801, to the amount of two millions five hundred thousand dollars, or, at their option, certificates without interest, to the amount of five millions of dollars; which certificates shall, in either case, be paid (principal and interest) out of the proceeds of the sales of the public lands in the territory of the United States above mentioned, next ensuing the completion of the payment of one million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, to be made to the State of Georgia; and shall also be receivable in payment for the lands purchased in the territory, as soon as the payment to Georgia shall have been completed.

3d. That the lands, or certificates, shall be apportioned amongst the several companies in the following manner, that is to say: the proportion of each company, exclusively of the tracts which may have been surrendered, shall, on every five hundred dollars or acres which shall be allowed in the whole, be as followeth:

For the Upper Mississippi Company, exclusively of citizens' rights,	-	-	35
For the Tennessee do.	do.	-	60
For the Georgia Mississippi do.	do.	-	155
For the Georgia do. not exceeding	-	-	225
For citizens' rights, not exceeding	-	-	25
			500

4th. That every original grant, deed, or other evidence of claim, from which the companies or claimants derive, or pretend to derive, their respective claims, shall be exhibited to the Secretary of State, within a twelvemonth, and there recorded at the expense of the parties; and, unless thus recorded, shall never after be admitted or considered as evidence in any of the courts of the United States, against any other grant from the State of Georgia, or from the United States.

5th. That, after all the claims shall have been exhibited, the lands or certificates allotted to each company shall be apportioned in proportion to the quantity of land supposed to be contained within the respective claims, amongst the several claimants under each company, by commissioners, who shall also have power to decide, in conformity to the principles of law and equity, on all conflicting claims within each company.

6th. That each individual claimant shall be allowed to have the benefit of these terms, for the amount of his claim thus ascertained, and to receive, at his option, his proportion, either of lands, of certificates bearing interest, or of certificates without interest.

All which is respectfully submitted.

JAMES MADISON.

NEAR NATCHEZ, November 5, 1802.

SIR: I have now the honor to reply more particularly to your letter of the 26th of July last, and to lay before you such information as I have been enabled to collect in relation to the various objects of your inquiries.

In conformity to your request, the claimants of lands (of the description you mentioned) were invited, by public advertisement, "to file, prior to the 1st day of November, before the proper county officers, (the clerks of the county courts,) the particular authority and extent of their respective claims, and the claim of title derived, to the present claimants, from the original title."

I had flattered myself that the acquiescence with this invitation would have been such as to have afforded ground for accurate estimates. But, from various causes, the returns are not so general as I had wished. Some few claimants, whose titles I have reason to believe are fully and legally executed, have omitted to state them, either through inattention, or from an unaccommodating disposition; and there are some others who have avoided exhibiting their claims (probably) from an unwillingness to expose their weakness, and a fear produced by a report, which some designing characters circulated with industry, that the call for titles was intended to work their immediate injury. Having premised thus much with a view to apprise you that the return of claims which accompany this letter is not complete, (a) I will proceed to notice your inquiries in the order you have placed them.

1st. "With respect to the extent of territory, both on the Mississippi and the Mobile, which has been relinquished by the Indians."

Until the boundary line between the United States and the Choctaw Indians shall have been retraced and plainly marked, (a work which I understand will shortly be executed under the direction of General Wilkinson,) the quantity of land to which the Indian claim has been extinguished, cannot be correctly ascertained. But, from the best information in my possession, I do conjecture that there may be on the Mississippi two thousand five hundred square miles, or about one million six hundred thousand acres, which comprehend the counties of Jefferson, Adams, Wilkinson, and Claiborne.

On the Mobile, I do also conjecture, without pretending to accuracy, that there may be about four thousand six hundred square miles, or near three millions of acres, which compose the county of Washington.

The greater part of the land on the Mississippi above alluded to, is fertile, and well adapted to cultivation. Of the three millions of acres on the Mobile, there are supposed to be near two millions of pine barrens, little of which is susceptible of culture; the balance is said to be good land, and I am informed that most of it may be cultivated to advantage.

A small map of the settled country adjoining the Mississippi, (marked No. 1.) and a map of the land in Washington county, to which the Indian claim has been extinguished, (marked No. 2.) are herewith enclosed.

2d. "With respect to the claims recognized by the second article of agreement with Georgia."

I will class these claims under three distinct heads.

1st. Grants to persons who were actual settlers within the ceded territory on the 27th day of October, 1795, legally and fully executed prior to that day, by the former British Government of West Florida.

The packet marked (A) contains all the claims of this description which have been filed.

2d. Grants to persons who were actual settlers within the ceded territory, on the 27th of October, 1795, legally and fully executed prior to that day by the Government of Spain. This species of titles are numerous. The packet marked (B) contains all which have been filed.

3d. Claims of persons who were settlers within the territory on the 27th of October, 1795, derived from actual surveys or settlements made under the law of Georgia, passed February 7, 1785, commonly called the Bourbon act. The packet (C) contains claims of this class which have been filed. Few of those claimants allege to have made actual surveys; it would have been unsafe to have done so during the existence of the Spanish Government. But they rely upon the settlements which they formed by a verbal permission from the then existing Government, and the invitation held out by the State of Georgia in the Bourbon act.

Among the titles recognized in the agreement of compromise with Georgia, there will arise a few which clash, viz. "lands claimed by different persons under British and Spanish titles, who were both settlers in the territory on the 27th October, 1795." This will be found to have been occasioned by one of two causes. "The British proprietor did either not reside in the territory, or, being present, had not complied with the conditions of his patent at the time of regrating by the Spanish Government."

I have endeavored to inform myself as to the manner in which grants were made and completed, under both the British and Spanish Governments.

Under the British Government, grants were sometimes issued by the King himself, but more frequently by his representative, the governor of West Florida. The former title was conferred for some signal services rendered by an individual; the latter title, which was the most usual, was obtained in the following manner: the applicant for land presented a petition to the governor and council of West Florida, and, upon the petition being granted, an order from the governor to the surveyor general of the province was made, which was called the warrant of survey; when the survey was completed, and returned to the secretary's office, the patent issued, it frequently happened, that by delay in the office, occasioned by various circumstances, and in some instances, by reason of the Spanish conquest of Florida, those persons who had obtained warrants, and paid the price of surveying, never acquired a complete patent. I have procured a copy of a British patent, which is herewith enclosed, marked (A 1.)

The manner of obtaining titles under the Spanish Government, was similar to the last mode of British grant. The applicant for land applied by petition to the Spanish governor general of Louisiana, or the governor at Natchez. If the petition was granted, an order in writing was given to the surveyor general (which was called the warrant) to survey and put the petitioner in possession of a certain quantity of land, (which was named.)

On the return of the survey to the office of the secretary for the province of Louisiana, at Orleans, a formal patent, with the plat and certificate of survey prefixed, was issued and signed by the governor general of the province of Louisiana. In this case, also, delay in the intermediate steps sometimes prevented persons who had procured warrants of survey, and were in complete possession of the land, from obtaining perfect patents. A copy of a petition, warrant of survey, and Spanish patent, are herewith enclosed, marked (A 2.)

I will now proceed to notice other claims not recognized in the agreement of compromise, but concerning which you request information.

1st. "With respect to the claims grounded on the alleged grants of Georgia, subsequent to the Bourbon act."

I cannot learn that any tract of land is now occupied by any of those purchasers, or by persons claiming under them. A copy of an original letter upon the subject of the Georgia sale, dated at Boston, October 1st, 1799, signed by several persons styling themselves "agents for the proprietors of Georgia lands," addressed to some respectable citizens in this territory, together with a copy of the answer which was returned thereto, are herewith enclosed, marked (A 3. and A 4.)

2d. "Claims, if any, derived under the French Government, previous to the peace of 1763."

No title arising from this source has been filed, and I have it from good authority, that no claim on the part of the ancient French proprietors ever appeared, during the existence of the British or Spanish Government in this territory. "The frequent contest between the French and the Natchez aborigines caused the former to abandon their agricultural possessions in this quarter of Louisiana, long before the peace of 1763."

3d. "Claims derived under the British and Spanish Governments previous to the treaty of 1795, unaccompanied by actual settlement at the date of the treaty."

No claims of this description have been filed, nor is it probable there are many such of Spanish origin. But it is a matter of great notoriety, that British claims of this species are numerous; by far the greater part of the valuable improvements and plantations is made upon lands heretofore granted by the British Government of West Florida, but which were regranted by the Spanish Government.

It may be proper in this place to state, that the time allowed by the treaty of peace of 1783, for British subjects to sell, convey, or settle their lands, was prolonged by the Spanish Government, and that two or three years beyond the term granted by the treaty had elapsed, before the Spanish Government commenced regrating of lands which had formerly belonged to British subjects.

Claims derived under the Spanish Government by grants made subsequent to the Spanish treaty of 1795.

These may be distinguished into three classes.

1st. When patents were issued subsequent to the treaty, on Spanish warrants of survey made previous to the treaty.

2d. When the warrants, as well as the patents, were subsequent to the treaty.

3d. When both warrants and patents were indeed subsequent to the treaty, but both antedated, so as to make them appear prior to the treaty.

I. When patents were issued subsequent to the treaty, on Spanish warrants of survey, granted previous to the treaty.

I have understood that many patents of this description were issued, although few have been filed; warrants had, in many instances, been obtained from the Spanish Government, accompanied with an actual survey and settlement, which, agreeable to the Spanish customs, were recognized as good titles, even before the patents issued.

Claimants in this situation were often not anxious about obtaining patents, which could at any time be procured as a matter of course. Hence it happened, that the treaty caught many in the possession of those incomplete rights. Some persons thought it advisable to obtain patents from the Spanish office, which continued open after the treaty. But others, conceiving such patents as conferring no additional security, trusted entirely to the justice and liberality of the United States, to make valid in law what they considered a perfect equitable title.

II. "Where the warrants of survey, as well as the patents, were subsequent to the treaty." Of this description, four or five only have been returned; but others certainly exist. Some men in favor with the Spanish officers, and trusting to the temporary continuance of the Spanish courts and Government, acquiesced in by the people, and commissioner Ellicot and Lieutenant Pope, the only representatives of the United States then present, received titles for lands, which were dated agreeably to the true time of obtaining them. The number of these claims is uncertain, but said not to be numerous.

III. "When warrants and patents were indeed subsequent to the treaty, but both antedated, so as to make them appear previous to the treaty."

Although no claims of this kind have (to my knowledge) been filed, yet no doubt is entertained here of their existence. They are reported to be of great extent, and are supposed to cover much valuable land near the settlements.

5th. "Claims founded on the third section of the Bourbon county act."

Many citizens, who, subsequent to 1795, have settled and improved vacant lands, suppose that under this third section, they will be entitled to a right of preference, when a land office may be opened. The Bourbon act was repealed by Georgia, in February, 1788, but, from the little intercourse between that State and this territory, it is probable the repealing law was but partially known; and that some citizens might have made their improvements under the invitation given them in the Bourbon act.

With respect to the "aggregate quantity of land covered by claims under the second article of compromise, and of the like aggregate of other claims," it is impossible for me to form accurate estimates; but from the best lights I can procure, I do suppose there cannot be more than three hundred and fifty thousand acres on the Mississippi covered by claims justly falling under the second article of the compromise. As to the extent of private claims on the Mobile, I can hazard no opinion until the returns from Washington county are received. It, however, is understood, that besides a large tract of pine barrens, there is some valuable lands which remain to be disposed of by the United States.

In order that you may be more fully informed as to the true state of land claims in this territory, I have forwarded all the returns which have been made and received, carefully filed under their different classes; among them you will discover some claims which cannot, strictly considered, be comprehended under any of the descriptions you have enumerated.

The titles, for instance, by Spanish warrants of survey, and possession without patents, may be viewed of this kind. But permit me to remark that this species of title is esteemed here as very strong, in an equitable point of view; and I am well informed they were viewed as legal under the Spanish Government, and, by custom, the proprietor was authorized to sell after three years' occupancy.

It will not have escaped your observation, that a great proportion of the present population in this territory is composed of citizens who have formed settlements upon vacant lands.

The heads of families of this description, in the counties of Jefferson, Adams, Wilkinson, and Claiborne, exceed seven hundred, and their wives and children amount to near three thousand.

I do sincerely hope that these citizens may be secured in their improvements, and that the Government will sell out the vacant land in this district upon moderate terms, and in small tracts, to actual settlers. If this policy is not observed, much distress will attend many of the settlers, and the certain effect will be their leaving the territory in disgust, to become subjects in a country where heretofore the most flattering invitations have been offered to the poorer class of industrious citizens, by bestowing upon every applicant, without price, portions of the richest land, proportioned to the extent of their families. (f) The present farms of these settlers would then probably fall into the hands of rich speculators, either in this district or from the United States.

Thus we may lose a considerable portion of our present population, and the further increase of our numbers be retarded by the best and most convenient spots being monopolized by men possessing large tracts of unoccupied lands. The consequence would be, that this, the most distant and infant settlement of the United States, at present insulated and defenceless, would be rendered more weak and defenceless by the banishment of the poorer class of white citizens, and the introduction of a few wealthy characters, with a large increase of negroes; a description of inhabitants already formidable to our present population.

With sentiments of great respect and esteem, I have the honor to be, sir, your most obedient humble servant,
WILLIAM C. C. CLAIBORNE.

(a) I have not received a return of the claims which have been filed in Washington county.

(g) Claims have been filed by persons who were actual settlers within the ceded territory, on the 27th October, 1795, under British patents, for fifty-two thousand seven hundred and fifty-four acres; and under Spanish patents, for one hundred and ninety thousand four hundred and six acres; which patents were legally and fully executed prior to that period.

Claims of the following descriptions have also been filed, viz.

Claims under Spanish patents, dated subsequent to the 27th October, 1795, by persons who were settlers at that period, for eight thousand nine hundred and eighty acres.

Claims under British warrants without patents, by persons who were settlers on the 27th October, 1795, for ten thousand nine hundred acres.

Claims under Spanish warrants of survey and possession, by persons who were actual settlers on the 27th October, 1795, for twenty-one thousand two hundred and three acres.

For these claims see packet D.

There are about one hundred and thirty heads of families, who, on the 27th of October, 1795, were settled upon vacant lands, and now claim a right by occupancy under the Bourbon act.

There are also about seven hundred heads of families who, subsequent to 1795, have settled upon vacant lands, and made considerable improvements.

(f) Should the contemplated change in the masters of Louisiana take place, it is not improbable but our new neighbors, with a large extent of vacant country to settle, may also offer great encouragement to emigrants.

A. 1.

Given under the great seal of our province of West Florida. Witness our trusty and well beloved Montfort Browne, esq., our lieutenant governor, and commander-in-chief in and over our said province. At Pensacola, the fifteenth day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and sixty-eight, and in the eighth year of our reign.

MONTFORT BROWNE.

SECRETARY'S OFFICE.

Certified by DANIEL CLARK, D. S.

Pursuant to a warrant from his honor Montfort Browne, esquire, lieutenant governor and commander-in-chief, in and over his majesty's said province, to me directed, bearing date the 25th day of February, A. D. 1767, I have caused to be surveyed and laid out unto Daniel Clark, esquire, a reduced officer in the Pennsylvania troops, a plantation or tract of land containing three thousand acres, situated three miles south of Fort Panmure, at the Natchez, on the River Mississippi, at a place known by the name of St. Catherine's creek, and is bounded on all sides by vacant land, and hath such marks, both natural and artificial, as are truly represented in the plat annexed.

Certified this 28th day of September, A. D. 1767, by ELIAS DUNFORD, Surveyor General.

To the Governor:

I, Charles Howard, resident in this district, with due respect, present myself before your worship, and say that, desiring to settle a plantation in order to reside thereon, and labor to support my wife and five children, may it please your worship to grant me, for this end, a piece of land situated on Fairchild's creek, adjoining lands of John Jones, it being vacant and causing no prejudice to any of the adjoining neighbors.

A favor which I expect from the distributive justice which you administer.

CHARLES HOWARD.

NATCHEZ, August 28, 1794.

NATCHEZ, January 28, 1795.

To the Governor General:

I consider this petitioner entitled to four hundred acres of land.

MANUEL GAYOSO DE LEMOS.

NEW ORLEANS, February 24, 1795.

The surveyor general, or particular nominated by him, will establish this petitioner on four hundred square acres of land in the place mentioned in the foregoing petition, being vacant and in no wise causing prejudice to the adjoining neighbors, with the express condition, to make the road and a regular clearance within the peremptory term of one year; and this grant to be null, if, at the expiration of the precise space of three years, the land be not settled; nor shall he be enabled to alienate it within the same. Under which supposition he may make a survey thereof, and return it to me, to furnish the party interested with a corresponding title in form.

F. L. BARON D. CARONDELET.

Don Charles Trudeau, Royal and Particular Surveyor of the province of Louisiana, &c.

I certify that there was surveyed and laid out in favor, and in the presence of Ebenezer Dayton, and with the assistance of both the adjoining neighbors, a tract of land of four hundred superficial acres, measured with the pole of the city of Paris, of eighteen feet, King's measure, in length, each acre forming a square of ten poles on each side, conformable to the use and practice of this colony, which tract of land is situated in the district of Natchez, on the south bank of the River Homochitto, about sixteen miles to the southeast of the fort; bounded on one side by the land of William Henderson; on the other side by Nathan Swayzie; and on another by vacant land of his majesty's domain; the limits fixed agreeably to the lines in the plan, without paying attention to the variation, varying east eight degrees to the northeast, in which limits the trees and land mark, figured in the plan were marked for boundaries, in the actual survey thereof, conformably to the decree of the governor general, &c. dated the 24th day of January, 1789. In testimony of the foregoing declaration, I give the present certificate, with the figurative plan annexed, drawn agreeably to the survey made by Mr. William Dunbar, deputy surveyor, dated the 31st of December last.

April 6, 1791.

Given for a second expedition, the 28th day of May, 1793.

CHARLES TRUDEAU, Surveyor Royal.

Dn. Francis Luis Hector Baron Carondelet, Knight of the Religion of St. John, Colonel of the Royal Armies, Governor, Intendant General, Royal Vice Patron of the provinces of Louisiana and West Florida, and Inspector of the veteran troops and militia of the same, &c., examined the foregoing actual survey, made by the surveyor of this province, Dn. Charles Trudeau, on the possession which he has given to Ebenezer Dayton of the quantity of four hundred acres of land situated in the district of Natchez, on the south bank of the River Homochitto, about sixteen miles to the southeast of the fort; bounded on the one side by lands of William Henderson; on another by those of Nathan Swayzie; and on another by vacant lands of his majesty's domain, as is more fully shown in the preceding figurative plan; and finding it to be conformable to the rules of mensuration, and to the grants of the aforementioned adjoining neighbors, without causing them any prejudice, nor having made any opposition, but given their consent, which their assisting in the same operations proves, allowing them, we also do allow them; using the power which the King has given us, we grant in his royal name to the aforesaid Ebenezer Dayton, the aforesaid four hundred superficial acres of land, that as his own property he may dispose of them, and the profits thereof, being governed by the said survey, and observing the conditions provided and the regulations thereunto added.

We grant the present, signed with our hand, and sealed with our arms, and countersigned by the underwritten, his majesty's secretary of this government and intendency, at New Orleans, the 29th of March, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-three.

To the honorable JAMES MADISON, ALBERT GALLATIN, and LEVI LINCOLN, esquires, commissioners on the part of the United States for treating with the commissioners appointed by the State of Georgia, &c., &c.

The subscribers, attorneys to Hugh Rose and Valentine Jones, esquires, of Great Britain, respectfully represent, that, in pursuance of an act of the General Assembly of the State of Georgia, passed on the 7th day of January, in the year of our Lord 1795, entitled "An act supplementary to an act for appropriating a part of the unlocated territory of this State for the payment of the State troops, and for other purposes therein mentioned, and declaring the right of this State to the unappropriated territory thereof, for the protection and support of the frontiers of this State, and for other purposes therein mentioned," George Matthews, then Governor of the State, under the great seal of the same, did, on the 13th day of January, of the same year, give and grant unto James Gunn, Matthew McAllister, and George Walker, and their associates, called the Georgia Company, their heirs and assigns forever, a certain tract of country described in the deed, an exemplified copy of which is deposited in the office of your honors, and by one other deed under the great seal of the same State, did, on the 15th day of January, 1795, grant unto John B. Scott, John C. Nightingale, and Wade Hampton, under the style and title of the Upper Mississippi Company, one other tract of land described in the deed likewise deposited in your office.

That Wade Hampton, being one of the associates in the said Georgia Company, and James Gunn, one of the grantees under them, stood seized, as tenants in common, in fee simple, of the following described tract, (being part of that granted to the Georgia Company,) that is to say: beginning on the River Mississippi, where the latitude of 33° 20' north of the equator intersects the same therein, running a due east course (by lands conveyed by the said Georgia Company to James Greenleaf) to the main Tombigbee river; thence, up the said river, to where the parallel of latitude 32° 20' intersects the said Tombigbee river; thence, a due west course, along the said parallel, being the distance of twenty-four British statute miles as aforesaid, north of the latitude of 32° 20', to the River Mississippi; thence, down the Mississippi, to the place of beginning.

That the said Wade Hampton, standing seized of the one equal moiety thereof, and James Gunn, of the other half, the said Wade Hampton and James Gunn, on the 4th day of February, 1797, sold to Hugh Rose, then in Philadelphia, one full, equal, and undivided moiety of their respective shares, and interest in the last described tract, (except one-tenth of the whole,) which moiety should contain one million two hundred thousand acres, and for which full payment and satisfaction was made, as by the deeds and contracts accompanying this memorial, will more fully appear.

That John B. Scott, being one of the grantees in the Upper Mississippi Company, did, on the 16th day of January, 1795, transfer and assign over to Wade Hampton, his heirs and assigns forever, all the right, title, interest, and benefit which he, the said John B. Scott, as grantee or otherwise, had or did hold in the said Mississippi Company, being seven twenty-fifth parts thereof; and John C. Nightingale, by indenture bearing date the 17th day of January, in the same year, did sell and convey to the said Wade Hampton, his heirs and assigns forever, all his right, title, and interest, which he, as grantee, or otherwise, held in the said Mississippi Company, being nine twenty-fifth parts thereof, by which the whole territory or tract of country granted to the said Mississippi Company, was solely vested in the said Wade Hampton, his heirs and assigns, in as full and ample a manner as the same was by the grant of the State, vested in the said John B. Scott, John C. Nightingale, and Wade Hampton, as trustees or otherwise.

That Wade Hampton, by indenture, bearing date the 6th day of March, 1795, granted and sold to Adam Tunno, James Miller, and James Warrington, their heirs and assigns forever, the whole of the said tract as contained within the original grant from the State of Georgia to the said Mississippi Company, with all the rights, privileges and pre-emptions appurtenant thereto. And that James Warrington, on the 21st day of February, 1795, sold and conveyed to Hugh Rose, all the right, title, and interest, which he, the said James Warrington, held in the said Mississippi Company, being the one-twelfth part and the one-fifth of one-twelfth, making together one-tenth thereof, containing one hundred and fifty thousand acres.

That Hugh Rose, by indenture, under his hand and seal, bearing date the 20th day of February, —, conveyed to Valentine Jones the one-half as well of the one million two hundred thousand acres, purchased of James Gunn and Wade Hampton, (part of the tract granted by the State of Georgia to the Georgia Company,) as of the one-twelfth and one-fifth part of one-twelfth of the tract granted to the Upper Mississippi Company, purchased of James Warrington; so that the said lands are now held in equal and undivided proportions between the said Hugh Rose and Valentine Jones, who have never conveyed the same, or any part thereof, to any other person or persons, nor have they received, or authorized any other person to receive, any part of the original purchase money from the State of Georgia.

That the said several tracts of land having been lately ceded by the State of Georgia to the United States, your memorialists have judged it necessary to lay this their claim before your honors, with copies of the several papers therein referred to, the originals whereof, when called for, will be produced; and if it shall be thought proper by the United States to grant a reasonable compensation in lieu of this their claim, they will be ready to treat for the same at such time, and in such manner, as you will be pleased to point out.

Attorney to Hugh Rose.

Whereas the aforesaid persons did form themselves into a company, known and distinguished by the name of the Georgia Company, for the purpose of purchasing from the said State a part of her unlocated western territory, and on the written application of the aforesaid James Gunn, Matthew M'Allister, and George Walker, for themselves and their associates, the before named persons did propose to purchase from the Legislature of the said State all that tract or district of country described as follows: all that tract or parcel of land, including islands, situate, lying, and being within the following boundaries, that is to say, beginning on the Mobile bay, where the latitude thirty-one degrees north of the equator intersects the same; running thence up the said bay, to the mouth of the Lake Tensaw; thence, up the said Lake Tensaw, to the Alabama river, including Curry's and all other islands therein; thence, up the said River A'abama, to the junction of the Cousee and Oakfuskee rivers; thence, up the Cousee river, above the big shoals, to where it intersects the latitude of thirty-four degrees north of the equator; thence, a due west course to the Mississippi river; thence, down the middle of the said river to the latitude thirty-two degrees forty minutes; thence, a due east course to the Den, or Tombigbee river; thence, down the middle of said river, to its junction with the Alabama river; thence, down the middle of the said river to the Mobile bay; thence, down the said Mobile bay, to the place of beginning. And whereas it has been found expedient to dispose of a considerable quantity of the said land to divers persons, for the purpose of raising a fund to effect the purchase of the same; and the said parties have also found it necessary to distribute to a variety of citizens of this State certain sub-shares or quantities thereof, in order that the benefit of such purchase, if any there be, should be as generally diffused as possible: now, therefore, it is mutually agreed upon, by and between the said James Gunn, Matthew M'Allister, George Walker, Zachariah Cox, Jacob Waldburger, William Longstreet, James Gunn, in trust for his friend Wade Hampton, as well for himself as for the said William Stick, the younger, and Gideon Denison, and their several and respective heirs, executors and administrators, for the better securing the remaining quantity of land, within the limits aforesaid, to the above named James Gunn, Matthew M'Allister, George Walker, Zachariah Cox, Jacob Waldburger, William Longstreet, James Gunn, in trust for his friend Wade Hampton, as well for himself as for the said William Stick, the younger, and Gideon Denison, and their respective representatives, as aforesaid; they mutually agree with each other, for themselves and their respective representatives, in the following manner, that is to say, that the said several persons and their respective representatives, as aforesaid, except the said William Stick, the younger, and Gideon Denison, who have transferred their respective shares to the said Wade Hampton, shall be, and they are hereby, equally entitled to all the lands that may remain unappropriated and undisposed of, and, also, to any surplus which now is, or may hereafter appear to be within the limits before described, share and share alike, as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, and all expenses and disbursements which have taken place, or reasonable charges which may hereafter accrue in carrying the disposition of the company into effect, shall be borne by the said parties and their respective representatives equally; and the profits or produce of any sale which shall be made at any time or times hereafter, by direction of a majority of said company, or their respective representatives as aforesaid, of any part or parcel, or the whole of said land, shall be divided between the company and their respective representatives, share and share alike, as aforesaid; and, further, it is the true intent and meaning of these presents, and of the parties hereunto subscribing, that the said parties and their respective representatives shall be equally benefited by the purchase of the aforesaid territory, and shall share, in all respects, the same advantages or disadvantages. In witness whereof, the said parties have interchangeably set their hands and seals the day and year above written.

GEORGIA:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Monday, Jan. 25, 1796.

Mr. JAMES JACKSON, from the committee to which the constitutionality and validity of the act for the disposal of the western lands, together with the petitions and remonstrances of the people, were referred, brought in a report, which being delivered in at the clerk's table, was read, and agreed to by the House, and is as follows:

The committee to which the constitutionality and validity of the act for the disposal of the western lands, together with the petitions and remonstrances of the people, were referred, report five other affidavits on the corruptions practised to obtain the act, and submit the propriety of entering the proofs already laid before the House, and those which may be laid before them, on the journals of the House, in order to perpetuate such testimony, and for that purpose recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That all such proofs relating to the fraud and corruptions practised to obtain the act for the disposal of the western territory of this State, be entered by the clerk on the journals of the House, in order that the testimony so given may be perpetuated, as well for the satisfaction of the Legislature and to show the grounds on which they proceeded, as to hand down to future Legislatures the base means by which the rights of the people were attempted to be bartered.

Agreeably to the foregoing report and resolve, the affidavits taken before the committee and exhibited to the House, being read, are as follows:

GEORGIA, BURKE COUNTY,

January 16, 1796.

RUSSELL JONES, senator from the county of Franklin, being duly sworn, maketh oath, that some time in the last summer, Thomas Raburn, esq., a representative from the said county in the last Legislature, was at his house, when James Cail and several others were also present, and talking together on the subject of the sale of the western territory of this State; the said Cail told Raburn that he did not blame him for selling the land, but for selling his vote so much lower than what other members did; that he, Raburn, had sold his vote for six hundred dollars, and that others had got a thousand; Raburn replied, that it showed he was easily satisfied, and was not greedy.

RUSSELL JONES.

Sworn in presence of the committee of the House of Representatives, before me,

THOMAS LEWIS, J. P.

STATE OF GEORGIA, Burke County.

Before Thomas Lewis, esquire, one of the justices of peace for the county aforesaid, personally appeared Clement Lanier, esquire, one of the representatives of the Legislature of this State, who, being sworn on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, depose and saith, that, during the last session of the Legislature at Augusta, in the winter of the year 1794, he being a member of the House of Representatives, and sitting on the same seat with Henry Gindrat, another of the members of that House, before the Speaker took the chair, the said Gindrat recommended to him to be in favor of selling the western lands, for that he, the said Gindrat, understood it worth our notice, for Mr. Thos. Wyly, a Senator from Effingham county, had told said Gindrat that he, the said Wyly, could have eight or ten likely negroes for his part; and the deponent further saith, that, on the same day, in the afternoon, the said Thos. Wyly came into the lobby of the House, and beckoned to the deponent, who followed him out, when a conversation commenced about the Yazoo act; that, at this time, a Mr. Dennison came by and asked what we were upon; the said Wyly answered the land business; the said Denison then came up, and Wyly withdrew; the said Denison then told the deponent that he did not pretend to advise any member to be in favor of selling the land, but those who were in favor of it were handsomely provided for, and that if the deponent thought proper to be in favor of selling, that he should have part, and that the said Denison said he was a purchaser of such of the members' parts as had a mind to sell, but understood that some of the members pretended to ask eight or ten negroes for a share, or their share; he said he could not give so much, but the deponent might depend he would purchase; the deponent further saith that, previous to any of the before recited circumstances, Mr. William Longstreet, one of the members of the said Legislature, frequently called on the deponent, and asked him why he was not in favor of selling the western lands? who answered, he did not think it right to sell to companies of speculators; the deponent, at this time, wishing to make further discovery of the conduct of the members on that sale, and, therefore, affected to be inclined to come into the measure, and by that means kept up a conversation about it occasionally: that, on the day the bill received its first reading, before the House was convened, the said Longstreet spoke to the deponent to get his approbation to the sale; the deponent asked him to show him what security the members had of the purchasers; when the said Longstreet presented a certificate entitling the bearer to two shares of twenty-five thousand acres each, signed by Nathaniel Pendleton, chairman; he, the deponent, then told the said Longstreet, that that was not what he had formerly told him was a member's share; for that the said Longstreet had before said a member's share was seventy-five thousand acres, that the said Longstreet then told the deponent if he would wait a few minutes, or an hour, he would bring him another certificate from Gunn's company for the same number of acres; that the deponent, in order to disengage himself from the conversation, then said the security was not sufficient to entitle him to the land. That the said Longstreet then told the deponent, if he was not satisfied with the certificate, he would give him one thousand dollars for it, or for them; the deponent then presented the certificate to the said Longstreet, and went into the House, which was the last interview he had on the subject. The deponent further saith, that the shares offered him, as aforesaid, were expressly designed to induce him, the deponent, to vote for the bill for disposing of the western territory.

CLEM. LANIER.

Sworn to, as aforesaid.

Peter L. Van Allen, being duly sworn, saith that, on or about the 12th or 13th of January, 1795, he was in company with Mr. Gindrat, who, the deponent understood, was a member of the Legislature then lately adjourned; that, in consequence of the advice of R. P. Sanders, esquire, another member of the same Legislature, who advised the deponent to purchase some of the western lands which the said Legislature had sold, and in the purchase of which the deponent understood the said R. P. Sanders, esquire, was interested, and from the information of the said R. P. Sanders, esquire, that they would purchase between them two shares in Gunn's company, and, to the best of deponent's recollection, two shares in Glascock's company, for one thousand dollars; that the said Gindrat told the deponent, in a conversation on that subject, that he should have his, said Gindrat's, shares for that sum, provided the money was paid by a certain time; that, in consequence, the deponent went to exchange some Governor's warrants for money, and when he returned Gindrat refused to let him have them, having, as the deponent understood and believed, met with a better market. The deponent further saith, that he believes, and then understood, that a certain quantity was allotted to each member in the majority, who were not to pay any money therefor in advance, and were particularly indulged, until the whole of the purchase money was payable at the treasury, in consequence of their vote and support of the law for selling the land.

The deponent further saith, that Roger P. Sanders, esquire, told the deponent that he had made a contract with Lachlan M'Intosh, esquire, who was, as the deponent understood, a member of the same General Assembly, for all the shares the said M'Intosh held in different companies, for which he had contracted to give him eight negroes, fifty barrels of rice, and a certain sum of money, which the deponent does not recollect; that this contract was made before the first bill was negatived by the Governor; but that reservation being made in the second bill, in favor of the citizens and the State, would deduct considerably from the quantity of land in each share; he, the said R. P. Sanders, objected to give so much; the said M'Intosh, however, urged the completing of the contract; the said R. P. Sanders further told the deponent that the contract was broken off by reason of that deduction. The deponent further saith, that he was present in company with Lachlan M'Intosh, esquire, and others, when some one of the company, he thinks Mr. M'Intosh himself, said that he, the said M'Intosh, held six shares in the Georgia Mississippi Company, which he offered at three hundred dollars premium each, and on the same day the deponent understood that he did sell them for a premium of two hundred and fifty dollars each, to one of the grantees of that company.

PETER L. VAN ALLEN.

Sworn to, as aforesaid.

James Meriwether, esquire, being first sworn before Thomas Lewis, esquire, in presence of the committee of the House of Representatives, was asked the following questions:

- 1st. Were you not, or are you not now, treasurer to one of the companies which purchased the territory, claimed under the act of the last Legislature for disposing of the same, passed on the 7th January, 1795, entitled "an act supplementary," &c.
- 2d. Who were associates in that company?
- 3d. Do, or do you not, know where the list of the associates are kept?
- 4th. Are you, or are you not, acquainted with the means by which the said act was obtained?
- 5th. Do you, or do you not, know that some one or more of the members of the Legislature were holders of shares, directly or indirectly, in the purchase?
- 6th. Did, or did not, some one or more of the members of the Legislature, pay unto you, as treasurer, money in payment of the purchase, and who and which of them?
- 7th. Who was the treasurer previous to yourself?
- 8th. Has the Georgia Company paid up the whole of the purchase money?
- 9th. At what time was it paid?
- 10th. Who are the treasurers of the other companies?

Answers of James Meriwether to the questions of the committee.

Answer. 1st Question. I was treasurer to the Georgia Mississippi Company, and received seventy pounds per annum for that duty, and resigned on coming to this place.

2d. I do not know who they were; the accounts were opened, not in the names of persons, but by the number of certificates; when I received money, I receipted by the number of the certificate.

3d. I do not.

4th. I am not. I am interested as a purchaser in that company.

5th. I do not.

6th. I never received any money from any member of the Legislature, as I recollect; but I am pretty certain I did not.

7th. Mr. Amasa Jackson.

8th. They have.

9th. About the last of August, he thinks.

I certify that the foregoing were the answers of James Meriwether to the questions of the committee, set down in the half sheet hereunto annexed, the said James Meriwether being first sworn before me, in presence of the committee.

THOS. LEWIS, J. P.

Questions asked Philip Clayton, Esquire.

1st Question. Were you intimately acquainted with Roberts Thomas, esquire, deceased, one of the Senate of the State of Georgia, during the last session of the Legislature at Augusta; and did he live in your house during that session?

2d. Had you, or had you not, conversation with him on the subject of the sale of the western territory of this State, whilst that subject was in agitation, or before or after that time?

3d. Did he, or did he not, tell you, or give you to understand, that he held a share or shares in some one or more of the companies who purchased the lands; and did he, or did he not, make known to you that such share or shares were given to him by the company or companies, without being liable to pay any money therefor; and that his certificate differed from those given to persons out of the Legislature in that respect?

4th. Are you, or are you not, acquainted with some one or more of the grantees of the said companies, and have you, or have you not, heard some one or more of them say that the said Roberts Thomas did receive a gratuitous certificate for a share or shares in the purchase, and that he would not be content with one in the usual form?

5th. Have you, or have you not, heard the said Roberts Thomas say, that he received any sum or sums of money from any of the companies, or any individual of those companies, either in consideration of his share or shares, or otherwise, for being in favor of the sale of the land; or have you, or have you not, heard any member of either of the said companies declare that the said Roberts Thomas did receive any sum or sums of money for, or on account of, such shares or otherwise, from any of the members of the said companies, for that consideration?

6th. From every circumstance which has come to your knowledge, do you, or do you not, know or believe that the said Roberts Thomas, or any of the members of the last Legislature, were absolutely interested in the purchase of the western lands, or did receive money, or other thing, to induce them or him to vote for the sale thereof?

7th. Did you, or did you not, understand from the question you put to Roberts Thomas, when he brought you the money, and the manner in which he answered it, that he had received the money for his vote in the Legislature, or being in favor of the sale of land?

8th. Do you, or do you not, know the associates of the respective companies?

Answer. 1st Question. I was intimately acquainted with Mr. Thomas; he did live in my house during that session.

2d. He had before, at, and after the passing the act.

3d. After the passing of the act, he brought a considerable sum of money to my house, and asked me to take care of it; I believe it was two thousand dollars; on which I asked him how he got it, or if he got it for his proportion of the land, or words to that effect; he said, it is nothing to you, take care of it; and smiled.

4th. I am acquainted with the grantees of the companies; I never heard it from any of them.

5th. I did not, but had my opinion.

6th. I do not know, but suppose they were, from general suppositions.

7th. I did suppose, from a knowledge of Mr. Thomas's circumstances, that he could not have got that sum of money, unless it had been in that way, either directly or indirectly.

8th. I do not. Mr. Longstreet executed a renunciation of dower of lands belonging to the Georgia Company, in favor of Mr. Maher.

PHI. CLAYTON.

Sworn to, as aforesaid.

James Terrell, esq. being duly sworn, saith, Thomas Raburn, esquire, one of the members of the last Legislature, said, in presence of this deponent, some small time after the rising of the General Assembly, that he, the said Raburn, had purchased a part of the western lands, during that session, and whilst he was a member of the House of Representatives, and that he had sold it again.

JAS. TERRELL.

Sworn to, as aforesaid.

John Shepperd, esquire, a member of the last Legislature at Augusta, being duly sworn, saith, that just before the bill for the disposal of the western lands came before the House at the last session, he had frequent conversations with William Longstreet, esquire, another member of the Legislature, who recommended to the deponent strongly to be in favor of selling the lands, and if he would, he should come in for shares to the amount of one hundred thousand acres. The deponent said he did not think it right to sell the lands, but the said Longstreet told him if he would, he might make a fortune for himself and family forever, or words to that effect. The deponent said it would be injurious to the community, and it would be displeasing to our constituents to dispose of their rights. The said Longstreet then said it was no matter; that the deponent nor himself need not care, provided they could get the land, whether they ever came there again, or words to that effect. That the deponent had a conversation with Philip Clayton, at the State House, about the 20th of December, 1794, concerning the lands, when the said Clayton urged him, the deponent, to go home; that the same evening, the said Clayton called the deponent into his office, and told the deponent that, provided he would give him, the said Clayton, an order on the Speaker for his warrant, which he said, by his calculation, was twenty-eight pounds, and go home immediately and return no more, that he would give the deponent seventy pounds; the deponent answered, that he had business up town, and returned to him no more that night; a few evenings afterwards, the said Clayton told the deponent he need not be angry with him, for that it was at the request of General Gunn, and he would pay the expense.

JOHN SHEPPERD.

Sworn to, as aforesaid.

David Glen, sworn, saith, that he went down to Augusta during the last session of the Legislature, whilst the act for the sale of the western lands was under the deliberation of the General Assembly; that he put up with Mr. Wilkinson and Mr. Shepperd, two members of the General Assembly, at Mr. M'Veer's in Augusta; that he frequently talked with Mr. Wilkinson on that subject, and advised him not to agree to sell it, for it would hurt his popularity; that the said Wilkinson said it would not, for that he thought it was best. That, after the deponent found the land would be sold, he was desirous to get part of it, and applied to Mr. Cox, one of the trustees in one company, to know if he could get part; that Mr. Cox told the deponent he could not, for that all the shares were taken up; that he then applied to the said Reuben Wilkinson to know if he could get him a part, who said he would, and did let the deponent have a share, which was in the name of the said Reuben Wilkinson, and was for about twenty-seven thousand acres, or thereabout, subject to a deduction. The deponent further saith, that he frequently heard Reuben Wilkinson say, after the Legislature rose, that he should make a great deal of money by that measure; that during the sitting of the Legislature, Mr. Longstreet frequently urged the deponent to try to prevail on Mr. Shepperd, another member, to go home; the deponent said he could not influence Mr. Shepperd: the deponent understood, and believed that the said Longstreet wished to get Mr. Shepperd to go home, to prevent him voting against the sale of the lands, that he likewise had a conversation with Mr. Wilkinson, who also asked the deponent if Shepperd would not go home. The deponent answered he did not know. When Wilkinson replied, Ly God, I wish he would. The deponent further saith, that, before the Assembly rose, and before the Governor signed the bill, he, the said Wilkinson, showed the deponent two written certificates, for four shares each, or for a certain number of acres, the deponent does not precisely recollect, which said certificates did not mention that any sum was to be paid for them. They were signed by Nathaniel Pendleton, chairman. He believes that, afterwards, the said Wilkinson showed the deponent two printed certificates from the Tennessee Company, one from the Georgia Company, for fifty-six thousand acres, signed by James Gunn, Matthew M'Allister, and George Walker, he believes, and two printed certificates from the Georgia Mississippi Company; that the said Wilkinson informed the deponent the first two written certificates had been given up, and that he had received the last two printed ones in lieu thereof.

DAVID GLEN.

Sworn to, as aforesaid.

Robert Flournoy, esq., being duly sworn, saith, that, at the last session of the Legislature before the last, he made an acquaintance with Judge Pendleton; that the said Judge Pendleton contemplated, and made proposals to the Legislature to purchase a part of the vacant territory; that he then offered the deponent a share, provided the business succeeded; that not being the case, the deponent attended at the last session, when that subject came on the carpet again. That then William Longstreet called on the deponent one morning, at his lodgings, and informed him that he, the deponent, was set down for a share of seventy-five thousand acres, in the Georgia Company; that the deponent was informed that he was set down by the influence of General Gunn; the deponent further saith, that the meetings of the Georgia Mississippi Company were held at the deponent's quarters; that he was present at some of their meetings, and during the passage of the act for the disposal of the western lands, he thinks General Gunn sent for the deponent, and asked him if he was intimate with Henry Mitchell, esquire, a senator from the county of Warren. The deponent answered he was. General Gunn then requested the deponent to go to him, the said Mitchell, and propose to him to take a share of seventy-five thousand acres of the lands, on the same terms of the other purchasers, and, at the same time, to urge him to vote for selling the land: the said Gunn mentioned, that Captain Raines had a share of fifty-six thousand acres, or thereabouts, who was a brother-in-law to Mr. Mitchell, but that Mr. Mitchell should have a share exclusive of that. The deponent did make such a proposal, which Mr. Mitchell refused. The deponent further saith, that the said General Gunn requested him, at some time during that session, and before the bill for selling the land was passed, to go to Roberts Thomas, a member of the Senate from Hancock county, and know if he was earnest in the business, for that he was fearful he did not intend to be uniform, for he was afraid the fellow was frightened, or words of that nature; that the deponent did call on Mr. Thomas for that purpose, who told him that he meant to be uniform. The deponent, after the rising of the Legislature, saw the said Thomas in the streets of Augusta, when the said Thomas made this observation: "they blame me for speculation, now I will speculate, Flournoy; you have been speculating all your life, and I will make more money in two years than you have made in your whole life." The deponent replied, I believe you have made more in two months, or less time.

R. FLOURNOY.

Sworn to, as aforesaid.

Robert Flournoy, esq., further saith, that Roberts Thomas, esq., in a conversation on the subject before the meeting of the last Legislature, told the deponent he should be in favor of a sale, as he thought it would be an advantage to the State, if it came forward in a favorable shape. The deponent further saith, that General Gunn likewise told the deponent, during the sitting of the Legislature, that no member of the Legislature should, or could expect to have a share if he did not vote for the bill.

R. FLOURNOY.

THOMAS LEWIS.

James Simms, esq., one of the representatives from the county of Columbia, being duly sworn, saith, that he had frequent conversations with Roberts Thomas, esq., a member of the Senate of this State, at the last session of the Legislature at Augusta; that the deponent did frequently, during that session, and whilst the act for the disposal of the western territory was in agitation, advise the said Roberts Thomas not to vote for the sale of the lands; that the said Thomas said there was an opportunity of making something very clever, and if he did vote for it, he would; the deponent told the said Roberts Thomas, that the purchasers would deceive him, and after he had voted in favor of it, he would get nothing; to which the said Thomas replied, he would take care to make himself secure before he gave his vote.

The deponent further saith, that, during the last session of the Legislature, whilst the said bill for the disposal of the western lands was on the carpet, General Gunn called on the deponent, and told him that he was fearful the bill would be lost. Luke Mann, esq., a member of the Senate, as the deponent understood that day, voted against the bill; Gunn then said, Simms, I suppose, from what I have heard, you are a poor man, and you now have an opportunity of making something handsome for yourself and family; if you will prevail on Mann to vote for the bill, I will give you fifty thousand acres of land. The deponent further saith, that the said Gunn told the deponent he would give the same, if he would get Mr. Wood, a senator, to vote for it, or any other member of the Senate; that he was in company with Mr. John King, and Mr. Samuel Wright, two members of the same Senate, at their quarters in Augusta; that a conversation arose about the sale of the western lands; the deponent expressing himself opposed to that measure, the said John King and Samuel Wright told the deponent he ought not to oppose it, for he might make something clever if he would come into the measure, or words of that nature.

JAMES SIMMS.

Sworn to, as aforesaid.

Burrall Pope, esq., one of the members of the last and present Senate of this State, being duly sworn, saith, that being a member of the Senate at the last session of Legislature, he lodged at Mr. Herbert's, in Augusta, with Mr. Harrison Musgrove, then a member of the House of Representatives, from the said county; that one evening, whilst the bill for the disposal of the western territory was in its passage, the said Musgrove told the deponent he had found out more than ever he knew before; that he had discovered there were two shares in Cumming's Company reserved for himself, and every member that would take them. The deponent further saith, that, at another time, said Musgrove said to the deponent, Friend Pope, I am authorized to tell you, that you can have one hundred guineas for your part; to which the deponent answered he had no part; that another time the said Musgrove further told the deponent, he might get five hundred silver dollars.

BURRALL POPE.

Sworn to, as aforesaid.

Henry G. Caldwell, esq., being duly sworn, saith, that, during the sitting of the last convention at Louisville, the deponent had a conversation with General Gunn, when the said Gunn asked the deponent who was to be Governor next year; the deponent said he heard Judge Stith mentioned; the said Gunn shook his head, and said it would not do, that Stith had been ungrateful to his poor relations, for that he had made a great deal of money by the speculation, and had not been generous to them: the deponent asked the said General Gunn, how much Judge Stith had made by that business. General Gunn answered, thirteen thousand dollars. The deponent then asked the said Gunn, if the said Stith had a share in the lands; to which General Gunn gave no direct answer, but said he had engaged to give Judge Stith thirteen thousand dollars for his influence in passing the law for disposal of the lands; that if the law passed, Stith was to have the money; that the law had passed, and that in consequence, he had given him a draught for the money, and he either had received, or would receive it.

HENRY G. CALDWELL.

David B. Mitchell, a member of the last as well as the present Legislature of the said State, being duly sworn, maketh oath and saith, that, on his return from Augusta, after the rising of the Legislature, he rode in company with Thomas Wyly, esq., a member of the Senate of that Legislature, from the county of Effingham, when a conversation took place between this deponent and the said Thomas Wyly, on the subject of the sale of the western territory of this State, which took place during that session; when the said Thomas Wyly told this deponent that he, the said Wyly, had sold a share which he held in one of the companies who had purchased the said territory, to one Wilson, a merchant in Augusta, for which he had got a negro fellow named Dublin, which was either in full, or in part for the said share; but this deponent believes the negro was only in part, for the said Wyly also informed this deponent, that he had some money besides, which was paid him on account of said share; and further, that the said negro Dublin was then riding behind the carriage in which the said Wyly and this deponent were; and this deponent further saith, that, at the same time, the said Wyly told this deponent, that he would make eight or ten negroes by the shares he held in the different companies who purchased the said territory; that this deponent then observed to the said Wyly, that he had not made as much as some others of the Senate had; when the said Wyly observed that he had engaged too soon, that he was not so lucky as some of them who had held off until the last.

D. B. MITCHELL.

Sworn to, as aforesaid.

Henry Mitchell, esq., senator from the county of Warren, in the last and present General Assembly, being duly sworn, saith, that during the sitting of the last Legislature at Augusta, the deponent was sent for by Mr. Cumming, one of the grantees of the Georgia Mississippi Company, to his house, where, in a conversation about the sale of the western territory, the said Mr. Cumming asked the deponent his opinion as to the propriety of such sale; the deponent answered it was a subject that would come before him in the Senate, and, consequently, he did not think proper to form his opinion before it did come forward; that the said Mr. Cumming further told the deponent, that, provided he thought it right to sell the lands, he should not be precluded from having a share, although a member, for that the companies had made provision for shares for all the members, provided they thought fit to take them.

HENRY MITCHELL.

Sworn to, as aforesaid.

James M'Neil, esq., a member of the representative branch of the last Legislature, and now a member of the Senate, being duly sworn, saith that, in a short space of time after the adjournment of the last Legislature, he was in the town of Augusta, in company with Andrew Innis, who told him that he was one of the associates contemplated in an act passed by the aforesaid session, for disposing of a part of the western territory of this State; that the purchasers and their associates were reduced to the necessity of passing a credit in favor of Roberts Thomas, then senator of Hancock county as an associate, for the full amount of eight clear shares of land, without his paying one shilling for the same; whereby they did procure the vote and interest of him, the said Thomas, in passing the aforesaid act. That after the Legislature adjourned, the said Roberts was alarmed, and did propose to sell or let his eight shares, as aforesaid, revert to the grantees and their associates, for a sum not less than three nor more than five thousand dollars, which proposal was acceded to; and that he, as one of the associates, was called in for his proportionate part of the aforesaid sum, which he did pay; whereby the claim of the aforesaid Roberts was thereby extinguished for and in the behalf of the grantees and their associates, or words to that effect.

JAS. M'NIEL.

Sworn to, as aforesaid.

John Thomas, being duly sworn, saith, that his late brother, Roberts Thomas, a member of the Senate at the last Legislature, told the deponent that the companies who purchased the western lands had complimented the said Roberts Thomas with something, either a share or shares, or something of that kind; that he does not suppose that his late brother could have had the sum of two thousand dollars in cash before the meeting of the Legislature, nor had he sold any part of his property about that time, as the deponent knew of. The deponent further saith, that his late brother was possessed of a note of hand for nine hundred dollars given by Jacob Walburgher, to which the name of A. Jones is signed as a witness; that he does not know that his brother sold Mr. Walburgher any property. The deponent further saith, that after his brother was wounded, he told the deponent he had voted for the sale of the lands, and thought he had done right, and was it to do again, he should do the same; that the deponent does not believe that the companies gave the said R. Thomas any moneys; and that if he had a large sum of money, he must have got it by the sale of lands or shares which the companies had given him, as he supposes.

JOHN THOMAS, Jr.

Sworn to, as aforesaid.

James Lucas, being duly sworn, saith, that some time after the breaking up of the last Legislature, when Roberts Thomas, esq., as a member of Senate in that Legislature had returned to Hancock county, that this deponent heard that the said Roberts Thomas was either selling, or about to sell off all his property, and to remove; that this deponent then went, with some of his neighbors, to the house of said Thomas, and had some conversation with him on the sale of the western territory; when the said Roberts Thomas informed him, this deponent, that he was, and always had been, in favor of the sale of said territory, and that the companies who had purchased the same had let him have a share or two in the said lands; and this deponent further saith, that on the day of election for members to Congress, the deponent saw a Mr. Walburgher at the election for Hancock county, who informed the deponent that he had purchased a share of the said lands from the said Roberts Thomas, and that he had given his note of hand for the same for nine hundred dollars, which share he, the said Walburgher, had afterwards sold, by which he made a profit of one hundred and twenty-five dollars; and this deponent further saith, that on or about the day on which the last Legislature adjourned, he was in Augusta, and that John King, esq., a member of the Senate, carried the deponent to the house of Mr. Thomas Cumming, and there spoke, as he believes, to one of the grantees of the Georgia Mississippi Company, to let the deponent have a share in said company; that the deponent did, in consequence thereof, receive a certificate for one share, for which he paid one hundred dollars; and further, that some time in the beginning of August last, this deponent, being in Augusta, saw Mr. Reuben Wilkinson, a member of the last Legislature, there, who informed the deponent that he had a share in the Tennessee Company, and that he had but a few minutes before paid the balance of the purchase money therefor.

JAMES LUCAS.

Sworn to, as aforesaid.

Captain Robert Raines, being duly sworn, saith, that a day or two before the adjournment of the last Legislature, he was in Augusta, and in company with John King, esq., a member of the Senate in that Legislature; that this deponent introduced to the said John King, Captain James Lucas; that said King then asked the said Lucas into the house where the said King lodged, to drink some grog with; that, when the said King came out of the house, he informed this deponent he had given the said Lucas a share, by which he understood a share in some of the companies who purchased the western territory, and observed, at the same time, with an oath, that he had more lands besides than he and his sons knew what to do with; and that the deponent afterwards asked Captain Lucas whether the said King had given him the said share, and was answered that he had, but that he, the said Lucas, was to pay the purchase money. And this deponent further saith that, during the sitting of the last Legislature, and previous to the passing of the act for the sale of the western territory, Philip Clayton, esq., Treasurer of this State, called on this deponent, and informed him, if you could prevail on Mr. Mitchell, a member of the Senate in that Legislature, and the brother-in-law of this deponent, to go home, he, the deponent, might have five hundred dollars, pounds, or guineas, this deponent does not remember which, and any appointment from the Legislature he would ask, which was in their power to give. The said Clayton observed, at the same time, that as the deponent was the brother of Mr. Mitchell, he thought he might have influence enough with him to prevail on him to go home, as the act would be passed whether he went home or not; to which the deponent made some small reply, and the said Clayton then said, he hoped the deponent would not think any thing of him, for he was authorized to say what he did. And this deponent further saith, that some time on or about the 1st of August last, he was in Augusta, and saw Richard Warsham, a member of the last Legislature, there, who had a share in the Georgia Company, commonly called Gunn's Company, and was offering the same for sale to Mr. Maher; that this deponent also saw Reuben Wilkinson, a member of the last Legislature, in Augusta, at the same time, who informed this deponent he had shares in the purchase of the western lands, and that he wished to sell them.

ROBERT RAINES.

Sworn to, as aforesaid.

Andrew Baxter, being duly sworn, maketh oath that, some time previous to the passing of the first bill for the disposal of the western territory of this State, by the last Legislature, the deponent being at Augusta, and conceiving it a step hurtful to the country, thought it his duty to give his thoughts to the representation of his county, which was Hancock, and accordingly called on Senator Roberts Thomas, and reprobated the act, which said Thomas vindicated; that the deponent told him that it would be generally thought he was interested, if he voted in favor of the bill, when it was so generally disapproved of by his constituents; to which the said Thomas replied that he did not know he was interested, but that those who voted in favor of the bill were provided for in the articles of the different companies; upon which the deponent replied, he should consider that as indirect bribery.

ANDREW BAXTER.

Sworn to, as aforesaid.

William Sallard, of the county of Hancock, being duly sworn, maketh oath, that on or about the 22d, 23d, or 24th day of January, 1795, he, the deponent, was at Augusta, procuring some articles and disposing of some tobacco, and that, during the said term, he was at Gen. Glascock's, one of the grantees of the western territory; that a conversation took place between the general and himself relative to it, and concerning Roberts Thomas, the senator (in the Legislature which disposed of it) for the said county of Hancock; that the general asked the deponent what the people of Hancock thought of Thomas, and if they would kill him; the deponent replied, he did not know they would kill him, but that he would stand a good chance of chugging a sapling, or words to that effect; for they had an idea that Thomas was bribed; the general replied that he did not know that he was bribed, but he had a good deal of the land; that he himself had purchased some of the shares, and had paid himself, with a Mr. Nightingale, to Thomas, seventeen hundred dollars, to the best of this deponent's recollection; and four hundred dollars to John Thomas, as he believes, Roberts Thomas's brother, for the land. That the general further saith, other companies he expected had also paid the said Roberts Thomas as much money for lands or shares as he had paid. That he, yesterday, in his way down, met with John Thomas, the said Roberts Thomas's brother, who acknowledged to the deponent that he had received money from General Glascock.

TREASURY OFFICE, GEORGIA, LOUISVILLE, August 10, 1802.

EDWIN MOUNGER, Treasurer.
I. MERIWETHER, Comptroller General.

To James Madison, Albert Gallatin, and Levi Lincoln, Esquires, Commissioners of the United States, appointed in pursuance of an act of Congress, entitled "An act for an amicable settlement of limits with the State of Georgia, and authorizing the establishment of a Government in the Mississippi Territory," and of an act supplementary to the same act.

GENTLEMEN: The undersigned having exhibited claims to certain portions of the territory lately ceded by the State of Georgia to the United States, and the vouchers in support thereof, which, they trust, are full and satisfactory, do now, in conformity to the further provisions of said acts of Congress, submit to your consideration and opinion the following propositions, which they offer as the terms of a compromise of the claims of themselves and their respective constituents.

The individuals, and companies of individuals, whose claims the undersigned represent, will release to the United States all their right, title, and interest, in and to the territory, lands, and soil, by them claimed, on the following conditions, that is to say:

1st. That the Government of the United States, will, during the present session of Congress, provide by law for the appropriation of five millions of the most valuable acres of the land ceded to the United States by the State of Georgia, in such manner as not to interfere with their engagements to the State of Georgia, in their late act of cession, or the grants therein recognized, to be disposed of under the authority of the United States, for a sum not less than two dollars per acre, clear of all expense or charge, for the purpose of compensating for the claims for which the said five millions of acres are therein reserved; and that said five millions of acres shall be the first sold, after a quantity of other of the ceded lands shall be disposed of sufficient to pay the State of Georgia the one million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, contracted to be paid in their said act of cession.

2d. In order to make a complete settlement of said compensation at this time, and to vest the title of the claimants in the United States, as soon as may be, the undersigned, for themselves and those whom they represent, propose and consent that the proceeds of the sales of the said five millions of acres of land be now estimated at the minimum sum of ten millions of dollars, and that the same be divided and apportioned between the United States, for the purposes hereinafter expressed, and the individuals and companies of individuals, whose claims the undersigned represent, in the following manner:

3d. The United States shall retain, out of the said gross sum of ten millions of dollars, the proportion of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, for the purpose (if they think it just and fit) of quieting, or compensating for any claims supposed to fall within the description of those for which the said five millions of acres of land were reserved in the cession aforesaid, other than those which derive their title from the State of Georgia, under the act of said State, passed January 7th, A. D. 1795, and granted to four companies, called in said act, "The Georgia Company," "The Georgia Mississippi Company," "The Tennessee Company," and "The Upper Mississippi Company."

4th. Of the remainder of said gross sum, four millions eight hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars, shall be the apportionment to the holders of the title of "The Georgia Company," out of which the United States shall retain the proportion of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars to represent one million of acres of land, reserved in said grant for citizens' rights, to be disposed of to those who may lawfully represent the same: the remaining proportion of four millions six hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars shall be apportioned among those who now hold the residue of the title of the said "Georgia Company," according to their respective interest therein. And whereas it is suggested that claims may be made to some parts of the land granted to the said "Georgia Company" by the act aforesaid, and under the same grant, other than those represented by the undersigned, and some of the individual claims under said grant may conflict with each other in whole or in part, as well as that the United States may make claim to some part thereof, under the same grant; it is, therefore, proposed and agreed that, in case any such claims shall be made, or so conflict, the same shall be adjudged, and decided on, according to the rules which govern in courts of law and chancery, by the commissioners to whom these propositions are addressed; or, in case the parties shall not agree thereto, by three arbitrators, one of whom shall be chosen by each party, and the third by both the parties; and in case both parties shall not agree in the choice of a third arbitrator, he shall be chosen by the other two arbitrators: and the award, in writing, under the hands of said commissioners, or any two of them, or of said arbitrators, or any two of them, after a hearing of the parties by the three, shall be final. And the United States shall retain the proportion of allowance made to any claimants in said Georgia Company who shall not agree to such compromise, and release their title to the United States, agreeably to such decision. And the United States shall also retain all such portions of the aggregate residue sum assigned to said Georgia Company, as shall not appear to be represented by any claim, or established by decision, as aforesaid, but subject to the contingency hereinafter mentioned. It is understood, however, that those claimants in said Georgia Company, whose claims do not appear to be subject to controversy, as aforesaid, shall in no way be delayed by any thing contained in this article, from receiving the proportion which may be due to them, but they shall be entitled to receive the same as speedily as the claimants in any other company, in which no such controversy exists.

5th. Three millions twenty-two thousand five hundred dollars shall be the apportionment of the holders of the title of the "Georgia Mississippi Company," out of which the United States shall retain the proportion of one hundred and fifty-five thousand dollars to represent six hundred and twenty thousand acres of land, reserved in said grant for citizens' rights, to be disposed of to those who may lawfully represent the same; and the remaining proportion of two millions eight hundred and sixty-seven thousand five hundred dollars shall be apportioned among the members of the "New England Mississippi Land Company," so called, who hold, under their trustees, Leonard Jarvis, Henry Newman, and William Hull, all the residue of the title of the said "Georgia Mississippi Company," which apportionment shall be made by the directors of said "New England Mississippi Land Company," agreeably to their articles of covenant and agreement.

6th. One million one hundred and seventy thousand dollars shall be the apportionment to the holders of the title of "The Tennessee Company," out of which the United States shall retain the proportion of sixty thousand five hundred dollars, to represent two hundred and forty-two thousand acres of land, reserved in said grant for citizens' rights, to be disposed of to those who may lawfully represent the same; and the United States shall also retain thereout the further proportion of twelve thousand five hundred dollars, to represent what is called the commissioners' reservation in said grant; the remaining proportion of one million ninety-seven thousand dollars shall be apportioned among those who now hold the residue of the title of the said "Tennessee Company," according to their respective interests therein. And whereas it is suggested that controversies of a nature similar to those which are supposed to exist among the claimants in the Georgia Company may also take place among those of the Tennessee Company; it is, therefore, agreed, that in case any such may exist, they shall be adjudged and decided on, in the same mode and manner, and under the same conditions and restrictions, as are provided for the termination and decision of such controversies among the claimants under "The Georgia Company."

7th. Six hundred and eighty-two thousand five hundred dollars shall be the apportionment to the holders of the title of "The Upper Mississippi Company," out of which the United States shall retain the proportion of thirty-four thousand five hundred dollars, to represent one hundred and thirty-eight thousand acres of land, reserved in said grant for citizens' rights, to be disposed of to those who may lawfully represent the same; and the remaining proportion of six hundred and forty-eight thousand dollars shall be apportioned among the associates who hold under Adam Tunno, James Miller, and James Warrington, the whole of the residue of the title of said "Upper Mississippi Company," to be apportioned according to the shares held by each.

8th. The undersigned, for themselves and those whom they represent, further propose and consent to the following terms of payment of the several allowances, apportioned, and to be apportioned among them, as aforesaid, viz:

That the Government of the United States will, during the present session of Congress, further provide by law for the issuing from the Treasury of the United States, certificates or evidences of the several allowances to the individuals, or companies of individuals, who are or shall be found entitled to the same, as aforesaid; which certificates shall bear date the first day of April, A. D. 1803, and shall be made payable in three annual and equal instalments, the first of which shall be payable on the first day of April, A. D. 1805, out of the first proceeds of the sales of the said five millions of acres of land, appropriated as aforesaid; and in case of the suspension of the payment of any instalment, on account of the deficiency in the proceeds of the sales, an interest of six per cent. annually shall be allowed thereon, from the time when due, to the time when paid; and if the proceeds of the sales shall exceed the sum due on any instalment, the United States shall not be held to anticipate the payment of the next instalment; but, if the proceeds of the sales are less than the amount of any instalment when due, the holders of the certificates shall be obliged to receive, and the United States will pay the whole amount of such proceeds at the time the instalment falls due; and the United States shall never be held to make payment of any part of the principal or interest mentioned in said certificates, excepting from the actual proceeds of the sales of five millions of the most valuable acres of land, ceded as aforesaid; but in case the proceeds of the sales of such portions of the said five millions of acres of land, as are represented by the holders of said certificates, shall not be found sufficient for the entire payment of the principal and interest of said certificates, then all such portions of the said five millions of acres of land as are retained by the United States, (excepting such parts of the two hundred and fifty thousand dollars as shall have been appropriated by them to the extinguishment of any other claims within the reservation of the act of cession of the State of Georgia,) together with all such sums of money as shall be received into the Treasury for the said sales of said five millions of acres, above the said two dollars per acre, shall remain an eventual fund for the payment of any such deficiency.

9th. That the said certificates shall be issued for such amount, in each certificate, as shall be most convenient to the holders; and they shall be made transferable in the same manner as is provided by law for the transfer of the domestic debt of the United States; and after the payment of one million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars to the State of Georgia is completed, the said certificates shall be receivable in payment from any purchase of any part of the land ceded by the State of Georgia, at the nominal amount of the sum expressed therein, with the interest (if any) which may have accrued thereon at the time of such payment; and no discount shall be made on any certificate paid for land, although such payment be made before the certificate has fallen due; but the amount of any certificates thus paid in, shall not be considered as money in the Treasury, by which any part of an instalment is to be paid to the holders of the certificates in circulation.

10th. In case the proceeds of the five millions of acres of land which shall be first sold, or so much thereof as the claimants under the aforesaid act of Georgia may be entitled to receive, according to the foregoing propositions, shall prove insufficient to discharge the principal and interest of said certificates, the holders of said certificates shall be entitled to receive what may so remain due thereon out of the proceeds of the sales of any other of the lands ceded as aforesaid: Provided, That they shall not, in any event, receive, in the whole, a greater amount than the proceeds of those five millions of acres, in said lands, which shall ultimately be sold for the highest price or prices.

11th. The claimants consent that no certificates shall be delivered, until all such deeds, documents, and other papers, by them exhibited, as the commissioners of the United States shall judge necessary, nor until a deed of release to the United States of all the claimants' right, title, and interest, in and to the lands by him or them claimed, who are to receive the certificates, shall be duly lodged in the office of the Secretary of State of the United States.

These propositions, gentlemen, are made by the undersigned, as the result of your communications, and are shaped more under the influence of a sincere desire to meet the wishes and views of the Government of the United States, in the arrangement of this important object, than from an expectation of realizing a full compensation for property surrendered to public use; they feel confident that Congress will view them in the same light, and readily accede to the terms; but should they be disappointed in their expectations, and should these propositions of compromise fail of meeting the approbation and sanction of Congress, we think it necessary to make it clearly understood, that nothing contained herein shall be construed to imply an assent, on the part of the claimants, to the act of cession of the State of Georgia, or in any way to avail the United States, to the prejudice of the claimants.

With the highest considerations of respect and attachment to the Government of the United States, and of personal esteem to yourselves, we are,

AN ACT supplementary to an act, entitled "An act for appropriating a part of the unlocated territory of this State for the payment of the late State troops, and for other purposes therein mentioned, declaring the right of this State to the unappropriated territory thereof, for the protection and support of the frontiers of this State, and for other purposes."

Whereas, in and by the articles of confederation entered into and finally ratified on the first day of March, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-one, by the then thirteen United States of America, the territory within the limits of each of the said States is to each of them respectively confirmed and guaranteed; first, by the second article to wit: "Each State retains its sovereignty, freedom, and independence, and every power, jurisdiction, and right, which is not by the confederation expressly delegated to the United States in Congress assembled; and, secondly, by the last clause in the second section of the ninth article, no State shall be deprived of territory for the benefit of the United States.

And whereas, in and by the definitive treaty of peace, signed at Paris on the third day of September, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-three, the boundaries of the United States are established; and those boundaries which limit the westward and southwestward parts of this State, are therein thus defined: "Along the middle of the River Mississippi, until it shall intersect the northernmost part of the thirty-first degree of north latitude; south, by a line drawn due east from the termination of the line last mentioned, in the latitude of thirty-one degrees north of the equator, to the middle of the River Appalachicola or Chattahoochee; thence, along the middle thereof, to its junction with the Flint river; thence, straight to the head of St. Mary's river; and thence, down along the middle of St. Mary's river, to the Atlantic ocean." Which boundaries coincide with the southwardly and westwardly boundaries recited in the land act now in force, passed at Savannah, on the seventeenth day of September, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-three; and by the convention held at Beaufort, on the twenty-eighth day of April, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, between this State and the State of South Carolina, the northern boundary of the State is established "from the mouth of the River Savannah, up the said river to the confluence of Tugaloo and Keowee; thence up the Tugaloo, and from the source thereof, a due west line to the Mississippi, including islands."

And whereas, in and by the first clause of the sixth article of the Federal constitution of the United States of America, all engagements entered into before the adoption of the said constitution, shall be as valid against the United States, under the said constitution, as under the confederation; by the third clause of the ninth section of the first article of the said constitution, no ex post facto law shall be passed; and by the second clause of the third section of the fourth article, the Congress shall have power to dispose of, and make all necessary rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this construction shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United States, or of any particular State.

And whereas the cession made by the State of North Carolina to the United States, by them accepted on the second day of April, one thousand seven hundred and ninety, is a full acknowledgment and recognition on their part, that the several States not only have the right of pre-emption, but are in the full exercise of all territorial right within their respective limits. And whereas, notwithstanding the United States did, on the twenty-second day of July, one thousand seven hundred and ninety, by an act to regulate trade and intercourse with the Indian tribes, enact and declare, that no sale of lands made by Indians, or any tribe or nation of Indians, within the United States, shall be valid to any person or persons, or to any State, whether having the right of pre-emption to such lands or not, unless the same shall be made and duly executed at some public treaty held under the authority of the United States; and did, on the seventh day of August, one thousand seven hundred and ninety, by a treaty held at New York with certain Creek Indians, stipulated by the fourth article of the said treaty, that the boundary between the citizens of the United States and the Creek nation is, and shall be, "from where the old line strikes to the Savannah; thence up the said river; to a place on the most northern branch of the same, commonly called the Keowee, where a northeast line, to be drawn from the top of Oconna mountain, shall intersect; thence along the said line, in a southwest direction, to the Tugaloo river; thence to the top of the Currahee mountain; thence to the head, or the source of the main south branch of the Oconee river, called the Appalachian river; thence down the middle of the main south branch and River Oconee, to its confluence with the Ocmulgee, which form the River Altamaha; and thence down the middle of the said Altamaha, to the old line on the said river; and thence along the said old line to the River St. Mary's;" and, by the fifth article, "that the United States solemnly guaranty to the Creek nation all their lands within the limits of the United States, to the westward and southward of the boundary described in the preceding article."

And, finally, whereas the State of Georgia aforesaid hath by no act, or in any manner whatever, transferred, alienated, or conveyed her right of soil or pre-emption, in any part of the vacant territory within the limits of the said State, to the United States, the cession dated the fifth day of February, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-eight, offered by the State of Georgia to the United States, having been by the said United States, in Congress assembled, on the fifteenth day of July, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-eight, rejected, in which rejection territorial rights are declared to rest on the spirit and meaning of the confederation: And whereas the said proposed cession became void, and, on the part of this State, is hereby declared to be null and void, to all intents, purposes, and constructions:

Be it, therefore, enacted by the Senate and Representatives of the Freemen of the State of Georgia, in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That the State of Georgia aforesaid is in full possession, and in the full exercise of the jurisdictional and territorial right, and the fee simple thereof, and that the right of pre-emption to vacant and unappropriated lands lying westwardly and southwestwardly of the present Indian temporary line, and within the limits of the said State, and the fee simple thereof, together with the right of disposing thereof, are, and are hereby declared to be, in the State of Georgia; and for the purpose of raising a fund for carrying this act fully into effect,

Be it enacted, That all that tract or parcel of land, including islands, situate, lying, and being within the following boundaries, that is to say: Beginning on the Mobile bay, where the latitude thirty-one degrees north of the equator intersects the same; running thence up the said bay to the mouth of Lake Tensas; thence up the said Lake Tensas to the Alabama river, including Curry's and all other islands therein; thence up the said Alabama to the junction of the Coosa and Oakfuskee rivers; thence up the Coosa river above the Big Shoal, to where it intersects the latitude of thirty-four degrees north of the equator; thence, a due west course to the Mississippi river; thence down the middle of the said river, to the latitude of thirty-two degrees forty minutes; thence a due east course to the mouth of Tombigbee river; thence down the middle of the said river to its junction with the Alabama river; thence down the middle of the said river to the Mobile bay; thence down the said Mobile bay to the place of beginning, shall be sold unto James Gunn, Matthew M'Allister, and George Walker, and their associates, called the Georgia Company, and their heirs and assigns, forever, in fee simple, as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, for the sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, to be paid in specie, bank bills of the United States, and warrants for the years one thousand seven hundred and ninety-one, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-three, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-five; drawn by the Governor, the President of the Senate, and Speaker of the House of Representatives, in the following manner, that is to say: fifty thousand dollars to be deposited in the treasury previous to the passing of this act, and the remaining two hundred thousand dollars are to be paid on or before the first day of November next.

And be it further enacted, That whenever the said James Gunn, Matthew M'Allister, and George Walker, and their associates, or their agent or agents, shall produce to his excellency the Governor a receipt signed by the Treasurer, that they have deposited the aforesaid sum of fifty thousand dollars, according to the tenor and effect of this act, it shall then be the duty of his excellency the Governor, and he is hereby required to issue and sign to the said James Gunn, Matthew M'Allister, and George Walker, and their associates, their heirs and assigns, in fee simple, as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, a grant for the aforesaid tract of country, they securing the last payment of two hundred thousand dollars to the State, by a mortgage to his excellency the Governor, and his successors in office, on the whole of the land so granted; which mortgage shall be immediately foreclosed, in case default shall be made in the payment of the said sum of two hundred thousand dollars, on or before the first day of November next, as aforesaid. In the superior court of any county within the State of Georgia, at the discretion of his excellency the Governor, any law or usage regulating the mode of foreclosing mortgages to the contrary, notwithstanding; and the whole sum of fifty thousand dollars deposited shall become forfeited to and for the use of the State; and the grant to be given to the said James Gunn, Matthew M'Allister, and George Walker, and their associates, to be, and the same, in that case, is hereby declared to be null and void.

And be it further enacted, That the said Georgia Company shall reserve for and to the use of the citizens of Georgia, exclusively, the quantity of one million of acres of their purchase, in the following manner, to wit: at the expiration of three months from and after the passing of this act, a subscription book shall be opened at the Treasury Office of this State, and be kept open for the term of four months thereafter, for the purpose of receiving subscriptions of the citizens for the said reserved lands; Provided, That no person who shall otherwise become a member, or interested in either of the companies herein contemplated, shall be allowed to subscribe for any part of said reserved land; no person shall be permitted to subscribe for more than five thousand acres in his own name, or in the name of any other citizen, unless duly authorized and appointed by him for that purpose, under a warrant of attorney, executed in the presence of two or more witnesses, one of whom, at least, shall be a justice appointed for holding the inferior court of the county, where the subscriber resides; which said power of attorney shall be lodged with the Treasurer, as his voucher for entering such subscription; And provided also, That the citizens of the respective counties shall not, at any time within three months from and after the opening of the books of subscription, as aforesaid, be allowed to subscribe for more or greater quantity of the said reserved lands than the proportion hereinafter particularly described and limited, to wit: Chatham, one hundred and seventy thousand acres; Effingham, sixty-two thousand acres; Burke, one hundred and fifty-five thousand acres; Richmond, one hundred and fifty-five thousand acres; Columbia, one hundred and fifty-five thousand acres; Wilkes, two hundred and seventy-two thousand acres; Washington, one hundred and thirty-one thousand acres; Elbert, one hundred and thirty-one thousand acres; Greene, one hundred and twenty-five thousand acres; Franklin, seventy-eight thousand acres; Liberty, sixty-nine thousand acres; Glynn, thirty-two thousand acres; Camden, thirty-two thousand acres; M'Intosh, thirty-five thousand acres; Bryant, thirty-two thousand acres; Warren, ninety-three thousand acres; Oglethorpe, one hundred and sixteen thousand acres; Montgomery, twenty-three thousand acres; Scriven, thirty-eight thousand acres; and Hancock, ninety-six thousand acres. And it shall be the duty of the Treasurer, in all cases of application to subscribe, to require an affidavit, in writing, in the following words: "I do solemnly swear, or affirm, that I am in no way interested, directly, or indirectly, either as a member, or otherwise, in any company's purchase of lands in the western part of this State, and that the subscription which I propose to enter is in my own proper right, and to my use and benefit only." And it shall be the duty of the justices of the inferior courts, before whom warrants of attorney authorizing subscriptions shall be executed, to require a like affidavit on the back of such warrant of attorney, before attesting the same; and the land so subscribed and paid for shall be held by such subscribers, in fee simple, as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, on the same terms, and upon the same principles with original purchasers of the company, in which they shall subscribe, and shall be entitled to fair and equal representations in such company, in proportion to the quantity of land so by them subscribed and paid for.

And be it further enacted, That, upon entering any subscription, as aforesaid, it shall be the duty of the Treasurer, and he is hereby required, to receive of the subscribers the purchase money, being the proportion of one-fifth part of such subscription, in terms of this act; the remaining four-fifths, or balance of the purchase money, shall, within four months from and after the opening of the said book of subscriptions, to be paid unto the Treasurer, in like manner, as aforesaid; and in case such balance shall not be paid on or before the expiration of the said seven months from the passing of this act, then, and in that case, the subscriber or subscribers so failing, shall be at liberty to withdraw their said subscription, together with the money so paid by them, and the lands so subscribed for by them shall revert to, and be vested in the company, in which such subscription shall have been made or entered.

And be it further enacted, That all that tract of country, including islands, situate, lying, and being within the following boundaries, that is to say: beginning on the River Mississippi, at the place where the latitude of thirty-one degrees and eighteen minutes north of the equator, intersects the same; thence, a due east course to the middle of Don or Tombigbee river; thence, up the middle of the said river, to where it intersects the latitude of thirty-two degrees and forty minutes north of the equator; thence, a due west course along the Georgia Company line, to the River Mississippi; thence, down the middle of the same, to the place of beginning, shall be sold to Nicholas Long, Thomas Glascock, Ambrose Gordon, and Thomas Cumming, and their associates, called the Georgia Mississippi Company, to them, and their heirs and assigns forever, in fee simple, as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, for the sum of one hundred and fifty-five thousand dollars, to be paid in gold or silver coin, bank bills of the United States, and such warrants as are made payable in the Georgia Company's purchase, in the manner following, that is to say: thirty-one thousand dollars to be deposited previous to the passing of this act, and the remaining one hundred and twenty-four thousand dollars to be paid on or before the first day of November next.

And be it further enacted, That, whenever the said Nicholas Long, Thomas Glascock, Ambrose Gordon, and Thomas Cumming, and their associates, or their agent or agents, shall produce to his excellency the Governor a receipt signed by the Treasurer, that they have deposited the aforesaid sum of thirty-one thousand dollars, according to the tenor and effect of this act, it shall then be the duty of his excellency the Governor, and he is hereby required to issue and sign to the said Nicholas Long, Thomas Glascock, Ambrose Gordon, and Thomas Cumming, and their associates, their heirs and assigns, in fee simple, as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, a grant for the aforesaid tract of country, they securing the last payment of one hundred and twenty-four thousand dollars to the State, by a mortgage to his excellency the Governor, and his successor in office, on the whole of the land so granted, which mortgage shall be immediately foreclosed, in case default shall be made in the payment of the said sum of one hundred and twenty-four thousand dollars on or before the first day of November next, as aforesaid, in the superior court of any county within the State of Georgia, at the discretion of his excellency the Governor, any law or usage regulating the mode of foreclosing mortgages to the contrary, notwithstanding; and the whole sum of thirty-one thousand dollars deposited will become forfeited to and for the use of the State; and the grant to be given to the said Nicholas Long, Thomas Glascock, Ambrose Gordon, and Thomas Cumming, and their associates, as aforesaid, to be, and the same is hereby declared to be, null and void.

And be it further enacted, That the said Georgia Mississippi Company shall reserve, for the use of the citizens of Georgia, exclusively, the quantity of six hundred and twenty thousand acres of their purchase, to be subscribed, or held and appropriated on the same terms, and to be represented in like manner, as the land reserved by the Georgia Company, as aforesaid.

Scott, John C. And be it further enacted, That whenever the said John B. Scott, John C. Nightingale, and Wade Hampton, or their agent or agents, shall produce to his excellency the Governor, a receipt signed by the Treasurer, that they have deposited the aforesaid sum of five thousand dollars, according to the tenor and effect of this act, it shall then be the duty of his excellency the Governor, and he is hereby required to issue and sign to the said John B. Scott, John C. Nightingale, and Wade Hampton, their heirs and assigns, in fee simple, as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, a grant for the aforesaid land, they securing the last payment of thirty thousand dollars to the State, by a mortgage to his excellency the Governor, and his successors in office, on the whole of the land so granted; which mortgage shall be immediately foreclosed, in case default shall be made in the payment of the said sum of thirty thousand dollars, on or before the first day of November next, as aforesaid, in the superior court of any county within the State of Georgia, at the discretion of his excellency the Governor, any law or usage regulating the mode of foreclosing mortgages to the contrary, notwithstanding; and the whole sum of five thousand dollars deposited shall become forfeited to and for the use of the State; and the grant to be given to the said John B. Scott, John C. Nightingale, and Wade Hampton, as aforesaid, to be, and the same in that case is hereby declared to be, null and void.

And be it further enacted, That the said Upper Mississippi Company shall reserve to and for the use of the citizens of Georgia, exclusively, the quantity of one hundred and thirty-eight thousand acres of their purchase, to be subscribed for, held, and appropriated, on the same terms, and to be represented in like manner, as hereinbefore pointed out, in respect to the lands reserved for the citizens in the Georgia Company.

And be it further enacted, That whenever the said Zachariah Cox and Matthias Maher, and their associates, or their agent or agents, shall produce to his excellency, the Governor, a receipt signed by the treasurer, that they have deposited the said sum of twelve thousand dollars, according to the tenor and effect of this act, it shall then be the duty of his excellency the Governor, and he is hereby required to sign and issue to the said Zachariah Cox and Matthias Maher, and their associates, their heirs and assigns, in fee simple, as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, a grant for the aforesaid tract of country, they securing the last payment of the forty-eight thousand dollars to the State, by a mortgage to his excellency the Governor, and his successors in office, on the whole of the land so granted, which mortgage shall be immediately foreclosed in case default shall be made in the payment of the said sum of forty-eight thousand dollars, on or before the 1st day of November next, as aforesaid, in the superior court of any county within the State of Georgia, at the discretion of his excellency the Governor, any law or usage regulating the mode of foreclosing mortgages to the contrary, notwithstanding; and the whole sum of twelve thousand dollars deposited, shall become forfeited to and for the use of the State, and the grant to be given to the said Zachariah Cox and Matthias Maher, and their associates aforesaid, to be, and the same in that case is hereby declared to be, null and void.

And be it further enacted, That the said Tennessee Company shall reserve for and to the use of the citizens of Georgia, exclusively, the quantity of two hundred and forty-two thousand acres, to be subscribed for, held, and appropriated on the same terms, and to be represented in like manner, as the lands reserved by the Georgia Company, as aforesaid.

And be it further enacted, That the said Tennessee Company shall reserve a further quantity of fifty thousand acres, to be gratuitously divided, share and share alike, between the commissioners appointed by this State, for the purpose of examining the quantity, quality, and circumstances of the Great Bend of Tennessee river, which shall be held by them as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, and be represented in like manner as the lands reserved by the other companies, for the use of the citizens, as a compensation to the said commissioners, for their services rendered the State in that capacity.

And be it further enacted, That all sums so paid by the citizens for lands subscribed for by them, agreeably to the terms of the act, shall be received in payment, and as part of the purchase money of the said companies respectively.

And be it further enacted, That the grants to be issued to the respective companies, in virtue of this act, shall be free from all further or other expense whatsoever, the fees of office accruing upon one grant to each company excepted, which shall be to the Surveyor General, three dollars; to the Governor of the State, three dollars; and to the Secretary of State, three dollars; and that the lands to be granted in pursuance of this act shall be free from taxation, until the inhabitants thereof are represented in the Legislature.

And be it further enacted, That the said grantees and purchasers of the land aforesaid shall forbear a hostile and wanton attacks on any of the Indian tribes which may be found within the limits of this State, and keep this State free from all charges and expenses which may attend the preserving of peace between the said Indians and the grantees, and extinguishing the Indian claims to the territory included within their respective purchases: And provided further, That this State and the Government thereof shall at no time hereafter be subject to any suit at law or in equity, or claim or pretension whatever, for or on account of any deduction in the quantity of the said territory, on account of the amount of the purchase money to be paid, as aforesaid, by any recovery which may or shall be had on any former or other claim or claims whatever.

And be it further enacted, That the money arising from the sale of the said territory, except what shall be appropriated to the extinguishment of Indian claims, as hereinafter expressed, shall be vested in six per cents., or such other stock in the funds of the United States as may be directed by this or a future Legislature; and the interest arising thereon, or so much thereof as may be necessary, shall be applied to the payment of the civil establishment and contingent expenses of the Government of this State.

And be it further enacted, That immediately after the Indian claims to the land lying between the Oconee and Ocmulgee rivers, including that tract of country lying east of a line to be drawn from the place called Fort Romulus, on the Ocmulgee river, to the head of St. Mary's river, or the northern extremity of the Akinfonoka swamp, may be extinguished, the grantees of the several companies and their associates are hereby authorized to apply to the Government of the United States for their concurrence in extinguishing the Indian claims to the different tracts of country by them severally hereby purchased, or as much thereof as to them may seem practicable, which extinguishment of claims to the lands so purchased shall be at the proper expense of the respective companies, and within five years thereafter the said companies shall severally form settlements on the lands where the claims may be so extinguished, or forfeit the further sum of five thousand dollars for each company so failing.

And be it further enacted, That the sum of ten thousand dollars, part of the first payment to be made by the companies aforesaid, shall be, and the same is hereby declared to be, appropriated and set apart for the purpose of extinguishing the Indian claim, in addition to the twenty thousand dollars appropriated by the act, entitled An act appropriating a part of the unlocated territory of this State, for the payment of the late State troops, and for other purposes therein mentioned.

And be it further enacted, That the several grantees and their associates shall not be entitled to dispose of the said territory, in part or in whole, in any way or manner, to any foreign king, prince, potentate, or power whatever; which condition shall be specially expressed in the face of the grant.

And be it further enacted, That all the lands lying westward and southward of the eastern boundary of the several company purchases, and not included therein, estimated at one-fourth of the whole lands lying westward and southward of the eastern boundary of the said purchases, and supposed to contain seven millions two hundred and fifty thousand acres, shall be, and the same is hereby declared to be, reserved and set apart to and for the use and benefit of this State, to be granted out, or otherwise disposed of, as a future Legislature may direct.

THOMAS NAPIER,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

BENJAMIN TALIAFERRO,

President of the Senate.

Concurred, January 7, 1795.

AN ACT declaring null and void a certain usurped act, passed by the last Legislature of this State, at Augusta, on the 7th day of January, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-five, under the pretended title of "An act supplementary to an act, entitled 'An act for appropriating a part of the unlocated territory of this State for the payment of the late State troops, and for other purposes therein mentioned,' declaring the right of this State to the unappropriated territory thereof, for the protection of the frontiers, and for other purposes," and for expunging from the face of the public records the said usurped act, and for declaring the right of this State to all lands lying within the boundaries therein mentioned.

Whereas, the free citizens of this State, or, in other words, the community thereof, are essentially the source of the sovereignty of the State, and no individual or body of men can be entitled to, or vested with, any authority which is not expressly derived from that source, and the exercise or assumption of powers not so derived, become, of themselves, oppression and usurpation—which it is the right and duty of the people, or their representatives, to resist, and to restore the rights of the community so usurped and infringed.

And whereas, the will or constitution of the good people of this State is the only existing legal authority derived from the essential source of sovereignty, and is the only foundation of the legislative power or government thereof, and, so far as that will or constitution expressly warrants, the Legislature may go, but no further; and all constructive powers, not necessarily deduced from that expressive will, are violations of that essential source of sovereignty and the rights of the citizens, and are, therefore, of no binding force or effect on the State, or the good people thereof, but null and void.

And whereas, the last Legislature of this State, not confining itself to the powers with which that body was constitutionally invested, did usurp a power to pass an act on the seventh day of January, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-five, entitled "An act supplementary to an act, entitled An act for appropriating a part of the unlocated territory of this State for the payment of the late State troops, and for other purposes therein mentioned, declaring the right of this State to the unappropriated territory thereof, for the protection and support of the frontiers, and for other purposes," by which an enormous tract of unascertained millions of acres of the vacant territory of this State was attempted to be disposed of to a few individuals, in fee simple, and the same is not only unfounded, as being without express constitutional authority, but is repugnant to that authority, as well as to the principles and form of government the good citizens of this State have chosen for their rule, which is democratical, or a government founded on equality of rights, and which is totally opposed to all proprietary grants or monopolies in favor of a few, which tend to build up that destructive aristocracy in the new, which is tumbling in the old world; and which, if permitted, must end in the annihilation of democracy and equal rights—those rights and principles of government which our virtuous forefathers fought for and established with their blood.

And whereas the fourth section of the fourth article of the constitution of the United States declares, "The United States shall guaranty to every State in this Union a republican government," which could never have been intended to be a republican aristocracy, and which such extravagant grants tend to establish, the constitution of the United States expressly acknowledging a republican democracy as the foundation of the people, it receiving all its force and power from their hands or their gift, which is manifest from its context, "We, the people of the United States."

And whereas, as beforementioned, the said usurped act is repugnant to the constitutional authority, inasmuch as that by the sixteenth section of the first article of the constitution of this State, it is declared "That the General Assembly shall have power to make all laws and ordinances which they shall deem necessary and proper for the good of the State, which shall not be repugnant to this constitution." And the said usurped act is opposed to the good of the State, and it is self-evident that the Legislature which assumed the power did not deem it for the good of the State—

1st. Because self-preservation, or the protecting itself, is the greatest good and first duty of every Government; and, as has been shown, immense monopolies of land, by a few individuals, under the sanction of the Government, are opposed to the principles of democracy or the fundamental laws the citizens of this State have chosen for their rule, which, so far from being for the good or self-preservation of the democratical or equal government, is most manifestly for its destruction and injury.

2d. Because the expression "good of the State" embraces the good of the citizens composing the State, and the good of the citizens consists in the peaceable pursuit of happiness and the enjoyment of all rights, natural or acquired, not expressly delegated for the purposes of government; and the sale of such an enormous tract to a few speculators, which was and is the common right of all the good citizens of this State, is contrary to those rights, and, therefore, to their manifest injury, and, of course, to the injury of the State.

3d. Because, even supposing constitutional authority to have been vested in the Legislature, for the purpose of such disposal, the Legislature was not vested with power to transfer the sovereignty and jurisdiction of the State over the territory attempted to be disposed of, which it has done, by opening a door for sale to foreign powers, and a relinquishment of the powers of taxation, until the proprietors choose to be represented; which is, in fact, dismembering the State, and which transfer and relinquishment of taxation cannot be for the good of the State.

4th. Because there was no necessity or pressing urgency for the sale of such an immense tract of territory, equal to some European kingdoms, to carry into execution and operation the extinguishment of the Indian claims to the lands between the Oconee and Ocmulgee, contemplated by the act, entitled "An act for appropriating a part of the unlocated territory of this State for payment of the late State troops, and for other purposes therein mentioned;" the subterfuge on which the said usurped act of the seventh of January, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-five, was founded, when the whole amount of the appropriation for that purpose was but thirty thousand dollars, and funds to a greater amount were then in the treasury unappropriated; and because no State or nation is justified in wantonly dissipating its property or revenues, and a legal alienation of which can only take place from the most pressing necessity; and the territory attempted to be disposed of (was the said usurped law valid) was wantonly dissipated, it being disposed of for the trifling sum of five hundred thousand dollars, a sum not adequate to the annual quit-rents such lands were charged with previously to the revolution, by the British King; which wanton dissipation cannot be for the good of the State.

5th. Because, exclusive of the immense loss of revenue to which the State is exposed, from the relinquishment of taxation, the sum of five hundred thousand dollars was accepted as the consideration money for the sale, and the sum of eight hundred thousand dollars offered by persons of as large a capital, and as much respectability and credit, and on terms more advantageous to the State was refused; which, as it was (should the said usurped act have been considered valid) a clear loss of three hundred thousand dollars to the revenues of the State, it is evident that the law authorizing the sale was not deemed by the Legislature for "the good of the State," which must have consisted in obtaining the highest price and the most advantageous terms.

6th. For the very excellent reasons given by his excellency the Governor, in his dissent to the first bill for the disposal of the said territory, delivered to the House of Representatives on the twenty-ninth day of December, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four, and which bill was not materially different from the act in question, and which reasons prove that his excellency, as a negative branch of the Legislature, although he concurred in the law, did not deem it for "the good of the State," and which dissent was in the words following:

1st. I doubt whether the proper time is arrived for disposing of the territory in question.

2d. If it was the proper time, the sum offered is inadequate to the value of the land.

3d. The quantity reserved for the citizens is too small in proportion to the extent of the purchase.

4th. That greater advantages are secured to the purchasers than to the citizens.

5th. That so large an extent of territory being disposed of to companies or individuals, will operate as monopolies, which will prevent or retard settlements, population, and agriculture.

6th. That, should such disposition be made, at least one-fourth of the lands should be reserved for the future disposal of the State.

7th. That if public notice was given that the land was for sale, the rivalry in purchasers would most properly have increased the sums offered.

8th. The power given to the Executive by the constitution, the duty I owe the community, and the sacredness of my oath of office, will, I flatter myself, justify this dissent in the minds of the Legislature, and of my other fellow-citizens.

And whereas the said usurped law, passed on the seventh day of January, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-five, is also repugnant to the afore recited sixteenth section, inasmuch as it is repugnant to the seventeenth or subsequent section of the said first article, which declares, "They (the Legislature) shall have power to alter the boundaries of the present counties, and to lay of new ones, as well out of the counties already laid off, as out of the other territory belonging to the State. When a new county or counties shall be laid off out of any present county or counties, such new county or counties shall have their representation apportioned out of the number of representatives of the county or counties out of which it or they shall be laid out; and when any new county shall be laid off in the vacant territory belonging to the State, such county shall have a number of representatives, not exceeding three, to be regulated and determined by the General Assembly." and the territory disposed of not lying within the limits of any county already laid off, and a sale and grant thereof, should the said usurped law be deemed valid, having been made, it could not be defined the vacant territory belonging to the State, whereby the constitutional powers vested in the General Assembly, by the said seventeenth section, would be barred and prevented, and, consequently, the settlers on the territory sold be deprived of the constitutional right of representation, and is not only thus repugnant to the said sixteenth and seventeenth sections, but thereby, and by the relinquishment of the right of taxation, until the settlers were represented, which they cannot constitutionally be, is also repugnant to the whole letter and spirit of the constitution, it operating as a dereliction of jurisdictional rights, and a virtual dismemberment of the State.

And whereas, in and by the articles of confederation entered into and finally ratified on the first day of March, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-one, by the then thirteen States of America, the territory within the limits of each of the said States is, to each of them, respectively, confirmed and guaranteed, first by the second article, to wit: "Each State retains its sovereignty, freedom, and independence, and every power, jurisdiction, and right which is not by the confederation expressly delegated to the United States in Congress assembled." And second, by the last clause of the second section of the ninth article, "No State shall be deprived of territory for the benefit of the United States." And in and by the first clause of the sixth article of the Federal constitution of the United States, "All engagements entered into before the adoption of the said constitution, shall be as valid against the United States under the said constitution as under the confederation;" and by the twelfth article of the amendments to the said constitution, ratified and adopted, "The powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States, respectively, or to the people."

And whereas, in and by the definitive treaty of peace signed at Paris, on the third of September, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-three, the boundaries of the United States were established, and the said United States fully recognized and acknowledged by the first article thereof, in the words following: "His Britannic majesty acknowledges the said United States, viz: New Hampshire, Massachusetts Bay, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia, to be free, sovereign and independent States; that he treats with them as such, and for himself, his heirs and successors, relinquishes all claims to the government, proprietary, and territorial rights of the same;" and by the second article it is declared, "And that all disputes which might arise in future on the subject of the boundaries of the said United States may be prevented, it is hereby agreed that the following are, and shall be their boundaries." And those boundaries thereby declared, which limit the westwardly and southwardly parts of this State, are thus defined: "Along the middle of the Mississippi, until it shall intersect the northernmost part of the thirty-first degree of north latitude; south, by a line drawn due east from the termination of the line last mentioned, in the latitude of thirty-one degrees north of the equator, to the middle of the River Appalachicola or Chattahoochee; thence along the middle thereof, to its junction with Flint river; thence strait to the head of St. Mary's river; and thence along the middle of St. Mary's river, to the Atlantic ocean;" and the King of Great Britain did, by proclamation, dated the 7th day of October, in the year 1763, annex to the then province of Georgia all the lands lying between the said River St. Mary's and the Altamaha, its former boundary, claimed by South Carolina under her charters; and the State of South Carolina, in and by a convention held and concluded between the commissioners of the said States, at Beaufort, under the authority and articles of the confederation, on the 28th day of April, 1787, did confirm to the State of Georgia, the southward and westwardly boundaries described in the said treaty of Paris, by a cession and relinquishment of all right, title, and claim, which the said State possessed from the original charter thereof, to the government, sovereignty, and jurisdiction, in and over the same, and also the right of pre-emption of the soil from the native Indians, and all other the estate, property, and claim, in or to the said land; and the boundaries so described also coincide with the boundaries of this State as described by the land act of this State now in force, passed at Savannah, the 17th of September, in the year 1783, (except as to the northern boundary of the State,) which by the said convention is thus established and ratified by the first article thereof: "The most northern branch or stream of the River Savannah, from the sea or mouth of such stream, to the fork or confluence of the rivers now called Tugaloo, or Keowee; and from thence to the most northern branch or stream of the said River Tugaloo, till it intersects the north boundary of South Carolina, if the said branch or stream of Tugaloo extends so far north, reserving all the islands in the said Rivers Savannah and Tugaloo to Georgia; but if the head, spring, or source of any branch or stream of the said River Tugaloo does not extend to the north boundary of South Carolina, then a west line to the Mississippi."

And whereas, until the formation of the confederation, there could possibly belong no territorial rights to the United States, nor after such formation within the chartered limits of any State, but such as were specially ceded and relinquished by the respective States; and the people of the State of Georgia have by no act of theirs, or in any manner or shape whatever, transferred or alienated, or delegated a power to transfer or alienate the territory attempted to be disposed of by the said usurped act passed on the 7th of January, in the year 1795; and the same and every part thereof is hereby declared to be vested in the State and people thereof, and inalienable, but by a convention called by the people for that express purpose, or by some clause of power expressed by the people delegating such express power to the Legislature in the constitution.

And whereas, divested of all fundamental and constitutional authority which the said usurped act might be declared by its advocates, and those who claim under it, to be founded on fraud, has been practised to obtain it and the grants under it; and it is a fundamental principle, both of law and equity, that there cannot be a wrong without a remedy, and the State and the citizens thereof have suffered a most grievous injury in the barter of their rights by the said usurped act and grants, and and there is no court existing, if the dignity of the State would permit her entering one, for the trial of fraud and collusion of individuals, or to contest her sovereignty with them, whereby the remedy for so notorious an injury could be obtained; and it can no where better lie than with the representatives of the people chosen by them, after due promulgation, by the grand juries of most of the counties of the State, of the means practised, and by the remonstrances of the people of the convention, held on the 10th day of May, in the year 1795, setting forth the atrocious speculation, corruption, and collusion, by which the said usurped act and grants were obtained.

And whereas the said petitions and remonstrances of the good people composing the State, to the said late convention, held at Louisville on the said 10th day of May, 1795, produced a resolution of that body in the following words: "Resolved, That it is the opinion of this convention that, from the numbers, respectability, and ground of complaint stated in the sundry petitions laid before them, that this is a subject of importance, meriting legislative deliberation: Ordered, therefore, That such petitions be preserved by the Secretary, and laid before the next Legislature at their ensuing session." Which resolution invests this Legislature with conventional powers, quoad hoc, or, in common terms, for the purpose of investigating the same, and which gives additional validity to legislative authority, were the powers of one Legislature over the acts of another to be attempted to be questioned,

And whereas it does appear from sundry affidavits and a variety of proofs satisfactory to this Legislature, as well as from the presentments of the grand juries, on oath, of a considerable majority of the counties of the State, and by the afore recited petitions and remonstrances of the good people thereof to the convention, and by numerous petitions to this present Legislature to the same purport, as also from the self-evident proof of fraud, arising from the rejection of eight hundred thousand dollars, and the acceptance of five hundred thousand dollars, as the consideration money for which the said territory was sold; that fraud and corruption were practised to obtain the said act and grants, and that a majority of those members of the Legislature who voted in favor of the aforesaid act were engaged in the purchase; and a majority of one vote only appeared in favor of this said usurped act in Senate, and on which majority in that branch the same was passed, and corruption appears against more than one member of that body; which, exclusive of the many deceptions used, and the inadequacy of price for such an immense and valuable tract of country, would be sufficient in equity, reason, and law, to invalidate the contract, even supposing it to be constitutional, which this Legislature declares it is not.

Be it therefore enacted, That the said usurped act, passed on the 7th day of January, in the year, 1795, entitled "An act, supplementary to an act, entitled An act for appropriating a part of the unlocated territory of this State, for the payment of the late State troops, and for other purposes therein mentioned, declaring the right of this State to the unappropriated territory thereof, for the protection of the frontiers, and for other purposes," be, and the same is hereby, declared null and void; and the grant or grants, right or rights, claim or claims, issuing, deduced, or derived therefrom, or from any clause, letter, or spirit of the same, or any part of the same, is hereby also annulled, rendered void, and of no effect; and, as the same was made without constitutional authority, and fraudulently obtained, it is hereby declared of no binding, force, or effect, on this State, or the people thereof; but is and are to be considered, both law and grants, as they ought to be ipso facto, of themselves void, and the territory therein mentioned is also hereby declared to be the sole property of the State, subject only to the right of treaty of the United States, to enable the State to purchase, under its pre-emption right, the Indian title to the same.

2. And be it further enacted That, within three days after the passing of this act, the different branches of the Legislature shall assemble together; at which meeting, the officers shall attend, with the several records, documents, and deeds, in the Secretary's, Surveyor General's, and other public offices; and which records and documents shall then and there be expunged from the face and indexes of the books of record of the State, and the enrolled law or usurped act shall then be publicly burnt, in order that no trace of so unconstitutional, vile, and fraudulent a transaction, other than the infamy attached to it by this law, shall remain in the public offices thereof; and it is hereby declared the duty of the county officers of record, where any conveyance, bond, or other deed whatever, shall have been recorded, relating to the sale of said territory, under the said usurped act, to produce the book wherein the said deed, bond, or conveyance may be so recorded, to the superior court, at the next session of the court after the passing this law, and which court is hereby directed to cause such clerk or keeper of the public records of the county to obliterate the same in their presence; and if such clerk or keeper of records neglect or refuse so to do, he shall be, and is hereby, declared incapable of holding any office of trust or confidence in this State, and the superior court shall suspend him; and, from and after the passing of this act, if any clerk of a county, notary public, or other officer keeping record, shall enter any transaction, agreement, conveyance, grant, law, or contract, relative to the said purchase under the said usurped act on their books of record, whereby claim can be derived of authority of record, he or they shall be rendered incapable of holding any office of trust or profit within this State, and be liable to a penalty of one thousand dollars, to be recovered in any court within and under the jurisdiction of this State; one half thereof to be given for the benefit of the informer, and the other half to be lodged in the Treasury for the use of the Commonwealth.

3. And be it further enacted, That the said usurped law, passed on the 7th of January, in the year 1795, shall not, nor shall any grant or grants, issued by virtue thereof, or any deed or conveyance, agreement or contract, scrip or paper relative thereto, be received as evidence in any court of law or equity of this State, so far as to establish a right to the said territory, or to any part thereof: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent such deed or conveyance, agreement or contract, between individuals, scrip issued by the pretended purchasers, or other paper, from being received as evidence in private actions for the recovery of any moneys given, paid, or exchanged, as the consideration for the pretended sales by the original pretended purchasers, or persons claiming and selling by and under them.

4. And be it further enacted, That his excellency the Governor be, and he is hereby empowered and required to issue warrants on the Treasurer, after the expiration of sixty days, in favor of such persons as may have bona fide deposited moneys, bank bills, or stock, in the funds of the United States, or warrants, in part or in whole payment of pretended shares of the said pretended purchased territory: Provided, The same shall be now therein, and not otherwise: And provided, also, That the risk attending the keeping the sum or sums so paid in, be deemed, and is hereby declared to lie entirely with the persons who deposited them; and that any charge of guards or other expenses for safe keeping thereof to be deducted therefrom; and in case of neglect of application to his excellency therefor, within eight months after the passing this act, the same shall be, and is hereby, deemed property derelict, and escheated to and for the use of this State.

5. And be it further enacted, That any pretended power assumed, usurped, or intended by the said act, or any clause or letter of the same, or which may or can be construed to that purpose by the said usurped act, grant or grants under it, or from the journal of the Senate or House of Representatives, to apply to the Government of the United States, for the extinguishment of the Indian claims to the lands within the boundaries in the said usurped act mentioned, and the holding any treaty by the said General Government, in consequence of any application therefor, by the company's purchasers, under the said usurped act, so far as may effect the rights of this State to the lands therein described, is, and are hereby also declared, null and void; and the right of applying for, and the extinguishment of Indian claims to, any lands within the boundaries of this State, as herein described, being a sovereign right, is hereby further declared to be vested in the people and Government of this State, to whom the right of pre-emption to the same belongs, subject only to the controlling power of the United States to authorize any treaty or treaties for, and to superintend the same.

6. And be it further enacted, That, in order to prevent future frauds on individuals, as far as the nature of the case will admit, his excellency the Governor is hereby required, as soon as may be after the passing of this law, to promulgate the same throughout the United States.

GEORGIA LAND CLAIMS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 22, 1803.

To the honorable Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States:

Sir: The undersigned, claimants and agents of claimants of lands situated in the territory lately ceded to the United States by the State of Georgia, beg leave, through you, to communicate to the honorable House of Representatives, their respectful acknowledgments for the opportunity offered to them of being heard at the bar of the House in support of their claims, and, at the same time, to decline occupying the time of the House, so near the close of the session of Congress, and when so many important subjects are pressing for consideration. The undersigned have never considered the law under which the report* was made by the honorable commissioners of the United States, and which is now before the honorable House, as providing for a trial of the merits of their claims, and are, therefore, not prepared with the documents and evidence necessary for submitting them to the consideration of Congress. Their title has not been investigated by a hearing before the commissioners, and they presume the unfavorable impression, which appears from their report to have been made on their minds, respecting the merits of their claim, has probably been produced from having one side of the cause only brought into view by statements and ex parte depositions, made necessary, no doubt, to the formation of that opinion, which the law required them to give, but which the claimants had not seen until they appeared in print among the documents accompanying the report: considerable time must be deemed necessary to prepare for the full examination of a subject so complex both in principles and in facts; especially when such examination is to be made by persons principally residing at the distance of one thousand miles from the place where the occurrence happened, and who, from being innocent purchasers, without notice of the fraud or corruption, if any such should be found to have existed, have very limited means of encountering the testimony, that a powerful and vigilant majority there, with full opportunity and disposition for investigation, have been able to produce. Were the claimants to enter into the question of title thus unprepared at the bar of the House, the frauds that have been suggested must probably be considered as admitted. Their only defence against the accusation would be, that fraud by the Legislature of the State of Georgia, in passing a law, could not be alleged to defeat the rights of innocent subsequent purchasers upon the faith of that law. The claimants do not consider it prudent in them to abandon all other ground, without examination, and rely on this alone, although, to their apprehension, it is unanswerable. They conceive that the Legislature were the State, and that Georgia can no more allege their fraud to vacate their grant, than an individual can vacate his deed by alleging his own fraud. They conceive that the Legislature were the supreme power of the State, and that it is a contradiction to say that, as a Legislature, they can be charged with misconduct, and their alienation of property be vacated by another tribunal. They conceive it is equally against principles to say that a subsequent Legislature can sit in judgment on the conduct and motives of a former Legislature, convict them of fraud and corruption, and vacate their grants. They conceive that, according to long established principles of distributive justice, when the question is, which of two innocent parties shall suffer by the misbehavior of a third person, that party is to suffer which has placed that confidence in the offender, which has enabled him to deceive others by his false credit, and, of course, been accessory to his fraud and misconduct. That the employer is to suffer by the fraud of his agent, and not an innocent person, whom the employer has induced to deal with him. They apply this principle thus: if the question be, who shall bear the loss, the people of Georgia or the purchasers under the law of Georgia, the former ought to bear it, as they appointed the Legislature, and authorized them to make laws, and grant public property; the latter, in purchasing, only gave confidence to the solemn act of the supreme power of the State.

The undersigned hope to be pardoned for introducing these preliminary remarks, which seem to be rendered necessary by the report of the commissioners. They conceive, however, that a compromise of their claims, and not a decision on their title, is the object of the report before the House. With immediate reference, therefore, to this object, they respectfully propose two amendments to the plan founded on the report of commissioners, which they consider perfectly coincident with the principles of the commissioners, as expressed in the report, and to be liable to none of the objections which they have stated. The first amendment proposed is, that the proportion of the five millions of acres, that may be appropriated for satisfying claims, other than those under the act of the State of Georgia of the 7th of January, 1795, should be limited by law. They are confident, from all the information they can obtain, as well as from the report of the commissioners, that five hundred thousand acres would be abundantly sufficient for that purpose. The second amendment proposed is, that if any surplus should remain of the proceeds of the sales of the five millions of acres, after deducting the said proportion for other claims, and after paying the certificates that may be issued to the claimants under the act, such surplus, not exceeding the rate of two dollars per acre, shall hereafter be divided among the claimants under the act, in the same proportion as the certificates to them are now to be issued and claimable by them, their executors, and administrators. Justice, predicated on the report of the commissioners, seems to require these amendments, because the commissioners state that the plan reported by them "does not give a full indemnity to every claimant," but "gives, in the aggregate, nearly as much as has been paid in the whole by all the present claimants." When it is considered that the purchase moneys were paid years ago, and that great expenses have been incurred by the purchasers, it is evident that the plan proposed is far short of an average indemnity, and yet the report itself speaks of a sum which may be offered as an indemnity. The amendments proposed are in perfect conformity with the act of cession from Georgia, which seems to contemplate the appropriation of five millions of acres, or the proceeds thereof, to satisfying claims. The proposed amendments are not liable to either of the objections stated in the report. There can be no danger of "depreciation," or that "the nominal sum offered as an indemnity will exceed what the fund may be sufficient to discharge," when certificates are to issue only for the sum reported by the commissioners, and the subsequent dividend to be contingent on there being a surplus at the minimum price, and to be limited by it. The proposed amendments will not "bind Congress not to reduce the price of those lands below two dollars per acre, if other considerations shall render the reduction expedient." The commissioners, in their report, are pleased to say that "they believe the interest of the United States, the tranquillity of those who may hereafter inhabit the country, and various equitable considerations, which may be urged in favor of most of the present claimants, render it expedient to enter into a compromise on reasonable terms." The undersigned humbly conceive that the above proposed amendments of the plan reported by the commissioners form "reasonable terms;" and to which they will assent, notwithstanding they consider that, in so doing, they make a great sacrifice of individual rights, in order to attain the public objects, stated as above by the commissioners, and to put an end to an unpleasant controversy between the Government of their country and themselves; it is for the wisdom of Congress to determine, whether the voluntary assent of the claimants to the arrangements of this object is not of more substantial benefit to the Government, than the small additional boon they require for that assent.

With the highest considerations of respect to the supreme Legislature of the nation, we subscribe ourselves your most devoted servants.

2d Session.

INDIANA TERRITORY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 2, 1803.

Mr. RANDOLPH, from the committee to which was referred a letter from William Henry Harrison, president of the convention, held at Vincennes, declaring the consent of the people of Indiana to the suspension of the sixth article of compact between the United States and the people of that Territory; also, a memorial and petition of the inhabitants of the said Territory; made the following report:

That the rapid population of the State of Ohio sufficiently evinces, in the opinion of your committee, that the labor of slaves is not necessary to promote the growth and settlement of colonies in that region. That this labor, demonstrably the dearest of any, can only be employed to advantage in the cultivation of products more valuable than any known to that quarter of the United States: that the committee deem it highly dangerous and inexpedient to impair a provision wisely calculated to promote the happiness and prosperity of the northwestern country, and to give strength and security to that extensive frontier. In the salutary operation of this sagacious and benevolent restraint, it is believed that the inhabitants of Indiana will, at no very distant day, find ample remuneration for a temporary privation of labor and of emigration.

On the various objects of the memorial, your committee beg leave to observe:

That, an appropriation having been made, empowering the Executive to extinguish Indian titles to lands within the limits of the United States, the particular direction of that power rests entirely with that department of the Government; that, to permit the location of the claims under the resolve of Congress of the 29th of August, 1788, and the act of the 3d of March, 1791, (of whose number and extent the committee are entirely ignorant,) in the mode pointed out in the memorial, would be an infringement upon that regular mode of survey and of location which has been so happily adhered to in relation to the public lands. At the same time, the committee are of opinion that, after those lands shall have been surveyed, a certain number of townships should be designated, out of which the claims aforesaid ought to be satisfied. In a country abounding in new and unsettled lands, it is presumed that every individual may become a proprietor of the soil; and inasmuch as the people of Indiana will, at a period not far distant, be enabled to establish the right of suffrage on such principles as the majority may approve, the committee deem it inexpedient to alter a regulation whose effect is to retain in the hands of persons necessarily attached to the welfare of the country, the Government of a remote dependency, which, from its vicinage to the territories of foreign States, and from the sparseness of its population, might, otherwise, be exposed to foreign intrigue and influence.

Measures having been taken to put the salt spring below the mouth of the Wabash river in a situation to yield every possible benefit to the adjacent country, the committee are of opinion that it is, at this time, inexpedient to vest that property in the Legislature of the Indiana Territory. From such a consideration as they have been enabled to bestow on the subject at this late period of the session, and under the pressure of accumulating business, they recommend the following resolutions, which are respectfully submitted to the judgment of the House:

1. Resolved, That it is inexpedient to suspend, for a limited time, the operation of the sixth article of compact between the original States and the people and States west of the River Ohio.

2. Resolved, That a provision, not exceeding one thirty-sixth part of the public lands within the Indiana Territory, ought to be made for the support of schools within the same.

3. Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, required to cause an estimate to be made of the number and extent of their claims to lands under the resolve of Congress of the 29th of August, 1788, and the act of the 3d of March, 1791; and to lay the same before this House at the ensuing session of Congress.

4. Resolved, That in all sales of the public lands within the Territory of Indiana, the right of pre-emption be given to actual settlers on the same.

5. Resolved, That it is inexpedient to grant lands to individuals for the purpose of establishing houses of entertainment, and of opening certain roads.

6. Resolved, That it is, at this time, inexpedient to vest in the Legislature of Indiana the salt spring below the mouth of the Wabash river.

7. Resolved, That it is inexpedient to alter the existing regulation of the right of suffrage within the said Territory.

8. Resolved, That compensation ought to be made to the Attorney General of the said Territory, for services performed by him in behalf of the United States.

ILLINOIS AND WABASH LAND COMPANIES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OCTOBER 27, 1803.

To the House of Representatives of the United States:

The memorial and petition of the Illinois and Wabash Land Companies, humbly sheweth: That the memorial by them presented to your honorable House, during the last session of Congress, and referred, as is understood, to a committee of your body, has not been reported on; that their solicitude to obtain the sense of Congress, on a subject so interesting to them as is that on which they again address your honorable body, is forcibly excited by publications announcing, though not officially, the purchase, by a Government agent, of a considerable tract of country from the Kaskaskias tribe of Indians; that repeated representations have been made by your memorialists to Congress of a similar purchase long since by them effected, not only from the aforementioned Indians, and other tribes comprehended under the general term of Illinois Indians, but likewise from other Indian tribes, aborigines, and possessors of lands in the vicinity, and contiguous to the River Wabash and its waters; that, should the purchase, said to have been negotiated under the authority of the United States, unexpectedly and unfortunately interfere with either of those heretofore made by your memorialists, whose boundaries, as described in the original deeds, formerly submitted to a joint committee of the Senate and House of Representatives, copies of which remain on the files of your honorable House, and which the companies had proposed to cede conditionally to the Union, they must ascribe it to a benevolent and liberal policy, extended towards an indigent and helpless race, rather than to any doubts entertained of the aforementioned Indians having alienated the therein described property, or of the validity of the title of your memorialists; that your memorialists still adhere to the cession as heretofore offered by them to the United States, and on which proposal a committee of your House reported as follows:

"That, in the opinion of the committee, the said deeds (meaning those obtained by your memorialists from the different tribes of Indians) having been given by the Indians, proprietors of the soil before the declaration of the independence of the United States, for a valuable consideration, bona fide paid, are sufficient to extinguish the Indian title to the lands therein described; and, therefore, that, on principles of justice and equity, the United States should agree to the proposal aforesaid, made by the petitioners." In the "justice and equity" of Congress, alike the protectors of the rights of individuals, as guardians of the public interests, they confidently confide; praying, at a convenient moment, the attention of the House of Representatives to the memorial and accompanying documents, presented during the last session of the Legislature of the Union, by your memorialists.

LAND CLAIMS IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES NOVEMBER 25, 1803.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The petition of the Legislative Council and House of Representatives of the Mississippi Territory, respectfully sheweth: That your petitioners acknowledge the liberality of Congress in providing, by law, for the confirmation of certain titles to lands within this territory, in addition to those conditioned for by the articles of agreement and cession between the United States and the State of Georgia, certain claims have, nevertheless, been omitted, which your petitioners cannot suppose to have proceeded from design, but because such descriptions of title did not present themselves to view at the moment of enacting the law regulating the grants of land south of the State of Tennessee.

The first claim to landed property, which your petitioners are now desirous of stating to your honorable body, depends upon a warrant of survey, granted by the Spanish Government, and, in consequence thereof, the land actually surveyed, and the proprietor furnished with a plat and certificate by the surveyor, executed previous to the 27th of October, 1795. This species of title the inhabitants have been in the habit of considering as an absolute right, although not completed by patent, and such titles have been permitted to descend by inheritance, or to be transferred by sale, although no improvement or actual settlement has been made.

Your petitioners respectfully present, also, to the notice of your honorable body, that, in the first section of the aforesaid act, it is provided that any person who had obtained a warrant of survey of lands from the British or Spanish Government shall be confirmed in his titles, provided that the lands were actually inhabited and cultivated by such person, or for his use, on the 27th day of October, 1795, (no survey of the land being here required.) In pursuing the strict letter of this section of the act, a person may be deprived of his lands, who had improved and cultivated them for many years, but who, by the rotation of crops, and the necessary repose to be given to the soil, had judged it expedient to discontinue the cultivation of lands of the last mentioned description, during the year 1795, which, your petitioners are fully persuaded, was not the intention of Congress.

It is also provided by the aforesaid act, that no certificate shall be issued by the commissioners for lands lying east of the Tombigbee river, although a considerable number of persons are settled to the east of that river, on lands to which the Indian title has been extinguished, holding such rights as are customary within other parts of the territory; and which provision, your petitioners presume, would not have been admitted, had Congress been duly apprized of the above stated circumstance.

An injury would also arise from that part of the aforesaid act (if carried into effect) which provides that minors, not being the heads of families, shall not be confirmed in their claims to lands held by warrant of survey and improvement; many elderly persons residing in this country have preferred making application, in the names of their children, to the Spanish Government for lands, on which large improvements are now made. The operation of the aforesaid provision would, in many cases, turn out to beggary and misery families which are now comfortably settled.

Your petitioners, therefore, respectfully solicit that your honorable body will be pleased to take into consideration the premises, and enact such supplementary ordinance as shall authorize the commissioners to confirm all claims and titles to lands under the circumstances above described.

And your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray, &c.

REVISION OF THE LAWS RESPECTING THE SALE OF LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 2, 1803.

Mr. NICHOLSON, from the committee who were directed to inquire into the expediency of amending the several acts providing for the sale of the public lands of the United States made the following report, in part:

By an act passed at the last session of Congress, entitled "An act regulating the grants of land, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee," so much of the five millions of acres which were reserved by the articles of agreement between the United States and the State of Georgia, as might be necessary for that purpose, were appropriated for the purpose of satisfying, quieting, and compensating, the various claims to lands lying within the Mississippi Territory, which were derived from an act of the State of Georgia, passed on the — day of —, in the year 1795, the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Attorney General, were authorized to receive from the claimants propositions of compromise and settlement, and to report their opinion thereon to the present session of Congress.

The committee are of opinion that the final extinguishment of these claims is an object of primary importance; inasmuch as the sales of land by the United States, in the Mississippi Territory, will, of necessity, be materially affected by the conflicting titles which may be derived from the United States, and from the claimants under the act of Georgia, although the titles derived from the latter source may ultimately prove defective.

It is probable that propositions of compromise may have been offered by some of the claimants, but the nature and extent of these the committee are totally unacquainted with; nor is it known whether all the claimants, who are numerous, and reside generally at a considerable distance from the seat of Government, can make their propositions during the present session. This circumstance will, of course, very much retard the final settlement of a dispute, which the interest of the United States requires should be speedily adjusted.

The committee, therefore, beg leave to submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Attorney General, for the time being, be authorized to receive propositions of compromise and settlement from the several companies or persons, claiming public lands in the territory of the United States lying south of the State of Tennessee, and west of the State of Georgia; and finally to adjust and settle the same, in such manner as, in their opinion, will conduce to the interest of the United States.

CLAIMS OF TENNESSEE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE DECEMBER 5, 1803.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The undersigned respectfully represent that the State of Tennessee, being particularly desirous to preserve that harmony which hath hitherto happily subsisted between the United States and that State, hath, on her part, appointed the undersigned commissioners, with full powers to settle the disputes between the United States and said State, respecting the vacant and unappropriated lands lying within the limits of the State of Tennessee. The undersigned, therefore, respectfully suggest the expediency of passing a law, authorizing the President of the United States to appoint commissioners, a majority of whom shall have power to adjust and determine, with such as are appointed under the legislative authority of the State of Tennessee, all interfering claims of the United States and that State, to the vacant and unappropriated lands lying within the limits of the said State of Tennessee.

CLAIMS OF THE CITY OF NATCHEZ.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 15, 1803.

Mr. LATTIMORE, from the committee to which was referred the petition of the mayor, aldermen, and assistants of the city of Natchez, made the following report:

That, from investigating the subject of the said petition, it appears, that in the aforementioned city are two lots, (upon which is a public building,) and between twenty and thirty acres of unoccupied land, lying between the houses and the Mississippi river; which said lots and land are claimed in behalf of the said city, by the mayor, aldermen, and assistants of the same; but to which no legal evidence of title has been exhibited.

In the 12th section of an act passed the last session of Congress, entitled "An act regulating the grants of land, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee," an exception is made, "of such town lots, not exceeding two in the town of Natchez, and of such an out lot adjoining the same, not exceeding thirty acres, as may be the property of the United States, to be located by the Governor of the Mississippi Territory, for the use of Jefferson College."

From all the information which your committee possess, relative to the number of town lots, it does not appear that the location can be made in favor of the college, pursuant to the 12th section of the act above cited, without depriving the town of the two lots which it claims, as having been originally reserved for its use and convenience.

Whether the land lying between the houses and the river can be located, by virtue of so much of the said 12th section as excepts thirty acres of an out lot, in favor of the said college, is a point which is not so clear in the view of your committee; seeing that through this land is the only road to another part of the town, which lies below the hill, immediately on the bank of the river. But, believing it expedient to secure to the city the use of the said lots and land, your committee beg leave to state the reasons upon which their opinion is founded.

The town of Natchez, from its situation, is necessarily frequented by a great concourse of people, in descending and ascending the Mississippi, and in returning home by land from the lower country. From its situation, also, it is always subject to an influx of Indians, who, from excess and intoxication, (which it is exceedingly difficult to prevent,) often breed riots and tumults, to the no small annoyance of the inhabitants. Hence arises a necessity for a strong and vigilant police, and, of consequence for a court-house and gaol, which convenience and security would require to be in a central part of the city. The two lots claimed by the town appear to furnish a site peculiarly adapted for such buildings. But if the right to them shall be vested in the college, it is not probable that the town could obtain them for that purpose, without paying a far greater sum than its present resources would allow. From the exclusive support of a number of paupers and sick persons, from all parts of the western country and other places; and from a variety of local purposes, for which considerable sums are necessary, besides a full portion of county and territorial taxes; the corporation have already to sustain such a burthen of expense, as your committee conceive it would be improper to increase, by a deprivation of any advantages that its own internal circumstances may afford.

As there appears to be no other land claimed by the town, which is suitable for commons, besides that which lies between the houses and the river, it would also be improper, in the opinion of your committee, to deprive the town of the convenience thereof, by providing for an object which might be otherwise effected. But another and much more weighty consideration influences their opinion on this subject. If this land is held by the town, experience will dictate the propriety of keeping it unoccupied by buildings, and of planting it with trees, in order to preserve the health of the inhabitants; but if it is possessed by the college, the interest of that institution will require that it should be either leased or sold; in which case it would be crowded with houses, which, by confining and vitiating the air, would render the town unpleasant and unhealthy.

While your committee conceive it to be at all times honorable and proper to make liberal provision for the establishment of literary institutions, they cannot but regret that this provision cannot be fully applied to the laudable purpose for which it was made, without producing injuries, for which it will not be within the competence of Congress to make reparation. But your committee believe, that, if the exceptionable part of this provision shall be rescinded, Congress will possess the disposition, as well as the power, to compensate the college, by other suitable donations.

From these considerations, and from a persuasion that the claim of the town of Natchez to the aforementioned lots and lands, and its important uses for the same, were both unknown to Congress at the time that the law excepting them for the use of the college was enacted, your committee are of opinion, that so much of the said law as makes the exception, ought to be repealed; and, therefore, respectfully submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That so much of the 12th section of the act passed the 3d day of March last, entitled "An act regulating the grants of land, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee," as excepts "such town lots, not exceeding two, in the town of Natchez, and of such an out lot adjoining the same, not exceeding thirty acres, as may be the property of the United States, to be located by the Governor of the Mississippi Territory, for the use of Jefferson College," ought to be repealed.

AMENDMENTS SUGGESTED TO THE LAWS RELATING TO SURVEYS AND SALE OF LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 23, 1803.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled:

The petition of the undersigners, residents and purchasers in the State of Ohio, respectfully sheweth: That your petitioners, whilst they highly approve of the plan adopted in surveying the public lands, tending effectually to prevent the uncertainty of title, and the many unhappy effects attending it, with much deference, give it as their opinion, that the existing laws of the United States, providing for the sale of the public lands, are susceptible of sundry amendments, which, whilst they will greatly increase the sale of the lands, and, of course, promote the interest of the Union at large, will enable the industrious resident or emigrant to purchase a quantity proportionate to his capital, and, by this means, be mutually advantageous to the Government and individuals. Your petitioners very respectfully offer, for the consideration of your honorable body, the amendments which they believe will produce the effects above mentioned:

First, then, your petitioners are convinced, from the knowledge and experience of many of them, that the land is sold in tracts too large for purchasers generally, which tends to encourage speculation in more wealthy citizens, as well as to prevent the settlement of the country; your petitioners, in order to remedy this evil, respectfully propose the following amendment, which will not alter the present system of surveying the lands, nor be attended with any additional expense to the United States, viz: That the lands be surveyed into tracts, containing one-sixth of a section, or one hundred and six and two-thirds acres, at the expense of the purchaser, by surveyors appointed for that purpose.

Secondly, Your petitioners have ever viewed that part of the law imposing an interest of six per centum per annum, on the amount of purchase money unpaid after and from the day of sale, as being severe, and contrary to the general custom which prevails in the several States, and among individuals, in the sale of lands; many of your petitioners have sold their property in the Atlantic States on long payments, and without interest until the payments become due; others of your petitioners removed to the country at an early period, with a view to provide a home for their rising families, and, having settled, and expended much labor on public land, were, in some measure, obliged to purchase, although much dissatisfied with this part of the law. When your honorable body reflect, that the minimum price of the lands per acre is two dollars, a higher price than has been asked by any State in the Union for uncultivated lands; the difficulties encountered by the first settlers in this new country, exposed, by want of accommodation and the necessaries of life, to sickness, frequent losses of property, no regular market as yet for their surplus produce, with many other difficulties which might be enumerated; and, above all, when your honorable body reflect that the United States have at least two hundred millions of acres of land on the Mississippi and Ohio rivers, and their respective waters, at present a wilderness, your petitioners trust you will believe it good policy to encourage the settlement of the country, for reasons which your petitioners believe too plain to mention. Your petitioners, therefore, respectfully request that the payments for land purchased of the United States may not be charged with interest until after the periods fixed for payment. Your petitioners are the more sanguine in expecting this amendment will take place, when they recollect that when the law of May 10, 1800, passed the House of Representatives, the principle your petitioners advocate was adopted, but, by an amendment of the Senate, the features of the bill were greatly altered, and, as your petitioners conceive, to the disadvantage of the United States, and of individuals.

Thirdly, Your petitioners respectfully request the three reserved sections in each township may be offered for sale as soon after the next session of Congress, and on such terms as your honorable body shall think most proper.

Fourthly, Your petitioners respectfully request that fractions, or part of sections, may be sold separate from the adjoining entire sections; it frequently happens that two, three, four, and sometimes five, fractional sections are attached to one entire section, making, in some cases, a tract of more than two thousand acres of land, no part of which can be sold, and very few are able to purchase the whole.

Fifthly, Your petitioners respectfully submit to the consideration of your honorable body, the propriety of charging entry and patent fees, and most respectfully request the law on this subject may be altered, that the purchasers may obtain their patents from the registers, respectively, and not be obliged to go or send to the seat of the General Government for them. Your petitioners are very deeply impressed with a sense of their obligations to the General Government for their late repeated acts of friendship and disinterestedness towards the citizens of Ohio; and, on their part, they can only assure your honorable body that it is their sincere wish to promote the interest of the Union at large, by facilitating all in their power the sale of the public lands, on such terms as Congress shall think best calculated to promote the general interest. Your petitioners having now a representation in Congress, refer your honorable body to them for more correct information in detail on the foregoing subjects.

And your petitioners, very respectfully, as in duty bound, &c.

JOHN BOGGS, Sen., and others.

MILITARY LAND WARRANTS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 26, 1803.

Mr. VAN HORNE, from the committee appointed in pursuance of a resolution of the 5th instant, "to inquire into the expediency of giving further time to the proprietors of military land warrants, to obtain and locate the same," and to which was referred several petitions on the same subject, made the following report:

That, so early as the 16th September, 1776, a resolution was passed by Congress, promising the officers and soldiers who should continue in service during the war, a bounty in lands.

That, on the 20th May, 1785, an ordinance was made, setting apart certain portions of land within the seven ranges of townships northwest of the Ohio river, to be drawn for, under the direction of the Secretary of War; but, by another ordinance of 23d October, 1789, it was in part repealed, and two other tracts set apart for satisfying military claims, viz: one million acres west of the seven ranges of townships, and a tract lying on the northwest of Ohio, and between the Wabash and Mississippi rivers.

That provision was also made the 9th July, 1788, authorizing the Secretary of War to issue land warrants to officers and soldiers, and their assigns, or legal representatives; and locations permitted on townships of six miles square only.

That, during the existence of those provisions, and the frequent variations thereof, under the former Government, your committee cannot find that the claimants were, or could become, possessed of their promised bounty.

In pursuing the inquiry, since the establishment of the present Government, they find that a law passed the 1st day of June, A. D. 1796, appropriating (in lieu of the former,) a tract of land east of the Scioto river, and south of the Indian boundary line, amply sufficient to satisfy all military claims, which provides for surveying the same in townships and quarter townships, and the manner of locating military land warrants, but limits the time for making the locations to the 1st day of January, 1800. These provisions appear to have expired before any locations were made.

By a supplementary law, passed the 2d March, 1799, the time for registering warrants and making locations was extended to the 1st day of January, A. D. 1802, but no locations on a less quantity than four thousand acres could be made before the 17th March, 1800. It is, therefore, believed that many meritorious claimants, unable to locate a quarter township, and not knowing with whom to associate for that purpose, have become discouraged, and probably never heard of the latter provision until its expiration; for, although subsequent laws extended partially the provisions down to April last, the whole time afforded for locating military land warrants will not be found to exceed three years—a period of time, in the opinion of your committee, too limited for a class of citizens scattered over so immense an extent of territory as the United States, to avail themselves of it, for obtaining a bounty to which they are so justly entitled.

They, therefore, submit to the House the following resolutions:

1st. Resolved, That further time ought to be given to claimants of military land warrants to obtain and locate the same.

2d. Resolved, That further time ought to be given to the holders of military land warrants to locate the same.

3d. Resolved, That all locations, hereafter to be made, shall be on the unlocated parts of the fifty quarter townships, and fractional parts of townships, appropriated for satisfying the claims of individuals for military services, by a law of the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred.

February 4, 1804.

DEAR SIR: I find no other safe way to extend the time for obtaining and locating military warrants, than to revive and continue in force, till the 1st of January next, the act of 26th of April, 1802, with two provisos: the one to confine the locations to the reserved quarter townships, and the other to ascertain that no warrant shall be located, a duplicate for which issued by virtue of the act of 3d of March, 1803. In this way, holders of warrants already issued will be able to locate them till 1st of January next; and the Secretary of War will receive applications on claims (for which the warrants have not yet been issued, or have been lost,) till the same time. And next session a law may be passed similar to the second section of the act of 3d of March, 1803, to authorize the issuing and locating of warrants for claims thus applied for. The destruction of papers in the War Office prevents any other safe mode of granting relief.

With respect,

Your obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

CLAIM TO LAND FOR MILITARY SERVICES BEFORE THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 26, 1803.

Mr. JOHN COTTON SMITH, from the Committee of Claims, to which was referred the petition of John Thompson, made the following report:

The petitioner states that, in consequence of having served as ensign three years in the British service, he became entitled, in virtue of the royal proclamation of 1763, to two thousand acres of land, which quantity was actually surveyed to him on the waters of Salt Lick creek, in the year 1773. He prays that this tract, or an equivalent for it, may be granted to him.

If the petitioner acquired a title to the land by the proclamation and survey to which he refers, what prevents his establishing its validity in a court of justice? If no title was acquired, where is the obligation on the part of the United States to pay debts contracted, or to perform engagements made, by the King of Great Britain anterior to the revolution?

Your committee are of opinion the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted.

SOUTH CAROLINA YAZOO COMPANY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 28, 1803.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress now assembled:

The memorial of Alexander Moultrie, of South Carolina, in behalf of himself and others, claimants of compensation under the late cession and convention between Georgia and the United States, and the acts lately passed in Congress thereon, as purchasers of Mississippi territory, in the year 1789, from Georgia, respectfully sheweth: That your memorialist, in the behalf aforesaid, some time in December, 1802, presented to the commissioners appointed by Congress to receive and adjust the claims for compensation, under the convention aforesaid, the petition and representation hereunto annexed, marked A, setting forth fully their right to a certain territory therein mentioned, and purchased from the State of Georgia in December, 1789, and which has been ceded by Georgia in April, 1802, to the United States, praying by said petition and representation, compensation for the damages and losses sustained by such purchase, and the cession so made of the same to the United States, as by the said petition and representation more fully and particularly will appear, and to which your memorialist begs leave to refer.

That, after the said petition and representation had been presented, your memorialist was heard on the same before the honorable the House of Representatives, on the 23d day of February last, in support of the rights claimed therein, and of the application for compensation, under the convention with Georgia; and certain measures were thereon adopted in the Legislature of Congress, as set forth in the memorial B, hereunto also annexed, and lately presented to the commissioners therein named, as by the said memorial and the journals of Congress, will more particularly appear.

That, by the said memorial B, and the said journals, it will appear your memorialist's claim of right and compensation for the same, were duly and formally admitted by the House of Representatives, and extended generally to the like claims, under like circumstances, derived from the act of the Legislature of Georgia, passed in December, 1779, equally with other claims then exhibited by purchasers from Georgia in 1795, and as founded in equity and justice and the true spirit of the convention with Georgia.

That your memorialist understands a measure is to be proposed for the adoption of this honorable body, and to be introduced into the House of Representatives, giving to the commissioners aforesaid full and absolute powers finally to determine and conclude the different claims under the convention aforesaid, (although they were already admitted by the House of Representatives, and acted upon as aforesaid,) without any right of appeal, in case the terms of compensation, or the decision respecting their rights, should not be satisfactory to any of the claimants, or settled by mutual compromise.

Your memorialist, therefore, apprehending the rigid effects of such a measure, humbly prays that this honorable House do take his case into consideration, and that they will adopt some such other mode of settling merely the compensation due him and his associates, as in their wisdom they shall judge the best to advance the merits of his case, and administer the liberal relief provided by the convention, and humbly sought for in his application. And your memorialist will ever, &c.

ALEXANDER MOULTRIE.

THE PETITION AND REPRESENTATION OF THE MEMBERS OF THE SOUTH CAROLINA YAZOO COMPANY.

To the honorable the commissioners appointed by the Congress of the United States of America, in pursuance of articles of agreement and cession made between the said Congress and the State of Georgia, on the 21th April, 1802, relative to her Mississippi territory, and to whom applications are to be submitted by individuals, for compensation of any rights and claims they may have on any contract with Georgia, relative to any part of the said territory, as under and by virtue of the said agreement and cession is directed to be made.

The petition and representation of Alexander Moultrie, William Clay Snipes, the representatives of General Isaac Huger, deceased, and doctor James Moultrie, for and in behalf of themselves and others, whose claims are also herein submitted for compensation, members of the South Carolina Yazoo Company, on the grounds and facts represented in their regular order, and authentically stated in this representation respecting a contract made with Georgia for Mississippi lands, sheweth:

That your petitioners, in order to put their case in as clear, comprehensive, and compact point of view as possible, beg leave to lay the same before your honorable board, under three grounds of consideration. First, the nature and the proof of the contract made with Georgia as aforesaid, and on which their claims are founded. Secondly, the proof of the full compliance therewith on their part, and the rights naturally resulting therefrom to them; and thirdly, the losses and injuries they have sustained, by Georgia having refused to fulfil her part of the contract.

To the first ground, your petitioners beg leave to state, that it will appear, from the brief of the bill of complaint and proceedings in equity filed, and of record in the Supreme Court of the United States, held at the seat of Government; and the documents and testimony therein of record, in a suit against Georgia; to which brief (a copy of which is hereunto annexed) and the original plenary proceedings, documents, and proofs so recorded, your petitioners crave leave as often as may be necessary to refer. That application was made to the Legislature of Georgia some time in December, 1789, in consequence of encouragements held out by that State, by a petition to the said Legislature, for a purchase of part of her Mississippi territory, (which afterwards became designated by the name of the South Carolina Yazoo Territory,) and that the proposals and terms expressly stipulated and offered in and by said petition, were to pay for the same in the paper credits of Georgia; to the official copy of which petition, duly authenticated, under the seal of Georgia, and marked H, amongst the documents filed with the bill in the Supreme Court aforesaid, your petitioners beg leave to call your particular attention.

Your petitioners further represent to your honorable board, that after the said petition was so presented, and referred to a committee, a bill was brought into the Legislature of Georgia, for the purpose of such purchase so applied for and passed into an act. An authenticated copy of which act, under the seal of Georgia, is annexed as an exhibit and document to the bill of complaint filed as aforesaid, and is amongst the records aforesaid, and marked A, and to which your petitioners crave leave, for a greater certainty to refer.

That it will appear by said act A, the lands so purchased were specifically located, and said to be about five millions of acres; and the "amount" of sixty-six thousand nine hundred and sixty-four dollars was to be paid for the same within two years from the 21st December, 1789, the date of that act. That the purchasers under the said act were, at their own expense, to extinguish the Indian claims to the said territory; and keep the peace of Georgia with them in doing so, and to settle the same as soon as possible, as appears by the preamble of the act as an express stipulation; and that the State of Georgia was not to be responsible for any loss or deduction of the quantity sold, by any prior claims, but that the purchasers were to take the same for more or less.

Your petitioners also further represent that, whilst the said act was passing the Legislature, it being the express terms of the purchase to pay for the same in Georgia paper, and it being understood certain bills of credit of Georgia, called Rattlesnake money, were then of no value, and never likely to be so, and might, under the general terms of said purchase, be offered in payment, objections were made by certain members of the Legislature to the passing the bill into an act, unless the purchasers would agree that particular species of paper should be excluded; and a committee was appointed to confer with them, and did stipulate with them to that effect; which being done, the said bill passed accordingly into the law A, as aforesaid. For the authentic proof of which, your said petitioners beg leave to refer to the testimony of Lachlan M'Intosh, esq., and Col. Habersham, late Postmaster General of the United States, who were both members of the Legislature of Georgia at the time, and present; and the which testimony is of record amongst the proceedings in equity aforesaid, in answer to interrogatories exhibited under a commission of the Supreme Court aforesaid.

And your petitioners further represent, as an additional proof of the real intention of the parties to the contract of purchase aforesaid, and that the payment was to be received in paper, that they beg leave to refer to exhibit B, filed and of record, with the bill of complaint aforesaid, being a copy of a protest made by the minority of the House of Representatives immediately after the said act A had passed into a law, in December, 1789; and further, to the testimony of Lachlan M'Intosh, Doctor John Hall, and Col. Habersham, aforesaid, to the 5th interrogatory administered them, under the commission aforesaid, for Pennsylvania, in full confirmation and proof of the said exhibit B; whereby it appears the said minority thought a better bargain could have been made by Georgia, by taking part only in paper, with the rest in specie and produce, for the sale she had made; which protest is indubitable evidence of their own, in confirmation of the contract having been made with the South Carolina Yazoo Company only for paper.

And your petitioners further represent, on the second ground submitted, and as a further proof and confirmation of the said contract of purchase being made, to be payable only in paper; as well as a proof that the contract, from being merely an executory one, became an executed contract on the part of the purchasers, and binding on Georgia; that they beg leave to refer to the original exhibits and documents of two receipts filed and of record, with the bill of complaint aforesaid, and in the proceedings aforesaid, from the Secretary of the Executive Department of Georgia, (copies of which are also printed in the pamphlet herewith accompanying this petition,) also to the testimony of Doctor John Hall, Peter Conway, Lachlan M'Intosh, and Colonel Habersham, to the 7th and 10th interrogatories administered to them in proof thereof, under the commission aforesaid, and of record as aforesaid; whereby it appears, by the first receipt, that on the 13th August, 1790, six hundred and thirty pounds eighteen shillings were paid, and received into the treasury of Georgia, from Wm. Gibbons, in part payment of the purchase aforesaid in "bills of credit," and certified to be in "part of" the "amount of" sixty-six thousand nine hundred and sixty-four dollars purchase money aforesaid; and whereby it appears in the second receipt, that on the 11th September, 1790, five hundred pounds "paper medium," were in like manner paid and received, "as a further payment in part" of the "amount of" the said purchase in Georgia. All which payments are now retained by the State of Georgia.

And your petitioners further represent, as a proof of the further compliance of payment pursuant to their contract, and in full completion and execution thereof on their side, that they beg leave to refer to the exhibit and document G, filed with the bill aforesaid, and of record with the same, being a certificate by Mr. Meals, Treasurer of Georgia, of a tender being made to him pursuant to the act A, exhibited within the two years limited by their contract aforesaid, of the balance then due. And the which facts relative to such tender, as well as the certificate, is also fully proven by the testimony of Edwin Gairdner, of Charleston, merchant, and Richard Smith, (who were present at the time,) by their answer to interrogatory exhibited to them, under a commission from the Supreme Court aforesaid, and of record as aforesaid. The which tender was refused by the Treasurer of Georgia, though it was on better terms (if possible) than the payments contemplated by the contract, and in fair compliance with it; and far better than that the minority of the House contended, by their protest, ought to have been asked by the Legislature of Georgia as aforesaid.

Your petitioners, therefore, humbly submit, on their first and second grounds, submitted herein for consideration as aforesaid, that the facts and proofs hereinbefore adduced, with the documents referred to, establish beyond a doubt the full completion and execution of the contract for the purchase aforesaid with Georgia, on behalf of the purchasers, as to the payments to be made to the same; whereby every right therein became absolutely and irrevocably vested in them, pursuant to such purchase, independent of the expenses hereinafter proven to be made and incurred, to promote the settlement of their purchase, pursuant to their engagement stipulated by the requisition of Georgia in the act A, aforesaid, and which only were incurred and gone into by them, but from a sacred regard to their contract with that State, and a firm reliance on the support of that public body, and her plighted faith.

And your petitioners, on their third and last ground of claim, beg leave further to represent that, after all the transactions before stated and brought into proof, had taken place, after the payments had been made and tendered by them, as aforesaid, notwithstanding, in addition thereto, an enormous expense had been entered into and incurred, to forward the settlement of the purchase aforesaid, in further execution of their contract, and pursuant to the stipulated requisition of Georgia, as aforesaid, (the particulars of which will hereafter appear by undoubted testimony referred to, and a just schedule of the same.) The State of Georgia, neglecting her contract aforesaid, and the expenses, losses and enormous injury she had done, by refusing to comply with the same, with the purchasers aforesaid, sold the same property purchased of them, as aforesaid, together with a larger quantity of the same kind, to four different companies, and conveyed the same to them by an act of her Legislature, passed in February, 1795, to which act, marked A A, amongst the exhibits and documents of record, with the bill of complaint aforesaid, your petitioners crave leave, for greater certainty, to refer.

And your petitioners further represent that, by the sale made by the said act, it will appear from the description of property sold the different companies therein mentioned, that the property sold two companies therein mentioned, to wit, the Georgia Company and the Georgia Mississippi Company, is located on, and takes away the whole property sold the South Carolina Company, as aforesaid; and that the said two companies, as members of the public corporate body of the State of Georgia, acting by their agent and representative body in Legislature assembled, can never plead ignorance of the representative and legislative acts of the legislative and representative body of their country, nor the constituted authorities acting thereunder, is a principle too well recognized on every ground of law and civil policy, established from the oldest adjudications. Nor can such ignorance be alleged, in fact, when, by the answer of Thomas Glascock, Ambrose Gordon, and Thomas Cumming filed in the Supreme Court, to the bill of complaint aforesaid, they confess that they knew of the payments and tender made, as hereinbefore is alleged, from report, (as by the said answer will appear,) all which, without intending to injure the present claims of these companies, prove that they were at least, what is called in law, purchasers, with notice of a former right.

And your petitioners beg leave to represent that, formerly, the subject of this property sold by Georgia to other companies, as well as to the four companies herein last mentioned, was a common bone of contention and dissension between them all; and from the variety of conflicting interests involved under different claims, and so generally disseminated through the different States of the Union, threatened a melancholy source of complaint, discord, and division; which, in all human probability, might have greatly disturbed the peace of our Government, and embittered every source of public happiness. That they are happy to find the magnanimity of the Government hath interfered to put an end to all these evils; to destroy all collision of interest and useless distinctions of right; to embrace the claims of all, by her protecting sovereignty and justice, upon one indiscriminate principle of accommodation, and to harmonize and compensate all who stand now upon no other than one common ground of injury and injustice done to them; and from a source, too, which, whilst it will prove an almost incalculable fund of wealth, population, and strength to the United States, will fully compensate all claimants under Georgia for any injury, with what (though sounding large) will be but a drop in the bucket, to the benefit the Union will receive. Fifty-three millions of acres of the richest territory, diversified with almost every climate of our hemisphere, worth now two guineas an acre, which will be increasing in value with the rapid population, every reason induces to expect, besides the source it will afford in future for revenue, by direct or indirect taxation, added to the strength of population, will, in a few years, exalt the grandeur of the United States, as a nation, equal to that of the most distinguished powers of the earth, if not superior to them.

Your petitioners further beg leave to represent, that the land contracted for by the South Carolina Yazoo Company, though sold for more or less than five millions of acres, contains, by accurate calculation, from the description in exhibit A, and correct maps, at least ten millions of acres, if not more.

They further beg leave to represent that, by a reference to the schedule A B, hereunto annexed, some idea can be had (of at least part) of the expenses incurred by the contract aforesaid, with Georgia, and which only can now be submitted with authenticity. "To which schedule, for the particular application of" each sum, and account of expenses, and the authenticity of which the testimony of Jacob Jacobs, Edmund Phelon, William Shirliff, Alexander Rose, James Matthews, Andrew Kerr, Edwin Gairdner, William M'Leod, Adam Tunno, Robert Hazlehurst, and William Robertson, gentlemen of established respectability in Charleston, is referred to; which testimony is recorded with the bill and records of the suit aforesaid, in the Supreme Court of the United States, and which petitioners beg leave to submit as proof to your consideration. All which, with the other facts adduced, show the magnitude of injury (to say no more) done to the purchasers from Georgia aforesaid. And the more so, it will appear, when we contemplate the property sacrificed, the funds expended, the loss of interest now accrued thereon, the disappointments, loss of credit, and the various oppressive and injurious circumstances of embarrassment attendant on, and arising therefrom, and in so great an object of pursuit, and of so much expectation.

And your petitioners further beg leave to represent, that it will be found that no attention has been wanting in them to the duties of their contract with Georgia, nor their interest arising therefrom. Their bill of complaint in the Supreme Court of the United States was filed, and proceedings had against Georgia, for a specific execution of her contract in manner, and at the time, as by the same and the proceedings thereon had of record, as aforesaid, will appear; and was about to come to a hearing (the same being set down, and briefs delivered for that purpose) for February court, 1798. But the alteration of the constitution, in respect to the suability of States, being ratified immediately before, and which, by an ex post facto operation, abated the said suit so instituted, your petitioners have been without remedy, until the late provision of Congress, in her agreement and cession with Georgia, as aforesaid.

And, lastly, your petitioners beg leave to represent, that they know of no person from the South Carolina Yazoo Company (the specific appropriation of the property agreed for by them with Georgia, being given up to the United States, and only compensation from their contract and its injuries being now to be sought for) who can claim from Congress any compensation, but the petitioners herein named, and nominally distinguished, and William Gibbons, of Georgia, in right of the money paid by him, as a member of the company, as aforesaid. Thomas Washington, mentioned in the proceeding, having only paid about three hundred pounds to Wm. M'Leod, and having dissipated the funds of the company, and broken in upon them in a manner not now to be specified, to many thousands, and every other who had taken, at different times, a part in the company, having withdrawn their contributions and relinquished the business, and borne no burthen of expenditures; that, by misfortunes and accidents, their funds have been exhausted, except to about four thousand pounds sterling, in a Georgia certificate, bought of Alexander Rose, for above six thousand pounds; one thousand five hundred of which were reserved by Mr. Rose; that twenty-one thousand and ten pounds four shillings and one penny of the indents of the State of South Carolina, and belonging to the State, were loaned by Alexander Moultrie to the company, when of little value; that the State has received for such from others, and may receive for the same, one pound in five, by compromise; but from whatever compensation Congress may make your petitioners, it will be necessary that that amount of the indents may be retained by Congress, to secure the State on any compromise to be made with her; and that the balance may be distributed amongst your petitioners in equal proportions.

And your petitioners pray that such generous compensation be made them, as not only to extricate them from the difficulties they have been drawn into, and which they now labor under, by their contract, but, with a full consideration of the magnitude of the cession made by Georgia to Congress, and its great value and advantages to the Union, as well as the magnitude and value, and the justice of the claims of the petitioners to the property contracted for with Georgia; the immense expenses they have been plunged into by such contract; the sacrifice of capital to raise funds, and the loss of interest sunk with it; the loss, also, of time and credit, from the embarrassments arising from their disappointment, as well as the most precious years of their lives; and the sacrifice of that domestic happiness which is beyond the power of language to express.

All which they most humbly submit, &c.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

MOULTRIE, et al.
versus
 STATE OF GEORGIA, et al. } In Equity.
 Complainant's Brief.

The bill states that complainants, citizens of South Carolina, for themselves and others, associates of the same State, show, that, in the year 1789, complainants, with one Thomas Washington, now dead, and several others, were applied to unite in application to the Legislature of Georgia, to purchase the territory in bill mentioned; also, to purchase of Georgia the pre-emption right of extinguishing Indian claims thereto; that the application was made in December, 1789, and, on the 21st of December, 1789, an act of that Legislature passed, vesting said pre-emption and all right of Georgia in said territory, as by said act (exhibit A) appears; that, whilst said act was under deliberation, and immediately before its passing, the House of Representatives appointed a committee to meet the agent of parties applying for purchase, to stipulate as a condition on which said House would pass said act; that, in all payments for said purchase, a paper emission of the State of Georgia, called Rattlesnake money, should be excepted and deemed inadmissible in such payments; that it was so agreed by agent of complainants and the committee, who returned satisfied to House, and bill passed into a law; that, as demonstration of intention of parties that every paper credit current in Georgia, to the amount of sixty-six thousand nine hundred and sixty-four dollars (except Rattlesnake) was to be received by Georgia for said purchase. A protest was entered by minority of the House of Representatives, disapproving of said purchase, and showing more advantageous offers had been made for said purchase, payable in tobacco and other property and paper issues, and public securities of Georgia; and that only certificates and public paper credits were to be paid by complainants for their purchase; (as by exhibit B appears;) that, in June, 1790, Legislature of Georgia passed a resolve (filed with bill marked C, and an exhibit, also marked I) attempting to defeat their contract with complainants; that, after such resolve, two sums of money were paid, in part execution of complainants' contract, into treasury of Georgia, as by complainants' exhibits with bills E and F; that, on the 19th day of December, 1791, before expiration of two years allotted by contract of complainants to complete said purchase, complainants tendered John Meals, then treasurer of Georgia, the balance due on their said contract, and demanded their grant; which tender said Meals refused, allowing the Carolina medium to be as specie and good tender, refusing, specially, only Georgia certificates, which were then twenty shillings in pound, and of far more value than when the act passed. Said certificate of tender and refusal by J. Meals, exhibited in paper G, to Carolina commission, annexed and proven.

That complainants, by (the law A exhibited) their contract, contracted to settle the said territory, and being desirous to carry speedily into execution every part their contract, laid out and expended many thousand pounds sterling to accomplish extinction of Indian right, and forwarding settlement, an arduous work intended beneficial to Georgia; that, encouraged by contract, great sacrifices made by complainants of money and property, many associates advanced nothing, especially Washington, who was means of their loss of above thirty thousand pounds sterling: new association now formed, and present associates burthened with every loss; that, in tender of balance made to Meals, as in exhibit G, neither Washington nor his representatives had any concern or contribution; and complainants submit how far his representatives, and under what restriction, ought to be admitted, or whether they ought to be admitted, to partake of complainants.

That before tender made in December, 1791, as in exhibit G, the whole amount of sixty-six thousand nine hundred and sixty-four dollars, in Hillhouse's and Wreat's certificates, had been tendered Meals, who took charge of them only as a private person, and could not officially receive them in payment; and that they were returned before the tender made the 19th December, 1791, and distributed to each associate.

Combination charged against complainants' interest by sale from Legislature of Georgia to James Gunn, Matthew M^rAllister, and George Walker, of part of the territory purchased before by the complainants, as aforesaid; also, by said Legislature selling since complainants' purchase, viz., 7th January, 1795, to Nicholas Long, Thomas Glascock, Ambrose Gordon, and Thomas Cumming, and associates, by name of Mississippi Company, the other part of the territory purchased by complainants, as aforesaid, (as appears by exhibit A. A.) although they were fully apprized of complainants' rights before confederates so purchased.

Prayer of bill for subpenas against the State, and attorney general and treasurer of said State, and David Murray Washington, heir of aforesaid Washington; also, to James Gunn, M. M^rAllister, George Walker, and to Nicholas Long, Thomas Glascock, Ambrose Gordon, and Thomas Cumming, to answer bill, and to file two copies, authenticated, of complainants' exhibits; also, to answer respecting the Rattlesnake committee, and that confederates file a copy of law, A. A., and that D. M. Washington show what right he can have to merit protection of this court; also, that confederates show what part of complainants' territory purchased by them. And that this court decree complainants' right, in territory so purchased by them, be deemed and held absolute, on their paying or tendering the treasurer of Georgia, in public securities or specie, or the value in any money current in Georgia, the balance due for the amount of dollars contracted for to be paid. And that the right of Georgia in premises, and all others derived from the same, be bound by and decreed to be held and stand liable to claim and title of complainants, their heirs and assigns. That Georgia be deemed to confirm the same, on complainants paying amount of bill due in specie, or valuable paper, current in Georgia, and equal to gold and silver, or such certificates and paper credits as come within meaning of their contract; also, decree what interest the heir of Washington can have.

On this bill, process being served on defendants in summer of 1796, and proven in due form, for each party appearing in the court held at Philadelphia, in February, 1797, a decree was then made, pursuant to the rule of the — August, 1796, that the complainants proceed ex parte to their examination of proofs, and to a final decree. This cause, set down for hearing at August term of 1797, was adjourned over to the next sitting.

Since the adjournment of the term for August, 1797, an answer from the defendants, Thomas Glascock, Ambrose Gordon, and Thomas Cumming, hath been (sworn to in Augusta, in Georgia, before John Wilson, justice of the peace) filed in the office of the clerk of this court in Philadelphia, setting forth, that they believe to be true that, in 1789, complainants applied to Georgia for purchase of territory, as described in bill, and they admit that exhibit A, to complainants' bill, is, in substance, (if not literally,) a copy of the act of the Legislature, passed in pursuance thereof, and that a committee was appointed to confer on what kind of moneys was to be taken in payment, but were not members then of the Legislature; also, admit there was a publication of the members of the Legislature in handbills, or public prints, expressing their disapprobation of the law so passed; but don't know if exhibit B of complainants be a true copy, or if the majority was of the same opinion with the minority, as to kind of money or public securities to be received in payment; but, if permitted to form opinion, it appears, majority originally understood, as declared in their resolves, (exhibit C,) filed with complainants' bill, and in respondents' answer, that they knew of payments made by complainants, also of their tender made, but by report and the losses of complainants; that, some time in November or December, 1794, they applied to General Assembly of Georgia to purchase part of her unlocated western territory, and described in exhibit A. A., and that they obtained a grant, and paid Georgia for same, as in exhibit A. A. Deny, at time of their said purchase, any knowledge of complainants' title to any part of same; and have, for valuable consideration, sold their said purchase to William Wetmore, Leonard Jarvis, and Henry Newman, and their associates, called the New England Land Company, prior to hearing of complainants' claim, now set up, and the filing of their bill, and with no intention to weaken complainants' claim. Submit whether bound to provide, at their own expense, documents from public officers for complainants, having liberty to do so themselves. Deny combination, and pray in usual form.

Brief of complainants' proofs under the Carolina commission.

Jacob Jacobs proves he knows complainants. To sixth interrogatory, says: Knows of purchase by them from A. Kerr, of about two thousand nine hundred pounds sterling in goods, sold by deponent at auction for one thousand six hundred and sixteen pounds four shillings and five pence half-penny, which he understood intended to make payment of part of the purchase money to Georgia for Yazoo lands.

Edmund Phelon, that he knows complainants. To sixth interrogatory: Knows of a contract by director of South Carolina Yazoo Company with Thomas Basket, a trader amongst Creeks and Choctaw nations, and to pay him one hundred pounds sterling to pilot deponent through Choctaw nations, and to the Natchez, and to serve deponent as an interpreter to Indians; that deponent's mission was to prepare them for a settlement of South Carolina Yazoo Company at Walnut Hills, and on the Yazoo river; that deponent, to effect this, expected to meet Dr. I. O. Fallon and a Colonel Holder there, with a quantity of goods and settlers from Kentucky, to build houses on the Yazoo, and divide the goods with the Indians; that he arrived at Natchez 25th September, 1790, with Basket, and remained till August, 1791; that neither Fallon nor Holder arrived; and, in January or February, 1791, he saw a letter in possession of Don Gayoso, governor of Natchez, written by Fallon, mentioning deponent's mission as an amicable one, requesting treatment of him accordingly; and that he, O. Fallon, was collecting settlers on the Ohio, and means for them, and would be down with them shortly. Believes Fallon was prevented going by the President's proclamation; that, before deponent went on his mission, he saw in the hands of A. Moultrie, signed by Fallon, receipts for money advanced Fallon, as agent of South Carolina Yazoo Company; that deponent received from Washington, before departure, twenty pounds, and, after return, receipt for company, from General Huger, three hundred dollars.

WILLIAM SHURTLEIFF knows complainants. To sixth interrogatory, that, when treasurer for South Carolina Yazoo Company, he expended for company one thousand one hundred and fifty-one pounds, sixteen shillings, and four pence sterling, and part for bills drawn by Fallon, as agent, whilst in western territory; i. e. one bill to Robert Hazlehurst, for one hundred and twenty-five pounds, sixteen shillings, and one penny, sterling, and one to Adam and William Tunno, for two hundred and fifty pounds; and that he paid Basket, as a guide, and other expenses; and understood and believes they were for making a settlement on the Yazoo territory. To thirteenth interrogatory, says Phelon was sent by company about making settlements on Yazoo.

ALEXANDER ROSE knows complainants. To seventh interrogatory, that State of Georgia granted him a certificate for six thousand one hundred and three pounds sterling, current money of Georgia; out of which he sold J. Gairdner, of Charleston, for South Carolina Yazoo Company, four thousand six hundred and three pounds, at the rate of sixteen to seventeen shillings in the pound; which purchase he understood was to go towards paying Georgia for Yazoo lands.

JAMES MATHEWS knows complainants. To sixth interrogatory, knows Fallon, and that he was sent agent for company; that Fallon quit South Carolina, but knows not on what mission. Saw him write, and knows his hand; and saw in possession of A. Moultrie four receipts, in Fallon's hand, to amount all of two hundred and thirty-seven pounds sterling, moneys received by Fallon of A. Moultrie: saw these receipts before Fallon departed; and Fallon departed well provided with horses. A. Moultrie, then director of the company. Persuaded Fallon went about Yazoo lands. That deponent assisted in counting twenty-one thousand and ten pounds, four shillings, and one penny, sterling, in South Carolina general indentures, and saw and attested a bond, from J. Huger, Thomas Washington, J. Weed, Alexander Inglis, for self and Alexander M'Gilvray, and Edward Penman, (and that W. C. Snipes signed it after,) for twenty-one thousand and ten pounds, four shillings, and one penny, sterling, to A. Moultrie, dated 17th of February, 1790, about the day deponent counted indents, which he believes was loaned to the company; and to pay for Yazoo lands, and that the indents were sold for that purpose. Also, was witness to a receipt from Jacob Weed to Alexander Moultrie, (dated 17th February, 1790,) as director, for two thousand five hundred pounds sterling, in Carolina medium, to be applied towards company's payment to Georgia for Yazoo lands; which medium then at par with specie. Believes members of Yazoo Company resident at Charleston paid considerable sums of money, and incurred large debts, and much involved in providing to pay for Yazoo territory.

ANDREW KERR knows complainants. To sixth interrogatory, Jacobs and Son bought of deponents goods, to two thousand nine hundred pounds, for A. Moultrie and others, of Yazoo Company, and believes to raise money to pay for Yazoo land: knows of purchase of Rose's certificate from the State of Georgia, (of which Rose reserved fifteen hundred,) to pay Georgia for Yazoo lands.

EDWARD GAIRDNER knows complainants. To seventh interrogatory, knows the purchase of goods from Kerr, of two thousand nine hundred pounds, and sold for about one thousand six hundred, which sum, with Weraet's certificates of Georgia, South Carolina medium, then at par with specie, some gold and silver, amounting (exclusive of the one thousand six hundred) to seven thousand pounds; also, some other Georgia paper was carried to Augusta, in December, 1791, to discharge last payment to Georgia for Yazoo territory: on arriving, found the last mentioned Georgia paper would not be received, and then sent to Charleston, to James Gairdner, to purchase Rose's certificates for about six thousand pounds; that some bought at seventeen and six pence per pound sterling, and brought to Augusta December, 1791, and formed part of the tender then made; that the company then having sufficient funds, Mr. Thomas Young, Richard Smith, Robert Forsythe, and the deponent, attended John Meals, treasurer, at Augusta, on the 19th of December, 1791, and, in behalf of company, tendered him fourteen thousand four hundred and ninety-four pounds, five shillings, and eight pence, the balance then due for company's purchase of Yazoo lands; that the tender was composed of part specie, part Carolina medium, the rest Georgia Weraet's certificates, in the proportions mentioned in complainants' exhibit G; and that Meals refused the same in manner as declared in said exhibit G; that Meals was then treasurer of the State of Georgia; that the name of J. Meals, subscribed to Exhibit G, is Meals's own hand writing, and written in deponent's presence.

WM. M'CLEOD knows complainants. Sixth, that Washington and Snipes, as two members of South Carolina Yazoo Company, bought of him, in 1789, goods to about two thousand pounds sterling, and found, after, Moultrie and Huger equally concerned in that purchase; that the goods, he understood from a Colonel Holder, who chose them out, were intended to establish a store or settlement on the Yazoo territory.

JAMES GAIRDNER knows complainants. To seventh interrogatory, knows of the purchase of goods from Kerr, to amount to two thousand nine hundred pounds, and the sale, by Jacobs, to pay Georgia for Yazoo lands; knows of the purchase of Rose's certificate, of about six thousand one hundred and three pounds sterling, and of one thousand five hundred pounds reserved for Rose, and that it was bought at seventeen and six pence per pound; that it was bought to tender to Georgia for Yazoo lands; that A. Moultrie also deposited one hundred barrels of rice, and Dr. Moultrie fifty barrels, to raise money towards tender; and that, on the 16th of December, 1791, Carolina medium at par with specie, and Weraet's certificates at seventeen shillings and six pence per pound.

ADAM TUNNO knows complainants; in 1790, a bill of exchange from Fallon, for two hundred and fifty pounds, dated at Kentucky, and directed to the treasurer of the Yazoo Company, was remitted the deponent by John Holmes, of Baltimore; and that, in February, 1791, the bill was paid, with damages, by A. Moultrie, to two hundred and ninety-eight pounds, eight shillings, and nine pence.

ROBERT HAZLEHURST knows complainants; that, in 1789, 1790, or 1791, he received a bill, drawn by Fallon at Kentucky, directed to A. Moultrie and William Clay Snipes, on account of Yazoo Company, to pay five hundred dollars, which was afterwards paid by A. Moultrie.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON knows complainants; sixth, knows purchase of Kerr's goods to near three thousand pounds, and sale by Jacobs to pay for Yazoo lands; a bond was given for the goods, and was paid by Dr. Moultrie; knows that J. Gairdner was sent to from Augusta to purchase Rose's certificate, and which was done.

ISAAC TEASDALE knows complainants; to eleventh interrogatory, that, in month December, 1789 and 1791, the paper medium of South Carolina, passed in Georgia at par with specie; and Georgia medium at fifty per cent. discount.

RICHARD SMITH knows complainants; to sixth interrogatory, that, in December, 1791, he came from Augusta to Charleston, to buy Rose's certificate, and which was purchased by James Gairdner, for company, and carried by deponent to Augusta, previous to 19th December, 1791; and that, on 19th December, 1791, deponent, with others appointed, attended J. To the honorable James Madison, Albert Gallatin, and Levi Lincoln, commissioners nominated by the late act of Congress, entitled an act "regulating the grants of lands, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee;" and for receiving propositions of compromise and settlement for claims arising from persons, by virtue of any act, or pretended act, of the State of Georgia, respecting lands of the United States south of the Tennessee.

The memorial and claim of Alexander Moultrie, William Clay Snipes, Doctor James Moultrie, and the representatives of General I. Huger, deceased, in behalf of themselves only, sheweth:

That, during the last session of Congress, begun on the 6th day of December, 1802, an application was made, under the sanction of the late convention between the United States and the State of Georgia, respecting the Mississippi Territory, in the name of your present applicants, in behalf of themselves, and such others, generally, as might thereupon come forward, with like just grounds of application for redress and compensation, supported by equal or sufficient documents of injuries and losses actually sustained, individually, from a certain contract or purchase of lands by a company called the South Carolina Company, in December, 1789, from the State of Georgia, as former members of said company, and by reason of the non-compliance of Georgia with such contract, and her sale thereof to the United States.

That, in the said application (as appears by a copy thereof, annexed,) a full statement and representation was made, of the particulars of the said contract so entered into with Georgia, and of the final completion thereof, (after a part execution and binding efficacy had been given to the same,) by the purchasers or company aforesaid, in order to show the real magnitude of rights divested by the said cession of Georgia; to evince the reality and justness of the grounds of application for compensation to the parties actual sufferers, from their faith in the State of Georgia; to make appear fairly, by no less than judicial authority and proof, the extent, and losses, and injuries, sustained by such applicants, as actual, and not merely speculative losses, and particularly by whom; and to distinguish, in its true character, the case of your applicants from that of any fraudulent or speculative application, which might be made, similar, but upon pretended grounds, not supported by equal proof.

That, after such application was made to your honorable board, the same was, on hearing of the applicants by counsel, by leave of the honorable the House of Representatives in Congress, submitted on the 23d day of February last, to the decision of that honorable body, on the third reading of a bill in that house, entitled "A bill for settling certain claims to public lands of the United States south of the Tennessee," in order that the said applicants might be admitted to a participation of the benefits of the said bill, if deemed so entitled, where, after such hearing was had, the said House of Representatives, on the passing of the said bill, amended the same by recognizing, fully, your applicants' claim, and by admitting your applicants thereby, by a very great majority of votes, to an equal participation of the provisions, made for compensation, by the said bill, with the other applicants who were originally inserted in the said bill, as meriting, at least, the same measure of justice as, by the journals of the said House of Representatives will more fully appear; and that, after the said bill had so passed the said House of Representatives, it being then too near the period at which the session of that representation of Congress was to expire, to pass, with the necessary readings, in the Senate, into an act of the Legislature; an amendment was made in the Senate to another act then passing, (and which passed there into an act,) entitled "An act regulating the grants of lands, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States south of the Tennessee," by which said amendment the eighth clause of the said act was altered, so as to embrace your applicants' claims, and to provide for all claims under "any act or pretended act of the State of Georgia," in manner as in such act is expressed, as, by the said act, and the journals of the Senate of Congress, will more fully appear.

That the magnitude of injury suffered by your applicants will appear from a perusal of their former representation, now annexed to this, and their account; and by the same, as well as the acts already solemnly done by the House of Representatives and the Senate, in Congress assembled, in confirmation of their right and of their claims, they trust the justice of this application will become fixed and indisputable: that they do not come to demand any of the territory contracted for with Georgia, and since purchased by the United States, or to dispute their rights, or to repel the claims of other claimants who may have suffered in like manner, and may be equally entitled to compensation; but only as the only sufferers in pecuniary interest, sacrifice of estate, health, peace of mind, and family happiness, in addition to the consideration of the great loss of a portion of property purchased from Georgia, fairly and conclusively, in point of title, and now taken from them, to receive a liberal compensation from the provisions made by Congress for that purpose, adequate to the damage and injury they have suffered, for not only a privation of a portion of a just right, but the actual injuries and losses sustained from vast and unavoidable expenditures of money, sacrifice of property and estate, peace of mind, length of time, health and credit, in supporting the contract made with Georgia.

That they solemnly know of no one who has suffered any of the losses herein enumerated but themselves, or advanced any sum of any magnitude but William Gibbons, who has advanced £500, now in the treasury of Georgia: that all others who had advanced any moneys have, by express provision, made before such advance, had the same restored, and left your applicants solely burthened, with their losses proven. That Mr. William Gibbons has not authorized any of your applicants to apply, for him, for any compensation, though notified to do it; and that your applicants would be happy to promote the just claims of any others, with their own, here-in offered for compensation of losses, did they know of any, and were authorized to do so by proper documents, as well as sufficient powers, but, being ignorant of any, (and which they think must have been known to them, if any such were,) they, therefore, on their own behalf only, without hostility to any just claim, pray such compensation as may be given them, be given to be divided between them nominally, in ratio of their respective losses, individually, and in full satisfaction thereof; all which losses are fully proven, and sufficiently vouched from the records of the Supreme Court of the United States, authenticated copies of which are now lodged in the office of the Secretary of State, pursuant to law. Besides its being notorious, that, from the losses and incumbrances incurred to your applicants by the conduct of the State of Georgia, large amounts of property, belonging to each of them, have been sacrificed by the pressing demands against them thereon, and sales made of the same; in consequence of which, at least two-thirds of their value have been sacrificed: and the which property, did your applicants but now possess, without having been forced to such sales, might extricate them from their difficulties, and leave them still independent.

All which is most respectfully submitted,
ALEXANDER MOULTRIE.

8th CONGRESS.

No. 86.

1st SESSION.

VIRGINIA YAZOO COMPANY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 28, 1803.

To honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

The memorial of the Virginia Yazoo Company, humbly sheweth:

That, in the year 1788, the State of Georgia offered a cession of part of its western territory to the United States, obviously to discharge the debt incurred by them in defence of that country against the Indians, which was, by the United States (as was presumed) deemed not advantageous.

In July of 1788, the United States proposed to receive a cession of all the territorial claim of Georgia west of the Appalachian, &c., containing, as is believed, about forty millions of acres, at the price of ——— dollars, a small portion only considered as specie, the balance certificates.

These transactions were, in truth, the principal inducement which led the Virginia Company to make propositions to the Legislature of Georgia, at the session of 1789; not as a subject of speculation—no such thing was ever intended or attempted—but sincerely designing a settlement in that country with sober and industrious citizens, whenever leave to effect that purpose might have been regularly obtained of the General Government, and to have been accompanied by civil and military officers appointed according to law.

The company deputed two of their members to wait on the Legislature, and present their petition, and thereby proposing for the tract of country included within the following boundary: "beginning at the mouth of Bear creek, on the south side of the Tennessee river; running thence up the said creek, to the head, or source; thence a due west course, supposed to be twenty miles, to the Tombigbee, or Twenty Mile creek, thence down the same to latitude thirty-three: thence along the said latitude, a due west course, to the Mississippi; thence up the said river, to the northern boundary line of this State; thence along the said line, in due east course, to the Tennessee river; thence up the said river, to the beginning. "To give sixty thousand dollars, payable in the currency of the State, or any liquidated debts against the State."

Among other proceedings had upon the petition, the Senate ordered a committee to confer with the memorialists on the subject of the bill and petition. The House of Representatives made the same order, and that the committee consist of a member from each county. In the various conferences there did not appear even a wish by any member of the committees to change the mode of payment proposed.

In due time, the bill predicated upon the petition stated, passed into an act, which granted to the Virginia Yazoo Company pre-emption of the land stated in their memorial, and designated by the same lines of boundary for the amount of ninety-three thousand seven hundred and forty-one dollars; and if payment made within two years to the treasurer, his receipt authorized the Governor to sign and deliver a grant to the company.

In a short time after the passing the act, two small payments at different periods, were made to the treasurer, in the paper currency of the State, in part payment of the purchase.

Within the two years, the whole amount due was at the treasury office, tendered to the treasurer, and receipt demanded to entitle to a grant. Tender refused, without assigning any reason therefor. The tender was in the liquidated papers and debts of the State, acknowledged such, and to be genuine; which receipt is as follows:

Acknowledgment of the Treasurer of Georgia, of the tender made of payment by the Virginia Yazoo Company.

STATE OF GEORGIA:

I, John Meals, treasurer of the said State, do hereby acknowledge and certify, that, on the 12th day of December, in the year 1791, personally appeared before me at the treasury office, John Watts, esquire, a member of the Virginia Yazoo Company, invested with full powers by the said company, to pay into the treasury of the State, the balance still due of the consideration and price of a certain tract of country, contracted for and purchased by the said company, from the Legislature of this State, agreeable to an act for disposing of certain vacant lands or territories within this State; and the said John Watts did accordingly, in the presence of George Handly, Benjamin Porter, and Anderson Watkins, produce, count out, and tender to me, as treasurer of the said State, in behalf of the said Virginia Yazoo Company, certificates and orders on the treasury for claims liquidated and signed by persons legally authorized to issue the same for debts due and owing from this State, amounting to the sum of twenty-one thousand five hundred and nineteen pounds, eleven shillings, and four pence sterling, which is equal to the amount of ninety-two thousand two hundred and twenty-six dollars and forty five-sixths of a dollar, which sum, together with the payments heretofore made, and received into the treasury, in part payments of the lands aforesaid, amounts to the sum of ninety-three thousand seven hundred and forty-one dollars, the price stipulated for the said tract of country in the act of Assembly before mentioned. And the said John Watts, esquire, did accordingly demand of me, in the name, and in behalf of the said company, to receive the certificates and orders on the treasury now tendered, and to certify the receipt of the same as treasurer of this State, to entitle the said company to a grant of the lands aforesaid, in consequence of their stipulations with the Legislature, and the act of Assembly before cited; which sum of twenty-one thousand five hundred and nineteen pounds, eleven shillings and four pence sterling, equal to the amount of ninety-two thousand two hundred and twenty-six dollars and forty five-sixths of a dollar, in the aforesaid liquidated debts, now tendered to me, I did refuse to receive and certify, as a payment for the balance due by the said company for the land aforesaid.

Given under my hand, as treasurer of the said State, at my office, in the town of Augusta, on the date first above mentioned.

JOHN MEALS, Treasurer.

Witness,

GEORGE HANDLEY,

ANDERSON WATKINS.

[Annexed to the preceding.]

GEORGIA.

By his excellency Governor Telfair, Governor and Commander-in-chief in and over the State aforesaid. To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

Know ye, that John Meals, esq., is treasurer of the State of Georgia, and that Thomas Watkins, esq., is Secretary of the honorable Senate of said State. Therefore, all due faith, credit, and authority, are, and ought to be had and given to the annexed documents by them respectively subscribed.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the said State to be affixed, at the State House, in Augusta, this 24th day of December, 1791, and in the sixteenth year of the independence of the United States of America.

EDWD. TELFAIR.

By his Excellency's command:

JOHN MILTON, Secretary.

Proof is now adduced to show that, through every stage of the business, and particularly at the time the bill passed into an act, and after it became a law, not only specie was not contemplated by the Legislature, but that it was their professed intent by that law to meet the mode of payment proposed by the petition of the Virginia Company; and this arises from—

1st. The petition contemplated and proposed such mode of payment only.

2d. The conferences of committees appointed for that purpose with the agents of the company, and no shadow of alteration from the mode of payment proposed by the petition even wished by any of the gentlemen forming the committees.

3d. The act itself recognizing the petition or memorial, thereby ingrafting it as part.

4th. The protest of the minority, after the passage of the bill, grounded upon the precise mode of payment, stated in the memorial of the Virginia Company. This protest recognized by depositions of Seaborn Jones, and of Joseph Habersham, two of that minority, and by the deposition of the printer.

5th. The testimony of five gentlemen of the majority of that Legislature, to wit:

STATE OF GEORGIA.

GREEN COUNTY.

I do hereby certify that I was a member of the House of Representatives of the General Assembly of this State in the year 1789, when, and at which session, a part of the western territory of this State was sold to a company of persons styled and called the Virginia Yazoo Company. As well as I recollect, I voted in favor of the sale, and did myself fully understand at that time that the said Virginia Yazoo Company, by the terms of the contract made, had of right the privilege to pay for the said territory so purchased of the General Assembly in the State certificates and orders on the treasury, for claims liquidated at their nominal or expressed amount of value, and I believe such was the general understanding and received opinion of the General Assembly, and how that omission happened in the law I do not know.

Given under my hand this 17th day of October, 1803.

JEDEDIAH JOHNSON.

I do hereby declare, that I was a member of the Legislature of the State of Georgia, in the year 1789, at the session of which a part of the vacant territory of said State was sold to a company styled the Virginia Yazoo Company, in payment for which, it was understood, as I then conceived, and still think, the State was to receive its audited certificates and other liquidated claims of the same nature; under which impression I voted in favor of the said sale, believing it to be the interest of the State to redeem its papers, and, at the same time, doing justice to the individual holders of them, as early as possible.

JOHN SHELMAN.

[The same affidavit by Mr. Johnson.]

STATE OF GEORGIA.

November 14, 1803.

I do hereby certify and declare that I was a member of the Legislature of the State aforesaid, in the year 1789, at the session of which a part of the vacant territory of said State was sold to a company styled the Virginia Yazoo Company, in payment for which it was understood as I then conceived, and still think, was to have been made either in the then paper medium in circulation, audited certificates, or other liquidated demands against the said State.

Given under my hand, the day and year as above.

Personally appeared before me, Neil Cleveland, esq.

and, after being duly sworn on the Holy Gospels of God, saith, he was a member of the Legislature of the aforesaid State, in the years 1789 and 1790, when a sale of the western part of the said State was made to the Virginia, South Carolina, and Tennessee Companies, and that this deponent voted in the affirmative on the passage of the law for the sale of the aforesaid land, and that his impressions, at the time of the sale, were, that the State securities, or certificates, were to be received in payment for the said lands.

NEIL CLEVELAND.

Sworn to, this 14th November, 1803, before Peter Crawford, J. P. ex officio.

STATE OF GEORGIA.

HANCOCK COUNTY, to wit:

I do hereby certify, that I was a member of the Senate of the Legislature of this State, in the year 1789, at which session, a part of the western territory of this State was sold to a company of persons styled and called the Virginia Yazoo Company, and that I voted in favor and for the said sale. I further certify that specie was not, during the progress of the transaction, offered by the Virginia, asked by the Legislature, or contemplated by either party. That the Virginia Yazoo Company offered in payment for the said territory the State certificates and orders on the treasury of the State for claims liquidated. And that no other kind of payments was, by the Legislature at that time expected, as it was clearly so understood; and how the omission happened in the new law I do not know.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and name, this 19th October, 1803.

STATE OF GEORGIA.

HANCOCK COUNTY, ss.

This day, Major James Evans, of the county aforesaid, who has subscribed the above certificate, came before me, one of the Commonwealth justices of the peace, in and for said county, and made oath to the truth of the foregoing certificate in due form.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal, this 19th of October, 1803.

B. SHIVERS, J. P. [L. s.]

GEORGIA.

HANCOCK COUNTY.

By Martin Martin, clerk of the superior court of said county. To all to whom these presents may come, greeting:

Know ye, that Barnaby Shivers, esq., whose signature is affixed to the foregoing affidavit, is an acting justice of the peace for said county.

Therefore, full faith, credit, and authority are justly due to his official attestation as such.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal of the county, at office, this 19th October, 1803.

MARTIN MARTIN,
Clerk Superior Court.

To which they add the testimony arising from the report of the committee of the Senate, to whom was referred (in consequence of refusal of tender by the Treasurer, the payment offered by the Virginia Company) the petitioner of the company, and therein stating their original petition, mode of payment therein set forth and proposed, their compliance, bona fide, with every thing incumbent on them to perform, to render the contract, on their part, executed and complete, the refusal of tender by the treasurer, without assigning any reason therefor, and praying the Legislature to give directions to their treasurer to receive, &c., and which is as follows:

"IN SENATE, December 17th, 1791. The committee, to whom was referred the memorial of the Virginia Yazoo Company, report that they have duly considered the same, and find it to contain a true statement of facts;" therefore, recommend the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the State treasurer be directed to receive, in payment for the lands sold to the Virginia Yazoo Company, specie, paper medium, or any liquidated demands against this State, provided the payment be made at or before the 21st instant."

Although, on the question, it passed in the negative, yeas four, nays five, yet the testimony, arising from the report of a committee in every respect competent to such investigation, and professedly appointed for such purpose, is respectable, and must have weight.

The amount of this solemn and concurrent testimony is believed competent fully to evince that the express intent of the Legislature, by their act of 1789, was to stipulate the same mode of payment as the Virginia Company had proposed, and thereby meet the proposition contained in their memorial, which in the act they notice, and therein ingraft. And it will be worthy of observation, that the testimony, in general, applies to the act, not only when in the character of a bill susceptible of modification, but at the time of passing, and when passed into a solemn legislative act.

The conclusion (it is presumed) must necessarily be, that the Virginia Yazoo Company having performed every thing incumbent upon them to render the contract executed and complete, they were entitled to their grant for the specific territory purchased.

Some of the gentlemen of the majority, it is true, have not sworn to their signed declaration, and the company had not the means, by process, to compell; but, surely, what they have declared and signed may be fairly presumed to be truth, especially when corroborated by others who have made oath. Their signed declarations are proved to be genuine by the deposition of Francis Johnson, who subscribed as a witness, and, although informal, is believed to be sufficiently luminous to make efficient impression.

STATE OF VIRGINIA.

FLEVANNA COUNTY, ss.

This day, Francis Johnson came before me, Jedediah Johnson, one of the Commonwealth's justices in and for the said county, and made oath, that, in the month of September last, he was employed by David Ross, esq., on the part of the Yazoo Company, to repair to the State of Georgia, and there to make application to such of the gentlemen who composed the Legislature of that State, in the year 1789, as voted in the affirmative of the contract made with the said company during that session, for part of the vacant territory belonging to the said State, as could, with convenience at this period, be met with, for affidavits and certificates, to prove the nature and understanding of the contract as to what was to be received in payment by the State for the territory then contracted for. That, in the progress of this business, he applied, severally, to Mr. Middleton Woods, of Elbert county, Colonel Harman Reynolds, of Clarke county, and Mr. Archer Gresham, of Green county, who were members of that Legislature, and voted in the affirmative of that sale, as they told him, for affidavits or certificates comprising their belief or understanding of what kind of payments the real contract embraced, whether gold or silver, paper medium, funded or liquidated claims, or what. That they severally refused to give any affidavit or certificate upon the subject; that he also applied to Major David Gresham, of Green county, one of the Senate that year, and who also voted in the affirmative of the said sale; that Major Gresham informed him his recollection was clear that the Virginia Company had, agreeably to his idea and understanding of the contract of right, the privilege to pay for the territory so sold and purchased, in the paper medium of the State, certificates and orders on the treasury for claims liquidated against the State; but, being in the Legislature of that State, in the year 1795, when the lands were again sold by the Legislature, he would not grant an affidavit or certificate, unless the Virginia Company would promise not to use it to the prejudice of the purchasers of 1795; and, if they would make that assurance, he would make an affidavit comprehending his belief and understanding of the contract.

That of those who voted in the affirmative of the said contract, from the best information he received, there are dead, Messrs. Bisset and Osborne, of the Senate, Messrs. Little, Love, and Weed, and by some informed that Mr. Watts was also dead, and by others that he removed to the western country; removed and absent from the State, Messrs. Few, M'Intosh, Fletcher, and Williamson, and to Messrs. Kerr, Mackintosh, and O'Neal, he did not apply.

This deponent further states that he was instructed to apply and get copies and extracts from the minutes or journals of Senate and House of Representatives of Georgia, of certain resolves, &c. which were denied him, and for further and more full information upon that point, he refers to copies of his memorandums and letters of the 23d October last, and 9th November, hereto subjoined, to the Secretary of the Senate and House of Representatives, as also their answers thereto of the 9th instant, also annexed; he further states that, after those communications had passed, the said Secretary and Clerk jointly made application to the House of Representatives, by Major Charlton, a member of that House, for instructions how to act, (the memorandum and communications accompanying the application,) which were ordered to lie on the table; this information he received from the said Secretary and Clerk.

FR. JOHNSON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 28th November, 1803. Given under my hand as a Justice of the peace in and for the county first above mentioned.

JEDEDIAH JOHNSON.

To such depositions as there are, the seal of the State authenticating is wanted. This is admitted; and here again there were no means to compel that justice to be done the Virginia Company which was their due. Application was made to the Secretary of State to authenticate with the seal of the State; it was refused, unless the Governor would specially direct it. His excellency was applied to, and refused to direct or permit it to be done, as appears from the deposition of George Holman, which is as follows:

STATE OF GEORGIA, City of Augusta.

Before me, John Wilson, one of the justices of the inferior court of the county of Richmond, and State aforesaid, and intendant of the city of Augusta, in the said county and State, personally came and appeared George Holman, at present of the same place, and being duly sworn, made oath that, on Wednesday, the 8th instant, he applied in Louisville, the seat of Government, to Horatio Marbury, esq., the Secretary of State for the said State of Georgia, and requested the said Secretary to procure the Governor's testimonial and seal of the State, to authenticate more fully that William Robertson, esq., is Secretary of the Senate, and Hines Holt, esq., is Clerk of the House of Representatives of the State of Georgia, and also, that John Wilson, esq., is one of the justices of the inferior court of the county of Richmond, in the said State; the names of which William Robertson and Hines Holt are to certain extracts from the journals of the General Assembly of the said State, for the year 1789 and 1791, hereunto annexed, and the name of the said John Wilson to a certain affidavit, made before him by one Seaborn Jones, esq., of the city aforesaid, also hereunto annexed, but was answered and told by the said Secretary of State, that it could not be done unless his excellency the Governor would pass an executive order for that purpose; that, in consequence thereof, (his excellency Governor Milledge being at his seat near Augusta,) he, this deponent, on the 10th instant, waited in person on his excellency Governor Milledge, and, after explaining to him the nature of the application made on Wednesday last to the Secretary of State, and the reference to the Governor, his excellency refused to order or permit the said testimonial to be given. And this deponent doth further say, that he was two weeks or upwards in Louisville aforesaid, during the late session of the General Assembly of this State, and is personally acquainted with William Robertson and Hines Holt, before mentioned, and doth know that they severally acted, the former as Secretary of the Senate, and the latter as Clerk of the House of Representatives, and doth verily believe that they have been duly and regularly appointed as such. And he doth further say, that he was present when the extracts hereunto annexed were taken from the journals, which he particularly examined, and verily believes they were correctly extracted.

GEORGE HOLMAN.

Sworn to before me, December 13, 1803.

JOHN WILSON, J. P.

Other testimony was expected to appear from the journals of the Senate and of the House of Representatives of Georgia. Application was regularly made to the proper officers at their respective offices, and copies of such extracts as were required were refused by them to be given or made, not feeling themselves at liberty to certify any thing (as they were pleased to say) relative to Yazoo, as by their joint letter to, and deposition of, Francis Johnson will appear; which letters are as follows:

LOUISVILLE, November 9, 1803.

SIR: The extracts required by my communication of the 23d ultimo, it is indispensably requisite that they should be [furnished] at this time. They are conceived by the Virginia Yazoo Company to be all important, and I trust you have had sufficient time and opportunity to make them out. I have been detained already much longer than I could have expected, and much to the injury of my business. I trust, therefore, any longer delay will not be contemplated or permitted. The copies before pointed out were, I believe, first, a copy of the resolution of the Senate, in the year 1790, declaratory of their understanding of the contract made with the Virginia Yazoo Company, in the year 1789, by the Legislature of this State, for a part of their vacant or western territory, as it respects the mode or subjects of the payments to be made by the said company for the said territory.

Secondly. A copy of the resolution of the Senate for repaying to the Virginia Yazoo Company the money by them paid into the treasury of this State in the year 1790, in part performance of their contract for the said territory; this resolution, if such there be, probably passed in the year 1794 or 1795.

Thirdly. Whether any other, save the first petition was presented by the Virginia Yazoo Company to the session or Assembly of 1789, concerning or in any wise touching the subject of the western or vacant territory of this State; upon this point I wished a certificate.

Hoping and entreating you not longer to detain me, I remain, with the highest esteem, &c.

F. JOHNSON.

To the SECRETARY of the Senate.

An exact copy of the above last mentioned letter was made by Mr. Johnson, and directed "To the Clerk of the House of Representatives."

Their joint answer is as follows:

LOUISVILLE, November 9, 1803.

SIR: Your communication of the 23d ult. and letter of this day we have before us, and notice the contents.

After obtaining advice on the subject, we, from the diversity of opinion, do not feel at liberty to certify any thing relative to Yazoo!!!

As the State of Georgia has disposed of the territory in question to the Union, it is thought advisable in her officers to embarrass the General Government as little as possible on that subject.

The State of Georgia, we have reason to believe, will withhold nothing that will tend to the furtherance of any object the United States may have in view.

The Legislature is now in session, and should you be dissatisfied with our proceedings, we advise you to apply to them; and, in every instance, we shall feel ourselves bound by their decision.

We are, with respect and consideration, &c.

WILL. ROBERTSON

Secretary of the Senate.

HINES HOLT,

Clerk House of Representatives.

FRANK JOHNSON, Esq.

It was stated by the commissioners in their report to Congress last session, that the Virginia Company withdrew the money from the treasury, which they had paid in part of the purchase made.

There is no doubt but the honorable gentlemen had what they presumed ground for such statement, but, in truth, the fact is not so. Facts stated will illustrate and evince.

After the tender and refusal, as stated, the Virginia Company hoping, from time to time, the honorable the Legislature of Georgia would do them that justice they felt themselves entitled to, at their session of 1795, deputed John B. Scott to make application to that Legislature for a fulfilment of the contract stated, and, if necessary, to make some sacrifices to the State in order to obtain the grant in an amicable manner, without delay or disputes; he was instructed so to do, but he had no authority to do any act which ought to impair, or in any manner affect the original contract; he found the Legislature not in a temper to accept his propositions of accommodation for the former sale, as they were deeply engaged in selling the same lands, with additional tracts, to a set of new purchasers. The object of Mr. Scott's mission being thus unattainable, he had no further powers to act for the company; and it is here to be observed that, upon his return from Georgia, at the first meeting of the company, he informed them that he had inconsiderately accepted of the money which had been paid into the treasury, in part of the price of the land, which he was willing to pay to them; this information was received with astonishment, and immediately there was an unanimous protest against this transaction, which is as follows:

"That he (John B. Scott) having inadvertently accepted of the said money from the treasurer, and was ready to deliver it unto them; but they unanimously refused to accept of it, and in the most express terms deny that they either gave any orders for withdrawing the money, or had any such intention. And they not only disavow the right of receiving the said money, but they declare it is, and ever has been, their uniform intention to pay up the balance whenever the Government of Georgia shall perform their part of the contract, and permit a grant to issue agreeably to the original purchase."

The Virginia Company, determined, as far as they could, to understand the transaction, (though they know it could not affect their title,) deputed a messenger to obtain copies of such documents as they supposed would be illustrative of it, that is to say, copy of the resolution of the Legislature, (if such there was,) directing the treasurer to repay, and which, (if such there be,) was, by the proper officers, refused to be given.

From the treasurer was required a copy of the receipt (if such there was) given by John B. Scott, for money said to be received by him, as agent of the Virginia Yazoo Company, perhaps in 1795, and paid into the treasury by the said company, in the year 1790, in part payment of their purchase, and any order of authority by which the said John B. Scott withdrew that money, if any such authority is filed. To which the treasurer returned the following answer:

TREASURY OFFICE, GEORGIA,
Louisville, November 9, 1803.

SIR: I have searched this office, and have not been able to find either of or any such papers mentioned in the above letter.

I am, sir, your most obedient,
EDWIN MOUNGER.

Mr. FRANCIS JOHNSON.

It is understood to be insinuated that the Virginia Company are indirectly concerned in the purchases said to be made from the Legislature of Georgia in 1795, and, perhaps, accompanied with a wish that belief should be attached thereto. The Virginia Company, professing themselves at all times to have been governed by the strictest principles of honor and probity, to wipe off as far as depends upon themselves, individually, the insinuation as dishonorable as it is unjust, have made their solemn appeal to the Searcher of Hearts, that they never were, nor are, either as a company, nor individually, nor in any other way or manner, originally or as assignees, directly or indirectly, concerned in the purchases said to be made in 1795. It is true, that it appears that John B. Scott, one of the members of the Virginia Yazoo Company, has taken part in those purchases, and, until the late report of the commissioners upon the business and transactions of the session of the Georgia Legislature in 1795, in that work the Virginia Yazoo Company were absolutely ignorant of the relation in which he stood to the companies then formed; but whatever impropriety or blame may appear to arise from that transaction, it cannot, with truth or justice, apply to the Virginia Company, as such, nor to individuals of that company, other than himself: except the present glance, (the Virginia Company having done so from necessity,) they do not wish further to interfere in the transactions of 1795, of the purchases then made, unless rendered necessary and urged thereto in defence of their just right; but if so, they presume they are able to adduce such authority as to evince that those presumed purchasers, and all having notice, claiming under them, (and this will be shown to be more extensive than at present probably presumed,) in point of right and justice, (notwithstanding their holding the evidence of legal grants,) cannot have more than equal pretension with the Virginia Yazoo Company.

The only suggestion that has been at any time hinted against the absolute right of the Virginia Company to their grant for the seven millions of acres of land, more or less, that has appearance of difficulty, even in a court of law, is this: that the act itself not specially stipulating that liquidated papers of the State might be paid, the act is not susceptible of explanation any other way than from itself.

It is confidently believed that, on this precise point, the law is otherwise, which governs the exposition of statutes by which any contract is formed.

The act of the Legislature under which the Virginia Company claim, has all the validity and force of a contract, and admits of similar construction.

In defining the meaning of those clauses which relate to payment, latitude of construction is admissible; they are ambiguous, not special. The memorial proposes a specific mode of payment; the act cannot be properly construed as an alteration thereof. The words of the law are, the amount of ninety-three thousand dollars; but neither specie, paper money, nor certificates, are mentioned. How is the intention to be ascertained? It is necessary to recur to the proposition on which the act is founded. To it the preamble refers, and it must be considered as constituting, in fact, a part of the act, and as ingrafted therein. In any uncertainty of construction, whether from ambiguity, from a deficiency or profuseness of expression by the act, reference must be had to the memorial for the due ascertainment of the meaning. This mode of reasoning is presumed to be correct, and it is deemed equally so to state that the testimony of the members of a Legislature is admissible evidence in a court of equity, to explain any ambiguity in their legislative acts, and to explain the intent where a contract is thereby formed, (when a municipal regulation it is admitted to be otherwise, because here a rule prescribed is given for action,) because the Legislature acts in its moral character, and is taken as a moral person.

A few adjudications (from amongst a variety) are extracted from Viner's abridgement.

Every thing which is within the intent of the makers of the act, though not within the letter, is as strongly within the act as that which is within the letter, and the intent also.

The words of statutes are not to be considered only, but rather the intent of the matter is to be weighed, for many times things which are within the words of statutes are not within the purview of them, which extends no further than the intent of the makers, which is the principal thing to be considered.

The intent of the act is always to be regarded, and to such purpose only the words ought to be construed.

The intent ought to be found partly from the words, and partly from the mischief they intend to remedy.

Constructions are to be made of the whole act according to the intent of the makers, and so sometimes are to be expounded against the letter, to preserve the intent.

The intent of the makers may be collected from the cause or necessity of making the act, or by the words in other parts of the act, or by foreign circumstances.

In acts that are to be construed according to the intent and meaning of the makers of them, the original intent and meaning is to be observed.

To these may be added the reading and decision of Puffendorf and Vattel, on the exposition of legislative acts forming a contract with individual members of the society, and distinguishing such from laws prescribing a rule of civil conduct.

The sovereign authority of a State may be contemplated in two distinct capacities: the one, being the exercise of this authority, in prescribing municipal regulations for the conduct of the citizens; the other, in the capacity of an agent for the State, in matters of contract and negotiation. The former comprehends all those acts of the Legislature which operate over the whole community, and apply themselves universally to the transactions of the people. These are rules of civil conduct prescribed for the regulation of society; and, as applied to the conduct of men, dictate the rules of right and wrong. Acts of this description are properly laws; and as the circumstances of mankind in a state of society are liable to mutations, a change of these municipal precepts is thereby rendered necessary; from whence originates the authority of the Legislature to alter, amend, or repeal them, and substitute others in their place, as appearances may direct, or policy dictate. This power is a necessary concomitant of the legislative authority; and, having its origin in justice, is a foundation principle in the social compact, and devolves, therefore, on succeeding Legislatures by delegation; but this principle, so well founded, and so necessary to be exercised in the case of laws, if applied to other acts of the Government, would become the instrument of injustice and the agent of despotism. "Hence," says Puffendorf, "we must take care to distinguish the other acts of sovereigns from their laws, lest any should imagine that all their just donations, alienations, and compacts, may be retracted by themselves or their successors. For upon these acts a right is obtained by other men, which ought not to be taken from them against their consent." As, in all forms of Government, there must be a moral agency attached to the sovereign power, it follows that this agency, in respect to its contents, must be subject to the same rules of right and wrong, and under the control of the same principles of justice, which govern the transactions of private individuals.

The body politic, or public agency of a State, then, with respect to its contracts, stands in the same relation to the person with whom the contract is made, and subject to the same obligations that individuals are in similar circumstances; and as the contract of an individual will bind his heirs, and all others claiming under him, so the contract of a corporation binds its members in eternal succession, to which the moral agency of a State bears a just and definable analogy.

The moral agency of the State of Georgia, from the powers and qualities adherent thereto, might have made to the Virginia Company a sale of any portion of her unappropriated territory, without any exercise whatever of the legislative authority for that purpose, if the existing laws, at that time, had provided for such a measure. But, as such provisions had not been made, it became necessary to enact a law, directing the State agency in the case contemplated. In this case, therefore, the sovereign legislative power and the incidental power of selling were exercised in co-operation; and before the moral agency of the State could effect the contract, an act of legislation was necessary to prescribe the rules by which the transaction should be governed. Accordingly, an act was passed. After the passage of this act, which operated as an express declaration of what the State agency willed to be done, as well as a legislative direction, as to the manner of executing that will, the Governor, under the direction of this law, and in observance to that will, was, certain stipulations being complied with by the company, to carry the latter into effect, in compliance with and according to the provisions of the former.

In this transaction may be discerned the exercise of the sovereign will in two distinct capacities: the first, as a Legislature prescribing rules; the second, as a moral person disposing of a part of its property, according to these rules. After the passing of this law, it became legal to sell in this method. It was an act of the body politic, authorized and sanctioned by law. And, as this contract was not dissolved by any failure of the company, in the performance of the actual conditions contemplated, but carried, so far as the same was practicable, under the subsequent irregularities of the opposite contracting party, virtually into effect, it ought to be viewed (to the extent, at least, dependent on the act of the company) as equitably standing on similar grounds, not with contracts imperfect or executory, but of contracts already in a state of execution. It could not, therefore, be affected by any thing ex post facto, nor its obligation impaired by any subsequent legislative act or disposition.

In the formation of the contract under consideration, the Legislature of the State of Georgia acted not by any intermediate commission, but directly in its capacity as a moral agent. The formalities customary in engagements between man and man must, of course, be dispensed with. These, from the mode adopted by the sovereign will for employing this agency, and the nature of the agent itself, could not, in the usual mode of acting, appertain. It becomes, of course, necessary, and is admissible, to give to the whole transaction some liberality of construction, to fill up what may justly be considered tacit, without violating the evident meaning contemplated; to add what, by undoubted testimony, may be evinced was an actual intendment by the parties. In support of this general principle, authorities may be adduced, tending to establish that the contract, as understood, at the period of formation, is that which at all subsequent periods ought to be acknowledged.

(Vattel, lib. 2, section 268.) "The interpretation of every treaty and every act ought to be made according to certain rules proper to determine the sense of them, such as the parties concerned must naturally have understood when the act was prepared and accepted. The question, in the interpretation of a treaty or any act whatsoever, is, to know what the contracting powers have agreed upon, in order to determine precisely, on any particular occasion, what has been promised and accepted, that is to say: not only what one of the parties has had the intention to promise, but also what the other has reasonably and sincerely thought to be promised, what has been sufficiently declared to him, and upon which he must have regulated his acceptance."

"If the sense in any place of a discourse," says Puffendorf, "be expressed clearly and plainly, the doubtful or obscure phrases are to be interpreted by those plain and familiar ones."

"The interpretation ought to be made in such a manner, that all the parts appear consonant to each other; that what follows, agrees with what went before." (Vatt. l. 2, sec. 285.)

And here, not irrelevantly, may be superadded (as might many others of the preceding character, in illustration,) the following maxim of Vattel: "that neither the one nor the other contracting or interested powers or parties has a right to interpret the act at his pleasure. For, if you are at liberty to give my promise whatever sense you please, you will have the power of obliging me to do whatever you have a mind, contrary to my intention, and beyond my real engagement; and reciprocally, &c." (Lib. 2, sec. 265.)

The preceding authorities would evince that, in the interpretation of contracts and of all acts whatsoever, what, by the intention of the parties, may be presumed to be contemplated or to have been contemplated, at the period of contract or engagement; or what, by the general tenor of the act, and of explanatory concurrences, can reasonably be assumed as a fundamental basis, shall, in defiance of any casual modification of term, deficiency of expression, or ambiguity, by equitable construction, be adopted as the tenor of engagement by the parties.

Adjudications in courts of equity for specific performance of contract have their general principles so firmly established, that it is deemed superfluous to be quoting authorities. They are numerous and decisive; that a contract deliberately entered into, and bona fide complied with on one side, shall be specifically enforced; and that a claim in equity, arising upon an antecedent purchase is preserved against a subsequent purchaser with notice, and it is presumed would defeat such subsequent purchase also, if united with posterior legal title in a third person.

It is presumed, that, in whatever point of view the claim of the Virginia Company is placed, the result will be the same, that they did bona fide fulfil their contract, and entitled themselves to the benefit of it; and they can suggest no reason why a specific performance on the part of the State was not complied with, after two payments in paper currency of the then circulation had been received by the treasurer, and receipted for, and the balance due tendered, unless a resolution of the Legislature of that State, passed the 11th of June, 1790, directing their treasurer to receive only gold and silver and paper medium, after a certain time in August following, in payment, might have had influence thereupon.

It does not appear, as your memorialists have understood, that any provision has been made by the honorable the Legislature of Georgia, for the redemption of the certificates tendered as stated. Your memorialists had an opportunity of subscribing a great many of those papers, which have not only been at but above par, but kept them together, expecting, from time to time, to pay them, whenever the Legislature of Georgia might think proper to direct their grant to issue, until such opportunity for subscription was lost, and, at this day, many of those certificates remain in the hands of individual members of the company.

It may be proper to state, that the Virginia Company directed suit to be instituted in the Supreme Court of the United States, and paid fees to counsel; but the same was suffered to be discontinued, after the passing of the act of Georgia in 1796, rescinding that of 1795, and the amendments of the constitution, as to the suability of States.

The resolution before your honorable House contemplates that the late commissioners should proceed finally to adjust the various claims. Your memorialists feel themselves in an inexpressibly embarrassed situation. With the deepest veneration and respect for those most honorable characters, your memorialists must state the awkward situation in which they must be placed, in exhibiting their claim before those who have already reported a decision, as well upon the claims derived under the act of 1789, as those of 1795. That the former have no equity, that the title of the latter cannot be supported; but that they recommend a resolution in favor of the latter, embracing nearly the whole of the reservation, and entirely excluding the former from any reasonable participation with them.

It is humbly submitted whether commissioners would proceed (unless specially authorized) but upon evidence competent in a court of law or equity, and whether from the nature of the equitable dispensation to be made amongst the claimants by this honorable House, inferior testimony, carrying with it rational conviction to the mind, will not be deemed competent.

Your memorialists state that, besides their loss of the specific subject, which, they humbly presume, they have shown themselves well entitled to, their expense, sacrifice made of property, immense fatigue, and personal hazard, in exploring the country, loss by certificates, and expense in making arrangements for extinguishing Indian claims, have gone far in impairing the private fortune of individual members.

Your memorialists pray this honorable House will consider the subject matter of their memorial, and recognize their right to such reasonable participation with other claimants, either in the ratio that the quantity of land which your memorialists may have shown themselves entitled to bears to the whole quantity claimed, or such other mode of relief, and in such proportion with others, as the justice and equity of their case may entitle them to. And your memorialists, as in duty bound, shall pray, &c.

WM. COWAN,

Agent on behalf of the Virginia Yazoo Company.

8th CONGRESS.

No. 87.

1st SESSION.

SOUTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA YAZOO COMPANY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 7, 1804.

Mr. NICHOLSON, from the committee to which was referred the memorials of Alexander Moultrie, of South Carolina, in behalf of himself and others, styling themselves the South Carolina Yazoo Company, and of William Cowan, agent of the Virginia Yazoo Company, made the following report:

It appears, from the memorials, and from the documents submitted with them, that, on the 21st day of December, 1789, the Legislature of the State of Georgia passed an act to dispose of certain vacant lands lying within that State, by which it was enacted, that the tract of country lying between the Mississippi and Tombigbee rivers, and extending from the parallel of latitude, which crosses the Mississippi at the mouth of Cole's creek to the northern boundary of the State, together with a third tract, lying on the Tennessee river, should, for two years from and after passing the act, be reserved as a pre-emption for three companies, styled the South Carolina Yazoo Company, the Virginia Yazoo Company, and the Tennessee Company; and that the Governor should issue grants for the said tracts, according to certain boundaries defined in the act, to these companies, respectively, if they should, within the two years, pay into the treasury of the State the following sums, viz: the South Carolina Yazoo Company, the amount of sixty-six thousand nine hundred and sixty-four dollars; the Virginia Yazoo Company, the amount of ninety-three thousand seven hundred and forty-one dollars; and the Tennessee Company, the amount of forty-six thousand eight hundred and seventy-five dollars.

It further appears from the documents exhibited, that the South Carolina Yazoo Company, on the 13th August, 1790, paid into the treasury of Georgia, in bills of credit, the sum of six hundred and thirty pounds, eighteen shillings; and, on the 11th of September, 1790, the sum of five hundred pounds, in paper medium; making, in the whole, one thousand one hundred and thirty pounds, eighteen shillings, in part of the purchase money; and that, on the 19th of December, 1791, the said company made a tender of the balance to the treasurer of the State. This tender was made, as it is alleged, partly in specie, partly in South Carolina paper medium, and partly in Georgia certificates; but was rejected by the treasurer, either upon a presumption that the law itself did not authorize the payment to be made in this description of paper, or in pursuance of a resolution of the same Legislature, passed in June, 1790, directing the treasurer to receive, after a certain day, in the month of August following, payment for these lands only in gold or silver, or the paper medium of the State.

The Virginia Yazoo Company, in a short time after the passing of the act, (but when not stated,) paid the sum of one thousand five hundred and fifteen dollars, in the paper currency of the State, as part of the purchase money; and, on the 12th of December, 1791, made a tender of the balance to the treasurer, in State certificates and orders on the treasury, for liquidated claims. This tender was also refused, as it is presumed, for the same reason which governed in the other case, as above stated.

In consequence of the neglect or refusal, on the part of these companies, to pay, within the stipulated period of two years, in such description of money as the treasurer of the State conceived himself authorized to receive, no grant issued, and the State ceded the same tract of country to the United States, by the articles of compact and cession, bearing date the — day of the —, 1802.

The money deposited by the Virginia Company was withdrawn by John B. Scott, who was their agent, but who, the memorialist alleges, was not authorized to receive the same. That deposited by the South Carolina Company is said still to remain in the treasury of Georgia.

Both companies now contend, that they have a claim against the United States for compensation for losses sustained by them in consequence of the refusal, on the part of Georgia, to carry what is called their contract into effect; and urge, that if the constitution of the United States had not been changed in relation to the suability of States, they could have compelled the State of Georgia to a specific execution of their contract. The act of 1789 is called a contract, because the memorialists say their petition to the Legislature upon which the law is founded, is referred to in the preamble of the act, and thereby becomes a part of it; and they state, that, in this petition, it was proposed to make the payments in that description of paper which was afterwards tendered. The committee have not seen the petition, but they conceive that the idea of the petition being engrafted into, and thereby becoming a part of, the act, is too novel in its nature to require any comment from them to prove its inadmissibility. They do not consider the transaction in the light of a contract, as the companies were not bound by it to a compliance, and might have refused, at any time, to make a payment, without subjecting themselves to any penalty whatever. They view the act as a conditional grant, not of the land itself, but of the pre-emption right; and the title of the companies was to be perfected upon their complying with the condition contained in it. This condition was the payment of a sum of money, and if it had been fulfilled on their part, would have given them a claim upon the honor and justice of the State, for a perfect and complete title. To show their compliance with the condition, they offer the evidence of their own petition, referred to in the preamble of the law, the depositions of some of the members of the Legislature, and the protest of the minority who voted against the passage of the act, to prove that it was the intention of the Legislature that payment might be made in that description of paper which was tendered.

The preamble of a statute is sometimes referred to, but always with caution, to assist in the interpretation of the enacting clauses; but the preamble of the act in question can throw no light on the present subject, as it contains no expression relative to the species of money or paper which was to be received in payment. The testimony of individuals who were members of the Legislature, and the protest of the minority, should be resorted to with still greater caution, as they are mere matters of opinion, and the same, or a greater number of other individuals, who were members of the same body, might have entertained opinions of a directly contrary nature. Indeed, the resolution of June, 1790, passed by the same Legislature who framed the act of 1789, directing the treasurer to receive in payment, from these companies, only gold and silver, and the paper medium of the State, is a stronger evidence of its spirit and intention, than any which has been offered, and this is in complete hostility to the pretensions of the present claimants. It is believed to be a sound doctrine, that laws should, if possible, be interpreted without calling in the aid of any foreign materials; and that the meaning of the Legislature should be collected from the language which they themselves have used to express it. If there should be an obscurity in one clause, all the others of the same act ought to be carefully examined, and compared with that in which the obscurity exists. If, in this manner, the meaning of the Legislature can be found, and that can be rendered clear which was obscure before, it is the safest method of interpretation, and is always preferred.

The memorialists appear to rely with much confidence upon one expression contained in the first section of the act of 1789, and this is the only one which favors their construction. They allege that, as the law declares they shall be entitled to a grant upon paying into the treasury the amount of sixty-six thousand and ninety-three thousand dollars, respectively, they were at liberty to pay, in any paper at that time current in Georgia, (except what was called Rattlesnake money,) whether bills of credit, certificates, or liquidated claims upon the treasury. The expression (the amount of sixty-six thousand dollars, &c.) is certainly not a very common one, as here applied, the word sum being more generally used in this sense; but it is by no means an incorrect expression. If the companies were authorized to give it the construction which they contend for, it might, with equal plausibility, be extended to wheat, flour, corn, tobacco, or almost any other article which is a subject of traffic between individuals, or, indeed, to the old continental currency, and to the bills of credit issued by any other State in the Union. This certainly cannot be permitted, as, in such case, the lands might have been paid for in paper not worth more than one dollar in the hundred. If, however, the use of the word amount, instead of the word sum, in the first section, creates any doubt as to the intention of the Legislature, this doubt will be removed by referring to the fourth section of the same act, which is in these words, viz: "That the treasurer of this State shall, on application of any agent of either of the said companies, within the said term of two years, receive the sum or sums of money which they are hereby, respectively, directed to advance; a certificate or certificates of which payments, under the hand of the treasurer, shall be a sufficient voucher for the Governor to issue the grants to the respective companies aforesaid." In this clause the intention of the Legislature is clearly and accurately expressed, as they speak of the sums of money which the companies were, by the act, directed to advance, thereby referring to the sixty-six thousand and ninety-three thousand dollars, which were to be paid for the land, and rendering it clear, beyond a doubt, that money alone was to be received.

The committee have been thus minute in investigating this case, because the memorialists appear to entertain an opinion that, if the State of Georgia had been guilty of a breach of faith, the United States were bound, in equity, to make good the damages, they being second purchasers, with notice. Without undertaking to decide this question, or to say whether it would be proper to place these companies on the same footing with those who claim under the act of 1795, the committee are decidedly of opinion that the Virginia Yazoo Company, and the South Carolina Yazoo Company, have no claim whatever upon the United States.

LAND CLAIMS IN TENNESSEE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 10, 1804.

Mr. DICKSON, from the committee to which were referred the memorial of the Legislature of the State of Tennessee, and certain resolutions of the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina, on the petition of Memucan Hunt, and others, claimants of lands in Tennessee, made the following report:

That the Indian boundaries, as established by existing treaties, include all the lands within the State of Tennessee, except the two following parcels, to wit: one at the east end of the State, bordering on the lines of the States of North Carolina and Virginia, supposed to contain about five millions of acres, and designated as East Tennessee; and one other parcel near the west end of the State, adjoining the boundary line of the State of Kentucky, supposed to contain about two and a half millions of acres, and known as West Tennessee; which two tracts of country are separated by a wilderness, claimed by the Cherokee nation of Indians, of about seventy-five miles in length, through which all communications from East to West Tennessee must pass.

The committee further report: That, in the cession of this district or territory, by the State of North Carolina to the United States, it is made a condition "that all entries made by, or grants made to, all and every person or persons whatsoever, agreeable to law, and within the limits hereby intended to be ceded to the United States, shall have the same force and effect as if such cession had not been made; and that all and every right of occupancy and pre-emption, and every other right reserved by any act or acts to persons settled on and occupying lands within the limits of the lands hereby intended to be ceded, shall continue to be in full force, in the same manner as if the cession had not been made, and as conditions on which said lands are ceded to the United States."

That it appears that the boundaries which have been guaranteed to certain Indian tribes, by a treaty concluded at Holston, on the 2d day of July, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-one, by the United States, do include some of the lands reserved by said act of cession, to which titles had been made by the State of North Carolina to many officers and soldiers of the continental line of that State, for services performed during the revolutionary war, and also to many citizens, for a legal consideration paid into the treasury, or land office of said State, in specie, or other certificates which had been issued for services or supplies furnished during said war.

The committee, having examined and considered the above facts, are of opinion that a purchase of this tract of country from the Indians would give complete redress, and that provision ought to be made, by law, to enable the President of the United States to extinguish, by treaty, the Indian title to said lands; they, therefore, recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That the sum of ——— dollars ought to be appropriated, by law, to defray the expense of such treaty or treaties as the President of the United States may deem it expedient to hold with any nation or nations of Indians south of the River Ohio.

1st SESSION.

CLAIMS ON THE LANDS CEDED BY NORTH CAROLINA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 16, 1804.

To the honorable the Speakers and Members of both Houses of the General Assembly of North Carolina, the petition of Thomas Dillon, for himself, and on behalf of others, humbly sheweth:

That, several years ago, your petitioner invested a considerable part of his property in lands within the chartered limits of the State of North Carolina; that, when your petitioner became seized of those lands, he was ignorant, in many cases, of any obstacle or impediment towards possessing and occupying the same. Deceived in his hopes on this head, he made it his business to examine into the justice and legality of his respective titles, and, to the conviction of his mind, found they were bottomed on an authority strictly legitimate, and constituting that essential combination of circumstances that ever distinguish the proceedings of a State faithful to its trust, and actuated by principles of justice and sound policy. Your petitioner, therefore, does not presume to insult the understanding of the members of your honorable House, by a recapitulation of the respective laws, giving existence to the several description of titles which emanated from the State of North Carolina. Suffice it to observe, that there are two of them that imperiously claim and demand the attention of the Legislature, even at the present period. First, the lands allotted for the officers and soldiers of the North Carolina line engaged in the revolutionary war. Second, those lands that were disposed of by an act of 1783, "for the redemption of specie and other certificates, and discharging the arrears due to the army." Thus, twenty years have elapsed since many individuals have invested their property on the faith and credit of the Government. Warrants of survey issued at that period; some are surveyed; some not, almost all are insecure.

The preamble of the cession act of 1789 states it, as one of the causes giving birth to the measure, "that it would be the means of establishing harmony and obtaining a more ample protection than they had heretofore received." But a cursory view of subsequent proceedings show the fallacy of those ill-founded hopes. One of the stipulations in said cession was "that the laws in use and force in the State of North Carolina should be in full force and virtue within the ceded territory, until the same should be repealed or altered by the legislative authority of said territory." It was legal, at that time, to survey land and occupy it, and no act of the Territory, while it remained as such, or of the State of Tennessee, since its organization, has forbid or prohibited any such measures. Yet the General Government have done it by that imperious act that imposes both fine and imprisonment on any person that should cut, mark, chop, or survey, within those bounds of circumvallation, that deprived individuals of what they were justly entitled to. Thus, instead of receiving a more ample protection, we are constrained to say that those rights have been abandoned to the fanciful chimera of civilizing the Indians. It is observable that the State of North Carolina, with the most perfect ideas of justice and humanity, did allot a sufficient portion of land for the use and benefit of the Cherokees for their hunting ground, while, at the same time, the several other legislative appropriations of land were subject to be acted on by the citizens of the State. Accordingly, certain bounds were laid off for the officers and soldiers, and one of the conditions of the cession act provides "that if the bounds laid off for that purpose shall not contain a sufficient quantity of land fit for cultivation, &c., then such officer or soldier shall be permitted to take it in any other part of said territory intended to be ceded." Notwithstanding many of these claims were laid out of those bounds, and now wholly within the Indian boundary, yet what remains is altogether insufficient; for there are upwards of one thousand six hundred military warrants still to be acted on, and it is doubtful whether the one-twentieth part of that number can be laid on lands, such as were contemplated by the cession act, exclusive of lands within the Indian lines. It is here alleged that, in the southeast corner of the military reservation, there are upwards of four hundred square miles, equal to two hundred and eighty-one thousand six hundred acres; and, in the southwest corner of said reservation, not less than three hundred and ten square miles, containing one hundred and ninety-eight thousand four hundred acres, every foot of which is within the present Indian boundary. It is, then, a question that may come home to every feeling mind, whether the hardy veteran, who has spent the prime of life and shed many a vital drop in defence of his country and its independence, shall this meritorious class of citizens be deprived of the fruits of their well-earned services? Hopeless as is the situation of many of them, they still look up with confidence to that legislative authority from which their claims are honorably derived. Yet, obvious as these facts are, and well-founded as to the claims, other great evils must necessarily arise, unless a speedy Congressional decision takes place, so as to enable us to occupy the land, or to make the necessary remuneration to the respective claimants. Many of the original holders of those claims have sold them, and almost as many were ignorant of any obstacle towards the settlement of them; suits have been multiplied on this score, and adjudications taken place, that the party could give no better title than what arose under a patent from the State. Nor is this all. Of the locators and surveyors of those lands, many of them are deceased, the remainder dropping off daily, so that it will be impossible, in a short time, to identify one tract out of a hundred; and thus shall we be left without a guide or compass to steer by in that great ocean of confusion which now presents itself to every thinking mind.

Of no less importance are the claims for land issuing from the office, commonly called John Armstrong's office, before alluded to, than those of the military ones. Upwards of two thousand warrants issued from that office; about one thousand two hundred of them have been acted on; three-fourths of which are laid within what is now called the Indian boundary. About eight hundred more still remain to be acted on, which will cover upwards of a million acres of land, the whole of which are, consequently, laid within said Indian lines.

The epoch of a general peace with the Indians induced an expectation in your petitioners that the General Government would attend to those grievances; and although there has been an appearance of seeing the Indian claims extinguished, yet have they been conducted in a manner so as to blast our fairest hopes. We allege that the appointment of commissioners, for the attainment of this desirable object, has been fatal, inasmuch as they have been Indian agents, or officers of the army, that were generally appointed. Consonant to this idea, the petitioners beg leave to state that Henderson's purchase from the Indians at Wataga, in 1774, was made to cover all the waters of Cumberland river; the purchase made by other individuals, at the Long Island on Holstein, (under the sanction of the State of Georgia,) included all the lands south of the North Carolina line, and north of the Tennessee, comprehending, perhaps, not less than one hundred and fifty miles long, and sixty miles broad. Both those purchasers are within the present Indian boundary; that is to say, the whole of the last mentioned one, and so much of Henderson's as is watered by Cumberland river. But, by treaties under the authority of the United States, both those justly acquired rights have been abandoned, to wit, by the treaty of Hopewell, held by Pickens, Hawkins, &c., wherein they guaranteed to the Cherokees the land lying west of Cumberland mountain, which comprehends a considerable portion of what is now called the State of Tennessee; and, until that period, the Cherokees never claimed a foot of soil west of said mountain. It was in vain one of the commissioners, appointed by the State of North Carolina, protested against the measure. The superior authority of Federal representatives prevailed.

The subsequent treaty held at Holstein, under the aforesaid authority, proved not less disastrous, for the claims of the officers and soldiers of the North Carolina line were, in some measure, abandoned. But, bad as this treaty was, it was executed still worse: for Pickens and Hawkins, who were two of the commissioners in running said line, gave a construction to the treaty that neither reason nor sound policy could justify. The treaty says (running westwardly) "to run to a point forty miles above Nashville." It is here confidently asserted that, in place of running forty miles above Nashville, said line was not run more than twenty-one miles, before they departed from the ridge on the northeast course. In like manner, one of the commissioners, residing in the State of Tennessee, did object to the construction of the treaty by the two other commissioners; but the opinion of the majority prevailed, and to the prejudice and great injury of the whites, in a tract of land not less than fourteen miles wide, and one hundred and fifty long, including two thousand one hundred square miles.

Your petitioners forbear further to dilate on the subject of those claims, but appeal to the justice and magnanimity of your honorable body, to the end that you pursue such constitutional measures as are most likely to obtain that redress that the nature and importance of their case demands, and your petitioners will pray, &c.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA.

IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS,
December 15, 1803.

The committee, to which the petition of Thomas Dillon, for himself and others, was referred, report:

That your committee have had the petition under consideration, and fully investigated the facts therein stated. It appears that Thomas Dillon, as well as divers other citizens of the State of North Carolina, made entries for lands in the office lately kept by John Armstrong, and faithfully paid the consideration, either in actual cash, or specie certificates, conformably to the existing laws at that time. That the faith of the State, by the said acts, was pledged that these entries should enure to the rightful owners or enterers, and that they were permitted to survey the lands so entered, and to perfect their claims by grant.

Your committee, in the investigation of this claim, adverted to the cession act of this State to the United States, of the lands lying west of a certain line or boundary, as therein described, by which it appears that the United States unequivocally stipulate to and with the State of North Carolina, to guaranty the claims of its citizens to lands lying within the said ceded territory; that, notwithstanding this solemn compact, the United States, by treaties subsequently held with the Cherokee and Chickasaw Indians, have absolutely forbid any person from surveying lands within the limits of the lands secured to the Indians aforesaid, thereby directly infringing the principles of the said cession act, and depriving the petitioners of their just rights.

Your committee, relying on the good faith of the United States, and believing that, whenever the more pressing exigencies of Government will permit, they will comply strictly with the conditions of the cession act aforesaid, and believing also that the petitioners ought to obtain redress through the interference of the Legislature of North Carolina, recommend the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Senators of this State in the Congress of the United States be directed, and the Representatives requested, to use their best endeavors to obtain redress for the petitioner, and all others in his situation, agreeably to the stipulations and conditions of the cession act aforesaid, either by extinguishing the Indian titles to the lands in question, or permitting the enterers to subscribe to the funded debt of the United States, to the amount of the consideration money aforesaid, the interest accruing thereon, and the actual expenditures in procuring surveys to be made on the lands so entered.

Resolved, further, That his excellency the Governor be requested to forward to the Senators and Representatives of this State, in the Congress of the United States, copies of the petition of the said Thomas Dillon, the report of your committee on the subject, and the foregoing resolution, which is submitted.

APPLICATIONS FOR DONATIONS TO ACTUAL SETTLERS IN THE MISSISSIPPI TERRITORY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 23, 1804.

Mr. NICHOLSON, from the committee to which was referred sundry memorials of the people of the Mississippi Territory, made the following report:

The petitioners state that a great increase of population would be derived to the Mississippi Territory, if Congress would consent to make a donation of lands to actual settlers, and pray that provision may be made by law for this purpose.

As a bounty of this kind has uniformly been refused by the United States, in their disposal of their public lands, the committee are of opinion that the prayer of the several petitions ought not to be granted.

ALTERATIONS OF THE LAWS FOR THE SALE OF PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 23, 1804.

Mr. NICHOLSON made the following report:

The committee appointed to inquire into the expediency of amending the several laws providing for the sale of the public lands of the United States, and to which was likewise referred several petitions from sundry persons residing in the State of Ohio, upon the same subject, report, and recommend to the House the adoption of the following resolutions:

1. Resolved, That from and after the — day of — next, the public lands of the United States, lying north of the River Ohio, shall be sold on payment of one-twentieth part of the purchase money at the time of making the purchase, and the remainder within sixty days thereafter; the first payment to be forfeited, and the sale to be void, unless the second payment is made within the time above limited.

2. Resolved, That from and after the said — day of — next, those townships which have heretofore been sold in half sections may be purchased, at the option of the purchaser, either in half or quarter sections; in which last case the half sections shall be divided, on the application, and at the expense of the purchaser, into two equal parts, by a line running due east and west.

3. Resolved, That from and after the said — day of — next, those townships which have heretofore been sold in entire sections, may be purchased either in entire or in half sections, at the option of the purchaser; in which last case, the sections shall be divided into two equal parts, on the application, and at the expense of the purchaser, by a line running due north and south.

4. Resolved, That the sections heretofore reserved in the Steubenville district, and in the tract lying between the two Miamis, south of the twelfth range of townships, shall, from and after the said — day of — next, be offered for sale on the same terms, and in the same quantities, as the other lands within the same townships, respectively.

5. Resolved, That the public lands north of the River Ohio, and above the mouth of Kentucky river, including the reserved sections mentioned in the preceding resolution, shall be offered for sale in half sections and in quarter sections, before the said — day of — next, at the respective land offices, to the highest bidder; provided, that no half section shall be sold for less than — per acre, and no quarter section for less than — per acre, to be paid within forty days after the day of sale.

6. Resolved, That the said lands may, after the said — day of — next, be purchased at the respective land offices, at the rate of — per acre, for each entire or half section, and at the rate of — per acre, for each quarter section.

7. Resolved, That no interest shall be charged to persons who have purchased, or who, before the said — day of — next, shall purchase any of the said lands, in pursuance of the act of the 10th of May, 1800, and shall not have alienated the same; provided, that they shall have discharged, and shall hereafter discharge, the instalments due on the said lands, on or before the days on which the same have or may become due; but the interest shall be demandable, in conformity with the provisions of the said act, from the date of the purchase, on each instalment, which shall not have been paid on the day on which the same became or shall become due.

8. Resolved, That certificates, receivable in payments for lands, shall be granted to persons entitled to the benefit of the last preceding resolution, and who shall have completed their payments before the passing of this act, for a sum equivalent to the interest which has been charged them, and from the payment of which it is intended they should be exonerated.

9. Resolved, That the authorities vested in, and the duties enjoined on, the surveyor general, shall extend to all the public lands to which the Indian title has been extinguished, north of the River Ohio, and east of the River Mississippi.

10. Resolved, That whenever any of the public lands shall have been surveyed, in conformity with the existing laws, they shall be divided by the Secretary of the Treasury into convenient districts; and a deputy surveyor shall, with the approbation of the said Secretary, be appointed for each district, by the surveyor general, whose duty it shall be to run and mark such lines as may be necessary for dividing and closing the surveys of the lands sold by the United States, for which services they shall receive — dollars for every mile thus surveyed and marked from the purchaser of such lands.

11. Resolved, That from and after the — day of — next, each of the registers and receivers of the land offices heretofore established by law, shall, in addition to the commission heretofore allowed, receive one-half per cent. on all the moneys paid for public lands, and an annual salary of five hundred dollars, the register and receiver of the land office at Marietta excepted, the annual salary of each of whom shall be only two hundred and fifty dollars.

12. Resolved, That from and after the — day of — next, the fees payable by virtue of the act of the 10th of May, 1800, for surveying expenses, patents, entry of lands, and certificates granted by the register, shall no longer be demandable from, and paid by the purchasers.

13. Resolved, That the two tracts of land lately purchased from the Indians on the Wabash, and between the Rivers Mississippi and Ohio, shall be surveyed and offered for sale, in the same manner, and on the same terms, as the public lands north of the River Ohio, and above the mouth of the River Kentucky, and in conformity with the preceding resolutions.

December 1, 1803.

SIR: The committee appointed to inquire into the expediency of amending the several laws providing for the sale of the public lands of the United States, discovering that a variety of objects, embraced by the several petitions referred to them, are connected with, and may materially affect the revenue, they have directed me to submit to you the following propositions, and to request such information as the nature of the subject may require.

Will the sales of the lands be retarded or accelerated; and how will the revenue be affected?

1st. By selling the lands in smaller tracts.

2dly. By charging no interest on the amount of sales until after the purchaser has made default in payment.

3dly. By selling for cash, instead of giving the credit now authorized by law.

4thly. By reducing the price of the lands.

5thly. By making grants of small tracts to actual settlers and improvers.

As from the nature of your official duties, your attention has necessarily been frequently drawn to the several laws providing for the sale of the public lands, the committee will thank you to point out any defects which may have occurred in carrying them into effect, and to suggest such amendments as may appear to you proper to remedy existing inconveniences.

I have the honor to be, sir,

Respectfully, your obedient servant,
JOSEPH H. NICHOLSON.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 2, 1804.

SIR: In conformity with the request contained in your letter of the first ultimo, I have the honor to communicate such observations respecting the proposed alterations in the laws providing for the sale of public lands, as have been suggested by their operation.

Under the present system, the public lands north of the River Ohio, and east of the Muskingum river, are sold only in sections of one mile square, and containing six hundred and forty acres each. The other lands north of the Ohio, and above the mouth of Kentucky river, are sold one half in sections, and the other half in half sections, containing three hundred and twenty acres each. No provision has yet been made by law for the sale of the reserved sections which are interspersed through those lands, nor for that of the tracts lying below the mouth of Kentucky river, and lately purchased from the Indians, one of which is situated on the Wabash river, around St. Vincennes, and the other between the Mississippi and Ohio, above the confluence of those two rivers.

The price at which all the lands offered for sale may be purchased is two dollars per acre, payable in specie or in six per cent. stock, at par, and in four equal instalments; the first of which must be paid at the time, and the three others within two, three, and four years after the time of making the purchase. In every instance, except in the case of persons who had made contracts with Judge Symmes for lands lying between the two Miamis, interest at the rate of six per cent. a year is charged on the three last instalments, from the date of the purchase; and, in every case, a discount at the rate of eight per cent. a year is allowed for prompt payment.

The cash price of the lands is, therefore, only one dollar and eighty-four cents per acre, except for lands lying between the two Miamis, for which contracts had been made with Judge Symmes, which may be paid for at the rate of one dollar and sixty-four cents per acre. It follows from thence, that, if all the lands were sold on the same terms as the last mentioned, that is to say, without charging interest until after the instalments had become due, it would operate a reduction on their cash price of twenty cents per acre.

The reasons which probably influenced the Legislature in fixing a price so much beyond what had been the usual terms on which vacant lands had heretofore been granted in the several States were, a wish to prevent monopolies and large speculations, and, at the same time, to secure a permanent revenue to the Union.

The first object has been fully obtained; and, although the proceeds of the sales have not been commensurate with the vast increase of population, more than nine hundred thousand acres have been sold in three years, on which near eight hundred thousand dollars have been received, and about eleven hundred thousand remain due by the purchasers.

It must, however, be observed that the price of public securities, at the time of passing those laws, would have reduced the real cash price of lands at about a dollar and a half per acre, and that the sales have been affected by the competition of lands held by individuals in the Connecticut reserve, in the military tracts, and in Kentucky, and which might generally be purchased for a less price than that set on the public lands.

A considerable reduction of the price might be considered as a waste of public property, and as promoting migration beyond its natural and necessary progress. It would certainly be injurious to private land holders, and, by throwing the lands into the hands of a few individuals, prevent that gradual and equal distribution of property which is the result of the present system. To reduce it only to what may be considered as the market price which actual settlers give for small tracts in similar situations, would only satisfy the demand for land created by the existing population, and without promoting migrations or speculations on a large scale, would increase the receipts in the treasury; provided that reduction was connected with another measure which is considered as of first importance for the security of that branch of the revenue.

It has been observed that about eleven hundred thousand dollars are due to the United States on account of preceding sales. Great difficulties may attend the recovery of that debt, which is due by nearly two thousand individuals; and its daily increase may ultimately create an interest hostile to the general welfare of the Union. It appears extremely desirable, in every point of view, that lands should hereafter be sold without allowing any other credit than that of forty days, now given for the payment of the first instalment; and, as that provision might be considered injurious to that part of the community who are not able to make large payments, it would seem proper to connect it with a moderate reduction in the price, and with a permission to purchase smaller tracts than is now allowed by law.

Supposing that the lands which are now sold in entire sections should be offered for sale in half sections; that those which are now sold in half sections should be offered for sale in quarter sections; and that the price of entire and half sections should be reduced to one dollar and twenty-five cents, and that of quarter sections to one dollar and a half per acre; it is believed that the benefits resulting from the present system would not be impaired, and that several important advantages would be obtained.

1. The price being still as high as that at which lands held by individuals in similar situations are generally sold, and higher than can be afforded for any other purpose than that of improving the land, or securing it for the use of the purchaser's family, monopolies and large speculations would be as effectually prevented as under the existing provisions.

2. The poorest individuals, as they cannot at present purchase less than three hundred and twenty acres, must, in order to become freeholders, be able to pay one hundred and sixty dollars, and become bound for four hundred and eighty more, payable within four years; and it is proper to observe that, if they have no other resources, it is almost impossible that they should, during the first four years of a new settlement, draw the means of payment from the produce of the land. By the proposed alteration, a man might, by the payment of two hundred and forty dollars, acquire a freehold of one hundred and sixty acres, without encumbering himself with any debt whatever. The difficulty of raising eighty dollars more at first is unimportant, if it shall be admitted that the subsequent payments must at present be provided for from other resources than those arising from the land itself; and, in every other respect, the purchaser will evidently be placed in a much more eligible situation.

3. Whatever revenue may be derived from that source will be collected in the most simple manner, and will be completely secured. There will be no outstanding debts, and the interest of every new purchaser will become identified with that of the Union.

4. It has already been observed, that the sales have not, by any means, been commensurate with the demand for land and the increase of population; they have been limited, partly by the competition of other lands in the market, and partly by the existing means of payment. Under the system, altered as has been suggested, they would be limited only by the last clause, and be altogether regulated by the amount of circulating medium acquirable by the purchases. It is evident, indeed, that it would be more easy to sell three hundred thousand acres at a dollar and a third, than two hundred thousand acres at two dollars per acre; and no doubt is entertained that the revenue would be not only secured, but also increased, by the proposed alterations.

The only difference to the United States will be, that they will transfer the property of a greater quantity of land for the same sum of money than they do at present. The estimated revenue of four hundred thousand dollars, derived from that source, is predicated on annual sales of two hundred thousand acres, at two dollars; or rather of about two hundred and twelve thousand acres, at one dollar and eighty-four cents per acre; two hundred and sixty-six thousand six hundred and sixty-six acres, at one dollar and a half, or three hundred and twenty thousand acres, at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, would produce an equal sum. It would, therefore, under the proposed alterations, cost annually to the United States about one hundred thousand acres more than at present, to raise a revenue equal to that which may be collected under the existing regulations. Compared with the quantity of land north of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi, not less, certainly, than one hundred and fifty millions of acres, the soil of which belongs to the United States, that difference is so trifling, and the effect which, in that respect, may result from the alteration, so distant, that neither of them seems to afford sufficient ground of objection.

A more serious difficulty will arise from former purchasers, who may complain that they should be left in a worse situation than those who shall purchase under the new arrangement. It is true that those persons have had the selection of the most eligible spots, in point of situation and of soil; yet, under all circumstances, and also in order to secure punctual payments, it might be expedient to release them from the payment of interest until after their instalments had become due. That provision which, it is believed, would be perfectly satisfactory, should be extended only in favor of those who shall discharge those instalments with punctuality, and who have not alienated the property. In the few cases where the purchasers have already completed their payments, certificates, receivable in payment for land, might be given to them for the sums which may have been charged for interest.

It is believed that the alterations which have been suggested will enable a great portion of the actual settlers to become purchasers; but the principle of granting them a right of pre-emption, exclusively of the abuses to which it is liable, appears irreconcilable with the idea of drawing a revenue from the sale of lands. Nor would the reduction of price, and especially the sale in smaller tracts, be an eligible measure, so far as respects the revenue, unless connected with a suppression of the credit which is now given to purchasers.

Should those outlines be adopted, it may be proper to provide that, before the reduction, either in the price or in the size of the tracts, shall take place, all the lands shall be offered at public sale, as on a similar occasion had been directed by the act passed on the 10th May, 1800; and some other modifications of less importance, though not immediately connected with that part of the subject, may, at the same time, be taken under consideration.

The powers of the surveyor general extend only over the lands lying north of the River Ohio, and above the mouth of the River Kentucky; it seems proper, on account of the late purchases, that they should be extended over all the public lands lying north of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi; for the surveys of the lands above the mouth of Kentucky river, to which the Indian title has been extinguished, being nearly completed, it is hardly necessary to create a new office for the others; and it would be useful to provide, that that officer should also ascertain, by astronomical observations, the situation of some of the most important points of that part of the country.

The surveys are now executed by assistants, appointed by the surveyor general, whose offices cease with the completion of their work. For the purpose of making legal resurveys, when called on by the parties, of surveying and marking the lines which, in conformity with the mode prescribed by law, have been left open, and also of subdividing the tracts into quarter sections, in pursuance of the proposed modifications, it would be eligible to have "district surveyors" appointed, who should receive, for their several services, stated fees, to be paid by the parties for whose benefit they may be rendered. That arrangement, exclusively of other advantages, would preclude the necessity of any advance from the treasury for the subdivision of lands into quarter sections.

Whatever price it may be thought proper to fix on the lands, it will be more simple and convenient for the purchasers, that, with the exception of the last mentioned expense, the several fees now paid to the United States for surveying expenses and for patents, as well as those paid to the registers for entry and certificates, and which, in the purchase of half a section, amount altogether to about three cents and a half per acre, should be incorporated with the price.

The receivers of public moneys receive now one per cent. on all moneys paid into the treasury; and the registers one half per cent. on the same, besides the fees, amounting to about two thirds per cent. more, the suppression of which is submitted. Those compensations are much lower, in proportion to the revenue collected, than those allowed to most of the officers employed in the collection of the other revenues of the Union, and appear inadequate to the responsibility attached to the offices, and to the rate of talents and knowledge necessary to discharge their duties. The propriety of increasing the commission of both offices one half per cent. and of giving to each of them a small annual salary, as an equivalent for clerk hire and office rent, is respectfully submitted. The salary might, in that instance, be five hundred dollars to each officer, those of the Marietta district excepted, for whom two hundred and fifty dollars would be sufficient. This, on account of the suppression of the register's fees, would give a greater increase to the receivers than to the registers; which, considering the risk attached to the safe keeping of the public moneys, appears reasonable.

The expediency of excluding the reserved sections from the sales is doubtful, as the destruction of timber is perhaps more than equivalent to the supposed increase of value, and it is particularly complained of in the Steubenville district, and in the tract lying between the two Miamis, where the greater part of the adjacent lands is sold and occupied.

The preceding observations have been made only in relation to the lands north of the River Ohio. It would be inexpedient to apply many of the regulations which have been submitted to the public lands south of the State of Tennessee, and I will beg leave to make a separate communication respecting the operation of the law passed during the last session on that subject.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

LAND CLAIMS IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 25, 1804.

Mr. LATTIMORE, from the committee to which were referred two petitions, one from the Legislature of the Mississippi Territory, and the other from sundry residents and claimants of lands on the Alabama river, and on the east side of the river and bay of Mobile, praying Congress to confirm certain claims to lands therein specified, made the following report:

The claims stated in the above mentioned petitions are as follows:

The first class of claims is founded upon a warrant of survey granted by the Spanish Government, and, in consequence thereof, the lands actually surveyed, and the proprietor furnished with a plat and certificate, by the surveyor, executed previous to the 27th of October, 1795; which species of title, the petitioners say, the inhabitants have been in the habit of considering as an absolute right, although not completed by patent; and that such titles have been permitted to descend by inheritance, or to be transferred by sale, although no improvement or actual settlement had been made.

The second is to lands which had been cultivated and improved for many years, but, by the rotation of crops, and the necessary repose to be given to the soil, the cultivation thereof had been discontinued during the year 1795.

The third is to lands lying east of the Tombigbee river, on which are settled a considerable number of persons, holding such rights as are customary in other parts of the territory, and to which, the petitioners state, the Indian title has long since been extinguished.

The fourth is to lands held by warrant of survey and improvement, the claimants being minors, in whose name, the petitioners state, their parents had preferred making application to the Spanish Government for lands on which large improvements are now made, and the loss of which, it is said, would reduce to beggary and misery families which are now comfortably settled.

In the third condition of the first article of the "articles of agreement and cession," between the United States and the State of Georgia, it is provided "that the United States for the period, and until the end of one year after the assent of Georgia to the boundary established by this agreement shall have been declared, may, in such manner as not to interfere with" other stipulations specified in that agreement "dispose of, or appropriate, a portion of the lands" ceded by that agreement, "not exceeding five millions of acres, (or of the proceeds of the said five millions of acres,) or of any part thereof, for the purpose of satisfying, quieting, or compensating for, any claims other than those therein before recognized, which may be made to the said lands, or to any part thereof: It being fully understood that, if an act of Congress making such disposition or appropriation shall not be passed into a law within the above mentioned period of one year, the United States shall not be at liberty, thereafter, to cede any part of the said lands on account of claims which may be laid to the same, other than those recognized by the preceding conditions, nor to compensate for the same; and in case of any such cession or compensation, the present cession of Georgia to the right over the lands thus ceded or compensated for shall be considered as null and void, and the lands thus ceded or compensated for shall revert to the State of Georgia."

In the first section of an act passed at the last session of Congress, entitled "an act regulating the grants of land, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee," it is enacted, "that any person or persons, or the legal representatives of any person or persons, who were resident in the Mississippi Territory on the 27th day of October, 1795, and who had, prior to that day, obtained either from the British Government of West Florida, or from the Spanish Government, any order or warrant of survey for lands lying within the said territory, to which the Indian title had been extinguished, and which were, on that day, actually inhabited and cultivated by such person or persons, or for his or their use, shall be confirmed in their claims to such lands, in the same manner as if their titles had been completed: Provided, however, that no such incomplete title shall be confirmed, unless the person in whose name such warrant or order of survey had been granted, was, at the time of its date, either the head of a family, or above the age of twenty-one years."

In the second section of the act aforesaid, it is further enacted, "that to every person, or to the legal representative or representatives of every person who, being either the head of a family, or of twenty-one years of age, did, on that day of the year 1797, when the Mississippi Territory was finally evacuated by the Spanish troops, actually inhabit and cultivate a tract of land in the said territory, not claimed by virtue either of the preceding section, or of any British grant, or of the articles of agreement and cession between the United States and the State of Georgia, the said tract of land thus inhabited and cultivated shall be granted."

The assent of Georgia to the boundary established by the articles of agreement and cession, having been declared on the 16th day of June, 1802, some doubts may possibly arise whether, after the 16th day of June, 1803, Congress possessed a power to confirm any claims to lands within the Mississippi Territory, other than such as are embraced by the appropriation in the eighth section of the act above mentioned. The first class of claims hereinbefore enumerated, not being recognized, and the fourth being expressly precluded by that act, your committee are of opinion that the further consideration of this part of the subject ought to be postponed to the next session of Congress.

The second class of claims being, in the opinion of your committee, recognized and provided for by the act aforesaid, it belongs to the commissioners appointed under that act to judge and determine between claims circumscribed as these are described to be in the petition, and those to lands which may have been altogether abandoned.

The third class of claims being founded on such principles as are recognized by the act aforesaid, and supported by such evidences as support claims to lands in all other parts of the territory, and, therefore, in the opinion of your committee, fully embraced by the appropriation; the only question that remains is, whether it be expedient to confirm those claims, by repealing so much of the eighth section of the act aforesaid, as provides "that no certificate shall be granted for lands lying east of the Tombigbee river." It appears, by a note from the Secretary of War, that the running and marking of the lines between the Choctaw and Creek nations, and the United States, in that quarter, have been completed; that these lines have been run, in conformity to a cession made to the British Government, while that Government possessed the Floridas, and that some lands, claimed by two or three settlers, are on the Indian side of the line, to the eastward of the Mobile. Hence your committee conclude, that nearly all the lands claimed by the petitioners, east of the Tombigbee river, are out of the Indian boundary line, and that, of consequence, the Indian titles thereto are extinguished.

Whatever good reasons, besides a want of the information now obtained, may have produced an insertion of the prohibitory clause above cited, when the law in question was enacted, your committee are of opinion that no reasons for a continuance of that prohibition now exist, and, therefore, respectfully recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That so much of the eighth section of the act passed at the last session of Congress, entitled "an act regulating the grants of land, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee," as provides "that no certificate shall be granted for lands lying east of the Tombigbee river," ought to be repealed: Provided, that no certificate shall be granted for any lands to which the Indian title has not been extinguished.

Resolved, That the commissioners appointed in pursuance of an act passed at the last session of Congress, entitled "an act regulating the grants of land, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee," be authorized and required to make, on or before the 1st day of December next, a full report to the Secretary of the Treasury, of all claims that may be laid before them, for lands held by warrant of survey and improvement, in cases where the claimants were minors, and not heads of families, at the time such warrants were issued, with the circumstances which occasioned the issuing of such warrants, and the validity which has been considered as attached to them,

1st SESSION.

CLAIM TO LAND ADJOINING THE CITY OF NATCHEZ.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 26, 1804.

To the honorable the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The petition of William Dunbar, of the Mississippi Territory respectfully sheweth:

That your petitioner obtained from the Spanish Government of Natchez a title or conveyance to a lot of land, in compensation of services; that this title being dissimilar in certain respects to all others existing within the territory, a doubt has arisen in the minds of some persons, (however equitable or even legal the title may be,) whether the commissioners of land claims can, consistently, under the articles of agreement and cession between the United States and the State of Georgia, confirm the same: notwithstanding this uncertainty, your petitioner did intend to submit his title to the investigation of the commissioners; and if their decision should prove unfavorable, he entertained no doubt that a speedy relief might be obtained by application to Congress. But this supposed uncertainty of the legality of your petitioner's title, has engendered in the minds of the infant corporation of the town of Natchez, a possibility of snatching from your petitioner the well-earned fruits of his labor in the service of the former government; a petition has, therefore, been presented (without the knowledge of your petitioner) in the name of the corporation, to your honorable body, praying that the title to all vacant lands within the limits of the city may be confirmed to them by Congress, directing their views principally to the lot of your petitioner, in the expectation that, should the commissioners fail to confirm his title, the first grant obtained from Congress might entirely defeat his just expectations of receiving relief by application to your honorable body.

Your petitioner being thus constrained to abandon his first intentions, and step forward in his own defence against an attack made within the walls of Congress, has now the honor of submitting respectfully to your honorable body the decision of his claim.

Your petitioner's title stands upon the following ground: A tract of land was granted by patent from the Spanish Government to an individual; this land was sold by the first to a second individual, and considerably improved: the Spanish Government purchased a part of this tract, with a view to erect public buildings, and establish a town; and the plan of a small town was accordingly traced out upon one part of it; and on another part, the governor caused to be erected, at his private expense, a large building, destined for his own residence, but, before it was completed, it was blown down by a hurricane. After the Spanish treaty was known at Natchez, but before the withdrawing of the Spanish Government, your petitioner applied to the governor for compensation of various unsatisfied services, and a lot containing twenty-seven arpens, (about twenty-three English acres,) upon which the governor's private building had been erected, was offered to be conveyed, in satisfaction of your petitioner's demand, by his excellency, in the double capacity of governor and private proprietor, as will more clearly appear from an inspection of the Spanish titles herewith presented. Your petitioner accepted the proposition, believing in the legality of the proffered title, for the following reasons: because this land was no part of the King's public domain, but a portion of an improved tract, the title of which was derived from an ancient patent; and because the purchase by the Spanish Government constituted a private not a public property, disposable under an article of the treaty which permitted the two governments and individuals, reciprocally, to withdraw their settlements; which expression could have no meaning, if the right of selling or disposing is denied; for settlements cannot by any other mode be withdrawn for the benefit of the holder.

Your petitioner prays the patience of your honorable body, while he draws from the annals of the United States an example in favor of his claim. It appears (if your petitioner be rightly informed) that when the State of Pennsylvania annulled the right of the proprietors over the public domain of that State, her sense of justice confirmed to the family of the Penns (notwithstanding their adherence to the enemies of the republic) all their manors and every portion of land which had been by public act separated from the public domain, although existing in the hands of the proprietors: it is not presumable that the justice and magnanimity of the United States will deny to a friendly power, relinquishing in their favor a valuable cultivated country, the privilege of compensating one of their servants, but now a citizen attached to the United States, with a grant of a pittance of land, long separated from the public domain, and deriving its title from a patent recognized by the articles of agreement and cession between the United States and the State of Georgia.

Your petitioner presumes that his claim will present itself before your honorable body in a highly equitable, probably in a legal form, and prays that the premises may be taken into consideration, and such relief granted by a confirmation of the title of your petitioner as may seem fit to the wisdom of Congress.

And your petitioner shall ever pray, &c.

WILLIAM DUNBAR.

PETITION.

May it please the Governor:

William Dunbar, assistant surveyor of this district, respectfully sheweth: That he hath, for a considerable time, exercised the functions of his employment, without any gratification on the part of the Government, or any other recompense except ordinary fees. It is known to your excellency that he has been employed in matters of public service, such as the laying off and measuring the lots of this city, forming plans of the elevations in the vicinity of the fort, copying charts, and several journeys performed, by order of your excellency, for the public service, at his own expense; for which he has not been recompensed otherwise than by the promise of a grant of land within this district, in compensation of those services; but as the treaty between his majesty and the United States presents an obstacle to such grants, he respectfully prays your excellency will be pleased to present to the consideration of his excellency the governor general of these provinces the services which the petitioner hath rendered, in order that he may be pleased to grant him such gratification as he may judge proper; or otherwise, he prays your excellency that, as his majesty possesses in the vicinity of this city a lot of twenty or thirty arpens of vacant land, being a part of what was purchased and paid for to Don Stephen Minor, you will be pleased to concede to him the said lot by way of grant or conveyance, in consequence of its being a private property, and not belonging to the domain; in which case the petitioner will consider himself sufficiently recompensed, and hopes to receive this favor from the benevolence of your excellency.

WILLIAM DUNBAR.

NATCHEZ, April 4, 1797.

As Mr. William Dunbar will be satisfied for his services with the recompense only of a grant of the vacant land adjoining this town, he will, therefore, measure the said lot for himself; when this shall be done, he shall make me a return of his operation, for the purpose of issuing a title of property.

MANUEL GAYOSO DE LEMOS.

NATCHEZ, April 5, 1797.

I certify having measured, and bounded in my favor, the vacant lot mentioned in the foregoing decree, containing twenty-six acres and ninety-one perches, French superficial measure; bounded on one side by the lots and streets of this city, and on the other sides by lands belonging to the fort of his majesty, and those belonging to Captain Stephen Minor, as is represented by the foregoing figured plat, the boundaries being fixed according to the explanations of said plat, without paying attention to the variation of the magnetic needle, which variation is eight degrees and a half from north towards the east.

In witness whereof, I sign these presents, in Natchez, the 11th of April, 1797.

WILLIAM DUNBAR,
Assistant Surveyor.

Whereas Mr. William Dunbar, assistant surveyor of this district, will consider himself recompensed for the services performed by him for this Government, as mentioned in his memorial, if the land which he solicits be granted to him; in consideration, therefore, of his aforesaid services, performed without pay or gratification whatsoever, I grant, as by these presents I do hereby grant, by virtue of powers vested in me to that effect, to Mr. William Dunbar, twenty-six arpens ninety-one perches of land, square measure, according to the foregoing return of survey, made by him in compliance with my decree; bounding on one side with the lots and streets of this city, and on other sides with lands belonging to the fort of his majesty, and those of the property of Captain Stephen Minor, including, within the said twenty-six arpens and ninety-one perches, square measure, the lots which, with permission, I had appropriated to myself in the year 1790, and upon which I had, at that time, caused buildings to be erected in front of the lot granted to the late Mr. Benjamin Monsanto. In consequence whereof, I grant and give unto him the property of the aforesaid twenty-six arpens and ninety-one perches of land, being a portion of a greater quantity which his majesty purchased and paid for to Captain Stephen Minor, in order that he may dispose of the same as his absolute property, and make use of the fruits thereof, regulating himself by the said return of survey, and observing the prescribed conditions.

Given under my hand, and sealed with the seal of my arms, and countersigned by the King's secretary for this Government, at Natchez, the 19th of April, 1797.

MANUEL GAYOSO DE LEMOS,
Brigadier of the royal armies, governor military and civil of the post and district of Natchez, &c.

REVISION OF THE LAWS FOR THE SALE OF LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 27, 1804.

Mr. NICHOLSON made the following report: The committee appointed to inquire into the expediency of amending the several laws providing for the sale of the public lands of the United States, submit a further additional report, in part, and recommend the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the two boards of commissioners, appointed in pursuance of an act passed at the last session of Congress, entitled "An act regulating the grants of land, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee," be authorized to employ, each, an assistant clerk, and a translator of the Spanish language, to assist them in the despatch of the business which may be brought before them.

Resolved, That each of the said boards be invested with the same powers, to compel the attendance of witnesses, as are now exercised by the courts of law of the United States.

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized to employ an agent, whose duty it shall be to appear before the said commissioners, and defend the rights of the United States.

Resolved, That when any grant shall be produced to the said commissioners for lands, which were not, at the date of the said grant, or within — thereafter, occupied by or for the use of the grantee, the grant shall not be considered as conclusive evidence of title, but the burthen of proof of its validity shall fall upon the claimant.

Resolved, That the tract of country bounded on the south by a parallel of latitude, passing by the mouth of Yazoo river; on the east by the State of Georgia; on the north by the State of Tennessee; and on the west by the Mississippi river, shall be annexed to the Mississippi Territory.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 5, 1804.

SIR: I have now the honor to enclose the copy of a letter received since my communication of the 2d instant, from the commissioners appointed under the act "regulating the grants of land, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee," for the adjustment of certain claims to the said lands west of the Pearl river.

As the commissioners have a right to give what they may deem the legal construction of the statute, it is presumable from their letter that, unless otherwise directed by Congress, they will extend the benefits of the second section of the law to persons who inhabited and cultivated a tract of land in the Mississippi Territory in the month of March, 1798, which, contrary to the impression when the law was passed, they state to be the date of the final evacuation by the Spanish troops. There are no documents in this department by which the circumstances attending that event, and what ought to be considered as its real date, can be ascertained.

A donation of land to those settlers who migrated into the territory subsequent to its evacuation by the Spanish troops, instead of the right of pre-emption contemplated by the law, does not seem more proper in that case than in that of the actual settlers on the public lands north of the Ohio, to whom it has been uniformly refused, and who have not even, except in one instance, been allowed a right of pre-emption. How far, also such an alteration would be consistent with the articles of agreement and cession between the United States and Georgia, appears doubtful.

The suggestions of the commissioners on the subject of fraudulent and antedated Spanish grants, seem to deserve particular consideration. It is ascertained, by information received through various and authentic channels, that the same frauds are attempted on a much larger scale in Louisiana; and it appears desirable that principles should be adopted in relation to those grants in the Mississippi Territory, which may hereafter be applied to similar cases in the newly acquired territories. The commissioners may not only be vested with sufficient powers to compel the attendance of witnesses, and counsel be employed to defend the rights of the United States, but since it cannot be doubted that antedated grants are in existence, it might be provided that the grants shall not alone be considered as conclusive evidence, and that in all cases where the land claimed was not occupied by or for the benefit of the grantee, at the time of or within a limited period after the date of the grant, the burthen of the proof of its validity shall fall on the claimant. For the purpose of showing the magnitude of the fraudulent speculations attempted on that ground, and at this time in Louisiana, extracts of letters from two public officers of the United States are enclosed.

The assistance of a Spanish translator seems indispensable to enable the commissioners to carry into effect the provisions of the act; and an assistant clerk would certainly contribute to the despatch of the business committed to their care.

Permit me to remark, though not immediately connected with the disposal of the public lands, that the Mississippi Territory is bounded on the north by a parallel of latitude passing by the mouth of the Yazoo river. The tract of country ceded by Georgia to the United States, which lies between that parallel and the State of Tennessee, not being included in any State or Territory, serious inconveniences may arise in the prosecution of crimes and offences against the United States, committed within its boundaries.

I have the honor to be, with great respect,
Sir, your obedient humble servant.
ALBERT GALLATIN.

Honorable JOSEPH H. NICHOLSON.

WASHINGTON, MISSISSIPPI TERRITORY,

December 16, 1803.

The commissioners appointed under the act "regulating the grants of land and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States, south of the State of Tennessee," passed the last session of Congress, having met and formed a board on the 1st instant at this place, agreeably to the directions of that act, proceeded to business; and, upon an attentive review of the law, with a slight understanding of the business to be performed by it, they beg leave to suggest several things which appear as defects in that law.

The second section of the law makes a donation of land, not exceeding six hundred and forty acres, to a certain description of persons, "who did on that day of the year 1797, when the Mississippi Territory was finally evacuated by the Spanish troops actually inhabit and cultivate," &c. Now it seems that the final evacuation of the territory by the Spanish troops took place on the 30th day of March, in the year 1798. It is doubtful, therefore, which of these periods shall be observed by the board in regulating those donations. Government will see the propriety of rectifying this, and, in the mean time, the commissioners conclude to observe the time of the final evacuation, considering that to be the intention of the Legislature.

The sixth section gives the board of commissioners power to administer oaths and examine witnesses, but no express power to enforce their attendance; nor are they allowed any executive officer to attend the board or execute process, though the law has submitted to their determination more important matter than, perhaps, comes before any court in the Union. The board are of opinion, from the best information they can get, that many of the claims to be made are fraudulent, and to prove which will require a variety of testimony, which they are informed exists in the territory, and, if not procured in opposition to those false and fraudulent claims, will leave but little land for the United States. And here the board would also suggest the propriety of the appointment of some person, whose business it shall be to procure this evidence, and to advocate the rights of the United States; and, at the same time that the board suggest this, they declare their intention to use every means in their power to secure the interest of the United States, as well as to do justice to the individuals; but the impropriety, if not impossibility, of their acting in this double capacity of judge and advocate, will, it is presumed, be obvious to every person conversant in business of this kind.

The board also observe that most of the title papers of those who claim under the Spanish Government are in the Spanish language, and as the commissioners do not perfectly understand that language, they are forced to prevail on the parties to have them translated before they produce them for decision; this is suggested, in order that Government may consider the propriety of appointing some person capable of making a true and faithful translation on oath. In the mean time the board must use the translator as a witness produced by the party; and yet they are sensible of the inconvenience and danger of this mode.

The board further observe that the law requires "perfect and correct minutes of the proceedings, decisions, meetings, and adjournments of the board, together with the evidence on which such decisions are made; which books," &c. Now the board conceive that those expressions include both written and unwritten evidence to be recorded by their clerk, as well in relation to claims which may be rejected as those allowed. They also find that most of the claims to be made, as well those founded on grants as otherwise, will require witnesses, and some of them many, (even where no fraud is suggested, which will often be the case,) to prove that the conditions of the grant, settlement, or laws under which they claim, have been complied with, so as to entitle the party to a confirmation of title; all of which, together with the translations, must be recorded by their clerk. The board, therefore, respectfully suggest the necessity of allowing an assistant clerk; or they apprehend they will necessarily be detained much beyond the time in which they could otherwise complete the business assigned them; and in this application they are the more solicitous, inasmuch as they find the business more considerable, and requires a greater length of time than, it is presumed, was contemplated at the passing of the law, especially as by far the greater part, perhaps nine-tenths of the business, comes within the jurisdiction of this board, as will appear by two letters of his excellency Governor Claiborne to the Secretary of State; the first dated on the 5th day of November, 1802, and the other on the 20th day of January, 1803, to which they beg leave to refer.

The commissioners respectfully suggest the expediency and justice of bringing the claimants described in the third section of the act within the provisions of the section; or, at least, to allow them a quantity of land not exceeding — acres. This additional provision for actual settlers is suggested from the opinion which those settlers entertained at the time of settling, of the liberality of the General Government towards those who should venture with their families into this insulated territory. Most of those people are poor, and claim but a small quantity of land, which they are not able to purchase, and without such a provision, they must leave their little habitations or become tenants; and it is conceived that this additional provision will not interfere with the intention of the law, which was not to exclude the poor and honest settler striving to raise his family, but those of a different character.

All which is respectfully submitted by

THOMAS RODNEY.

Secretary of the Treasury of the U. S.

Extract of a letter from the Mississippi Territory, dated September 8, 1803.

"But gaining a knowledge of some circumstances, which, although not immediately connected with my department, I deem of high importance to my country, and therefore think it my duty to disclose them without delay.

"In consequence of information from numerous and respectable sources, I am compelled to believe that practices, highly fraudulent and injurious to the United States, are very prevalent in the newly acquired Territory of Louisiana.

"I have no doubt of the correctness of my information, that a vast number of adventurers, many of them from this territory, are daily making extensive surveys on the west side of the Mississippi; and Spanish officers have lately set up claims to, and are now disposing of, large tracts, some even sixty miles square, at reduced prices; in some instances not more than ten cents per acre.

"It seems that some respectable citizens of this territory, who have spurned the nefarious offer, have been invited to a participation in this harvest of iniquity; the inviters alleging that land of the first quality might be obtained for a few cents per acre; and, respecting titles, as good may be had (say they) as those by which lands are held on this side of the river, (probably antedated Spanish grants.)

"A knowledge of former transactions in this territory, during the interval between the treaty of 1795 and evacuation by the Spanish Government, will lead one to an easy solution of the mystery by which this speculation will be veiled. The warrant of survey, the surveyor's certificate, and the final grant, will bear concurrent date, prior to the cession of Louisiana to France.

"I am told that in most, if not in all cases, these surveyors are Spanish subjects, and their assistants and chain carriers Spanish soldiers; who will probably all move off with the Spanish Government. I therefore apprehend that for any tribunal hereafter to discriminate between the just and the fraudulent claim will be difficult, even if oral testimony be admitted; but if, to its exclusion, the Spanish record be paramount evidence, impossible."

Extract of a letter from New Orleans, dated September 29, 1803.

"We are told that your Government is treating with Spain for the purchase of West Florida; and the intendant here, probably foreseeing the cession, has opened a sale within these few days, for the uninhabited lands in that province; and orders of survey have, I believe, been issued for three or four hundred thousand acres.

No individual thinks of purchasing less than forty to fifty thousand acres, the value of which is supposed may be estimated from twelve to twenty-five cents per acre, to be paid for by different instalments. I presume that within ten days from this time, orders of survey will be issued for every acre of vacant land in West Florida. No lands are yet offered for sale in Louisiana, but I think it not improbable there will be soon.

NOTE.—The writer, living in New Orleans, was not aware that the western part of the British province of West Florida makes part of the territories ceded to the United States by France.

DEAR SIR: You have no guess how the United States are imposed on by the Spanish officers, since they have heard of the cession of Louisiana: grants are daily making for large tracts of land and dated back; some made to men who have been dead fifteen or twenty years, and transferred down to the present holders. These grants are made to Americans, with a reserve of interest to the officer who makes them; within fifteen days the following places have been granted, to wit: forty-five acres choice of the lead mines, sixty miles from this, heretofore reserved to the Crown of Spain; the iron mine on Wine creek, with ten thousand acres around it, about eighty miles from this place, and formerly reserved by the Crown of Spain; sixty thousand acres, the common touching St. Louis, heretofore given by the Crown of Spain to the inhabitants of the village; the tin mines, (though of doubtful value,) and fifteen thousand acres adjoining; and many other grants of ten, fifteen, twenty, and thirty thousand acres have been made. I could name persons as well as places."

WARRANTS OF SURVEY ISSUED BY THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT OF WEST FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 13, 1804.

Mr. NICHOLSON, from the committee to which was referred the petition of Matthew Phelps, in behalf of himself and others, made the following report:

The petitioners state that, under the claim of, and in connexion with, the Company of Military Adventurers, they settled in the Mississippi Territory, between the years 1774 and 1780, in virtue of warrants of survey issued to them by the British Government of West Florida; but, in consequence of that country having been taken possession of by the Spaniards, during the revolutionary war, they abandoned their settlements, and now pray that some provision may be made, by law, to compensate them for those lands on which they had heretofore settled.

The claim of the Company of Military Adventurers was laid before the House during the last session, and the subject was fully discussed. At that time Congress refused to make provision for them, under an impression, it is presumed, that they were not entitled to the consideration of the Government; and as the five millions of acres, reserved in the convention with Georgia, were, during the last year, appropriated for the purpose of compensating claims other than those of the Military Adventurers, and to their exclusion, the committee are of opinion that Congress are not authorized to compensate these without the consent of the State of Georgia.

They, therefore, recommend that the petitioners have leave to withdraw their petition.

ILLINOIS AND WABASH COMPANY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 14, 1804.

Mr. LEIB made the following report:

The committee to which was referred the petition of John Shee, "sole survivor of the committee appointed and authorized to solicit, manage, and negotiate the affairs of the Illinois and Wabash Company with Congress," submit the following report, viz:

That the petitioner, in behalf of the Illinois and Wabash Company, claims a certain tract of country, now the property of the United States, described in two deeds, the one bearing date July 5, 1773, and the other October 18, 1775, which are said to have been given to William Murray and others, who are styled the Illinois Company, and to Lord Dunmore and others, who are denominated the Wabash Company, by the Illinois and Piankeshaw Indians.

That the petitioner has proposed to surrender and convey to the United States all the land described, or meant to be described, in the above mentioned deeds from the Indians, on the proviso that the United States reconvey to the company one-fourth part of the said land.

It does not satisfactorily appear to the committee that the Illinois and Wabash Companies had authority to make the contract for the lands claimed by them; neither has it been made to appear that the grantors were authorized by the Indian nations to make the sale. No acknowledgment by the Indians is made of the purchase by the companies, in the treaties lately concluded by the United States with the Indian nations. The lands claimed by the petitioner have been ceded to the United States by treaty, and an adequate compensation stipulated for them; the committee are, therefore, of opinion that, inasmuch as the legal title of the petitioner is not established, and inasmuch as the United States are already rightfully possessed of those lands, and the grantors have received an adequate compensation, and inasmuch as a further allowance for the said territory would be a gratuity to the petitioner, which the representatives of the nation cannot justly award, the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted.

DESCRIPTION OF THE LANDS AND SETTLERS IN THE VICINITY OF DETROIT.

COMMUNICATED TO CONGRESS FEBRUARY 17, 1804.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

Information having been received some time ago that the public lands in the neighborhood of Detroit required particular attention, the agent appointed to transact business with the Indians in that quarter was instructed to inquire into and report the situation of the titles and occupation of the lands, private and public, in the neighboring settlements. His report is now communicated, that the Legislature may judge how far its interposition is necessary to quiet legal titles, confirm the equitable, to remove the past, and prevent future intrusions, which have neither law nor justice for their basis.

TH. JEFFERSON.

February 16, 1804.

DETROIT, July 25, 1803.

SIR: I have endeavored, in the following report, to ascertain and state concisely all those facts concerning which I imagined the Government would wish to be informed. It is little more than an outline, exhibiting the prominent features. The geographical remarks are all made from actual observation; and I have as seldom as the nature of the business would admit depended on the information of others. My inquiries commence at Otter creek, the southwesterly extremity of the settlements, from whence I proceeded regularly through them to the River Sinclair.

I have avoided neither trouble nor fatigue; and have thus long delayed to advise you, with respect to my progress, only that I might, by minute investigation, be enabled to give you a more satisfactory account.

Should the report, however, be still defective, if I have omitted the notice of subjects which require investigation, you have only to instruct me, that I may renew my inquiries.

I am your most obedient servant,

C. JOUETT.

The Hon. HENRY DEARBORN, Esq.,
Secretary of the United States for the Department of War.

OTTER CREEK empties itself into Lake Erie forty-two miles southwest of the town of Detroit, and six miles south of the River Raisin. The settlement commences at its mouth, on the lake, and extends up the creek three miles. The native right was extinguished by purchase from the Pattawatamies, Ottawa, and Chippawa Indians, in the year 1779; and in the year 1794 the present occupants, to the number of twenty-three, deriving their claims from the first purchasers, began their improvements. The farms contain from seventy-five to two hundred French acres, and their boundaries extend back from the creek in parallel lines. Those lands are fertile. Those immediately bordering on the lake have a rich, black soil, well adapted to the cultivation of wheat and hemp. They are without timber of any kind, and, in the language of the country, are called prairies. The wood lands, further removed from the lake, abound in hickory, walnut, and elm, and have a soil of equal fertility, and in a great degree similar to those already described. Notwithstanding the many advantages this spot possesses, in point of soil and convenience to market, the settlers are extremely poor. They are, however, considered freeholders; and, in their own minds, entertain few doubts respecting their titles.

RIVER RAISIN is a delightful stream navigable for small craft about sixteen miles, to the highest farm. It falls into the lake six miles north of Otter creek, and thirty-six south of Detroit. There are in this settlement one hundred and twenty-one families, who hold their farms by one tenure, namely, deeds of bargain and sale from the Pattawatamy, Ottawa, and Chippawa chiefs, executed in the years 1784, 1785, and 1786. The purchasers have been in actual possession since that time. Their farms contain, variously, from one to four hundred French acres, each, fronting on the river from two to six acres, and extending back from forty to a hundred and eighty, until they meet the swamps on either side of the river, which serves as a rear boundary for all the farms.

The lands about the mouth of this river are of little value, being too wet for any kind of culture. Those further up are of an excellent soil, producing from twenty-five to thirty bushels to the acre, of wheat, or other grain, to the like proportion. The farms are tolerably well improved, having comfortable dwelling houses, built of hewn logs, and most generally the necessary out-houses, such as barns, stables, &c. Their orchards are yet young, but promise in a few years to be very productive. The inhabitants are Canadian French, with only three exceptions. Among these people, disputes have frequently arisen relative to their titles; and those disputes have always terminated by an adjudication in favor of the oldest Indian deed.

They are considered as freeholders, and enjoy every privilege which appertains to a fee simple estate; a number of them holding offices under the territorial Government.

SANDY CREEK empties itself into River Raisin but a few paces from its mouth, turning abruptly to the south, having before meandered in a direction nearly parallel with that river, about three miles northward. The settlement extends three miles, amounting in number of inhabitants to sixteen, who took possession of their farms in the year 1792, under purchases from Joseph Benack, who claimed the native right since the year 1780. None of these farms exceed two hundred acres; specifying two, three, and four, in front of the creek, and from twenty-five to fifty back. The soil is much the same as that of River Raisin; black, rich and favorable to the production of grass, hemp, Indian corn, and wheat. The improvements in this settlement are mean. The houses or huts are of such construction and workmanship as scarcely to shut out the inclemencies of the seasons. The people are all Canadians.

ROCKY RIVER discharges itself into Lake Erie, three miles north of the River Raisin, and eight south of River Huron. It is a small winding stream, too shallow to admit the passage of the smallest boats. The soil here differs little from that already described in the adjacent country; black and fertile, though rather too wet for the cultivation of wheat. It is timbered with elm, oak, hickory, and maple. At the mouth of this stream there is a safe harbour, formed by the projection into the Lake of Point Reason on the one side, and Rocky Point on the other. The tenure by which these lands are held is derived from an Indian deed, executed by the chiefs in the year 1786, to Francis Pepin. The conveyance extends thirty acres on the margin of the lake, and runs back into the country one hundred, pursuing the meanders of the river. Pepin sold his claim to George MacDougall, who, some years since, conveyed two-thirds of the tract to Meldrum and Parks, a mercantile house in Detroit, and, conjointly with them, has erected very valuable improvements. About half a mile above the mouth of the river they have a dwelling house, a distillery, and a merchant mill, with every necessary appendage for the convenient manufactory of wheat.

These buildings are worth, on a moderate calculation, ten thousand dollars.

The north side of the stream is claimed by Gabriel Godfroy, under an Indian deed in his possession, dated in the year 1788. The conveyance specifies the same quantity as was granted on the south side to Pepin. Godfroy has made little or no improvements.

There are only two families who now are on the river, those being immediately engaged in the management of the mill and distillery.

RIVER HURON is eight miles north of Rocky river, and twelve south of the River Ecorce, and empties itself into the Lake Erie, about four miles north of Detroit or the strait. With respect to soil, there is a great degree of similarity throughout this part of the country; dark, or rather black, light, and wherever, with few exceptions, it has been cultivated, productive.

In these respects none are superior to the lands on this river. They consist of extensive prairies, covered so closely with hazel and other shrubberies, as to afford a pleasant shade to the delighted traveller, who cannot but take an agreeable interest in the beautiful sceneries by which he is surrounded.

The river, though narrow, is navigable twenty miles for boats, and has a deep and gentle current. There is but one claim, which arises under an Indian deed, dated in the year 1794, purporting to be a conveyance to Gabriel Godfroy, of four thousand five hundred acres of land, upon which tract he has placed a tenant, who lives near the river, as a ferryman. The deed is signed by one chief only, and that without a witness. To a title the claimant can have no pretensions.

Ecorce, or Bark river, enters the strait eleven miles north of Huron, and eleven miles south of Detroit; as a channel of communication, presents but few advantages. The country is level, the soil rich, and sufficiently dry for any kind of cultivation. The grass and wheat are astonishingly luxuriant; and nature requires to be but aided to produce, in abundance, all the necessaries of life; yet, the people are poor beyond conception, and no description could give an adequate idea of their servile and degraded situation. They are sixteen in number, principally Canadian French, and hold from one to three hundred French acres of land each.

Six of these farms were settled in the years 1792, 1794, and 1797, without any kind of authority. The others were purchased from the Indians in the year 1776 by Peter F. Comb, and settled soon afterwards. This appears to be the tenure by which they now hold them. The different claims were at one time confused and complicated; but one or two adjudications have settled the principle confirmatory of those titles held under P. Comb. In the Territory these people are considered as freeholders, and enjoy the appurtenant privileges.

RIVER ROUGE, so called from its reddish appearance, is four miles north of Ecorce, and six south of the town of Detroit. It is navigable six and eight miles for boats, and three for vessels of one hundred and fifty tons burthen. Narrow, winding, and almost stagnant, the current is so gentle as to be scarcely observable. It has at all times the complexion and appearance of a pool; and its exhalations, in the summer months, are extremely unhealthful. The ague and fever are, in these seasons, very prevalent; and fevers sometimes of more malignant nature confine whole families to their beds for weeks together. It is only on the south side of this river that the lands are fertile. The soil is such as has been so frequently described in the rich parts of the neighboring country. On the north side it is poor, gray, sandy, and unproductive. The settlements extend eight miles on both sides of the river; and the same order is observed in laying off their farms as has been noticed on River Raisin and Otter creek. Few or none of these exceed four hundred acres, and generally fall short of that quantity. No disputes, and few misunderstandings, have taken place with respect to boundaries, as those lines extend collaterally from the river, forming each tract into a regular parallelogram. The total amount of these are forty-three, five of which were entered on and improved without authority, in the year 1798. The claims to all the others arise from a transference of the native right in the year 1780, at which time they were generally settled. The majority of the people are Canadian French, and better informed than those on the River Ecorce. They can have no legal title.

Settlements from the River Rouge to the town of Detroit.

The strait by which the waters of the upper lakes discharge themselves into Lake Erie is thirty computed miles from the latter to Lake Sinclair. Few rivers in the United States can vie in beauty and convenience of navigation with this pleasant and valuable stream. It is about three-quarters of a mile broad, and, generally, in the channel four or five fathoms in depth. The detached settlements on its banks and at its neighborhood have been already noticed as high up as Rouge or Red river; two miles above the mouth of which the country begins to assume the appearance of connexion, regularity, and continued improvement. There are twenty-three farms, all of which are at this time occupied. The scarcity of springs throughout this country has compelled the people to bound their farms in front by some water course; and their dwelling houses are, of necessity, erected on the banks of the streams. The farmers here are not an exception from this general practice. The lateral boundary lines extend forty, sixty, and sometimes one hundred acres back; and no tract contains more than four hundred acres. The soil was originally good, though it has been much impoverished, and its strength in some instances entirely exhausted from many years' inattentive cultivation. Most of the farmers have been assiduously careful in the rearing of fruit trees. Their apple orchards are generally well enclosed with pickets, and produce fruit and cider in sufficient abundance for the consumption of the country, and even for the supply of many of the Canadian settlements, to which they are exported.

The houses and out-houses are tolerably good; and, although the country is level, the height of the bank affords a commanding prospect for several miles of the river and its borders.

The titles to lands in this settlement are variously founded. Three are derived from grants of the Marquis de Quisné, French governor commandant of Louisiana and the Canadas in the year 1740; ten from the Marquis de la Jousvire, vested with the like powers, in the year 1750; seven from Indian deeds of gift in the year 1771, and confirmed in the year 1772, by the honorable Henry Basset, a British officer, at that time commanding the fort; and the native right to three was conveyed by the Indians in the year 1780. It is unprecedented; and I should conceive that none of those commandants could have had any legal right to convey lands to individuals; consequently, their titles were originally bad. However, the length of their possession, and that being peaceable, too, will, no doubt, vest them with a fee simple. Those who hold simply from the Indians stand upon grounds somewhat questionable.

THE TOWN OF DETROIT.—The charter, which is for fifteen acres square, was granted in the time of Louis

XIV of France, and is now, from the best information I have been able to collect, at Quebec. Of those two hundred and twenty-five acres, only four are occupied by the town and fort Lenault. The remainder is a common, except twenty-four, which were added twenty years ago to a farm belonging to William Macomb. As to the titles to the lots in town, I should conceive that the citizens might legally claim, from a length of undisturbed and peaceable possession, even in the absence of a more valid and substantial tenure. Several of those lots are held by the commanding officer as appendages of the garrison. A stockade encloses the town, fort, and citadel. The pickets, as well as the public houses, are in a state of gradual decay, and, in a few years, without repairs, they must fall to the ground. The streets are narrow, straight, regular, and intersect each other at right angles. The houses are, for the most part, low and inelegant; and although many of them are convenient and suited to the occupations of the people, there are perhaps a majority of them which require very considerable reparation.

GROS ISLE is generally a mile wide, and nine miles in length, running parallel with the western or United States bank, to which it approaches more nearly than to the other. Its lower end extends to the mouth of the strait, where it discharges itself into Lake Erie, and is immediately opposite Malden, the British garrison at Amherstburg.

This island is now cultivated by ten farmers, who pay an annual rent to the estate of William Macomb, by whom it was purchased of the Indians in the year 1776, and settled at that time or soon afterwards. The height of the situation, the richness of the soil, the quantity of valuable timber, consisting of oak and hickory, with which it abounds, together with its nearness to market, oblige me to believe that it is a spot holding forth as many advantages as any other in this country.

Adjacent to this lies Stoney island, held by the same tenure. It is nearly one mile in length, and a third of a mile broad, and rendered of value only by a quarry of lime-stone, which affords the estate of Macomb a very considerable yearly income, independently of the lime. This island is of no consideration. It has but little timber, and is remarkable for a poverty of soil, which unfits it for cultivation.

HOG ISLAND is situated in the strait three miles above the town, on the United States side of the channel, and contains, by estimation, three thousand five hundred acres of land. The poverty of the soil renders it of but little value to private persons; but, as public property, I should conceive it a spot of great national importance, and highly eligible for a garrison; as the elevation of its western end has a complete command of the river. It was formerly held as an appendage of the garrison, and used by the different commandants at Detroit for cutting fire-wood and for pasturage.

The oldest and best informed inhabitants of this place have assured me that it was chartered with the town of Detroit, and held by the garrison until the year 1765, at which time it was purchased of the Indians by George McDougall, whose heirs, in the year 1786, sold it to William Macomb, in whose possession, or in the possession of his representatives, it has since that time remained.

Having considered and reported the situation of lands settled in this country south and southwest of the town of Detroit, and made some hasty remarks on the town itself, I shall proceed to the settlements above.

They extend themselves from the town to Gros Point, at the outlet of Lake Sinclair into the strait; from thence, on the borders of said lake to Mill river; they then become detached and irregular as high up as the River Sinclair, through which Lake Huron discharges itself. I shall observe those divisions, in order to give you a more clear and distinct knowledge of the country upon which those settlements have been made.

Settlements on the strait from the town to Gros Point.

The distance is nine miles, and contains sixty farms, all of which are at this time occupied. They are for the most part two acres in front, by forty deep, and laid out in the same parallel order as has been already remarked in all the other settlements. The situation of these lands is low, and very unhealthy, owing to a wide marsh, which extends several miles on the strait. The soil is impoverished, and produces but little. The buildings, which were once, comparatively, of the better kind, are now in a state of rapid decline. On traversing this settlement, no emotions of pleasure are experienced, except of that gloomy kind which are excited by the contemplation of a ruin.

The claims to lands here are similar to those below the town, viz., transfers of the native right to individuals; and confirmations of those transfers by the French commandants in the years 1740, 1750, and 1757. I have already expressed my opinion as to the original invalidity of those claims, and the subsequent title acquired by length of undisturbed possession, together with the respectable light in which they were received by the British Government. The people are Canadians, with few exceptions.

Settlement on Lake Sinclair from Gros Point to Milk river.

This settlement is six miles in length, and contains twenty-four farms, with a front on the lake of from three to five acres, and an extent back of forty acres. The face of the country is level, though the situation is high and commanding; and possesses, from its elevation, a pleasant and extensive view of Lake Sinclair and its banks. The soil is dark, rich, and strong, and extremely favorable to the cultivation of wheat. Art here has done but little, and even less than that little which nature had left her to do, for the Canadian settlers are very indolent; of course, very poor, and consequently very wretched. Perhaps, on a barren soil, necessity would have been an incitement to industry, the natural or rather the legitimate parent of affluence.

The tenure by which these people hold their farms are of two kinds. Four of them may be denominated French titles. The remaining twenty are derived from the Indians, perhaps by purchase, in the year 1783, at which time they were settled.

Settlement from Milk river to River Huron.

MILK RIVER is so inconsiderable a rivulet, and rendered, from its particular situation, so very unimportant, that I shall not waste my time, nor tire your patience, with its description. From its mouth to River Huron is twelve miles; less calculated for a settlement than any other I have seen in this country. It is low, flat, and marshy. These disadvantages, combined with its unhealthful effluvia, from obstacles which neither the industry nor the perseverance of the agriculturalist will be able to surmount. There are, nevertheless, thirty settlers on this tract, notwithstanding its apparent destitution of the advantages of soil, situation, and market. These people came into possession in the year 1797, without authority, even from the Indians. Their divisional lines are marked by themselves; and they are ignorant of the number of acres contained in the respective farms. This settlement, however, possesses that regularity which is so remarkable in this country. The farmers are as poor as they are unfortunate in the choice of their situation. All of them are Canadians.

The River Huron is discharged into Lake Sinclair twenty-seven miles above Detroit, and eighteen above the strait. The sameness observable in many parts of this country compels me to fall into a monotony of expression which will be to you fatiguing; yet, simple truth must be preferred to every other consideration. The river is a gentle, narrow stream, navigable for boats thirty miles above its mouth. The settlements extend up the river nine miles, and contain thirty-four families in present occupancy, laid off as those on the River Raisin, with this difference, that they have by survey no fixed or determinate rear boundaries, each tract extending back from the river or front boundary to a bog at the distance of forty or fifty acres. This land is level, and the soil is dark and rich, laboring under no inconvenience from too great a quantity of water. It is tolerably well timbered: hickory, oak, and elm, are most observable. Some of the people are agreeably situated; but, in general, they are poor in the extreme, owing to that indolence and want of skill in agriculture, which so conspicuously mark the Canadian character in this country. All the settlers are of this description except four, who are Englishmen of industry and enterprise. Twenty of those farms were purchased of the Indians, and settled in the year 1788; ten in the years 1793, 1795, and 1796; and four in the year 1800, without authority of any kind.

From the River Huron to Sinclair river, the distance, following the circuitous margin of the lake, is fifteen miles. With respect to the intermediate space, it may be necessary to make some observations. The first and most important subject relative to the interest of the United States is a salt spring, on a small stream, four miles east of River Huron, and three miles up the said stream, from the lake. From experiments which have been made, I am justified in saying that this spring deserves the public attention. It was wrought some time by a couple of men, who, owing to their want of capital, were incapable of conducting the business on an advantageous plan. By those men I have been assured, that a quart of water did with them turn out a gill of salt; and in all their trials with greater quantities it never failed to produce in the like proportion. There is a sufficient quantity of water for the supply of works to any extent.

It is scarcely necessary to observe that this spring is claimed by a mercantile house, under the firm of Meldrum and Parks; the particulars of which claim, I considered as unworthy of investigation, well knowing it must have been recently obtained from the Indians. The lands about the spring are rich and favorable for tillage, particularly for the cultivation of wheat. Those extending to the mouth of the River Sinclair are rather too low and marshy. Two Canadian families have, notwithstanding, settled on them, who took possession of the spots they respectively occupy in the year 1801.

POINT O' TRAMBLE. From the mouth of the River Sinclair, six miles up, are twelve farms, that front the river in the usual manner, from three to four and five acres, and forty back, none exceeding in quantity two hundred and forty. This land differs from the face of this country generally. Its soil possesses every mark of poverty; sandy and low in the extreme. Nothing exists to recommend this settlement, except its bordering on one of the most delightful rivers in the western world.

The only pretension those people have to their farms is derived from a simple possession, taken obtrusively, in the years 1780, 1785, and 1790. They are all Canadians. From this settlement, for twelve miles up the river, not a vestige of a house can be seen, owing, I suppose, to its being for that distance a perfect barren; when you are suddenly and agreeably surprised with the presentation of a number of fertile and well improved farms, edging the river, for the extent of ten miles, to the amount of twenty-five farms, now under cultivation, and laid off on the river, as other settlements in this country; with this difference, that the claimants extend their farms ten and twenty acres in front of the river, and, in two instances, from forty-five to fifty, all running back to one rear line, which is, by survey, forty acres.

Three thousand seven hundred and fifty-nine acres of this land were purchased of the Indians by Patrick Sinclair, British commandant at Fort Sinclair, in the year 1765, who held it until the year 1782; during that time deriving from it a considerable profit as a pinery. In the year 1782, he left this country, and gave it, by deed of gift, to a Canadian by the name of Vatiere, who sold it in the year 1784, by the auctioneer at public sale, at which time, Meldrum and Parks, a mercantile house of this country, became the purchasers, who have, since that period, claimed it as their property, and erected upon it valuable improvements. There are, notwithstanding, five farmers upon it, besides the tenant of Meldrum and Parks, who forcibly settled the farms they severally occupy, in the year 1800. The other nineteen farmers claim under Indian deeds, in the years 1780 and 1782.

The River Sinclair is in length forty-five miles, and, in beauty and convenience of navigation, preferable to Detroit, though it is not quite as wide. Such is its transparency, that the eye can distinguish, at its bottom, in fifteen feet water, the most minute object. In it there are no shoals, and, in depth, generally five and six fathoms.

I am your most obedient servant,

C. JOUETT,
Indian agent, Detroit.

REVISION OF THE LAWS FOR THE SALE OF LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 22, 1804.

Mr. NICHOLSON, from the committee which was directed "to inquire into the expediency of amending the several acts providing for the sale of the public lands," in the manner proposed by a resolution of the House of the 17th instant, made the following report:

That, in their opinion, an additional compensation ought to be allowed to the several commissioners, and to the surveyor, appointed in pursuance of the act entitled "An act regulating the grants of land, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee;" and that further time ought to be allowed for laying claims before the registers of the land offices in the Mississippi Territory.

They are, likewise, of opinion that no additional allowance ought to be made for the expense of surveying the lands in the said Territory;

That no alterations ought to be made in such parts of the aforesaid act as provide for the laying out the public lands in townships and sections;

That no reduction in the price and quantity of land ought to be made in favor of those settlers, who hold under the third section of that act;

That it is not expedient to exempt from a resurvey such tracts of land as are held by titles legally and fully executed, or such tracts the quantities of which are already ascertained, and the titles to which are confirmed by the act aforesaid; and

That an act of Congress is not necessary to legalize the proceedings of the commissioners for the district east of Pearl river, in consequence of their not having met on or before the first day of December last.

The following resolutions are respectfully submitted:

Resolved, That an additional compensation ought to be made to the several commissioners, and to the surveyor appointed in pursuance of the act entitled "An act regulating the grants of land, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee."

Resolved, That further time ought to be allowed for laying claims before the registers of the land offices in the Mississippi Territory.

FRAUDULENT PRACTICES IN ACQUIRING LANDS IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO CONGRESS FEBRUARY 20, 1804.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

I communicate, for the information of Congress, a letter stating certain fraudulent practices for monopolizing lands in Louisiana, which may, perhaps, require legislative provisions.

February 29, 1804.

TH: JEFFERSON.

KASKASKIA, January 10, 1804.

SIR: The attorney general of the Indian territory, who, a few days since, visited the Louisiana side, has given me some information which I think it my duty to communicate.

Attempts are now making to defraud the United States. As nearly as can be estimated, two hundred thousand acres of land, including all the best mines, have been surveyed to various individuals in the course of a few weeks past. All the official papers relative to these lands, bear the signature of M. —, the predecessor of the present lieutenant governor. He now commands a Spanish garrison in the neighborhood of New Orleans. To understand the nature of this fraudulent transaction, it will be necessary to state the mode of acquiring titles. The settler applies to the commandant by way of petition, and prays a grant of certain lands described by him. At the bottom, or on the back of the same petition, the commandant accedes to the prayer, and directs the surveyor to run out the lands prayed for. This petition and order, together with the proceedings of the surveyor, entitle actual settlers to grants on application to the proper officer at New Orleans. But the fact seems to be that the great body of the people have no other title to their lands than what results from their original petitions, orders, and surveys. Very few of them have taken the trouble to procure grants. Under these circumstances, they seem to have an equitable claim to their lands, and really expect a confirmation of them by the United States. This state of things has suggested the possibility of a successful fraud; and the progress of it will probably turn out to be this: M. — (who, when commandant, was certainly authorized to cause surveys of land to be made to settlers) has been prevailed on to put his signature to blank papers; to suffer some persons in this quarter to insert the necessary petition and order of survey over it, and to affix the necessary dates. The persons concerned in this transaction probably expect that, as the dates of these spurious papers are confounded with those of a just nature, our Government cannot, or will not, attempt to distinguish the one from the other. It is now about five years since M. — was commandant of Upper Louisiana, to which time these papers appear to be antedated. Extensive surveys have been made, and are now making, under his orders, and many of them to persons who have not resided two years in the country. It is also understood that each purchaser gives forty dollars for every one hundred or four hundred acres, and that this sum is divided between three persons, the projectors of the speculation.

I am, with sentiments of high respect,

Your humble servant,

AMOS STODDARD,

Capt. Corps of Artillerists.

The SECRETARY OF WAR.

8th CONGRESS.

No. 100.

1st Session.

CLAIM TO LAND ADJOINING NATCHEZ.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 10, 1804.

Mr. THOMAS M. RANDOLPH, from the committee to which was referred, on the 26th of January, the petition of William Dunbar, of the Mississippi Territory of the United States, and to which was recommended, on the 3d of February last, the petition of the mayor, aldermen, and assistants of the city of Natchez, in the said Mississippi Territory, together with the report of a select committee thereon, made the following report:

That it appears there are, in the city of Natchez, two lots, with a building, which is used at present for public purposes; and there is, adjacent to the city, within the prescribed limits of it, on the side next the river, a piece of land of about twenty-three acres; which lots and land are at present out of regular possession by any one, and form the object of these petitions. The city claims both the land and the lots, without exhibiting any regular evidence of title to either, while William Dunbar claims the former upon a Spanish grant. These contending claims do not, in the opinion of the committee, come regularly under the cognizance of the board of commissioners established by an act of Congress for settling certain enumerated descriptions of land claims in the Mississippi Territory of the United States. The lots and land in question appear to be the same which, being deemed unappropriated, and considered as having passed, or been restored to the United States by the treaty of friendship, &c., with Spain, in pursuance of which the place was relinquished to them, were, by the twelfth section of an act passed at the last session of Congress, entitled "An act regulating the grants of land, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee," directed, if truly the property of the United States, to be located for the use of Jefferson college. These small pieces of land constitute part of a large tract which had been granted many years before the treaty, to an individual, by patent from the Spanish Government; of which tract, after it had been improved, and had passed through the hands of several different proprietors, a considerable portion was repurchased by the government of the district, for the purpose of erecting public buildings, and of establishing the town of Natchez, which was accordingly laid off thereon. The whole of this land is now in possession of individuals, either as town lots or out lots, except the two town lots now in question, with three others of inconsiderable value, according to the petition of the city; of course not fit for such a purpose as the erection of public buildings, and perhaps a fraction of a fourth, also unfit, and the out piece of land claimed by William Dunbar. His claim rests upon a grant of Governor Gayoso, dated 19th of April, 1797. The application upon which the grant was made, treats the land in question as the private property of the King of Spain, and denies it to be part of the public domain; while the grant itself, although it does not abandon this latter view, strives, as does also an explanatory communication from the claimant to the former committee, to blend therewith some private right in the governor himself, which creates much confusion in the view of the foundation of the claim. But this last ground not being supported by any mention of a title on the part of the governor, in his private capacity, and being absolutely incompatible with the others, the committee have no hesitation in passing it over. With respect to the other ground of claim, that this piece of land was the private property of the King of Spain, and was granted as such by the governor, the committee could not fail to observe, at once, that this is absolutely incompatible, to its view, with the acknowledgment, that the whole land was purchased with the public money, and appropriated for public buildings and a town; that is, with the funds of the district, for a use arising out of the district itself; and that this part of it was granted to William Dunbar, as compensation for public services rendered to the district. The committee cannot see how this land, purchased for the purpose mentioned, should afterwards, the necessity for its application to that purpose still existing, become the private property of the royal family of Spain, or how the governor could make a grant of such private property, as compensation for public services, without special permission, which, from the dates of the application and grant, could not have been obtained. The land, therefore, must be considered as reannexed to the public domain, after the purchase by the Government; and, accordingly, it appears that a very great part of it has been regranted to individuals, as such, before the treaty. The ungranted part must certainly have passed to the United States by the treaty, and could not be legitimately granted after the date of it by a Spanish governor. Nor can it be admitted, even if the term "withdraw settlements," used in the treaty, was intended to signify the right of disposing of all improved lands for the benefit of the private holders, that, under it, lands still held by the Government could be so disposed of; such being always deemed the property of the acquiring nation. The committee, therefore, regretting the loss of compensation for important services, which a meritorious subject is likely to undergo, and hoping the generosity of the Spanish Government will not suffer such services to go in this way unrewarded, pronounces that the claim of William Dunbar cannot, in their opinion, upon any of the grounds adduced, be sustained. Upon the propriety of adopting a liberal policy on this occasion, and making that compensation from other lands of the United States, through respect for the King of Spain, and in consideration that these services were rendered to the district of Natchez, in a great measure, not very long before the relinquishment, by a person at present a citizen of the United States, reflecting lustre on his adopted country, by his profound science and great public worth, and that the United States reaped the benefit of that part of them, it is not within the province allotted to this committee to give an opinion. The object of the petition of the corporation of Natchez is to procure a grant from the United States of the lots and the piece of land in question, for the use and accommodation of the city. No legal title, on the part of the city, is pretended. It appears, however, with respect to the piece of land, that it has all along been considered as destined for the common ground of the city, and that this consideration had its influence in enhancing the price of the city lots to many of their present holders. The two lots in question seem indispensable to the city, being the only fit situations for the erection of public buildings, which are not in possession of private persons, and being actually the most fit of all within it for that purpose. Their peculiar fitness, and the reservation of them after the alienation of all the others, (with the exception of three indifferent ones, and the fraction of a fourth, before mentioned,) give strong grounds to believe that they were really destined for this use by the Spanish Government. They were formally relinquished by it to the United States. The citizens of Natchez have always had reason to believe that they were permanently allotted for some public use to their city, either civil or religious, by the Spanish Government. The committee, reflecting on the peculiar local situation of this infant city, cannot avoid considering its prosperity as a matter of some national importance. The Mississippi must soon become the greatest highway on the earth. Its long arms extended in every direction throughout the greatest and most valuable portions of the globe, which are united by any natural cause, all, with a single exception, centre above this place. The diffusion of American principles and American arts through all the wide space it embraces; the occupancy of this whole fertile surface by American citizens, is now insured beyond all risk. The immense wealth which will be produced by the industry and ingenuity of those citizens, with the aid of soils superior to all, and climates inferior to none on the earth, must, with the exception mentioned, be carried for the purpose of exchange along this highway. The city of Natchez is an inn established upon it in a chosen spot. There, the thousands of American citizens, engaged in the transportation, and the superintendence of the transportation of that wealth, with great numbers of the owners of it, will stop for refreshment and for rest. Before many years, the margin of the river at this place will, perhaps, be constantly fringed with boats, and its banks be covered with American citizens, the navigators of them. There is a narrow strip of land, at present the property of the United States, which extends very nearly along the whole front of the city upon the river, and separates the buildings of it by a convenient distance from the water. This the city asks as a boon from the Government, that it may preserve it as an open space, next the water, for the joint accommodation of the citizens, and those strangers when they land. If they are denied this boon, the buildings will quickly extend to the water's edge; where, otherwise, only a few scattered store-houses for the temporary shelter of passing wealth would be admitted. Of this, dreadful insalubrity must be the certain consequence. Scientific observation, and melancholy experience in the great maritime cities of the United States, have demonstrated that the germ of pestilence, if not always engendered, at least always develops first in the dense and stagnant air of those streets and buildings which lie nearest the water. Thence, if favored by the seasons, it quickly spreads through the whole peculiar factitious atmosphere of the city. It may reasonably be expected that, if only a single row of unconnected buildings, next the water, was suffered, and a due interval of free and unconfined air scrupulously maintained between that row and the main body of the city, this tremendous agent of human misery might be stifled in its birth, its advances stopped, and its progress completely prevented. An occasion offers itself to the Government of the United States to make this important experiment in the city of Natchez at this time. Nor ought the extreme distance of the result to produce an indifference towards the experiment, since it embraces such a serious national object as the probable prevention, in one chance at least, of the greatest physical ill which can possibly befall this nation—pestilential contagion. The day cannot be very distant on which, if pestilence arises in Natchez, it may ramify itself with the wide spread arms of the Mississippi, through the vitals of the Union. To provide for this experiment nothing is requisite but to grant this strip of land to the city of Natchez, on condition that it shall be preserved forever as a public ground for the health, comfort, and enjoyment of all citizens and strangers, indiscriminately; and shall never be built on, or cultivated; but, on the contrary, shall be disposed into public walks and lawns, and planted with trees, at the expense of the corporation, and so maintained by it as long as it exists. The only obstacle to this donation is, in the opinion of the committee, very easily removable, without injustice to any party. The interest of Jefferson college cannot be injured by the revocation of the grant to it of these city lots and small piece of land, if a full equivalent in other valuable lands within the Mississippi Territory be assigned it in lieu thereof. Such the United States possess there, in a quantity which cannot all be disposed of to purchasers in a great length of time; certainly not before the population of the territory has become so considerable as to make public instruction within it an object of high national importance. A fund of this kind, too, if wisely managed by judicious grants of long leases to men unable to purchase, who may be found in great numbers in all the States, willing to move thither on such terms, will not only give some certain annual revenue to the college very soon, but will increase with the growth of the institution, and keep pace in productiveness with its wants.

The committee, having thus endeavored to estimate all the different claims, and having weighed all considerations; moreover, having just learned that no patents have yet issued to Jefferson college for the lots and land in question, but that means are using by the trustees of that institution to obtain them with all speed, that a disposition may be made of the property immediately, which will entirely defeat the salutary views, with regard to the city, it entertains, begs leave to recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That the execution of so much of the twelfth section of the act, passed the 3d of March, 1803, entitled "An act regulating the grants of land, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee," as directs the Governor of the Mississippi Territory to locate lots in the city of Natchez, and a piece of land adjoining thereto, (if the property of the United States,) for the use of Jefferson college, be suspended until further order be taken thereon by Congress.

NATCHEZ, December 17, 1803.

GENTLEMEN: I have observed, by the printed journals of Congress, that a petition has been presented from the corporation of the city of Natchez, praying that Congress will confirm to the petitioners the title of such lots and land as may be found vacant within the present limits thereof; which petition has been referred to you, gentlemen, in committee; and being informed that last week private testimony of an ex parte nature was procured and sent on in support of the petition, it appears to be my duty to bring forward the following circumstances, which ought to be made known to Congress, in order that they may be more fully enabled to judge of the propriety or impropriety of granting the prayer of the petition at the present juncture.

Two lots and thirty acres of land, adjoining the city of Natchez, were granted for the use of Jefferson college, by Congress, at their last session, to be located by the governor. If this has been done, it will be found that probably not an inch of land within the limits of the town remains unclaimed, under some species of title, upon which the commissioners of land titles are now preparing to decide. The corporation has presumed to decide for itself, that certain titles to lands or lots within the liberties of the city are illegal; and upon such presumption is founded their petition. It is certain that no title to lands within this territory can be called legal until it shall receive the sanction of the commissioners; and as there are contained at least two thousand acres of the most precious land of the country within the limits of the city, it must be altogether uncertain what would be the extent of the solicited donation. It is presumed that the above information being duly stated, Congress will see the impropriety of taking out of the hands of the commissioners decisions which, by law, are submitted to their investigation and judgment, more particularly upon an ex parte representation, by which injustice would be done to individuals who are now patiently waiting the decision of the commissioners.

I am, respectfully, &c.

WILLIAM DUNBAR.

Messrs. LATTINORE, ALSTON, & STEEDMAN.

NATCHEZ, December 31, 1803.

GENTLEMEN: I took the liberty of troubling you with a few remarks upon the subject of the petition of the corporation of the city of Natchez, addressed to Congress, soliciting a donation of lands within the limits of the said city. At that time I considered the petition to be of a general nature, but have since discovered, notwithstanding the secrecy with which measures are conducted, that they have made a covert attack against myself within the walls of Congress, hoping to obtain, by surprise, an object upon a partial view of testimony, but carefully concealing circumstances, the simple knowledge of which must defeat their expectations, and which an uprightness of conduct ought certainly to have revealed. Self-defence calls upon me to bring to your view such matters as are necessary to throw light upon this subject. It appears that the corporation covets a certain lot of land adjoining to their town, for which they know that I hold a title, derived from the last Spanish governor of Natchez; but as this title is of a peculiar nature, unlike to any other in the territory, it appears doubtful to certain members of the corporation whether the commissioners are fully authorized, under the existing laws, to confirm this title, although it is not doubted that Congress would, in this case, give relief. This presents a fine opportunity for seizing the prize, by obtaining from Congress, by surprise, a grant of the lot in question, hoping that, should the commissioners not confirm my title, they might thus cut me off from all future relief; and, in order to attain this favorite object, they have, collecting from sources of their own selection, evidence that a Spanish governor (whose will is one thing to-day and another to-morrow) had been heard to say that the lot in question, commonly called the Green, was destined as a common for the use of the town, and perhaps much more, of which I am ignorant; it is unnecessary to say that no document exists to justify this idea. The last evidence they have called for is a declaration of Major Stephen Minor, to which I am told he has subscribed his name. This certainly is one of the most respectable they could obtain; this gentleman was aid-major of the post of Natchez, and attended the governor, officially, almost perpetually, and was certainly more intimately acquainted with his motives and actions than any one here, his secretary only excepted, who is a Spaniard, and is gone by the way of the United States to Spain. I have no doubt of his being, at this time, at Philadelphia, or perhaps at the city of Washington; he is a very respectable person, speaks English tolerably well, and his name is Don Joseph Vidal. But to return to the declaration of Major Minor; a friend has obtained for me a correct copy of it, and it proves to be so little favorable to their views, that I rather doubt its being forwarded to you. I shall, however, take the liberty of enclosing a copy of it for your perusal, pledging my honor for its correctness. It is almost unnecessary to remark, that the evidence of this gentleman is more to be considered than a score of vague declarations, picked up at random, from which the most favorable only are selected.

My title to the lot in question stands upon the following ground: A tract of land was granted, by patent, to an individual by the Spanish Government; this land was sold by the first to a second individual, and considerable improvements made thereon; the Spanish Government purchased three hundred acres of this tract, with the view to erect public buildings, and establish a town; a church was built, and a small town laid off, and on another part of the land Governor Gayoso caused a large building to be erected for his own residence, at his private expense; but before it was finished it was blown down by a hurricane, and the governor then found it more convenient to rent a house for the use of Government, in which he continued afterwards to reside. Some time before the withdrawing of the Spanish troops I applied to Governor Gayoso for a compensation of various unsatisfied services; the governor proposed land; I observed that we had lately heard of the confirmation of the treaty between the United States and Spain, and that, consequently, no Spanish grant above 31° lat. would be legal, and that a grant below would not suit my purpose, as I intended to continue my residence at Natchez; he assented to the justness of the observation, but observed that this objection did not hold against the land adjoining the town of Natchez, which was no part of the King's domain, but being an ancient grant much improved, and purchased by the money of Government, stood in a different point of view; that, by treaty, both parties had leave to withdraw their settlements; and if that expression had any meaning at all, it must imply the right of selling or disposing of settlements, which could in no other way be withdrawn for the benefit of the holder; that, moreover, he (the governor) possessed a private right by virtue of the building he had caused to be erected with a view to his own residence, and with the permission and approbation of the General Government of the province of Louisiana; that, therefore, he would convey to me this lot, including his own right, in the double capacity of governor and private proprietor. I was convinced by the governor's arguments, and accepted of a patent for twenty-six acres of land, in consideration of an account of services to a considerable amount.

An example, if wanted, may be drawn from the annals of the United States in favor of my claim. It appears (as I am informed) that when the State of Pennsylvania annulled the right of the proprietors over the public domain of that State, her sense of justice confirmed to the family of the Penns (notwithstanding their adherence to the enemies of the republic) all their manors, and every inch of land which had been separated from the domain by any public act, and although in the possession of the proprietor, was held sacred, as a private property. Will the United States be less just or less magnanimous than an individual State? Will they refuse to a friendly Power the right of compensating one of their servants, by conveying to him their right to a pittance of land, which has so long been a private property, and purchased by the money of Government? I would suppose not.

I presume, gentlemen, that the above mentioned circumstances will convince you that I possess a very strong, equitable, and, most probably, a legal right to the lot in question. Under your protection I will flatter myself with the hope that no act of Congress will be passed infringing my right.

I have the honor to be, &c.

WILLIAM DUNBAR.

MESRS. LATTIMORE, ALSTON, and STEDMAN.

Copy of Major Stephen Minor's declaration.

At the request of the corporation of the city of Natchez, I declare that the space of ground adjoining to the city, generally called the Green, was, at the time of laying out the town, reserved by order of the governor, to be afterwards disposed of as Government might think fit. That the governor caused a house to be commenced, for his own residence, upon a part of this space, but being blown down by a hurricane, he thought proper to rent the house of the subscriber for Government use, and his own was not rebuilt.

With respect to the shed called the market-house, the materials of which were purchased by subscription, and which was built upon a line of one of the streets of the town, it is well known that John Scott, the carpenter, presented his account for building the same to Governor Gayoso, some time before the departure of the Spanish troops, and the funds subscribed not having been sufficient payment of said account, the governor ordered that the materials of the market-house should be taken away by the said Scott, in payment of his demand; and that afterwards, Mr. Dunbar having received of the Government titles to the said Green, did purchase of John Scott his right to the said shed called the market-house.

8th CONGRESS.

No. 101.

1st SESSION.

SOUTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA YAZOO COMPANIES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 13, 1804.

Mr. NICHOLSON, from the committee to which was re-committed a report* upon the petitions of the South Carolina and Virginia Yazoo Companies, made the following report:

That, when this subject was re-committed to them, there had been a suggestion, that the Virginia Yazoo Company, and the Upper Mississippi Company, were in fact the same. Upon this point, a great variety of documents were submitted to the committee, but the subject appeared to be involved in so much intricacy that no satisfactory conclusion could be drawn. The documents are laid on the table, in order that the House may, if they think proper, examine them.

The committee, however, have no reason to change the opinion expressed by them in their former report.

Sir: I have sent you, agreeably to your request, sundry documents relating to the Virginia Yazoo Company; to which I have subjoined a narrative of such facts and circumstances connected with the subject, as have fallen within my knowledge.

I am, respectfully, sir,

Your most obedient servant,

W. HAMPTON.

The Hon. JOSEPH H. NICHOLSON,
Chairman of a Com. of the House Rep's.

A narrative explanatory of the documents respecting the Virginia Yazoo Company, sent to Mr. Nicholson, on the 27th January, 1804, by Wade Hampton.

Some time in the month of October, 1794, at the city of Philadelphia, I met a Mr. William Call, of the State of Virginia, and, in some conversations I had with him, understood, I believe for the first time, the expectations entertained that the State of Georgia would offer for sale, at the next meeting of her Legislature, some part of her western territory. Mr. Call further stated, that the company known by the name of the Virginia Yazoo Company had it in contemplation to renew their proposals to purchase; that he was engaged in an agency for that company, the object of which was to obtain funds to meet the purchase; and for this purpose, he had been authorised to admit some new partners into the company. These conversations with Mr. Call produced, at Richmond, on my return to South Carolina, in December following, an interview with Mr. David Ross, and the agreement between him and myself, marked A. Soon after my arrival at home, I transmitted to Mr. John B. Scott, the agent of that company at Augusta, a copy of this agreement, and signified my readiness to fulfil it. His answer is contained in two letters marked B, Nos. one and two. These letters, as I then thought, not affording a sufficient security for the advance of so considerable a sum of money as he required, I concluded to wait upon Mr. Scott in person, for the purpose of obtaining from him an evidence of the interest I might be allowed to hold, and of fixing, explicitly, the terms upon which I was to hold it. I arrived at Augusta on the 22d or 23d of December, and, to the best of my recollection and belief, on the day on which the last vote in the Legislature of Georgia was given to the act passed for disposing of her western territory. On my arrival, Mr. Scott consented that I should hold the share, or twentieth part embraced in my agreement with Mr. Ross, on condition of my paying that proportion of the expenditures of the company from its commencement, in 1789, and a like proportion of the sum of five thousand dollars, deposited by Mr. Scott in the treasury, in part payment of the purchase.

The tract of country proposed to be purchased by Mr. Scott, at this time, does not appear to be so large by one-half as that of 1789. His proposals to the Legislature will be seen in the paper marked C, and probably one of the causes for reducing his purchase will appear from the papers marked D, Nos. one and two. From the latter papers, and other information, I learn that Mr. Scott did not arrive at Augusta until after the Georgia Company had made their proposals, in which they had included the country in question.

In the act which had now passed the Legislature, Mr. Scott's boundaries were the same which his proposals contained, and each individual that held under him in Georgia, so far as I know, myself among the number, held the same under a certificate signed by him, as agent for the Virginia Yazoo Company. This act, after passing through the various forms, and being signed by the Speakers of the two Houses, was sent to the Governor for his assent. He, however, thought proper to reject it, and, on the 29th of December, returned the bill to the House in which it originated, with his objections stated.

To remove these objections, the supplementary act was passed, and ratified on the 7th of January, 1795. By this act, as the Governor had recommended, about one-fourth of the lands proposed to be purchased by the different companies was reserved to the State. Each company, I have been told, had to relinquish in that proportion.

In the progress of the latter act, Mr. Scott thought proper to get the style of his company changed from the Virginia Yazoo to the Upper Mississippi, and to have my name added as a grantee. His reasons for the first measure I never understood, nor have I any recollection of being consulted about the latter, until after it had been adopted. In this state the business remained, until some days after the supplementary act was ratified, and Mr. Scott had obtained the grant under it. On the 9th of January, he called the shareholders together, and stated to them, 1st, that as the purchase had been so much reduced by the supplementary act, it was reasonable their shares should be reduced in the same proportion; and for this purpose, the purchase was divided into twenty-five, instead of twenty shares; and 2dly, that all certificates of shares issued by him, as agent for the Virginia Yazoo Company, should be returned into his hands, and that the persons holding them should receive, in lieu, thereof, certificates signed by all the grantees.

To both these propositions the shareholders assented, and Mr. Scott then produced to the other grantees a view of the company, similar, as well as I recollect, to the one contained in the paper marked E, Mr. Scott, until this moment, having been the sole agent. The other grantees, as well as all interested, were alike ignorant of the dispositions he had made of the purchase; nor did any one feel it his duty, or right, to inquire any further into the state of the business than respected his own particular interest. About the 16th of January, Mr. Scott made an offer to sell all his interest in the company, and Mr. Nightingale made a similar offer about the same time; I became the purchaser of both. Neither received less, and I believe both something more, than one thousand four hundred dollars for each share over and above the purchase money to the State. By this transaction, Mr. Scott put about ten thousand dollars, in cash, in his pocket.

What the engagements or stipulations between him and his other partners were, I never was informed; but the impressions left on my mind were, that all his original associates would have had a right to a participation of the land he purchased, had he not made sale of the same, and, of course, that they were entitled to a proportion of the proceeds of it, unless, by some act of their own, they had forfeited their right.

W. HAMPTON.

RICHMOND, Dec. 8, 1794.

SIR: In virtue of powers vested in me by the Virginia Yazoo Company, by a resolution passed at their meeting on the 14th of July last, and in consequence of your propositions made to me through William Call, jun. of the 11th of October last, I do agree, in behalf of the said company, that you shall be admitted a partner therein for one share, or twentieth part thereof, on the following terms. The sum of one hundred and seventy-six dollars and eighty-eight cents of a dollar, is the amount of the sum actually expended on each share, prior to the 14th of July last, which sum is payable to the company whenever demanded, together with a due proportion of all other expenditures from the said 14th of July last. Also, the sum of four thousand six hundred and eighty-seven dollars and five cents, as one-hundredth part of the sum originally contracted for with the State, together with the sum of three hundred and twelve dollars and ninety-five cents, assessed on each share, as a fund to supply the delinquencies of partners of a certain description, on whose lands, in the company's hands, there will be a lien for the repayment of this advance.

This makes, in all, exclusive of the proportion of expenses, the sum of five thousand dollars, specie, to be held subject to the call of the company, but will not be asked for until there is a certainty of obtaining the grant, for which purpose you are to be prepared to pay the said sum of five thousand dollars at Augusta, during the present session of Assembly, or as soon as you shall be advised it is actually necessary.

You will be pleased to subjoin your acceptance of these terms, and execute a power of attorney to some person to sign the articles for you, and to vote, as your proxy, at the meeting of the company; and I shall take care to have you recognized as a partner, and your share entered on the books at the first meeting of the company.

I am, sir, your humble servant,
DAVID ROSS,
In behalf of the other partners of the Virginia Yazoo Company.

AUGUSTA, Dec. 17, 1794.

SIR: Yours of yesterday is just handed to me by your brother; I am very sorry it had not come a few days sooner. The funds of the company having not been sent on to me, particularly those from our partners in Philadelphia, has greatly embarrassed me, and I shall not be freed from the embarrassment unless I get four thousand dollars from them or yourself, before the bill for disposing of the western lands shall actually pass the Legislature. It has already passed one branch, and is at this moment on its second reading before the other. Mr. Watkins, whom I beg leave to recommend to your attention, has undertaken to deliver you this, and will return immediately with your answer. I am, however, happy to find from your letter, that I am at liberty to call on you for the sum above mentioned. I trust, with certainty, that Mr. Watkins will be enabled to return in time to save a forfeiture, which the company will otherwise certainly incur. If I do not see you in Augusta, before I return to the northward, I shall with pleasure call on you as I return.

I am, dear sir, with great respect,
Your most obedient servant,
JOHN B. SCOTT,
Agent for the Va. Yazoo Com'y.

Col. W. HAMPTON.

B. No. 2.

AUGUSTA, Dec. 17, 1794.

SIR: Since my letter of to-day, I have had a conversation with your brother on the subject of your connexion with the Virginia Yazoo Company. The views and designs of the company have necessarily undergone considerable change from another company applying for the lands which the Virginia Company have pretensions to. I learn, from Mr. Ross's letter, that you are also one of that company. I find myself unable to answer your brother satisfactorily on the subject, since I have no power of dissolving the contract entered into between yourself and Mr. Ross; yet it may not be improper for me to give my opinion, which, although it cannot do away or alter the contract, will show that I have no design to do you injustice. I suppose, as the extent of our purchase has been so reduced as that the sum stipulated by your contract will exceed your proportion, including the past charges, yet the company will consider themselves bound to refund whatever that overplus may be. I hope it will be in your power to be in Augusta before the end of the session; should this be the case, I have no doubt but you will find that, although the purchase is much reduced from the original design, yet, that the prospect of gain is only reduced in the same proportion; and when that reduction has been the effect of necessity only, it will be cordially acceded to by all who are interested.

I am, sir, with great respect,
Your most obedient servant,
JOHN B. SCOTT.

John B. Scott, on behalf of the Virginia Company, proposes to purchase from the State of Georgia vacant territory included in the following boundary: Beginning at the mouth of Bear creek, on Tennessee river; thence up the most southern source of the same; thence, a due west course, to the Tombigbee; thence, along the said Tombigbee, to a parallel of latitude that shall be forty-five British statute miles, south of the northern boundary line of the State of Georgia; thence, along the said parallel of latitude, a due west course, to the Mississippi; thence up the Mississippi, to the northern boundary line of the State of Georgia; thence along the said boundary line to the Tennessee river; thence, along the said river to the place of beginning. The said John B. Scott to pay to the State in the same proportion per acre and in the same manner that the Georgia Company shall pay. The said boundaries are supposed to contain two millions eight hundred and eighty thousand acres.

November 23, 1794.

Whereas, by agreement dated the 27th day of November, 1794, made and entered into between John B. Scott, agent for the Virginia Yazoo Company, of the one part; and James Gunn, George Walker, and Matthew McAllister, and their associates, called the Georgia Company, of the other part; it was understood that the said John B. Scott should, on or before the 5th day of December, 1794, advance and loan to the said James Gunn, George Walker, and Matthew McAllister, the sum of ten thousand dollars, in consideration that the said James Gunn, George Walker, and Matthew McAllister, and their associates, called the Georgia Company, should withdraw their then application to the Legislature of Georgia, for the purchase of a part of the vacant and unappropriated lands within the said State, and should aid and assist the said John B. Scott in procuring from the State an act for disposing of the said lands to the said John B. Scott, as agent aforesaid. Now these presents witness, that the said James Gunn, George Walker, and Matthew McAllister, and their associates, hath released, given up, and cancelled the said agreement. He, the said John B. Scott, agent as aforesaid, in consideration thereof, doth agree that the said James Gunn, George Walker, and Matthew McAllister, or their agents or assigns, shall hold, as tenants in common with the said Virginia Yazoo Company, three-twentieth parts of all the lands which the said Virginia Yazoo Company may purchase from the State of Georgia, under an act of Assembly now before the Legislature, for disposing of a part of the western territory of the State, and for other purposes; upon condition that the said James Gunn, George Walker, and Matthew McAllister, or their agents or assigns, shall pay to the agent of the Virginia Yazoo Company, three-twentieth parts of the sum which the said company shall contract to give to the State for the land aforesaid, or deposit the same in the treasury of Georgia, whenever thereunto required by the said Virginia Yazoo Company, after the first day of August next; and shall at all times hereafter, when called on, pay three-twentieth parts of all expenses which the company shall hereafter incur in extinguishing Indian claims.

Given under my hand and seal, as agent for the [L. S.] said Virginia Yazoo Company, at Augusta, this 27th day of December, 1794.

J. B. SCOTT,
Agent for the Va. Yazoo Com'y.

D. No. 2.

Sir: In answer to your note, I have only to say that my agreement with the Georgia Company was founded on an understanding by both parties, that the agreement was only to take effect in case the company succeeded in their views. It is now believed we shall succeed, and I shall consider myself bound to loan the money to your company. But a very great doubt remains with me whether the funds I expected from the northward will arrive in time to enable me to make payment for you. I shall give you the earliest information in my power if this event should take place.

With real respect,

I am your humble servant,
JOHN B. SCOTT.

GEORGE WALKER, Sec. Geo. Co.

RICHMOND, Nov. 14, 1794.

DEAR SIR: I am just favored with letters from Mr. Watkins, of the 7th and 9th instant, communicating the very agreeable intelligence that you had accepted of the agency for the company, and had set out for Augusta. From your intimate acquaintance with this business from the commencement, and through all its stages, you are surely the best calculated to insure success, and I already presage the most favorable consequences from your negotiations.

I have written to Mr. Fitzsimons that you are, by this time, at Augusta. I have urged him, in the strongest terms, to have their funds ready at Augusta, and to make such communications to you as he thought proper, and have apprized him that you are invested with ample discretionary powers to bring the business to a close, by compromising with the State on the best terms you can.

I concur in opinion with Mr. Watkins, that, rather than fail in our object, we had better yield to a discount on the certificates, or we can relinquish a portion of the land to the State in the manner mentioned between Mr. Watkins and myself, but more fully digested. The relinquishment of a part of the land, and a discount on the certificates, will be the consequence of necessity, and adopted, if better cannot be done. I trust the conduct of the Virginia Company has given umbrage to none, and will meet the approbation of many, which may smooth the way to success.

The present rage for speculating in lands has set every body in motion. The extent and the variety of the applications which will be made to the present session of Assembly, will not a little embarrass the members, and, I fear, increase your difficulties. It is impossible for us here to foresee what turn the business may take, and impossible to give you instructions; every thing depends on your own good judgment and prudence, and to this I very cheerfully submit my interest. Although caution and circumspection be essentially necessary, yet, in the critical moment, you must act with decision, or the object may be lost. I have urged Mr. Venable to call upon Mr. Fitzsimons, and enforce the necessity of immediate attention to this business, which I hope will be done. As there is now a regular post to and from Augusta, I request the earliest information of your prospects, and I shall not fail to make the communication which may be essential.

I am, with great regard,
Your very humble servant,
DAVID ROSS.

JOHN B. SCOTT, Esq., of Virginia,
at present at Augusta, in Georgia.

RICHMOND, VA., Nov. 28, 1794.

DEAR SIR: Last post brought me your favor of the 14th instant, from Salisbury, and am glad to find you were then so far advanced on your journey. On the same day that you wrote to me, I wrote to you, which you have, no doubt, received ere now. As soon as I was advised of your accepting the agency, I communicated the same to Mr. A. B. Venable, and also to Mr. Fitzsimons. I reminded the latter to have the funds for the four shares taken by himself and others, at Augusta, in due time, and requested that he might correspond with you, and make such communications as he thought necessary for your information and governance. This is the second letter written to him still unanswered; but I hope he has done the needful, and written to you fully by the post. I received a letter from Mr. V. last post, dated the 20th instant: he has also reminded Mr. Fitzsimons of the critical period, and he promised to speak to the others. Mr. Watkins would inform you that Colonel Hampton and Major Nailor proposed each to take a share. Mr. V. recommends to part from but one share, as they can now be sold upon much better terms; from this letter, there is no doubt of it. I have just written to him to buy and negotiate for one or two shares more, that you may have ample funds; so that it would seem they are fond of the purchase to the northward. Here we are too poor to engage in any adventure. I have, by every stage for five weeks, expected Colonel Hampton and Mr. Call; they are not yet arrived. I have again written to the latter, that the proposition made by Colonel Hampton may be put on a certainty, and the funds at hand; and have written to Mr. V. that, if the business be not immediately closed, he may take other measures. I have no late letters from Mr. Watkins.

It is impossible for me to form any tolerable idea what turn our affairs may take. There will be a great many applicants, most of them dependent on the same source for efficient funds; it is not impossible but those gentlemen may have an agent there to co-operate with those most likely to succeed. This is mere conjecture; you will judge for yourself from circumstances. I understand a Mr. Hooper is the ostensible agent for our friends in Philadelphia.

If Mr. Fitzsimons corresponds with you, as I recommended to him, he will, no doubt, go fully into the subject, and let you know his agent for paying the money: if you receive such a letter, you will know what to do; if no such letter, you will be embarrassed. However, after all, you will find that very much depends on the idea which may be entertained by the other companies, whether the Virginia Company can be useful to the others, or whether the interest of the others can be promoted by the ruin of the Virginia Company; and it is more than probable they will pursue that conduct most likely to accomplish their own views. I have no doubt but you will have a difficult task to reconcile so many different interests. Hence, I repeat it, that we can form no proper judgment here. It is likely that this is the last session that we may hope for doing any thing; and a compromise, on liberal terms, will be better than keeping the business longer in suspense. What compromise will be more acceptable to them I know not: whether to extend the price for the said land; to pay part specie, in lieu of part of the certificates; or all specie, and allowing a discount on the certificates, or relinquishing to the State a part of the land chequered in with ours,—all is uncertainty just now. Whilst it may be dangerous to attach yourself too closely to any particular party, it will be no less dangerous to draw on yourself the ill will and enmity of any party; but I am sure that these hints are unnecessary to you. I need not tell you how anxious I shall be to hear from you, and I request that you may omit not a single post after your arrival.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

DAVID ROSS.

Capt. JOHN B. SCOTT, of Virginia,
at present at Augusta, in Georgia.

PHILADELPHIA, December 3, 1794.

SIR: By a letter I have received from Mr. Daniel Ross, I learn that you had been engaged by the Virginia Yazoo Company, to attend the meeting of the Legislature of Georgia, for the purpose of obtaining information of the sale made by the State to that company, and he wished me to inform you (in case you were successful in your application,) how you could be furnished with the proportion of four shares held here, so as to be in time to make good the conditions of the purchase. The holders of these shares here (of which I am one) are very doubtful whether the grant will be obtained, and have, therefore, thought it unnecessary to send in advance so considerable a sum of money; but, as soon as you can ascertain the practicability of obtaining it, you may either draw upon this place, say, upon Robert Morris, esq., for three-fourths, and upon me for one-fourth; or, if that shall be found impracticable, either to advise me when the money will be wanted, or send forward an express, and, in either case, the money shall be forthcoming. If you should have occasion to send, I will thank you to advise me whether bills on Charleston could be negotiated for any part; because, in that case, I would establish a credit there. You will oblige me by advising, from time to time, what the prospects are, and be assured

I am, with respect, sir,

Your most humble servant,

THOS. FITZSIMONS.

Mr. JOHN SCOTT.

To the Honorable the Legislature of the State of Georgia.

The memorial of Patrick Henry, David Ross, Abraham B. Venable, John B. Scott, William Cowan, John Watts, and Francis Watkins, in behalf of themselves and others of the Virginia Yazoo Company, humbly sheweth: That your memorialists, in the session of 1789, presented a petition to this honorable House, praying that they might become purchasers, for themselves and their associates, of a tract of land in the western territory of this State, which was submitted to a select committee, composed of a member from each county, and formed, as your memorialists conceive, the contracting party on behalf of the public, who, after mature deliberation, agreed with your memorialists, agents, for the sale of a certain district of land contained within the boundaries particularly described, at the price of ninety-three thousand seven hundred and forty-one dollars, payable in paper medium, or liquidated debts of the State; and a law passed, accordingly, securing to your memorialists the said district of lands, on the payment of the aforesaid ninety-three thousand seven hundred and forty-one dollars into the public treasury.

Your memorialists beg leave to show, further, that they lost no time in ratifying and confirming, in the most ample manner, the contract which their agents had made; they notified to the Executive Department of the State their acceptance of the contract in such terms as bound them for the payment agreed upon, and would have subjected your memorialists to the suit of the State, had they failed to perform their part of the contract; and your memorialists very reasonably concluded that the agreement for the lands was fully binding upon both parties, and would be duly complied with. From this moment your memorialists considered their fortunes as pledged to the State, and their reputations with the world, for the performance of the contract on their part.

They accordingly proceeded to provide payment, in conformity to the true intent and meaning of their contract, which sum they tendered to the treasurer of the State within the time prescribed by law, and which payment was refused by the treasurer, without assigning any reasons therefor; and thus your memorialists have been hitherto delayed in obtaining any satisfaction for their money, which remains invested in the capital, for the payment stipulated to be made, as aforesaid; nor for their trouble, fatigue, and waste of time, which have been great; whilst their expenditures, in unavoidable and necessary expenses, (free from imprudences,) amount to a heavy sum.

And, being conscious of the rectitude of their conduct, as well as the justness of their claim, thus respectfully submitted, they presume to ask and look up to the honorable the Legislature, for that justice which, they humbly trust, they are entitled to, and which they fondly hope, for the honor and dignity of the State, will not be withheld from them.

Your memorialists, taking a review of their conduct, through every part of this business, cannot discover that they have been wanting in any matter or thing incumbent upon them to do or perform; nor can it be suggested that they have done any thing inconsistent with the respect due to the State, or to lessen that confidence reposed in them. They are free to acknowledge, that, from sentiments of great respect for the State, and a high regard for the public opinion, they have an ardent desire that their negotiations with the Legislature may be such as will accord with and be agreeable to the public mind.

They humbly pray that this honorable House will be pleased to take up the subject of the purchase made by the Virginia Yazoo Company; to revise and so model the same as the justice and wisdom of the House shall devise more satisfactory to the public, and consistent with justice to your memorialists; and, relying on the honor and liberality of the Legislature, fondly hope that the terms which they shall adopt, will be such as the memorialists may with propriety accept of, and enable them to put their original plan in execution, and become useful citizens of the State.

And your memorialists, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

The foregoing is the original, a copy of which I presented to the Legislature of Georgia, while in session, in the winter 1794-95.

JOHN B. SCOTT.

To the Hon. the Speaker of the House of Representatives:

The undersigned, as agent for the Virginia Yazoo Company, finding that the terms proposed by him to purchase a part of the western territory of this State have not been acceded to, and that other terms are held out by the Legislature for the acceptance of the said company, begs leave to notify to you that he cannot, agreeably to the views of the company, accept thereof.

JOHN B. SCOTT,

Agent for the Virginia Yazoo Company.

January 1st, 1795.

VIRGINIA, Prince Edward County, to wit:

This day, William M. Watkins (son of Joel Watkins, of Charlotte) came before me, a justice of the peace for the county aforesaid, who, being first sworn on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, depose and saith, that he accompanied General John B. Scott, in the fall, 1794, to the Legislature of the State of Georgia, then in session at Augusta; that he was well acquainted with the transactions of the said Scott, as agent of the Virginia Yazoo Company, and believes no part of the conduct of the said Scott in that business was concealed from him; that, in behalf of the said company, some short time after his arrival, he made propositions to the Legislature respecting their claim, and various proceedings were had thereon. At length, it was determined by the said Scott that, as the Legislature did not accede to his propositions, to withdraw them; that, immediately upon the withdrawal, a new company was formed, called the Upper Mississippi Company, who made propositions for the said tract of territory, contemplated by the Virginia Yazoo Company, in their propositions, which were withdrawn; that, in this company, the Virginia Yazoo Company had no interest, as this deponent believes; for he knew of the formation of the company, saw their articles of agreement, and was himself interested in the said company; that the said Scott held seven shares in the said Upper Mississippi Company, but the greater part for others, one of which was for this deponent, but no part, as this deponent believes, for the Virginia Yazoo Company; that this deponent has never heard it even suggested, until lately, that the Virginia Company had any interest in the purchase made by that, or any company, in 1795, and believes they had none; that the above suggestion, as this deponent understands, comes from Colonel W. Hampton, who was also interested in the said Upper Mississippi Company, and to whom the said Scott, acting as a private individual, made sale of a considerable part, if not of the whole, of the interest he held; and that, in the said sale, this deponent's interest was included. This deponent being interrogated, whether the said Colonel Hampton was interested in the Georgia Company, says, that, of his own knowledge, he does not know it, but that he understood that he was very largely interested. And further this deponent saith not.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, this 16th of February, 1804.

W. M. WATKINS.

Sworn to, before me, this 16th of February, 1804.

C. SCOTT.

Whereas John B. Scott, John C. Nightingale, and Wade Hampton, called the Upper Mississippi Company, as grantees of the said company, have given to each of us, signers hereto, a certificate that we do and shall hold such share, or parts thereof, as are hereafter placed against our names, respectively, of the interest held by the said company; now, these presents witness that we, and each of us, will consider ourselves bound by such rules and regulations as the said company may adopt for the government and disposition of the general interest of the company, in the proportion that we hold in the said company. Given under our hand this ninth day of January, 1795.

Resolved, That the treasurers be directed and required to receive no payment, in discharge of any moneys due, or owing to the State, but gold or silver, or the paper medium, except where the laws of the State clearly, positively, and particularly direct otherwise; any resolution of a former Assembly to the contrary notwithstanding.

RHODES'S, January 31st, 1804.

STR: It has been communicated by an individual, whose name it is unessential to express, that papers have been placed before the select committee appointed to investigate the rights of the Virginia Yazoo Company, which, from their supposed character, at the same time that they are injurious to the claim of the Virginia Company, have a tendency, direct or indirect, towards supporting the claims of purchasers claiming under the act of Georgia, of the year 1795. This has been conveyed in a manner that leaves scarcely a dubitable impression of its truth. It is conceived that the character of these papers ought to be known to the agents of the Virginia Yazoo Company. With what propriety such papers are now introduced, or are received by the committee, the agents of the company undertake not to decide. They take not the liberty either to discuss or determine the right of the committee to form conclusions from papers or documents unofficial, which do not appear upon the records of that office, where it explicitly is, by law, declared, that within a limited period, every sustaining document should be placed. But granting papers to be before the honorable committee affecting the right of the Virginia Company yet unknown to their agents, whatever may be their character, or however irregular, it is presumed to be proper, before a report be drafted, that their nature should be ascertained, in order, if not cast aside by the committee as inadmissible, opportunity may be given for the introduction of counteractive testimony.

With deference and respect, we are, sir, your most obedient servants,

DAVID ROSS,

WILLIAM COWAN,

Agents on behalf of the Virginia Yazoo Company.

The Hon. Jos. H. NICHOLSON,

Chairman of the Committee.

At a meeting of the Virginia Yazoo Company, present, Francis Watkins, Patrick Henry, John Walls, Abraham B. Venable, William Call, John B. Scott, and David Ross, for himself, and as attorney in fact for Wade Hampton, Esq., in virtue of a power of attorney produced and delivered to the Director, at the house of Francis Watkins, Esq., in Prince Edward, 25th July, 1795.

The company, taking into consideration the purchase which they made some years ago from the Legislature of the State of Georgia of a certain tract of country within the same, and upon a review of their negotiations with the said State, find they have with good faith done all that was incumbent upon them, as one of the contracting parties; but that the State, on their part, had not only refused to permit a grant to issue to the company, but have proceeded to make new contracts for the sale of the greater part of the said tract of country to divers persons associated into new companies; and whereas every friendly and respectful application to the Government of the said State, for a grant for the lands aforesaid, has been made by the company, and withheld by the Government, and being fully impressed with the justice of their claim, they will in future prosecute the same in the courts of the United States.

Resolved, therefore, That the claim of the company to the tract of country purchased from the said State, or so much thereof as may be included in the sale or sales lately made by their Legislature, be prosecuted in the Supreme Court of Chancery of the United States, against the late purchasers, and all others claiming a legal right therein.

Resolved, also, That Patrick Henry and David Ross be appointed a committee to proceed, immediately, in the most prudent and effectual manner, to prosecute and assert the company's claims to the said tract of country, and that the director is hereby authorized and empowered to nominate and appoint any member of the company, or other fit and proper person, to treat with the said companies, or either of them, upon just and liberal terms, for the same tract of country included within their purchases, or any part thereof, as shall be mutually agreeable, in order to terminate all differences in the most amicable manner, and that funds shall be provided for the payment of such compromise when the said company or companies shall be capable of making a sufficient title for the lands so compromised for, and shall in due form execute the same.

Resolved, That measures be taken for the immediate collection of the sums due from Messrs. Morris, Nielson, Greenleaf, Fitzsimons, and Hampton; to be reserved in the hands of the director, for the purposes of the said prosecutions, and other contingent expenses; and that the proceedings of this meeting be notified to the said gentlemen, and their concurrence requested in the future operations of the company, which may render a further advance of money necessary, to the amount of five thousand dollars on each share, to be paid into the hands of the director by the 10th day of October next, if called for by him.

Copy transmitted to Messrs. Morris, Fitzsimons, Greenleaf, and Nielson.

David Ross, Francis Watkins, and Patrick Henry, or any two of them, are appointed a committee to carry into execution any measures, which they may judge most conclusive for carrying into effect the views of the company, in obtaining from the Land Company in Georgia, by compromise, such part or parts of their lands, as to them may seem most for the interest of this company.

July 26.

John B. Scott, who was appointed to attend the Legislature of Georgia, at their last session, in order to solicit a grant for the tract of country formerly purchased from them by the company, which they refused to comply with, and proceeded to make new contracts for the same lands with others, directing the treasurer, by an order of their House, to return the money formerly paid on account of said purchase, now informed the company that he had inadvertently accepted of the said money from the treasurer, and was ready to deliver it to them; but they unanimously refused to accept of it, and in the most express terms deny that they either gave any orders for withdrawing the money, or had any such intentions; and they not only disavow the right of receiving the said money, but they declare that it is, and ever has been, their uniform intention to pay up the balance whenever the Government of Georgia shall perform their part of the contract, and permit a grant to issue, agreeably to the original purchase.

LUNENBURG COUNTY,

February 14, 1804.

DEAR SIR: In the progress of the business of the Virginia Yazoo Company, now before a committee of the honorable the House of Representatives of the United States, that committee is desirous to be informed whether there is any minute or resolution of the company showing John B. Scott's powers as agent of the said company to the session of the Legislature of Georgia in the winter of 1794-5, in order to obtain the grant claimed by them as purchasers under the act of 1789, or to effect terms of compromise therefor; or any such respecting the protest taken by the company against the act of Mr. Scott's receiving back the money (so stated by him) paid by them into the treasury of Georgia, in part payment of the said contract.

Please give me your answer, enclosing such originals as you may find relating to the above.

Yours, sincerely,

WILLIAM COWAN.

Mr. FRANCIS WATKINS, Prince Edward.

PRINCE EDWARD,

February 16, 1804.

DEAR SIR: I have, as you desire, examined, and do not find in my possession any minutes or resolution of the company, which has relation to the powers given General Scott, as agent for the company, to the Legislature of Georgia, the session of 1794-5. He did not accept the agency till about November, 1794, and believe there was no meeting of the company for the occasion. I did expect he knew the sentiments of the company, with regard to the object of his mission, which I understood to be, to assert the rights of the company to the land purchased, or to compromise with the State. If there were any written instructions of the company for General Scott, I have no recollection of them. The original protest was sent on to you at Washington city, and I have not seen other minutes of the company respecting the same.

Respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

Mr. WILLIAM COWAN, Lunenburg.

STATE OF VIRGINIA, Prince Edward county.

This day Francis Watkins made oath before me, a magistrate for said county, that the facts stated in his foregoing letter to Mr. Cowan, are true, to the best of his knowledge and belief.

Given under my hand this 16th day of February, 1804:

5th CONGRESS.

No. 102.

1st SESSION.

CLAIMANTS UNDER THE GEORGIA AND TENNESSEE COMPANIES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 17, 1804.

To the Honorable the Senate of the United States now sitting:

The memorial of Thomas Young, of the city of Savannah, in the State of Georgia, respectfully sheweth: That he holds, and is entitled to a certain portion of that tract of land which was, on the ——— day of January, 1795, granted by the State of Georgia to James Gunn, Matthew M'Allister, George Walker, and their associates, under the name of the Georgia Company: that the tract of land in which your memorialist is so interested, being only part of the land granted to that company, is described and ascertained by well known metes and bounds: that all the title papers, which evidence the right of your memorialist to this tract of land, have been duly recorded in the office of the Secretary of State, previous to the 1st day of January last past.

That, on the ——— day of February, 1803, your memorialist preferred to the House of Representatives of the United States, a memorial upon the subject of the said grant, a copy of which is hereto annexed, to which he refers, and prays that the same may be taken as a part of this his memorial.

Your memorialist still maintaining and insisting, upon the principles advanced and contended for in that former memorial, holds himself bound, and is willing to accept of any or either of the alternatives in that memorial proposed for settling and adjusting this unpleasant, troublesome, and expensive business. But more than twelve months having elapsed since that memorial was presented, and your memorialist having already incurred great expense and fatigue in pursuing this business, is sorry to find that he is now as distant as ever from this final adjustment, so much desired by him, and, as he presumes, by the United States.

Your memorialist, therefore, respectfully solicits this honorable body to take up this subject, and to make some provision for obtaining, from some competent tribunal of justice, a fair and just decision upon his claim, if any doubt exists as to its validity in law or in equity, or that this honorable body will make some provision for having the same finally adjusted by compromise.

Your memorialist, having made this purchase, and paid his money, in the ordinary course of business, for property guaranteed by a legislative act of the State of Georgia, entertains a belief and a confidence that it comports with the honor, dignity, and interest of the United States, and of the Government thereof to protect the individuals of that Government in the possession and enjoyment of their honest and fair acquisitions. As the agents of the United States, to whom that honor, dignity, and interest are confided, your memorialist respectfully addresses himself, believing that it never can be consistent therewith, or with the wishes of those who manage the affairs thereof, to suppress, by the strong hand of power, without regard to right, the just claim of an individual, or in that manner to prevent and evade the fair and full discussion of a claim in the way most likely to insure a decision conformably to the justice and right of the case.

Thus impressed, your memorialist prays this honorable body to take this subject into consideration, and to take such measures therein as to justice appertaineth.

THOMAS YOUNG,
By JOHN T. MASON,
his Attorney for this purpose.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress now assembled:

The memorial of Thomas Young respectfully sheweth: That he, the undersigned, is a proprietor in a company entitled to certain lands, derived by purchase from a company commonly called the Georgia Company, to whom the lands were originally granted by the State of Georgia, under a law of that State, and is deeply interested in a law depending before this honorable body. The grant to the original company was for upwards of twenty million acres of land, of which one million nine hundred and eleven thousand acres were purchased by the company in which the undersigned is concerned, having a specific designated location, appearing on the plat herewith filed. To these one million nine hundred and eleven thousand acres, no part of the Indian title has yet been extinguished. There are no settlers on it, and no conflicting claims derived from British, Spanish, or other grants; and, consequently, the company's pretensions stand on high and strong foundation. This purchase, so made from the original grantees, of one million nine hundred and eleven thousand acres, was divided into twenty-five shares of seventy-six thousand four hundred acres each; of these the undersigned holds, in his own right, six twenty-fifths, equal to four hundred and fifty-eight thousand four hundred acres, and is attorney and representative of three twenty-fifths, equal to two hundred and twenty-nine thousand two hundred acres, making, in the whole, nine twenty-fifth parts of said purchase, equal to six hundred and eighty-seven thousand six hundred acres, the remaining sixteen twenty-fifths being relinquished by the other purchasers, as he has been informed, are now vested in the United States by their treaty with the State of Georgia.

The undersigned, and those whom he represents, were purchasers from the original company, bona fide, for a valuable consideration, and obtained a deed, or conveyance, for their one million nine hundred and eleven thousand acres, on the 4th day of November, 1795, which title so derived, he is informed, and believes, is good and available in law and equity.

Unwilling to be a judge in his own cause, and not admitting the jurisdiction of this honorable body to decide titles, the undersigned will, notwithstanding, most cheerfully submit to have a decision of his right according to the laws of the land, in such mode as this honorable body shall suggest, to effectuate it in the most speedy and impartial manner.

The land he claims is free from conflicting claims, has superior advantages of soil and situations, is finely watered, and has easy access to market, by the Mississippi and Mobile rivers.

Thus circumstanced, and with the deep interest held by the undersigned, he yet, for the sake of quiet, to avoid expense and delay, to harmonize with the operations of Government in the settlement of this tract of country, is willing on behalf of himself, and those whom he represents, to come to a fair, just, and equitable compromise; and, therefore, submits the following propositions:

Your memorialist wishes to be considered as standing alone, unconnected with any other company or individual, as the representative of nine shares, or twenty-five parts of the lands before described, which he will sell, surrender, and release to the United States, upon the following terms: Let the said six hundred and eighty-seven thousand six hundred acres of land be estimated at twenty-five cents per acre, which will make the gross sum of one hundred and seventy-one thousand nine hundred dollars. As the original grant to the Georgia Company contained twenty-two millions of acres, and in that grant there were reserved one million of acres for citizens to subscribe; deduct from the gross sum above stated one twenty-second part thereof to satisfy these claims, that is, seven thousand eight hundred and fifteen dollars, and the balance remaining will be one hundred and sixty-four thousand and eighty-five dollars. This sum, divided into nine parts, will show each share to be worth eighteen thousand two hundred and thirty-one dollars.

Your memorialist, at this price, will agree to sell and surrender to the United States all the aforesaid shares under his control; and, for that sum, receive certificates or evidences of debt for each share, transferable, bearing an interest from the 1st day of January, 1806, payable only out of the proceeds of sales of the lands contained within the limits of the grant to the Georgia Company, and receivable, at all times, according to their value upon the face of them, together with the interest thereon accrued, if any there be, in the purchase of lands, hereafter to be sold by the United States, within the limits ceded by the State of Georgia to the United States, at the current selling price fixed, or from time to time to be fixed, by the United States. Or, if preferred by the United States, your memorialist will receive evidences of debt, in like manner, at the rate or price of one thousand four hundred and forty dollars per share, being twenty cents per acre, to bear an interest from the 1st day of January, 1804, transferable and payable out of the before mentioned funds; and, in like manner, receivable for the price of lands. Your memorialist agrees, in either event, to postpone the payment of these certificates, till the sum stipulated to be paid to the State of Georgia is fully discharged. That, if any conflicting claim should arise, or be brought forward by any person claiming under the said grant, from the State of Georgia to the Georgia Company, which may or can interfere with any of the shares so represented by your memorialist, the same may, and shall, by commissioners to be appointed by the United States, be decided in conformity to the principles of law and equity.

The Honorable the Senate of the United States, now sitting:

The memorial of James Strawbridge, of the city of Philadelphia, and Thomas Young, of the city of Savannah, respectfully sheweth: That they are interested in, and, for a valuable consideration, bona fide purchasers of a large part of that tract of land, granted on the 24th day of January, 1795, by the State of Georgia, to the Tennessee Company. That your memorialist, James Strawbridge, in his own right, and that of others, represents and holds complete power over three hundred and nine shares or four hundred twentieth parts of that grant; and that your memorialist, Thomas Young, holds in his own right four shares, or four hundred twentieth parts of the same grant. That, as they are informed and believe, most of the other shares in that grant have been surrendered to the State of Georgia.

That soon after the passage of the act of Congress, entitled "An act for an amicable settlement of limits with the State of Georgia, and authorizing the establishment of a Government in the Mississippi Territory," to wit, on the 18th day of January, 1802, your memorialist, James Strawbridge, then representing a great portion of those who were and are interested in the said grant, wrote a letter to the commissioners appointed on the part of the United States, in virtue of that act, in which he exhibited to them fully the title and claim of himself, and those that he represented; a copy of which letter, marked A, is hereto annexed, which your present memorialists pray may be taken as a part of this their memorial. That, after the commissioners appointed in the before mentioned act of Congress had reported to Congress upon the subjects by the said act referred to them, to wit, on the 23d day of February, 1802, your memorialist, James Strawbridge, preferred to the House of Representatives of the United States a memorial upon the subject of the said grant, and the rights derived under it; a copy of which memorial is hereto annexed, marked B, which your present memorialists pray may be taken as a part of this their memorial.

Your memorialists, still maintaining the principles advanced and contended for in that memorial of James Strawbridge, hold themselves bound to accept, if offered to them, any or either of the alternatives in that memorial proposed for settling this unpleasant, troublesome, and expensive business. But, having now wasted more than a year since that memorial was presented, and having incurred great expense and fatigue, they are sorry to find that they are now as distant as ever from this final adjustment, so much desired by them, and, as they presume, by the United States.

Your memorialists, therefore, respectfully solicit this honorable body to take up the subject and make some provisions for obtaining, from some competent and authorized tribunal of justice, a fair and just decision upon their respective claims, if any doubt exists as to their validity in law or in equity; or to make some provision for having the same settled and finally adjusted by compromise.

Your memorialists, having paid their money in the ordinary course of business, for the purchase of this property, guaranteed by a legislative act of the State of Georgia, entertain a belief and a confidence that it comports with the honor, dignity, and interest of the United States, and of the Government thereof, to protect the individuals of that Government in the possession and enjoyment of their honest and fair acquisitions. To the agents of the United States, to whom that honor, dignity, and interest are confided, your memorialists respectfully address themselves, believing that it never can be consistent with either or with the wishes of our Government to suppress by the strong hand of power, without regard to right, the just claim of an individual, or, in like manner, to evade and prevent the discussion of a claim in that way most likely to insure a decision conformable to justice and right.

Under these impressions your memorialists have applied, and do apply to this honorable body, praying that the subject may be by them considered, and that done in the premises which to justice and right appertaineth; and your memorialists, as in duty bound, shall ever pray, &c.

Trustee for the Tennessee Company.

WASHINGTON, January 18, 1802.

GENTLEMEN: I understand commissioners have been appointed by the State of Georgia, and now in this city, for the purpose of ceding to the United States part of their western territory, and that you are appointed by the President of the United States to receive the same.

As I am interested, and trustee for a company claiming a tract of land, situated on the waters of the Tennessee river, which will be included in that territory, said to be now offered for your acceptance by the State of Georgia, for the use of the United States, I therefore beg leave to submit the following documents relative to our claim, for your consideration, with the hope that such order will be taken by you, that no dispute may hereafter take place betwixt the United States and our company, should they succeed to the jurisdiction of that country.

First. I hand you a copy of a law passed by the Legislature of Georgia, in December, 1794, and January 1795, entitled "an act for appropriating a part of the unlocated territory of this State for the payment of the late State troops, and for other purposes therein mentioned."

By this law lands were sold to four companies; the one by the name of the Tennessee Company is the one we are interested in.

Second. The deed of conveyance, agreeably to said law, by George Matthews, esq., then Governor of Georgia, to Zachariah Cox, Matthias Maher, and their associates, dated January 24th, 1795; and Third. A deed of trust from Matthias Maher, and others, now proprietors of these lands, to James Strawbridge, Ebenezer Jackson, and Samuel Dexter, trustees, whose authority to act for the company you will fully understand, by perusing the same.

When the company first got organized, they agreed, for their mutual benefit and convenience, to divide their interest in this tract of land into four hundred and twenty shares; and certificates for that number of shares were issued by Zachariah Cox and Matthias Maher, certifying that the proprietor was entitled to the one four hundred and twentieth part of the interest in said lands. The proprietors of three hundred of these shares have signed the deed of trust, and I, as acting trustee, have these shares in my possession. I have heard that James Greenleaf, who lately failed in the city of Philadelphia, held about forty shares, which he gave to his creditors, and that they have relinquished them to the State of Georgia; but this I have no proof of: the remaining shares, I am informed, are in the hands of gentlemen in Georgia and Boston.

If any other information you may call for, and it is in my power to give, I will render it with great pleasure.

With regard, I am, gentlemen, your humble servant,

JAMES STRAWBRIDGE,
Trustee for the Tennessee Company.

JAMES MADISON, ALBERT GALLATIN, and LEVI LINCOLN, Esquires,

To the Honorable the House of Representatives of the United States in Congress now assembled:

The memorial of James Strawbridge respectfully sheweth: That the report lately submitted to this honorable House by the commissioners appointed in pursuance of the act, entitled "an act for an amicable settlement of limits with the State of Georgia, and authorizing the establishment of a government in the Mississippi territory," has been so recently submitted, that little opportunity has been afforded to examine the same with that care and attention that the interests of your memorialists, and those he represents, demand of him.

That your memorialist, in his own right, owns and possesses thirty-one shares, or four hundred and twentieth parts, of that tract of land which was granted, on the 24th day of January, 1795, by the State of Georgia to the Tennessee Company; that he purchased these shares in the city of Philadelphia in the spring of the year 1795, and paid a valuable consideration for the same; that he also represents two hundred and seventy other shares, or four hundred and twentieth parts of the said grant, which belong to sundry individuals who purchased the same from the original grantees, and paid a valuable consideration therefor, he believes in the spring or summer of the year 1795; that these last mentioned shares have been conveyed by the respective owners thereof to your memorialist, in trust, with a view to consolidate the interests of so many of the proprietors of this land.

To these portions or shares of the lands included within the above mentioned grant from the State of Georgia to the Tennessee Company, your memorialist holds himself clearly and unquestionably entitled, both in law and in equity, and will be at all times ready to support and maintain that title whenever the same may or can be brought for decision before a tribunal of justice competent to decide thereon.

The commissioners, in their report above mentioned, and in the eighteenth page thereof, have expressed themselves thus: "And without pretending to affirm that the Legislature of the State of Georgia were competent to make the decision, they feel no hesitation in declaring it as their opinion that, under all the circumstances which may affect the case as they have come within their knowledge, and as herein stated, the title of the claimants cannot be supported." That men should think differently on this subject is not matter of surprise; your memorialist cannot have the power or the right to decide upon the validity of his own title, nor can he admit that such a right exists in any body, natural or politic, who is or may be interested in the decision of the question. He hopes that it will be considered by this honorable House that he is not suing for charity or asking for favors, but that he is asserting and pursuing a right that he deems unquestionable; he, therefore, hopes that such measures may be adopted as the wisdom and justice of this honorable House shall suggest, to enable your memorialist to bring his title for adjudication before a competent tribunal of justice.

But if it is the wish of this honorable House to purchase and possess the United States of the title held by your memorialist, to free himself from further trouble and expense, he will sell the whole interest therein by him represented, not, indeed, upon the terms proposed in the report of the commissioners above mentioned, but upon terms which the compact between the United States and the State of Georgia will justify, although your memorialist does not concede that this compact can in any way affect or diminish his rights.

Without meaning to call in question the validity of the title of any of the claimants under grants from the State of Georgia, your memorialist begs leave to state, that there never was and never can be a doubt but that the whole of the lands contained within the grant from the State of Georgia to the Tennessee Company, are within the established and admitted boundary of the State of Georgia; that the Indian titles to any part of that tract having never been extinguished, there can be no conflicting claims arising from settlement rights. Whether these circumstances make these lands more valuable than those claimed by others, and justify a discriminating price, it is for this honorable House to determine.

Your memorialist wishes to be considered as standing alone, unconnected with any other company, as the representative of certain portions of the land granted by the State of Georgia to the Tennessee Company, the title to which he will sell and release to the United States upon the following terms:

The sum of one million two hundred thousand dollars shall be considered as the price or value of the whole tract of land granted by the State of Georgia to the Tennessee Company. From this take sixty thousand five hundred dollars for citizens' rights, twelve thousand five hundred dollars to satisfy the grant from the State of Georgia to the commissioners who surveyed those lands, and seventy-seven thousand dollars as a fund to satisfy and extinguish the claims of settlers, if any such there are now be upon this particular tract of country; these sums to be retained by the United States. This will reduce the first mentioned sum to one million and fifty thousand dollars, which, divided into four hundred and twenty parts or shares, will show each share to be worth two thousand five hundred dollars; a sum less than twenty-five cents per acre for the said land.

Your memorialist, at this price, will agree to sell and surrender to the United States all the shares that are or may be under his control, and receive for such price certificates or evidences of debt made transferable, and bearing an interest at the rate of six per centum per annum from the 1st day of January, 1806, to be paid only out of the proceeds of the sales of those lands contained within the limits of the grant from the State of Georgia to the Tennessee Company, but to be made receivable at all times, (after the completion of the payment stipulated for to the State of Georgia,) according to the value expressed upon the face of them, together with the interest accrued, if any there be, in the purchase of lands hereafter to be sold by the United States within the tract of country ceded to them by the State of Georgia, at the ordinary current price at which the United States shall, from time to time, sell the same.

Or, if preferred by the United States, your memorialist will receive evidences of debt in the like manner, at the rate or price of two thousand dollars per share, transferable, as before stated, to bear an interest of six per centum per annum from the 1st day of January, 1804, payable only out of the before mentioned funds, and receivable, as before stated, in the purchase of lands. And, in either event, your memorialist agrees that the payment of these certificates shall be postponed until the sum stipulated to be paid to the State of Georgia is fully satisfied.

And in the event that there should be no claims for settlements within this tract exhibited and made good on or before the 1st day of January, in the year 1806, to absorb the said sum of seventy-seven thousand dollars, that then the said seventy-seven thousand dollars, or so much thereof as remains unappropriated to the purposes above contemplated, shall be divided into four hundred and twenty shares and certificates, or evidences of debt issued for the same, upon the principles above stated, and so many of such certificates delivered to your memorialist as he shall have previously surrendered and released shares to the United States.

In case any doubts shall arise as to the power of your memorialist to sell and release to the United States any of the shares by him offered to be sold and released, the United States or their agent shall have power to accept or reject such surrender and release; and where the same shall be rejected, the United States shall retain the price of such share, leaving the said share so refused unaffected by the agreement with your memorialist.

That if any conflicting claims should arise or be brought forward by any person claiming under the said grant from the State of Georgia to the Tennessee Company, which may or can interfere with any of the shares so represented, or to be represented, by your memorialist, the same may and shall, by commissioners for that purpose by law to be appointed, be decided in conformity to the principles of law and equity.

Your memorialist further represents that, of the above mentioned four hundred and twenty shares in the Tennessee Company, the number of fifty shares have been surrendered to the State of Georgia, and that most of the outstanding shares which are not at this time represented by your memorialist may, and probably will, hereafter, be placed under his control; in that event, your memorialist will also sell and surrender such shares to the United States upon the terms above proposed.

JAMES STRAWBRIDGE,
Trustee for the Tennessee Company.

8th CONGRESS.

No. 103.

2d SESSION.

DESCRIPTION OF THE LEAD MINES IN UPPER LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO CONGRESS NOVEMBER 8, 1804.

By message from the President of the United States, of which the following is an extract:

"The lead mines in that territory (Louisiana) offer so rich a supply of that metal as to merit attention. The report now communicated will inform you of their state, and of the necessity of immediate inquiry into their occupation and titles."

ST. LOUIS, June 16, 1804.

SIR: In consequence of a request made me by Captain Lewis, before he left this, I now do myself the honor of enclosing you a copy of a dissertation on the lead mines in Upper Louisiana, furnished me by Moses Austin, esq. This gentleman owns an extensive mine, situated about thirty-eight miles back of St. Genevieve, which he has worked for some years past, and, from his education and experience, I conceive him to be better calculated to give correct information on the subject than any other man in this quarter.

I am, sir, with sentiments of high respect, your very humble servant,

AMOS STODDARD,
Captain and first civil commandant of Upper Louisiana.

The PRESIDENT of the United States.

SIR: Agreeably to your request, I have annexed a memorandum of the number, extent, and situation of the lead mines in Upper Louisiana, with an estimate of the average quality of mineral produced, and the number of hands employed at each mine; with the probable quantity which may be annually produced, when the country becomes populated so as to afford workmen sufficient to occupy the mines to advantage.

NAMES OF THE MINES.

- | | |
|-------------------|---------------------|
| 1. Mine à Burton, | 6. Mine à la Plate, |
| 2. Mine à Robuna, | 7. Mine à Joe, |
| 3. Old Mines, | 8. Mine à Lanye, |
| 4. Mine Ranault, | 9. Mine à la Mott, |
| 5. Mine à Maneto, | 10. Mine à Gerbore. |

1. The Mine à Burton, situated thirty-eight miles west northwest of St. Genevieve, was discovered by Francis Burton, about the year 1763, on a fork of Grand river, ten miles from its junction with the main river, after which it takes the name of Ranault's fork of the Merimack, and unites with that river, about twenty-five miles above its junction with the Mississippi. The Fouché Ranault is navigable in the spring season, within ten miles of the Mine à Burton. In the year 1798, a concession of one league in superficies, comprehending about one-third part of the mine, (on condition he should erect a smelting furnace, and establish a lead manufacture,) was granted to Mr. Austin, all of which he has carried into execution. Francis Burton, also, obtained a grant of four acres, as a compensation for the discovery.

There is a small village at this place, of twenty families, who cultivate a little land near the mines, but have no concessions. Two grist mills, with a saw mill, furnish the inhabitants with grinding and plank.

The greatest part of the workings at the Mine à Burton are in an open prairie, which rises nearly a hundred feet above the level of the creek. The mines may be said to extend over two thousand acres of land; but the principal workings are within the limits of one hundred and sixty acres; and perhaps no part of the world furnishes lead ore in greater quantities and purity. The mineral is found within two feet of the surface of the earth, and it is seldom the miners dig deeper than ten feet; not that the mineral discontinues, but because they find it troublesome to raise it out of the ground; the French miners being unacquainted with the utility of machinery, and generally are able to procure plenty nearer the surface.

The manner in which the mines have been wrought renders it impossible to determine whether the mineral terminates in regular veins or not; for when the miner finds himself ten or twelve feet below the surface, his inexperience obliges him to quit his digging and begin anew, notwithstanding the appearance of mineral may be good. Thus, one-half his time is taken up in sinking new holes or pits.

The mineral is of two qualities, gravel and fossil mineral. The gravel mineral is found immediately under the soil, intermixed with gravel, in pieces from one to fifty pounds weight of solid mineral. After passing through the gravel, which is commonly from three to four feet, is found a sand rock, which is easily broken up with a pick, and when exposed to the air, crumbles to a fine sand. This rock also continues five or six feet, and contains mineral nearly of the same quality as the gravel: but mineral of the first quality is found in a bed of red clay, under the sand rock, in pieces from ten to five hundred pounds weight, on the outside of which is a white, gold, or silver colored spar or fossil, of a bright, glittering appearance, as solid as the mineral itself, and in weight as three to two; this being taken off, the mineral is solid, unconnected with any other substance, of a broad grain, and what mineralogists call potter's ore. When it is smelted in a common smelting furnace, it produces sixty per cent.; and when again smelted in a slag furnace, produces fifteen per cent. more, making, cleanly-smelted, seventy-five per cent. The gravel mineral is incrustated with a dead grey substance, the eighth of an inch in thickness; has small veins of sulphur through it, and will not produce more than sixty per cent. when cleanly smelted.

When I first knew the Mine à Burton, in the year 1797, the French smelted their mineral in stone furnaces, somewhat similar to limekilns. At the bottom they put a floor of the largest logs to be found, setting smaller ones round the sides of the furnace. In a furnace thus arranged, is put from three to five thousand pounds weight of mineral; and a fire being lighted under the bottom of the furnace, is kept up until the mineral is entirely smelted, burnt, or lost in the ashes. In this way each miner smelted his own mineral; extracting about three hundred and fifty pounds of lead from each thousand pounds weight of mineral: but, since my works have been established, they have found it more advantageous to sell their mineral than to smelt it themselves.

In the year 1798, there were twenty French furnaces; but, in 1802, one only was in use.

The time for working the mines is from August to December. After harvest, the inhabitants of St. Genevieve and New Bourbon resort to the mines; the rich send their negroes, and the poor class depend on the mines to furnish them with lead to purchase all imported articles. From the middle of August to the fifteenth or twentieth of December, there are from forty to fifty men employed in digging mineral; the remainder of the year but little mineral is drawn from the mines, and but few hands employed. From the year 1798 to 1803, the average quantity of mineral may be stated at five hundred and fifty, or six hundred thousand pounds, French weight, each year; procured, mostly, in four months, by not more than fifty men. The same number of hands employed the year round would produce at least fifteen or sixteen hundred thousand pounds, making proper allowance for spring rains. From the extent of the mines one thousand men might be employed to equal advantage.

2. Mine à Robuna, two miles east southeast of the Mine à Burton, was discovered about the same time. This mine has not been wrought for many years, until the last season; a few experiments were made, and a small quantity of mineral raised. The old diggings are not extensive, although it is said large quantities of mineral were drawn from the mine on its first discovery. It is public property, and there is every reason to believe will become advantageous when the population of the country shall afford workmen to open and work the mines.

3. Old Mines, so called from being discovered many years before the Mine à Burton. It is said the old mines were opened and wrought by Mr. Ranault, about the year 1726, at the time he explored this country for the famous Law and Company. It is situated five miles northeast of the Mine à Burton, on the discovery of which it was abandoned, mineral being found in great abundance at the new mines. The old mines remained in this situation until February, 1802, when fifteen French families made a settlement near the mines, and have formed a village, since which the mines have been opened, and the last year produced three hundred and sixty thousand pounds weight of mineral of an excellent quality, not inferior to the best produced at the Mine à Burton. A gold colored fossil, similar to that found at the Mine à Burton, is also connected with the mineral taken from this mine.

The prospect of obtaining immense quantities of mineral from the old mines, is at present very flattering, and there is not the least doubt of their being equally extensive as the Mine à Burton. The present workings, with the old, include about one hundred acres of land. The mines are elevated, and may be easily drained to the depth of a hundred feet.

In the year 1799, a grant for four hundred acres of land was obtained, and surveyed in 1800, but includes no part of the workings; therefore, the mine, with the adjacent lands, excepting that concession, may be considered as public property. No smelting furnace has as yet been erected at this place, except a French one, most of the mineral being transported to the Mine à Burton to be smelted. The greatest number of hands employed at the old mines, at any one time since the late establishment, has not exceeded twenty-five or thirty, and those only for a few months. It is not improbable that the space between the old mines and the Mine à Burton may produce mineral in as great abundance as either of the mines. The Foche Ranault is navigable within seven miles of this mine.

4. Mine Ranault, situated six miles north of the Mine à Burton, on a creek of the same name. Little can be said relative to this mine, it not having been wrought for more than seventy years; but, from information, and the extent of the diggings, a large quantity of mineral was drawn from it. It was discovered and opened by Mr. Ranault, about the year 1724-5, with an expectation of finding silver ore. The country near the mine is hilly and broken. It is supposed that Ranault's concession, granted by the King of France, if ever it should be brought forward, will comprehend the mine. The mineral drawn from these mines is of a good quality, generally found in limestone rock, in regular veins, and is said to be inexhaustible. I know of no reason why they have been so long neglected, unless I attribute it to the discovery of mines nearer the settlements, and the small number of workmen to carry them on. As they are within ten miles of navigation, by the Foche Ranault, great expectations of their utility to the public may justly be entertained.

5. Mine à Maneto, or American mines, on Grand river, was discovered and opened in the month of October, 1799, by the Americans settled on Grand river; is situated twelve miles east southeast of the Mine à Burton. The appearance of the mines being very flattering, a plan was executed by Messrs. Valle and Pratt, of St. Genevieve, to dispossess the Americans of the privilege allowed in such cases, of four acres in superficies, as a compensation to the discoverers of mines. In 1803, Mr. Pratt brought forward two concessions, one for himself, of one thousand acres, the other in the name of his son, a minor, for eight hundred acres. In consequence of these concessions, the Americans have been excluded from the mines.

The Mine à Maneto, from its flat position, will not admit of deep mining, the water rising at the depth of fifteen feet, and the situation is such it cannot be drained. The mineral is found within two or three feet of the surface of the earth, in a soft, grey limestone rock, in small particles. The rock lies in a horizontal position, in sheets of five or six inches in thickness. Two or three layers of this rock are found one under the other; between each is a layer, either of clay or mineral, one or two inches thick; most commonly mineral. In places where the rock will admit of sinking eight or ten feet, the mineral is found in thin flakes, covered with an iron-colored rust. Before the mineral can be smelted, it requires to be pounded and washed; after passing through this operation, out of one thousand pounds, as it is taken from the mines, three or four hundred only is found to be mineral. Notwithstanding this additional labor, the ease and facility with which the mineral is procured would leave a handsome profit in the hands of experienced workmen; but, to the present holders, yields but little. There is not the smallest appearance of the marcasite to be found in these mines. The land carriage to St. Genevieve, from the mines à Maneto, is about twenty-six miles.

7. Mine à la Plate, situate on a river of that name, about two miles from its junction with Grand river, and eighteen miles east southeast from the Mine à Burton, was discovered in October, 1799, by an American; but the injustice done the settlers at Grand river, in the affair of the Mine à Maneto, discouraged those concerned in the discovery from making any great attempts to open and improve it. In 1800, thirty thousand pounds weight of mineral was drawn from the mine by two Americans, obtained near the surface. The mineral assumes the appearance of regular veins, and there is not a doubt but that this mine will be very productive. A silver colored fossil is found at this mine, but not in such quantities as at the Mine à Burton. The mine, at present, is unoccupied for the reasons before mentioned, and will remain so until a more favorable moment.

The land carriage from the mine to St. Genevieve, is about twenty miles. The mine may be considered as the property of the public.

7. Mine à Joe, on Grand river, about four miles from the Mine à la Plate, and fourteen southeast of the Mine à Burton, was discovered by Messrs. Baker and Ally, American settlers at Grand river, in September, 1801, but was taken from them in 1802, by one of those acts of injustice not uncommon in absolute Governments. While Messrs. Baker and Ally were suffered to work the mine, they obtained mineral in abundance; but since it has been in the hands of the present holders, it has produced but little. This mine is said to be private property, which renders it difficult to ascertain its extent and richness; but, from circumstances, it is supposed not to be very extensive. The mineral is found in pieces of several hundred pounds weight, pure, and solid.

8. Mine à Lany. This mine is situated six miles west of the Mine à Joe, and sixteen south southeast of the Mine à Burton. It was discovered about the year 1795, and bears the name of its discoverer. The mine has not been much wrought, and from what I can learn, never produced any large quantity of mineral. It is not in much repute, and at present is unoccupied.

9. Mine à la Mott is situated on the waters of the River St. Francis, six miles from the main river, and thirty south southwest of St. Genevieve; was discovered by Mr. Ranault about the year 1723 or 1724, who made an exploration, but finding no silver ore, he abandoned it. About the year 1723, a man by the name of La Mott opened and wrought the mine, after whom it is called.

Mine à la Mott differs in every respect from the mines on Grand river, and its vicinity. The situation is flat and low; the water bad and unhealthy. The mineral is found in regular veins, from two to four feet solid. Five of the veins have been opened and wrought. They are found within four or five feet of the surface, with a declination of about forty-five degrees, but cannot be mined deeper (on account of water) than twenty-five feet, and to that depth only in the dry season. The mineral is of a fine steel grain, said to contain fifty ounces of silver to a ton of lead, and is highly charged with sulphur. Notwithstanding the French inhabitants of this country have followed the mining business upwards of eighty years, yet they have not advanced in the art of smelting a step beyond their ancestors; the methods they pursue bespeak their surprising ignorance. As the Mine à la Mott differs from those already described, so does their mode of smelting. The first process is, by depositing the mineral in a pile of logs, after the manner sea shells are burnt to lime; the piles being set on fire and consumed, the quantity of lead produced is five per cent. It is then put into a furnace of stone, such as before described; from this process, if well attended, is produced fifteen per cent. more. After this second burning, they consider the mineral in a proper state for smelting; therefore, collecting it from the ashes, they again put it into the furnace, arranged with logs at bottom and sides, and make an end of smelting. From the last process they commonly obtain about fifteen per cent., making thirty-five per cent. the greatest quantity obtained.

At the Mine à la Mott is also found, in beds, what the miners call gravel mineral, because it is found intermixed with the soil, like fine gravel, in particles from the size of a pin's head to that of a hickory nut. This mineral, after an imperfect washing, is put into a furnace, where it is suffered to melt into a slag, no attempt being made to create a fluxility of the metal from the dross; it is then put into a furnace, not unlike a miller's hopper, with a grate at bottom; underneath a fire is lighted, and continued until the slags are all melted, and a partial fluxion effected; this mode of smelting produces about two hundred and fifty pounds of lead to a thousand of mineral. Notwithstanding the immense loss in smelting, the richness of the mines, and the small expense in obtaining the mineral, leaves an astonishing profit to the proprietors. I found, by experiments, that the mineral in the hands of skilful smelters, will produce sixty, and some of the veins seventy per cent. About the year 1738-40, the Mine à la Mott was considered as public property, and the people in general were allowed to work at it. At that time it furnished almost all the lead exported from the Illinois: but soon after the discovery and opening of the Mine à Burton the Mine à la Mott was, in a great measure, abandoned; the mineral at the Mine à Burton being much easier melted. The Mine à la Mott is at this time claimed as private property, in consequence of which the inhabitants in general are denied the privilege of working; therefore, the annual quantity of lead is greatly reduced. For the years 1802 and 1803, the quantity of lead made at the Mine à la Mott did not exceed two hundred thousand pounds weight, although about thirty men were employed from four to six months in each year. It is evident that fifty men, under a proper manager, with a good smelting furnace, might produce five or six hundred thousand pounds weight of lead per annum.

It is difficult to say what part of the mine is private property, but, from the best information, about fifty or sixty acres have been granted at different times. The mine, although not so extensive as the Mine à Burton, is supposed to comprehend a much larger boundary than what is granted to individuals, and may be of consequence to the public. The River St. Francis will not admit of navigation for a hundred miles below the mines; therefore, the produce of the mines must be transported by land to St. Genevieve, which is the nearest to water carriage.

10. Mine à Gerbore, on the waters of the River St. Francis, eighteen miles north of the Mine à la Mott, is also a discovery of Ranault, who made an exploration in 1745; but not finding silver ore, the principal object of his researches, he abandoned it. After which it was wrought by a Mr. Aura, and others, until the Mine à Burton was discovered, when it was again abandoned. The old diggings are extensive, but the quantity of lead produced I have not been able to ascertain. It is said to be equal to any of the mines in the country. The commandant of New Bourbon has a concession of a league in superficies, comprehending the mines.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS.

Within twelve months past, several discoveries have been made near the Mine à Burton. Valuable lead mines have been likewise discovered about two hundred miles up the River Merimack; some of the mineral I have seen, which is of a good quality. In short, the country for twelve or fifteen miles round the Mine à Burton exhibits strong appearances of mineral. In all the small creeks mineral is found washed down from the hills, and it is not uncommon to find in the draughts leading to creeks and rivers, and in gulleys made by the spring rains, mineral in pieces from ten to fifty pounds weight brought down by the torrents. Some hundreds have been collected in this way. No country yet known furnishes greater indications of an inexhaustible quantity of lead mineral, and so easily obtained. One motive to render the mining business generally advantageous is, that every farmer may be a miner, and, when unemployed on his farm, may, by a few weeks' labor, almost at his own door, dig as much mineral as will furnish his family with all imported articles. From a view of the lead mines in Upper Louisiana, it may be seen that nothing is wanting but an increase of population to augment their produce to a surprising degree. It is also evident there are valuable discoveries yet to be made. It may, therefore, be matter of consideration with the Government, whether the donation of four acres in superficies to the discoverers of mines would not be advantageous to be continued. The Spanish Government has also allowed the inhabitants to work on public lands, free from any kind of tax. A continuation of this privilege will exhaust both the mines and timber, without the least advantage to the public. On the other hand, if a heavy imposition is imposed, it may discourage the mining business; yet the man who can, with his pick and shovel, make his thirty, forty, and sometimes his hundred dollars per month, may well afford to pay a small tax to Government.

The country about the mines is broken, but not mountainous, and furnishes the best of land for cultivation, and streams of water sufficient for all kinds of water works. Grand river rises ten miles southwest of the Mine à Burton, and in its course forms nearly three parts of a circle round the mines, and loses its name in the Pouce Ranault, which is navigable to the Mississippi; they unite ten miles north of the Mine à Burton, and it is remarkable that, in forming this circle, its distance from the mines does not exceed fourteen miles in any one place. It also furnishes both land and water, of a superior quality, sufficient for eight or nine hundred families.

Thus situated, the time cannot be far distant when this country will furnish lead sufficient, not only for the consumption of the United States, but all Europe, if moderate encouragement is given by Government, and protection against the Osage Indians, who yearly plunder the inhabitants,

The mines on the waters of St. Francis are capable of furnishing vast quantities of lead. The Mine à la Mott has been styled the gold mine, as descriptive of its wealth; and if under proper management would verify the observation.

From the annexed estimate it will be found that the gross produce of all the mines now occupied, amounts to thirty-six thousand five hundred dollars. The whole number of workmen employed, including miners, smelters, wood-cutters, and carters, has not exceeded one hundred and fifty men, of which number one hundred and twenty may be supposed to work four months, and the remaining thirty the year round. From this calculation, it will be found that each man employed in the business averages forty-three dollars per month.

To this may be added the increased value on one hundred and twenty thousand pounds weight, manufactured at the Mine à Burton, into shot and sheets, which makes the export valuation forty thousand one hundred dollars per annum, the average produce for three years past. Admitting one thousand men to be employed the year round, at the different mines now known, and the quantity of lead produced to be in proportion to what is now obtained by one hundred and fifty men, a supposition by no means extravagant, the proceeds are found to amount to five hundred thousand dollars and upwards. This calculation, perhaps, by some, may be deemed incredible; but the riches and extent of the mines justify the calculation.

An estimate of the produce of the several mines.

Mine à Burton, 550,000 lbs. mineral, estimated to produce 66 2-3, is 366,666 2-3 lbs. lead at $5, is	$18,333 33
To which add $30 (on 120,000 lbs. manufactured) to each thousand, is	3,600 00
	$21,933 33
Old mines, 200,000 lbs. mineral, estimated to produce 66 2-3, is 133,333 1-3 lbs. lead, at $5 per cwt. is	$6,666 67
Mine à la Mott, 200,000 lbs. lead, at $5 per cwt., is	10,000 00
Suppose at all the other mines 30,000 lbs. lead, at $5, is	1,500 00
	18,166 67

Total amount is $40,100 00

When the manufacture of white and red lead is put into operation, the export valuation will be considerably augmented on the same quality of lead.

The following table will show the present population of the Mine à Burton, and its vicinity.

Division of settlements.	Distance from Mine à Burton.	American families!	French families.	Whole number of inhabitants.
Mine à Burton, including several plantations	-	14	12	Suppose each family to consist of eight persons, the whole number will be seven hundred and twenty-eight souls.
Bellevue	10	20	-
Old mines	5	-	15
Grand river	12	30	-
Total	-	64	27

In June, 1799, when I removed my family to the Mine à Burton, the whole number of inhabitants settled on the Grand river and its waters did not exceed sixty-three or four persons, consisting of eight families.

N. B. Some late transactions, by order of the Governor of St. Louis, if valid, will entirely change the situation of the public property within ten miles of the Mine à Burton. Surveys of all the lands worthy of notice have been made, with an intention to include every spot of land supposed to contain mineral. These surveys amount to thirty or forty thousand acres, and have been made, except in a few instances, since the first of the present month.

The above observations and estimates are as accurate as the nature of things would admit, and the shortness of time I have had to collect information.

All of which are submitted with respect.

CLAIMANTS UNDER THE GEORGIA MISSISSIPPI COMPANY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES NOVEMBER 30, 1804.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA:

To the President and Members of the Senate, and to the Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives of said States, in Congress assembled, November, 1804.

The memorial of the undersigned, in behalf of the holders of the title of the Georgia Mississippi Company, to lands lying within the Mississippi Territory, most respectfully represents: That at the time when Congress saw fit to erect a Government within the Mississippi territory, by their act passed June, 1798, the claimants, represented by the undersigned, presented a memorial to the then President of the United States, setting forth the nature of their title, derived from the grantees of the State of Georgia, and laying claim to the lands contained within the limits of their grants; and, accordingly, the rights of individuals are expressly declared by said act to be unimpaired thereby; which memorial was afterwards laid before certain commissioners appointed by an act of Congress, passed the 8th day of May, 1800, for the purpose of treating with commissioners from the State of Georgia for the cession of said territory; by the seventh section of which act the rights of individuals to the soil are declared to be as valid as if said act had never been passed; and, by the tenth section of the same act, the said commissioners are authorized to receive from the claimants propositions for the compromise of their claims, and report the same to Congress, with their opinion thereon. In obedience to this law, the claimants, whom the undersigned represent, attended at the seat of Government, at a heavy expense, during the whole negotiation between the two powers, and exhibited their claims to the commissioners of the United States, and entered a caveat with them, against the purchase of any part of the lands claimed by your memorialists; but at the same time manifested their readiness to enter into a compromise and adjustment of their claims on reasonable terms, agreeably to the intentions of the act. The commissioners, however, from motives of prudence, declined to enter into a negotiation with the claimants until they had finally completed the articles of cession with the commissioners of the State of Georgia; but constantly assuring the claimants, that proper regard would be had to their claims in the adjustment; accordingly, in the articles of cession they saw fit to reserve the right, on the part of the United States, to appropriate five millions of acres of the ceded territory, or the proceeds thereof, for the purpose of compensating the claims not otherwise provided for in the articles of cession; of the claims not so provided for, your memorialists aver, those under the act of Georgia of January, 1795, were specially and principally contemplated by the commissioners of the United States, and assented to by those of Georgia. As the treaty of cession required the ratification of the State of Georgia, and the commissioners of the United States chose to submit the same to the approbation of Congress, they deferred any further negotiation with the claimants until such ratification should be had; accordingly, at the session of Congress of 1802-3, the claimants again attended, and under the then existing law, exhibited to the commissioners their claims, and the derivation of their titles from the grantees of the State of Georgia, and after many communications between the commissioners and the claimants, certain propositions were made by the latter, but not acceded to by the former; upon which, at the end of the session, they made their report to Congress, with their opinion of a compromise; which not being accompanied with the assent of the claimants, was not acted upon by Congress; but at the same time they passed another act, in which they made an appropriation of the five millions of acres for the purpose of compensating for such claims on said territory as Congress should see fit to provide for, agreeably to the terms of the treaty; and by said act the Government again invited the claimants to make propositions of compromise to the commissioners, who were directed to report the same to Congress at their next session; and the claimants were therein called upon to record all the evidences of their titles in the office of the Department of State, at their own expense. In obedience to this act, they have at great cost, recorded the evidences of their title, and attended the whole of the last session of Congress, ready to enter into the proposed compromise; but a bill introduced for the purpose of empowering commissioners to make a final adjustment with the claimants was postponed until the first day of the present session.

Your memorialists, therefore, again present themselves before Congress respectfully to declare their readiness to enter into a negotiation for a compromise of their claims, within the conditions and limitations of the cession of Georgia, with any commissioners who may be authorized thereto, reserving all their rights at law, in case the compromise should not be effected. This mode of compensating the losses, and extinguishing the claims on said territory, by compromise, your memorialists conceive to be congenial to the views and intentions of the Government of the United States, as expressed in the several acts above alluded to, and assented to by the State of Georgia in their act of cession, and has been so confidently relied on by the claimants, as a pledge of the public faith and honor, that they have hitherto looked to it as a certain resource for indemnity, and have patiently submitted to the heavy expenses with which its tedious progress has been attended.

Should Congress think it more for the interest of the United States, that the titles of the claimants to their whole extent, should have a judicial decision, they humbly request that Congress would be pleased to pass an act directing the title of your memorialists to be submitted to the decision and final determination of the Judges of the Supreme Judicial Court of the United States, agreeably to the principles of law and chancery; to such an act your memorialists will cheerfully submit.

They have hitherto forbore to make any display to Congress of the legal and equitable principles on which their title rests, as they had conceived that the Government of the United States, by their repeated public acts on the subject, had contemplated a different mode of settlement, and by repeatedly inviting the claimants to make propositions of compromise, had intended to merge all considerations of the original transactions by a mutual concurrence in such compromise; but, as in the course of the public debates on this subject, and by the report of the commissioners, their title at law has been called into question, they have thought it expedient to lay before Congress a vindication of their title, and the principles and authorities upon which they should support it in any of the established courts of law or chancery. And they have also endeavored to answer all the objections that they recollect to have been yet made against them. This vindication is now in the press, and the undersigned ask leave to present a copy thereof, when ready, to each member, who, by a full examination thereof, may be enabled to judge for himself what mode of settlement it will be most for the interest of the United States to adopt, whether a compromise, the extent of which is limited by their own arrangements with their grantors, and by which the United States will certainly secure to themselves above thirty millions of acres of land; or a legal decision, by which the United States may lose that quantity, in the attempt to secure the additional five millions. The claimants are now ready to accede to either mode. If it should be said that we may pursue our rights at law without the interposition of Congress, we answer, that to contend with the Government of their country is not only unpleasant to the feelings of very many of the claimants, but they are ready to acknowledge might be deeply injurious in its consequences; for, although under some of the monarchies of Europe their humble subjects are indulged with "the petition of right," under which by the decrees of their judges in chancery, the hands of their sovereigns may be removed from the possession of the lands of their subjects, yet, for the citizens of the American republic, no such right is recognized. If, therefore, from motives of policy, the Government of the United States shall see fit to hold these lands unalienated for a century to come, the claimants, during that period, must remain without remedy, except by actual entry, in hostility to the claims of the nation; they could recover possession by judgment of law, only lot by lot, as the Government may see fit to dispose of them; a circumstance which must involve them in a multiplicity of law suits for time immemorial, the expenses and delay of which would probably be more ruinous to them than the loss of their property in the first instance. "The delay of justice is its denial."

It is, therefore, to the magnanimity and high sense of honor and justice which govern the measures of the American republic, that they confidently appeal, and cannot doubt that, under the influence of these virtues, Congress will feel it right to adopt one or other of the two methods above proposed for the immediate settlement of their claims. In all events, your memorialists most respectfully and earnestly pray, that Congress will come to some definitive resolution on the subject, that the claimants may no longer be exposed to a fruitless and expensive pursuit of what they conceive to be their rights. And, as in duty bound, shall pray your memorialists.

GIDEON GRANGER,
*Agents of the holders of the Georgia

2d SESSION.

TIME EXTENDED FOR REGISTERING TITLES TO LANDS SOUTH OF TENNESSEE DERIVED FROM THE STATE OF GEORGIA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 4, 1804.

Mr. CLARKE made the following report: The committee appointed to inquire into the expediency of extending the time for claimants to lands under the State of Georgia, lying south of the State of Tennessee, to register the evidences of their titles with the Secretary of State, submit the following report and resolution:

It appears to your committee that, on the 3d day of March, in the year 1803, a law passed the Congress of the United States, entitled "An act regulating the grants of land, and providing for the disposal of lands of the United States, south of the State of Tennessee;" in the eighth section of which, lands are appropriated for the satisfaction of claims recognized by the articles of agreement and cession between the State of Georgia and the United States, and for satisfying, quieting, and compensating such other claims to lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee, not recognized by the said articles of agreement; and which were derived from any act, or pretended act, of the State of Georgia, which Congress may think proper to provide for; with a proviso, that no other claims shall be embraced by the said appropriation but those, the evidences of which shall be, on or before the first day of January next, after the passing of the said law, recorded in books kept for that purpose in the office of the Secretary of State.

A period of not quite ten months, the time allowed for registering claims under the said law; a period so short, as to admit the probability of its elapse, without being known to all the claimants, in time to avail themselves of its provision; and it actually appears to your committee, there are claims to lands not registered under the said law, which were derived from the State of Georgia near to the year 1795, and to which there may be no objection to the manner in which they were acquired, and may entitle the owners to a compensation out of the land reserved by the said articles of agreement and cession between the State of Georgia and the United States.

Therefore, resolved, That it is the opinion of your committee, that the further time of — months ought to be allowed to claimants to lands under the State of Georgia south of the State of Tennessee, to register the evidences of their titles with the Secretary of State of the United States.

2d SESSION.

CLAIM OF THE UNITED STATES TO LANDS IN TENNESSEE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 3, 1805.

Mr. BRADLEY, from the committee to which was referred the bill entitled "An act declaring the assent of Congress to an act of the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina," with instructions to inquire what have been the acts of the State of North Carolina and Tennessee, in relation to the lands claimed by the United States, within the State of Tennessee, made the following report:

That it had not been in the power of the committee to possess the advantage of the statute laws of the State of Tennessee; that, on a strict examination as the committee had been able to make of the laws of North Carolina, they submit the following digest, which, in their judgment, comprises the most material doings of that State in relation to the subject.

In April, 1782, an act passed "For the relief of the officers and soldiers of the continental line," in which the State engaged to each officer and soldier a certain quantity of land apportioned to the respective grades in the line, and appointed commissioners to examine and superintend the laying off the land in one or more tracts.

In April, 1783, an act designated the land on which the officers and soldiers might enter and survey, and bounded the same as follows, to wit: "Beginning in the Virginia line, where Cumberland river intersects the same; thence, south fifty-five miles; thence, west to the Tennessee river; thence, down the Tennessee to the Virginia line; thence, with the said Virginia line east, to the beginning;" and, by the same act, allowed the officers and soldiers the term of three years, from the first day of October, then next, to secure their land, and prohibited all other persons from making entries thereon, during the said term, except certain settlers on Cumberland river, and empowered the Secretary of State to issue warrants of survey; and, at the same time, designated what lands the Cherokee Indians should have and enjoy, and declared all entries, grants, or purchases made of their lands to be utterly void.

In October, 1784, an act provided that, in case the tillable land within the boundaries laid off for the officers and soldiers of the continental line should be insufficient to satisfy their claims, the deficiency should be made upon any unappropriated lands within the State.

In November, 1785, an act passed the Legislature, granting a further time of eighteen months for the completing of surveys, as well for all persons who had entered lands with any of the entry takers, as for all warrants granted by the Secretary of State to the officers and soldiers of the continental line, previous to the passing of said act, and at the same session, by a subsequent act, appointed commissioners to liquidate the accounts of the officers and soldiers of the continental line, and directing that the commissioners should sit as a board the first ten days in April, May, and June then next, and no longer, and that all accounts which should not be exhibited within that time, should be forever thereafter of no effect.

In November, 1786, an act passed, allowing a further time of two years, from and after the expiration of the limitation by law then existing, to complete the surveys west of the Apalachian mountain, and twelve months to the officers and soldiers of the continental line; and the further time of two years for registering military grants.

Thus stood the law in the State of North Carolina, when, in November, 1789, the Legislature passed an act to authorize, empower, and require certain persons therein named to execute a deed or deeds, on the part and behalf of said State, conveying to the United States of America all right, title, and claims, which the said State of North Carolina then had to the sovereignty and territory of the lands now comprehended within the State of Tennessee, upon certain express conditions, and subject thereto; among which conditions the following appear only to be material in the present question, to wit: "That the lands laid off, or directed to be laid off, by any act or acts of the General Assembly of this State, for the officers and soldiers thereof, their heirs and assigns, respectively, shall be and endure to the use and benefit of the said officers, their heirs, and assigns, respectively; and, if the bounds of the said lands already prescribed for the officers and soldiers of the continental line of this State shall not contain a sufficient quantity of lands fit for cultivation, to make good the several provisions intended by law, that such officer or soldier, or his assignee, who shall fall short of his allotment or proportion, after all the lands fit for cultivation within the said bounds are appropriated, be permitted to take his quota, or such part thereof as may be deficient, in any other part of the said territory, intended to be ceded by virtue of this act, not already appropriated. And where entries have been made agreeable to law, and titles under them not perfected by grant, or otherwise, then, and in that case, the Governor for the time being shall, and he is hereby required to perfect, from time to time, such titles, in such manner as if this act had never been passed; and that all entries made by, or grants made to, all and every person and persons whatsoever, agreeable to law, and within the limits hereby intended to be ceded to the United States, shall have the same force and effect as if such cession had not been made; and that all and every right of occupancy and pre-emption, and every other right reserved by any act or acts to persons settled on and occupying lands within the limits of the land hereby intended to be ceded, as aforesaid, shall continue to be in full force in the same manner as if the cession had not been made, and as conditions upon which the said lands are ceded to the United States. And, further, it shall be understood that if any person or persons shall have, by virtue of the act entitled "An act for opening the land office for the redemption of specie, and other certificates, and discharging the arrears due to the army," passed in the year 1783, made his or their entry in the office usually called John Armstrong's office, and located the same to any spot or piece of ground, on which any other person or persons shall have previously located any entry or entries, that then, and in that case, the person or persons having made such entry or entries, or their assignee or assignees shall have leave, and be at full liberty, to remove the location of such entry or entries to any lands on which no entry has been specially located, or any vacant lands included within the limits of the lands hereby intended to be ceded: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to the making good any entry or entries, or any grant or grants, heretofore declared void by any act or acts of the General Assembly of this State."

On the 25th day of February, 1790, Samuel Johnson and Benjamin Hawkins, then being Senators in Congress from the said State, by virtue of the power and authority given to them in and by said act, by their deed of that date, conveyed to the United States all right, title, and claim, which the said State of North Carolina had to the sovereignty and territory of the lands now called Tennessee, on the conditions mentioned in the said act. At the same session in which the cession act was passed, in 1789, a law passed giving a further time of three years for surveying all lands entered in the office of John Armstrong, and for all military warrants issued by the Secretary of said State, and all pre-emption rights in the district of Mero.

In December, 1794, a law passed, declaring all grants for lands entered in the land office, which had not been registered within the time before allowed by law, should be allowed two years after the passing of said act, to register the same; and, in the same session, made it the duty of all persons who entered lands in the entry taker's office to pay the purchase money to the treasurer, and take his receipt for the same. And in November, 1795, declared all entries for lands where the purchase money had not been paid to the treasurer, agreeable to law, null and void. And all entries then in future to be made for a greater quantity than three hundred acres, where the purchase money should not be paid within six months from the date of such entry; and, if a less quantity, twelve months from the date of such entry; all such entries void, and of no effect.

In November, 1796, an act was passed providing that the clerks of the county courts, where the books of the entry takers were in their possession, should issue warrants of surveys by order of the court, and declaring that the lands then lying in the counties of Wilks, Burke, and Buncombe, which might have been entered with the entry taker of Washington and Green, in the State of Tennessee, should not be surveyed, until it should be proved in the manner therein provided, that the purchase money for the lands claimed had been paid; and by the same law, allowed a further time of twelve months, from and after the rising of that Assembly, for the payment of the purchase money to the treasurer, of all lands before entered, even where the entries had lapsed and become void under the operation of the then existing laws; and, by the same act, all entries of lands that had been made since the 15th day of November, 1797, [1787,] unless surveyed as therein directed, and grants procured thereon on or before the first day of January, 1799, were declared utterly void and of no effect; and providing, also, that, in all future entries, unless the person claiming the same should complete his title, by taking out a grant for the same within two years from the date of such entry, the same should become utterly null and void, and the land so entered should be deemed vacant land, saving, however, entries west of Pigeon river, in Buncombe county; warrants for military lands, and warrants for lands entered in John Armstrong's office, &c.; and, by a subsequent law, the same cession empowered the Secretary of State, at any time before the Congress of the United States should open an office for the sale of their lands, within the bounds prescribed, for the officers and soldiers of the late North Carolina line of continental troops, to issue new grants to such officers and soldiers whose former grant covered lands which had been before granted, and directed the manner of proceeding therein; and provided further for issuing new warrants, where the former warrants had been lost, and prohibited the issuing of grants and warrants from the office of John Armstrong, unless it was proved that the purchase money had been paid.

In November, 1797, an act passed for the limitation of land entries, the first section of which is in the following words: "That all lands heretofore entered, with any entry taker in this State, and which have not been paid for, and all lands which shall be so entered in the course of the present year, and shall not be paid for, shall continue and remain the property of the enterers, their heirs or assigns, so far as an entry without the payment of the purchase money to the State, and without obtaining a grant, may be held to vest a title in the same; nor shall any such entries become void, nor shall the lands so entered revert to the State until the last day of December, 1798, at which time, and on which day, it is hereby expressly enacted and declared, that all entries now made, or which shall be made up to the time aforesaid, that is to say, that all entries now made, and which shall be made up to the close of the year 1797, and which shall not be paid for, shall become null, void, and of no effect, to all intents and purposes; and the lands which may have been so entered and not paid for, shall, on the first day of January, 1799, be considered as having reverted to the State, and, as being vacant, shall be liable again for any person to enter and secure the same; and in like manner, it shall happen yearly and every year, that is to say, it shall be considered that all lands entered in 1793, otherwise, on the first day of January, 1800, such entries shall lapse, and the lands shall revert to the State, and shall be liable to be entered again by any person wishing the same in common with other vacant and unappropriated lands, the lands entered in such preceding year, being in any event to be paid for in the following or succeeding one; otherwise, and in case of failure, all such entries shall become, and shall be held as being null, void, and of none effect whatsoever. And by the third section of the same act, the operation of all acts, or clauses of acts, which came within the purview and meaning thereof, are suspended until the first day of January, 1799; and by a subsequent act of the same session, suspended the issuing of military warrants or grants by the Secretary, and all grants or warrants from the office of John Armstrong, for the space of one year from the rising of that Assembly, and appointed a board of commissioners to detect frauds and forgeries committed in obtaining military warrants, and for bringing to punishment all persons concerned therein, as well officers of the Government as all others.

In November, 1798, an act passed prohibiting the issuing of duplicate warrants, and giving a further time until the first day of January, 1800, to all enterers of lands since the 15th day of November, 1777, to accomplish their surveys, and perfect their titles; and allowed a further time to all entries of lands made between the 8th day of February, 1795, and the first day of January, 1798, until the first day of October then next, to pay the purchase money to the State, and declaring all such as were not paid by that time null and void, and should be deemed lapsed entries; and by a subsequent act, the same session, constituted the judges of the superior courts of law and courts of equity, or any three of them, a court of patents, with power to repeal, vacate, and make void all such grants or patents as appeared to be made against law, or obtained by fraud, surprise, or upon untrue suggestions; and the same session repealed the appointment of Colonel Martin Armstrong, surveyor, and discontinued his office at Nashville, and appointed a board of commissioners to investigate the frauds suggested to have been committed in the Secretary's office, in obtaining land warrants for military services, and in obtaining warrants from the office lately kept by John Armstrong, and in obtaining grants or warrants in either of the above cases, and suspended all further issuing of warrants by the Secretary, until the Assembly should order otherwise.

In November, 1799, an act was passed, reciting that, whereas many frauds were suggested to have been committed in the Secretary's office, the Governor for the time being was therein empowered to issue a commission to the judges, empowering them to hold a special and unusual court, as therein pointed out, for the trial of such persons as shall or may be apprehended for or on account of their having committed, or been concerned in the commission of, frauds in the Secretary's office, or in the office of John Armstrong, or Martin Armstrong, in the fraudulent issuing, procuring, receiving, or transferring land warrants, or in the fraudulent issuing, receiving, or procuring grants on such warrants, at any of the said offices; and, by a subsequent act of the same session, directed all military warrants to be cancelled, which had issued to officers and soldiers, where it appeared from the muster roll such officer or soldier had served for so short a time as not to be entitled to so large a quantity of land as expressed in the warrant, and new warrants to issue corresponding with the time of service, and prohibited the issuing any grant, or any warrant, where the officer's or soldier's name, in whose favor the warrant issued, did not appear on the muster roll, unless specially authorized by the General Assembly, or where they had been reported as just by a former board of commissioners.

In November, 1800, an act passed to allow all persons who had made entry of lands since the first day of January, 1799, until the day previous to the meeting of the next annual General Assembly, to pay the purchase money to the State, till which day it should not be deemed a lapsed entry. And by a subsequent act of the session, for the purpose of perfecting the titles of the officers and soldiers of the continental line of that State, in the fourth section it is enacted, "that all claims for lands by the officers and soldiers of the continental line of this State, during the revolutionary war with Great Britain, and all demands for the same which shall not be applied for, and received either by the person who performed the service, his heirs or assigns, before the first day of December next, shall be forever thereafter barred, and no military land warrant shall issue after the time aforesaid, on any account whatever, any law, usage, or custom, to the contrary notwithstanding."

In November, 1801, an act passed, extending the time on all bona fide entries of lands made previous to the first day of January, 1799, and which had been paid for until the first day of December, 1802, to have said lands surveyed and returned into the Secretary's office, and declaring all such lands not surveyed and returned into the Secretary's office by the day aforesaid, to be void, and lapsed lands to the State; and all lands so surveyed and returned as aforesaid, where the claimant thereof shall not cause the same to be perfected into grants before the first day of January, 1804, the same is declared null and void, and lapsed lands to the State; and by a subsequent act of the same session, the fourth section of the act passed in November, 1800, is repealed, and all claims for lands by the officers and soldiers of the continental line, which shall not be applied for and received before the first day of January, 1803, are declared to be forever barred, and no military warrants to issue after that time on any warrant whatever.

Thus far the committee have been able to present to the view of the Senate a very short statement of the acts of the State of North Carolina to the year 1802; from that period to the present the committee have not been possessed of sufficient documents to make a correct statement on that subject.

They submit the following amendment to the bill declaring the assent of Congress to an act of the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina.

At the end of the bill, insert the following:

"Provided, That nothing contained in this act shall be construed in any manner to affect or impair any right whatever, which accrued to the United States in virtue of an act of the General Assembly of North Carolina, entitled 'An act for the purpose of ceding to the United States of America certain western lands therein described.'"

[The following is the act to which it is proposed to give the assent of Congress.]

AN ACT to authorize the State of Tennessee to perfect titles to lands reserved to this State by the cession act.

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That, upon this act being agreed to, and ratified by the State of Tennessee, as an agreement between this State and the said State of Tennessee, and upon the assent of Congress being obtained thereto, the said State of Tennessee shall have full power and authority, and is hereby vested with full power and authority, to issue grants, and perfect titles to all claims of land lying in the said State, which, under and agreeably to an act entitled "An act for the purpose of ceding to the United States of America certain western lands therein described," passed by the Legislature of this State in the year 1789, remained and were reserved by the said act, to be issued and perfected by this State, in as full and ample a manner as the State of North Carolina possessed the same, under the following conditions and restrictions:

That no grant shall be issued by the said State for any lands which, by the aforesaid act, and the laws of this State then in force, or made in pursuance thereof since the passing of said act, might not have been issued by this State. Nor shall any grant be valid, but those issued on bona fide claims, and within the provisions and reservations of the before recited act, and such as would have been valid, if the same had been issued by this State under the act aforesaid, and the laws then in force, and such as have been since made in pursuance of such act of cession.

That, in entering and obtaining titles to lands, no preference shall be given to the citizens of Tennessee over citizens of any other State, claiming under this State; nor shall any occupancy or possession give preference in entering or obtaining titles so as to injure or take away the right of any person now claiming by entry, grant, or otherwise, under this State.

That no grant shall issue to Martin Armstrong, or his deputies, or any person or persons claiming under him or them, for any services as surveyor, until a final settlement between the State of North Carolina and the said Armstrong shall be made; after which grants shall issue for such lands as he may be entitled to.

That this State reserves, exclusively, the right of issuing military warrants.

In issuing grants on military warrants, entries made in Martin Armstrong's office, until he was suspended by this State, shall be preferred, and next to those, the entries which have been made in the office of William Christmass, who is hereby continued and confirmed as the surveyor of the lands on all entries on the entry taker's books in his possession not heretofore surveyed, during his good behaviour. Also, that John Brown be continued and confirmed as the surveyor of the lands in the eastern district, in the room of Stokely Donelson, during his good behaviour. That the said William Christmass and John Brown enter into bond in the sum of five thousand pounds each, with sufficient security, payable to the State of Tennessee, for the faithful discharge of the duties reposed in them.

That the Secretary of this State shall continue to issue grants upon all surveys returned, or that shall be returned to his office, before the ratifications of this agreement or compact between the two States, by the State of Tennessee.

And in order that the State of Tennessee may possess the information necessary to the detection of fraud in obtaining claims and grants to lands lying in that State; and for the purpose of facilitating the execution of good titles, all warrants and plats upon which grants shall not have issued, at the time of the ratification of this compact by the State of Tennessee, shall be delivered to any agent or agents of that State, duly authorized for that purpose; and that the agent or agents of the said State be permitted to take copies of all grants, or any other paper or papers which concern the land claims within the State of Tennessee, in the Secretary's office of this State; and notwithstanding such copies may be received as legal evidence in the State of Tennessee, it is always to be understood as a provision, that any transcripts from the said office of this State shall, at all times hereafter, be received as evidence in the said State of Tennessee.

That so much of this act as relates to the taking of copies by the agent or agents of Tennessee from the Secretary's office, shall take effect from the passage hereof: Provided, That none of the said copies shall be removed or taken out of the office of the Secretary until the Governor of this State shall be notified by the Governor of the State of Tennessee of the ratification of this act on the part of the State of Tennessee, and until the Governor shall also receive a notification of the assent of the Congress of the United States being obtained thereto.

That in taking transcripts by the agent or agents of Tennessee from the said offices, the books and papers so to be transcribed shall always be under the care of the Secretary of this State; and that, as a compensation for such care and trouble, the State of Tennessee shall pay the said Secretary six hundred dollars, in two instalments; the first instalment of three hundred dollars to be payable within six months after the ratification of this act on the part of the State of Tennessee; and the second instalment whenever the said State of Tennessee shall procure, by its agent or agents, transcripts of the grants issued by the State of North Carolina for lands lying in the State of Tennessee, as aforesaid, and such other papers as he may deem necessary relative to the landed property of said State.

Read three times, and ratified in General Assembly, the 22d day of December, A. D. 1803.

2d SESSION.

LANDS IN WAYNE COUNTY, INDIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 17, 1805.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States of America:

The memorial of the citizens residing in the county of Wayne, Indiana Territory, humbly sheweth: That a large majority of your memorialists are the lineal descendants of the ancient French, who, at an early period, emigrated to, and settled in, this ill-fated country, then a part of the province of Canada, and under the Government of France. Subsequent revolutions have placed us, their descendants, under the Government of the United States, and elevated us to the rank of free citizens. The latter change in government was pleasing and highly gratifying to your memorialists. We flattered ourselves that, under the equitable and humane Government of the United States, not only our personal liberty would be secured to us and our children, but that our rights to property, both real and personal, would have been recognized and permanently established upon liberal principles. But, alas! little did we then expect that the entire sacrifice of our plantations, farms, and valuable improvements, which we had acquired either by descent from our ancestors, or by purchase, industry, hazard, and fatigue, would have been demanded as the stipulated price of our freedom. The present crisis in our affairs is peculiarly alarming, and awakens in us sensations not easily described. We are sensible that on the fate of this memorial hangs suspended our future destiny, and that the decision of Congress will either establish our happiness, or seal our ruin. The late act of Congress, providing, amongst other things, for the inquiry into titles, and for the disposition of public lands in this district, as it now stands, but too plainly informs us of our danger; but our hopes still rest on the mercy of Congress, and that upon a full and candid disclosure of our situation, our rights, titles, claims, and pretensions to our farms, which have descended to us, or which we have purchased, cultivated, and improved, that act will again be taken under consideration, and that amendments and such further provisions will be made therein as may be necessary fully to embrace our improvements, by granting to us, respectively, the land, to a reasonable extent, whereon they are made. When Congress are informed that it is rare to find any one claim, by virtue of an improvement thereon made, to exceed two, three, or four acres in front, by about forty acres in depth, it is hoped the prayer of your memorialists will be considered reasonable, especially as more than half of each tract of land so claimed is of little value, being marshy, and the residue rendered valuable but in consequence of our improvements.

In addition to the titles to land in this district, recognized by the late act above referred to, your memorialists beg permission to bring before Congress, for consideration, the following description of claim, and humbly pray that a law may be passed confirming the claimants and their heirs in the same:

1st. Claimants under certificates issued by the commandant of the post of Detroit, under the French Government, therein designating the land, and to whom given; but upon which certificates or grants no patents were issued by the governor general, arising either from the neglect of the then holders, the dangers and difficulties that then existed in the province, or the sudden and unexpected change of government.

2d. Claimants by virtue of actual improvements commenced under the French Government, in pursuance of gifts, grants, or sale of the land, by the Indians, to the individuals making the improvements.

3d. Claimants to farms and plantations, in pursuance of actual and continued improvements commenced during the time this district was under the British Government, and prior to the post of Detroit being surrendered to the United States. In regard to the claims last mentioned, your memorialists beg leave to observe that such of your memorialists as fall within this description, or those under whom they claim, commenced their improvements, on which the claims are predicated, and prosecuted the same, under the sanction of the British Government, manifested by the approbation and encouragement of their agents, the respective commanding officers of this post, and under the express authority of the Indians, who importuned your memorialists to settle upon the land they now occupy, and generally in consequence of an actual purchase made of said Indians. During the period this district was possessed by Great Britain, encouragement was held out to all persons who would settle upon and improve waste or new lands, by promising to each person a deed for the tract of land he should improve to a reasonable extent; which promises, so made, have been uniformly made good in the province of Canada, adjoining us, by the British Government, and patents accordingly issued.

And furthermore, claimants by virtue of actual improvements, made since the post was delivered up to the United States. It is hoped that such of your memorialists as fall under this description will not be wholly forgotten; but that the right of pre-emption, at least, may be extended to us; as many of your memorialists have erected mills, and made many other valuable improvements, the better to accommodate the country at large, tending much to enhance the value of the public lands in the neighborhood. We acted under the impression that Congress would equally extend to us this right, which has been extended to the inhabitants of the Ohio country, and whose pretensions to favor were not, we humbly conceive, superior to ours.

Your memorialists further solicit the attention of Congress in favor of the claims set up by the citizens of Detroit to the commons or domains adjoining said town; and that the same, by law, may be confirmed to them, their heirs and successors, with power in said corporation to make sale of a part, to accommodate persons with lots for building, and to regulate the use of the residue. We state, as a fact generally believed in this country, and confirmed by many aged persons now living in this district, that a grant was made by the French Government, at the time said town was laid out, vesting and confirming in the then inhabitants, their heirs and successors, both the ground plat of said town and the commons, which have ever since been held, used, and enjoyed, as such, by the inhabitants, to the exception of some unwarrantable encroachments by individuals upon the same. But, unfortunately for the citizens of said town, neither the grant itself, nor the record thereof, can now be found; the grant being either lost or wrongfully withheld, and the record removed to places without the district, and wholly unknown to your memorialists.

Having briefly mentioned the nature of our claims and titles, we request the indulgence of Congress in favor of some remarks, which we consider of consequence, as tending to show the equity of our prayer.

By the second article of the treaty of amity, commerce, and navigation, entered into between the United States and Great Britain, express provision is made, thereby granting to the inhabitants then residing within the limits of this post or district, with others, the full and absolute possession and enjoyment of their rights, privileges, and property, of every description. We humbly conceive that, by that article of the treaty, the object of our prayer is fully embraced, and that, upon a fair and liberal construction, the quiet and peaceable possession of our farms and plantations, as well as our personal property, is insured to us; the one being equally a known and acknowledged property, in the possessor under the British Government, as the other; and we humbly conceive the British Government put this construction upon that article of the treaty, in evidence of which we have only to instance their late proceedings in the province of Upper Canada, adjoining, where, in every instance, they have confirmed to the possessor and his heirs his improved land, previously held and enjoyed under the same tenure with your memorialists. And we beg leave further to remark, a circumstance entitled to consideration, that this settlement was commenced and prosecuted, both under the French and English Governments, till the year —, subject to the hardships of the feudal tenure; the customary fines of alienation and quit-rents were uniformly exacted and paid till released by the latter Government, and then only in consideration of services rendered that Government upon public works, and under requisitions made upon your memorialists.

We further state, for the information of Congress, a fact well known in this district, and easily proved, that, at the treaty of Greenville, General A. Wayne, the commissioner authorized on the behalf of the United States to treat with the Indians, did expressly stipulate and engage to and with the Indians, that the Canadian farmers, by them settled within the cession, including Detroit, never should be molested or otherwise disturbed in their possessions; but, on the contrary, that the United States would forever maintain to them, their heirs, and assigns, the quiet and peaceable possession of their farms, possessions, and improvements, which promise, solemnly pledged by General Wayne, was the motive and consideration which led the Indians to make this cession to the Government. It is a matter of surprise to your memorialists how a promise so material should have been omitted by General Wayne, when the treaty was drawn for execution; but, whether the omission was accidental or designed, that circumstance ought not, in equity, to prejudice your memorialists, for whose protection and benefit it was expressly intended. Neither do the Indian chiefs who signed that treaty consider the treaty as vacating the obligation on Government to fulfil it: it is the belts of wampum exchanged that constitutes a treaty with them, and to those belts, which are carefully preserved, will they resort to solve difficulties, should any arise, and not to the writing, which they cannot understand.

Your memorialists beg leave further to state that the time allowed to persons claiming lands, &c. in this district, within which they are required to exhibit their claims, register their patents, deeds, &c., is not sufficiently extended to enable claimants, generally, to comply with the provisions of the law. The removal of public offices and records, on change of Government, and, in several instances, of title papers, previously deposited in those offices for safe keeping, renders it difficult for your memorialists to comply with the act, and, in many instances, it is impossible to do it within the time limited. We further state that it is out of our power to comply with that provision in the law requiring us to exhibit a plat and survey of the land claimed, together with the claim. It is seldom that surveys have been complete; neither has it been a practice to give plats, when the surveys were made; nor can your memorialists now obtain such plats, &c., there being no person in this country willing to undertake it in whose skill we can confide. Your memorialists, therefore, pray that so much of the act as requires the exhibition of such plats, &c. may be repealed.

The majority of your memorialists, being wholly unacquainted with the English language, find it difficult to transact their business in the land office, for want of knowledge of the law, &c. It is hoped that Congress will, by law, make provision for the appointment of a suitable person, whose duty it shall be to translate as well as interpret for your memorialists, in all transactions wherein they may be concerned on settlement of titles of land.

And, lastly, we, your humble memorialists, do earnestly solicit Congress to extend to their unfortunate and distressed country the tender and soothing voice of mercy. Our lot has been peculiarly hard; that of a frontier, subject to all the evils unavoidably incident to such a situation. It was the fortune of birth, not choice, that fixed our lot in this country. A natural increase of population obliged us to extend our settlement, to acquire means of subsistence, not in opposition to any known law, but by consent and encouragement of the then owners and possessors of the soil, did we become farmers. Our brethren living at Vincennes and the Illinois country have participated liberally in the bounty of our Government. We, therefore, having endeavored with candor to state our situation, our rights, and pretensions, now cheerfully resign ourselves to our fate, fully relying upon the mercy of Congress, not being conscious of having done voluntarily any thing that merits severity.

And, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

FRANCOIS C. JONCAIRE, and others.

No. 108.

2d SESSION.

LAND CLAIMS IN THE MISSISSIPPI TERRITORY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 18, 1805.

Mr. DANA made the following report:

The Committee of Claims, according to order, have considered the representation from sundry citizens of Massachusetts, purchasers under the Georgia Company, and the memorial of the agents for persons composing the New England Mississippi Land Company, purchasers under the Georgia Mississippi Company, with the memorial of the agent for sundry citizens of South Carolina, purchasers under the Upper Mississippi Company; and thereupon submit the following report:

Articles of agreement and cession between the United States and the State of Georgia were signed by their respective commissioners, on the 24th day of April, 1802, and communicated to the seventh Congress, during their first session. By the first article, the State of Georgia ceded to the United States all the right, title, and claim of that State to the jurisdiction and soil of the lands within the boundaries of the United States, situate south of the State of Tennessee, and west of a line running from the southern limit of the United States, up the River Chattahoochee, along its western bank, to the Great Bend thereof, next above the mouth of the "Uchee" creek; thence directly to Nickajack, on the River Tennessee; then crossing this river; and thence running up the same along its western bank, to the southern boundary line of the State of Tennessee; upon certain conditions therein expressed.

The preceding agreement received the assent of the Legislature of Georgia, on the — day of —, 1802, according to the tenor of the third article; and all the before mentioned lands are now comprised within the limits of the Mississippi Territory, in virtue of an act of Congress of the 27th of March, 1804.

The second condition of the first article before mentioned recognized the claims of actual settlers under such British or Spanish grants as were legally and fully executed before the 27th day of October, 1795, and also the claims derived from survey or settlement under the act of Georgia, called the Bourbon act.

The third condition contained a provision which reserved, to be disposed of or appropriated by the United States, a portion of the lands not exceeding five millions of acres, or the proceeds of the same, or any part thereof, "for the purpose of satisfying, quieting, or compensating for claims other than those before recognized." But it was understood that the United States should not be at liberty to cede any part of the said lands on account of such other claims, nor to compensate for the same, unless an act of Congress making such disposition or appropriation should be passed within one year after the assent of Georgia to the boundary established by the agreement.

An act of Congress "regulating the grants of land, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States, south of the State of Tennessee," was approved on the 3d day of March, 1803. The first section of this act provided for confirming to residents their claims to lands actually cultivated and inhabited, for which the British Government of West Florida, or the Spanish Government, had issued warrants or orders of survey, before the 27th of October, 1795.

The second section provided for confirming to heads of families, under the limitations therein mentioned, such tracts of land as were actually inhabited and cultivated by them in the year 1797, when the Mississippi Territory was evacuated by the Spanish troops.

The third section granted to heads of families a right of pre-emption, with respect to lands inhabited and cultivated by them at the time of passing the act.

The sixth section authorized the appointment of commissioners with special powers in relation to claims, under the three first sections of the act; and also made provision for ascertaining and clearly establishing the claims recognized by the second condition before mentioned.

The eighth section appropriated so much of the reserved five millions of acres, as might be necessary to satisfy the claims not recognized by the preceding agreement, which were embraced by the two first sections of the act, or derived from British grants for lands not re-granted by the Spanish Government; and also contained the following appropriation: "So much of the residue of the said five millions of acres, or of the net proceeds thereof, as may be necessary for that purpose, shall be, and is hereby, appropriated for the purpose of satisfying, quieting, and compensating for such other claims to the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee, not recognized in the above mentioned articles of agreement, and which are derived from any act or pretended act of the State of Georgia, which Congress may hereafter think fit to provide for: Provided, however, that no other claims shall be embraced by this appropriation but those the evidence of which shall have, on or before the first day of January next, been exhibited, by the claimants, to the Secretary of State, and recorded in books to be kept in his office for that purpose, at the expense of the party exhibiting the same, who shall pay to the person employed by the Secretary of State, for recording the same, at the rate of twelve and a half cents for every hundred words contained in each document thus recorded."

The same section also contained a clause excluding from admission in any court of the United States every grant, deed, conveyance, or other written evidence of any such claim, unless so exhibited and recorded; with a proviso that nothing therein should be "construed to recognize or affect the claims of any person or persons to any of the lands above mentioned."

The present applicants are holders of claims alleged to be derived from the State of Georgia, under an act of the 7th of January, 1795, passed by the Legislature of that State.

A subsequent Legislature passed an act of the 15th of February, 1796, stating various objections, including charges of fraudulent and corrupt practice, with respect to the preceding act, and enacting that the same be declared void; that the grants, rights, or claims, derived therefrom, be annulled; that the records and documents thereof be expunged from the public books; and that the act be publicly burnt.

These conflicting acts present a general question of serious moment, on which the committee abstain from expressing a decided opinion. It is not the object of the present applications that Congress should decide the question of strict title, as originally claimed under the before mentioned act of 7th January, 1795.

The petitioners request a settlement of their claims, on terms compatible with the articles of agreement before mentioned. At the same time, it is proposed, as an alternative, that the whole question of title may be submitted, finally, to judicial decision. The general provisions of the existing laws of the United States do not authorize the institution of any process on the part of the claimants, whereby such a proposition could be carried into effect. And, perhaps, it might be questioned whether a special provision for this purpose would be conformable to the spirit of the agreement with Georgia. It is not suggested that any proceedings of the Government of the United States have encouraged an expectation that such provision would be made.

The remaining inquiry relates to a settlement of claims by compromise. This is the known object of the present applications; and the committee of claims have considered it incumbent on them to attend to the proposition for compromise, which has thus been referred to them by the House.

According to the agreement with Georgia, the reserved five millions of acres constitute the whole fund applicable to any such purpose. What portion of this fund will be requisite for satisfying the claims specially provided for by the two first sections of the act of Congress of the 3d of March, 1803, the committee have not been able to determine. From the residue, however, whatever the same may be, it is prayed that a compensation may be made on account of the claims of the present applicants.

Some of these claims are known to relate to lands within a portion of territory to which there has been a claim on the part of the United States and of Georgia. The act of Congress of the 7th of April, 1798, which authorized the establishment of a Government in the Mississippi Territory, as therein described, made provision for the appointment of commissioners to adjust and determine, with such commissioners as might be appointed under the legislative authority of the State of Georgia, all interfering claims of the United States, and that State, to the territory; and also to receive proposals for the relinquishment or cession of the whole, or any part, of the other territory claimed by the State of Georgia, and out of its ordinary jurisdiction. A supplementary act of the 10th of May, 1800, authorized the commissioners, on the part of the United States, finally to settle, by compromise, with the commissioners on the part of Georgia, any claims mentioned in the act of the 7th of April, 1798; and to receive, in behalf of the United States, a cession of any lands therein mentioned, or of the jurisdiction thereof, on such terms as should appear reasonable. The same act also authorized the commissioners on the part of the United States to inquire into the claims made by settlers, or any other persons, to any part of the aforesaid lands, and to receive from such settlers and claimants any propositions of compromise, and lay a full statement of the claims and propositions, together with their opinion, before Congress, for their decision thereon.

In virtue of these acts, the commissioners of the United States concluded the before mentioned agreement with Georgia, and thereby settled the interfering public claims.

It is for the wisdom of Congress to judge how far it would now be for the public interest to provide for terminating all questions relative to title, by the allowance of a reasonable compensation, for such claims of individuals as might interfere with any grants to be made by the United States.

From the acts of Congress, under which the settlement was made with Georgia, and especially from the supplementary act, it is apparent that the Government of the United States had knowledge of the existence of claims of individuals to lands within the present limits of the Mississippi Territory. These were either claims in consequence of settlement, or claims in consequence of some grant or act of Government. After the year 1763, and before the 24th day of April, 1802, a jurisdiction over various portions of the present Mississippi Territory was claimed or exercised by the British and the Spanish Governments, by the Government of the United States, and by that of Georgia. The agreement with Georgia recognized and confirmed the title of settlers, under such British or Spanish grants as had been completely executed at the date of the treaty of friendship, limits, and navigation, between the United States and the King of Spain. No individuals were supposed to claim any part of the lands, in consequence of grants from the United States: no act of Congress for making such grants had ever been passed. The claims in consequence of some grant or act of Government, under the State of Georgia, were various and extensive. Some of them, being derived from survey or settlement under the act commonly called the Bourbon act, were explicitly recognized and confirmed as forming a condition of the agreement. The others remained as a proper subject of inquiry for the commissioners of the United States, under the supplementary act before mentioned.

The existence of such claims was made known to the commissioners of the United States who treated with those of Georgia. Prior to the close of that negotiation, conferences on this subject were had with them by agents of the parties concerned in interest; and documents respecting the number and amount of claims were in the possession of the commissioners.

Since that time, in compliance with the act of Congress of the 3d of March, 1803, evidences of the respective claims of the present applicants have been exhibited to the Secretary of State, and recorded in his office, at the expense of the parties.

On considering these various transactions, the committee are of opinion, that it is proper to make some legislative provision for the purpose of settling existing claims on such terms as shall appear to be reasonable.

It is well known, however, that the claims of the present applicants are not the only claims alleged to be derived from some act of the State of Georgia.

The Legislature of that State passed an act, of the 21st of December, 1789, for reserving the several tracts of land therein described, during the term of two years, for three companies, respectively distinguished by the names of the Virginia Yazoo, the South Carolina Yazoo, and the Tennessee; and for issuing to them grants for those tracts on the conditions specified in the act. These lands are within the limits of the present Mississippi Territory. Evidences of claims, on the part of the two Yazoo Companies, or of purchasers under them, on account of transactions relative to that act, have been exhibited to the Secretary of State, and recorded in his office, under the act of Congress of the 3d of March, 1803.

By the act of the 17th of January, 1795, passed by the Legislature of Georgia, provision was made for the sale of four tracts of land therein described, to the respective companies distinguished by the names of the Georgia, the Georgia Mississippi, the Upper Mississippi, and the Tennessee; with certain reservations of rights for citizens of Georgia.

The present applicants claim as repurchasers by various conveyances derived to them, respectively, from the grantees in the three original companies distinguished by the names of the Georgia, the Georgia Mississippi, and the Upper Mississippi; but are not the holders of all the claims under the Georgia Company, which have been exhibited and recorded, as before mentioned, in the office of the Secretary of State.

Evidences of claims on the part of various purchasers, under the grant to the Tennessee Company, have been, in like manner, exhibited and recorded; none of which are embraced by the present applications.

Between some of these numerous claims, there are conflicting pretensions. Purchases have been made by different claimants, under circumstances which may deserve various degrees of consideration. Subordinate claims have been acquired in right of succession to deceased purchasers, or by creditors who rely on such claims as security for obtaining some payment on account of moneys due from persons now become insolvent.

In which of all these cases any compensation would be reasonable, and to what extent such compensation should be made, are inquiries essentially deserving attention in reference to any equitable compromise.

The committee have not all that leisure, if they had at command all the legal means of information, which might be deemed requisite for investigating this mass of claims, and for discriminating between them, and ultimately forming an opinion in each case according to those principles respecting property which are known to be established in courts of justice.

That a complete examination may be had, and that the degree of compensation which may be reasonable in any of the cases may be adjusted in a satisfactory manner, the committee consider it proper that the authority to be given for this purpose should be such as may extend, if requisite, to all the claims which have been mentioned.

The following resolution is accordingly recommended to the House:

Resolved, That three commissioners be authorized to receive propositions of compromise and settlement, from the several companies or persons having claims to public lands within the present limits of the Mississippi Territory, and finally to adjust and settle the same in such manner as in their opinion will conduce to the interest of the United States: Provided, that in such settlement, the commissioners shall not exceed the limits prescribed by the convention with the State of Georgia.

COMMITTEE ROOM, January 8, 1805.

SIR: With a view to a subject referred to the committee of claims, I have now the honor to request such information as you may think proper to communicate in relation to the following objects of inquiry.

1. What is ascertained or estimated to be the quantity of land necessary for satisfying the claims, specially provided for by the acts of Congress relative to the lands "south of the State of Tennessee?"

2. At the time of signing the articles of agreement and cession between the United States and the State of Georgia, did there exist any claims, other than those under some act or pretended act of Georgia, which could require five millions of acres, or the proceeds thereof, to be placed at the disposal of the United States, "for the purpose of satisfying, quieting, or compensating for" the same?

3. What claims were contemplated, in making the reservation of five millions of acres according to the provision in the first of those articles?

Your having been joined in the commission for the settlement of limits with Georgia, and the authority specially vested in the Secretary of the Treasury, are considerations which, it is hoped, will sufficiently apologize for any personal inconvenience which you may experience in furnishing the desired information.

I have the honor to be, sir,

With consideration,

Your very humble servant,

SAMUEL W. DANA.

HON. ALBERT GALLATIN,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 9, 1805.

SIR: I had the honor to receive your letter of yesterday. To the first query an answer cannot be given with any degree of precision. The commissioners of the Natchez district state that more than two thousand claims had been filed, but do not say for what quantity of land the claims were laid. No information on that subject has been received from the Mobile district. It is believed that many claims, derived from British grants, are still outstanding; not having been filed in time with the proper register.

In answer to the second and third queries, I beg leave to observe that, as there were not any documents in the possession of the commissioners who treated with those of Georgia, respecting the number and amount of claims, other than those derived, or pretended to be derived from Georgia, to land within the Mississippi Territory, any estimate made at that time of the amount of those claims must have been conjectural. What the conjectures and object of the other commissioners, either of the United States or Georgia, may have been, it is not for me to say. The articles of agreement and cession must speak for themselves; and if any elucidation of the intention of the parties is now to be sought for, elsewhere than in the instrument itself, the act of Congress, which was passed immediately after, and the report made the ensuing year by the commissioners of the United States, may be more safely depended upon as sources of information, than the recollection of conferences in which nothing was reduced to writing.

My own impression was, that the five millions of acres would be sufficient to cover all the claims of settlers, British grantees, and others not expressly provided for by the articles of agreement, and also to make a reasonable compensation for claims derived, or pretended to be derived from Georgia; and it appeared to me that the effect of the clause would be, 1st, to prevent Congress from voluntarily confirming, at some future time, the said Georgia claims; 2dly, to leave it in their power to compromise with that description of claimants, by allowing so much of the surplus of five millions of acres, as they might think proper; without, at the same time, pledging Government to enter into a compromise, if, upon a full view of all the circumstances of the case, a different course was thought more eligible.

I have the honor to be,

Very respectfully, sir,

Your obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

HON. S. W. DANA,

Chairman of the Committee of Claims.

2d SESSION.

CLAIMS TO LAND IN AND ADJOINING NATCHEZ.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 7, 1805.

Mr. LATTIMORE, from the committee to which were referred the memorial of the trustees of Jefferson College, and the memorial of William Dunbar, presented the present session, as also the petition of the said William Dunbar, and the petition of the corporation of the city of Natchez, presented the last session, relative to certain lots and lands in the said city, made the following report:

It appears, from the depositions of sundry persons in the Mississippi Territory, that when the town of Natchez was laid off by the Spanish Government, the land between the front street of the said town, and the bluff of the Mississippi river was reserved for the convenience, comfort, and health of the inhabitants; and that two lots, on which a parsonage house is yet standing, were appropriated for the use of the clergy.

It also appears, from an instrument bearing date the 19th April, 1797, that the aforementioned land in front of the town was granted by the Spanish governor, Gayoso, to the memorialist, William Dunbar, as a compensation for services rendered by the said memorialist to the Spanish Government.

It further appears, from the 12th section of the act of March, 1803, entitled "an act regulating the grants of land, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee," that an exception is made of "such town lots, not exceeding two, in the town of Natchez, and of such an out lot adjoining the same, not exceeding thirty acres, as may be the property of the United States, to be located by the Governor of the Mississippi Territory, for the use of the Jefferson College.

Such was the situation of things, when the petition of the corporation of Natchez was presented at the last session of Congress. But some time thereafter, just as the committee to whom this petition was referred were about to report thereon, it was understood that the Secretary of the Mississippi Territory had, in the absence of the Governor, located the land claimed by the town, for the use of the college; and that the trustees of that institution were taking steps to procure deeds for the same. To prevent the further difficulties which these measures were calculated (and probably intended) to produce in deciding this question, the execution of so much of the aforesaid 12th section, as is quoted above, was suspended until the end of the present session, as appears by the 11th section of the supplementary act of March the 27th, 1801.

Your committee are fully convinced that the land between the front street and the river bluff, was originally reserved for the use of the town; and that it continued to be so, until after the treaty of limits and navigation with Spain, by which it was ceded to the United States. They likewise concur with the committee of last session in the opinion that the town of Natchez, besides sustaining inconveniences more tolerable in their nature, would be greatly injured in the generation of diseases, should this reserved space be occupied with buildings.

It is stated in the memorial of William Dunbar, that there is, adjacent to the town of Natchez, a vacant out lot, which he thinks may exceed thirty acres, and which Governor Claiborne intended (as he informed the memorialist) locating for Jefferson College. From the situation of this land, it would be a valuable acquisition to the college, at the same time its improvement would not affect the health of the town. It would seem proper, therefore, that this land, instead of that between the front street and the river, should be located for the use of the college.

It does not appear that there are any town lots belonging to the United States in the town of Natchez, except the two which have been located for the use of the college. Your committee conceive that the town would experience great inconveniences from the loss of these, as it claims no other ground upon which public buildings may be erected. But as an accommodation appears to be necessary, and seems, under existing circumstances, to require a sacrifice, they are not disposed to recommend an interference with the location of these lots; while they are fully of the opinion that the town ought to be secured from the further and greater sacrifices which it would necessarily sustain, should the college likewise possess the land between the front street and the bluff of the river.

Your committee deem it proper to omit expressing any opinion relative to the principle of the claim of William Dunbar, as, from the nature of his request, they conceive it is not submitted to their examination. The prayer of his memorial is that the consideration of all petitions relative to the land which he claims, be postponed, and that he be allowed time to prepare any further necessary representations on the subject. But as he conceives that certain opinions and expressions, used in the report on his petition of the last session, were the consequence of misinformation, your committee deem it proper to say, that his conception is ill founded. This committee being composed, with a single exception, of all the members of which the committee of last session consisted, can state, with propriety, that the opinion then given resulted from much inquiry, and not without a knowledge of all the circumstances in favor of his claim, which he has communicated this session through the medium of his memorial.

After a full investigation of this complex and difficult subject, your committee are led, as well from considerations of expediency as of justice, to submit the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Governor of the Mississippi Territory be authorized to locate, for the use of Jefferson College, any out lot not exceeding thirty acres, adjoining the town of Natchez, and belonging to the United States, except the land lying between the front street of the said town and the bluff of the Mississippi river.

Resolved, That so much of the act of 1803, entitled "an act regulating the grants of land, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States, south of the State of Tennessee," as authorizes the location of an out lot for the use of Jefferson College, be repealed; and that any location, in consequence thereof, be null and void; and that the land which may have been thus located, be not subject to sale as other public lands in the Mississippi Territory, but be reserved for the future disposition of Congress.

NOTE.—See Reports, Nos. 100 and 123.

1st SESSION.

APPLICATION TO CONFIRM AN INDIAN GRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 23, 1805.

Mr. GREGG, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was committed the petition of George Rogers Clark, made the following report:

That the petitioner states that, whilst he was at Post Vincennes on an expedition against that and other British posts in that country, the head men of the Piankeshaw nation of Indians, by a deed bearing date of the 16th day of July, 1779, conveyed to him a tract of land of two leagues and a half square, situate on the west side of the river Ohio. That he applied to the State of Virginia for a confirmation of this grant, but, before a decision was had, the whole western territory of that State was ceded to the United States, with certain reservations, one of which was one hundred and fifty thousand acres, for the use of the Illinois regiment, located on the same ground contained in his grant. That, owing to pecuniary embarrassments, resulting from his expedition in that country, he is now involved in much distress, from which he prays Congress to relieve him, by granting him other lands, equal in value to those contained in his Indian deed.

By referring to the constitution of Virginia, which was framed in the month of May, 1776, the committee find it stated in one of the articles, "that no purchase of land shall be made of the Indian natives, but on behalf of the public, by the authority of the General Assembly." The contract under which the petitioner claims, being in direct violation of this article of the State of Virginia, within whose chartered limits the land was situated, is of course void. The committee, therefore, on this ground alone, independent of any arguments drawn from the policy or practice of the General Government, have no hesitation in giving it as their opinion that the prayer of the petition ought not to be granted; and they, therefore, recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petition of George Rogers Clark ought not to be granted.

1st SESSION.

LAND TITLES IN THE MICHIGAN TERRITORY.

COMMUNICATED TO CONGRESS DECEMBER 23, 1805.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States.

The Governor and presiding judge of the Territory of Michigan have made a report to me of the state of that territory, several matters in which being within the reach of the legislative authority only, I lay the report before Congress.

December 23, 1805.

TH. JEFFERSON.

DETROIT, October 10, 1805.

The Governor of the Territory of Michigan and the presiding judge thereof, in compliance with the wishes of the Government and the people of the territory, have the honor to make the following report relative to the affairs of the territory:

By the act of the Congress of the United States, establishing the territory, the government thereof was to commence from and after the 30th day of June, 1805. The presiding judge arrived at Detroit, the seat of the Government, on Saturday, the 29th day of June, and the Governor on Monday, the 1st day of July. The associate judge, who was previously a resident of the territory, was already there. On Tuesday, the 2d July, the Governor, in pursuance of the ordinance of Congress, administered to the several officers their respective oaths of office, and on the same day the operations of the Government commenced.

It was the unfortunate fate of the new Government to commence its operations in a scene of the deepest public and private calamity. By the conflagration of Detroit, which took place on the morning of the 11th of June, all the buildings of that place, both public and private, were entirely consumed; and the most valuable part of the personal property of the inhabitants was lost. On the arrival of the new Government, a part of the people were found encamped on the public grounds in the vicinity of the town, and the remainder were dispersed through the neighboring settlements of the country, both on the British and the American side of the boundary.

The place which bore the appellation of the town of Detroit was a spot of about two acres of ground, completely covered with buildings and combustible materials, the narrow intervals of fourteen or fifteen feet, used as streets or lanes, only excepted; and the whole was environed with a very strong and secure defence of tall and solid pickets. The circumjacent ground, the bank of the river alone excepted, was a wide commons; and though assertions are made respecting the existence, among the records of Quebec, of a charter from the King of France, confirming this commons as an appurtenance to the town, it was either the property of the United States, or at least such as individual claims did not pretend to cover. The folly of attempting to rebuild the town, in the original mode, was obvious to every mind; yet there existed no authority, either in the country, or in the officers of the new Government, to dispose of the adjacent ground. Hence had already arisen a state of dissension which urgently required the interposition of some authority to quiet. Some of the inhabitants, destitute of shelter, and hopeless of any prompt arrangements of Government, had re-occupied their former ground, and a few buildings had already been erected in the midst of the old ruins. Another portion of the inhabitants had determined to take possession of the adjacent public ground, and to throw themselves on the liberality of the Government of the United States, either to make them a donation of the ground, as a compensation for their sufferings, or to accept of a very moderate price for it. If they could have made any arrangement of the various pretensions of individuals, or could have agreed on any plan of a town, they would soon have begun to build. But the want of a civil authority to decide interfering claims, or to compel the refractory to submit to the wishes of a majority, had yet prevented them from carrying any particular measure into execution. On the morning of Monday, the 1st day of July, the inhabitants had assembled for the purpose of resolving on some definitive mode of procedure. The judges prevailed on them to defer their intentions for a short time, giving them assurances that the Governor of the territory would shortly arrive, and that every arrangement in the power of their domestic Government would be made for their relief. On these representations, they consented to defer their measures for one fortnight. In the evening of the same day the Governor arrived; it was his first measure to prevent any encroachments from being made on the public land. The situation of the distressed inhabitants then occupied the attention of the members of the Government for two or three days. The result of these discussions was, to proceed to lay out a new town, embracing the whole of the old town and the public lands adjacent; to state to the people that nothing in the nature of a title could be given under any authorities then possessed by the Government; and that they could not be justified in holding out any charitable donations whatever, as a compensation for their sufferings, but that every personal exertion would be used to obtain a confirmation of the arrangements about to be made, and to obtain the liberal attention of the Government of the United States to their distresses.

A town was accordingly surveyed and laid out, and the want of authority to impart any regular title, without the subsequent sanction of Congress, being first impressed and clearly understood, the lots were exposed to sale under that reservation. Where the purchaser of a lot was a proprietor in the old town, he was at liberty to extinguish his former property in his new acquisition, foot for foot, and was expected to pay only for the surplus, at the rate expressed in his bid. A considerable part of the inhabitants were only tenants in the old town, there being no means of acquiring any new titles. The sale of course could not be confined merely to former proprietors, but, as far as possible, was confined to former inhabitants. After the sale of a considerable part, by auction, the remainder was disposed of by private contract, deducting from the previous sales the basis of the terms. As soon as the necessities of the immediate inhabitants were accommodated, the sales were entirely stopped, until the pleasure of Government could be consulted. As no title could be made, or was pretended to be made, no payments were required, or any moneys permitted to be received, until the expiration of one year, to afford time for Congress to interpose. The remaining part was stipulated to be paid in four successive annual instalments. The highest sum resulting from the bids was seven cents for a square foot, and the whole averaged at least four cents. In this way the inhabitants were fully satisfied to commence their buildings, and the interfering pretensions of all individuals were eventually reconciled. The validity of any of the titles was not taken into view. The possession under the titles, such as they were, was alone regarded, and the validity of title left to wait the issue of such measures as Congress might adopt, relative to landed titles in the Territory of Michigan generally. It therefore now remains for the Congress of the United States either to refuse a sanction of the arrangement made, or, by imparting a regular authority to make it, or in some other mode, in their wisdom deemed proper, to relieve the inhabitants from one of the most immediate distresses, occasioned by the calamitous conflagration.

Strongly impressed with a sense of the worth of the people, and deeply commiserating their sufferings, of a great part of which they were eye-witnesses, the officers of their local Government cannot refrain from adding their warmest degree of recommendation to forward the liberality the Congress of the United States will unquestionably be inclined to exercise towards them, and the disposition which will doubtless prevail towards attaching their affections, promoting their interests, and relieving their distress. Whether a donation of the acquisitions which have been stated, or of lands more remote, or the application of the proceeds to public purposes within the country, will be most advisable, the undersigned pretend not to say; but whatever relief may be extended to them on the part of the General Government, they hesitate not to assert, will be of the most essential utility to them, and rendered to objects of real merit.

The organization of the courts of justice next demanded consideration. A judicial system was established on principles of convenience, economy, and simplicity. Courts were held under it, and all the existing business settled; every subject requiring to be legislated upon was acted on as far as the Government was competent to act. At the close of the other arrangements, the militia of the territory were completely organized and brought into the field.

The various acts, both of legislative and executive description, will appear at large in the semi-annual report of them, which the laws of the United States require, and it will, therefore, be unnecessary to exhibit the details of them.

The grand juries constantly presented addresses to the courts on the subject of their land titles. The several companies of militia elected delegates to a general meeting, which, among other objects, addressed the Government on the subject of their titles, and earnestly requested the personal attendance of the Governor and one of the judges during a part of the session of Congress. Indeed, the confused situation of land titles during the nine or ten years the United States have had possession of the country, has been such, and is so increasing by lapse of time, as now loudly to call for a definitive adjustment.

It is now nearly a century and a half since the first settlements were made in this country, under the French Government, and in the reign of Louis the XIVth, whose name it then bore, in common with what has since exclusively been termed Louisiana. In 1673, an officer, commissioned by the French Government, explored the waters of the west; taking his departure from Lake Michigan, he penetrated to the Ouisconsin river, and afterwards to the Mississippi, and returned through the Illinois country, after having sailed down the Mississippi within one degree of latitude of the southern boundary of the United States, previous to the late treaty of Paris, of April, 1803, and that anterior to the discovery of the mouth of the Mississippi by La Salle. Prior to this era the settlements of the strait had commenced, and Detroit claims an antiquity of fifteen years superior to the city of Philadelphia. The few titles granted by the Government of France were of three French acres in front, on the banks of the river, by forty in depth, subject to the feudal and seignoral conditions which usually accompanied titles in France. The ancient French code called la coutume de Paris was the established law of the country, and the rights of land were made strictly conformable to it. All these grants, however, required the grantee, in a limited period, to obtain a confirmation from the King; and, with the exception of a very few, this confirmation has never been made. On the conquest of the French possessions by Great Britain, in the war which terminated by the treaty of Paris, in the year 1763, as well in the original articles of capitulation in 1759 and in 1760 as in the subsequent treaty itself, the property of the inhabitants of the country is confirmed to them. The expression in the original is, leurs biens, nobles et ignobles, meubles et immeubles. It is, therefore, conceived to comprehend these lands. On the acquisition by the United States of America of that portion of Canada which is now comprehended within the limits of the Territory of Michigan, by the definitive treaty of peace, at Paris, in 1783, the subjects of his Britannic Majesty are secured from loss or damage, in person, liberty, or property; and in the treaty of London, negotiated between Mr. Jay and Lord Grenville, in November, 1794, they are still more particularly confirmed in their property of every kind, land, houses, or effects. However defective, therefore, the class of original proprietors may be with respect to the evidence of title according to the American forms, it is conceived their rights are extremely strong. The British Government granted few titles, and these were generally mere permissions of military officers to use or occupy certain pieces of land, often unaccompanied with any written evidences, but assuming, from long continued possession, an appearance of right. Under the American Government no titles of any kind have been granted.

From this state of things some consequences have resulted, which are not, indeed, difficult to foresee, but which it is difficult to remedy. One of these consequences, and, perhaps, not the least important, is the effect it has had on the destiny and moral character of the progeny of the original colonists. When it is remembered that the troops of Louis the XIVth came without women, the description of persons constituting the second generation will not be difficult to conceive. When it is considered, at the same time, that, destitute of titles to land, they were precluded from the means of acquiring them, it will be obvious that an entrance into the savage societies, or, at most, employments in the commerce carried on with them, were their only resources. While, therefore, the American colonizations of the same and of subsequent date have grown into regular, agricultural, and opulent States, these countries have been destined to anarchy, to ignorance, to poverty. The emigrant, whom curiosity or enterprise at any time brought into the country, was either attracted to the British side of it, or disappeared in some mode less easy to account for. Accession, by foreign population and by natural increase, being thus at once cut off, the fate of this fine region has necessarily been that insignificance which still belongs to it. The British Government, in recent periods, have confirmed original proprietors; made a donation of a quantity equal to the original grant, termed a continuation; and have granted lands to settlers, without any other price than common fees of office attending the acquisition of the grant. Such, however, is the inestimable value of liberty to man, that, notwithstanding these, and, if possible, greater inducements to the settlers, the undersigned venture to predict a marked superiority to the American side, even at the prices at present required by the American Government, or a slight variation of them, if the old claims are at once adjusted, and the country laid open to the acquisition of new title.

From the state of the country which has been represented, another consequence has resulted. Encroachments, in some instances grafted on original title, and in others without a semblance of title, have been made on lands which are, or ought to be, the property of the United States. Individuals have proceeded to extinguish the native right, contrary to the regulations of all the Governments; and, in some instances, extensive settlements have been made on titles thus acquired. What arrangements the United States will make on this head, it belongs not to us to anticipate; we shall only recommend a liberal and merciful disposition to the people of this country, of whom it may be safely asserted they are less to be charged with depravity of character, than their Governments have been with cruel neglect and indifference.

The claims of the present inhabitants require to be considered under one more aspect, novel, indeed, but not the less founded in truth. When the American comes into contact with the aboriginal, if he is not considered as an enemy, he is at least regarded as a character with whom they are to struggle, and, if in no other, certainly in a pecuniary view. But the Canadian, allied by blood, by long established intercourse, by a countless reciprocity of services, their native claims having long, as to time, been extinguished, and their honor and good faith having been repeatedly pledged for his protection, is uniformly regarded as their brother, and with him they are disposed to make a common cause. Hence justice, and liberal justice, to the Canadian inhabitant, is an important point of policy in the conduct of the American Government, towards the aboriginal inhabitants.

The extent of the Canadian extinguishment of Indian title, though in itself indefinite, appears first to have received limits in the treaty of Fort McIntosh, in 1785. We there first find a written dereliction of Indian claim for a breadth of six miles from la Riviere aux Raisins, now called Rosine, on Lake Erie, to the Lake St. Clair. In the subsequent treaty of Fort Harmar, in 1789, the same dereliction is confirmed. In the ulterior treaty of Greenville, in 1795, the confirmation is repeated, and additions made.

The treaty with Great Britain, of 1783, and the subsequent one of 1794, were made for the accomplishment of great national objects, having very little connexion with Canadian and Indian claims. The treaties of Fort McIntosh, Fort Harmar, and of Greenville, were all formed on other far more important points; and the quantity of extinguished Indian title in Michigan, recognized by them, is less to be considered as an acquisition of new title, than a definition of the old. The expense of these negotiations, therefore, can scarcely be said, in any sense, to attach to this country; and, perhaps, it may be truly said, that all the Indian title at present extinguished within the Territory of Michigan, has not cost the United States a single dollar, but is entirely a recognition of a previous but indefinite title, extinguished by the Canadians. Hence a question will arise, whether it is more than barely justice to the inhabitants to allow them the whole of this part, or otherwise to permit the proceeds of it to be applied to their benefit, in the education of their youth, in the erection of public buildings, such as court-houses and jails, which the late conflagration has entirely deprived them of, and in laying out roads, and other improvements in their country. Next to the adjustment of the old titles comes the acquisition of new. It is believed, that at this period, and in a particular mode, a very large portion of Indian title may be shortly extinguished; but, as this part of the subject may hereafter be deemed confidential, it is made the subject of a distinct report.

On an occasion like the present, it may not be unadvisable to revise some of the regulations relative to the territory.

On all the subjects requiring legislation, the present Government act with difficulty, and on many cannot act at all. All laws will be found to operate on particular places, times, and persons: and in no State which enters into the composition of the American Union, will an abstract code of principles be discovered free from a connexion, and that a very close one, with the places, times, and persons affected by them. Hence the strict adoption of any code, or even of any one law, becomes impossible. To make it applicable, it must be adapted to the geography of the country, to its temporary circumstances and exigencies, and to the particular character of the persons over whom it is to operate. Hitherto it has been religiously the object to follow what has been deemed the substance of the law, whatever modifications the form of it was obliged to undergo. But different minds will not always correspond in sentiment on what is substance, and what is form; and in all the litigations which arise under laws, those affecting the validity of the law itself are the most intricate and difficult. Hence, in a country whose administration ought to be marked with simplicity, intricacy, procrastination, and uncertainty in affairs, result. To adopt laws from all the original States, the laws of all the original States ought to be furnished; and, waiving the difficulty and expense of procuring them, what body of men, under the pressure of immediate business, can acquire a complete acquaintance with them? The possession of all the codes, if it were possible, and a complete acquaintance with their contents, would still prove an abortive cure; for, in many very simple cases, a strict precedent will be searched for in vain. Is the object to establish a ferry, to regulate the affairs of any district, to erect a court-house, or to institute a school? however urgent the call, however obvious the means, it must often be abandoned for want of a precedent that will apply; and often, when attempted, may be defeated, from the want of a strict correspondence between the law made, and the precedent from which it professes to be adopted. The real security for the prevalence of republican principles rests not in a provision of this awkward kind; for, even in the codes of the States, the disciple of aristocracy may sometimes find a weapon. It rests in the general probability that the administrations of this description will be conformable to the general administration. It rests in the parental control of Congress. Experience is the best test of the propriety or impropriety of a law; and if a law be made which gives dissatisfaction, the natural resort is to the authority first making for its correction, and when, from defect of power or of inclination, the evil is found irremediable by them, to superior authority.

The requiring a possession of certain quantities of land in various officers is not only impracticable in the present instance, but the policy on which the provision may have originally been grounded has ceased to exist.

The southern boundary of the territory is indefinite. Though in the present maps of the United States, a line of latitude through the southern bend of Lake Michigan appears to strike Lake Erie near the mouth of the Miami, yet in the maps of Arrowsmith and M'Kenzie, such a line of latitude would not strike Lake Erie, but pass entirely south of it. The anxiety of the southern settlers of the Territory is great not to be attached to the State of Ohio, which would be incommodious to them, but to Michigan, which is so much more convenient. The western end of Lake Erie, even from Sandusky, would feel this convenience.

The case of the Wyandot Indians deserves the consideration of Government. They live in two towns, Maguaga and Brown's town, within the limits of the American title. To the treaty of Fort Harmar, a clause was annexed, stipulating that they might remain unmolested. In the treaty of Greenville, this provision is omitted. They constantly assert, and there are not wanting reputable citizens who join them in the assertion, that they were solemnly promised by General Wayne a continuance of the indulgence. It may, therefore, be worthy of serious consideration, whether it may not be advisable, in the adjustment of titles, to recognise their possessions, and invest them with the character of citizens.

Governor of the Territory of Michigan.

LAND TITLES IN THE TERRITORY OF ORLEANS—THE CULTURE OF SUGAR—AND THE ENDOWMENT OF PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE DECEMBER 31, 1805.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE TERRITORY OF ORLEANS.

Thursday, November 14, 1805.

To the Honorable the Senate and to the Honorable the House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the House of Representatives of the Territory of Orleans respectfully represents: That your memorialists have carefully considered the act passed at the last session of Congress, entitled "An act for ascertaining and adjusting the titles and claims to land within the territory of Orleans, and the district of Louisiana;" and whilst they applaud the motive which has thus early called your attention to that subject, they remain impressed with a conviction that many of the provisions of that act require amendment. Attributing these defects in the law to the want of that local information which their remote situation from the seat of Government has rendered it impossible you should attain, your memorialists confidently trust, that, upon exposing the injuries to which they would be subjected by the execution of that act, in its present imperfect form, your honorable body will apply the appropriate remedy.

The former Governments of France and Spain, under whose dominion this country has successively passed, did not consider the vacant lands as a source from which revenue was to be derived, but as a means of increasing the population of the country, encouraging its agriculture, and gaining the affection of its inhabitants. Hence, they were ever ready to grant lands to those who removed to the province, and applied for them; and, although the concessions generally contained conditions that the lands should be settled within three years, that the roads and levees should be made, and that the grantee should not alien unless the conditions were performed, yet it was well understood that these conditions, like those inserted by the British Government in many of her colonial patents, were not designed for the purpose of compelling a rigorous performance of them, but with a view to impress the grantee with a sense of dependence upon that Government from which his titles emanated, and to bind him to that sovereign upon whom they depended for ultimate confirmation. In no case were lands re-annexed to the King's dominions for want of a performance of the condition, except where the grantee had manifested some decided disposition to abandon them or to leave the province; and, even then, such lands were never considered as liable to be re-granted, until the surveyor general, who was ordered to make the necessary inquiries, reported that the lands in question were subject, in consequence of neglecting to perform the condition, to be re-annexed to his majesty's domain. From this view of the subject, your honorable body will readily account for that want of a disposition to speculate in lands, which is manifested by the small tracts which are now held by all the ancient inhabitants, and for that negligence in obtaining complete titles, which would, in other countries, be inexcusable and unaccountable. When Government, possessing immense tracts of land, were ever ready to bestow them on the first applicant, it is obvious that such property would never be considered as worth the expense of engrossing; and, where new concessions were daily offered to strangers, it is not surprising that the old inhabitants should feel secure, even with imperfect titles, on the scanty portions which their ancestors or themselves had acquired.

The act to which we have called the attention of Congress requires that, in order to the confirmation of incomplete titles, dated prior to the first day of October, 1800, it shall be necessary,

1st. That the person in whose favor the warrant issued, should, at the time it emanated, have attained the age of twenty-one, or have been the head of a family;

2d. That the lands should have been actually inhabited and cultivated on the first day of October, 1800, by the grantee, or by some one for his use.

The instances where, after performing the conditions in the warrant of survey, the settler has proceeded to obtain his patent, are comparatively few. Lulled into security, by causes already briefly enumerated, he depended confidently on his possession, accompanied by his survey; and, in numerous instances, after performing the conditions, the lands have been transferred, by repeated sales, or have passed, by testament or descent, through numerous heirs or devisees, without any other written evidence of right than a warrant, followed by a plat and certificate of survey. Aged invalids are now the proprietors of tracts held under warrants granted to minors; and numerous families, at this moment, subsist upon the production of lands formerly granted to those who were then unmarried, and without families. Indeed, infancy, celibacy, or the want of a family, were never thought of as an objection to the emanation of patents under the French or Spanish Governments, and, your memorialists humbly presume, can never furnish a just reason for refusing a confirmation of incomplete claim, under the equitable Government of the United States.

Your memorialists, therefore, confidently trust, that your honorable body, aware of the injustice of changing the tenure by which their lands have heretofore been held, will not make the titles of the citizens of this Territory depend upon conditions not known to them at the time of acquiring their property, not inserted in their concessions, and not contemplated by the laws or usages of the Government from which their claims are derived.

An inspection of the concessions or warrants of survey issued by the Spanish authorities here, will prove that manifest injustice will be done to numerous claimants, should proof be required that the land was actually inhabited and cultivated on the first day of October, 1800, by him in whose favor the warrant issued, or by some person for his use. In the forms of these concessions or warrants of survey, little variety is discoverable. They state that the roads and levees, where they are necessary, are to be made within a year; that the land is to be settled before the expiration of three years, and is not to be aliened until the conditions are performed. Upon the most strict construction of this instrument, it is clear that the holder is allowed three years to settle his land, and that this period cannot be abridged without an act of manifest injustice. In all instances where the orders of survey are not dated more than three years anterior to the first day of October, 1800, this provision of the act would operate to the great injury of the honest claimant. Your memorialists beg leave to be indulged in repeating, that the Spanish Government never resumed their grants on account of the non-performance of conditions, unless the party claiming had evinced some disposition to abandon the land, or to emigrate from the province. It may be proper also to observe, that, in many instances, where lands had been long settled, and every condition religiously performed, the proprietor had either settled on some other tract which he acquired by purchase, or owed to the bounty of Government, and had permitted his former acquisition to remain on the first day of October uninhabited and uncultivated, either by himself or by any person for his use. It would seem superfluous to observe on the injustice of refusing to confirm a claim under these circumstances, for want of residence and of cultivation; and yet such is the actual state of numerous claims within the territory of Orleans. Your memorialists, therefore, pray that so much of the act as requires actual residence on the land, and cultivation, may be dispensed with; and that the commissioners, in confirming titles, shall be guided by the tenor of the title papers, and the laws and usages of the Government from which the claims are derived.

Your memorialists have also discovered, with extreme regret, that no provision is made for recording and confirming any incomplete titles under Spanish warrants, dated subsequent to the first day of October, 1800, and prior to the period at which this territory was surrendered to the French republic. It is a fact well known to your honorable body, that, after the treaty of St. Ildefonso, the Spanish authorities continued in possession of this territory, exercised their usual acts of sovereignty, and were supposed by her subjects to enjoy their former unlimited right of granting away the soil. Hence proceeded that confidence which allured adventurers to this country, induced them to accept surveys of land, to enter into possession, and faithfully to perform the usual conditions. That regard for equity which prevails in the ordinary tribunals of the United States, would, it is supposed, prescribe a confirmation of titles commenced under such circumstances; and your memorialists hope that some provision will be made, by which claimants under Spanish titles dated since the first day of October, 1800, shall be confirmed in their rights.

Your memorialists deem it a sacred duty, which they owe to themselves and to their constituents, to apprise your honorable body, that, in consequence of repeated casualties by fire, and owing to the loss of papers and records consequent upon the frequent political changes to which this country has been subjected, the title papers of numerous claims have been lost or entirely destroyed. It is some consolation under this misfortune, that the claimants who have suffered most in the loss of papers, are generally those who have remained long in peaceable possession, and who will be able to prove an acknowledged right, not disputed, for a succession of years. Equity, however, and a just regard for the peculiar situation of those who have been thus deprived of the evidences of their rights, would seem to require that some specific provision should be made for their relief.

From reflecting on the extent of the districts, and the difficulty of travelling through them, and recollecting that the same individuals may necessarily have business, as parties or witnesses, at each of the boards, your memorialists are induced to believe that the time allowed at present for registering will be too short, and, therefore, pray that it may be extended.

In many parts of this Territory, but particularly in the large and populous counties of Attakapas and Opelousas, the inhabitants have generally settled upon bayous or rivers, where the soil is extremely fertile, but where there is not a sufficiency of timber for the purposes of fuel and agricultural conveniences. Immediately behind these lands the prairies or natural meadows commence, and continue to different extents of from one to twenty and even thirty miles. These prairies are destitute of timber, and terminate in marshes or cypress swamps. The timber growing on these marshes has been the only source from which the settlers have supplied themselves, and the Spanish authorities here, convinced of the importance of reserving them as a common for the use of the inhabitants, refused to grant them to individuals. These swamps at this moment belong to the United States, and severe penalties are annexed to the offence of cutting timber upon them. Without a continuance of the indulgent permission to use the timber on these swamps, the inhabitants situated near the prairies will be compelled to abandon their habitations. Your memorialists, therefore, pray that the citizens of this Territory, situated as aforesaid, may be allowed the use of the nearest cypress swamps, without incurring the penalties of the law, and that legal provision may be made, securing them in the right of common in such lands.

Another subject of incalculable importance to the most useful cultivators in this Territory, those who reside on the two borders of the river below the Chafalaya and Iberville, forces itself upon the attention of your memorialists, and seems to deserve the tender consideration of your honorable body. The lands alluded to are divided into small tracts, which are entirely cleared on their front, and have long been under cultivation. The grantees of these lands, at the moment of acquiring them, were at liberty to take gratuitously either a single concession, by which they acquired a depth from the river of forty acres, or a double concession, by which they acquired all the land between the river and the lakes or morasses which approach its borders on both sides. A few of the early grantees accepted double concessions, whilst the greater number, knowing that the lands between them and the lakes would at any time be conceded to them upon their application, and being ignorant of the future destinies of the country, contented themselves with single concessions. These settlers felt the less anxious to extend their grants, when they reflected that the morasses and swamps pressed in every where behind their land so close, as to allow in few instances more than thirty, and in many less than twenty acres in depth fit for culture. The lands behind these concessions were sacredly preserved by the Spanish Government for the proprietors in front, and they were at any time able to procure them by offering proof that an extension of their grants would not injure the holders of double concessions.

The culture of sugar, a culture of the first importance to the prosperity and independence of the United States, a culture forbidden by nature to the other inhabitants of the Union, and confined exclusively to their favored spot, has, on many plantations, already nearly exhausted the timber, and will, unless aided by the cypress groves, so long reserved by the Spanish Government for the present inhabitants, greatly languish, or be entirely abandoned. Should these lands be exposed for sale, it is obvious that they could be bought only with the view of harassing the proprietors of the front, because not an acre of them is fit for culture of any kind, and they can be approached only by passing through the cultivated lands of those who are the proprietors of the front. To promote the culture of sugar, to quiet the minds of the settlers, to screen them from the rapacity of those who might purchase the lands between them and the lakes, and to fulfil their expectation founded on the immemorial usages and solemn assurances of their former governments, your memorialists pray that the holders of single concessions may be placed upon the same footing with those to whom double concessions were granted by the Governments of France and Spain.

Your memorialists, before they conclude this address to your honorable body, beg leave to direct your attention to a memorial transmitted you by the late legislative council, relative to the establishment and endowment of public schools, and pray that the liberality which has been so honorably displayed towards the other Territories, may be generously extended to the Territory of Orleans; and your memorialists, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

JEAN NOEL DESTRIHAN,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
ELIGIUS FROMENTIN, Clerk.

[The following papers, connected with this memorial, were placed on file by Mr. Anderson, chairman of the committee to whom the memorial was referred.]

St. Louis, January 24, 1806.

SIR: We take the liberty of enclosing a petition signed by Pierre Antoine Laforge, in the name and on behalf of the inhabitants of the district of New Madrid, and enclosed with a letter to John B. C. Lucas, to be by him delivered to the board.

The principal object of this memorial is to show convincing reasons to Congress for the temporary removal of the board of commissioners to the town of New Madrid, founded on the remoteness of the district, and the impossibility of producing witnesses before the board, from the want of means to bear the expense. These difficulties, and the hardship of their situation, the commissioners are fully aware of, and would willingly accommodate the district. The board, through an apprehension of the impositions, public and private, likely to be practised by means of ex parte depositions, have as yet required that testimony should be delivered in voce before the board, and this practice it is their wish to continue, until the prayer of this memorial be determined by Congress. And they beg leave to say, that if the additional expenses of transportation of themselves and family are satisfied by a reasonable compensation, they will have no objection to comply with the wishes of the people of New Madrid.

They have the honor to be,

With respect,

Your most obedient servants,
JOHN B. C. LUCAS,
JAMES L. DONALDSON,
CLEMENT B. PENROSE.

The Honorable ALBERT GALLATIN,
Secretary of the Treasury.

P. S. If you should think that too much inconvenience would attend waiting for the decision of Congress as to taking of depositions, the commissioners would be satisfied with your opinion on the subject.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 4, 1806.

SIR: I have duly considered the New Orleans memorial, and the observations of the Attorney General thereon. These, together with the information received from the several boards of commissioners, and a conversation with Mr. Lewis, one of them, who has lately returned from New Orleans, induce me respectfully to suggest the following remarks:

I. Claims to land.

As it appears that in a great many instances no legal evidence of a permission to settle can be produced, and as great hardship would follow from a total exclusion of grants for lands granted to minors, it would seem proper to provide, 1st. That a quiet possession of three years shall be considered as evidence of a permission to settle. 2dly. That when lands have been in the quiet possession of the owners during ten years, the grants or concessions shall not be invalidated by reason of the grant having been made to a minor.

As it relates to other grants to minors, to double concessions, and to concessions made subsequent to the treaty of San Ildefonso, our information is not sufficient; and, for the present, it would be more eligible only to direct a special report to be made, and to declare that, in the meanwhile, the lands shall not be sold.

II. Time of filing claims.

It is absolutely necessary to extend the time in the Territory of Orleans; no more than one hundred and fifty having been presented in the eastern district, and less than five hundred in the western. But from the want of information in the country, the scattered situation and distance of many settlements, and the reluctance, encouraged by disaffected persons, to exhibit the claims, a general compliance with the law cannot be expected, unless a greater number of offices be established, or the registers be authorized to appoint temporary deputies in each county, for the purpose of receiving the notices of claims, disseminating the information, and removing the unfounded apprehensions of the people.

III. Organization and duties of the commissioners.

It would also promote a prompt investigation of the claims, and remove a strong objection, if the commissioners were authorized to travel to the several counties, and to collect on the spot oral evidence. This is equally applicable to Louisiana, as will appear from the enclosed copy of a letter from the commissioners there. But, both to diminish the expense, and to avoid delays, I would propose that the President should be authorized to diminish the number of commissioners, if he shall think it proper. It must be recollected that the boards are not authorized to make a final decision; and one man might prepare a report as well as three.

In addition to those alterations, I will also state that the surveyor of the lands south of the State of Tennessee suggests the necessity of two of his deputies being authorized to keep permanent offices in the Territory of Orleans, and being allowed a small compensation therefor. Should it be the opinion of the committee that lands ought to be offered for sale in that Territory, provision may be made to that effect for the western district, in which a portion of land has, in conformity with last year's act, been directed to be surveyed. But there are but few vacant in the eastern district, except swamps; and it would be preferable to delay sales there, until a report shall have been received from the commissioners.

I have the honor to be,

Respectfully, sir,

Your obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Honorable JOSEPH ANDERSON, in Senate.

No. 114.

1st SESSION.

LAND CLAIMS IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 7, 1806.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

To the President and members of the Senate of said United States:

The memorial of the undersigned, in behalf of the holders of the title of the Upper Mississippi Company to lands in the Mississippi Territory, most respectfully sheweth: That your memorialists have frequently presented themselves before the Government of the United States (not as voluntary obtruders, but in compliance with a public advertisement of their commissioners) to receive a proportion of the proceeds of five millions of acres of land reserved out of the territory lately ceded to the United States by the State of Georgia, and appropriated by an act of Congress passed the third day of March, 1803, as a fund for compensation of the claims of your memorialists and others to a large portion of said ceded territory—claims derived from the State of Georgia under an act of that State passed the seventh day of January, 1795.

The respect which your memorialists owe, and feel towards their Government, led them cheerfully to apply for the proposed compensation, rather than contend for the whole. But, by the public debates on the subject of these claims in the House of Representatives, it appears that some of the members of that honorable body are of opinion that your memorialists have no rights at all, not even to compensation, that the titles they hold are fraudulent, and known to be such, by the present holders at the time of their purchase.

With respect to any such knowledge on the part of your memorialists, they do most solemnly declare they neither had nor could have any; it was impossible for them to entertain any doubts as to the validity of the act under which their titles are derived, there being at that time no complaint or accusation against the Legislature, or the grantees, even in Georgia itself. For the truth of this assertion, your memorialists beg leave respectfully to refer to the delegates of Georgia now in Congress, and to the committee of the House of Representatives, to whom these claims were referred at their last session. The purchase of your memorialists was made in Charleston, in February, 1795: their deed of conveyance is dated the 6th of March, 1795.

This unexpected suggestion as to their rights, has caused a ruinous delay as relates to your memorialists, by prolonging and preventing a settlement by compromise, and by putting them to very heavy expenses.

As soon as your memorialists discovered this opposition to a settlement by compromise, they lost no time respectfully to declare their readiness to meet the question of right in a court of law, to the full extent of their claims, and did pray that Congress would be pleased to direct by law that the claims of your memorialists be referred to the decision of the Judges of the Supreme Judiciary Court of the United States. And they now again humbly pray that such a reference may be made, if in their wisdom Congress should think it more for the interest of the United States than a settlement by compromise.

The vast original cost paid eleven years ago, and the heavy expenses yearly accumulating upon your memorialists in seeking redress, are too oppressive to be much longer supported. Many of the claimants are already reduced to circumstances that loudly appeal to the honor and magnanimity of Congress for speedy relief. In the fond hope and full confidence of which, your memorialists offer this respectful address to your honorable body.

JOSEPH PEPPIN.

In behalf of the Upper Mississippi Company.
CITY OF WASHINGTON, December, 1805.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

To the President and Members of the Senate, and to the Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives in Congress assembled, December, 1805:

The memorial of the directors of the New England Mississippi Land Company, in behalf of themselves and their associates in said company duly authorized, respectfully represents: That they have repeatedly, by their agents, presented themselves before the Government of the United States, on the subject of their claims to a certain portion of the lands lying south of the State of Tennessee, and within the district of the Mississippi Territory.

Previously to the cession of said territory by the State of Georgia to the United States, their memorialists to the President of the United States had for their object the giving of formal notice to the General Government, of the title under which they held, and the extent and location of their claims; as well to prevent any bar to their rights, from remaining silent while the contemplated cession was progressing, as to appeal to the justice of Congress for their aid in bringing them to some definite issue.

During the negotiation between the commissioners of the United States and the State of Georgia, your memorialists, by their agents, attended, and again renewed their claims, and put in their caveat against the United States purchasing any part of the lands within the limits of their grants; but, in obedience to the law of Congress, they at the same time manifested to the commissioners of the United States their readiness to enter into a compromise and adjustment of their claims on reasonable terms; and several communications in writing, as well as in conversation, passed between the commissioners and the agents of your memorialists on the subject; copies of the former are herewith presented. By these, it will appear that the commissioners would probably have abandoned the negotiation with the commissioners of Georgia, had they not been assured by the agents of your memorialists, of their readiness to adjust their claims on a reasonable indemnity; and on this ground the five millions of acres were reserved in the third article of the treaty of cession, for the purpose of compromising the claims not otherwise provided for in the treaty.

And your memorialists further represent, that Congress did, at the cession subsequent to the ratification of said treaty, appropriate by law the five millions of acres for the purpose intended by the treaty; and that they have ever since at the seat of Government, avowing themselves ready to enter into the contemplated compromise with any commissioners who might be authorized to act on the subject. Two bills were introduced for that purpose into the House of Representatives at the two last sessions of Congress, but were postponed, to the great disappointment of the claimants. They now most respectfully again declare to Congress their willingness to enter into the adjustment of their claims by compromise, provided Congress shall see fit so to direct; or, if Congress, in their wisdom, should think it expedient to direct the whole title of the claimants to be decided by the Judges of the Supreme Judicial Court of the United States, and should pass a law to carry it into effect, the claimants will cheerfully submit thereto. But your memorialists take leave finally to represent, that already depressed with procrastinations, and inasmuch as a further delay would probably put it out of the power of many of the claimants, from want of resources, to make further applications to Congress, they humbly hope that Congress will now adopt some definite arrangement on this subject; and your memorialists, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

The undersigned, agents for purchasers of lands under the State of Georgia, beg leave once more to call the attention of the Legislature of the Union to the claims of their constituents and themselves to certain portions of the land lately ceded to the United States by the State of Georgia. Finding that an important question of right subsisted between the Government of their country and themselves, the respect which they owed and felt towards such an opponent has led them repeatedly to apply to the legislature for justice, without asking that it should be measured by any other rule than such as their wisdom should dictate. But the expenses and delays that have attended these applications have been ruinous to some of the petitioners, and extremely burdensome to all. They have, therefore, thought it their duty respectfully to suggest another manner of settling their claims. It is well known that no mode of trying the question at once, and as one entire thing, in the judicial courts of the Union now exists; and to suffer it to remain in suspense, until individual grantees under the State of Georgia and the United States shall have settled it by private law suits, is giving to that part of the Union everlasting litigation for an inheritance. As the question in its nature seems to be suitable for the judicial power, the undersigned humbly pray that provision may be made by law for deciding it in the Supreme Judicial Court of the United States, by the same rules of justice that are constantly applied in causes between individuals. If, however, Congress shall think it more proper to provide for settling the claims by compromise, the undersigned and their constituents will most cheerfully conform to any mode that may be adopted for accomplishing so desirable a purpose.

[The following papers were filed by Mr. BALDWIN, chairman of the committee to whom the three preceding memorials were referred.]

CITY OF WASHINGTON,

February 17, 1866.

GENTLEMEN: Whereas Daniel Boardman and Peter Griffin, of the city of New York, and Thomas Hunt, of West Chester, and State of New York, claim the following described lands lying within the limits of that tract of land granted by the State of Georgia to James Gunn, Matthew McAllister, George Walker, and their associates, Zachariah Cox, Jacob Walburger, William Longstreet, and Wade Hampton, known by the name of the Georgia Company, viz: Beginning at the Tombigbee river, where the northern boundary line of lands conveyed to William Cox by the said company intersects the same, running thence, a due east course, along the said Cox's line, which is two and a half British statute miles north of latitude $33^{\circ} 20'$, to the Coosa river; thence, up the said Coosa river, to a point where the parallel of latitude, fourteen and a half miles due north from the said parallel of latitude $33^{\circ} 20'$ intersects the said Coosa river; thence, a due west line, to the said Tombigbee river; thence, down the said Tombigbee river, to the place of beginning; estimated to contain eleven hundred and fifty-nine thousand acres; for which a regular chain of conveyance to them from the original grantees stands on record at the office of the Secretary of State of the United States. And whereas an amicable accommodation with the Government of the United States, respecting their claim, is very desirable, therefore, so far as they are interested in those lands, they will agree to such terms of compromise as shall be accepted by a majority of the claimants, and convey their lands to the United States agreeably to such form as shall be prescribed; and only add, that they prefer receiving their proportion of such sum, to be raised from the avails of the sales of the five millions of acres, appropriated for the purpose of quieting claims, as shall be agreed upon and without interest.

DANIEL BOARDMAN,

For himself, Peter Griffin, and Thomas Hunt.

CITY OF WASHINGTON, February 12, 1866.

SIR: The undersigned, in conformity to the resolution of the committee passed on the 8th instant, represent as follows:

That, considering the many embarrassments which the grantees, claiming titles to Georgia lands, which titles are held from and under the persons to whom the State of Georgia sold the said lands, have experienced, are induced to, and do agree to compromise these contending claims, agreeably to the report of the commissioners, Messrs. Madison, Gallatin, and Lincoln, as made to Congress in February, 1803, in case such compromise can be effected during the present session of Congress; but the undersigned consider it their duty to add their express reservation of all their right, titles, and privileges, in case the Government of the United States shall decline entering into such compromise.

G. Grainger represents the New England Mississippi Company, which company claim the whole tract of land granted by the State of Georgia to the Georgia Mississippi Company, and he herewith delivers his power of attorney, authorizing him to act in behalf of said New England Mississippi Company, marked A.* He also deposits in the hands of the committee a deed of release to the United States of all said tract of country, executed by the persons holding (for the benefit of the members of said company, and by virtue of conveyances from each of the said members) the legal title of all said tract of land, which deed of release to said United States shall be considered to be delivered to them, and for their use, whenever the proposed compromise shall have been effected, and not before; this deed is marked B.

*This, and other papers referred to, were returned to the parties.

J. Peppin represents the claims of A. Tanno, James Miller, and James Warrington, who, as sub-purchasers, are the proprietors of all that tract of land sold by the State of Georgia, under the name of the grant made to the Upper Mississippi Company, as per powers of attorney, herewith delivered, marked C. and D.

Philip B. Key represents two hundred and eighty-nine four hundred-twentieths of the lands granted by the State of Georgia to several persons under the name of the Tennessee Company; this is exclusive of the shares which have reverted to the Government by certain proprietors withdrawing the money from the treasury of Georgia, as per powers of attorney marked E and K.

J. Russell represents the claims of forty-eight sub-purchasers, which claims embrace the major part of all those lands which were granted by the State of Georgia to the Georgia Company, so called, as appears by the power of attorney marked F, G, and H.

All which is respectfully submitted.

GID. GRANGER,
JOSEPH PEPPIN,
PHILIP B. KEY,
Attorney of Jackson, sole surviving trustee of the Tennessee Company.
JOSEPH RUSSELL.

ABRAHAM BALDWIN, Esquire,
Chairman of the committee on the petition of the Georgia claimants.

WASHINGTON, February 14, 1806.

SIR: In answer to your letter of this date, I have the honor to inform you, that I am not competent in law to bind those whom I do not represent, and that I cannot incur any personal responsibility, or enter into indemnity, on their account. By the printed deed, accompanying my power of attorney, it will be perceived that my principal, Mr. Jackson, as sole surviving trustee of the Tennessee Company, has full authority to bind, and by his acts conclude, the interest and shares of the proprietors who have signed that deed; and the directions added to the power of attorney given me, show ample authority in me, so far, to accept of the compromise contained in the report of Messrs. Madison, Gallatin, and Lincoln; beyond this I have no power.

The unrepresented shares in the Tennessee Company bear a small proportion, compared to the aggregate number formed of those whom I represent, and those whose titles and interest I consider surrendered by re-acceptance of their money from the treasury of Georgia. My information on the subject is limited, having no personal interest in the company, but I feel extremely confident and well assured that those whom I do not represent, and who are of full age, and competent to bind themselves, will readily come into the general measure.

I am, very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
PHILIP B. KEY,

Attorney for Jackson.

The deed specifies the number of shares I represent, the original of which is in my possession, with all the documents evidencing title.

P. B. KEY.

CITY OF WASHINGTON, February 15, 1806.

SIR: I received your note of yesterday, by which I find the deduction of the powers sent you on the 12th instant not so explicit as the committee wished. In order to explain the powers which I hold, the number mentioned was forty-eight, who had substituted me for all purposes as related to the claims of the Georgia Company. Those gentlemen held powers from the claimants in New York and Charleston, (South Carolina,) with the power of substitution. They have substituted for that purpose, which powers I presume embrace all, or nearly all of that tract of land claimed by the Georgia Company. Should there be any who have not thus empowered the general agents, whom I represent, a clause can be inserted in the act which will answer all purposes. So far as I am empowered, I am ready to quit claim to the United States of all that tract of country as above mentioned, which power I conceive complete for that purpose.

All which is respectfully submitted.

JOSEPH RUSSELL.

A. BALDWIN, Esquire,
Chairman of the committee appointed on the petition of the Georgia claimants.

WASHINGTON, February 25, 1806.

SIR: Having been informed that the committee, to which were referred the petitions of Benjamin Hichborn and others, are desirous I would explain what is meant in my letter of yesterday, by the words "such indemnity as may legally be allowed," I beg leave respectfully to inform them, that, in the presumption that any greater indemnity than what is stipulated in the Georgia deed of cession to Congress would, however just, be deemed illegal, I am willing to accept my portion of the indemnity as so stipulated; or, to be still more explicit, I am willing to compromise the claims of those whom I represent, on the principles marked in the propositions that were submitted to Congress by the honorable Mr. Madison, Mr. Gallatin, and Mr. Lincoln, as the basis of a compromise with those who derive their claims to land in Georgia from an act of that State, passed 7th January, 1795. But I beg it may be expressly understood by the honorable committee, that if the compromise in question should be longer delayed, nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to impair or alter the original rights of my constituents.

I have the honor to be, sir, your respectful and obedient servant,

JAMES GREENLEAF.

The Honorable ABRAHAM BALDWIN.

No. 115.

1st Session.

OHIO COMPANY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 17, 1806.

Mr. GREGG, from the Committee on Public Lands, to which were referred the memorial and petition of the directors and agents of the Ohio Company, made the following report:

This memorial bears date January 16th, 1796, since which time laws have been passed removing every subject of grievance complained of by the memorialists, and providing for every object stated in their prayer, except one. Of this it would appear the memorialists themselves are satisfied, from an endorsement on the back of the memorial. The only object, therefore, now remaining to be taken into consideration, is their application for twenty miles square lots, in lieu of that number appropriated by the company for the endowment of schools, and for religious purposes.

To render this application more plain, and easy to be understood, it may be proper to state it more at large.

The agents of the Ohio Company entered into a contract with the Board of Treasury of the United States for a tract of land; in which contract it was stipulated that, in every township of six miles square, one mile square lot, being No. 16, should be appropriated for the use of schools, and that lot No. 29 should be appropriated for religious purposes. In an act of Congress, passed on the 21st day of April, 1792, authorizing a certain grant of land to that company, the appropriations for the support of schools and religion were authorized in the lands granted and described in the first section; but, in the tract granted under the second section of this act, no appropriation whatever is made, either for the support of religion or schools.

The memorialists state, that, conceiving this difference in the provisions of the said first and second sections to have been merely an omission in the law, they they did of themselves appropriate, of the land granted under the said second section, twenty mile square lots, in ten townships, for the support of school and religion. And they now request that Congress would allow them to take the same number of lots out of the public reserves, within the company's purchase, to replace the appropriations thus made by themselves.

The committee think it proper to state some facts and circumstances which have an immediate relation to, and bearing upon this subject. The contract entered into by the agents of the Ohio Company with the Board of Treasury, on the 27th day of October, 1787, was for one million five hundred thousand acres. This quantity was afterwards, on the application of the purchasers, reduced to seven hundred and fifty thousand acres, for which a patent was issued, pursuant to the first section of the act of the 21st of April 1792, above referred to. On the application of the purchasers, a further grant of two hundred and fourteen thousand acres was authorized on certain conditions expressed in the second section of the said act, and for which a patent has issued, without any reservations whatever.

The striking difference betwixt the language and provisions of the first and second sections of the act referred to, has proved, to the satisfaction of the committee, that the omission complained of by the memorialists was the effect of design. The first recognizes the original contract; the second does not: the first directs a patent to issue, with the "reservations in the said indenture expressed;" the second is silent, both as to reservation and indenture.

From this view of the subject, it appears that the quantity originally contracted for being, on the application of the purchasers, reduced to one-half, every claim to the remainder, in virtue of that contract, was abandoned; and that the grant under the second section cannot be considered as resting on the principles of the old, but is, in reality, a new contract. The omission, as it is called, of appropriations for the support of schools and religion may be accounted for, from the reduced price paid for the land granted under the second section. For the two hundred and fourteen thousand acres, being the amount of that grant, the company paid one hundred and forty-two thousand and nine hundred acres in military warrants. Allowing these to have been received, acre for acre, agreeably to the terms originally proposed by Congress, the company would have seventy-one thousand acres, for which they paid nothing. If, from this quantity, there should even be deducted six thousand four hundred acres, the amount of the lots appropriated by the company for schools, there will remain sixty-four thousand seven hundred acres, a more than adequate reimbursement for any expense they might have been at in defence of the territory against the Indians. The appropriation made by the company for the support of schools and religion, (of which fact the committee entertain no doubt,) whilst it manifests a laudable zeal to promote the interest of literature, morality, and religion, yet cannot be considered as imposing any legal or equitable obligation on the United States to replace the lands so disposed of. The proceeds arising therefrom must be expended in the several townships, for the benefit of the inhabitants; and hence the company, instead of making a sacrifice, have conferred an additional value on their other lands.

The committee, on a full view of the subject, are induced respectfully to submit to the consideration of the House the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the memorialists, so far as respects their application for twenty mile square lots, ought not to be granted, and that they have leave to withdraw their memorial.

SETTLERS IN RANDOLPH AND ST. CLAIR COUNTIES, IN INDIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 21, 1806.

Mr. GREGG, from the Committee on Public Lands, to which was referred the petition of sundry inhabitants of Randolph and St. Clair counties, in the Indiana Territory, made the following report:

From the representation of the petitioners, it appears that they migrated from the United States to the Indiana Territory, for the purpose of procuring for themselves and families such an establishment in land as they despaired of being ever able to procure in the old settlements. On their arrival in Indiana, liberal offers were made them by the Spanish Government of Louisiana, by which offers many were induced to settle on the Spanish side of the Mississippi; but that they, through an attachment to their own country, and to the principles of its Government, contemptuously rejected the offer, and commenced their settlement in Indiana. One object of their prayer is, to obtain a grant of the lands on which they have thus settled: they also pray that the Surveyor General may be directed to run a line betwixt two points mentioned in the petition, and that all the lands on the one side of said line may be exempted from the mode of survey, and terms of sale, to which the other public lands are subject.

Making grants on account of actual settlement on the public lands is a principle which has never been recognized by Congress: it was tried, without success, in the case of the actual settlers in the State of Ohio. The committee can perceive nothing in the case of the present petitioners to distinguish it from that of the Ohio settlers, and, therefore, think it should receive the same decision.

To comply with the other object of the petition, by exempting the one portion of the public lands from the mode of survey, and terms of sale, to which the residue is subject, would be such a departure from that consistent and regular method of conducting the business relating to the public lands, that the committee are assured it will never receive the sanction of Congress. The committee, therefore, respectfully submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioners ought not to be granted.

APPLICATION TO CONFIRM TO CERTAIN INDIANS THE LANDS THEY OCCUPY IN OHIO.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 24, 1806.

Mr. GREGG, from the Committee on Public Lands, to which was referred the petition of Pim-e-ne-se, or William Ward, and three others, the children of John Ward, deceased, made the following report.

It appears, from the representation of the petitioners, and an accompanying certificate of Isaac Zane, that they are the children of John Ward, by an Indian woman, with whom he cohabited as his wife. Their father, having been made a prisoner by the Indians when very young, had entirely conformed himself to their mode of living, but always entertained a wish to discover his friends, and enjoined it on his children, if they should survive him, to prosecute the inquiry; and, if they succeeded in making the discovery, that they should endeavor to obtain a settlement among them, and adopt the civilized mode of living, as being preferable to that of the savage state. After the death of their father, in obedience to his injunctions, they have, by diligent inquiry, found a brother of his in the State of Ohio, to whose neighborhood they have removed, and made, a settlement; but, being wholly destitute of the means to purchase land, they pray that such grants of land may be made them, as will secure to them the prospect of a living, otherwise they will be under the necessity of returning to the Indians.

The committee acknowledge their feelings to be interested in the cause of these petitioners, and they would accordingly recommend a compliance with their prayer, if they could find any precedent, or principle, heretofore recognized by Congress, to warrant such an opinion. No case of the kind, however, has occurred to the committee. The only instance on record of a grant bearing any affinity, or having any analogy to that contemplated by this petition, is contained in an act, passed on the 3d day of April, 1802, entitled "An act for the relief of Isaac Zane." Although the lands mentioned in this act were given to Mr. Zane without any pecuniary consideration, it is believed they were considered in the light of a compensation for various acts of kindness performed by him to such of our citizens as were in captivity with the Indians, and for his service in furnishing information of the intentions of the Indians when they were hostile.

The committee submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petition ought not to be granted.

CULTIVATION OF THE VINE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 3, 1806.

Mr. GREGG, from the Committee on Public Lands to which was referred the petition of Francis Menissier, made the following report:

That the object of the petitioner is to obtain from Congress, as an encouragement for the cultivation of the vine, the donation of a section of land, on more favorable terms of payment therefor, by an extension of the usual credit. As an inducement to grant this encouragement, he states that, at Cincinnati, in the State of Ohio, he has, for six years past, been making experiments on the cultivation of the vine at considerable expense, and that the result has been so favorable as to inspire him with a belief that he is able to raise such a quantity of the same species of vine as is common in France, as to supply the whole State of Ohio with good wine, for medicinal and other purposes, at one fourth of the price for which imported wines can be obtained.

There is no evidence, other than the statement of the petitioner himself, to show that his experiments on the vine have been attended with any success. Some information received through other channels furnishes some ground to suspect that his calculations of success are made on quite too large a scale. It is believed, also, that the section for which he applies has been sold, and that, under present circumstances, even if it was not otherwise disposed of, he would decline to be a purchaser. These circumstances, it is presumed, would justify the opinion that the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted: but, as applications of a similar nature may be made, the committee would state another ground of refusal, equally applicable to all such cases.

The encouragement asked by the petitioner is neither more nor less than a direct bounty on the culture of the vine; it being asked not in money, but in land, does not change its nature. The public lands are the common property of the people of the United States, and the proceeds of the sales thereof ought to be applied only to national purposes, for which, if this source of revenue did not exist, the Government would be bound to provide by a tax on the people. As every donation of public land, or diminution of its price, for the encouragement of any species of labor, must, by lessening this source of revenue, increase the demand of the Government on the people, it is the same in effect to them, whether the encouragement is given in a grant of money or land; if we would not give the former, we ought to withhold the latter.

The committee, therefore, recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petition ought not to be granted.

APPLICATION TO CONFIRM AN INDIAN GRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 3, 1806.

Mr. GREGG, from the Committee on Public Lands, to which was referred the petition of George Ash, made the following report:

It appears from the statement made by this petitioner, and a number of letters and certificates which accompany his petition, that he was made a prisoner by the Indians in the early part of his life, and remained with them until the treaty of Greenville. That, for sundry services rendered the Indians, they promised to give him a tract of land on the west side of the Ohio, and opposite the mouth of Kentucky river; for which tract, they have since given him a regular conveyance: that, being now married, and settled on the land, he hopes Congress will confirm the grant.

By an act passed on the 22d day of July, 1790, it is enacted, that no sale of lands made by Indians or any tribe or nation of Indians, within the United States, shall be valid to any person or persons, or to any State, whether having the right of pre-emption to such lands, or not, unless the same shall be duly made and executed at some public treaty held under the authority of the United States. This act has been repealed, but its provisions have been carried into other laws; and, in most of the treaties made with the Indians, a provision is inserted, confining the right of purchasing their lands exclusively to the United States. In the treaty of Greenville in particular, the Indians have strictly bound themselves not to dispose of or sell their lands, or any part of them, to any but the United States; and the nations who were a party in that treaty, particularly the Delawares and Shawanees, claimed to be the proprietors of the land in which the petitioner's grant is included. The conveyance of the tract appears to be fairly executed, and is signed by seven Indians, styling themselves chiefs of the Delaware and Shawanee nations; but it having been made expressly contrary to law, and more particularly to the provision in the treaty of Greenville, to which these very nations were a party, it is of course void.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petition ought not to be granted.

LAND CLAIMS IN WEST FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 24, 1806.

Mr. GREGG, from the Committee on Public Lands, to which was referred the petition of Roger Enos, made the following report:

This petitioner states, that he served in the army in the war against France from 1755 until 1763. That, in consequence of a proclamation issued by the King of Great Britain, promising a bounty in land to the officers and soldiers who served in that war, a company was formed under the name and title of the Military Adventurers, for the purpose of exploring the province of West Florida, and making their locations therein, if it should be found to answer their purpose. That he, with some others, were appointed a committee by the company to proceed to West Florida to carry their views into effect. That the said committee, with the approbation of the Governor of West Florida, did locate nineteen townships between the River Yazoo and the Natchez. That one of these townships was assigned to him by the company, in compensation for his services; in his title to which township he now prays to be confirmed.

He also states his having been an officer in the American army during the revolutionary war, and prays that he may receive such quantity of land as other officers of his rank have received.

The company of Military Adventurers, of which this petitioner states himself to have been an agent, submitted their claim to the commissioners appointed to investigate and report on the claims made by settlers and other persons to lands within the territory situate west of the River Chattahoochee, and south of the cession made to the United States by South Carolina. These commissioners, after a thorough investigation of the subject, have decided that the claim set up in the name of the company for the nineteen townships has no foundation. The promise of grants by the Governor of West Florida was only to such as should become actual settlers. Such of the settlers as did obtain grants, and such as have continued on the lands, are embraced by the provisions made for other claimants of a similar description. If the petitioner has either a grant, or a settlement claim, he can avail himself of the provisions of the act providing for the sale of the public lands south of the State of Tennessee; if he has neither, he cannot expect to succeed in his present application.

If the petitioner is entitled to land as an officer in the revolutionary army, there is no legal impediment to prevent his obtaining it. The laws on that subject point out the course for him to pursue. The committee submit as their opinion that the petitioner have leave to withdraw his petition and the several papers accompanying the same.

ERROR IN THE TREASURY INSTRUCTIONS TO THE LAND OFFICERS IN THE NORTH-WESTERN TERRITORY, RELATIVE TO CALCULATING THE DISCOUNT FOR PROMPT PAYMENT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 26, 1806.

Mr. GREGG, from the Committee on Public Lands, to which was referred the petition of Samuel Dick, William Bruce, and Asa Kitchell, made the following report:

These petitioners state that, at the public sale of the lands of the United States, held at Cincinnati in the month of April, 1801, they became purchasers of three several lots or sections of land, for which they made prompt payment, and received, respectfully, from the register of the land office at Cincinnati, their final certificates, particularly specifying payment to have been fully made on the said three lots or sections of land. That the Secretary of the Treasury refuses receiving these certificates as sufficient evidence of the full and complete payment of the aforesaid three lots, on the ground that the discount allowed on the prompt payment, made as aforesaid, was too great, and not in conformity with the true intent and meaning of the act providing for the sale of the lands of the United States in the Territory Northwest of the Ohio, and above the mouth of Kentucky river; and that, therefore, they are induced to pray Congress to interpose in their behalf, and make provision securing to them the absolute fee of the said three several lots, agreeably to their respective purchases.

In the fifth section of an act passed on the 10th day of May, 1800, entitled "An act providing for the sale of the lands of the United States northwest of the Ohio, and above the mouth of Kentucky river," the following provision is contained: "a discount, at the rate of eight per cent. a year, shall be allowed on any of the three last payments which shall be paid before the same shall become due, reckoning this discount always upon the sum which would have been demandable by the United States on the day appointed for such payment." Some time after the passing of this act, and previous to the sale of the public lands, rules for calculating this discount were transmitted from the Treasury Department to the receivers of public money in the Northwestern Territory; but it does not appear they were accompanied by any other instructions. In these rules an erroneous principle was adopted, by which the eight per cent. discount was allowed to be taken from the principal, instead of a sum composed of the principal and interest which would be demandable by the Government on the day appointed for payment.

The error having been discovered, the question was submitted to the Attorney General, and a copy of his opinion as to the true construction of the law was transmitted to the receivers of the public money in the Territory aforesaid, on the 12th day of March, 1801. The public sale of the land at Cincinnati commenced on the first Monday of April, and the letter containing the Attorney General's opinion did not reach the receiver of the public money at that place until the 20th of that month. On the 3d of June, 1801, a letter was addressed by the Secretary of the Treasury to that officer, informing him that no patents should issue unless the whole purchase money should have been paid according to law, and directing him to give information of such decision to purchasers to whom receipts in full might have been erroneously given.

It appears by a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury accompanying this report,* that these instructions have been literally adhered to; and that, although more than a hundred thousand acres had been sold at Steubenville and Cincinnati previous to the receipt of the Attorney General's opinion, in no instance (one solitary case excepted) has a patent been subsequently issued, except on payment in full in conformity with that opinion and the instructions issued thereon.

The committee are unable to discover any reason why these petitioners should be excepted from the general rule. They became purchasers under the law, and, of course, are subject to its provisions. The terms of the law, in relation to the discount, are clear and explicit; and it would appear that the error in the rules originally transmitted to the receivers of the public money must have been merely a mistake, and could not have proceeded from a deliberate misconstruction of the law.

The committee, after mature deliberation, and considering the subject in every light in which it presented itself to their view, are of opinion that the petitioners are entitled to no relief in the premises, and, therefore, recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petition ought not to be granted, and that the petitioners have leave to withdraw the same, together with the several papers which accompany it.

LANDS FOR SUPPORT OF SCHOOLS IN THE TERRITORY OF ORLEANS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 27, 1806.

Mr. GEORGE W. CAMPBELL, from the committee to which were referred the memorial of the Legislative Council of the Territory of Orleans, and also the memorial of the House of Representatives of the same Territory, made the following report on the said memorial of the said Legislative Council, and, in part, on the said memorial of the said House of Representatives:

The object of the memorialists is to obtain from the General Government a grant of lands for the establishment and support of colleges, schools, and other seminaries of education, within the Territory of Orleans.

Your committee are of opinion it ought to be a primary object with the General Government to encourage and promote education in every part of the Union, so far as the same can be done consistent with the general policy of the nation, and so as not to infringe the municipal regulations that are or may be adopted by the respective State authorities on this subject.

The benefits resulting to society, in general, from the establishment and support of public institutions for the education of youth and the general diffusion of science, are too well known to all discerning persons to require any particular investigation on the present occasion. The National Legislature has, by several of its acts on former occasions, evinced, in the strongest manner, its disposition to afford the means of establishing and fostering, with a liberal hand, such public institutions.

By a resolution of the old Congress under the confederation, of the 20th March, 1785, it is declared that lot No. 16, of every township in the Territory Northwest of the River Ohio, (which is equal to one thirty-sixth part of the same,) shall be reserved for the maintenance of public schools within the said township. It also appears, by an act of Congress, passed the 3d March, 1803, that, in addition to certain tracts of land before that time appropriated for that purpose, there were appropriated, and vested in the Legislature of the State of Ohio, in trust for the use of schools in that State, certain quarter townships in certain tracts therein described, estimated to be equal to the one thirty-sixth part of all the lands contained in the said several tracts to which the Indian claim had been extinguished; also, the one thirty-sixth part of all the lands of the United States, lying in the said State of Ohio, to which the Indian title had not been extinguished, which might be purchased of the said Indian tribes by the United States; making the quantity of land appropriated for the use of schools within the said State, equal, at least, to one thirty-sixth part of all the lands belonging to the United States within the same.

A similar provision has also been made by a law, passed in 1803, for the use of schools in the Mississippi Territory.

By this liberal policy, the General Government has secured to the people of the State of Ohio and of the Mississippi Territory, a permanent fund for the promotion of learning, and the general diffusion of knowledge within the same.

Your committee are of opinion it would be sound policy in the General Government, as well as consistent with equal justice, to act, on this occasion, with the same liberality towards the people of the Territory of Orleans that has been shown in relation to the State of Ohio and the Mississippi Territory; and to make the like provision for the establishment and support of public schools in the one case that has been made in the others.

In pursuing this line of conduct, the National Legislature will afford to the people of the Territory of Orleans the strongest proof of a disposition, not only to extend to them the rights and privileges of American citizens in general, but to place them on an equal footing with the citizens of the most favored portion of the Union, who have experienced the immediate attention of the General Government, and to observe towards them the fostering care of an indulgent parent, feeling a lively interest in their future prosperity and happiness. In this measure, the people of that Territory will become sensible, in some degree at least, of the advantages they have derived, and may yet obtain, from being incorporated into the Union, and becoming a portion of a free and independent nation.

The committee have not been able to obtain official information to enable them to form a correct opinion with regard to the quantity or value of the public lands within the city of New Orleans; nor have they any information respecting the situation of the said lands, in relation to the centre of the city, or the bank of the River Mississippi; and, as it may probably be necessary for the General Government to reserve, for public purposes, some portions of the said lands, which cannot, at present, be designated, your committee are of opinion it would not be advisable, at this time, to appropriate or dispose of the lands belonging to the United States, within the limits of the city of New Orleans.

Your committee respectfully submit to the House the following resolution:

Resolved, That, for the establishment and support of public schools within the Territory of Orleans, there shall be appropriated, and reserved from sale, one thirty-sixth part of all the lands of the United States within the said Territory, to which the Indian claim has been extinguished, or may hereafter be extinguished; which one thirty-sixth part shall consist of the section No. 16 in each township, if the said lands shall be surveyed in townships of six miles square each, and the same divided into sections of one mile square each; and shall, if the lands be surveyed in a different manner, be designated by lots; and the lands so appropriated shall be applied to the use aforesaid, within the townships, or particular divisions not exceeding townships in extent, respectively, within which the same shall lie.

CLAIMS TO LAND IN AND ADJOINING NATCHEZ.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 4, 1806.

Mr. GREGG, from the Committee on Public Lands, to which were referred the petition of the mayor, aldermen, and assistants of the city of Natchez, the petition and memorial of William Dunbar, and the memorial of the board of trustees of Jefferson college, made the following report:

The above petitions relate to the conflicting claims of the corporation of the city of Natchez, of the trustees of Jefferson college, and of William Dunbar, to a certain piece or parcel of land lying within the limits of the city aforesaid, between the buildings thereof and the bluff of the Mississippi river; and, also, to the conflicting claims of the aforementioned corporation and trustees to two town lots, occupying a central situation in the city above mentioned.

For three successive sessions, this subject has been before Congress, the history of which is as follows:

In the twelfth section of the act entitled "An act regulating the grants of land, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee," a reservation is made of "such town lots, not exceeding two, in the town of Natchez, and of such an out-lot adjoining the same, not exceeding thirty acres, as may be the property of the United States, to be located by the Government of the Mississippi Territory, for the use of Jefferson college.

After this reservation was known to the corporation of Natchez, they, apprehending that the land and lots before mentioned, which had been in the possession and use of the town, and to which they conceived it entitled in justice, might be located for the use of the college, petitioned Congress to confirm their claim to the said land and lots, and to grant them such other vacant lands as might be found within the limits of the city.

The committee to whom this petition was referred, made a report favorable to so much of it as relates to the land in front of the town and the two town lots claimed by the corporation. A short time after, a petition was received from William Dunbar, claiming the land in front of the town, as already described. This petition, and that of the corporation, were then referred to a new committee, who, just as they were about to report in favor of the latter, received information that the two town lots had been located by the Governor, and the land in front of the town by the Secretary of the Territory, for the use of the college. Upon the receipt of this information, the committee recommended a resolution, (which was afterwards agreed to,) for suspending all further proceedings relative to this subject, until the end of the last session of Congress.

Early in the last session, a memorial was received from the trustees of the college, claiming the land and lots in question, as the property of that institution. About the same time, another memorial was received from William Dunbar, in support of his claim to the land in front of the town, and requesting that the consideration of all petitions relative thereto might be postponed, and that time might be allowed him to prepare further representations on the subject.

The select committee to whom all these conflicting claims were referred, like the preceding committees on the same subject, reported in favor of the claim of the corporation; but the report was not acted upon by the House during the session.

By an official act of Governor Williams, bearing date the 18th of November last, the locations in favor of the college have been withdrawn; and the question, of consequence, is again placed on fair, equitable ground, and rendered susceptible of such legislative decision as may be dictated by justice and expediency.

The principles of the question should next be considered.

The claim of William Dunbar to the land in front of the town is founded, as appears by documents, upon a grant from the Spanish governor, Gayoso, subsequent to the treaty of limits and navigation with Spain, in consideration of services rendered by this memorialist to the Spanish Government. The claim of the corporation to the land just mentioned is founded, as appears by several depositions, upon a previous reservation made by the same governor, when the town was laid off, for the preservation of health, and other useful purposes. The foundation of the claim of the trustees has been already stated.

In comparing the respective merits of these claims, your committee have no difficulty in forming an opinion. On the ground of equity, they conceive that, as the people of the town of Natchez settled and made improvements there, under an impression that the reservation of this land, made by the competent authority, would be continued for their common convenience, and as it was continued as long as that authority existed, they ought not to be deprived of the benefits of that reservation, either by the Government which had ceased, or that which succeeded.

On the ground of expediency, your committee observe a very obvious and important difference between the claim of the corporation, and the claims of the two other parties. It is apparent that the latter are asserted, from a consideration of the pecuniary value of the land in question, whilst the former is defended with the view of averting those evils which are considered as inevitable should either of the other claims be finally established. Your committee are assured that no part of this land was ever contemplated as a site for the college. The object of the trustees, therefore, as well as of the individual claimants, must be, if successful, to make the most advantageous disposition of the land, by laying it out into lots for the erection of buildings, without entering into the physical reasonings of which the subject seems to be peculiarly susceptible. In support of the claim of the corporation, your committee would suggest, as their opinion, that it ought to be left to those who are immediately interested, to devise and use such means as to them may appear necessary for the preservation of health. It is with a view to this great end that the people of Natchez wish to ventilate the town, by keeping the reserved space on the bluff of the river unoccupied with buildings. To say nothing of other local objects of minor consideration, to which this reservation seems necessary, your committee conceive that the one above mentioned is of sufficient importance to authorize the experiment, whether it be considered in relation to the town of Natchez alone, or to other towns that may be hereafter established.

It seems by a letter of the 19th of November last, from the Governor of the Territory, who is president of the board of trustees, and who also is authorized to locate the out-lot for the college, that a more advantageous location of other land may be made for that institution. Your committee, therefore, can see no well founded reason why the right of the United States to the land in question should not be vested in the corporation of the city.

On the two town lots, or on one of them, which had been located for the use of the college, stands an old building, which, under the Spanish Government, was appropriated to the use of the clergy, but is at present used for the threefold purpose of holding the mayor's court, the meetings of the common council, and the performing divine service. Except these two town lots, there are no others within the knowledge of your committee, claimed by the town, on which buildings may be erected for the above mentioned or any other public purposes. From this consideration, and from the additional one, of the great expense which the inhabitants of the town of Natchez have to sustain from its peculiar local circumstances, your committee should not hesitate to recommend a grant of those lots to the corporation, did they know that the grant of town lots to the college could be satisfied by another location. But, possessing no certain knowledge on this part of the subject, they abstain from recommending any legislative measure relative thereto, presuming that such a salutary exercise of discretion may be expected from the Governor of the Territory, as may be best calculated to do justice, and to obviate, as far as practicable, every cause of local contention.

With respect to granting to the corporation all the lands that may be found vacant within the limits of the city, your committee conceive that it would be proper to ascertain what lands are vacant, before any decision is had on this part of the prayer of their petition.

From the foregoing facts and considerations, your committee are induced to recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That the right of the United States to the land lying between the front street of the city of Natchez and the Mississippi river, ought to be vested in the corporation of said city, so as not to interfere with the legal claims of any individuals, if any there be, nor with the lands annexed to the old fort adjacent thereto: Provided, That the said land be neither cultivated nor occupied with buildings, but be planted with trees, and preserved as a common for the use, comfort, and health, of the inhabitants of the city aforesaid.

MISSISSIPPI TERRITORY, WASHINGTON,

November 19, 1805.

SIR: Enclosed is a procedure which, I am convinced, the interest of Jefferson college rendered expedient, and I trust it will meet the approbation of yourself, and those who are friendly to that intended institution. Although I am not disposed to think that any of the consequences which, it is probable, might have resulted from the locations made by the late Governor and Secretary, could, in a legal point of view, have ultimately impaired the right of the college to the donation of two lots in the city of Natchez, and an out-lot of thirty acres, adjoining, it certainly tended to hold the college up as a party in the litigations about title, and might create some doubts and embarrassments relative to making other or further locations, in case it should be found necessary when lands, the property of the United States, became to be known.

Again, from a more complete knowledge of what land will be found to be the property of the United States, adjoining Natchez, than perhaps was possessed at the time of making those locations, as also from the approaching destruction of the present landing for the city, occasioned by the Mississippi tearing away its banks, I am confident a more advantageous location of the out-lot, or part thereof, will become practicable.

I have the honor to be,

Very respectfully, yours,

ROBERT WILLIAMS.

The Hon. WILLIAM LATTIMORE.

MISSISSIPPI TERRITORY.

Whereas, by the 12th section of a law of the United States, passed the 3d of March, 1803, entitled "An act regulating the grants of land, and providing for the disposal of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee," among other reservations for the support of schools and the use of Jefferson college, are "such town lots not exceeding two in the town of Natchez, and of such an out-lot adjoining the same, not exceeding thirty acres, as may be the property of the United States, to be located by the Governor of the Mississippi Territory for the use of said college."

And whereas, in order to ascertain the claims to lands, and know such as are vacant, commissioners have been appointed, by virtue of the above recited law, and until they shall have completed the object of their appointment, it cannot be known what portion of land, or which particular tract is vacant, and the property of the United States; and the late Governor of this Territory, William C. C. Claiborne, and Cato West, whilst Secretary of the same, in the absence of the Governor aforesaid, having, on the 2d and 22d days of December, 1803, respectively located two lots in the said city of Natchez, and also an out-lot of thirty acres, adjoining the same, for the purposes aforesaid; to which said two lots and out-lot of thirty acres, sundry claims are made, and still depending before the proper authorities, whereby it is rendered uncertain whether the said two lots and out-lot aforesaid, will be declared the property of the United States, until which, the locating of them may hazard the interest of the college, and has already very much retarded its advancement, by involving it nominally in disputes, and an investigation respecting titles, which, in substance, are depending between the respective parties claimant and the United States, and before which decision the college can derive no claim and right of title to the same, in virtue of the said 12th section of the before cited act:

In order, therefore, that the interest of the said college may not be jeopardized, and the Governor for the time being embarrassed, should any or a part of said lots, located as aforesaid, be found not to be the property of the United States; and inasmuch as the right of the college to the same is a vested one from the 3d of March, 1803, and cannot be effected by any subsequent claim or after disposition; and that the locations, as authorized by the above 12th section of the law aforesaid, may be made to the greatest possible advantage for the use of the college, as soon as the land, the property of the United States, shall be regularly ascertained, and because the locations were premature:

I, Robert Williams, Governor of the Mississippi Territory, do, by these presents, withdraw both of the said locations made as aforesaid, hereby declaring the right of Jefferson college to be the same as though they had never been made.

Given under my hand at the town of Washington, in the Territory aforesaid, this 18th day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and five.

ROBERT WILLIAMS.

MISSISSIPPI TERRITORY, WASHINGTON,

November 19, 1805.

SIR: Enclosed you have my act withdrawing the two locations made and deposited in your office by the late Governor Claiborne, and Cato West, Secretary, for the use of Jefferson college.

PRE-EMPTION RIGHTS IN INDIANA AND MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 11, 1806.

Mr. GREGG, from the Committee on Public Lands, to which were referred the petitions of sundry residents of the Indiana and Mississippi Territories, praying for a right of pre-emption to the lands on which they have settled, made the following report:

That, from the statement made by the petitioners, it appears that they migrated to the said Territories, and settled on the public lands, without the authority of law, or any pretension to a claim of title. That, in many instances, they have made extensive and valuable improvements, and, on that ground, consider themselves entitled to a pre-emption right of the tracts on which they are settled, to include their improvements.

The committee are sensible that if such lands are offered at public sale to the highest bidder, the settler must either purchase, or abandon his improvement. This would appear, at first view, as imposing a serious hardship on individuals; but when it is considered that these individuals settled without authority, or any reasonable ground of expectation from Government, it is evident that any hardships to which they may be exposed are chargeable only to their own indiscretion. It is believed that individuals who have settled prior to the passage of the laws for disposing of the public lands may, from their long possession, have drawn advantages from the land equal to the value of their improvement; and the more recent settlers can have no claim to a preference in purchase, which will not apply with equal force in favor of such persons as may hereafter settle on the public lands. An indulgence in the present instance would encourage abuses in future, and might eventually lead to an entire abandonment of the existing land system, in exchange for one wholly incompatible with the idea of deriving a revenue from the sale of public lands, and, by encouraging migration beyond its natural and necessary progress, create an interest hostile to the general welfare of the Union. It might be observed further, that, by an extension of this right to the claimants, we enable individuals to select and engross the most eligible spots in point of situation and soil, and thereby destroy all competition in the public sales.

The committee, from this view of the subject, respectfully recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioners ought not to be granted.

WASHINGTON, March 8, 1806.

SIR: As the Committee on Public Lands have decided against extending the right of pre-emption to persons who have settled on the lands of the United States in the Mississippi Territory since the 3d of March, 1803, I beg leave to submit to their consideration three distinct propositions, as modifications of that question.

Let the petitioners, and those similarly situated, have the lands they have settled on the usual credit, at two dollars and twenty-five cents the acre, if they take as much as, or more than a half section; or at two dollars and thirty-seven and a half cents, if they take less than that quantity; or,

Let them have the lands at such valuation as the superintendents of the sales, or other persons chosen and qualified for the purpose, shall make of each tract respectively; or, if neither of these propositions shall be agreed to.

Let provision be made by law for securing the value of the improvements on such lands to the settlers who may have made them, from those who may purchase the lands, with which they may be included.

The committee will perceive, from these propositions, that my view is not to secure to these settlers the lands in question for less than their natural value, but to preserve them from a sacrifice which they have been induced to risk from an attachment to their country, and a reliance upon the fostering liberality of their Government. I presume it is unnecessary to refer, in support of the propriety of this remark, to what I stated in my written explanation of the 8th ult., or to the respectable verbal information that has since been obtained, relative to the very easy terms on which lands, equal in quality, and preferable as to local convenience, might have been procured in the adjacent Spanish dominions. But, independent of this consideration, and barely on the score of humanity, I should conceive it worthy of the principles and character of our Government to adopt some legislative expedient for protecting the possessions of the poor laborious agriculturist from the grasp of the more able and unfeeling land speculator.

It ought to be considered that the clearing of land where these people have settled will cost, if paid for in money, about four times as much as the land would sell for without any clearing. But it cannot be expected that the additional price which the lands may yield in consequence of a clearing, or of any buildings which may be erected thereon, will bear any proportion to the money expended, or the labor bestowed, in making such improvements. There will, therefore, be but little additional revenue to the Government, though a serious loss to the actual settler; whilst some speculating purchaser will reap the advantages.

But whatever advanced price the lands may command, if sold to the highest bidder, I should presume that it would be difficult to find any member of the Government who would like to see the revenue of the United States increased at the expense of sacrificing the interest of some of the most useful description of citizens. Such, however, must be the case, if some provision is not made to prevent it.

In selling these lands to the highest bidder, the settler, and any person who may bid against him, are placed upon very unequal ground. The one has to consider how much he can pay for his own labor, whilst the other calculates the profits that may arise from the labor of others. Where such ungenerous purchasers as the latter may come from, I know not; but we all know that such are always to be found wherever speculation may invite them.

I perceived that an apprehension of an inconvenient precedent was the principal, if not the only cause, which produced the decision already had on this question. But I hope that this objection will be superseded by the adoption of one or the other of the modifications herein proposed. I consider the existing provisions relative to the disposal of public lands as constituting a very good system. But it would be ascribing to it a perfection, of which I conceive it not susceptible, to suppose it would require no further amendments. The situation of the settlers, for whom I feel so much interested, is peculiar, and, therefore, requires some peculiar provision in their favor. If the idea of purchasing public lands in the Mississippi Territory had not been held out to emigrants, or if there had been any for sale after these settlers had emigrated thither, they would have had less reason for soliciting such provision. But seeing that their expectations had been founded upon an act of Congress, and that, when disappointed, they had either to repose upon the liberality of the Government, or abandon its jurisdiction, I would submit to the committee whether they have not a claim to its indulgence.

Other considerations, which might be added, in favor of the settlers, may, it is presumed, present themselves to the committee. I have troubled them already more than I had wished, from a persuasion that upon their decision depends the ultimate issue of the question. At this advanced stage of the session, when the House is so much occupied with important national concerns, I should have no hope of success in attempting amendments disapproved of by the committee. In a few months, it is expected, the public lands in the Mississippi Territory will be exposed to sale; and, for aught I know, before the next session commences, that Territory, already too much retarded in its settlement by circumstances rather casual than natural, may, by the operation of existing provisions, be stripped of a fourth part of its present population.

I am, sir, with great respect,

Your most obedient servant,

WILLIAM LATTIMORE.

SCHOOL LANDS, SURVEYS, AND PRE-EMPTION RIGHTS IN THE MISSISSIPPI TERRITORY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 11, 1806.

Mr. GREGG, from the Committee on Public Lands, to which was referred the petition of sundry inhabitants of the county of Washington, in the Mississippi Territory, made the following report:

These petitioners state that the settlements in that country are generally confined to the good lands on the margin of the rivers, and that, owing to that circumstance, section No. 16, which by law has been appropriated for the support of schools, seldom falls on vacant land. They pray that, in such cases, a section other than sixteen may be located for the support of schools; and that, where a vacant section cannot be found in a township, a section may be located in an adjoining township in which there may be vacant land.

They also pray that a tract of land on the Tombigbee river, containing about eighty acres, being the same on which Fort St. Stephen's stands, may be laid off into town lots, and disposed of, subject to a ground rent, applicable to the support of a principal school; and that a further quantity of land may be appropriated for the use of said school.

They also pray that the execution of the surveys yet to be made may be at the expense of the United States.

And they further pray that the pre-emption claimants, who shall exclude from their surveys such parts thereof as are claimed by British grants, legally and fully executed, may be authorized to receive their patents for the remainder.

As the object of the Legislature, in appropriating section No. 16 in each township, was for the laudable and useful purpose of promoting education, and diffusing its advantages as equally as possible, the committee conceive it would not comport with the original intention to deprive a township of that benefit, either because all the land in it was covered with other claims, or that section No. 16 was found not to be vacant. They would, therefore, recommend the same provision being made to relieve them from this inconvenience in the Mississippi, and all the other Territories of the United States, as was adopted on a similar application from the State of Ohio.

Neither do the committee feel any hesitation in recommending a provision being made for authorizing the issuing of patents to pre-emption claimants, for such parts of their claims as are not covered by British grants, legally and fully executed.

In relation to the application of the petitioners, so far as respects the expense of executing their surveys, the committee can perceive no reason for granting such an indulgence. This principle was early adopted, and has been uniformly practised on, and there does not appear any sufficient cause, in the present instance, either for changing or relaxing the system.

As to the application for the tract of land on the Tombigbee, the committee think it inadmissible. By the statement of the petitioners themselves, it appears that the valuable land in that country is generally adjacent to the rivers, and that it is principally covered by claims of some description. This tract appears to be the only one of any great extent or value, for which some claim is not set up. The expense in supporting that Government, and in ascertaining and deciding on the conflicting claims, seem to point out the propriety of retaining some lands, to which the United States might ultimately look for indemnification. Besides, as the buildings on the tract are now occupied by the United States as trading houses with the Choctaw Indians, an application of them to other purposes might interfere with that arrangement.

The committee recommend the following resolutions: Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioners, so far as respects locating a section other than No. 16 in each township, where that number is not vacant, and for locating a section in adjoining townships, for the support of schools in such townships as have no vacant lands, is reasonable, and ought to be granted.

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioners, so far as respects exonerating individual claimants from the expense of having their surveys executed, and so far, also, as it relates to an application for a tract of land on the Tombigbee, ought not to be granted.

LAND TITLES IN MICHIGAN TERRITORY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 18, 1806.

Mr. JACKSON, from the committee to which was referred the message from the President of the United States, transmitting a report from the Governor and presiding judge of the Territory of Michigan, relative to the state of that Territory, made the following report, in part:

That one of the subjects of primary importance referred to in the said communication relates to the public lands in that Territory, and the claims of individuals upon the justice and liberality of the General Government for their respective occupancies. In directing their attention to these objects, the committee, by their chairman, addressed a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury upon the 3d of January last, requesting to know of him when it was expected the report of the commissioners appointed under the act of Congress of the 26th day of March, 1804, relating to the claims of lands in the Michigan Territory, would be received at the Treasury Department; to which they received his answer of the same date, expressing his expectation that a partial report, consisting of a list of all the claims entered, and on what species of title grounded, might be expected by the next mail. It, however, did not arrive in time to be communicated to the committee until the 5th instant, when a copy of the report and documents, with communications from Judge Woodward, was sent under cover of a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury to them; and which, being necessary to a correct understanding of this subject, are referred to, and made part of their report. The committee have deemed it proper to state concisely these facts, as offering an apology for the great delay which has attended their deliberations upon subjects which, from their importance to the Territory of Michigan and its inhabitants, they recommend to the prompt attention of the House; for, should the present session pass by without affording legislative relief, it is confidently stated to them that those people would consider it as a rejection of their claims, would abandon their farms, and remove beyond our limits, despairing of ever receiving a complete title. And this is enforced by a recurrence to the report of the commissioners and the communications aforesaid; and also a letter addressed by Judge Woodward to the chairman, by which the House will perceive that, notwithstanding the settlement of this country for nearly one hundred and fifty years, only eight regular titles are to be found within its limits.

Some difficulty suggested itself to the committee in determining to what period the settlements should be confirmed to the occupants. If only to the 30th of November, 1782, when the treaty of peace was concluded with Great Britain, the claims of persons who might be induced to remove from the adjacent British provinces by attachment to our Government, and who have certainly more merit than many antecedent settlers, would be excluded. And if to any subsequent period prior to the organization of a regular Government there, which was not until the 2d of July, 1805, claims would be omitted, which differed only in a single unimportant shade from those receiving confirmation. By the address of Governor St. Clair to the Indians, bearing date the 3d of October, 1799, which must be regarded as a pledge to the Canadians, "that the United States would not take their farms from them," it is fair to presume that many persons were induced to remain on lands not then indebted to them by a course of cultivation and improvement, which makes home one of the strongest ties to our country. And when it is considered that the last blow of Indian hostilities, which cost the United States much blood and treasure, had there been recently struck, and they were no doubt restless under their defeat and consequent losses, the promise made to the Indians in behalf of these people was dictated by the soundest policy. If, therefore, as the committee conceive, the United States cannot consistently reject claims founded on settlement prior to that time, it will be found, by a recurrence to the chronological table communicated by Judge Woodward, that a very few remaining ones up to the said 1st day of July, 1805, have not received a sanction already. In addition to the foregoing reasons, the committee cannot forbear impressing upon the House, that this Territory must be viewed as an out post, far removed from the immediate protection of the United States; and, therefore, the truest economy would be promoted by a liberal policy to the people of the said Territory, as a sure means of binding them to us by the ties of interest and of friendship; thereby to increase the physical force of the country, so as to oppose a formidable barrier to encroachments in that quarter, and soon supersede the necessity of the maintenance of a military force there by the United States.

In conformity with these ideas, the committee submit to the House the bill which accompanies this report.

WASHINGTON, January 3, 1806.

SIR: The committee of the House of Representatives, to which the message of the President of the United States, transmitting a report from the Governor and presiding judge of the Michigan Territory, was referred, have instructed me to request information of you, when it is expected the report of the commissioners appointed under the act of Congress, of the 26th day of March, 1804, relating to the claims to lands in that Territory, will be received at the Treasury Department.

Very respectfully,

Your most obedient servant,

J. G. JACKSON.

Honorable A. GALLATIN,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 3, 1806.

SIR: As by the law of the last session the time to enter with the proper register notices of claims to lands in the three districts of Detroit, Vincennes, and Kaskaskia, was extended to the 1st day of November, and it was only after that date that the commissioners would enter into an examination of the claims, it is probable that their report may not be received in time to be laid before Congress during the present session, as had been contemplated by the act above mentioned.

I am, however, informed by a letter from the clerk of the board, dated December 1st, 1805, that the commissioners had prepared a partial report, consisting of a list of all the claims entered, and on what species of title grounded; which partial report he expected to be sent by the same mail which brought his letter. It has not been received, but may be expected by next mail. If it be as comprehensive as he states it to be, it will differ from the final report only in that it shall not be accompanied by the commissioners' decision on the claims. But the nature and amount of those claims may, perhaps, be sufficiently described in it to enable Congress to adopt some general rules for their confirmation or rejection, without waiting for the final report.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir,

Your obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Honorable JOHN G. JACKSON,
Chairman, &c.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 5, 1806.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose a partial report, made by the commissioners appointed to ascertain the land claims in the district of Detroit.

The full and legal report will not probably be received sufficiently early to be laid before Congress during this session. That which is now sent is defective, particularly in that it does not state the date of each improvement, and the quantity, situation, and boundaries of the land claimed by virtue of actual settlements. That information will, according to law, be contained in the final report of the commissioners.

I also enclose copies of some communications from Judge Woodward, of Michigan, which may throw some light on the subject.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir,

Your obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Honorable JOHN G. JACKSON,
Chairman, &c., in Congress.

WASHINGTON, January 4, 1806.

I have the honor to reply to the inquiries made by the Secretary of the Treasury on the second instant, relative to the measures of land, and the number of improved farms in the Territory of Michigan.

There is a difference of quantity, by no means inconsiderable, between the acre used in that country and the common American acre. To ascertain this difference exactly, it is necessary to contrast their square measures with the square measures used by the Americans.

If the London foot be divided into one thousand equal parts, it will require sixty-eight of those parts to be added to make the foot of London equal to le pied royal de Paris.

Eighteen Parisian feet constitute la perche. Ten perches square, that is to say, one hundred square perches constitute l'arpent.

In Normandie, twenty-two feet compose la perche. Forty square perches compose la vergée. Four vergées compose l'acre. The Norman series, excepting as to the length of the foot and perch, was introduced into England by William the First, and from England has been transferred to America.

The Paris arpent must not be confounded with the Norman acre. By the French acre, as used by the inhabitants of the Territory of Michigan, is always understood the arpent de Paris, and never the Norman acre. The case is universally the same in the settlements of France in North America.

The American acre is nearly thirteen poles square, that is to say, exactly one hundred and sixty square poles, the pole containing sixteen feet six inches.

The French acre of Michigan is a square, the side of which is one hundred and eighty Paris feet, equal to one hundred and ninety-two London feet and nearly three inches.

The American acre gives a square, the side of which is two hundred and eight feet eight inches and a half, with a small fraction.

The difference of the side of a square containing one French acre, and the side of a square containing one American acre, is sixteen feet five inches and about sixty-four hundredth parts of an inch, nearly one pole.

The difference of the contents of a French acre and an American acre is eight thousand nine hundred and fifty-six square feet and a fraction of four-fifths of a foot, that is to say, more than one-fifth part of an acre.

The common practice of the country is, to consider the French foot as equal to thirteen English inches; and the side of a French acre to be, therefore, one hundred and ninety-five English feet, making thus an error of two feet nine inches.

The farms, with respect to size, may be comprehended in four classes.

The first class contains farms of eighty French acres; that is to say, two acres front and forty acres depth.

The second class contains farms of one hundred and twenty French acres; that is to say, three acres front by forty acres depth. This is the common size.

The third class contains farms of one hundred and sixty French acres; that is to say, four acres front by forty acres depth.

The fourth class contains farms of two hundred French acres; that is to say, five acres front and forty acres depth.

It thus appears that the depth of a farm is always the same, that is the say, forty French acres; and the front varies from two to three, four, and five French acres, which last none exceed.

It is to be observed, however, that many persons claim a duplication of their farms, by adding another farm of exactly the same dimensions in the rear, making the whole depth eighty French acres, the front unchanged, and varying, as before, from two to three, four, and five acres. The largest French claim, therefore, that can exist, is four hundred French acres, not three hundred and sixty American acres. The common claim, without the duplication, is one hundred and twenty French acres, not one hundred American acres; with the duplication, two hundred and forty French acres, not two hundred American acres.

The nature of this claim to a duplication will be well understood from a reference to the remarks on the same point, in the representation of the Legislature of the Territory of Orleans. They are perfectly similar. It is termed the second concession, and is what has been always used for wood, and to which, it is alleged, the Government would at any time have given a grant, when it was applied for. This was seldom done. The French colonists never possessed the same knowledge of agriculture which the English colonists possessed. In the front of their farms is the dwelling house and garden; in the rear of this is, generally, a beautiful and very valuable orchard. In the rear of the orchard, a few have a wheatfield or a cornfield. The cultivation of the whole depth of the farm is seldom instanced. In this way, both sides of the strait are settled, the houses in one line along the banks of the river, about twenty-five rods apart, resembling one continued village, without any settlements off from the river. Their farming is altogether on the small scale, and hence there is little or no disposition to engross land.

These circumstances explain and, perhaps, in some measure, produce the character of the people. Possessed of comfort, content, and habitual gaiety; honest beyond comparison; generous, hospitable, and polished; they seek in the duties of piety, and in the pleasures of sociability, an oblivion of all the cares of ambition and of avarice, as well as of science.

The titles to all the farms may be comprehended in six classes.

The first class consists of grants made by the French governors of Canada and Louisiana, confirmed by the King of France.

The second class consists of grants made by the French governors, not confirmed by the King of France.

The third class consists of occupancies by permission of French military commanding officers, without confirmation or even grant, and perhaps without any written evidence of the permission, but accompanied by long and undisturbed possession.

The fourth class consists of occupancies while France possessed the country, without any permission whatever, but still accompanied by undisturbed possession.

The fifth class is composed of similar titles, together with extinguishments of native right, by individuals, while the country belonged to Great Britain.

The sixth class is composed of occupancies and extinguishments of native right, by individuals, since the country has appertained to the United States.

The titles, therefore, are neither extremely numerous, nor extremely intricate. In order to do justice to the Government, they require a close attention to circumstances on the spot. They may be enumerated, however, with so much ease, without danger of essential error, that it may be well to state the amount of them.

The lots in the city or town of Detroit are now in those peculiar circumstances, from the causes heretofore shown, that perhaps no other authority than the Government can adjust their titles.

North of Detroit, the native right is extinguished to Lake St. Clair. Along this line, there are, in all, sixty-four farms, varying in size, as before mentioned; the average about one hundred and twenty French acres, and claimed, generally, under the four first classes.

South of Detroit, the native right is extinguished to the right bank of la Rivière aux Raisins. Along this line there are thirteen farms claimed under the four first classes, and about one hundred and sixty-three farms claimed under the two last classes of title.

Along and north of Lake St. Clair, in a country of which the Indian title is not yet clearly extinguished by the Government of the United States, there are one hundred and twenty-three farms claimed under the two last classes of title.

Along Lake Erie, and south of la Rivière aux Raisins, there are about seventy five farms, in the same circumstances, and under the same classes.

In the Strait, there are two islands, both claimed by one person, under the fifth class of titles, and on which there are ten or fifteen tenants.

There are thus about seventy-seven claims under the four first classes; about one hundred and sixty-five claims under the two last classes; making about two hundred and forty-two claims now within the limits of the American title.

There are about two hundred claims out of the limits of the American title, so far as it has a definite boundary, without the aid of a new treaty.

Thus, there are about four hundred and fifty farms in the whole country; and when the settlements of Michilimackinack, of Fort Miami, and of the town of Detroit, are added, together with from fifty to one hundred families dispersed in remote, and, in a great measure, unknown parts of the Indian country, it comprises all the white settlements at this day contained within the limits of the Territory of Michigan. Of these, a little more than one-half have been entered under the former acts of Congress, the time expiring on the first day of November last.

The geographical contents of the whole Territory, the proportion of good land, and the quantum of settlements, are not susceptible of precise ascertainment. The southern boundary is not certain. It is also uncertain whether the most northern extreme of Lake Michigan is in Green bay, or an intermediate point between Green bay and the Straits of Michilimackinack. From this extreme, the line runs due north to the British boundary, in the middle of Lake Superior. From the southeast extremity of the Territory, in Lake Erie, or its vicinity, to the northwest extremity, in Lake Superior, is five hundred miles. From the northeast extremity, in the middle of Lake Huron, to the middle of Lake Michigan, southwest, is three hundred miles. The greatest length, multiplied by the greatest breadth, would give one hundred and fifty thousand square miles, equal to ninety-six millions of acres. For its deviation from a square form, which is very considerable; for water, of which the proportion is very great; and for land not valuable, of which the proportion is also not small; let the large allowance be assumed of seventy-six millions of acres. The quantity of good land may then be estimated at eighteen or twenty millions of acres.

From the most liberal adjustment of claims which can possibly be made, there cannot be required a deduction exceeding one hundred and fifty thousand acres, a very inconsiderable proportion of the whole; but, from the prosperous state of which part, the whole of the remainder must derive its consequence, and until the adjustment of which it is probable no other parts can conveniently be disposed of.

AUGUSTUS WOODWARD.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17, 1806.

In addition to my letter of the 4th instant, I have the honor to communicate to the Secretary of the Treasury, in conformity to his request of yesterday, the following supplementary facts relative to the fifth and sixth classes of the titles in the Territory of Michigan.

It is well known that, shortly after the acquisition by Great Britain of the possessions of France on the continent of North America, by the treaty of Paris of the 10th of February, 1763, his Britannic majesty issued a proclamation restricting the further extinguishments of native title. By this proclamation, now before me, but lengthy, and a copy of which, I presume, is already in the possession of the Treasury Department, his majesty's governors are expressly forbidden to issue grants, except within certain specified limits; and his majesty's subjects are also expressly inhibited from making purchases of the Indians, or settlements out of the limits specified. Notwithstanding this proclamation of the King, the officers and subjects of his majesty still continued to make purchases and settlements within the limits assigned to the native inhabitants; and they have not entirely discontinued the practice since the country has been in the possession of the United States of America.

The following historical statement will evince the nature and extent of the settlements made in this manner within the limits which constitute the present Territory of Michigan:

In the year 1765, Patrick Sinclair, an officer in the service of his Britannic majesty, commandant of Fort Sinclair, purchased of the natives about four thousand acres, lying on the river named, in commemoration of him, the River Sinclair. This officer is a distinct character from the officer in commemoration of whom Lake St. Clair derived its appellation, and who was in the service of France. He remained in possession seventeen years, deriving great profits from the use of the land as a pinery, and then sold to a Canadian, who afterwards sold to others; and the present proprietors are in possession of valuable improvements.

In the year 1771, seven Canadians made a purchase of about two thousand acres on the strait called Detroit, below the town of Detroit, and Henry Bassett, an officer in the service of his Britannic majesty, commandant of the post of Detroit, undertook to confirm the acquisition.

In the year 1776, Pierre François Combe purchased about four thousand acres on La Rivière à l'Écorce, and placed his settlers on it almost immediately after.

In the same year, William McComb purchased of the natives the island at the mouth of the Strait or River Detroit, called La Gros Isle, including a small adjacent island, called Limestone Island, from its possessing a valuable limestone quarry. It contains, probably, more than six thousand acres, and there are ten tenants on it.

In the year 1779, a Canadian purchased from the Pottawatamie, Ottawa, and Chébois nations, about eight thousand acres on la Crique aux Loutres, or Otter creek.

In the year 1780, Joseph Benac purchased about six thousand acres on la Crique au Sable, or Sandy creek. Twelve years after, he conveyed to others, who made settlements; and two years after these, the settlements on the purchase immediately preceding were made.

In the same year, three settlements were added to the seven made in 1771 on the strait.

In the same year, thirty-eight settlements were made on la Rivière Rouge, and four at Pointe au Tremblé.

In 1782, there were nineteen settlers adjacent to the tract of Patrick Sinclair.

In 1783, twenty settlements were made on Lake St. Clair.

In 1784, a large body of Canadians settled on la Rivière aux Raisins.

In 1785, four settlers were added to those at Pointe au Tremblé.

In 1786, François Pepin purchased about three thousand acres on la Rivière aux Roches. The purchasers under him have carried their improvements to a great extent. In the same year, William McComb acquired l'Isle à Cochon, in the Strait, by a purchase from George McDougall, whose right is not fully understood, as, up to the year 1764, it had been held by the French as an appendage to the garrison at Detroit.

In the year 1788, twenty settlements were made on la Rivière aux Hurons; and Gabriel Godfroy purchased the same quantity with François Pepin, on the Rivière aux Roches.

In 1790, a few settlers were added to those at Pointe au Tremblé.

In 1792, a couple of settlements were added to those on la Rivière à l'Écorce; and, in the same year, a body of Canadians settled on la Crique au Sable, or Sandy creek.

In 1793, a considerable addition was made to the settlements on the Huron river; and, in the subsequent year, an inconsiderable addition was made to those on the River Écorce. At the same time, a large body settled on Otter creek.

In 1797, a large number of families, altogether Canadians, settled on what is called Milk river, and in the country north of it. A small addition was made in this and the subsequent year, to each of the settlements on la Rivière à l'Écorce, and la Rivière Rouge.

In 1800, four settlers were added to those on the Huron river, and in that and the subsequent year about six families were added to those on the River Sinclair. In 1801, also, pretensions were manifested to a salt spring in this quarter.

During all this period, great anxiety existed among the people to obtain regular titles. Attached to the American jurisdiction, their determination seemed to be to throw themselves on the mercy of the American Government, when it became inclined to attend to their situation.

In 1802, directions were given to the Indian agent by the Secretary of the Department of War, to investigate and report the titles of this country. The inhabitants received him with the greatest hospitality and candor, concealing or misrepresenting none of the facts attending their respective settlements, and manifested their joy at the Government's turning their attention to the titles of that country.

In February, 1804, a minute report of the agent was transmitted to Congress.

In 1805, the people of the country, unanimously, and at their private expense, delegated an agent to Congress on the same business.

In the present year, 1806, the Governor of the Territory charges himself with this task, as an official duty, enforced by their earnest request. In pursuance of a former act of Congress, the evidences, both written and oral, and all the minute circumstances of a considerable number of the settlements, have been collected and recorded, and will be transmitted to the seat of Government as soon as their transcription, and their conveyance by an uncertain mail, can be effected.

For the purpose of presenting a more clear view of the date, position, and extent, of these settlements, together with those of the four first classes, up to the year 1763, the following chronological table is annexed; of which the first column exhibits the respective years; the second the geographical position of the settlements; the third, whether they are within the limits of the American title, as defined by the treaty of Fort Mackintosh; and the fourth, the number of distinct farms or settlements made. The treaty of Fort Mackintosh is taken rather than that of Greenville, because in the latter some additions are made, which the commissioner, no doubt, conceived to be to the interest of the United States, but the sanction of which, without a new treaty, will probably be deemed not consistent with good policy.

For reasons which have been before sufficiently stated, all the titles and claims in the city or town of Detroit are omitted in these enumerations.

I have the honor to be, sir, with great respect, your obedient servant,

A. WOODWARD.

WASHINGTON, January 17, 1806.

A. WOODWARD.

LAND OFFICE, DETROIT, Dec. 1, 1805.

SIR: The people of this district, not yet satisfied with the laws heretofore passed for an investigation of land claims, will, we understand, again address either Congress or yourself on that subject, for this reason; and as it is yet uncertain whether we shall be able to finish the business before us sufficiently early to enable Congress to act on our report during their ensuing session, we deem it our duty to transmit to you a general summary, which will exhibit a faithful yet a concise statement of the nature and situation of such claims as have been presented within the time limited by law.

Before we were informed of the passage of the last act, we had examined and decided on all claims which had been regularly entered with the register on the first day of January last. When that act reached us, we conceived it altogether unnecessary to forward the report, as four-fifths, at least, of those claims were founded on possession, settlement, and improvement merely, and would, of course, require a reconsideration. By persons in this situation, additional evidence, as we had foreseen, has been brought forward to prove the possession, the actual settlement, the date of the first improvements, the quantity and situation of the land claimed, the length of time, the claimant, and those from whom he pretends to derive right, have been in possession, together with other accidental matter. As this evidence is, in almost every case, necessarily the testimony of individuals in the respective neighborhoods, a length of time is required to interpret most of the witnesses speaking the French language only, to methodize and reduce to writing the substance of what each witness deposed on his examination.

The clerk attends the board the greater part of each day to keep mere minutes of its proceedings, with references to the written documents, which are exhibited as evidence of each respective claim; and in the evenings he has hitherto been employed in translating deeds and other writings executed in the French language. Had the people been more prompt in their entries, our time might have been better economized; the summer would have afforded leisure for recording and translating, and the business might have been completed by the first day of January at furthest; but as they never do that to-day which can be delayed until to-morrow, not one-twentieth of their notices or written evidences were filed, until the last moments allowed by the law.

The register was desirous of employing, as a translator, some person other than the clerk of the board, whose attention was already engrossed; but the commissioners know of none else here sufficiently qualified, in whom confidence could be reposed. The business then cannot be regularly and attentively gone through before February next; after which, time will be required for the clerk to draw up, at length, such of the minutes of our proceedings and decisions, with the evidence adduced in support of each claim, as he may not be able to complete in the intermediate time, and to make out the necessary transcripts. This duty will unavoidably occasion much delay, as there are many claims, wherein ten, fifteen, and twenty deeds are produced as evidence of either title or continued possession. These facts will justify our apparent tardiness; and we beg you, sir, to be assured that we are using every diligence in order to complete the business before us, and to report on as early a day as circumstances will allow.

We believe that the statements now submitted, aided by the accompanying documents, will exhibit, substantially, the merits of every species of claim within the district.

I. Claims founded on the grants of Antoine de Lamothe Cadillac, Lord of Bouquet Mondesert, and commandant for the King at Detroit, Pontchartrain, in the first years of the last century. That officer appears to have acted under special instructions from the King of France, and his patents convey a title, in fee simple, upon certain conditions expressed in the document marked A, of which species there are only two. These grants, requiring not the confirmation of the Crown of France, we consider to have been originally good; and though the series of transferences from the original patentees to the present claimants is imperfect and unconnected, we decide between them and the Government in their favor, reserving the rights of other persons.

II. Claims founded on the grants issued by the governor and the intendant of New France and Louisiana, in the years 1735 and 1737, with the confirmations of them by the King of France. (Vide document, marked B and C, of which kinds there are six.)

We consider the Government right as completely transferred by these grants, and affirm the claims grounded on them, with a reservation of individual rights, in contested cases.

III. Claims founded on similar grants by the governor and the intendant between the years 1734 and 1754, for which a brevet of confirmation was never obtained, though made an indispensable condition of the grant. (Vide document D, of which species there are fifteen.)

During the intermediate period between these two eras, the mode of obtaining grants from the Government was by application to the governor and the intendant. These officers, we are induced to believe, possessed the initiative only, and not the complete power to make absolute grants of the soil: From the face of their patents, it appears that, in conformity to the instructions of the King, and on petition or demand of the subject, they granted lands in fee simple, reserving rents and other services; and upon this, among several other conditions, that the grantee do take a brevet of confirmation from his majesty, within two years from the date of the grant, on pain of nullity thereof.

The performance of this condition is not proven; neither do the claimants attempt to justify the non-compliance therewith, by the allegation of any legal or equitable circumstances whatever. The commissioners, therefore, consider these grants as forfeited, and reject the claims founded on them: for they cannot, on legal principles, consider the forbearance of the French Government to avail itself of this neglect, by actually ousting the grantee from his possession, as a waiver of its right, or as an implied confirmation of the grantee's title. On the contrary, they are decidedly of opinion, that, after the expiration of the said two years, upon the non-performance of the conditions, the grant reverted to the grantors, and, not being otherwise disposed of, all rights to such forfeited lands were, together with the country itself, transferred to the Government of Great Britain, by the fourth article of the treaty of Paris of the 10th of February, 1763, and to the United States by the definitive treaty of peace between the two latter Powers, in the year 1783. Some of these claimants endeavor to support a prescriptive right, and it is in evidence before the commissioners, that they, or those from whom they derive claim, have been in the peaceable possession of their respective farms for upwards of sixty years. But a moment's reflection will show the fallacy of these pretensions on legal grounds.

In the year 1763, these lands became subject to the laws of England, in relation to Crown lands; for although the laws and customs of Canada were the rule for the decision of all matters of controversy between subject and subject, relative to property and civil rights, yet we imagine that the disposal of territory or soil, acquired by treaty, is regulated by the laws, usages, and customs of the Government making the acquisition, unless it should be otherwise specially provided.

Antecedently to the date of the treaty of Paris, it is not contended that a sufficient time had elapsed to enable the claimants to prescribe. Under the British Government, until the twenty-first year of the reign of James the First, title by prescription against the Crown could not be pleaded; and not then, unless the occupant, or those from whom he derived his claim, had been in the peaceable and uninterrupted possession of the lands in question for sixty years precedent to the 19th of February, 1623. The statute of James the First becoming ineffectual by efflux of time, the limitation was afterwards, early in the reign of George the Third, fixed at sixty years, to commence, and be reckoned backwards, from the institution of the suit, or other process, for the recovery of the thing in question.

From the year 1734, prior to which period no grants of this description were issued, to the year 1783, when the United States acquired this country, and with it, constructively, all rights to such forfeited lands can only be reckoned forty-nine years; not sufficiently long, it is conceded on all hands, to have vested a right by legal prescription. After which latter period, to wit, 1783, if not from the year 1776, those statutory limitations of England ceased to have a force in our country. The common law of England is considered the law of the United States, unless where altered or repealed by laws of our own making; and the immemorially adopted maxim of nulhum tempus occurrit regi, with an alteration suited to the style of our Government, became, we imagine, the law of the land.

The length of possession necessary to enable citizens to prescribe title against the Government has never been ascertained by any statute of the United States.

Notwithstanding, then, the natural justice and equity of such a plea by these claimants, the commissioners feel themselves obliged, reluctantly, to pronounce it unwarrantable.

IV. Claims founded on grants of Monsieur de Belestre, and other French commandants, and continuations or augmentations by these officers of grants formerly made by the governor and the intendant.

These persons had, at several times, the command of the fort and the garrison of Detroit, or Pontchartrain, as it was then called, and took upon themselves, not only to grant extensions of the tracts of land conveyed by the old patents, but also to create and vest new estates, by issuing additional grants, on no other or better authority, than that conferred on them by their military command. Instructions have, indeed, been referred to, though never produced to the commissioners; and their existence may be very reasonably questioned, until the claimants make it appear that those persons were specially empowered and authorized to that effect, when it is considered that it is quite unusual to vest such powers in subaltern military officers, and when it is, besides, satisfactorily ascertained that the regular and common mode of application was by a petition to the governor and the intendant, who themselves issued grants, in the form of the documents B & D. (Vide documents, marked E & A.)

There are instances, too, of such extensions of grants by one Celoren, commandant of this post, in conjunction with one Navarre, who subscribes as deputy of the intendant, which are considered equally irregular. (Vide document A.) The conduct of Monsieur de Belestre, in particular, appears extraordinary, and altogether unaccountable. After the taking of Quebec, and the reduction of the greater part of Canada, he issued a number of certificates, perhaps thirty, in the nature of grants, for the lands on the Rivers Aux Ecorce and Rouge, and on the main river or strait. We are loath to suppose this officer to have been actuated by motives of personal aggrandizement; yet he, perhaps, foresaw the conquest of the colony by the British, and that his impositions and frauds could scarcely be inquired into after the loss of the country. At any rate, that he, or his predecessors in command, possessed sufficient powers to dispose of the soil, is highly improbable, cannot be presumed, and, until it be proven, we reject all claims flowing from a source so suspiciously impure.

The articles of capitulation, signed at Montreal on the 8th day of September, 1760, by the Marquis de Vaudreuil and Major General Amherst, contribute nothing towards the confirmation of claims derived in this manner. The thirty-seventh article, indeed, says "that the lords of manors, the military and civil officers, the Canadians, as well in the town as in the country; the French, settled or trading in the whole extent of the colony of Canada; and all other persons whatsoever, shall preserve the entire peaceable property and possession of their goods, noble and ignoble, moveable and immoveable, merchandizes, furs, and other effects, even their ships; they shall not be touched, nor the least damage done to them, on any pretence whatever; they shall have the liberty to keep, let, or sell them, as well to the French as to the British, &c."

General Amherst, however, in his acceptance of this article, says, "but if his most Christian majesty has any share in it, that must become the property of the King of Great Britain."

Great faith and reliance is placed on these articles, and particularly on the thirty-seventh, for the confirmation of all claims founded on possession, since the period of their date, however tortuously or illegally such possession may have been gained. But the treaty of Paris, negotiated soon after, is, perhaps, the only authentic document by which legally to try the validity of such pretensions, the fourth article of which is to the following effect:

"His most Christian majesty cedes and guaranties to his said Britannic majesty, in full right, Canada, with all its dependencies, as well as the island of Cape Breton, and all the other islands and coasts in the gulf and river of St. Lawrence, and, in general, every thing that depends on the said countries, lands, islands, and coasts, with the sovereignty, property, possession, and all rights acquired by treaty, or otherwise, which the most Christian King and the Crown of France have had till now over the said countries, islands, lands, places, coasts, and their inhabitants; so that the most Christian King cedes and makes over the whole to the said King and to the Crown of Great Britain, and that in the most ample manner and form, without restriction, and without any liberty to depart from the said guarantee, under any pretence, or to disturb Great Britain in the possessions above mentioned."

"His Britannic majesty agrees that the French inhabitants, or others who had been the subjects of the most Christian King, in Canada, may retire with all safety and freedom wherever they shall think proper, and may sell their estates, provided it be to subjects of his Britannic majesty," &c.

The British general appeared entirely sensible of the advantages he had gained, and in all his intercourse with the Marquis de Vaudreuil, with respect to the capitulation, dictated the terms, and positively insists on an unequivocal and undiminished transfer to his King of every right which his most Christian majesty possessed in and over the colony.

With these dispositions, it can scarcely be supposed that he would have consented to place the inhabitants of a conquered country on a better footing, with respect to property, than they had stood before the war. Giving those articles, then, the most liberal and beneficial construction in favor of the persons for whom stipulations were made, we must conclude that nothing more was intended than to secure every one in the free use and enjoyment of his property, according to the nature and tenure of each one's estate and title therein; and that it would be extremely absurd to suppose that they ever meant to have legalized a trespasser's or a disseiser's possession, and to have also added or conveyed thereto the right of property, so as to perfect and complete a title founded in injustice and wrong: for such would be the effects of the construction insisted on by some of the claimants. The intention of the parties is, however, too strongly and unequivocally expressed, to leave the least shadow of doubt on the subject.

V. Claims pretended to be derived from the British Government. Of this description, there are about one hundred, most of which have been conveyed through different channels.

1st. The claim of the heirs and legal representatives of the late William McComb, deceased.

The document marked F will discover this to be nothing more than an estate at will, determined by the treaty of 1783. The foundation of this claim is the permission of the King of Great Britain to one George McDougall for the temporary occupation of Hog island, so long as the military establishment at Detroit might be continued by his majesty; provided this could be done without umbrage to the Indians, and upon consideration that the improvements projected by the said McDougall, would be directed to the more easy and effectual supply of his majesty's fort and garrison maintained at Detroit.

If the treaty of Mr. Jay continued this estate, of which, indeed, we are doubtful, we yet feel no hesitation in the opinion that it is determined at the will of the Government of the United States.

2d. On the 20th of May, 1781, Major Arent Schuyler De Peyster, at that time commanding the Detroit garrison, executed a writing, in the nature of a grant, to Captain Henry Byrd, for a lot of ground, between the fort and the old town, containing two thousand and twenty-nine square yards. The accompanying document, marked G, will show you the nature of the pretended confirmation of this grant by the governor of the province of Quebec. Besides the informality of these papers, and their known insufficiency to convey a title to real estates, it is acknowledged that the commanding officer was not clothed with the necessary authority to grant lands; and the confirmation of General Haldimand is one year after a British governor could rightfully interfere in the disposal of public lands within the limits of the United States.

We have decided against their claim.

A third claim of this description is that of Elijah Brush, trustee for Alexander McKee the younger. (Vide document H.)

The claimant produced a writing, under the hand and seal at arms of Henry Hamilton, lieutenant governor of the province of Quebec, requiring such as had pretensions to the lot of ground in question, to produce their titles; otherwise, that Mr. Elliott, the then occupant, should hold possession thereof, until further orders, conveying, at most, only an estate at will. This will was determined by the relinquishment of his Britannic majesty of all the claims to the Government, propriety, and territorial rights of the United States, to the people thereof.

Elliott, and those who claimed under him, have, since that period, occupied said lot as tenants at sufferance, not as actual trespassers.

If the treaty of amity, commerce, and navigation with Great Britain contributed to strengthen this claim, and others in like situation, it can only be said to have re-vested in the occupant an estate at will; for the treaty says that British subjects holding lands in the territories of the United States, shall continue to hold them, according to the nature and tenure of their respective estates and titles therein. This estate, then, is liable to be divested the instant the Government of the United States will determine that the claimant shall hold no longer. This pretended grant is, moreover, dated in 1785, at which period, we imagine, the British Government, notwithstanding their retention of the western posts, had not authority to dispose of lands in the United States.

4th. The document marked I will show you the nature of the titles of many who claim to hold lots situate on the water side, in the town of Detroit, all of which we have rejected; it not appearing that Major De Peyster had authority to make such grants.

5th. On the 1st of September, 1783, Colonel De Peyster granted permission to one Peter Cummings to build on a lot of ground, now claimed by Messrs. Meldrum and Park, by a writing, executed by the commandant of this post on that occasion, for a copy of which see the document marked K. This claim has also been rejected, as not founded upon a legal grant issued by either of the Governments named in the acts of Congress on the subject of claims. Nor has the possession which Cummings, his assignee, and the claimants have had, vested a right by legal prescription.

On the back of the original permit of Colonel De Peyster is endorsed a writing, whereby Cummings "assigns all his right and title to the house and lot within mentioned" to John Laughton. In the deed executed by Laughton to the claimants, is contained a clause of general warranty, with an exception as to the acts of the Crown of Great Britain, or of any of the officers of that Government; clearly evincing that he was sensible of the weakness of his title.

6th. A claim of Robert Navarre, pretended to be founded on a grant issued by authority of the British Government, has also, upon examination, been rejected. (Vide document, marked L.)

The claimants have offered no evidence to prove that Major Basset was legally empowered to make grants of lands.

7th. A claim of Pierre Descontes del Labadi. The voucher principally relied on for an affirmation of this claim is the certificate of Henry Hamilton, lieutenant governor and superintendent, which, admitting that he was fully authorized to execute grants of land, conveys, at most, only an estate at will, determined or determinable as in the first and fourth species of this division. (For the certificate of Hamilton, vide document M.)

8th. Claims to lots of ground on the island of Michilimackinack, founded on grants issued by Patrick Sinclair, lieutenant governor and commandant of that post in 1780, '81, and '82; by Captain Daniel Robertson, commandant in 1786; and by Captain William Doyle, commandant in 1792, intending to convey only estates at will. (See the document marked N.) They are all executed in the same form, and on the same limitations and conditions. There are about fifty claims of this nature.

An act of the Parliament of the province of Upper Canada, passed in the year 1797, clearly demonstrates the usages and conduct of the British Government on the subject of lands. This act is entitled "An act for securing the titles to lands in this province," and the preamble of which states, "Whereas many persons are possessed of lands, under land-board certificates, and otherwise, by authority of his majesty's Government, and now hold or claim to hold the same, either as the original nominees, or as the heirs, devisees, or assignees, of the original nominees thereof; of which lands no grants have as yet issued under the great seal of this province, whereby the legal estate and interest thereof is still vested in his majesty: for the better securing of such persons in the ownership and possession of such lands, Be it enacted, &c." Now, although that Government has since, through motives of humanity, expediency, or policy, confirmed the original purchases and claims of almost all descriptions, however irregular or illegal, yet it evidently appears that nothing less than the solemn act of the King, or the provincial Government authorized by him, could dispose of the lands of the Crown.

VI. Indian grants, generally for a few hundred acres, though there are several for five, ten, fifteen, thirty, and fifty thousand acres, and some for even one hundred thousand acres.

To justify our decisions against these claims generally, we beg leave to detail to you those facts which appeared to us of the most material consequence in the investigation. A proclamation of the King of Great Britain was issued on the 7th of October, 1763, by which power was granted to the governor of the province of Quebec, of which this country formed a part until 1783, to dispose of lands to persons applying therefor, upon such terms, quit-rents, services, and acknowledgments, as were then settled in the other colonies, and under such other conditions as the King, with the advice of his privy council, might direct. This applies exclusively to lands, the native right to which the Government had already acquired.

A subsequent paragraph of the same proclamation, in order to prevent irregular purchases from the Indians, enjoins and requires "that no private person do presume to make any purchase from the said Indians of any lands reserved to the said Indians, within those parts of our colonies where we have thought proper to allow settlements. But if, at any time, any of the said Indians should be inclined to dispose of the said lands, the same shall be purchased only for us, in our name, at some public meeting of the said Indians, to be held for that purpose, by the governor or commander-in-chief of our colonies, respectively, in which they shall lie," &c. Thus we find an early and a very express prohibition against these purchases by private persons; and the laws and usages of the British Government, at every intervening period, from the time of the repeal of so much of the before recited proclamation as relates to the province of Quebec, in 1774, down to the day of the date of the definitive treaty of peace in 1783, have interdicted and thrown an equal discontinuance on these illicit transactions.

A considerable number of these grants are executed since the year 1783, although the treaties with the several nations of Indians, as well as the laws and ordinances of Congress, so expressly declare their unlawfulness.

VII. Claims founded on actual settlements and improvements, without other pretended title. Of this and the last mentioned description, there are about four hundred. The settlements on Rivers Raisin, Ecorces, Rouge, and on the borders of Lake St. Clair, are from ten to twenty years old.

We will not waste our time, nor yours, which is still more precious, by attempting to prove what, indeed, is almost self-evident, that claimants of this description have every thing to hope from the humane benevolence of the Government, but nothing to demand from its justice. Our reasoning on the third division of this subject, against prescriptive rights, applies, with all the force they may possess, to defeat and invalidate the pretensions of those who claim, by virtue of possession, for a length of time and actual settlement and improvement.

Having briefly stated our opinions of the several descriptions of claims which have come under our examination, we beg your attention to a few additional remarks, which we conceive it our duty to make. Except Captain Byrd, who claims, under the pretended grant of General Haldimand, and a few others, who claim by virtue of grants issued by lieutenant governor Hamilton, none of the holders of lots, in the late town of Detroit, could deduce an original title from any one of the Governments under which this country has successively been; yet these persons appear to entertain no doubts that the adjudication will be ultimately in their favor. Although, acting as commissioners, we have thought it our duty to reject them, as well as the claims founded on the grants of Celoron, De Bellestre, and other French officers, who have at various times commanded this post, yet we should certainly feel a very lively pleasure in the accomplishment of these expectations.

There have been a number of claims filed with the register for lands, within the acknowledged Indian boundaries. Such are the settlements on the River St. Clair, part of Lake St. Clair, River Huron of said lake, and on the south side of River Raisin, and settlements more than six miles from the main river or strait. They are all unfounded on Government title, and most generally the Indian conveyance or the settlement is of not more than five, ten, fifteen, and twenty years' standing.

A paper has been filed with the register, without official stamp, though alleged to be correct and authentic, purporting to be a schedule of all the grants issued by the governor and the intendant of New France and Louisiana.

They are fifty-six in number, located on both sides of the Strait, or River Detroit, only thirty-three of which have been confirmed by the French King. On a comparison of this schedule with the patents deposited in the land office, we find so exact a coincidence, as to imagine it to be altogether relied upon as a valuable body of presumptive evidence of the quantity of land granted by that Government in this part of their then dominions. By it is also negatively proven the futility of the pretensions of the people of the late corporation of Detroit, the trustees of which always contended that there had been an old French grant for the town, and many acres of the adjacent commons, which was either lost, mislaid, or carried away by the British agents; they have repeatedly, without success, endeavored to obtain a copy thereof, from the archives at Quebec, referring to this schedule to prove the validity of their claims. Colonel McDougal, in whose possession it has been, never, until the present fall, suffered it to be examined, when it was found to contain no memorandum of any such charter or patent.

After the repeated delays for the indulgence of the claimants of this district, their omissions and negligences will perhaps appear to you inexcusable. In twenty instances, where the pretended title papers have been registered, they have been unaccompanied by any notices, and fifty writings have been filed as notices, so substantially defective that we have declined an examination of them.

We state, for your information, that on the list of claimants will be found the names of British subjects, who have purchased from American citizens since the day of the exchange of the ratification of the treaty of amity, commerce, and navigation, between the United States and Great Britain, and many who claim by virtue of actual settlements and improvements by themselves or their tenants without other pretended title. How far it will be good policy to extend equal liberality to them, and our own citizens, will, we presume, be a subject for the consideration of Congress. Will not a general affirmation of the claims of a British subject, who has lately purchased, and whose land was liable to escheat, as not having the capacity of taking and holding lands in the United States, debar and preclude the Government from ever after availing itself of the profits of such escheat? At this time the commissioners have not the authority, officially, to make any inquiries of that nature; certain inquiries must, in all such cases, be taken in order to vest the lands escheated in the Government, and to put it into possession; for until an inquest of office, called an office of intituling, be found, the alien may hold the lands; and before us, there is no discrimination between a citizen and an alien.

There are many interfering, contending claims, and much difficulty will be experienced in ascertaining boundaries. There has hitherto been no general survey of the country; surveys have indeed been made, but they are partial, irregular, and perhaps, in many instances, inaccurate. In the event of a confirmation, a very minute inquiry must necessarily precede the issuing of a patent, in order justly to decide the conflicting claims of private persons; otherwise, the consequences will be endless litigation, and almost numberless law-suits.

We have the honor to be,

Very respectfully, sir,

Your obedient servants,

G. HOFFMAN,

FREDERICK BATES.

The Hon. ALBERT GALLATIN, Esq.,

Secretary of the Treasury of the U. States.

A.

Antoine de Lamothe Cadillac, Esquire, Lord of Bouquet Montdesert, and commandant for the King at Detroit, Pontchartrain.

His majesty, by his despatches of the 14th, 17th, and 19th of June, 1705 and 1706, having given us power to concede the lands of Detroit, in the manner which we shall judge good and convenient; we, by virtue of the said power from his majesty, have given, granted, and conceded, to François Fafard Delorme, interpreter for the King in this place, his heirs and assigns, an extent of land, of two arpens in front by twenty in depth, joining on one side our manor, and on the other, François Bosseron, and on the south of the Grand river; which two arpens in front shall be drawn and alienated in the depth, by the course north northwest; and in case any part short of two arpens was found in the alienation, the same quantity shall be furnished to him in another place not yet conceded, without any expense; which said two arpens in front, by twenty in depth, the said François Fafard, his heirs and assigns, shall hold and enjoy forever, with the privilege of fishing, hunting, and trading; hares, rabbits, partridges, and pheasants excepted. Said François Fafard, his heirs and assigns, shall be bound to pay us, our heirs and assigns, in our castle and principal manor, each year, on the 20th of March, for the said habitation, the sum of five livres quit-rent and rent, and over and above for other rights, whereof we have divested ourselves, the sum of ten livres, in peltries, good and merchantable; and when a current money shall be established in this country, the said François Fafard shall pay the said rent in said money forever. He shall likewise be obliged to begin to clear and improve the said concession within three months from the date of these presents; in default whereof, we shall concede his habitation to whom it shall appertain. He, his heirs and assigns, shall be moreover obliged to comply with the following charges, clauses, and conditions, to wit: to come and carry, plant or help to plant, a long May-pole before the door of our principal manor, on the first day of May, in every year, and if he fails, he shall pay us three livres in money, or good peltries; he shall likewise be obliged to come and grind his grains in the mills which we have, or shall have hereafter, in paying for the right of grinding of whatever kind the grains may be, eight pounds weight by the bushel; and in case he shall sell his habitation, in the whole or in part, he shall be obliged to inform us of it, and we reserve to ourselves the preference for the price and sum which may be offered to him, and on the same conditions lawful and permitted; he shall not sell, cede, or transfer it, by mortgage, but with our consent, and he be subject to the public charges and servitudes, as also to the fees for right of alienation. Said François Fafard shall not be permitted, during ten years, to work, or cause any person to work, directly or indirectly, at the profession and trade of a blacksmith, locksmith, armorer, or brewer, without a permit under our hand; reserving, besides, the timber which may be wanted for the fortifications, and for the construction of boats or other vessels. Said François Fafard may send down to Montreal, or other places of the lower colony, all the articles he pleases, in as large a quantity as he chooses, and to bring from thence merchandizes, and other effects, in as large quantity as he pleases; on the condition that he shall sell his said effects and merchandizes, by himself only, or by other inhabitants of this place, but not by engagees, or clerks, or foreigners, or strangers, not established residents in this place, with their family, on pain of confiscation and loss of said effects or merchandizes; and in case that the said François Fafard shall sell, cede, or transfer, his habitation, in the whole, to a foreigner, or another not established in this place, the possessor or purchaser of said habitation, in any manner whatever he may be or become such, shall be liable to the same quit-rent and rent, as the said François Fafard; and if the said François Fafard sells, cedes, or transfers, part of his habitation to a foreigner, the purchaser, in whatever manner he be or become such, shall be obliged to pay us, our heirs and assigns, forever, in proportion of the said rent and quit-rent, and besides over and above for the rights whereof we have divested ourselves, the sum of ten livres for each year, on the 20th day of March. Said François Fafard shall not be permitted to sell or trade brandy to Indians, on pain of confiscation and loss of his habitation, and of the brandy found thereon, or effects received for the same; and if the said purchaser, in the whole or in part, is an inhabitant, and pays the sum of ten livres for the rights whereof we have divested ourselves, he shall pay us only the quit-rent and rents of his acquisition, and not the sum of ten livres, over and above; and if the habitation of the said François Fafard passes into other hands, in whatever manner it may be, and that he be or become proprietor of another piece of ground, house, or habitation, the said François Fafard shall pay us, our heirs and assigns, forever, the sum of ten livres, for the rights whereof we have divested ourselves, besides the quit-rent and rent of the habitation, piece of ground, or house; and in case the said François Fafard remains without possession of any land, house, or habitation, he shall be divested of all the privileges to him granted by this present concession. In consideration thereof, and generally of all the clauses, charges, and conditions aforesaid, towards us, our heirs and assigns, the said François Fafard, his heirs and assigns, shall hold and enjoy the said concession, shall sell and trade, as well with the French as with the Indians, in conforming himself to the regulations, and to the orders of his majesty.

LOUET.

Continuation granted. Celoron, knight of the military order of St. Louis, commandant at Detroit, Erie.

Upon the demand made to us by Claude Gouin, an inhabitant at Detroit, to grant him a continuation of forty arpens in depth, by two and a half in width, which he occupies by virtue of the present title, we, by virtue of the power to us given by the governor and intendant, have given, and by these presents do give, concede, and grant, to said Gouin, his heirs and assigns, the said continuation of two and a half arpens in width, by forty in depth, by reason of which he shall enjoy sixty arpens in depth, by two and a half in width, on the condition that, besides the rents mentioned in this deed, he shall pay yearly to the King's profit, the first year of which shall be due on the 11th of November, 1751, the sum of five livres to the receiver of the King's domain.

Given at Detroit 28th February, 1751.

CELORON.

NAVAREE, Deputy of the Intendant.

B and C.

Charles Marquis de Beauharnois, commander of the military order of St. Louis, governor and lieutenant general for the King, in New France and Louisiana; Gilles Hocquart, knight, member of the King's council, intendant of justice, police, and finances, in New France and Louisiana.

Upon the representation, made by the inhabitants of Fort Pontchartrain, of the strait of Lake Erie, to Messrs. de Boishebert, captain of a company detached from the navy, formerly commandant at said Fort Pontchartrain, and Pean, knight of the military order of St. Louis, mayor of the city and Government of Quebec, commanding at the said fort, and whereof they have reported to us, containing that hitherto they had not dared to undertake any clearings, and establish farms, because they had no title which could secure to them the property thereof; that if it should please us to grant titles they would not only be able to work without running any risks of being disturbed, but that considerable advantages would result from their labor, in procuring thereby provisions in abundance, which would serve to procure an easy subsistence, as well to the garrison as to the inhabitants and travellers; which being by us taken into consideration, and also the letters patent of his majesty, given at Paris in April, 1716, registered in the superior council the first December following the decree of the King's council of the 19th May, 1722, we, in the name of his majesty, have given, granted, and conceded, and do give, grant, and concede, on condition of quit-rent and rent, to Jean Casse St. Aubin, senior, an inhabitant at the said Fort Pontchartrain, for himself, his heirs and assigns, a concession of land, situate on the strait of the Lake Erie, containing four arpens in front, by forty in depth, joining on one side, towards west southwest, the farm before conceded to Charles Chene, bounded by a line running north northwest, and on the other side towards east northeast, unconceded lands, in front by the strait of Lake Erie, and in rear by a line north northeast and south southwest joining also unconceded lands, to hold, use, and dispose of by the said St. Aubin senior, his heirs and assigns on the charges, clauses, and conditions following, viz: That the said St. Aubin, senior, his heirs and assigns, shall be obliged to carry their grains to be ground at the common mill, when one is established, on pain of confiscation of the said grains, and arbitrary fine; to inhabit the said concession, or cause it to be inhabited, within one year from this day at furthest; to enclose the improvements of the neighbors as fast as wanted; to till the said land, and suffer thereon the roads which shall be thought necessary for the public utility; to make line fences, as it shall be regulated; and to pay, each year, to the receiver of the King's domain in this country, or to the clerk of said receiver, who shall reside at Detroit, one sol quit-rent for each arpent in front, and twenty sols rent for each twenty arpens in superficies, making, for the said four acres in front, by forty in depth, eight livres rent, and four sols quit-rent; and besides, one bushel of wheat for the said four arpens in front, the whole payable each year on the day and feast of St. Martin, the first year of which shall become due on the eleventh of November, 1735, and to continue from year to year. The said quit-rent bearing profit of fees for right of alienation, default, and fines, with all other royal and seigneurial rights, when the case may be agreeable to the custom of the vicinity and precinct of Paris. It shall, however, be lawful for the said St. Aubin, senior, to pay the said eight livres rent, and four sols rent, in peltries, at the Detroit price, until a current money is established: reserving, in the King's name, on the said plantation, all the timber which his majesty may want for the construction of buildings and forts which may hereafter be established; as also the property in mines and minerals, if any be found, within the extent of the said concession. And the said St. Aubin, senior, his heirs and assigns, shall be obliged to cause the said concession to be forthwith alienated, measured, and bounded, in all its width and depth, at his expense, and to execute all the clauses inserted in this present title, and to take a brevet of confirmation from his majesty, within two years, on pain of nullity of these presents.

Done and given at Montreal the 15th of July, 1734.

Brevet of confirmation of the above grant.

Extract from the register of the Superior Council of Quebec.

From the brevet of ratification of the concessions made at Detroit by Messrs. the Marquis de Beauharnois, governor and lieutenant general for the King in New France, and Hocquart, intendant in the said countries, has been extracted what follows:

This day, 23d of February, 1735, the King, being at Marly, being willing to confirm and to ratify a concession made by the Marquis de Beauharnois, governor and lieutenant general for his majesty, and Hocquart intendant in New France, the 15th of July, on condition of quit-rent and rent, to the named St. Aubin, senior, an inhabitant at Fort Pontchartrain, of a piece of land of four arpens in front by forty in depth, situate on the strait of Lake Erie, joining on one side the land of the named Chene, and on the other side, towards east northeast, unconceded lands, in front the strait of Lake Erie, and in rear a line east northeast, and west southwest unconceded lands; his majesty has ratified and confirmed the said concession, being willing that the said St. Aubin, senior, his heirs and assigns, hold and use the said farm, to him conceded, on the charges, clauses, and conditions following, to wit: That he shall be obliged to carry his grains to be ground at the common mill, when one is established, on pain of confiscation of the said grains, and arbitrary fine; to inhabit the said concession, or cause it to be inhabited, within one year; to enclose the improvements of the neighbors as fast as wanted; to till the said land, and to cause the same to be forthwith alienated, measured, and bounded at his own expense, if it is not already done; to suffer the roads which shall be thought necessary for the public utility; to make line fences, as it shall be regulated; and to pay each year to the receiver of his majesty in Canada, or to the clerk of the said receiver, who shall reside at Detroit, one sol quit-rent for each arpent in front, and twenty sols rent for each twenty arpens in superficies, and, besides, half a bushel of wheat for two arpens in front, the whole payable each year on the day and feast of St. Martin, the first year of which shall become due on the 11th of November, 1735: the said quit-rent bearing profit of fees for right of alienation, default, and fines, with all other royal and seigneurial rights, when the case may be agreeably to the custom of the precinct and vicinity of Paris. It shall, however, be lawful for him to pay the said quit-rent and rent in peltries at the Detroit price, until a current money is established; reserving on the said farm, above conceded, all the timber which his majesty may want for the construction of buildings and forts which may hereafter be established; as also the property in the mines and minerals, if any be found, within the extent of the said concession. And as a testimony of his will, his majesty has ordered me to expedite the present brevet, which shall be registered in the superior council of Quebec, to have thereto such recourse as it shall appear, and which he has signed with his own hand, to be countersigned by me, his secretary of state, and of his commands and finances. Signed Louis, and underneath PHILIPPEAUX.

Registered in the register of the superior council of New France, having heard the attorney general of his majesty, agreeably to the decree of this day, by us, counsellor, secretary of the King, chief clerk of the council; undersigned at Quebec, the 26th September, 1785.

The Marquis De LaJonquiere, knight of the royal military order of St. Louis, commodore of his majesty's naval armies, governor and lieutenant general for the King in all New France and countries of Louisiana; Francis Bigot, member of the King's council, intendant of justice, police, finances, and of the navy in said countries.

Upon the demands made to us by Antoine Robert, an inhabitant on the strait of Lake Erie, to grant and concede him a piece of land of three arpens in front by forty in depth, situate on the said Lake Erie, joining on one side towards west southwest, the land of the named Champagne, bounded by a line running north northwest, and south southeast, on the other side towards east northeast, the land of M. Navarre; in front the strait of Lake Erie, and in rear a line, east northeast, and west southwest; joining, also, unconceded lands; we, by virtue of the powers to us jointly given by his majesty, have given, granted, and conceded, do give, grant, and concede, on condition of quit-rent and rent, from this day, forever, to the said Antoine Robert, his heirs and assigns, a concession of a piece of land, situate on the strait of Lake Erie, containing three arpens in front by forty in depth, bounded on the courses before designated; to enjoy and dispose of the same, by the said Antoine Robert, his heirs and assigns, on the charges, clauses, and conditions, hereafter, to wit: that the said Robert, his heirs and assigns, shall be obliged to carry his grains to be ground at the common mill, when one shall be established, on pain of confiscation of the said grains, and arbitrary penalty; to inhabit the said concession, or cause it to be inhabited, within one year from this day, at furthest; to enclose the improvements of the neighbors as fast as wanted; to till the land, and suffer thereon the roads which will be thought necessary for the public utility; to make line fences, as it shall be regulated; and to pay each year to the receiver of the King's domain in this country, or to the clerk of the said receiver, who shall reside at Detroit, one sol quit-rent for each arpent in front, and twenty sols rent for each twenty arpens in superficies; making, for the said three arpens in front by forty in depth, three sols quit-rent, and six livres rent, and, besides, three-fourths of a bushel of wheat for the said three arpens in front; the whole payable each year on the day and feast of St. Martin; the said quit-rent bearing profit of fees, for right of alienation, seisin, and fines, with all other rights, royal and seigneurial, when the case may be, agreeably to the custom of the precinct and vicinity of Paris. It shall, however, be lawful for the said Antoine Robert to pay the said six livres rent, and three sols quit-rent, in peltries at the Detroit price; until a current money is established; reserving in the King's name, on the said habitation, all the timber which his majesty may want for the construction of buildings and forts, which may hereafter be established; as also, the property in the mines and minerals, if any be found, within the extent of said concession. And the said Robert, his heirs, and assigns, shall be obliged to cause the said concession to be forthwith marked out, measured, and bounded, in all its width and depth, and to execute all the clauses inserted in this present title, and to take a brevet of confirmation from his majesty, within two years, on pain of nullity of these presents.

Done and given at Quebec, the first April, one thousand seven hundred and fifty.

By my Lords,
ST. SAUVEUR.

BIGOT.

By my Lords,
DESCHESNEAUX.

To Messrs. De Celoron, knight of the royal and military order of St. Louis, commander for the King at Fort Detroit; Landrieve, doing the duty of commissary and deputy intendant of New France, in the said place:

The inhabitants of Detroit humbly represent to you, gentlemen, that the mill, situated on the farm of Claude Campeau, is of an indispensable necessity and convenience for the public. They have heard that the named Cabacrier, an inhabitant of Detroit, was seeking the means to have it demolished, under the pretext that the corner of his meadow was inundated by the said mill. It is easily seen that it is by a spirit of incompatibility and contradiction towards his neighbors; for, in summer, his meadow is dry, and, in winter, the water has its natural course, the said mill not going on account of the ice.

This mill was constructed by the consent of Monsieur de Boishebert, formerly commandant in this fort, as a thing useful to the public, and a long time before the concession of the land of the said Cabacrier. If this mill had given any prejudice to the meadow which is alongside of his land, the first proprietors would not have failed to make representations on that subject: the said mill has always subsisted till now without any interruption, it being, besides, erected on the land of its proprietor.

This being considered, may it please you, gentlemen, taking into view the public advantage and convenience, to order that the said mill shall continue as before; it being, besides, the only one handy to this fort, and which goes the greatest part of the year; to forbid said Cabacrier, and all others, to attempt any deprecation on the said mill, and to trouble the owner, on pain of damages, costs, and interests, and you shall do justice.

On the 21st day of February, A. D. 1805, the claim of Jean Baptiste Barrois was taken up, and the notice by him filed with the register of the land office being read in the words following, to wit:

The children and heirs of François Barrois, jun. deceased, formerly of Detroit, and since of Vincennes, notify the register of the land office at Detroit that they claim, as such heirs, a tract of land below Detroit aforesaid, containing about four acres wide, and forty arpens in depth, bounded on one side by lands of Mr. Navarre, and on the other side by lands formerly of Monsieur Dequindre; which said tract of land was granted and ceded by the French commandant, then at Detroit, to the said François Barrois, by deed or concession, dated the 1st April, 1760, to hold the same to him whenever the Pattawatamie Indians should leave or abandon the village they then lived on, and which was then situate on the said lands so granted, and which they have long since done. The land has never been surveyed. Here-with he delivers for registry the original grant made of the said land to the said François Barrois, on behalf of himself and the other heirs.

The evidence adduced by the claimant in support thereof was also read and considered, in the words and figures following, viz:

TRANSLATION.

We, commandant for the King at Detroit, have conceded to François Barrois, jun., a piece of land of three arpens wide, or four arpens if they be found, by forty in depth; to begin from the boundary of the farm conceded to Navarre, near the Pattawatamies' village, in going towards the land of Mr. Dequindre; to have and to hold unto the said Barrois, the said piece of land, after the Pattawatamies have changed or abandoned their village, without which condition this present concession shall be void, not understanding to dispossess the said Indians in any manner. And the said Barrois shall enjoy the said land on the aforesaid conditions, and such servitudes as shall be regulated by persons in power to do it. In testimony whereof, we have expedited him the present title, which will be in lieu of provisory deed.

ON MONDAY, the 2d day of Dec. A. D. 1805.

The board met pursuant to adjournment, and proceeded to the examination of the claims of the heirs and legal representatives of the late William McComb, deceased.

Whereupon, the notice filed by the said heirs with the register of the land office being read, of which the following is an extract, viz:

"John William, and David McComb claim an island situate in the strait about three miles above Detroit, commonly called Hog island, containing, by Mr. Boyd, who surveyed it in 1771, seven hundred and four acres, by purchase from the Ottawa and Chippewa nations of Indians, who, in council, under the direction of his Britannic majesty to the honorable Thomas Gage, commander-in-chief of all his said majesty's forces in North America, for that purpose, did convey the same to Lieutenant George McDougall on the 5th day of June, 1769, whose heirs sold the same to Wm. McComb on the 11th of November, 1793."

The following instrument of writing, together with the deeds, whereof mention is hereinafter made, presented to the register, and recorded as evidence of the claim aforesaid, were also read and considered by the commissioners, viz:

By an order of his majesty and council, dated at St. James's, May 4th, 1768, transmitted to the honorable

Thomas Gage, major general and commander-in-chief of all his majesty's forces in North America, &c., &c., ordering that he shall put Lieutenant George McDougall, late of the 60th regiment, in possession of Hog island, situated and lying in Detroit river, three miles above the fort of Detroit, provided that can be done without umbrage to the Indians, and upon consideration that the improvements projected by the petitioner be directed to the more easy and effectual supply of his majesty's fort and garrison maintained at Detroit. The commander-in-chief having transmitted the same to George Turnbull, esq., captain in the 60th regiment, commanding at Detroit, that he shall see the same executed by being present when the said George McDougall shall receive a deed from the Indians for the said island, &c.

By virtue of the above order, this indenture, made by and between Lieutenant George McDougall, late of the 60th regiment, of the one part, and Oketchewandug, Couttawin, Ottawachin, chiefs of the Ottawa and Chippewa nations of Indians, in the other part, do for ourselves, and by the consent of the whole of the said nations of Indians, witnesseth, that the said chiefs, for and in consideration of five barrels of rum, three rolls of tobacco, three pounds of vermilion, and a belt of wampum, and three barrels of rum, and three pounds of paint, when possession was taken, valued one hundred and ninety-four pounds ten shillings, current money of the province of New York, to them in hand paid, the receipt whereof the said Indian chiefs do hereby acknowledge, have granted, bargained, sold, alienated, and confirmed, and by these presents do hereby grant, bargain, sell, alien, and confirm, unto the said George McDougall, his heirs and assigns, forever, the aforesaid island, that he may settle, cultivate, or otherwise employ to his &c. majesty's advantage, as he shall think proper, the aforesaid island in Detroit river, about three miles above the fort, together with all the houses, out-houses, and appurtenances whatsoever on the said island, messuage, and tenement, and premises belonging, or in any ways appertaining; and also the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents and services of the said premises, and every part thereof, and all the estate, right, title, claim, and demands whatsoever, of them, the said Indians, of, in, and to the said messuage, tenement, and premises, and every part thereof. To have and to hold the said messuage or tenement, and all and singular the said premises above mentioned, and every part and parcel thereof, with the appurtenances, unto the said George McDougall, his heirs and assigns, forever. And we, the above mentioned chiefs, do hereby engage ourselves, our heirs, our nations, executors, administrators, and assigns, forever, to warrant and defend the property of the said island unto the said George McDougall, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, forever against us or any person whatever, claiming any right or title thereto.

A deed of feoffment, executed by John Robert McDougall, conveying a moiety of said island in fee simple, to William McComb, containing a clause of warranty against himself, his heirs and assigns, dated the 11th day of November, 1793, with a memorandum of livery of seisin endorsed on the back of said deed.

Also a deed of gift from George McDougall to John Robert McDougall, for a moiety of said island, with the like clause of warranty therein, and the like memorandum of livery of seisin endorsed thereon, dated the 6th day of January, 1794.

There is no memorandum made of the erasure, nor of another interlineation which is in the instrument.

Also a deed of feoffment executed by John Robert McDougall, conveying and transferring the other moiety of said island to the said William McComb, in fee simple, containing a clause of warranty against the feoffer, his heirs and assigns, with a memorandum of livery of seisin endorsed thereon, dated the 7th day of April, 1794.

The claimants then brought forward George Meldrum to be examined as a witness with regard to Hog island, who, being sworn, deposed and said, that the late Lieutenant McDougall built on the island a dwelling-house, and sundry out-houses, about the year 1770 or 1771. About the same time one Cassety, as a tenant of the said McDougall, went on a part of these lands, who, in the course of some few of the following years, cultivated about thirty acres, and, as well as this deponent recollects, built a small house; said Cassety was succeeded by one Ridley, and the said island has been constantly occupied by successive tenants of the said McDougall and McComb families to the present day.

At the request of the claimants, the said claims, generally, were continued for further investigation.

On Tuesday, the 3d day of December, A. D. 1805, the board met pursuant to adjournment.

The fourth claim of the heirs and legal representatives of the late William McComb, deceased, being again under consideration,

John Laughton was brought forward as a witness, who being sworn and examined, deposed and said, with respect to Hog island, that, in the year 1776, he, the deponent, leased the said island of one Cassety, who at that time held it under the lease of the late Lieutenant McDougall. When in occupation of the said island, he, the said deponent, was ousted of his possession by the orders of Colonel De Peyster, then the commanding officer at Detroit, who put thereon some prisoners brought to his garrison by the Indians. The late William McComb, as the guardian of the then infant sons of the said McDougall, petitioned General Haldiman for redress, who ordered the said McComb to be again put into the possession thereof. The deponent also recollects that Colonel De Peyster, on restoring the said island, left with the said McComb a barn, erected at the expense of Government, and a scow, as a compensation for the disseisin. This property, the deponent imagines, must have been worth about twelve or fourteen hundred pounds. When the deponent went first to this island, there were two farms thereon, each of which was improved with a dwelling-house, and, inclusively, had about eighty acres of cultivated land, and two large barns.

John Robert McDougall being sworn, deposed and said, with respect to Hog island, that some short time after Colonel De Peyster had taken forcible possession of this island, that officer was desirous of purchasing it for the use of the Government, and made an offer to this deponent and his mother of six hundred guineas therefor; these terms were, however, rejected. The said De Peyster then paid to Alexander McComb a quantity of corn, as the rent of said island, for which said McComb, as guardian of the infant children of this said deponent's late father, afterwards accounted. Some few years before the evacuation of this garrison by the British troops, Major Claus, commanding Detroit, put a number of cattle on the said island to pasture, for which damages were awarded to the deponent in the court of common pleas of the upper province of Canada.

The order of the King of Great Britain, by the advice of his privy council, referred to in the instrument of writing executed by the Indians therein named, was this day produced by the claimants as evidence of their title to the said island, and is in the words following, viz:

Whereas there was this day read at the board a report for the right honorable the lords of the committee of council for plantation affairs, dated the 3d of this instant, in the words following, viz:

Your majesty having been pleased by your order in council of the 13th of December, 1767, to refer unto this committee the humble petition of Lieutenant George McDougall, of the royal American regiment, on half pay, praying, for the reasons therein contained, that your majesty will be graciously pleased to grant to him a certain small island, three miles above Detroit, called Hog island. The lords of the committee, in obedience to your majesty's said order of reference, did, on the 3d of March last, take the said petition into their consideration, and thought proper to refer the same to the lords commissioners for trade and plantations, who have thereupon reported to this committee: "That the above mentioned island, lying within that territory, which, by your majesty's proclamation of the 7th of October, 1763, is reserved and set aside as hunting grounds for the several tribes of Indians, it follows that no absolute grant of the same can be made, consistently with the terms and reservations of the said proclamation; and, therefore, it will not be advisable for your majesty to comply with the prayer of the petition, as to this particular, in its full extent; but, as the merits of the petitioner in clearing part of the said island, building a house, and making a settlement thereon, in consequence of permission obtained from the commanding officer at Detroit, in 1761, appear to be true; and, as he has sustained considerable damage by being dispossessed of these improvements by the savages in the subsequent war; more especially, as it is evident that considerable savings may be, and actually have been, made in the articles of supply and provision for the garrison at Detroit, by stocking and cultivating lands in the neighborhood thereof, the said lords commissioners are of opinion that advantages may be derived to the public service from the settlement and improvements of this island; and, as the petitioner, as well from his intercourse and acquaintance with the Indians, as by his interest and connexions in those parts, (he being married, and having a wife and family now residing at Detroit,) doth appear both able and willing to carry his proposals into execution; and as it is represented that the said island, though within the limits of the Indian territory, yet has always been considered as an appendage to the fort, the said lords commissioners are of opinion that every encouragement should be given to him in the settlement of the said island, as far as the tenor of the proclamation above recited will allow; and this, they think, can best be done by referring the matter to the commander-in-chief in America, recommending to him to allow the petitioner a temporary occupation of the said island, so long as your majesty shall think fit to continue an establishment at Detroit; provided this can be done without umbrage to the Indians, and upon consideration that the improvements projected by the petitioner will be directed to the more easy and effectual supply of your majesty's fort and garrison maintained at Detroit."

"The lords of the committee, upon consideration thereof, do humbly report to your majesty that they agree in opinion with the lords commissioners for trade and plantations, and, thereupon, humbly propose that your majesty will be graciously pleased to direct the commander-in-chief of your majesty's forces in America, for the time being, to allow the petitioner a temporary occupation of the said island, so long as your majesty shall think fit to continue an establishment at Detroit; provided this can be done without umbrage to the Indians, and upon consideration that the improvements projected by the petitioner will be directed to the more easy and effectual supply of your majesty's fort and garrison maintained at Detroit."

His majesty, taking the said report into consideration, was pleased with the advice of his privy-council, to approve thereof, and to order, as it is hereby ordered, that the commander-in-chief of his majesty's forces in America, for the time being, do allow the petitioner a temporary occupation of the said island, so long as his majesty shall think fit to continue an establishment at Detroit; provided the same can be done without umbrage to the Indians, and upon consideration that the improvements projected by the petitioner be directed to the more easy and effectual supply of his majesty's fort and garrison maintained at Detroit. Whereof the commander-in-chief of his majesty's forces in America, for the time being, and all others whom it may concern, are to take notice, and govern themselves accordingly.

GEO. ALLSOPP.

A writing, purporting to be a "paragraph of General Gage's letter to Captain Turnbull, of the 29th August, 1768, relating to Hog island, given to Mr. McDougall by his majesty and council," was also exhibited as evidence of the claim aforesaid, and is as follows, to wit:

As Mr. McDougall's occupying these lands depends upon the suffrage of the Indians, who have claims thereto, it will be necessary that those Indians should be collected by the friends of Mr. McDougall, and publicly signify to you, or rather give a written acknowledgment of their consenting to the cession of those lands in favor of Mr. McDougall.

You are to contract no expense upon this account: the collecting and supporting these Indians must be the act of Mr. McDougall, or his friends. In his absence, you are only to acquaint them that you cannot admit them to take possession till you are satisfied of the Indians' intention, and acquiescence therein.

This must be a solemn act, performed in your presence, by Indians concerned in the property of the lands, to which they must sign the marks of their tribes: and you will certify the same to be done by you, and under my authority, and in your presence. Their permission must, at the same time, be had to people the island, for cultivation: for every necessary particular should be mentioned in the writing for the cession of these lands, and the whole fully and distinctly explained to the Indians, to prevent future claims or disputes. You are likewise to attend to the nature of the improvements carried on by Mr. McDougall, and see that they are such as may, when called upon, serve to the purposes intended, of an effectual and easy support of the garrison at Detroit.

Whereas Matthew Elliott has, for some time, occupied a certain lot lying near the dock yard at Detroit, by the water side; this is to signify to all whom it may concern, that if any person has pretensions to the aforesaid lot, they are to produce their titles, otherwise the said Matthew Elliott is to hold peaceable possession thereof, until further orders.

Given under my hand and seal at arms, at the castle of St. Louis.

The deed of gift of Thomas McKee to Elijah Brush, in trust for Alexander McKee the younger, was produced by the claimant, and read and considered by the commissioners.

The claimant has not produced a deed conveying the said lot of ground from Matthew Elliott to Thomas McKee.

I.

To all the inhabitants occupying lots next the water side:

GENTLEMEN: As the vacant spaces of ground lying between each of your lots and the water side, now occupied with all sorts of filth, and become a public nuisance, should be removed, if you will go to the expense of filling up the whole of them with good earth, and render it an even surface, at the same time extending your lots with fences, so as to leave only a passage for carts between them and the water edge, you shall have such spaces of ground in lieu of the expense you may be at; but if you do not choose to occupy them on these conditions, let me know, and I will give them to others, for I can no longer suffer them to remain as they now are.

"GEORGE HOFFMAN, Esq.,
Register of the Land Office at Detroit.

"SIR: Please to take notice that I do enter into your office a farm on which I now live, consisting of three arpens in front by forty in depth, bounded in front by the River Detroit, on the E. N. E. by the farm of Robert Navarre, esq., alias Robiche, and on the W. S. W. by the farm formerly the property of Mrs. widow Du May, and now the property of the heirs of the late Alexis Campeau; which farm was sold to me, for a valuable consideration, by Joseph Portier Benac, by a deed of bargain and sale, executed at Detroit the 29th January, 1781.

"Joseph Portier Benac had bought the said farm of Isidore Chene, for a valuable consideration, by deed of bargain and sale, executed at Detroit the 3d October, 1778.

"And Isidore Chene had it by a deed of gift, executed by the chiefs of the Pattawattamie nation of Indians, at Detroit, the 27th day of May, 1776; which deed of gift was executed with the permission of Henry Hamilton, then governor and superintendent. When Joseph Portier Benac purchased of Isidore Chene, he paid to the King's receiver (Thomas Williams) twenty-one pounds five shillings and nine pence, for the lots et ventes, i. e. for fines of alienation.

"When I purchased I paid the said fines to William Monforton, who was then the King's receiver.

December 31, 1804.

NOTE.—Francis Navarre claims, in his own right, only a moiety of the tract conveyed to Francis and James Navarre, by the Pattawattamies.

From notices which were filed after the date of this writing, it appears that the remaining seven tracts are claimed by seven different persons. We have rejected no writing, filed as a notice, from which we could possibly gather the nature and extent of a claim. But this is all blunder, and there are many precisely in the same form and situation, written by the same person, who, however, knew how to execute them correctly, having presented many that are perfect and complete.

P.

Know all men by these presents, that we, the chiefs and principal leaders of the Pattawattamie nation of Indians, at Detroit, for ourselves, and by and with the advice and consent of the whole of our said nation, in consideration of the good will, love, and affection, which we, and the whole of our said nation, have and bear unto Arent Schuyler De Peyster, esq., major of the King's eighth regiment, commandant of Detroit, and its dependencies, &c.; and also for divers other good causes and considerations, we, the said chiefs, and the rest of our said nation, hereunto moving, have given, granted, aliened, enfeoffed, and confirmed, and by these presents do give, grant, alien, enfeof, and confirm, unto the said Arent Schuyler De Peyster, a certain tract of land of fifty acres in front, and one hundred acres in depth, bounded on the northeast by a tract of land formerly granted to Philip Dejean; on the southwest and in the rear by unlocated lands; and in the front by the River Detroit; the whole containing five thousand acres, or arpens, more or less, with all and singular the appurtenances unto the said tract of land appertaining, or in anywise belonging, and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents and services of the said premises; and also all the estate, right, title, interest, property, claim, or demand whatever, of us, the said chiefs, or any one whatever of our said nation, of, in, and to the said message and premises, and every part and parcel thereof, with the appurtenances; to have and to hold the said message, tenement, lands, hereditaments, and premises, hereby given and granted, or mentioned, or intended to be given and granted unto the said Arent Schuyler De Peyster, his heirs and assigns, to the only proper use and behoof of the said Arent Schuyler De Peyster, his heirs and assigns, forever. And the said chiefs, for themselves, and in behalf of the whole of their nation, their heirs, executors, and administrators, do covenant, promise, and grant, to and with the said Arent Schuyler De Peyster, his heirs and assigns, by these presents, that he, the said Arent Schuyler De Peyster, his heirs and assigns, shall, and lawfully may, from henceforth and forever after, quietly and peaceably have, hold, occupy, possess, and enjoy the said message and premises hereby given and granted, or mentioned, or intended to be given and granted, with their and every their appurtenances, free, clear, and discharged, or well and sufficiently saved, kept harmless, and indemnified from and against all former and other gifts, grants, bargains, sales, estates, entails, rents, and from and against all former and other titles, troubles, charges, and incumbrances whatsoever, had, done, or suffered, or to be had, done, or suffered by them, the said chiefs, or by any one of the said nation, their heirs, executors, and administrators, or any other person or persons lawfully claiming or to claim by, from, or under them, or any or either of them; and by these presents, do make this our act and deed irrevocable under any pretence whatever, and have put the said Arent Schuyler De Peyster in full possession and seisin, by delivering a piece of the said tract of land on the premises.

In witness whereof, we, the said chiefs, for ourselves, and in behalf of our whole nation of Pattawattamies, have hereunto these presents set the marks of our different tribes at Detroit, the 28th day of July, A. D. one thousand seven hundred and eighty.

[Signed by ten Indian chiefs.]

I, the subscriber, do hereby certify that the above mentioned lands are a voluntary gift, and that the chiefs made the marks of their different tribes in my presence, at Detroit, the 28th day of July, 1780.

T. WILLIAMS,
Justice of the Peace.

DUMRIES, February 12, 1798.

I have resigned all my right and title to this Indian grant of land, in favor of my nephew, Arent Schuyler, son to Pierre Guillem De Peyster, of New York.

A. S. DE PEYSTER.

There are several Indian conveyances, which are certified to have been voluntary, by A. S. De Peyster, colonel commanding, &c.

[TRANSLATION.]

We, the chiefs, Pattawattamies, of the River Raisin, do declare to have given forever to Michel and Antoine Campeau, brothers, and children of Alexis Campeau, to each of them three arpens of land in width by all the depth situate on River Raisin, on the right hand going up, and joining the land of their sister Angelique, to hold unto the said two brothers the said lands jointly or separately. We have also thought proper to give, and do give, to Madeleine Campeau, on the left hand side of the River Raisin, in going up, a piece of land of three arpens in width by its depth, right opposite to the upper end of the rapid, nearly opposite to the land which we have given to her brothers: for such is our will, and the will of all those who compose our village.

Done at Detroit the 24th of May, 1786. Witness our marks above and below. We have also, in the same manner, given to Madeleine Campeau, the mother, a piece of land of three arpens, joining the lands of her children above named, to hold the same, &c., the same year as above.

[Signed in the original by six chiefs, in the presence of Robert Navarre and Joseph Menard.]

These serve to certify that the representatives of the first original grantors of the donation hereunto annexed, have confirmed the same to Miss Angelique Campeau, in behalf of herself, her brothers, and sisters, and their heirs and assigns forever, acknowledging, at the same time, the said title to be the first granted of the said donation; as witness our hands, at Detroit, the 12th day of June, 1797.

[Signed by four chiefs, in presence of Lieut. Col. Hamtramck, Major J. J. V. Rivardi, and Witmore Knaggs, interpreter.]

[TRANSLATION.]

DETROIT, July 28, 1780.

We, the chiefs of the Pattawattamie nation, after having deliberated on the present state of our lands, which we leave uncultivated this long time, with the advice and the general consent of the nation, have determined to give a portion thereof to our friend Chevalier Chabert, containing six arpens in front, on the River Rouge, on the left hand in going up said river, which will extend in depth to the lands of St. Cosure, brothers; joining, on one side, Batiste Cicot, and on the other side Antoine Chene; and, for the sincere friendship which we have for him, we do light for him a fire of peace and tranquillity, warranting him, from this day, forever, his heirs and assigns, the said portion of land, that he may enjoy the same, without any hindrance whatsoever. Therefore, we have made our customary marks.

[Signed in the original by eleven chiefs.]

I, the undersigned, do certify that the above chiefs have made their marks, and declared to have voluntarily given the land above mentioned.

T. WILLIAMS, J. P.

[TRANSLATION.]

I, the undersigned, do certify that, since the year 1730, since which time I have resided at Detroit, the inhabitants established in the fort have kept in order the palisades, each in proportion of his lot, the King not possessing any thing therein, that is to say, his majesty had no house, although absolute master to dispose of all things, according to his full power and royal authority.

The commandant had few soldiers, who lived by their work.

In the year 1784 to 1749, the enclosure of the fort, which was not of a large extent, having but four bastions of about twenty feet, beginning at the church and ending at the old guard-house, wanted repairs, and, in order to work with solidity, an expedient was proposed, which was agreed to by Mr. De Sabrevoir, then commandant, (for the King never gave any order.) In the plan proposed, it was said that each owner should plant one picket of oak or ash, fifteen feet long, having at the small end at least six inches diameter for each foot of ground, in front, on the street, and should keep them up by a lining of eight to ten feet long, which was executed. The King himself has submitted to the same rule, when houses and store-houses have been built for his troops; and, in the end, Mr. De Bellestre, commandant, (by order of the governor, in appearance,) got all the fortifications made anew at the King's expense. In that state things were on the arrival of his Britannic majesty's troops. There is no doubt that Mr. De Bellestre took all the pickets of private individuals, which were then planted round the fort, and made use of them for the fortifications.

The same undersigned does certify that, since the said year 1730, he has seen private individuals enjoy the liberty of having their cattle kept in the precinct, and to have thereon stables for the winter, and a park for the summer, near the fort, to put up their cows during the night. The commandant was pleased to assume the trouble of that police for the public good.

Hog island was then considered as commons, where each individual had the right (that is to say, the liberty, for the undersigned having never seen any title of concession, cannot say that the inhabitants had a right) to put in their cattle; but be it liberty, privilege, or right, he has seen the inhabitants put their cattle upon that island. Some of the inhabitants have even been obliged and compelled, by order of the commandant, to put on that island certain animals which committed waste in the grains or wild fields.

As to the precinct of the fort, which is vulgarly called domain, the French commandants made no pretensions thereto; they had only a small garden on the bank of the river, without the fort, which they enclosed at their own expense. And the private individuals had also similar ones near the fort; but, for all that, the undersigned does not pretend to say that either of them had the right of property, or that the possession should be perpetual. It is well enough known that the powers of his most Christian majesty had no other boundaries than those of his domains.

Jacques Campeau, captain of militia at Detroit, having returned to me this instrument of writing, saying that he did not want it, I declare that I abjure any other writing which might have a different sense from what is inserted in the above and other parts; and I am ready to make oath on the Holy Evangelists of the truth of the contents, having never had any other intention than to explain myself, in conformity to what is above written.

DETROIT, December 16, 1805.

SIR: The people of this district having, through the medium of a committee appointed by them, addressed the President of the United States, to recommend to the consideration of Congress an alteration of the law on the subject of land claims, the commissioners conceived it altogether likely that Congress would take up the business during their present session; and, therefore, unwilling also that the grand object of the petitioners should be impeded, merely for the want of the necessary information from those who were appointed to investigate the claims of lands in this district, and anxious that the subject should be fully and fairly before you, they formed their report of the 1st instant.

which will discover to you truly the nature and situation of every description of claim in the country, and, unless it is the intention of Congress to examine each individual claim, and to decide thereon according to its own intrinsic merit, the partial report referred to will, we believe, afford them as much useful information as the final one possibly could.

We have, since the date of our last communication, made such great progress in the examination of claims, that we are induced to think it highly probable we shall get through sooner than we then imagined. But the immensity of writing which is absolutely necessary to be performed, forbids us to hope that the final report will reach you time enough to enable Congress to act thereon during their present session. Every thing, however, will be done to complete and forward it as soon as possible.

We have been obliged to appoint an interpreter of the French language: I have become liable for a compensation for his services. It was utterly impossible for us to proceed with correctness without such a person, as the greater portion of the witnesses who are brought before us are Canadians, and speak the French language only. If this act receives your approbation, I hope you will have an appropriation made to defray the expense attending it.

Should the people of this district succeed in their wishes for the establishment of a new board of commissioners, with an extension of powers for the final adjustment of their claims, it may, perhaps, be well to authorize the commissioners to appoint an assistant clerk, in case they should find it essential for the acceleration and speedy completion of the business which may be laid before them. Additional translating will then, no doubt, be required.

We have not been able to form an estimate of the exact quantity of land claimed in this district by persons who rely principally on the humane benevolence of Congress for an affirmance of their claims. I believe, however, from a rough calculation which I have made, that it will not exceed one hundred and fifty thousand acres. The quantity for which there are legal titles, including the grants of the governor and the intendand of New France and Louisiana, for which a brevet of confirmation was never obtained; the grants of Bellestre and other French subaltern military officers, with Hog island, granted by authority of the British Government, will not comprehend more than seven thousand arpens superficial measure.

At least one hundred and fifty thousand acres are claimed by non-hereditary British subjects, who cannot, from the most liberal construction of Jay's treaty, of which it is susceptible, demand a confirmation of their claims; a part of which, however, is included in the first estimate, and consists of about forty small tracts, which are somewhat improved, and have been settled and actually cultivated, some for ten or twenty, and others for thirty years. The residue consists of large tracts of two, four, five, ten, twenty, and thirty thousand acres, not at all, or very partially improved, except a tract of thirty-three thousand acres, called the Pinery, claimed by Meldrum and Park, on different parts of which are erected a dwelling house, two saw-mills, and one grist-mill, and a few acres have been enclosed and cultivated. Two salt springs are included in the claims for two of those large tracts.

All those claims are founded on Indian grants merely, and the greater part of the lands are situated without the boundaries of the tract conceded to the United States by the Indians, who are parties to the treaty of Greenville.

There are settlements on the River Detroit, thirty, forty, and fifty years old, for which there are no legal titles, particularly those which were made on the lands granted by Bellestre, as well as some on lands granted by the Indians.

The claims for fifty and one hundred thousand acres are hardly worth mentioning; for the claimants themselves have little idea of receiving the sanction of Government for the illicit purchases from the Indians.

The claims which the people are in hopes of having confirmed are for small tracts of two, three, four, and six hundred acres, actually settled, and part of each under cultivation, with buildings and fences erected thereon. The farms in this country are all laid out in the forms of parallelograms; some are forty or eighty, and others one hundred or one hundred and twenty arpens in depth, by two, three, four, or six wide.

The greater part of the claimants would, I believe, be satisfied if they could get the usual width, with the depth of forty or sixty arpens; so that less than one hundred and fifty thousand acres would satisfy all reasonable claims.

This communication is made with the knowledge and entire concurrence of the other commissioner, Judge Bates.

I have the honor to be,
With much esteem, sir,
Your obedient servant,
GEORGE HOFFMAN.

Secretary of the Treasury, &c.

To the Chiefs of the Pottawattamies, and Chippewas, and Ottowas.

My Sons: I send you this by Nangg, who has been here to pay me a visit. It gave me great pleasure to see him; but it was little we could say to each other, because there was not any body here that could well speak your language.

I was able to learn from him, my sons, that you have been, and still are, anxious to see me. It was my design to have met you when your goods were delivered; but they were so late in coming that it is now out of my power, as our annual council is now sitting, and I cannot leave it, but I will send some persons in my place on whom you may depend.

Believe me, my sons, I wish well, as they do themselves, to all my red children; and the President of the United States will continue to love them, and do them good: but there are people that make you uneasy; they love nobody but themselves, and because some of them have prevailed on individuals amongst you to make grants of lands to them, contrary to our laws, and to all your former practice, that are not approved of, they give you no rest; but are always saying some disagreeable things or other to you. I tell you, and I tell the truth, that it is for your interest the United States do not approve those grants of land. Only consider a little; if every one of you, of yourselves, without the consent of the nation, may give away the lands that belong to you all, and, at times, when perhaps you have been made drunk on purpose, what will become of your wives and children?

Do you not see that it is to prevent your being cheated by bad men, who, if they can get your lands, do not care if you were all to perish with hunger, that the United States will not allow of their people to buy them, but at a public treaty with the nation, when you are all sober, and know that you are not wronged, nor wronging yourselves? If those private sales were countenanced, must not war be the certain consequence when you found your lands gone, and that you have got nothing of value for them? You would kill some of the people who lived upon them, who had, perhaps, no hand in cheating you; some of you would be killed in return, and all the mischiefs of war would follow.

As to the Canadians, my sons, who are living on lands which you have given to them, you need not be uneasy about them, neither need they be uneasy about the land. The United States will not take their farms from them; but they will not allow any of their people to be buying from you, in a private manner, the lands which are to support you and your families, and your children after you, by thousands of acres, and cheating you in the price at the same time.

I find it to be your wish that some person may be appointed at Detroit, to whom you may speak occasionally. Such agents can be appointed by the President only; and when he knows how much you wish for one, I do not doubt that one on whom you may depend will be appointed.

It is a great satisfaction to me, my children, that there is a peace between you and us; I am sure it is best for both that it should continue forever. On our parts, nothing will be done to weaken it. But I know there have been people amongst you stirring you to take up the hatchet on account of the French. I do not believe that you will listen to them, because you will see the consequences; and if they should succeed in misleading you, the whole burthen must fall upon yourselves, for they cannot help you. The English will not, and the Spaniards are too far off to help you, and too weak to do it if they were willing. Drive, then, those persons away; they are your worst enemies, whatever they may say. On the friendship of your American brothers, who sprung out of the same soil with yourselves, you may safely depend. This is from your friend and father.

ARTHUR ST. CLAIR.

CINCINNATI, 3d October, 1799.

I certify that I have compared the within address with the original, in the handwriting of the Governor of this Territory, commencing with "to," and ending with "father," and that it is a correct copy. Given under my hand and seal, at Detroit, in the county of Wayne, the 18th of May, 1800.

MATTHEW ERNEST, J. P. [L. s.]

No. 10.

WASHINGTON, March 12, 1806.

I return to the chairman of the Committee on the Territory of Michigan the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury, and the report of the commissioners for investigating the titles of land, with the several documents accompanying them.

I have carefully compared the information contained in these papers with that conveyed in the letters to the Secretary of the Treasury of the 4th and 17th of January. I do not find any contradiction. As the facts on which those letters are grounded were obtained from sources entirely distinct, without the least intercommunication with the gentlemen who have rendered the report, I consider the one as strongly corroborative of the other; and I presume every material circumstance is now so fully in the possession of the committee, as to preclude the possibility of any essential error, in point of fact, in the arrangement which the committee may find advisable.

From the sentiments of the committee, which you have done me the honor to communicate, I find that the important question now remaining to be decided is no less than this: whether any of the settlers, subsequent to the 30th day of November, 1782, shall obtain titles?

The number of settlers up to that period, may be stated at one hundred seventy-one; the number of settlers subsequent to that period, may be stated at two hundred seventy-one.

As thus more than three-fifths of all the settlers will be excluded, if that question should be decided in the negative, I consider the fate of the country, and its future happiness and tranquility, as turning on the decision which will be now made; and, as the last service which it may be in my power to render, I shall proceed, sir, to submit to the view of the committee those considerations which I conceive ought to operate in favor of sanctioning, at least in some degree of extent, all settlements made prior to the 30th day of June, 1805. It may not be entirely superfluous to premise, that those who have been charged with the administration of this Territory, sensible how much the dignity of a government is liable to be affected by the conduct of its officers, have suffered themselves to have no personal concern in the pretensions of the inhabitants.

Previous to the era last mentioned, the state of the country was such as is unnecessary to describe; it is sufficient to say, it was every thing else than a regular administration of government. For a considerable period after the peace of 1783, Great Britain retained possession of this Territory. After the United States of America obtained possession, it was too remote from the seat of any of their territorial Governments, and the communication too intercepted by a wilderness of savages in every direction, to enable its concerns to be well understood, or the laws to be duly enforced.

I assume it as a point, respecting which not a doubt need to be entertained, that, after the period last referred to, not a single settlement will ever be made on public lands within the limits of this Territory. The United States have now a Governor on the spot, who has well impressed a sense of this, as a fixed determination on the part of the General Government, which will be rigorously enforced by the local Government. As soon as any information reaches the seat of Government, of any the least encroachment on public property in any part of the Territory, a corps of cavalry, in each extremity of it, are prepared, at an hour's notice, to proceed to the removal of the offender; and, if any should be so hardy as to make resistance, two brigades of infantry are ready to follow, to support the execution of the laws.

There are cases in the history of nations, in which a wise government will cover with the shroud of oblivion that which is past, and the hand of rigor only on that which is to come; and this, sir, is one of those cases. In order to appreciate more correctly the policy which it is the interest of the United States to pursue, it will be sufficient only to take a rapid glance of the policy pursued by other Governments, to avoid their errors, (for errors they have unquestionably committed,) and to imitate their conduct in those instances where it has been liberal and judicious.

It is a fact, I presume well known, that the French settlements on the continent of North America are older than those of the English. The first effectual settlement of the latter dates from that of Jamestown, in Virginia, in the year 1607; the second from that of Plymouth, in Massachusetts, in the year 1620. In the year 1605, Port Royal, in Acadie, since become Nova Scotia, was built by the French. Previous to that period, the settlement of Canada had been effected; a governor was appointed as early as 1540, and in 1608, the foundation of Quebec was laid.

Notwithstanding this priority, in the war of 1756, the relative strength of the two nations, and the superiority of the English, became very conspicuous. The English population exceeded that of the French in the proportion of fifty to one; and their superiority in wealth and resources was still more decided. No plan could have been better judged, or more spiritedly pursued, than that of the French, while that storm was gathering. They had conceived the bold project of connecting their settlements by a chain of fortifications from the mouth of the St. Lawrence to that of the Mississippi; and, by tightening it on the back of the British possessions, to reduce them to the smallest possible limits. The western parts of New York and Pennsylvania, the State of Ohio, and the Territory of Michigan, still exhibit the monuments of their labors. But what can the best conceived designs avail against a defect of physical force? Agriculture is the only sure basis on which to support a distant settlement, and the English soon discovered the necessity of application to it. The French, relying on the military ardor of their nation, and neglecting those minute causes from which the sources of all permanent pre-eminence must be derived, gave scarcely the least encouragement to agriculture.

As an example of their policy, I will only refer you, sir, to the earlier claims which appear on the files of the committee. The first is the grant of the nobleman De la Mothe Cadillac to an inhabitant of Detroit, François Fafard de Lorme, in the year 1707; the conditions of which are nearly similar to that of the Marquis de Beauharnois, governor and lieutenant general of New France and Louisiana, to St. Aubin, which is the next on the file. That of De la Mothe conveys two arpens of front, by twenty of depth, about thirty-two American acres, for a colonist and his family in an American wilderness. But what are the conditions of these grants contrasted with an American estate in fee simple? They are no less than these: 1. To pay a reserved rent of fifteen livres a year to the Crown forever. 2. To begin to clear and improve the concession within three months from the date of the grant. 3. All of the timber is reserved to the Crown, whenever it may be wanted for the fortifications, or for the construction of boats, or other vessels; that is to say, when reduced to plain language, it may be taken at the pleasure of any military officer who may happen to have the command of the country. 4. The property of all mines and minerals, if any be found, does not pass by the grant. 5. The privilege of hunting hares, rabbits, partridges, and pheasants, does not pass. 6. The grantee is to come and carry, plant, or help to plant, a long may-pole before the door of the principal manor-house, on the first day of May in every year. 7. All the grains of the grantee are to be carried to the moulin bannal, or mill of the manor, to be ground, paying the tolls sanctioned by the coutume de Paris. 8. On every sale of the land a species of duty is to be paid, termed the lods et vente, which, in the English law, might bear the name of a fine of alienation, but is more intelligible to an American ear under the appellation of a tax on the sale of the land. This tax, by the coutume de Paris, forms no inconsiderable proportion of the value of the whole. 9. Previous to a sale, the grantee is to give information to the government, and if the government is willing to take it at the price offered to him, it is to have it. 10. The grantees cannot mortgage it without the consent of the government previously obtained. 11. For ten years the grantee is not permitted to work, or cause any person to work, directly or indirectly, at the profession and trade of a blacksmith, locksmith, armorer, or brewer. 12. All effects and articles of merchandize sent to, or brought from Montreal, must be sold by the grantee himself, or other person who, with his family, is a French resident, and not by engagés, or clerks, or foreigners, or strangers. 13. The grantee is not to sell to a foreigner, without special permission. 14. If he sells to a foreigner, with permission, the rent reserved is greatly increased; and the duties of the coutume, in such cases, are to be paid. 15. He is not to sell or trade brandy to Indians, on pain of confiscation. 16. The public charges and servitudes, and royal and seigneurial rights of the coutume de Paris, are reserved generally. 17. The grantee is to suffer on his land the roads which may be thought necessary for the public utility. 18. The grantee is to make his fences as it shall be regulated. 19. He is to assist in making his neighbor's fences when called upon. 20. He is to cause his land to be alienated, that is, surveyed, at his expense. 21. He is to obtain a brevet of confirmation from Europe within two years.

With a system of policy so narrow and illiberal, it was impossible for France to raise in her settlements a strong agricultural interest, alike the support of colonies in peace, and their defence in war. Independent of their great superiority in point of policy, the English possessed no inferiority in spirit and in judgment. The councils of that nation, guided by the capacious and illumined mind of a Chatham, and her arms conducted by the valor of an Amherst and a Wolfe, her triumphs were complete, both on the land and the ocean; and the war of 1756 terminated in gathering into her hands the fruits of all the labors of her rivals. The effects of her policy, in making agriculture the basis of political prosperity, have not yet ceased; they will never cease. After her settlements had been erected into an independent nation, the short period of twenty years has placed that nation in circumstances so unlooked for, that it now claims to be ranked among the four first Powers of the world. In respect of physical strength, extent of dominion, maritime resources, and that energy which is the result of moral causes, France, Great Britain, Russia, and the United States of America may be regarded as those nations who are likely to lead, for the future, the councils and affairs of the civilized world. The first of these Powers owns not a foot of that soil they once possessed in North America. The two other Powers have both settlements, which are growing into consequence; and, with Spain and the United States, form the four nations who are co-proprietors of this continent, and with respect to whom it is peculiarly incumbent on our country to be the first in liberal and judicious policy.

In the Territory of Michigan, the policy of Great Britain was not better than that of France. During the twenty years this Territory belonged to her, she withheld all grants of land. While they were her subjects, the Canadians here were obliged either to renounce the civilized state, by an association with the natives, to enter into the pursuit of an insignificant commerce with them, ruinous to morality, and retarding political growth, or otherwise to take possession of lands without authority, and thus procure subsistence for themselves and their families. It was in vain that, after the treaty of 1763, she repented of her dereliction of this peninsula, and was disposed, by force, to wrest it from the United States. Though stimulated by the folly and the malice of a Simcoe, she, in her turn, came to experience, like France, that the energy of an officer is of no effect without that physical force which is derived only from an extensive and flourishing state of agriculture. The victory of Wayne, and the treaty of '94, closed the door of her hopes and her prospects.

Since this period, she has fully perceived, and has as fully corrected her error. While the American side of these settlements has been languishing under the neglect of the nation, Great Britain has completely adjusted the affairs of her own side, and is extending her settlements with a rapidity and judgment that already emulates, if it does not exceed the United States. She has relieved her subjects of all burthens whatever from the mother country. She supports all the expenses of a well organized civil government. She has even given political liberty, as far as it is possible for a colony to possess it. Her provincial parliament is a respectable and intelligent legislature, elected on the representative principle; and so attractive has her policy become, that a considerable portion of Americans enter into the composition of that body, and participate in the direction of her councils. With respect to the titles of land, she has investigated and ascertained the claim of every individual inhabitant, according validity to the slightest pretensions. When ascertained, she has bestowed at once a duplication of it as a bounty. To every person who had no previous pretensions, or who may, in future, be attracted to the country, she gives two hundred acres of land without price. Whatever the prejudices of Americans may be, the difference in point of soil, or in other matters, is not so much in their favor as alone to enable them to sustain a successful competition against such liberality. It is to these contrasts our country ought to look. Advancing with a rapid and steady march to the sublimest of destinies, to arrest its career, to snatch from the humble Canadian his little enjoyments, would be an act unworthy the American nation; it would be to treat with unmerited harshness a virtuous citizen, and to inflict a wound on its own prosperity. Rather ought it to invite, by a liberal donation, a body of New England settlers into these regions; and then that hardy valor which contended with Great Britain along the Atlantic and the St. Lawrence, to the plains of Saratoga, will again meet her, in another age, beyond the coasts of Lake Superior and on the shores of the Pacific.

Though it is more than twenty years since the right of the United States to the Territory of Michigan was acquired, though twelve years have elapsed since the possession under that right has been made secure, and though the actual possession is of ten years' duration, yet there exists at this day, in a country nearly a century and a half old, and nearly a quarter of a century the property of the United States, only eight legal titles to land, and those still wearing the fetters of antiquated despotism. In all this period the old titles have not been adjusted, no channels have been afforded of acquiring new, and the evil of unauthorized encroachments has been accumulating with time.

Under these circumstances, caustical acuteness might find arguments in abundance to urge to the poor Canadian, to convince him that he has no legal title, that his claim is defective in courts, will sustain no ejection, is unsanctioned by the will of the nation, and involves a principle which, carried to extent, would dry the streams by which so much wealth is now pouring into the coffers of the United States. He has no knowledge of those legal formalities which you tell him constitute title; your action of ejection is a mystery his understanding rejects an acquaintance with; your interests and your policy are subjects he does not pretend to comprehend. This only he knows, that he comes to you as an humble cultivator of the earth, and not as an unprincipled speculator, to place a rapacious hand on a share of your treasures.

He will not argue with you on your laws, or your forms, or your systems of policy and government. He looks only for that pittance of soil on which, perhaps, he drew his breath, and which he has embellished and fertilized by a course of labors, which he knows to be honest, whatever irregularity you may be pleased to attach to it. He cannot be intimidated by a fear of your rigor; he cannot be tempted, by the allurements of money, to part with the hopes of himself and his family. Tell him that you are about to dispossess him! He folds his arms, and, with a pious resignation, commits the event to his God. Amidst the collisions of nations, the incessant din of arms, the mighty tide of revolutions, he has lost a country to love, and by which to be loved in return; and, cast among strangers to his language, his jurisprudence, and religion, he asks only a small and obscure spot upon the earth, on which to spend, in peace, the fleeting transit of his existence. Deprive him of this, he will raise no arm of resistance; he will utter no imprecation of disappointment; he will withdraw himself, with an unchanged temper, from your laws and your dominions, and will seek again, under the banner of a monarchy, that mercy which has been denied him in the bosom of a republic.

Adverting with a strict eye to precedent, and reposing on the principle that it is not the business of the representatives of the United States to give away the resources of their constituents in charities and donations, the committee appear disposed to restrain, what would otherwise be their inclination, to very narrow limits.

In a Government, of which the principles and practice are, perhaps, without example, to tie itself to precedent, is to shut out the light of reason and experience. There is no case in our history which is strictly a precedent of this. That which resembles it most, is presented in the arrangements made between the Government and individuals in that state of things which resulted from the treaty of San Lorenzo el Real. In two features, this case differs from the present. The settlements made, though within foreign jurisdiction, were chiefly by American characters; and shortly after the Government obtained possession, it turned its attention to the subject, so that the evil of unauthorized encroachments was not allowed to go on increasing for such a length of time.

The policy of the Government, in this case, was to allow a pre-emptive right to six hundred and forty acres. Whether the result of this policy has been such as to recommend it, is questionable.

The rule of our Government, in that system which regulates the disposition of their lands, is to make two dollars for an acre the minimum price, to require a small portion of the price immediately, another larger portion a short time after, and the remainder at the end of successive years; but, by a regulation which is perhaps stamped with an aspect of unjust cupidity, entirely at variance with those mild and equitable principles which generally characterize our laws, and which is probably practised by few civilized nations but our own, if the ulterior payments should fail to be made, the whole of the land is lost; and, if no bidder appears, all the previous payments are forfeited to the Government; whereas, equity, the least moderate, would either allow the purchaser the proportion he had paid for, or return him his money without interest.

Where the privilege of pre-emption has been accorded, many have been unable to avail themselves of it. Many, having made payments, finding themselves unable to complete the purchase, have been obliged to abandon their improvements, with the moneys they had paid, and were thus plunged into greater distress by the very remedy intended to afford them relief. Pre-emptive rights have generally benefitted the speculator more than the settler.

If a similar privilege is adopted in this case, the poor Canadian, unable to command the sum of thirteen hundred dollars, will not make the attempt to avail himself of the benefit; and if many should even make the attempt, some, after making it, would fail to effect it, and the result, both as to them and as to the Government, would be far less favorable than the absolute donation of a smaller quantity, with no incumbrance.

If the case referred to should be resorted to for a rule, not only ought the confirmation to come down to the first day of June, 1796, but the quantity to be six hundred and forty acres without price, and a pre-emptive right from that day to the present for the remainder—terms which are certainly more favorable to the Canadian than he has yet pretended to ask.

The propriety of donations for those objects of policy which the nation may deem worthy its attention, is best gathered from its own sense of it, in the exercise of the power. I will enumerate the cases of this description, that they may undergo a comparison with the present case.

1. A donation of four hundred acres to every head of a family at Vincennes.
2. A donation of four hundred acres to every head of a family on the north part of the Mississippi.
3. A donation of one hundred and fifty acres to the Piankeshaw Indians.
4. The use of six thousand acres to different villages, as commons, which will probably fall to the towns in which they are situated.
5. A donation of one hundred acres to every person coming into the Territory, and entering into the militia, whether of the age of twenty-one years or not.
6. A grant of four hundred acres to every person who had improved and cultivated in the vicinity of the north part of the Mississippi, under supposed grants of commandants claiming authority to make such grants.
7. A donation to the Kaskaskia Indians.
8. A donation of land which had been occupied by priests at Kahokia.
9. A similar grant of lands occupied by the Jesuits at Kaskaskia.
10. One hundred thousand acres as a bounty to settlers within the State of Ohio, of the age of eighteen years and upwards, by the act of April 21, 1792.
11. A donation of twenty-four thousand acres to a modern French emigration, whose first place of settlement was termed Galliopolis.
12. A donation of twenty-three thousand and forty acres for a seminary of learning in the State of Ohio, by the act of May 5, 1792.
13. A location of one thousand nine hundred and forty acres on the Muskingum, Hoekhocking, and Scioto rivers, on returning warrants of military bounties of that number of acres, for opening a road in the State of Ohio.
14. A donation of twelve thousand acres to the Moravian missionaries, for the propagation of the Gospel among the Indians.
15. A donation of one thirty-sixth part of all the United States' lands in its limits to the State of Ohio, for literary purposes.
16. A grant of twenty-four thousand three hundred and twenty acres, including three distinct salt works, to the State of Ohio, to the use of its Government, on condition of lands sold by the United States after the 30th of June, 1802, being exempt from taxes for five years from the sale.
17. An application of one-twentieth part of all the future proceeds of lands sold by the United States within the State of Ohio, to the purpose of making roads into the said State to communicate with the Atlantic.

18. Pre-emptive rights to owners of mills.

19. A privilege equivalent to pre-emption, and a credit of twelve years, with no interest, to cultivators of the vine.

20. Six thousand dollars for roads, by the act of May 1, 1802.

21. An equivalent to one thirty-sixth part of all the lands disposed of by the United States in the State of Ohio, anterior to the erection of the State, including even the lands which had been given as bounties.

22. A donation of one thirty-third part of all the proceeds of lands sold by the United States within the State of Ohio, to the disposal of the Government of the State of Ohio, for roads within the same, in addition to the former twentieth, for roads into the said State to communicate with the Atlantic.

23. A donation of two town lots, one out-lot of thirty acres, and a tract of twenty-three thousand and forty acres to Jefferson college.

Thus the committee will perceive that but a small proportion of the liberality shown to others can ever be expected by this Territory. What has been hitherto asked is only that which the people of the country had acquired, in a political capacity, before the United States had obtained any rights, and which, therefore, fell into the hands of this Government without cost. It was acquired by the people of the country, not by their Government. Their blood was expended in fighting for it; and their resources in buying that savage good will which could alone preserve it. The American treaty of Fort M'Intosh only identified that which was before indefinite, and which was certainly defined much less to the advantage of the people of this country than if they had themselves negotiated it under their then Government; for, at the very period of the treaty, the Canadian settlements had extended much beyond the boundaries expressed, and the natives had retired to a great distance from them, with only one small exception. In the system which would be generally pursued, some donations would be made; and on an occasion of calamity and distress, to advance and concentrate some of them would be desirable. The principle of a thirty-sixth part, which has become general, and will of course apply to the Territory hereafter, with a particular tract of six miles, has been made to have, as has been seen, a retroactive operation in former instances, independent of the immense aids otherwise bestowed.

From the complexion of some former statutes for the investigation of the titles, it would appear to be intended that Congress should take up and consider each individual case on the facts of it as reported; and, where they may decide in its favor, to include it in a general act, naming the persons and the quantities, and the surveys to be afterwards made. Insuperable obstacles would oppose the prosecution of that idea. With respect to eight claims, the committee will perceive that it might not have been impossible. Perhaps, by further labor, fifteen more might have been settled; but for the National Legislature, aided by the most exact lights, to have settled the whole, and to have done it so as at once to give satisfaction to the country, and render justice to the Government, would have been impossible. Great are always the difficulties of exercising the judgment on matters at a distance, with which the mind is not familiar; greater are those difficulties, where foreign manners, language, and customs give a tinge to every transaction, which the powers of translation prove sometimes inadequate to describe. Where one body of men is to investigate, and another to decide, the former, ignorant of the principles which will govern the latter, may supply a multitude of unimportant facts, and preternit some fact which, if the principles of decision had been known, would have proved highly important. Where equitable considerations attach themselves to the investigation of a claim, evanescent circumstances, insusceptible of being communicated or apprehended at a distance, often enter into the elements of a correct decision. Nothing is more capable than a subject of this kind of being made to appear very straight and clear upon paper, and to produce inextricable confusion when applied to the ground. The same surveyor, with the same instruments, cannot measure a tract of land so as to be upon the ground what it appears by paper, at every repetition; much less could he measure a compact body of settlements, of thirty or forty miles, actually inhabited and under cultivation, preserving them contiguous, and so as to give to every claimant a quantity expressed in a statute, without throwing their lines, as existing on the ground, into the utmost confusion. In an unsettled waste, the case would be different; but even then, when the settlements become contiguous, few governments have been capable of acting with that penetration which subjects not the people to long and ruinous controversies. In cases like the present, experience has taught, and reason confirms her precept, that the powers to investigate and to decide, to be correct, must be cotemporaneous; and that the titles of land, to be exempt from duibety and litigation, must be founded on surveys in which the ground is not too strictly regulated by anticipated provisions, and in decisions rendered on a view of the whole subject, where every circumstance is admitted to a clear and forcible operation.

I have the honor to be, sir, with the greatest respect,
your obedient servant,

A. B. WOODWARD.

The Honorable JOHN G. JACKSON,
Chairman of the Committee of the House of Representatives on the Territory of Michigan.

APPLICATION OF PURCHASERS OF PUBLIC LANDS FOR AN EXTENSION OF CREDIT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 22, 1806.

Mr. JOHN RANDOLPH, from the Committee of Ways and Means, to which were referred sundry petitions of purchasers of public lands within the State of Ohio and Indiana Territory, made the following report:

That the public lands form a great and increasing source of revenue, although the moneys accruing from their sale cannot be considered in the nature of a tax. Your committee can discover no principle that will justify the extension of a further credit to purchasers who have received a fair equivalent (rapidly increasing in value) for the sums which they have stipulated to pay, that would not more forcibly warrant a similar extension of credit on custom house bonds and other debts due to the public; and they dread (if the present wise and salutary provisions relating to the sale of public lands be once relaxed,) lest that important branch of our public resources should be altogether dried up and lost. They, therefore, respectfully recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That the petitions of "certain actual settlers on lands sold by Congress as pre-emption lands lying between the Miamis, in the State of Ohio," and of sundry other purchasers of public lands in the State of Ohio and Territory of Indiana, are unreasonable, and ought not to be granted.

9th CONGRESS.

No. 128.

1st SESSION.

MILITARY LAND WARRANTS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE MARCH 28, 1806.

WAR DEPARTMENT, March 29, 1806.

SIR: I have now the honor to reply to your letter of the 26th instant, written by direction of the committee of the Senate to whom was referred a bill from the House of Representatives in relation to the issuing of land warrants.
