Charles W. Clarke, being duly sworn, doth depose and say that he was acquainted with Mrs. Peavett; that he knew her to have a framed house between Maria Sanchez's creek and St. Sebastian's river on the point, which she resided in for some time; she had, also, negroes planting there for some years, with the knowledge and acquiescence of the Spanish government. And further this deponent saith not.

The wardens of the Roman Catholic church vs. The United States. A lot of land in the city of St. Augustine.

MEMORIAL.

To the honorable the commissioners appointed to ascertain claims and titles to lands in East Florida:

The memorial of the wardens of the Roman Catholic church of St. Augustine respectfully sheweth: That your memorialists claim title to a lot of land situated in the city of St. Augustine, on the north side of the public square, and upon which the church and school-house now stand, bounded on the west by St. George's street, on the east by the custom-house and the Marquis Fougere's lots, on the south by the public square, and on the north by the lots of Joseph M. Hernandez and the heirs of Peso de Burgo, measuring 72½ varas, Spanish yards, front on the square, and 58½ varas in depth; which title your memorialists derive from a judicial sale executed on April 12, 1793, as will more fully appear by a certified copy of the same herewith filed. And your memorialists, on behalf of the said church, pray confirmation of title to the said lots.

On behalf of the wardens of said church:

F. J. FATIO, Secretary.

[Here follows the translation of deed of sale dated April 12, 1793.]

DECREE.

The wardens of the Roman Catholic church of St. Augustine vs. The United States. For a lot of land in the city of St. Augustine.

It appearing in evidence before this board that this was a valid British grant confirmed by the Spanish government, and regularly conveyed by deed, bearing date April 12, 1793, to the King, in trust for the Roman Catholic congregation of St. Augustine, for the purpose of building a church thereon, it is therefore confirmed to said wardens in trust for said congregation. October 29, 1825.

The wardens of the Roman Catholic church of St. Augustine vs. The United States. For a lot of land in St. Augustine.

G. W. Perpall, sworn and examined on the part of claimants, says that Mrs. Humbert, who, by her attorney, M. Lazaga, sold the lot on which the Roman Catholic church and the new city council chamber stands, was the sister of the witness; and that the whole of said lot was at the time of said sale an orange grove, that is, from St. George's street to the late custom-house square. Witness says that the whole of the lot was sold for the purpose of building the church. The house of the city council was then a dwelling-house, and was intended for a parsonage house, but as the parsons or priests usually had houses of their own in which they preferred living, the house on the lot was used for the purpose of a public school. The members of the Catholic church, at the purchase of the lot, and the commencement of building the present church, raised sums as large as they were able, by subscription, for the purchase of the lot and building of the same; but as they were unable to complete the said church, Governor Quesada made a representation to the King of Spain, who directed that the church should be finished at the King's expense.

Antelm Gay vs. The United States. For two lots of land in St. Augustine.

MEMORIAL.

To the honorable the commissioners appointed to ascertain claims and titles to lands in East Florida:

The memorial of Antelm Gay, a citizen of the United States, and resident of the city of St. Augustine, in East Florida, respectfully sheweth: That your memorialist claims title to two lots of land in the city of St. Augustine, which your memorialist purchased of Don Bartolome de Castro y Ferrer, on January 26, 1822—one of which said lots is bounded west on the street which passes to the east of the convent or barracks of St. Francis, on the east by the bay, on the south by the public land, and on the north by a lot the property of the said Bartolome de Castro y Ferrer; the other of the said lots is bounded west by the said street, on the east by the bay, on the north by the lot of Mariano Serra, and on the south by the lot of the heirs of Salvador Martin; which said two lots were purchased by the said Bartolome de Castro y Ferrer of Antonio Vallejo and his wife, at which time there were houses on the said lots, but which have been since destroyed, the said Antonio Vallejo having purchased one of the said lots of Miguel Rodriguez, as appears by the original deed deposited in the public archives, executed June 14, 1803; and the other lot was bought by Antonio Peter's wife of the said Antonio Vallejo of Pedro Fornells, as appears by a deed deposited in the public archives, executed April 10, 1799. Both of the aforesaid lots fell to the domain of the King of Spain after the evacuation of the British, but were delivered to the purchasers and occupants, and confirmed to them by a decree of the Spanish government of June 17, 1801; all which will more clearly appear by the certificate of José de Zubizaretta, the public escribano, dated July 30, 1812, herewith presented; and your memorialist has been in possession of said lots since his purchase, as before mentioned.

In confirmation of his title, the following documents are herewith respectfully presented:

1. Certificate of the above-mentioned of the public escribano, (deed from Don Bartolome de Castro y Ferrer to your memorialist,) recorded in the public office of records in St. Augustine, January 6, 1802. All which is respectfully submitted.

ANTELM GAY,
By his attorney, JOHN RODMAN.

George F. and Oliver Palmes vs. The United States. For nine hundred and ninety-nine and three-quarters acres of land.

MEMORIAL.

To the honorable the commissioners appointed to ascertain claims and titles to lands in East Elorida:

The petition of George F. Palmes and Oliver Palmes respectfully sheweth: That your memorialists claim title to a tract of land consisting of nine hundred and ninety-nine and three-fourths acres of land, situated at the place called Turnbull, on both sides of Spruce creek, in the territory of Mosquito, bounded on the north by pine lands, on the south by lands belonging to William Williams, on the east by marsh; for which an absolute title was made to Robert McHardy by Governor Estrada July 3, 1815; which title your memorialists derive from a grant made to Robert McHardy July 21, 1803, by Governor White, in virtue of the royal order of October 29, 1790, who sold the same to Paul Dupon, by deed dated June 2, 1818, which is herewith submitted, who holds the same in trust for memorialists, as will be seen by bond filed in their claim for 245 acres. And your memorialists further show that they are legally seized and possessed of said lands by the trustee aforesaid, and were so at the time of cession; that they are citizens of the United States and residents of Savannah, in the State of Georgia. They pray confirmation of title, &c. All which is respectfully submitted, &c.

GEORGE F. PALMES.

Title of property in favor of Don Robert McHardy. For one thousand acres of land.

Don Juan José de Estrada y Toro, lieutenant colonel of the royal armies, &c., &c., &c.:

Whereas, by a royal order communicated to this government October 29, 1790, by the captain general of the Island of Cuba and the two Floridas, it is provided, amongst other things, that lands shall be laid off gratis for those foreigners who, of their own free will, present themselves to swear allegiance to our sovereign, in proportion to the number of laborers each family may have; that Don Robert McHardy having presented himself as one of those, he solicited from the government, and there were granted to him July 21, 1803, one thousand acres of land at the plantation named Dr. Trumbul, situated towards a part of the river Mosquito, and at both sides of the creek named Spruce, as appears from the certificate which was issued on the same date by the secretary, and is annexed to the proceeding moved for, soliciting that the corresponding title of property to said lands should be delivered to him, the boundaries of which are as follows: on the north and west with pine lands, on the south by lands of the heirs of Don William Williams, and on the east by marsh, as the said proceeding sets forth. And as there has not been delivered to the said Don Robert McHardy any title for the security and confirmation of his dominion to the said land, in the form in which it has been granted to others who have already passed more than ten years of uninterrupted possession to obtain the useful and direct dominion to the said lands, made buildings upon them, cultivated them, and complied with the other conditions established by the government for concessions and grants of this nature existing in the titles delivered to other settlers in the proceedings set forth: Wherefore, and in consideration of everything, I have granted unto the said Don Robert McHardy the 1,000 acres of land, for himself, his heirs and successors, in absolute property; and in expediting to him, as by these presents I do, the corresponding title by which I separate the royal domain from the right and dominion it had to said lands; and I cede and transfer it to the said McHardy, his heirs and successors, that, in consequence, they may possess it as their own, use and enjoy it, without any encumbrance whatsoever, with all its entrances, outlets, uses, customs, rights, and services, which it has had, and in fact and law belong and appertain unto it; and, at their will, sell, cede, transfer, and alienate it as may best suit them. To all of which I interpose my authority, as I can and of right ought, in virtue of the sovereign will.

Given under my hand, and countersigned by the undersigned notary pro tem. of government and the royal domain, in the city of St. Augustine, Florida, July 3, 1815.

JUAN JOSÉ DE ESTRADA.

CONVEYANCE.

Be it known that I, Don Robert McHardy, an inhabitant of this province, declare that I really sell unto Paul Dupon, a new settler in it, nine hundred and ninety-nine and two-thirds acres of land, situated in the territory of Mosquito, in this province, towards the river, at a place called Dr. Turnbull, and at both sides of a creek called Spruce, bounded on the north and west with pine lands, on the south by lands belonging to the heirs of Don William Williams, and on the east by a swamp, which lands are the same that were granted to me by the government July 21, 1803, and for which a title of absolute property was expedited to me to the number of 1,000 acres of land July 3, 1815, remaining only with one-quarter of an acre for my use and dominion, and I sell him the other 999 $\frac{2}{3}$, with all its entrances, outlets, uses, customs, rights, and services, which it has and belong to it, free from all encumbrance, (as I, the said notary, certify, from the result of my search of the book of mortgages which I have made for the purpose,) at the price of one thousand five hundred dollars, which the purchaser has paid me in cash, which I acknowledge as delivered to my will. I renounce proof, laws of delivery, exception to money not counted, fraud, and anything else in the case, for which I grant a receipt in form. In virtue of which, I separate myself from the right of property, possession, use, seigniory, and other actions, real and personal, which I had and held to the said lands, all of which I cede, renounce, and transfer to the purchaser and his representatives, that, as their own, they may possess, sell, and alienate it at their will, in virtue of this deed which I grant in their favor as a token of real delivery, by which it is seen that he has acquired the possession without occasion for further proof, from which I relieve him, and oblige myself to the eviction and guarantee of said sale in due form, and as may best suit the purchaser, with my property, present and future, power and submission to the tribunals of his Majesty, that they may compel me to compliance as by sentence consented to and passed in authority of an adjudged case, on which I renounce all the laws, customs, rights, and privileges in my favor, and the general law in form which prohibits it. And I, the said Don Pablo Dupon, being present, accept in my favor this deed, and by it receive as purchased the said lands at the price and agreement on which they were sold to me, and I acknowledge them as delivered to my will. I renounce proof, laws of delivery, those of a thing not seen or received, fraud, and everything else in the case, for which I deliver a receipt in form. In testimony of which, this is dated in this city of St. Augustine, Florida, the second of June, one thousand eight hundred and eighteen. I, the notary, attest that I know the parties who signed this, there being witnesses present, Don José Mariano Hernandez, Don Eusebio Maria Gomez, and Don José Maria Bousquet, inhabitants present.

DECREE BY THE BOARD.

The claimant exhibited to the board a royal title made by Governor Estrada to Robert McHardy for the land for headrights, dated July 3, 1815, who sold and conveyed the same to Paul Dupon in trust for claimants, as per bond referred to and filed in the claim of Miss Palmes for 245 acres. The board having ascertained that the title of the claimants is interfered with by British titles, under which the heirs of Turnbull claim, they therefore order that the documents accompanying the memorial in this case be reported to Congress for their determination. September 24.

John Bunch vs. The United States. For two thousand one hundred and sixty acres of land.

MEMORIAL.

To the honorable the commissioners appointed to ascertain claims and titles to lands in East Florida:

The petition of John Bunch respectfully showeth: That your memorialist claims title to a tract of land consisting of two thousand one hundred and sixty acres, situated on the waters of Mosquito or Halifax river, and is bounded as follows, (as by survey herewith filed, marked B:) beginning at a cabbage tree near a marsh, and running west, 98 chains, to a pride of Egypt; thence north 80° west, to a pine; thence along the public road south 50° east, to a stake; thence east, 100 chains, to Tomoka river; thence with said river to its mouth; thence with Haulover river to the beginning; which title your memorialist derives from a grant made to him by Governor White, in virtue of the royal order of 1790, for headrights, on August 11, 1804, (see order of concession, marked A, filed herewith;) and your memorialist further showeth that he has, since the 11th day of August, been in actual possession of said lands; that he has cultivated them up to the present period, and still continues to do so. Your memorialist further shows that he was, at the change of flags, a Spanish subject, and that he intends residing at Tomoka, his present home, in future. Your memorialist therefore prays that his title may be confirmed; and he will ever pray, &c.

JOHN BUNCH,
By his attorney, GEORGE MURRAY.

[Translation.]

Don Juan de Pierra, lieutenant of grenadiers of the third battalion of the regiment of Cuba, and secretary of the government: I certify that to a memorial presented by Don Juan Bunch, soliciting that there should be granted to him in the territory of Mosquito the lands which corresponds to him, his wife, sixty-two negroes of more than twenty years, and thirty-four from eight to sixteen, which, in the time of the British dominion, were possessed by Moultrie and Moncrief; these, which were granted to Don Nicolas Turnbull, who did not take possession of them in due time, the following decree was made: "Let there be granted to the interested two thousand one hundred and sixty acres of land in the place which he solicits, without injury to a third person, and those are what he is entitled to; and until, according to the number of laborers he may have, when the general survey takes place, those which correspond to him be surveyed, he being bound to take possession of the said land within the term of six months."

WHITE.

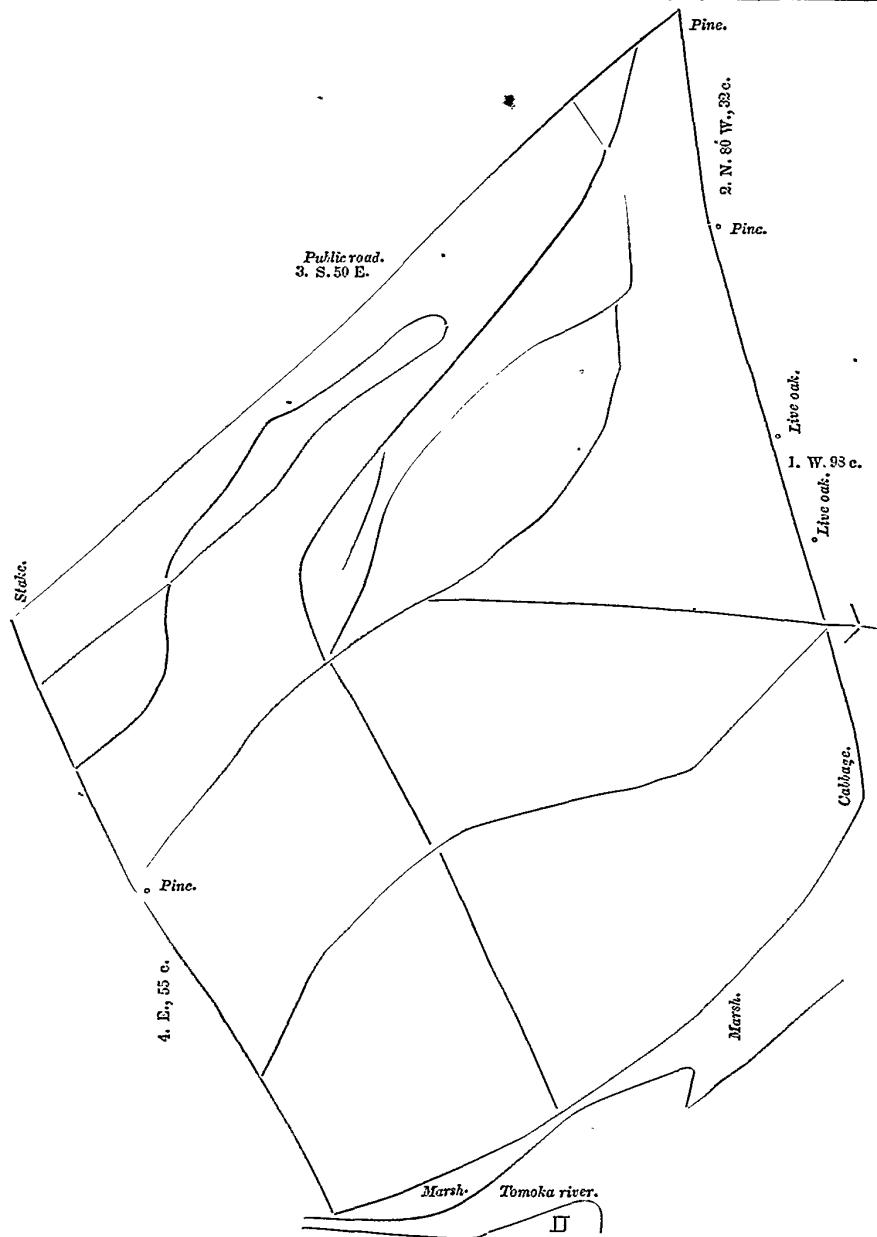

And that it may serve for a security to the interested, I give these presents at St. Augustine, Florida, August 11, 1804.

JUAN DE PIERRA.

NOTE.—That by a decree of April 11, 1808, there were — to Don Samuel Bunch, son of him contained in this certificate, 240 acres of land on the river St. Mary's, for nine negroes over sixteen years, and one of thirteen years; which number of acres are to be deducted from the two thousand one hundred and sixty of his father, on account of those which correspond to his son's ten negroes being included to this number of acres.

I certify the foregoing decree and note are true and correct translations from their originals on file in the office of the public archives of St. Augustine.

F. J. FATIO, S. B. L. C.

DECREE BY THE BOARD.

The claimant in this case produced a certified copy of concession for the two thousand one hundred and sixty acres of land, dated August 11, 1804, made by Governor White to him for "headrights." It appeared further to the board that the claimant occupied and cultivated the land ever since it was granted to him; but having ascertained that his title is interfered with by a British title, under which the heirs of Turnbull claim, we do therefore order that the documents accompanying the memorial be forwarded to Congress for their determination. October 11.

John Bunch vs. The United States. For two thousand one hundred and sixty acres of land.

Horatio S. Dexter, being sworn, states that in the year 1813 he was at the said tract of land occupied by Mr. Bunch, who had a considerable quantity of stock, and above forty negroes, and that it was a matter of general notoriety under the Spanish government that said tract of land was the property of said Bunch.

HORATIO S. DEXTER.

Before the board in session October 11, 1824.

G. W. Perpall, being sworn, states that he recollects Mr. Bunch having obtained possession of the above tract about a week after the grant was made him by the Spanish government, and has continued cultivating the same to the present period, and that the said Bunch has had continually on the place from thirty to forty negroes.

Zephaniah Kingsley vs. The United States. For two thousand acres of land.

MEMORIAL.

To the honorable the commissioners appointed to ascertain claims and titles to lands in East Florida:

The petition of Zephaniah Kingsley, by his attorney, George Gibbs, respectfully sheweth: That your memorialist claims title to a tract of land consisting of two thousand acres, more or less, situated on the island called Drayton island, at the entrance of Lake George, bounded on all sides by the river St John's and Lake George, it being an island, as per royal title, certified by Juan de Entralgo, government notary, dated July 27, 1821, per exhibit K, to which, and to other documents in the office of the archives of the Territory, will more fully appear by reference to the same; which title your memorialist derives from a title made to George Sibbald for part by Governor Kindelan, in virtue of the royal order of October 29, 1790, who sold your memorialist fifteen hundred acres of the said island, being all his interest and right in the same; and the rest and residue of the said island was granted to your memorialist by the same Governor Kindelan, as per the aforementioned title—reference to the documents in the office of the public archives—will more fully appear. And your memorialist further sheweth that he is in actual possession of said lands; that he is now a citizen of the United States and resident of St. Augustine.

ZEPHANIAH KINGSLEY,
By GEORGE GIBBS, Attorney in fact.

Title of property in favor of Don Zephaniah Kingsley, of Drayton island.

Don Sebastian Kindelan and O'Regan, knight of the order of St. James, brigadier of the royal armies, political and military governor of the city of St. Augustine, Florida, and its province:

Whereas, in a royal order communicated to this government October 29, 1790, by the captain general of the Island of Cuba and two Floridas, it is provided, amongst other things, that lands should be granted and surveyed gratis to those foreigners who, of their own free will, offer themselves to swear allegiance to our sovereign, in proportion to the number of workers each family may have; that Don George Sibbald having presented himself as one of them, he solicited from the government, and had granted unto him, fifteen hundred acres of land, October, 5, 1804, in the island called Drayton, at the entrance of Lake George, in the river St. John's, which he ceded to Don Zephaniah Kingsley, with all its improvements, to whom it was adjudged in solutune, in virtue of the agreement of the parties authorized by a decree of this said government July 18, 1811; and afterwards, by a decree of the 4th of September of the same year, there were granted to the aforesaid Kingsley five hundred acres more, which were vacant in the said island, which in all may contain about two thousand acres, more or less, as appears more at length from the documents and certificates which are annexed to the proceeding moved by the said Kingsley, soliciting that there should be issued in his favor the corresponding title for the lands which the said island of Drayton contains: Wherefore, and considering that he has already passed more than ten years of an uninterrupted possession to obtain the useful and directed dominion to the said island of Drayton, made buildings on it, cultivated it, and finally complied with all the other conditions established by the government for grants and concessions of this nature existing in the titles delivered to other settlers, as is set forth and proved in the said proceeding, I have granted, as in the name of his Majesty I do grant, unto the aforesaid Don Zephaniah Kingsley the said Drayton island, for himself, his heirs and successors, in absolute property; and in despatching to him, as by these presents I do, the corresponding title, by which I separated the royal domain from the right and dominion it had to said land; and I cede and transfer it unto the said Kingsley, his heirs and successors, that, in consequence, they may possess it as their own, use and enjoy it, without any encumbrance whatsoever, with all its entrances, outlets, uses, customs, rights, and services, which it has had, has, and of custom and by law belong and may appertain unto it; and, at their will, sell, cede, transfer, and alienate it as may best suit them. To all which I give the sanction of my authority, as I can and of right ought to do, in virtue of the sovereign will.

Given under my hand, and countersigned by the undersigned notary of government and of the royal domain, in this said city of St. Augustine, Florida, January 7, 1815.

SEBASTIAN KINDELAN.

By command of his excellency:

JUAN DE ENTRALGO, Notary of Government pro tem.

The board having ascertained that this claim is covered by a British grant, they therefore order that it be reported to Congress for their determination. December 15.

19TH CONGRESS.]No. 504.[1ST SESSION.

NEW MADRID CLAIM IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 24, 1826.

Mr. Scott, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom were referred the petition and documents of Isidore Moore, of Perry county, in the State of Missouri, reported:

That on the 17th day of February, 1815, an act of Congress was passed for the relief of the inhabitants of the county of New Madrid, in the then Missouri Territory, who had suffered by earthquakes; that, amongst the other provisions of the act, Frederick Bates, esq.; then the recorder of land titles in Missouri, was authorized to receive the evidence of actual damage done to lands in that quarter; and, on being satisfied that material injury had been done to the soil, the recorder was to take a release from the claimant of the land injured to the United States, and issue his certificate in favor of the party, authorizing him to locate the like quantity (not exceeding one section to any one claimant) on any of the public lands in the then Territory of Missouri, the sale of which was authorized by law. The law of February 17, 1815, authorized the recorder to issue to persons who held lots or pieces of ground of a less quantity than one hundred and sixty acres certificates of location calling for one hundred and sixty acres, notwithstanding the quantity of land injured was less than that quantity. The construction which the recorder gave this portion of the act was this: that for each lot or piece of ground less than one hundred and sixty acres a certificate for one hundred and sixty should issue, provided the whole did not exceed one entire section; so that, if one person held four lots or pieces of ground of only one arpent each, the recorder issued four certificates severally conferring the right to locate one hundred and sixty acres of land. When those certificates were issued by the recorder they went into circulation currently as land warrants issued by the proper and competent authority; they were transferred from hand to hand for large prices; some were purchased up on speculation, others were purchased up by the poor and industrious farmers to secure for themselves and families a home. It was never made a question whether the recorder had exceeded his power or misconstrued the law; the people confided in the act as correctly done, and expended their money in the purchase of those certificates under the full belief that the right to the land called for by this warrant was undoubted. Subsequently, however, when those certificates of the recorder were presented to the General Land Office for patents, the commissioner refused to issue a patent on but one of them, on the ground that the recorder had misconstrued the law, and issued to several claimants more certificates, and for a greater quantity of land, than he was authorized to do. This decision of the department was sustained by the opinion of the Attorney General, and patents in all cases suspended where more than one certificate had issued to any one person, predicated on lots or pieces of ground for a less quantity than one hundred and sixty acres. The number of cases in which patents are suspended is from eighty to eighty-five. The present petitioner, Isidore Moore, claims under one J. B. Chartier, who, it appears, relinquished four small lots or pieces of ground to the United States, amounting to two hundred and fifty-three arpents, and received from the recorder four certificates calling for one hundred and sixty acres each. It appears to the satisfaction of the committee that Isidore Moore is not a speculator, but an honest farmer, who has purchased and located for the express purpose of settlement, and that, to quiet the title, he has already purchased the same land twice. It also appears that the petitioner has actually improved and cultivated the land in question with a view to make it a permanent home. Without taking into consideration the question, or deciding whether the recorder did or did not exceed his powers in granting to the same person several certificates, and without deciding whether the government is or is not bound by the construction given and acts done by the recorder to and under the act of February 17, 1815, the committee think the case of the petitioner one of those to which relief ought to be granted:

1st. Because he has purchased the land in good faith, under a full belief and reliance on the propriety of the act and powers of the recorder to fully and finally decide on the law.

2d. Because the petitioner has already twice paid for the land, under the belief that the title was good, as it rested on the official acts of the agent of the government.

3d. Because the petitioner has purchased, not for speculation, but for agricultural purposes, and has actually improved and cultivated the same.

The committee have not decided the question of general relief in all cases. On that subject there is a bill before the House that has passed the Senate, and the committee, not having been able to recommend a course on that bill, submit the final decision of the House without prejudice.

The committee in the case of Isidore Moore report a bill.

19TH CONGRESS.]No. 505.[1ST SESSION.]

TO SET APART A PORTION OF THE NET PROCEEDS OF THE SALES OF THE PUBLIC LANDS FOR THE SUPPORT OF COMMON SCHOOLS, TO BE APPORTIONED AMONG THE SEVERAL STATES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 24, 1826.

Mr. STRONG, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the resolution of December 21, 1825, instructing them "to inquire into the expediency of appropriating a portion of the net annual proceeds of the sales and entries of the public lands exclusively for the support of common schools, and of apportioning the same among the several States in proportion to the representation of each in the House of Representatives," reported:

That the subject referred to the consideration of the committee is manifestly of great interest. It has directly in view the improvement of the mind and morals of the present generation, and of generations to come. It contemplates giving additional stability to the government, and drawing around the republic new and stronger bonds of union. We are, indeed, a peculiar people. None enjoy more freedom than we do; and, though it be the price of blood, yet it is not founded in usurpation nor sustained by the sword. The most casual observer of human institutions at once perceives that our political as well as civil condition, in some essential particulars, differs fundamentally from that of every other nation. The Constitution under which we live is the only one, beyond the limits of this republic, which secures religious toleration and leaves the tongue and the conscience free. This was chiefly the result of education. Chastened liberty lives in the voluntary choice of an enlightened people, while arbitrary power depends for its existence upon the slavish fear of an ignorant multitude. Hence, a government like ours, which guarantees equal representation and taxation, trial by jury, the freedom of speech and of the press, of religious opinion and profession, not only depends for its energy and action, but for its very existence, upon the will of the people. They, and they only, can alter, or change, or abolish it. And are the rights of mankind and the obligations of civil society generally understood or respected by the ignorant? Has property, or reputation, or life, when left to depend upon the wisdom of ignorance, or the forbearance of passion, ever been accounted safe? And where is the human character usually found the most degraded and debased? Is it where schools and the means of education abound, or is it where the light of knowledge never illumined the human intellect? If, then, the habits, notions, and actions of men, which naturally result from the ignorance of letters, from the force of superstition, and the blind impulses of passion, are utterly incompatible with rational liberty, and every way hostile to the political institutions of freedom, how high and imperious is the duty upon us, living under a government the freest of the free—a government whose action and being depend upon popular will—to seek every constitutional means to enlighten, and chasten, and purify that will? How shall we justify it to ourselves, and to the world, if we do not employ the means in our power in order to free it from the severe bondage of ignorance and passion, and place it under the mild control of wisdom and reason? As large as the opportunities of acquiring knowledge are, and as much of common learning as the American people have, there are some growing into manhood around us who have neither learning nor the opportunity of acquiring it.

The resolution under consideration proposes to appropriate a portion of the proceeds of the public lands to a new and specific object; to convert it into a permanent fund for the sole use and support of common schools in the several States, and to divide this fund among the several States in proportion to the representation of each in this House.

Of appropriating a portion of these proceeds to a new and specific object.—A part of the public domain was acquired by the fortune of war, and a part by purchase. The whole constitutes a common fund for the joint benefit of the States and the people. This domain amounted to some hundred millions of acres, and of it probably some two hundred millions of acres of good land yet remain unsold. It is true that the proceeds of these lands, together with those of the internal duties, and the duties on merchandise, and the tonnage of vessels, to the amount of ten million of dollars annually, are appropriated and pledged to the "sinking fund." But is this a valid objection to the appropriation of the whole or of any part of the proceeds of these lands to any other proper object? Since the act of March, 1817, making this appropriation and pledge to the sinking fund, the annual average amount of the public revenue has been about twenty millions of dollars. So long, therefore, as ten millions of dollars are left to the sinking fund, the appropriation is answered and the pledge redeemed; and the surplus revenue, from whatever source derived, not having been appropriated or pledged, remains to be disposed of in such way and for such purposes as the Congress may direct. But are the public lands a source of revenue upon which a wise and prudent government ought to risk its credit? Will capitalists lend their money upon such vague and uncertain security? The land may be offered for sale, but no man can be compelled to buy. The purchaser is wholly voluntary. The promised revenue to be derived from it is altogether contingent. It depends not at all upon the power or the necessities of the government, but upon the will of the purchaser. Besides, the faith of the government does not consist in the intrinsic value of the thing pledged. This is not enough. No prudent man, for example, would lend his money to the government to be reimbursed out of the proceeds which may or may not accrue from the lead mines and salt springs belonging to the United States. The value of the pledge is the credit it secures. And the thing pledged is valued in proportion to its peculiar fitness and proper adaptedness to the end for which it was pledged. So that the faith of the government necessarily depends upon its ability to coerce the possession—to touch and turn the thing pledged into money. This the government cannot do with the public lands. They are, in deed, tangible; but neither the wishes, the will, nor the power of the government, can change them into money. They are, therefore, not a proper source of revenue upon which the faith or the credit of the nation should be hazarded. Congress seems to have considered them so. A township of land has been given to the "Nation's Guest." Large portions of land have, from time to time, been given to other individuals, and to public institutions. Now, if it be good faith to give away the lands from which the revenue pledged to the sinking fund is derived, it cannot be bad faith to appropriate a portion at least of their proceeds for the support of common schools.

Of converting it into a permanent fund for the sole use and support of common schools in the several States.—Unless children are taught how to govern themselves and how to be governed by law, they will rarely make good citizens. It may be objected that the Constitution does not give to Congress the power to appropriate the proceeds of these lands for the purposes of education. The question is not whether Congress can superintend and control the private schools in the several States, but whether Congress can appropriate the proceeds of these lands for the use and support of those private schools to be applied by and under the exclusive authority of the several States? The only clause in the Constitution which, perhaps, can in any way restrain the general right of appropriating money is that which declares that Congress shall have power "to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, to pay the debts, and to provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States."

Can the proceeds of the public lands, in any sense, be considered a tax, duty, impost, or excise? A tax must be levied, and the obligation to pay it created by the authority of law. The money derived from the public lands is not levied, nor is the obligation to pay it created by law. Both the purchase and the obligation are voluntary. The Constitution gives Congress the power of disposing of the territory and other property of the United States, but it nowhere considers the proceeds of these lands as a revenue to be applied as the proceeds of taxes are directed to be applied. The Military Academy at West Point is an invaluable institution. If Congress has the constitutional power (and we believe no one denies it) to establish such a school, to draw money directly from the public treasury for its support, to pay for teaching a boy mathematics and engineering, it may be difficult to show that Congress has not the power to employ a few acres of the public domain to teach the poor man's son how to read. But did any doubt remain, that doubt would appear to be removed by referring to the facts that a portion of these lands has, from the beginning, been set apart for the purposes of common education, and that other portions of them have been given, from time to time, for the use of colleges, and of deaf and dumb asylums, and for the construction of roads and canals.

Of apportioning this fund among the several States.—Equality of rights and privileges, both as it regards citizens and States, is the fundamental principle of our government. Hence the people, so far as the integrity and independence of the States will permit, are equally represented in the popular branch of the national legislature. Guided by this rule, the committee have no doubt that the apportionment should be made among the several States according to the representation of each in the House of Representatives. This will distribute the fund, and dispense the blessings resulting from it, upon the strictest principles of equality. The ordinary disbursement of the public money does not directly benefit all alike. This apparently partial distribution of the money of the nation depends upon the nature of the objects to which it is applied. An army is stationed where its services are required; a fortress erected where it is wanted; a navy constructed where it can be done the safest and the best; and the money to pay for objects of this sort necessarily goes to those portions of the country only in which the services and labor have been performed. These great objects, which enter so largely into the defence of the nation, are local in their character; and hence it is that some of the States, and many portions of the country, receive no direct benefit from the annual expenditure of millions of the public money. But the proposed appropriation for the support of common schools is for an object general in its nature and benefits. It is an appropriation in which every American citizen has a deep interest, and by the operation and influence of which the ignorant and the wise, the rich and the poor, the government and the governed, will receive direct and lasting benefits. The ignorant and the poor will be aided and enlightened; the wise and the rich estimated and protected; and the government appreciated and defended. Common schools are the nurseries of youth; they are the most universal, as they are the most effectual means of opening the mind; of giving reason the mastery, and of fixing, in habits of sober industry, the rising generations of men. Can, then, a portion of the proceeds of the national domain be expended in any way which will more directly or forcibly come home to the wants and wishes, the business and bosoms, of the people?

The resolution before the committee does not indicate, in terms, whether the principal annually apportioned, or the interest of the principal only, shall be paid over to the States. Nor does it point out any mode, in case the interest only is to be applied, of investing the principal. This part of the subject merits some examination. It seems to be manifest, that the more certain and permanent the fund, the greater and more lasting will be the benefits flowing from it. To apportion and pay the principal annually to the several States will be doing equal and exact justice. But the principal, in that case, would be annually expended. The consequence of this will be, that, as the public domain diminishes by sales until the whole is sold, the fountain whence the fund is to be drawn will be gradually and finally exhausted, and the fund and its benefits, of necessity, diminish and cease altogether. As this domain is not exhaustless, if the principal set apart for the use of these common schools be annually expended, its benefits will be chiefly confined to our own time; but by investing the principal, and dividing the interest only, the fund will accumulate, and its benefits may continue to future ages. The committee, therefore, propose that the sum annually appropriated shall be invested by the United States in some productive fund, the interest or other proceeds of which shall be annually apportioned among the several States according to the representation of each State in the House of Representatives of the United States. This sum may be invested in various ways. It may be invested in bank, canal, or United States stock; or a new stock may be created for the purpose; or portions of the redeemed stock of the United States may, from time to time, be set apart by the commissioners of the sinking fund, uncancelled, and bearing the former or a new rate of interest to meet the object. The general investment of the principal by the United States, and the division of the interest in the manner proposed, seems to be the only way by which all the States and the people can now and hereafter be equally benefited. The annual appropriation should, and may, be so invested as neither to affect for the worst the commercial relations of the country, nor to create artificial distinctions or moneyed aristocracies. It should, and may, be so invested and so applied as to satisfy the moral and intellectual wants of all, while it will supply the pecuniary wants of none. Should the interest, by any particular mode of investing the principal, become an annual charge upon the United States, still, as the whole matter will at all times depend upon the wisdom and pleasure of the States and the people, no man, we believe, can reasonably doubt that they will release this charge the instant its burdens exceed its benefits. Hence, the evils of the measure, if there be any, will be rather negative than positive, and always under the control of the people, who alone are to be benefited or injured by it.

In further discussing this measure, some of its obvious advantages must not be overlooked. It will give some aid to all in the acquisition of learning. It will give efficient aid to the destitute, without which aid they must be left uneducated and in ignorance. It will diffuse, in the quickest and cheapest way, the greatest amount of useful knowledge among the people. It will tend as much as anything else to make young men and old respectable, efficient, good citizens. These considerations, it would seem, cannot fail to awaken the attention of the State legislatures. They surely are not now to learn, for the first time, that the success of good government, the independence of the States, and the permanency of their political institutions, are vitally connected with a well-educated yeomanry. Besides, the fact of there being a permanent fund, the interest of which is to be applied to the glorious purpose of training up the young mind in the way of knowledge and morals, will, in some degree at least, excite in these guardians of State rights a just emulation in promoting, to every practicable end, the great cause of common education.

It is a singular fact in the history of our species that nowhere has common education made any considerable progress among the people without the efficient aid and protection of the government. There is, generally, a prevailing indifference among the illiterate to the cultivation of the mind; were it not so, the poor man, though learned, can rarely instruct his children, because his time is necessarily occupied in earning their bread; and the ignorant man, though rich, cannot do it, because he is himself untaught. In other countries multitudes of the human race successively live and die as illiterate as they were born; and in our own favored land, with all the liberal patronage, private and public, which learning receives, we are not wholly exempt from these lamentable examples. Under a government like ours there should nowhere be left masses of mind, illiterate and humbled, over which, in an evil hour, some master-spirit may exercise a fatal control. Ignorance is the bane of liberty. Ordinarily, conspiracies and treasons are executed by the ignorant. These instruments of unholy ambition, however, are not selected from schools where letters and morals are taught. Are not, then, the national and State legislatures under the strongest obligations to the people of this country to provide and apply the means whereby every child may have the opportunity, in these nurseries of the mind, of acquiring some knowledge of letters, and of the various duties he owes to his country and his God?

It will moreover bind, by an additional and a stronger tie, the people to the States, and the States to the Union. There is something in this tie of mind, affection, and blood. It attaches itself to every father of a family, and to children's children. It successively connects with the present each succeeding generation. Common education can be estimated only in proportion as its necessities and advantages are felt; and as the same number of children, as there are dollars annually distributed from this fund, may receive, with proper management, about six months' common schooling, will not the people, witnessing these moral and intellectual improvements, look with intenser interest to their respective State legislatures as the immediate dispensers of these benefits? And will not the legislatures of each State, viewing the increase of common schools, and the augmented amount of schooling, and perceiving their benign and salutary effects upon the mind, morals, and habits of the rising generation, look with increased steadiness to the federal head, whence these blessings flow? Common schools, of themselves, will not multiply, nor learning spread; means and opportunity must be afforded. By affording them, schools will multiply, learning spread, and ignorance, idleness, and vice gradually give way to intelligence, industry, and virtue. Examples of these cheering results are not wanting. Let any man compare the calendar of profligacy and crimes among a given population where no schools have been kept, with that among an equal population where the means of common education have been abundant, and the great difference in favor of the latter cannot fail to convince him of the necessity of these initiatory institutions. The States and the people, perceiving these results, and learning from experience that the influence, respectability, and power of a State are in proportion to the intelligence and soundness of its citizens, will cherish the federal hand that aids them, and cling with stronger affection to the governments of their choice.

The committee are not unaware that there is, in this pecuniary connexion, a seeming tendency to produce an undue dependence of the States upon the federal government. They are persuaded, however, that a little examination will dissipate this cause of alarm. The strength of the tie, and the degree of the dependence, it is fair to presume, will always be in exact proportion to the actual benefits resulting from the proposed fund. If the fund be not beneficial it can have no influence, good or bad. Suppose great benefits to flow from it, what are they? Shall we hereafter look for them in the increase ignorance and subdued spirits of our fellow-citizens? or shall we find and feel them everywhere in the rapid progress of education, and in the improvement of mind and morals? If it be true, as it unquestionably is, that the safety and success of our political institutions depend absolutely upon the intelligence and virtue of the people; and if it be true, also, that the direct effect of the proposed fund will be to increase that intelligence and virtue, then it is equally true that there can be no undue dependence of the people or the States upon the federal government. As these benefits increase, so also will increase the ability and means of detecting and resisting the encroachments of power. Although each part of our political system is dependent upon the other, yet there is a wide difference between that dependence which springs from mean or guilty motives, and which has for its end the union and strength, the happiness and glory of a generous people. And whatever other men may be disposed to do, that portion of the people to whom our governments, whether federal or State, in prosperity or adversity, must look for protection and defence, if intelligent and virtuous, will never do slavish homage, or tamely surrender their liberties to any earthly power.

The proposed measure, the committee are also induced to believe, will have a most salutary effect in respect to the public domain itself, and all the great interests connected with it. There is much apathy in the public mind in regard to the value and importance of these lands. Strong indications are manifested to reduce their price, and to bring the whole into market as speedily as practicable, and without any reference to the existing demand for them. Should this happen, the consequence will be, to depreciate the fair average value of land, whether cultivated or uncultivated, by putting more into the market than could be occupied perhaps in fifty or an hundred years to come; to fling the best of them into the hands of moneyed men and speculators by their cheapness and the prospect of gain; and to retard cultivation and population by the high prices at which they would be held. The committee think the proposed measure will produce a counteracting interest—an interest which, while it guards the public domain from sudden depreciation on the one hand, and from speculation on the other, will induce a more rapid and a sounder population.

There is another consideration connected with this subject which the committee cannot pass over in silence. Our government was the first successful effort among men to establish rational liberty. Our fathers instituted and secured, upon the broadest principles of equality, representation, trial by jury, freedom of speech, freedom of the press, and religious toleration; and to this hour it stands a proud example to the world, unsurpassed, unequalled. The young and interesting republics of Spanish America have, perhaps, come as near to it as the condition and habits of their people would permit. Still there is this marked difference: they retain in some degree the old connexion of church and state. They have an established religion. Now, if any one proposition in politics or morals be more susceptible of demonstration than another, it would seem to be this, that, where any religion is established by law, there neither the tongue nor the conscience can be free. As ours was the first, so it may be the last hope of civil liberty. No other considerable place remains on the globe where a second effort can be made under like auspices. The continents and the islands of the sea are mostly inhabited by men born under governments and brought up under the influence of principles and habits, with a few exceptions, utterly hostile to our notions of freedom. Since this is so, our obligations do not end with ourselves. We owe much to the great cause of liberty. This debt we can discharge the best and the most honorably by securing well the foundation and superstructure of our own liberties; thus giving to the human family the influence of a perfect example of civil freedom. The foundation of our political institutions, it is well known, rests in the will of the people, and the safety of the whole superstructure, its temple and altar, daily and hourly depend upon the discreet exercise of that will. How, then, is this will to be corrected, chastened, subdued? By education—that education the first rudiments of which can be acquired only in common schools. How are the millions of American citizens to be enabled to compare their government and institutions with those of other countries; to estimate the civil and political privileges and blessings they enjoy; and to decide, understandingly, whether they ought or ought not to protect and defend the Constitution under which they live? By education. Has the legislature of each State provided all the means that are wanted to this end? Is there nothing more to be done? Are all sufficiently educated? There are some wealthy men, and many a poor man, in our land, whose family and fireside have never yet been cheered by the light and benefits of common education. Is there, then, no necessity for the proposed measure? Its advantages must be admitted. That there are heads and hearts among us waiting for instruction, cultivation, improvement, will not be denied: and that the means are still wanted (through the inability or indifference of individuals and of the States) to accomplish this great purpose cannot be doubted. Why, then, delay? We are at peace with the world. Our burdens are light. We have money to meet all the engagements and exigencies of the government, and some to spare.

But, if need be, push not so rapidly, nor so far, the costly defences of the country. The tooth of time will wear away the granite. Our strong fortresses and gallant ships will decay; but the young mind and heart, expanded, enlightened, and disciplined in common schools, will grow brighter and sounder by age. Besides, our reliance under God for protection is upon the arm of flesh. The impassable rampart to our liberties and institutions must be composed of intelligent heads and sound hearts. Our panoply, in peace or war, must be the heaving bosoms and vigorous arms of enlightened and virtuous freemen. Shall we not, then, afford to all, especially to the ignorant, the poor, the destitute, the means at our command,—the only means perhaps by which they can ever acquire knowledge? Who are first to be benefited? The children of farmers, mechanics, and manufacturers. Where do we look, and where must we look, for the moral and physical power of the nation? To the agricultural and mechanic interests—to the handicraftsmen of the land. Unsoundness here will be fatal. It is rottenness at the heart. Is knowledge power? Does our power, do our liberties, do all we hold dear, depend upon the WILL of our fellow-men, whether that will be left to the guidance of enlightened reason, or of untempered ignorance? And shall we not provide the means we have at hand of teaching the ignorant and destitute to range themselves beneath the eagle, and among the defenders of freedom? Or shall we neglect them altogether, and leave them to be schooled and disciplined by the Catilines and Cæsars of the day? Believing, therefore, that a portion of the proceeds of the public lands may be spared; that the diffusion of common education among the people is demanded by the highest considerations of national glory and safety; and that Congress possesses both the power and the right to appropriate them for this purpose, the committee submit a bill.

19TH CONGRESS.]

No. 506.

[1ST SESSION.

EXAMINATIONS OF LAND OFFICES AND COMPENSATION OF RECEIVERS FOR TRANSPORTING FUNDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 28, 1826.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 28, 1826.

SIR: I was honored with your communication of the 10th instant, making inquiry whether so much of the 14th section of the act of Congress of March 26, 1804, as relates to the examination of land offices might not be repealed without prejudice to the treasury; and also asking my opinion whether an additional compensation ought not to be given to receivers of public moneys in the several land offices for the transportation and depositing of those moneys, and by what rule such compensation should be fixed.

In reply, I beg leave to state that I believe the examination of the land offices under the law in question is, upon the whole, productive of advantages sufficient to counterbalance the expense attending it, and that, consequently, its repeal at this time would not be advisable. That the manner in which this duty is performed may be fully before the committee, I enclose herewith a copy of the instructions lately issued by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, bearing date the 24th instant, to one of the examiners appointed since the commencement of the present year. These instructions are such as are usually given to all the examiners.

In regard to the second point embraced in your letter, I beg to state that I am decidedly of opinion that additional compensation ought to be given to the receivers of public moneys for transporting and depositing those moneys. The allowance might be regulated by the Secretary of the Treasury; so, however, that it in no case exceeded one-half per cent. upon the amount deposited. This was the opinion of the late Secretary of the Treasury, as contained in a report to the House of Representatives on the 17th of February of last year, in which I entirely concur.

I have the honor to remain, with great respect, your obedient servant,

RICHARD RUSH.

Hon. DAVID BARTON, Chairman of the Land Committee of the Senate.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, General Land Office, February 24, 1826.

SIR: By the 14th section of the act entitled "An act making provision for the disposal of the public lands in the Indiana Territory, and for other purposes," passed March 26, 1804, it was made the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to cause, at least once every year, the books of the land offices to be examined, and the balance of public moneys in the hands of the several receivers of public moneys to be ascertained.

Agreeably to this provision of law, you have been appointed to examine the several land offices in the States of Illinois and Missouri, and Territory of Arkansas.

As it will seldom occur that your examination of any one office will be completed on the last day of a month, and as the balances due by receivers to be exhibited in your report should be stated in such a manner as will admit of a comparison with the monthly returns made by the receivers to the Treasury Department, you will therefore be pleased to state in your report the balances due on the last day of the month preceding that in which the examination shall be made, and also the balances due at the date of your examination.

Herewith is transmitted a statement showing the balances due on the date of the last examination of each of the offices you will examine.

You will form an account between _____, the receiver, and the United States, debiting him with the balance exhibited in the enclosed statement, and with all the moneys received by him since that period, and up to the date of your examination, and crediting him with all the items of cash deposited into bank to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States, drafts of the treasury which have been paid by him, the salary and commission of himself and the register, the incidental expenses of both offices; in short, all items to his credit which appear on his books, and for which he shall produce vouchers.

You will then take an account of all moneys in his hands, specifying distinctly the number of gold and silver coins, and the different species of bank notes, and ascertain the coincidence between the cash on hand produced to you, and the balance which you will have previously ascertained to be due.

You will examine the journal and the ledger of the receiver, and state to what period the entries of the former are posted into the latter; and make a comparison between the entries on the books of the receiver and those of the register, and see how far they agree. This comparison is expected to be only as regards results, as it will be impossible for you to enter into much detail.

You will examine the several books of the register's office, and see whether they wear the appearance of neatness and accuracy; also how far the journal entries of his office have been posted into his ledger.

You are requested very particularly to examine into the mode of marking the land sold in the township maps, and most particularly to urge on the registers the necessity of great punctuality in designating on the maps each tract sold so soon as the money is paid by the purchasers, in order to prevent the unpleasant mistakes which in some offices too frequently occur in selling the same land twice; which mistakes might be entirely prevented by observing punctuality in marking their maps.

You are requested also to observe the manner in which each one of the books is kept as to the handwriting; whether they are regularly brought up; also whether any additional supply of books is wanted in the offices respectively. The books alluded to are the tract books, in which all the tracts in the district subject to sale are entered in the first instance, and in which the land sold is noted as the sales are made from time to time. The entries in this book ought to correspond with the tracts sold as marked in the maps. The sales books, in which the sales are noted in the order of their dates, are also to be examined. In this book no blank spaces are admissible between the entries. You will note the necessary particulars respecting those books in your report, and distinctly state whether the tract book and the maps correspond.

On May 31, 1825, a circular letter was addressed to the several registers and receivers, a copy of which is enclosed, requesting them to procure such bookcases and desks, or boxes, as the case might be, as were actually necessary for the due preservation and safe-keeping of the public books and papers. Finding that many officers had misconstrued the intention of that letter, and had procured writing desks for their personal accommodation, which were not authorized and cannot be allowed, I was under the necessity of correcting the misapprehension by a second circular letter, dated August 20, 1825, a copy of which is also enclosed. I wish you to ascertain how far the instructions have been complied with; whether the cases and desks provided for the accommodation of books and papers are such as answer the purpose, and whether the papers are properly arranged; also whether the instructions as to binding the township plats has been complied with in the manner pointed out in the circular, and whether the charges for the articles procured are reasonable.

In all cases where the accounts for articles procured under the instructions have been necessarily returned for any cause which rendered the payment of them inadmissible, I will thank you to inquire into them, and certify your opinion as to their reasonableness.

A circular letter, dated the 22d instant, has been issued by the Secretary of the Treasury to the several receivers of public moneys in relation to the making of deposits into bank of public moneys in their hands. I will thank you to report whether these instructions have been received by them and duly attended to.

Your report will consist of two papers, to be marked No. 1 and No. 2.

No. 1. In account between the receiver and the United States, in which you will debit him as follows:

1st. With the balance due at the end of the last examination.

2d. With all the moneys received by him since, and to the end of your examination; the amounts of money received to be stated for each month, distinguishing between the moneys received under the cash and credit systems at these offices, which were in operation prior to July 1, 1820, when the system of selling lands on a credit was abolished.

The distinction between the cash and credit offices you will perceive is made in the statement sent herewith by the words "cash," "credit," marked opposite the offices respectively.

In the same report you will credit the receiver with all the items to his credit which appear on his books, and for which he will produce to you vouchers, or refer you to vouchers transmitted to the treasury in any instances when the duplicate of a voucher may have been transmitted to supply the loss of an original.

These credits will consist of the following items, to be stated by months:

1st. Payments into bank to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States, and payment of treasury drafts, specifying the number of each draft.

2d. Salaries of the register and receiver.

3d. Commissions of the register and receiver.

4th. Incidental expenses of both offices.

After the credits for the last month of your examination you will add a 5th item. "Balance due by the receiver, as ascertained by this report, and which, after counting all the moneys in his hands, I find to consist of the following denominations of money, viz:"

Gold, foreign... }
Gold, domestic. } Specifying the principal coins, whether eagles, half, quarter, doubloons, &c.
Silver }

Total $

Bank paper, as follows:

Notes of the _____ Bank.

Notes of the _____ Bank.

Notes of the _____ Bank.

Total..... $

No. 2 is to relate exclusively to the books and papers of the two offices; the period to which they have been respectively brought up; the arrangement of the papers into cases; the binding of the township plats, as required by the circular letter sent herewith; and the several particulars before noted.

In this paper you will refer to the registers' and receivers' offices, respectively, under distinct heads.

I will also thank you to examine into the coincidence between the amount of balances stated to be due from individuals on the books of the receiver with that stated on the books of the register of each of the credit system offices, and state the result in your report No. 2.

Enclosed is a circular letter addressed to the register and receiver of each of the offices you will examine, requesting them to afford you all the necessary facilities in making your examination.

With great respect,

G. G.

No. 507.

[1ST SESSION.

APPLICATION OF ILLINOIS FOR GRANT OF LAND FOR A SEAT OF JUSTICE IN GALLATIN COUNTY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE MARCH 1, 1826.

STATE OF ILLINOIS, Executive Department, January 30, 1826.

GENTLEMEN: By request I transmit you a memorial addressed by the general assembly of this State to the Congress of the United States, asking its assent that one hundred acres of the tract of land granted to Illinois for the saline in Gallatin county may be given to said county for the purpose of locating, in a central position, the seat of justice of the county.

I am, respectfully,

EDWARD COLES.

J. B. THOMAS and E. K. KANE, Esqrs., Senators in Congress from Illinois.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the general assembly of the States of Illinois respectfully represents: That the said legislature have passed a law at their present session authorizing and giving their assent to the location of the seat of justice of Gallatin county, and within the saline reserve, and the lessee of the tract on which said location may be made, under and in pursuance of said law, having given his assent thereto, and executed a relinquishment of his title thereto; for such purpose your memorialists respectfully request that your honorable body will pass a law making a donation of one hundred acres within the said saline reserve, and as shall fall within the proposed location, so as to enable the citizens of said county to establish their seat of justice on such reserve; and that for such purpose a survey may be made of such tract as the commissioners under said law of the State may select, so as to enable them to lay off the same into lots; and your memorialists will forever pray.

DAVID BLACKWELL,
Speaker of the House of Representatives
RAPHAEL WIDEN,
Speaker of the Senate pro tempore.

Originated in the house of representatives.

CHAS. DUNN, Clerk.

To the Hon. Elias K. Kane and Jesse B. Thomas, senators, and Daniel P. Cook, representative, in the Congress of the United States:

The undersigned, citizens of the county of Gallatin, in the State of Illinois, having understood that the Congress of the United States have recently been memorialized by the legislature of the State to grant to this county a hundred acres of land within the tract reserved by Congress for the use of the Ohio and Wabash saline, for the purpose of removing the seat of justice of said county thereto, respectfully beg leave to remonstrate against such grant being made, or rather, the consent of Congress being given.

The county of Gallatin is one of the oldest in the State, and was formed under the Territorial government, and by the act of formation the county seat was established at Shawneetown, a place laid out under the authority of the United States, and very eligibly situated on the bank of the Ohio river, about ten miles below the mouth of the Wabash river. But as no public square had been reserved in the original survey of the town by government, a number of public-spirited individuals, at the sale of lots in the year 1814, joined together and purchased, by paying the first instalment thereon, two contiguous lots for that purpose, and dedicated them to the county as the site for the public buildings, not doubting but that Congress, when the matter should be properly represented to them, would remit the remaining instalments, and grant the lots to the county in absolute ownership, which, after repeated applications of many of the undersigned, was done by an act passed on March 3, 1823, entitled "An act to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to remit the instalments due on certain lots in Shawneetown, in the State of Illinois." On these lots, thus become the public square, and property of the county, a contract has been made to erect a court-house and jail, under the authority of a special act of the legislature of the State, passed January 17, 1825, for the speedy completion of which, in a style suitable to the extent and respectability of the county, the contractor has given satisfactory security.

The removal of our seat of justice, therefore, at this time, would probably involve the county in great difficulty and embarrassment, and defeat, besides, the munificence of Congress, as displayed in the above-recited act. It would also greatly retard, if not entirely check, the growth and prosperity of Shawneetown, where the United States yet hold several hundred very valuable lots, and whence, from the sales of others, they have heretofore received into the public treasury many thousands of dollars.

Nor would the removal of the seat of justice to the centre of the county be otherwise desirable to any portion of our fellow-citizens, further than as it would be brought simply to the centre, whereas it is now situated on the Ohio boundary of the county, yet central as between the extremes of that boundary, and has the advantages of navigation, a yet thriving town, and an enterprising population.

The saline reservation is a tract of country containing about four townships of land, and is situated directly in the heart of the county. It would, therefore, be about in the centre of this tract of country, which must forever remain uninhabited, except by salt-makers, or short leases, uncultivated, except for timber, and unsold, except with the consent of Congress and the State, that the centre of the county would be found. The soil is generally very thin; the country quite unimproved, and offering no inducements to settlement, except to persons immediately engaged in the manufacture of salt.

The undersigned are aware that many of these arguments would have been more properly used in resisting the memorial before our own legislature. But as the act providing for the removal of our seat of justice makes the consent and grant of Congress a condition precedent to its taking effect, it is hoped they will not be considered as altogether impertinent. Many of the undersigned were not apprised that the legislature of the State would be solicited on this subject until that body had finally acted upon it; and others, though aware that petitions were in circulation in remote parts of the county, thought it unnecessary at the time to make any efforts against them, believing that, as the session at which the law was passed and the memorial adopted was an extraordinary one, convened for a special purpose, no business of a local nature would be taken up; and trusted confidently in the good sense and justice of the next general assembly, before whom it was designed to lay a remonstrance, to reject the application.

The undersigned have thus been taken completely by surprise; and though it is firmly believed that a large majority of the county, even with its present boundaries, if candidly appealed to, would give their suffrages in favor of keeping the seat of justice on the river, yet the legislature, acting from the ex parte representations before them, have passed the act, and thereby imposed upon the undersigned the only alternative, of appealing directly to Congress to arrest so ruinous and so unadvised a measure.

APPLICATION TO CONFIRM THE TRANSFER OF A CHEROKEE RESERVATION.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 1, 1826.

Mr. VINTON, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of John Thompson and Elizabeth Thompson, his wife, reported:

That it appears, from the petition and papers accompanying it, that John Thompson was the head of an Indian family, who took a life estate in a reservation of six hundred and forty acres of land, with a reversion in fee simple to his children, under the eighth article of the treaty of July 8, 1817, between the United States and the Cherokee nation of Indians, subject to revert to the United States in case of removal from the reservation. The petitioners state that they are insolvent, and indebted to one William H. Salmon, of South Carolina, to whom they have assigned said section of six hundred and forty acres of land in satisfaction of his claim against them. They exhibit an assignment or transfer of an estate in fee simple, with a covenant of general warranty for themselves, their heirs, executors, and administrators, to said Salmon, his heirs and assigns, and pray that Congress would grant a patent of the land to Salmon in fee simple upon his paying the government price for the lands. Salmon is not a party to this application, and whether it is made with his knowledge, or at his instigation, does not appear, and is a matter of conjecture only, from the nature of the petition and the character of the evidence adduced in its support.

In looking at this application, an obvious and conclusive objection against it presents itself, arising from the form in which it is brought here. If the case made by the petitioner were a proper subject of relief, it would still be altogether irregular and anomalous to legislate upon it, on the application of third persons. In this case the person for whose benefit we are called upon to act is not a party to the petition. But waiving the form of the application, and admitting the facts stated in the petition to be true to their fullest extent, the committee are still of opinion the assignment is void, and that Congress has no power to give it validity. The attempt to transfer away the reversionary interest of the children of Thompson is clearly a fraud upon them, in case there are any children. That interest being secured to them under the treaty, it is not in the power of the United States to annul the title or give it any new direction. So far, then, as the children are to be affected, the grant to Salmon is of no avail; and so far as the grantors and the United States are concerned, the committee are also of opinion it is void, it being the evident intent of the treaty that those Indians to whom the reservations were made under that article of the treaty should not alienate but should reside upon their lands, which is demonstrated by the proviso in that article, "that, in case of removal, the land should revert to the United States." Should the petitioners surrender to Salmon, the right of the United States would attach under the proviso. The attempt to purchase this land, to say nothing of the suspicious circumstance of the Indians being the petitioners, is in direct violation of what your committee conceive to be the policy of the treaty and of the rights secured by it.

The committee therefore recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioners ought not to be granted.

APPLICATION OF LOUISIANA FOR LAND TO INHABITANTS OF POINT COUPEE FOR EDUCATION AND REPAIRING LEVEES, AND FOR HOUSE AND LOT TO THE PARISH OF PLAQUEMINES FOR A COURT AND PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 6, 1826.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled :

The general assembly of the State of Louisiana respectfully represent: That the inhabitants of Point Coupee, within this State, a large and respectable class of the ancient population, sensibly impressed with the importance of education, have represented to this body their intention of establishing a public seminary of learning within their settlement; that the only obstacle to their progress in this useful undertaking has been the want of a suitable lot of ground, conveniently situated to the inhabitants, to fix the aforesaid seminary; that there is a tract of this description containing one hundred superficial arpents belonging to the public domain, and formerly an appurtenance to a military fort under the Spanish government, for a donation of which, for the aforesaid purposes, the said inhabitants have petitioned the general assembly to apply to your honorable body.

The general assembly further represent that the tract being small, the object highly useful, and as there are examples of the liberality of Congress in granting to public uses lands that were applied to the same objects under the former government of the country, they indulge the hope that the tract solicited will be granted by the national legislature to the inhabitants of Point Coupee for the purposes aforesaid.

They also state that the inhabitants of Point Coupee, situated near a remarkable bend of the Mississippi, have been compelled for many years to keep up and annually repair a levee of more than ordinary magnitude, in front of another tract of land belonging to the United States, of forty acres wide, on the river; that, otherwise, the plantations of the whole settlements, as well as the public lands for a great number of leagues in extent, would be constantly overflowed; that, in consequence of the forty-acre tract aforesaid being subject to falling in on the river, it causes much damage to the levee, which had been made at the expense and by the labor of the inhabitants; that if, however, this tract belonged to the county of Point Coupee instead of the public, such would be the increased interest among the inhabitants to apply its avails to the keeping up the levee aforesaid as equally to protect their own plantations by a strong and durable levee, as well as to secure from future overflows the immense tract of public lands now exposed to annual inundation. The general assembly, therefore, sensibly impressed with the situation of the aforesaid settlement, beg leave to solicit a donation of the aforesaid tract of forty acres front, at the Point Coupee bend, to the county of Point Coupee, for the use of the inhabitants thereof in maintaining and keeping up the aforesaid levee.

Resolved, That copies of the foregoing memorial and this resolution be transmitted by the governor to each of our senators and representatives in Congress, and that they be requested to use their best exertions to obtain from Congress the donations solicited in the foregoing appeal.

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives of the State of Louisiana in general assembly convened, That the senators of this State in Congress be required, and our representatives invited, to solicit the general government to grant to the inhabitants of the parish of Plaquemines a lot of ground measuring three hundred feet square, together with the brick building thereon, for the reception of a parish court and for the keeping of a public school in said parish; which lot of ground formed a part of the quarantine ground established in the said parish in the year 1818.

DEFENCE OF PROCEEDINGS OF COMMISSIONERS FOR ADJUSTING LAND CLAIMS IN EAST FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, BY THE COMMITTEE OF PUBLIC LANDS, MARCH 6, 1826.

WASHINGTON, Monday, March 6, 1826.

SIR: Having been informed by the Hon. Joseph M. White that impressions unfavorable to the commissioners of East Florida had been made by a recent publication in one of the public prints of an extract from a letter purporting to have been written by a gentleman travelling through Florida, and also by the statements of certain individuals remonstrating against the continuance of the board, I feel that it is my duty to make a reply to your department, and refute, so far as in my power, such illiberal imputations. The most important complaint seems to be that the board have, in their adjudications, permitted counsel to consume the time of the board in argument (which made it necessary to have counsel on both sides) which ought to have been devoted to the adjudication of the claims, and this for the purpose of prolonging as much as possible the existence of the board. It is true that most of the claims are advocated by professional men, who claim the right of being heard on such questions as might arise, either as to the evidence or the merits of the grants themselves. That the exercise of this right, to present the cases in the most favorable light to the board, may in some measure have procrastinated and delayed the progress of the commission is admitted; but that it was a privilege that could not be denied or withheld, and is incident to the very nature of those claims, must be asserted. This has been alleged as the reason why the whole of the business has not been concluded.

The history of the commission since its establishment will prove that the translators employed could not by any industry translate more than they have done, and the proceedings of the board in no case have interrupted that part of their duty; that the business of investigating and probing into the secrets of Spanish grants, and bringing to light frauds and forgeries, would not be popular with persons interested; and that those who were the means of detecting and exposing such nefarious transactions would thereby make to themselves enemies, will be readily admitted, and was reasonably expected; that there are cases of a doubtful and suspicious character, and which have been held back by the claimants in the hope that the business might fall into more favorable hands, is confidently believed; and hence a solicitude for a change was calculated on.

Should those insinuations have weight, I conceive that it will be but justice to compare the report and labors of the commissioners of East Florida with the report of other commissioners, and see how far they have fallen short of others for the same length of time; and further, to examine the rules and principles which have governed them in their decisions; and, should the subject be examined according to the said rules, the commissioners of East Florida feel satisfied that they will be released from such ungenerous imputation.

I have the honor to be, sir, your very obedient, humble servant,

DAVIS FLOYD,

Member of the late Board of Land Commissioners for East Florida.

Hon. RICHARD RUSH, Secretary of the Treasury.

P. S.—I regret that General Call did not file with your committee the documents to refute the imputation of Mr. Hamilton, that I had been employed as counsel in land cases the titles of which were before the commissioners.

D. F.

SIR: It is with no small degree of embarrassment that I feel myself compelled, as a member of the late board of land commissioners for East Florida, to assume the responsibility of giving more in detail a further explanation and comment on the report recently made by them to your department; and this embarrassment arises chiefly from the circumstance that, owing to a slight difference of opinion among the members of the board, no detailed report could be framed which would meet the views of each, and which I considered would be sufficient to show the course pursued by them. It will be unnecessary for me to include in the explanations now made matter which has already been communicated in former reports, except when, from further examination, I may be able to shed additional light on the subject, or show reasons why the rules and principles laid down in the first report for the government of our adjudications should be materially changed in their import.

No. 1 contains a register of claims to lands not exceeding three thousand five hundred acres, which have been confirmed by the board, and will be found to consist of royal titles, concessions without conditions, concessions with conditions annexed, and orders of survey. A royal title is the highest title known by any law, usage, or principle existing in the province of East Florida. It was designed to convey the fee simple to the grantee; was usually made by the acting governors of the province in the name of the King; contained the usual words of perpetuity, and generally had the metes and bounds specially set forth; and, although it is believed there are a few exceptions, yet this title may be said to be answerable to the patent issued by our government. A concession without a condition seems to differ from a royal title only in this: most of the royal titles have the metes and bounds designated, while the concession has seldom any identity other than that the grantee is entitled to the quantity of land named in the concession, which is conceded in absolute property; but when properly surveyed and certified, the concession was perfected by the royal title. In concessions with conditions it was always expected by the Spanish authorities that the grantee would comply with them, and not until then could he obtain a royal title; yet, in the proof of conditions performed, it is believed that they were never very rigorous. Orders of survey were generally predicated upon concessions previously granted, yet a few have come before the board that were not, but were made by the deputy governor (as he states in his testimony) under a verbal order from the governor. In no case, however, has the quantity, when confirmed, exceeded six hundred and forty acres, and not then until the claimant proved that he had been in the actual possession and cultivation of the land at and previous to February 27, 1819. In deciding on the cases comprised under the above heads, the board has in all cases of royal titles and concessions without condition, when the documents relating to them were found among the archives of the country, and nothing in behalf of the United States could be alleged against them, and when the quantity did not exceed one thousand acres, considered itself bound to grant certificates of confirmation to the claimants; and in all cases over one thousand and not exceeding three thousand five hundred acres, when the party, in addition to the above, proved that he was in the actual possession and cultivation of the land at the time of the cession of Florida to the United States, the board likewise considers itself bound to grant a certificate of confirmation to the claimant; and also, in addition to the above, in the case of a concession with conditions, when the claimant proved that the conditions had been substantially performed.

No. 2 contains a register of claims not exceeding three thousand five hundred acres, which, although found to be valid Spanish grants, have not been confirmed for want of proof of actual possession and cultivation at the time of the late cession. They will be found to consist of royal titles, &c., as in No. 1.

No. 3 contains a register of claims over three thousand five hundred acres, which have been found among the public archives of the country, and have been ascertained by the commissioners to be valid Spanish grants, and have been reported to Congress for confirmation. In reporting these cases, it is necessary to state that the commissioners, although this subject has occupied their continued and special examination, have been unable to arrive at any conclusion calculated to alter the rules laid down in their former report, by which their adjudications had been regulated and governed. From the most correct information which we have received, it is believed that rules and regulations for the granting of lands different from those in other Spanish provinces were established in East Florida. In East Florida the governors seem to have exercised a discretionary power in granting away the public land for various purposes, and to all such as applied to them for it; and the commissioners of East Florida have been much perplexed in endeavoring to find out the limits of their authority on this subject, but hitherto their researches and endeavors have been fruitless and in vain. That the governors have uniformly exercised a discretionary power is clearly to be inferred from their acts. The first governor after the cession of the province to Spain by Great Britain in 1783 made no grants for land, or but few, and those only for small quantities; the one who succeeded him, Governor Quesada, established and published rules and regulations for the distribution of the public lands, one of which was the appointment of a commissioner, who, with the assistance of a surveyor, was specially intrusted with the distribution of public lands. This they did in the following proportions: to the head of each family one hundred acres, and to other members of the family, whether of either sex, white or black, fifty acres; yet, notwithstanding, we find Governor Quesada making grants in violation of those rules. Governor White, the successor of Quesada, established different rules and regulations, reduced the quantity allowed to the heads and other members of the family, and added the condition of ten years' possession before the party was entitled to a royal title; he is also found to depart, in some cases, from the rules laid down by himself, and likewise by Governor Quesada. There is also a distinguishing peculiarity in the phraseology of the royal titles, for they invariably recite a right in the governors to grant the land, from which it is clearly to be inferred that the governors considered themselves entitled to and did exercise a discretionary power of granting the public land to such as made application for it, and in such quantities as they conceived tended most to the advancement of the population and improvement of the country. An examination of the correspondence between the King and the intendants shows that the latter were particularly charged, especially in East Florida, to promote the population and improvement of the provinces under their charge, by all the prudential means in their power. To this avowed end and purpose we find all the governors giving grants of land for agriculture, for pasture, for grist and saw-mills, for tanneries, and finally, for losses and military services, each of which seem to come within the scope of their discretionary powers; and I think (with a few exceptions) that, until about the year 1814, they may be considered to have been regulated by a sound discretion, bounded by reason and justice. About the year 1814, either from the expectation that the country would in a short time be transferred to the United States, or from some other cause unknown, the governors of Florida lost sight of those great leading objects and principles of their sovereign, and were apparently regulated only by a wish to satisfy the avarice of all who applied to them for lands. There is one rule which it is considered it would not be unreasonable to apply in the adjustment of those claims; it is, that where an application was made for a grant of land as a remuneration for meritorious services, or other object embraced in the general policy of the government, and the grant was made accordingly, and the same individual made a second application for remuneration for the same services, which was also conceded, that it is but just to consider that the first was full and ample unless otherwise expressed in the grant itself; and that the subsequent grant was an assumption of power not warranted by the laws and usages nor the policy of the Spanish government. The commissioners have not considered themselves authorized to do more than prepare the cases in such manner as to enable Congress to come at the merits of the claims; indeed, it would seem too much like arrogance in them to point out rules to govern Congress, when their limited means of information are considered.

No. 4 contains a register of claims under the donation act of 1824, not exceeding six hundred and forty acres, which have been confirmed by the board upon satisfactory proof that the claimant was twenty-one years of age, the head of a family, and had never received from the British or Spanish governments any written evidence of a title to land, and was actually settled on and cultivated the same at and previous to February 27, 1819.

No. 5 contains the register of claims under the aforesaid act, which have been reported to Congress on the ground that the settlement was made between February 27, 1819, and July 17, 1821, the time of the change of governments.

No. 6 contains the register of claims derived from the Spanish government by written evidence, which have been ascertained to be valid Spanish grants, and have been reported to Congress on the ground that they were undefined in quantity.

No. 7 contains the register of claims not exceeding three thousand five hundred acres, founded on British grants, which have been confirmed by the board as valid on proof of their recognition by the late Spanish authorities, and of cases over one thousand where actual possession and cultivation has been shown.

No. 8 contains a register of town lots and out-lots founded on actual possession and occupation previous to February 22, 1819, and were confirmed upon proof that the claimants were in actual possession at and previous to the day and year aforesaid, by and with consent of the Spanish government.

No. 9 contains a register of a class of cases differently situated from all the foregoing, and hence entitled to different rules in their adjudication. Those contained in the foregoing numbers were regularly filed in the proper office, and were entitled to all the legal presumption in their favor which applies to records in our government; these grants were found in the possession of the claimants, while no trace could be found of their existence in the archives of the country, which circumstance, coupled with the notoriously bad character of the officer whose name and official certificate they all bear, cast a shade of suspicion over them, which applies to all those similarly situated. The board of commissioners, in adjudicating upon them, have required the claimant to prove the execution of them and to account for their not being among the archives of the country, although in many cases the proof is pretty positive; yet, from the situation and circumstances of the numerous cases of a similar character, it has not been of that description which is calculated to make an impression on the mind of the fact sworn to. The witnesses, although by the rules of evidence they are perfectly competent, yet, from their interest in the principle sought to be established, and on other grants of a like character, their credibility is much lessened. The board has considered itself justified, nay, bound by a sense of duty, to relax in some cases the rules of evidence; otherwise, many frauds and forgeries would remain undetected. That there are cases of that description is not to be doubted, but it will be found by the existing rules of evidence in courts of law, to be extremely difficult, if not impossible, to detect them. The board has used all the means in its power without as yet being able to report on any but a few. Indeed, such has been the reluctance in submitting these cases, the board was unable to pass an act upon them from an alleged ability and intention of the parties to remove the suspicion entertained of their validity. That many of the grants which have been withheld by the parties for the purpose of producing additional testimony are good and valid I would not be willing to deny, but that others are shrouded in doubt and suspicion I feel bound to assert. The commissioners, in reporting a grant as a valid Spanish grant and recommending it for confirmation, do not wish to be understood as intimating to what extent it ought to be confirmed; the known ability of the land committee and their superior knowledge of the various laws relative to the distribution of public lands in all the provinces of North America, together with the distinguished liberality of Congress, forbid it.

The circumstance of the board having been at all times pressed with business for its decision will afford a reason why many of the more important cases were not, by some coercive measure of the board, brought forward and determined. We conceived it just to give a reasonable time for preparing testimony, &c.

I would remark, further, that from reports which were circulating in the country, and from the instructions received from the President, we have been extremely cautious in passing on any grant until, on the part of the United States, every kind of examination had been made, not only of the original records and papers in the office, but even to inquire of the old inhabitants whether they knew of any circumstance which went to impeach the particular grant named. This duty devolved on the district attorney; and in no case whatever has the board finally passed on it until answered by that officer that he had nothing, or nothing further, to allege on the part of the United States.

It will be found by an examination of the cases reported, that to each is an opinion, stating, as concisely as practicable, the facts relating to it, and the deductions drawn from them. This course was thought better than to arrange any large number of claims together, and give an opinion embracing all, as, although similar to a certain extent, not so much so as to justify it. It is also a source of some mortification to me to understand that our reports are considered too voluminous. The act organizing the board requires the commissioners to appoint a secretary, whose duty it shall be to record, in a book for the purpose, the deraignment of title, and also the proceedings of the board, and at particular periods to transmit copies to the office of the Secretary of the Treasury, to be by him laid before Congress. This, we humly conceive, is all that we have done; and if that is too much, we regret that we had not been sooner informed of our error. It proceeded from a mistake in judging of the provisions of the act.

For the royal orders, rules, and regulations, and more detailed comment upon each, see report No. 1 of our board, made to the sessions of 1823 and 1824.—(See No. 413.)

All which is respectfully submitted, &c.

APPLICATION FOR FURTHER RELIEF TO PURCHASERS OF PUBLIC LANDS BY ADMITTING THE RETENTION OF A PORTION OF THE LAND.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 7, 1826.

Mr. VINTON, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the resolution of February 9, 1826, directing "an inquiry into the expediency of authorizing by law the legal holder of any certificate of further credit for the public lands to relinquish, by legal subdivisions to the United States, either by an east and west or by a north and south line, as may best suit the holder of any certificate as aforesaid, and also into the expediency of authorizing the holder of any certificate of further credit to relinquish, by a legal subdivision as aforesaid, any number of acres not less than one-fourth of a quarter section," reported:

That as early as the year 1796 the foundation of the present land system was established; that the acts of Congress of 1800 and 1804 were but modifications and improvements on the foundations of the act of 1796; all the laws that have been passed by Congress, from the origin of the plan to the present day, having relation to the surveying and disposal of the public lands, have only been to remedy defects discovered by experience in the operations of the system. A general uniformity in the manner of surveying and subdividing the public lands, as also in the mode of disposing of them, has always been in the view of Congress in every regulation on the subject. All the public surveying has been done, and all subdivisions of tracts made, to conform to the general system of surveying in squares. All the land offices created for the disposal of the public lands have been put into operation, and all sales and surrenders made have been in conformity to this admirable plan. All the maps and plans of the public lands are, so far as surveying has been done, made out with reference to this division by squares. The committee think that a large proportion of the purchasers of the public lands, for whose benefit the act of March 2, 1821, and the several acts extending and amending its provisions, was passed, have profited by those laws and obtained relief; and although the committee are prepared to extend to others, who have not availed themselves of those laws, further time to do so, yet the committee do not think it necessary to afford that relief, to change the whole land system of the Union, and introduce a new principle in reference to surveys that would not only be productive of additional expense to the public, but be the source of endless confusion in all the land department, from the General Land Office down to the most subordinate agent.

The committee therefore present the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Committee on Public Lands be discharged from the further consideration of the subject.

TO VEST THE FEE SIMPLE IN SCHOOL LANDS IN INDIANA IN THE TRUSTEES APPOINTED BY THE LEGISLATURE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 7, 1826.

Mr. JENNINGS, of Indiana, from the Committee on Public Lands, instructed by a resolution of the House, of the 27th January, to inquire into the expediency of vesting the fee simple of the lands set apart for the use of schools in the Illinois grant in the trustees appointed, or who may hereafter be appointed, under the direction of the legislature of the State of Indiana, and their successors in office, reported:

That, by the act of Congress enabling the people of the Territory of Indiana to form a constitution and State government, approved April 19, 1816, the United States became bounded by compact to the State of Indiana, upon the admission of said State into the Union, where the sections numbered sixteen in each township had "been sold, granted, or disposed of, other lands equivalent thereto, and most contiguous to the same, should be granted to the inhabitants of such township for the use of schools."

That, in pursuance of such compact, an act of Congress was passed entitled "An act authorizing the location of certain school lands in the State of Indiana," approved May 7, 1822, by the provisions of which the register of the land office at Brookville was authorized to select school lands within the said district equivalent to the one thirty-sixth part of the reservation, commonly called Clark's grant, for the use of schools within the same. The selection and location of said lands have been made in conformity to the provisions of the act aforesaid; but their relative situation in reference to Clark's grant is too remote to render it practicable for the inhabitants of said grant, for whose use those lands have been set apart, to preserve them from waste, or to avail themselves of such use without incurring considerable expense and ultimate losses. The committee therefore report a bill.

AUTHORITY TO MICHIGAN TO LEASE SCHOOL LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 10, 1826.

Mr. VINTON, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the resolution of January 25, 1826, directing an inquiry into the expediency of granting to the legislative council of the Territory of Michigan, (agreeably to their memorial of November 23, 1824,) an authority to lease the school sections in each township in said Territory, and to make such other regulations as will prevent waste and render them productive, reported:

That the importance of these grants to new settlements, where the lands can be made immediately productive, and the proceeds applied to the support of schools, is so obvious, the earliest measures should be taken to give effect to the design of the government in making these appropriations.

The committee are informed that several sections of these lands in the Michigan Territory are already under a state of improvement; but, as no authority is vested in the local government to lease them, and appropriate the proceeds for the benefit of schools, the object for which they were designed is not only for the time being defeated, but the land is impoverished, and every year rendered less valuable by occupants over whom the local authorities have no control. Strong doubts, however, are entertained of the propriety of authorizing a territorial legislature to grant leases for a term of time beyond which the territorial government will probably exist. And in conferring the authority asked for upon the legislative council of Michigan, it is believed that it should be done with a limitation to a short period of time, and have fixed upon the term of four years.

The committee therefore beg leave to accompany their report by a bill to that effect.

CORRECTION OF AN ERROR MADE AT THE LAND OFFICE AT CINCINNATI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 14, 1826.

Mr. TEST, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Jacob Hampton, reported:

That they have given to the petition and the documents exhibited to them such consideration as they merit. The petitioner sets forth that in 1816 he purchased the fractional section No. 7, in township No. 14, and range 1 west, which called for 334.50 acres, at two dollars per acre; that previous to the purchase he had viewed the premises, and was under an impression that it contained something more; that, when they went to make the entry, they suggested to the register of the land office at Cincinnati, where they made the entry, that they thought there was more land in the fraction than 334.50, and that if there was he should not be able to pay it out of the office, as he had no more money than would pay for that quantity. The register assured them there was no more; but, for fear there was some mistake about it, they required him to search a second time, which he did, and told them he need not fear to buy it, for if there should be more, it would not justify them in being at the expense of resurveying it to correct the mistake; whereupon he concluded, and did purchase the said fraction, and paid the full amount thereof, and got a final receipt of the register, and sent on for his patent, which issued accordingly; that when it came to Cincinnati the register refused to give it up to him until he paid for the balance of the land, which he stated to be a very considerable sum of money; that they did not receive the patent at Cincinnati till sometime in June, 1824; that in the meantime, from his entering the land until the patent issued, being necessitated to do so, he sold all the land but 105 acres (which he conveyed by deed of gift) at so low a rate (supposing there could be no further demands on him concerning it) that he did not receive for the whole, including the 105 acres conveyed as above, the original purchase money and the interest thereon; that he has given his obligations to make titles in fee simple for the whole, which he is unable to do for the want of the patent; that if the mistake had been known to him before he disposed of the land in the manner he did, or within five years after he made his entry, he could have made out to pay the balance in some way or other, but that it is now entirely out of his power to do so, and that he is placed in very embarrassed circumstances in consequence of having made sale of the land. Wherefore, he prays that he may be enabled to retain the land, and receive his patent by paying for the land one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre the present minimum price. Your committee, from evidence submitted to them, are satisfied of the truth of the statements made in the petition, and that the petitioner ought to have relief.

It appears by the affidavit of Andrew Hampton, who entered the land for him, that the mistake originated with the register of the land office at Cincinnati, and after a caution by the affiant, and on a second examination by the register; that the petitioner acted fairly and honestly in the whole transaction. It further appears by the letter of the Commissioner of the General Land Office that the petitioner has paid up the full amount for the fraction according to the representation made to him, and that a patent has issued to him for the land. It appears from the same letter that the number of acres actually paid for by the petitioner was $334\frac{1}{2}$; that the quantity contained in the fraction is 525.84. Calculating these $334\frac{1}{2}$ acres at two dollars per acre, and the quantity ultimately discovered to be contained in it at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, it will appear that he has overpaid for the whole eleven dollars and eighty-five cents. Wherefore, your committee report a bill for his relief.

CLAIM FOR INDEMNITY FOR LOSS OCCASIONED BY DEFECT OF TITLE TO LAND IN THE VIRGINIA MILITARY RESERVE DERIVED FROM THE UNITED STATES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 14, 1826.

Mr. CAMPBELL, of Ohio, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Joseph Miller, reported:

The petitioner states that Justus Miller, deceased, in his lifetime, purchased of Seymour Powell seven hundred and eighty-nine acres of land lying in the Virginia military district, in the State of Ohio, for a valuable consideration; that, by a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, the heirs of the said decedent, of whom the petitioner is one, have been deprived of the said tract of land: Wherefore, Congress is solicited for relief.

The committee find in 7 Wheaton a report of the decision alluded to, the style of which is Miller and others vs. Kerr and others. It appears that, through mistake, a warrant for $2,663\frac{3}{4}$ acres issued to Seymour Powell, as heir-at-law of Thomas Powell, for services rendered in the Virginia continental line, when it should have been for services performed in the State line; that, July 10, 1800, Justus Miller purchased seven hundred and eighty-nine acres of land, covered by a part of this warrant, received an assignment of the plat and certificate, and, in February, 1808, obtained a patent. The same land was entered by John Neville in May, 1806, in virtue of a warrant granted for services in the Virginia continental line, and was patented to his heirs April 30, 1807. Neville's heirs, having the elder patent, instituted an action of ejectment against Miller's heirs, who, supposing themselves possessed of the earlier and better equitable title, filed their bill to stay the proceedings at law, and to compel the defendants to convey.

The question presented by the facts for the consideration of the Supreme Court was, shall a prior entry and survey on a warrant issued through mistake prevail over a senior patent? Their answer is in the negative. Judge Todd, however, who rendered the opinion of the court, declares the case on the part of the plaintiffs a hard one, and that "they have strong claims on the liberality and justice of the United States, or of Virginia."

The committee will remark that the State of Virginia, in ceding to the United States the territory northwest of the river Ohio, reserved that portion of it which is situated between the Little Miami and Scioto rivers to satisfy the holders of warrants which emanated for services performed in the Virginia line on continental establishment. By the act of cession the general government acquired the fee simple as a trustee, and became bound to prescribe, by legislative provisions, the manner of making grants. This was done in due time.

With this view of the facts, and in full conviction of the justness of the decision of the case by the Supreme Court, the committee are unable to discover any obligation on the general government to grant the relief sought by the petitioner. Therefore, the following resolution is recommended:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioner be not granted.

CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSISSIPPI DERIVED FROM THE SPANISH GOVERNMENT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE MARCH 14, 1826.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 11, 1826.

Sir: I have the honor to enclose herewith, for the consideration of Congress, a copy of the evidence taken, and of the decision of the register and receiver of the land office at Jackson Court-house, in the State of Mississippi, in relation to the claim of Woodson Wren, in pursuance of the requisitions of the act of Congress passed March 3, 1823, entitled "An act for the relief of Woodson Wren."

With great respect, your obedient servant,

GEO. GRAHAM.

Hon J. C. CALHOUN, Vice President, and President of the Senate of the United States.

Report on the claim of Woodson Wren.

LAND OFFICE AT JACKSON C. H., Miss., July 12, 1823.

The register and receiver of the land office for the district of Jackson Court-house, Mississippi, to whom the claim of Woodson Wren to a tract of land situated on the east side of the bay of Biloxi, between Belle Fountain Point and the Old French fort, claimed by virtue of a purchase from Littlepage Robertson, has been referred by the act of Congress entitled "An act for the relief of Woodson Wren," approved the — day of —, 1823, report:

That they have taken into consideration the documents of claim submitted to them by the claimant, Woodson Wren, which consist of—1st. A permission of settlement granted by Don Henry Grimarest, civil and military governor of the town of Mobile and its jurisdiction, to Littlepage Robertson, as a settler on the lands he occupied at the bay of Biloxi, dated at Mobile, June 9, 1782; 2d, a deed of conveyance from Littlepage Robertson to Woodson Wren of a tract of land lying on the east side, on the bay of Biloxi, claimed under a Spanish grant or requête from Don Henry Grimarest, the Spanish commandant at Mobile, dated in the year 1812, regularly and duly authenticated under the act of Congress in such cases; 3d, the affidavits of Pierre Carco and Susan Fayer, taken before Willoughby Barton, register of this office, August 8, 1820, proving that Littlepage Robertson settled with his family on the place now claimed by Woodson Wren, situated on the northeast side of the bay of Biloxi, adjoining View Fort, about two or three years after the capture and occupation of Mobile by the Spaniards, and that the said Littlepage Robertson continued to inhabit and cultivate the said place for many years, until he raised his children to manhood.

REMARKS.

The ordinary conditions on which gratuitous concessions of lands were made by the Spanish authorities of Louisiana were, that the settler should commence his establishment within the peremptory term of one year, the concession to be held null if, at the expiration of the precise period of three years, he had not contemplated his establishment by putting under cultivation ten arpents in every hundred, &c., and made the regular barrancas, or levees, bridges, &c. A substantial compliance with these conditions, however, seems only to have been required—the usages and customs of the province; the title in form being granted, as a matter of course, after three consecutive years inhabitation and cultivation.

The concession or permission of settlement in question contains no special condition by which the claim may be excepted from the operation of the general regulations of the Spanish government for the allotment of lands; and a substantial performance of the usual conditions of inhabitation and cultivation, according to the regulations, having been established by the evidence of the witnesses, Pierre Carco and Susan Fayar, we are therefore of opinion that the claim aforesaid of Woodson Wren, under Littlepage Robertson, is valid, agreeably to the laws, usages, and customs of the Spanish government, and that the same ought to be confirmed by the United States for a quantity not exceeding eight hundred arpents.

CLAIMS TO LAND IN THE ST. HELENA LAND DISTRICT, IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 17, 1826.

Mr. WHIPPLE, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the report of the register and receiver of St. Helena on land claims in that district, with the supplement thereto, reported:

On April 25, 1812, Congress passed an act "for ascertaining the titles and claims to lands in that part of Louisiana which lies east of the river Mississippi and island of New Orleans." By this act it is provided that the country between the Mississippi river and island of New Orleans and the Perdido shall be divided into two land districts, the dividing line between which is the Pearl river. For each of these districts a commissioner is to be appointed, whose duty it is made to receive from those claiming lands in said districts all grants, orders of survey, or other evidence of claim whatsoever, derived from the French, British, or Spanish governments, and to record the same in a book of records to be by them kept for the purpose.

The commissioners provided for by this act are vested with a general power to inquire into and decide upon the justice and validity of the claims filed with them. The act further provides for the classification and report of the claims filed under it to Congress for their revision and confirmation.

By the act of April 18, 1814, the time for filing titles and claims under the former act is extended to the first day of November then next.

The commissioners reported, under the provisions of the foregoing acts of Congress, such claims and titles filed with them as they judged entitled to confirmation by the government of the United States.

By the act of March 3, 1819, Congress confirmed all the titles and claims reported by the commissioners of the land districts east of the river Mississippi and island of New Orleans which depended upon the following principles, viz:

1st. All complete grants from the Spanish government which were by the commissioners deemed "valid, agreeably to the laws, usages, and customs of the said government."

2d. All claims founded on British grants, made while the Floridas were held by Great Britain, which had been sold and conveyed according to the provisions of the treaty of peace between Great Britain and Spain, September 3, 1783, or which were settled and cultivated by persons having legal title at the date of said treaty.

3d. All claims founded on orders of survey, requête, permission to settle, or any written evidence of claim derived from the Spanish authorities, which originated prior to December 20, 1803, where the land claimed was inhabited and cultivated on or before that day. In this class of claims, where the plat and certificate of survey, made prior to April 15, 1813, under the authority of the Spanish government, had not been filed with the commissioners at the date of the act, the quantity of land confirmed to one individual was restricted to 1,280 acres.

4th. All other claims to lands comprised in the reports of the commissioners which, in their opinion, ought to be confirmed, were confirmed as donations, but were restricted in quantity to 1,280 acres to an individual claimant.

5th. Persons who inhabited and cultivated lands, and who had no written evidence of claim, where habitation and cultivation were proved to have commenced on or before April 15, 1813, were granted a donation of 640 acres, if no other tract had been confirmed to them in either of the foregoing classes.

On May 8, 1822, Congress passed an act confirming to claimants, in the town of Mobile, certain lots, upon the same principles and under the same restrictions as are contained in the act of March 3, 1819, except as to quantity. On the same day Congress passed an act confirming to claimants to lands east of the island of New Orleans their titles and claims, under the same restrictions and upon the same principles as those contained in the act of March 3, 1819, in cases where the commissioners had made favorable reports upon such claims and titles.

On May 26, 1824, an act was passed giving to claimants further time (until the first day of January then next) to file their claims with the register and receiver, and to said officers to report upon further claims thus filed, under the restrictions and limitations of the act of March 3, 1819.

The register and receiver, under the authority of this act, have reported sundry claims, which they have classified according to the provisions of the act of March 3, 1819.

In some of these classes claims are reported which do not come within the provisions of the several acts which have been previously passed by Congress relating to land titles east of the river Mississippi and island of New Orleans, but the register and receiver have recommended confirmations of titles only to the extent that they were authorized by the act of March 3, 1819.

The committee being of opinion that the former legislation of Congress relative to land titles in this district of country has been sufficiently liberal, and such as justice and equity required, have reported a bill to confirm the titles and claims reported by the register and receiver of St. Helena land district, so far as they come within the purview of the act of March 3, 1819, and the several other acts relating to the same subject.

TO PROVIDE AGAINST FRAUDS IN THE RESALE OF RELINQUISHED LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 17, 1826.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 15, 1826.

SIR: In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 8th instant, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to report to the House any information in the possession of the department evincing the propriety of legislative enactment to guard the public interest against the fraudulent practices of combinations of individuals in the resale of relinquished land, and whether, in his opinion, the interest of the purchasers of public land, and the interest of the government, will not be greatly promoted by enacting some provision which will extend to the person, or his legal representative, the right of repurchase in the land he may have relinquished at a certain proportion of the price for which it was originally sold, I have the honor to transmit herewith a letter, dated the 14th instant, from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with the extract of a communication, to which it refers, from the register and receiver of the land office at St. Stephen's, in Alabama, and the copy of a letter from Mr. Owen, of Alabama, and to express my concurrence in the views presented by the Commissioner upon the subject of the resolution.

I have the honor to be, with very great respect, your obedient servant,

RICHARD RUSH.

Hon. the SPEAKER of the *House of Representatives.*GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 14, 1826.

SIR: The resolution of the House of Representatives of the 8th instant having been referred to this office, it is herewith returned, together with an extract of a letter from the register and receiver of the land office at St. Stephen's, which shows the nature, object, and effects of the combinations which are formed by individuals to purchase up the public lands at public sales.

These combinations take place, for the most part, at the sales of lands that are valuable from their situation, or from the improvements that have been made upon them by settlers. It appears that the sale of the town lots at the Big Spring, in the Huntsville district, was postponed in consequence of such a combination of individuals; and at the sale in the Choctaw land district of the lands situated in the county of Monroe, which lands had been settled previous to the sale, one of the officers states the speculators had received as much money at the sale as the United States had.

The relinquished lands which were offered for sale at St. Stephen's and at Cahaba sold in but few instances for more than the minimum price, although much of this land was originally purchased at very high prices. It is understood that this was, in a great measure, occasioned by combinations of individuals, and it is apprehended that similar combinations will prevent the relinquished lands, which are advertised for sale in May and June next, at Huntsville, from yielding to the treasury the amount which, from their real value, they ought to sell for.

The relinquished lands which are now subject to sale are lands that were originally purchased at a high price, and the real value of which has been increased by the progress of population and by improvements made upon them. It is this value, compared with the minimum price at which they are subject to be sold at public sale, that is the foundation of all the combinations of individuals, by which they obtain from the settlers the difference between that value and the minimum price.

I am therefore of opinion that the most effectual enactments to guard against such combinations, and to give to the persons who relinquished the land an opportunity to repurchase those improved by them at a fair and reasonable price, would be to increase the minimum price at which the lands that have been relinquished should be sold at public sale, and to permit the persons who relinquished to enter the lands relinquished by them within a given time, at such given graduated prices, being a fixed percentage upon the prices originally given, as Congress in their wisdom may deem proper; and I would recommend that such graduated prices be established as the minimum price at which the relinquished lands should be sold at public sale, provided no relinquished lands should be sold at private or public sale for less than two dollars per acre.

As it relates to the lands that have been relinquished, the enactment of the foregoing provisions would be essentially beneficial to the government, and they would effectually prevent the combinations complained of; but as the adoption of them may materially affect the operation of any act that may be passed for the further relief of the purchasers of the public lands, and may induce individuals to relinquish lands which they otherwise would not, it would be advisable to guard against such relinquishments by declaring that lands hereafter relinquished should not be subject to entry by the party relinquishing previous to public sale, and that they should be sold at public sale on the terms and conditions provided by the act for lands heretofore relinquished.

It may be proper to add that the lands relinquished in the Huntsville land district, amounting to four hundred and sixteen thousand three hundred and fifty-six and twenty-one hundredths acres, which sold originally for $3,147,232 15, are proclaimed for sale in the months of May and June next, and that, if any provision is made in relation to the sale of the relinquished lands, it is desirable that it should be made in time to postpone the sale of these lands.

I enclose a letter from Mr. Owen relating to the subject of the resolution.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

GEO. GRAHAM.

Hon. RICHARD RUSH, Secretary of the Treasury.

LAND OFFICE, St. Stephen's, May 2, 1819.

It would not be proper to omit noticing the prevalence of a system of combination at the public sales, which it rests with the government either to counteract or permit.

Its extent in point of numbers, influence, and capital, put it beyond the ordinary control of the superintendents. From its success it may be probably continued at future sales here and elsewhere.

The principles on which it was formed will therefore be proper to be mentioned. By the exertions of a few speculating gentlemen, a coalition was formed with all the men of any tolerable capital, and who were disposed to purchase lands. Each deposited a given sum, and became pledged to act in concert; a few were appointed to manage the funds, and, in this manner, competition was, in a considerable degree, silenced. Many of the lands were, in consequence, purchased at low rates, and, after several townships were offered, public resales were held by this association, attended with the gain of considerable profit. In a few instances a conflict between this company and actual settlers has produced the government extraordinary prices; this has resulted in the compromises in subsequent instances. This combination had been formed, and was in operation, several days before it was discovered by the superintendents. No mode of resisting its effects were in their power, but exercising their private right of bidding up for the lands. Where the prices were known to be greatly inadequate, this was exercised, in some cases, by the superintendents.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, July 31, 1820.

SIR: I am this day authorized by the President to request that you will instruct the registers and receivers of the land offices, especially in the State of Alabama, whenever they perceive that combinations are formed and acted upon to prevent a competition, that they are authorized to bid a reasonable price for the tracts as they are set up, according to the information they have in their possession, and if no higher bid is offered to declare that the tract is reserved from sale. In the exercise of this power it is expected that they will not bid the value of the land, and always cease the competition on their part when it exists among the bidders.

In this manner the necessity which has, in several instances, been supposed to exist of postponing the sales generally will probably be avoided.

The single fact that the land does not sell at its supposed value is not sufficient to justify the exercise of the authority intended to be given. A combination to prevent competition at the sales for the benefit of those associated must exist. The combination may, however, be inferred from the general absence of competition and other concurrent circumstances, of which the register and receiver will judge.

I remain with respect, &c.,

WM. H. CRAWFORD.

JOSIAH MEIGS, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office.

NOTE.—Instructions were issued to land officers August 2, 1820.

WASHINGTON, January 2, 1826.

SIR: From the conversation we had some days ago relative to the future sales of our relinquished and forfeited lands, I am induced to communicate to you more fully my ideas upon that, to us, all-important subject. The more reflection I bestow upon it the more strongly I am convinced that the two important objects that should be regarded in all legislation on this subject will be more completely attained—that is, to secure the revenue arising from this source to the government, and, at the same time, preserve the interests of that most important and valuable class of our citizens—the planters or purchasers who seek land for actual settlement.

I will not say that the modes heretofore pursued were unjust, but that they did operate hardly upon this class of our people all readily admit; and that, too, when no relative increase was added to our revenue. The systems of speculation which have and which will ever exist under the present policy were destructive to the honest planter when the receipts into the treasury were not increased. Such has been their systematic organization that the minimum was received by the government when the planters had to give fourfold that amount for their lands. This, so far from its being the policy of the government to encourage, should by all means be provided against.

The plan I propose is based upon the principle that the lands relinquished or forfeited have, in every instance, sold for more than their value. This was from causes now well known, and gave rise to the policy of extinguishing the land debt—a policy, by experience, proved to be beneficial towards our fiscal operations and productive of great good to the people.

I therefore take the liberty respectfully to submit to your consideration the propriety of recommending to Congress the adoption of the following system for the future disposal of relinquished and forfeited lands—that is, to graduate their prices, conforming to the original price at which the person who has relinquished or forfeited may have the right of preference in purchasing. Thus, to exemplify my idea, when lands have been sold at twenty dollars or more, the right of purchasing at private sale at the sum of ten dollars per acre; when it has sold at ten dollars, and not more than twenty, the right of purchasing, in like manner, at five dollars per acre; when it has been sold at five dollars, and not exceeding ten, at two dollars and fifty cents per acre; and when it has been sold at two dollars and fifty cents, and not exceeding five, at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre. This graduation has been taken to explain the system. Any other, making it more minute or extensive in detail, if deemed proper, can be taken; but that something upon this system can be advantageously done, as well to the public treasury as to the individuals, I am well convinced. To avoid competition, and the painful solicitude therewith connected, the advancement of the minimums stipulated would be invited. That great benefit would result to this class of people will be admitted, and that no diminution in the receipts at your land offices would be the consequence I am also well convinced; for the system, as before mentioned, adopted by speculators, at the same time that they oppress and ruin the actual settler, prevents the fair competition which would result beneficially to government. They cause the lands to be sold at the minimum; these bring from the occupant an advance with which they enrich themselves.

The plan I propose would give you a fair value for the public lands; your offices would be at all times open; the extra expenses attending a public sale would be greatly diminished; the amounts received in your offices would be increased instead of lessened; the price paid for the lands by the purchaser would go into your treasury and not into the hands of men combined and associated together to extort from the planter the means of his subsistence.

This system I am well satisfied will meet the views of our administration, when we, with grateful feeling, acknowledge the kind notice taken of our situation in recommending a continuance of our relief systems. I hope you will view it as I have, and express your assent to its adoption for a limited time at least.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. W. OWEN.

GEORGE GRAHAM, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office.

P. S.—You will oblige me by favoring me at an early day with your views upon this subject.

No. 519.

[1ST SESSION.]

REDEMPTION OF LANDS SOLD FOR TAXES IN THE TERRITORIES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 20, 1826.

Mr. STRONG, from the Committee on the Territories, to whom was referred the resolution of December 28, 1825, instructing them "to inquire into the expediency of providing by law that sales of land for the non-payment of taxes laid thereon by authority of the territorial governments shall not be made in a shorter period than one year after such taxes shall have become payable; that two years shall be allowed for redemption upon payment of a penalty not exceeding fifty per centum on the amount of the tax; and that the Commissioner of the General Land Office, or other proper officer of the government residing at the city of Washington, be authorized to receive such tax and penalty from non-resident proprietors, and required to deposit the same in bank to the credit of the proper territorial officer, and make to him quarterly returns of the sums thus deposited," reported:

It is very common for considerable quantities of land in the Territories of the United States to belong to persons who do not reside in them. In each of the Territories, but especially in that of Arkansas, numerous tracts of land are owned by non-residents. By the act of May 6, 1812, two millions of acres were set apart in what is now the Territory of Arkansas for military land bounties. This tract has been surveyed by the United States, and many of the soldiers of the late war have drawn their bounty lands in it. The existing law of Congress exempts these lands from taxes for three complete years after the issuing of the patent to the soldier, provided the title for that time remains in him or his heirs. These lands have been taxed by the territorial authority. In 1824 and in 1825 several hundred quarter-sections were sold for the amount of the taxes due on them. On referring to an act passed by the legislature of Arkansas October 29, 1823, to regulate the collection of taxes on military bounties, it appears that the lands are to be sold at public sale, and that the sheriffs of the several counties are required to give "sixty days' notice of the time and place" of the sale. This notice is too short. The proprietors of these lands reside, in greater or less numbers, in every State in the Union. And it is plainly impossible for a soldier, or any other man, who lives in the remote parts of New Hampshire or Maine to receive information by the ordinary course of the mail that his lot has been advertised for the taxes, and to send to Arkansas and pay them before the expiration of the sixty days.

This necessarily produces manifest injustice. As it respects the most distant proprietors, their lands might as well be sold without any notice. The committee do not mean to impute bad faith to the local legislature, or to intimate that the authorities of Arkansas have not been governed by those pure and exalted principles which ought to direct and control every legislative body. But they owe it to candor to remark that the whole course of legislation upon this subject is characterized by a looseness altogether unusual. One year is allowed for redeeming the lands sold. It does not appear, however, that any officer or other person in the Territory has been authorized to receive the redemption money; and the unfortunate soldier, whose lot has been sold, is left to seek the purchaser, and if he cannot find him he loses his land. The difficulties do not end here. It seems, in some cases at least, that the purchaser gets the possession of the land before the time for redeeming it expires, and when application is made to him to redeem it he demands pay for his improvements.

As more or less land in the Territories will naturally be owned by non-residents, the committee have thought it advisable to adopt some general rules in regard to lands thus held, applying to all the Territories; and in doing so they have endeavored to consult the interest and convenience as well of the Territory as of the citizen. To remedy the present, and to guard against future evils, the committee propose the following plan:

1. To give one year's notice of the time and place of sale, and allow two years to redeem in, upon paying the amount of the tax and twenty-five per cent. per annum. This will afford time enough, and not too much, to distant proprietors to pay the taxes on their land when it is advertised for sale, or to redeem it when it has been sold.

2. To require the appointment by the local authority of some proper person to receive the taxes, and who shall reside at the seat of the territorial government. By this arrangement, which justice and prudence equally require, soldiers and others who hold lands will know where to send to redeem or to pay the taxes on them. To be compelled to seek the purchaser to redeem is, in most cases, tantamount to a denial of the right to redeem.

3. To secure the proprietor the legal title and possession of his land until the time for redeeming it has elapsed. It is certainly great injustice to permit the purchaser to take possession of land which is redeemable, and to exact, in addition to the purchase money and the premium, pay for his improvements. This regulation, therefore, while it will not interfere with the interest of the Territory, will secure the acknowledged rights of the proprietor.

4. To appoint an agent for non-residents, at the city of Washington, to receive taxes and redemption money, and to place the same to the credit of the proper Territory. And for the purpose of lessening still further the expense to soldiers and others, to require the governor of each Territory to send to the Commissioner of the General Land Office complete lists of the lands advertised for sale and of those sold, for the benefit of the agent for non-residents.

It is further proposed to oblige this agent to give bonds for the faithful performance of his duties; to allow him a small percentage and fees, to make the office no charge to the United States; and to limit the period of the agency. The committee think this agency will result in the following advantages:

1. It will afford to the soldier and others the safest and cheapest mode of paying their taxes and redeeming their lands.

2. It will secure to the Territory, especially when lands are bid off for its benefit, more money and a sound currency. This will be of no small advantage when it is considered that the value of the local currency is often greatly depreciated.

At the sales of the military bounty lands for taxes in Arkansas, in 1824-'25, many of them were struck off to the Territory. As the usual power of Congress, reserved in all other cases, of disapproving of the legislative acts of a territorial government has not been reserved in the case of Arkansas, the committee doubt the right of authorizing the redemption (where the time has expired) of these lands thus acquired and held by the Territory. Believing, however, that the government of Arkansas does not mean to become a land speculator, they cannot doubt that the local authorities will immediately extend the time for redeeming all the lands thus held. In too many instances this pittance of acres is the only reward the poor but patriotic soldier has left of all his toils and perils.

To prevent any attempts which may hereafter be made to discriminate between the lands of residents and non-residents, a provision is inserted to prohibit any higher tax from being imposed upon the latter than is imposed upon the former.

The legislature of Arkansas, by an act of October 25, 1820, limited the writ of right and the right of entry to seven years. This was an extreme hardship upon non-resident landholders. In 1823, however, this act was repealed and a new one passed extending the time to fifteen years. Upon this subject the committee think the rules of the common law ought to be recognized and established.

In conformity with the preceding suggestions a bill is submitted for the consideration of the House.

[1ST SESSION.

OPERATION OF THE "ACT TO PROVIDE FOR THE EXTINGUISHMENT OF THE DEBT DUE THE UNITED STATES BY THE PURCHASERS OF PUBLIC LANDS PRIOR TO JULY 1, 1820."

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE MARCH 20, 1826.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 6, 1826.

SIR: I enclose a statement showing the quantity of land relinquished, and that fully paid for, under the provisions of the act of May 18, 1824. This statement exhibits the quantity of land on which a further credit of four years was obtained under the act of March 2, 1821, and which has reverted to the United States in consequence of the failure to make complete payment therefor; and it also shows the quantity of land on which the holders have not availed themselves of the benefit of any of the provisions of the laws for the relief of the purchasers of the public lands, and which is now subject to be sold by the registers of the land offices in pursuance of the 5th section of the act of May 10, 1800, (Laws U. S., vol. 3, p. 388.)

In compliance with your request, I also enclose a substitute for the second section of the bill reported by you, making provision for the extinguishment of the debt due by the purchasers of the public lands. This substitute embraces three descriptions of land which would not be covered by the provisions of the first section of the bill as reported:

1. The lands which had been further credited for four years, and which reverted to the United States on the 10th of April last, in consequence of not having been fully paid for. The quantity of land thus forfeited is 17,183.56 $\frac{1}{2}$ acres, on which \$37,776 68 has been paid.

2. The lands on which the holders have not availed themselves of the benefit of any of the provisions of the laws for the relief of the purchasers of the public lands, and which are now subject to be sold by the registers of the land offices, in pursuance of the provisions of the 5th section of the act of May 10, 1800, (Laws U. S., vol. 3, p. 388.) The quantity of land of this description is 126,933.48 $\frac{1}{2}$ acres, and the amount paid thereon is \$103,806 58.

3. The land which, agreeably to the provisions of the 5th section of the act of May 10, 1800, has become forfeited to the United States since July 1, 1820, and which has not been sold. The quantity of land of this description cannot be ascertained without much labor, but it cannot be great, as it is presumable that much of that which might have been redeemed has been sold.

With great respect, sir, your obedient servant,

GEORGE GRAHAM.

Hon. DAVID BARTON, Senate United States.

P. S.—The words "and of the several acts therein recited," in the 6th and 7th lines of the 1st section, should be stricken out.

19TH CONGRESS.]No. 521.[1ST SESSION.]

CLAIMS TO LAND BETWEEN ROBERTS' AND LUDLOW'S LINES, IN OHIO, BY PURCHASERS FROM THE UNITED STATES AND HOLDERS OF VIRGINIA MILITARY WARRANTS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 28, 1826.

Mr. VINTON, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom were referred certain papers relative to the claims of certain purchasers under the United States, and holders of Virginia military warrants, between Ludlow's and Roberts' lines, in the State of Ohio, reported:

That, from evidence adduced before the committee, it appears that the United States have sold and conveyed to various purchasers the greater part of the lands lying south of the Greenville treaty line, and between what are known by the names of Roberts' and Ludlow's lines, both of which were run to ascertain the western boundary line of the Virginia military reservation in the State of Ohio. In the year A. D. 1810 about 14,000 acres of the land so sold by the United States were located upon by holders of Virginia military land warrants, as land within that reservation. Upon a part of these locations patents have issued, and the entries upon the residue have never been withdrawn. In this way the claims of the purchasers under the United States and the Virginia military locations are brought in direct conflict. In this controversy the United States is interested as the original vendor, and, as such, in duty bound to protect, and, in case of loss of title, to indemnify the government purchaser. From an attentive examination of the facts in this case, and previous legislation upon the subject, the committee are of opinion Congress ought to quiet the title of the government purchasers by paying to the Virginia military claimants the value of the land claimed by them. To put the House in possession of the reasons upon which this opinion is founded, it will be necessary to give some account of the origin of the title to the lands in controversy, and of the legislative and judicial proceedings that have been had concerning them.

This reservation had its origin in the cession of the country northwest of the river Ohio by the Commonwealth of Virginia to the United States. In the deed of cession there is a stipulation that, in case the quantity of good land on the southeast side of the Ohio, in the now State of Kentucky, which had been reserved by law for the Virginia troops upon continental establishment, should prove insufficient for their legal bounties, the deficiency should be made up to said troops in good land, to be laid off between the rivers Scioto and Little Miami, on the northwest side of the river Ohio, in such proportions as had been engaged to them by the laws of Virginia. Not many years afterwards a deficiency of good land was found to exist in Kentucky, and locations were permitted in Ohio. In the year A. D. 1802 Israel Ludlow was directed, by the then surveyor general of the United States, to run the western boundary line of the military reservation from the source of the Little Miami to the Scioto river; and he accordingly, after exploring the headwaters of the former river, ran a line from its source towards what he supposed to be the headwater of the Scioto, as far as the Greenville treaty line, where he was prevented by the Indians from the further prosecution of his survey. From that line to the head of the Scioto the country was then Indian territory, and the committee can find no evidence that he made an actual exploration of the headwaters of the Scioto, and presume none was made at that time. In 1804 Congress passed an act declaring that Ludlow's line, extended to the Scioto, should be the western boundary line of the reservation in case Virginia should, within two years, assent to it. Virginia omitted to give her assent, and, accordingly, the act of Congress never took effect. From this time until the year 1812 no effort was made to establish the boundary. In the meantime the locations above mentioned were made by the holders of military warrants. In the year 1812 the President was authorized, by act of Congress, to appoint three commissioners to meet commissioners to be appointed by Virginia, who were invested with full power and authority to ascertain, survey, and mark the western boundary line of the military reservation between the Scioto and Little Miami rivers, according to the true intent and meaning of the deed of cession, and providing that Ludlow's line should be the boundary until a line should be established. Commissioners accordingly met in the fall of that year, and, after having explored the headwaters of both those rivers, directed Charles Roberts, their surveyor, to run a line from the point ascertained by them to be the source of the Little Miami to that of the Scioto, which was done by him, the line so run being known by the name of Roberts' line. After these explorations had been made, and it having been ascertained that the headwaters of the Scioto were west of those of the Little Miami, the commissioners on the part of the Commonwealth of Virginia set up a claim to run from the source of the Scioto to the mouth of the Little Miami, at its confluence with the Ohio, thus embracing a large extent of country west of the Little Miami, upon which the negotiation between the commissioners was broken off. No effort on the part of either government has since been made to establish this boundary. In the case of Doddridge's lessee vs. Thompson and Wright, lately decided in the Supreme Court of the United States, the plaintiff derived title from a location made between Ludlow's and Roberts' lines, south of the Greenville treaty line, in the year 1810, having been made the same year, and under precisely the same circumstances, with all the other locations between those lines. The defendant, Thompson, derived his title from the United States as a purchaser under the government. In that case it was agreed that Roberts' was the true line, and under this agreement the question to be decided by the court was, "whether a location made prior to the act of 1812, west of Ludlow's line, and between it and Roberts' line, was valid and ought to prevail over the title made by the government to the defendant, Thompson?" The court decided this question in the affirmative, and a recovery was had for the plaintiff. This decision seems firmly to establish the title of the Virginia claimants, and they must prevail against the purchaser under the United States, unless the admission of Roberts' being the true line from the sources of those rivers was erroneously made. The committee are satisfied that the admission was correctly made, and that Roberts', and not Ludlow's, is the true line between the heads of those rivers. 1st. From the fact that Ludlow did not run his line to the Scioto, having been arrested in his progress at the Greenville treaty line, about three-fourths of the way to the Scioto, the source of which river the committee are not informed was ever examined by him; but the headwaters of that river were examined by the joint commissioners who directed Roberts' line to be run, both parties, the United States and the State of Virginia, being represented at the time; while, on the other and, the examination of it by Ludlow, if ever made, was ex parte, Virginia having no agency in the matter. The headwater of the Scioto must, therefore, be presumed to be at the point of the termination of Roberts' survey. Both Ludlow's and Roberts' lines commence at or very near the same point on the same branch of the Little Miami. The Indian title to this part of the country having been extinguished before Ludlow's survey, the sources of that river, from which he began to run, were, without doubt, examined by him, and were afterwards examined by the commissioners, as above stated. Nor do the committee see anything in the documents to them referred to change their opinion as to the correctness of the line established by the said commissioners. There is, therefore, no just ground of dispute about the source of this river. But, if the correctness of Roberts' line were even doubtful, a question would still arise, whether Congress has not gone too far by its legislation to give a sanction to that line now to recede. Congress, by a law passed in 1818, declared that Ludlow's line, until otherwise directed, as far as the Greenville treaty line, and from the Greenville treaty line to the source of the Scioto, Roberts' line, should be unconditionally the western boundary of the Virginia reservation. Since the passing of that act it is quite certain Congress could not affect entries made between Ludlow's and Roberts' line above the Greenville treaty line; and so much of Roberts' line is, at least, binding upon the United States. A direct acquiescence in the correctness of Roberts' line is, in the opinion of the committee, to be found in the act of May 26, 1824, passed immediately after the above-mentioned decision of the Supreme Court, in the case of Doddridge's lessee vs. Thompson and Wright. That act "directs the President of the United States to ascertain the number of acres, and, by appraisement or otherwise, the value thereof, exclusive of improvements, of all such lands lying between Ludlow's and Roberts' lines, in the State of Ohio, as may, agreeably to the principles of a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Doddridge's lessee vs. Thompson and Wright, be held by persons under Virginia military warrants, and on what terms the holders will relinquish the same to the United States, and that he report the facts to the next session of Congress." As was remarked above, all the locations made between these lines mentioned in this act rest upon the same principle, and were made under the same circumstances, as that decided upon by the court. The committee regard this act as admitting the validity of all such claims, and as further indicating the intention of Congress to quiet the purchasers under the United States by obtaining a relinquishment of title from the Virginia military claimants. The lands so claimed were valued at $62,515 25, and application was made to the claimants to ascertain on what terms they would relinquish their titles. A relinquishment in all cases, by paying the appraised value of the land, was offered, except in the case of the tract of about 700 acres, recovered by Doddridge, which he proposed to relinquish on paying to him the sum received by the United States from the sale of it, and interest from that date.

The committee, from a view of all the facts in the case, think it an act of justice to the purchasers under the United States, against some of whom suits are now pending, to quiet them in their titles to their lands, upon most of which it is understood they have made great and very valuable improvements, and, in pursuance of what they deem to be the intention of the act of 1824, have reported a bill for their relief.

[1ST SESSION.]

CLAIM FOR MILITARY BOUNTY LAND.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES APRIL 26, 1826.

Mr. FOSDICK, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and documents of Jacob Shafer, reported:

The petitioner states that, in the late war, he enlisted in the service of the United States for the term of five years; that he served until the conclusion of the war; that, being anxious to see his family, consisting of a wife and eight young children, whom he had left in penury, he applied for a discharge, which was given him on the relinquishment of his right to retained bounty or land; that, at the time he was discharged, there was a soldier of the name of John Sharp, a German, who had completed his term of service, and was desirous to visit his own country, without any intention of returning to this; that he was advised by Capt. John P. Duvall to purchase Sharp's discharge, which he did, thinking thereby to indemnify himself for the loss of his own bounty and land; that he cannot obtain a patent in his own name on Sharp's discharge; therefore he asks relief.

There is documentary evidence before the committee that the petitioner was discharged at Norfolk, in Virginia, April 15, 1815, (after having served about twenty months,) and that his discharge was upon condition that he relinquished his claim to retained bounty or land.

Accompanying the petition in this case there is also a certified copy of John Sharp's discharge, with his assignment to Jacob Shafer, the petitioner, endorsed thereon.

The committee are of the opinion that the petitioner has no claim to relief; so far as relates to the transfer, there is not and ought not to be any validity in the informal assignment of John Sharp. It was made before any title to land was vested in him, but having an equitable claim by law in his own right, he can, at any time, demand for himself, or his heirs for themselves, the land warrant to which his services entitled him, and the government could not withhold it; no transfer made prior to the issue of the warrant could deprive him of his right, and consequently such transfer would not exonerate the government from his, or his heirs, legal claim for land. Should the government assume the power of thus diverting the land warrants from the original design on such transfers, they would violate an important principle recognized in the act granting the bounty, and might be subject to innumerable applications, which, being granted, the soldiers themselves, or their heirs, would still have a legal and just claim. In this case there is no certainty that John Sharp may not, by himself or his heirs, apply for the land to which he is entitled. If so, the government would be bound to furnish the warrant, leaving the question of assignment to be settled between him and the assignee.

The discharge of the petitioner has a condition annexed, by which he is made to relinquish his claim to retain bounty or land. This condition the committee considers unauthorized, illegal, and void. There is no law which constituted the officer an agent of the government for that purpose; government, therefore, cannot sanction this condition; they cannot make it their own act without a violation of their own law, by which they have protected the soldier from his own indiscretion, by rendering the right to bounty land unassignable; they would violate this important and humane provision of their own, by procuring an assignment through an unauthorized agent, in the form of a release. It is not a voluntary act on the part of the soldier; he is offered a discharge—for what purpose? Is it because government no longer requires his services, or is it with a view to obtain from him a release of his right to bounty and land? The soldier, anxious for a discharge, accepts it on such terms as are dictated to him, and he is thus compelled to do an act which the law has pronounced illegal.

The committee are therefore of opinion that the petitioner is entitled to his bounty land, and report a bill for his relief.

AMOUNT OF EMOLUMENTS AND ALLOWANCES TO THE REGISTERS AND RECEIVERS OF LAND OFFICES, EXCLUSIVE OF SALARY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MAY 3, 1826.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, May 1, 1826.

SIR: In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 7th of February last, "requiring the Secretary of the Treasury to transmit to the House a statement showing the annual amount of emoluments and allowances, exclusive of salary, received by, or granted to, the registers and receivers of the several land offices in the United States for percentage, stationery, clerk hire, office rent, adjudication on pre-emption claims, examination and report of lead mines and salt springs, for the transmission of moneys by receivers to the place of deposit, and for any and all other services and purposes since April 20, 1818, and up to the end of the year 1825," I have the honor to transmit a letter from the Register of the Treasury, accompanied by a statement containing the information required, as far as the same is afforded by the accounts which have been received at this department.

I have the honor, &c.,

Hon. the SPEAKER of the House of Representatives.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Register's Office, May 1, 1826.

SIR: The statement of emoluments of receivers and registers of the land offices, laid on your table, has been prepared from the accounts to the end of the year 1824. The accounts for 1825 being under adjustment, a satisfactory exhibition of their receipts during that year could not be given with any degree of certainty, and would have caused further delay in rendering the statement.

I have the honor, &c.,

JOSEPH NOURSE, Register.

Hon. RICHARD RUSH, Secretary of the Treasury.

Statement exhibiting the amount of compensation allowed to receivers and registers of public lands after April 20, 1818, (exclusive of salary,) consisting of commission, superintending sales, adjudicating pre-emption claims, examination and report on lead mines and salt springs, transmission of public money, office rent and stationery, clerk hire at public sales, and bringing up arrearages, and for all other services, prepared in pursuance of a resolution of the House of Representatives of February 7, 1826.

JOSEPH NOURSE, Register.

19TH CONGRESS.]No. 524.[1ST SESSION.]TO AUTHORIZE THE LOCATION OF A VIRGINIA MILITARY LAND WARRANT ON LAND OF THE UNITED STATES IN OHIO.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MAY 5, 1826.

Mr. ESTILL, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Francis Preston, reported:

It appears from the petition and documents to us referred that General William Campbell, at the commencement of the revolutionary war, was a captain in the regiment commanded by Colonel Patrick Henry, but whether that regiment was ever taken into the United States service the destruction of the public records by the enemy renders it difficult now to determine; that on June 14, 1781, General Campbell was, by a resolution of the house of delegates of Virginia, created a brigadier general of her militia, and continued generally in service till his death; that he was one of the most meritorious and gallant of her officers, and at King's Mountain, where he commanded, Guilford, and other battles with the enemy, rendered the most signal services to his country, for which he received a vote of thanks, a horse, sword, pistols, &c., from his native State; that after his death in the public service, by a resolution of the Virginia legislature of December 19, 1783, it was determined further to reward the extraordinary and meritorious military services of this officer by a bounty of 5,000 acres of land; that on December 22, 1783, Virginia, by resolution, appropriated all the surplus of the lands set apart for the officers and soldiers of her army on continental and State establishment, and which should not be entered before July 1, 1784, to the satisfaction of such military bounties; that the lands so set apart for the satisfaction of warrants issued by Virginia to her officers and soldiers on continental and State establishment were situate in the now State of Kentucky; that, from various causes, the officers and soldiers on continental and State establishment could not locate their warrants within the time specified by law, nor until after Virginia ceased to have control over the territory set apart for their location, by the erection of Kentucky into an independent State; that on December 23, 1783, Virginia issued a warrant to Charles Campbell, only son of General Campbell, for 5,000 acres of land, in consideration of the meritorious military services of his father; that Charles Campbell died a minor, leaving an only sister, also a minor, to whom said warrant descended, and who, in 1793, and still a minor, intermarried with the petitioner; that previous to the marriage the time for locating this and such warrants expired, and further permission to locate could not be given by Virginia, who had previously ceased to have control of the territory, and no provision has been made by Kentucky by which such warrants could be located in her territory; that the petitioner has, since his marriage, made an unsuccessful application to the legislature of Kentucky for some provision by which he might be enabled to locate his warrant in that State; that, at the pressing solicitation of the Congress, Virginia, from motives the most disinterested and patriotic, in 1784, ceded to the United States, without any equivalent, nearly all of her territory north of the Ohio river, comprising much the largest and richest portion thereof, for the purpose of enabling the Congress to meet its engagements contracted during the war of the revolution. This donation, perhaps the most valuable and disinterested ever made, placed at the disposal of Congress the present States of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, together with the Michigan and Northwest Territories—a fund from which the government of the United States had derived many millions of dollars, and which is still productive; that Virginia, anxious to preserve her public faith, and fearing that the lands set apart in that portion of her territory composing the present State of Kentucky for the location of warrants issued to her officers and soldiers might prove insufficient for the designed object, in her deed of cession to the United States, reserved the territory in the State of Ohio lying between the Scioto and Miami rivers for the satisfaction of these warrants. It is difficult at this time to determine whether General Campbell ever was an officer within the description mentioned in one part of the deed of cession, viz: "an officer on continental or State establishment;" but there is little difficulty in determining that he is within another description of those provided for in said deed, viz: "officers and soldiers of the American army." Your committee are, however, inclined to the opinion that he comes within the description of each class, and was intended to be provided for by the reservation of the tract of country between the Scioto and Miami rivers. If so, this warrant might have been located within that reservation. But the petitioner had a difficulty to encounter in the location of his warrant which, it seems, has hitherto been considered insurmountable without legislative aid, and which has prevented its location, and may be supposed to present an obstacle to its location within the reserved district. The difficulty is this: by the terms of the resolution on which this warrant is founded, and by the warrant itself, its location is to be postponed until after the lands given to the officers and soldiers of the continental and State line should be laid off; and your committee are informed that those lands are not yet all laid off. To this it may be answered that at the date of this warrant Virginia had not parted with any of her territory; that Kentucky was not erected into a separate State until 1792; that there was a time fixed by law for the location of those warrants, to which this was postponed, within which it was reasonable to expect that those warrants would be located, and beyond which it was not contemplated by Virginia to postpone its location. It is not, therefore, reasonable further to postpone the location of this warrant, more especially when it is considered that the United States have, from time to time, made provision by law extending the time within which the warrants to which this has been postponed might be located, the last of which expired in January, 1824, and as it is believed that the reserved lands within the district aforesaid are abundantly sufficient for the satisfaction of all the warrants issued by Virginia to her officers and soldiers. It seems, however, that the petitioner has felt bound to wait for the location of all the warrants issued to the officers and soldiers of the continental and State line before, in his opinion, his own could be located, and has thus been prevented from locating it.

Your committee forbear to urge any argument in favor of the prayer of the petitioner, as the subject is fully and ably discussed in the several statements of the petitioner, from 1 to 3, inclusive, to be found among the documents accompanying the petition, and to which they refer. Your committee content themselves with the simple inquiry, what would Virginia now do if she possessed the jurisdiction and soil ceded to the United States? A reference to her resolution of December 22, 1783, to be found among the documents referred to, and her act of cession to the United States, will satisfactorily answer the question. There cannot be a doubt that, as she then felt that her faith was pledged to provide a fund for the satisfaction of this warrant; that as in her deed of cession she manifested the strongest disposition to provide for this, among other claims upon her bounty and justice; that as she has, by her public acts, given the highest evidence of her sense of the services rendered her and our common country by this distinguished and meritorious officer, that she would, without hesitation, provide the means of satisfying this warrant if in her power. Has the obligation acknowledged by Virginia passed with the soil to the United States? Your committee think that it has. The right of the officers and soldiers in this reserved territory was vested at the time of the cession. The United States took the soil as a volunteer, with the exception of this and some other small reservations, which were never intended to be passed to the United States; and as this government received the jurisdiction over this territory without equivalent, it is morally and equitably bound, in all cases, to redeem the pledged faith of the donor, inasmuch as the United States accepted the grant, subject to all the obligations and conditions to which Virginia had previously subjected herself.

Your committee, understanding that there is within the reserved district lying between the Scioto and Miami rivers a sufficiency of good land for the satisfaction of this and all other military warrants intended by Virginia to be located there, think it just that the petitioner should have leave to locate his warrant of 5,000 acres on any of the vacant lands in that district. They therefore report a bill for that purpose.

No. 1.

IN THE HOUSE OF DELEGATES, Friday, December 19, 1783.

Resolved, That the petition of William Christian and Arthur Campbell, guardians of Charles Campbell, the only son of General William Campbell, deceased, is reasonable.

Resolved, That after the lands given by law as bounties to the officers and soldiers shall be surveyed and laid off, five thousand acres of the surplus be granted to the said Charles Campbell, in consideration of the meritorious services of his late father, General William Campbell, deceased.

A true copy of a resolution, as the same passed in the general assembly December 22, 1783.

J. PLEASANTS, JR., C. H. D.

DECEMBER 12, 1808.

No. 2.

It seemed to be the desire of the committee that I should prove General Campbell to have been on continental establishment, and of that grade which would entitle him to the quantity of acres of land which the State of Virginia, by their resolution of 1783, gave him. In pursuing these inquiries in the old records of Virginia, I have found insurmountable difficulties, as well from the destruction of the records of those times by the enemy as from the manner in which the affairs of our country were managed at that early period of the revolution. Our situation was novel and critical, our plans undigested, of course governed by events as they occurred, and consequently no regular system pursued. It is therefore presumed it cannot be expected that complete information can now be obtained. In aid, however, of these means, I have resorted to gentlemen who I supposed might have a knowledge of the concerns of our country at the commencement of the war, and of General Campbell personally. Their certificates are herewith enclosed, and will prove that General Campbell was in the service of his country, as a captain, from the commencement of the war until 1777, on that kind of continental establishment which was only known at that period; that he commanded as a colonel at King's Mountain, and that in 1781 he was appointed a general over the militia of Virginia by the legislature thereof. These are the military situations in which he stood in the revolutionary war; and for his services in those situations it was that the legislature of Virginia granted this warrant.

It cannot be doubted from these facts that if the title of the soil on the southeast and northwest sides of the Ohio river had remained in Virginia no hesitation could possibly be made to the satisfaction of this claim. When the resolution on which it exists did pass the public gratitude was unbounded towards General Campbell; indeed, the people of Virginia have not yet forgotten his signal services, nor would they be indifferent to the event of his claim, but would hold themselves under an obligation to remonstrate upon a refusal of a compensation for a right the origin of which may be said to have been a leading nerve of the American independence.

It is true, indeed, that Virginia no longer can control the disposal of the soil, except it be by appealing to the real circumstances which dictated the cession.

What induced her to cede this territory? It will be recollected that it was at the most urgent entreaty of Congress, that the confederation might be no longer obstructed. The jealousy of those States having no waste lands could not otherwise be soothed.—(See the resolution of Congress of September, 1780.) Her magnanimity and patriotism would seem to deserve at least this return, that the claim of General Campbell on the honor and justice of Virginia should not be treated with the same rigor and scrupulousness as if she had sold her territory to the other States with a view of making money by the bargain, or as if the other States had given money for it. There is a character in transactions like these which the United States ought never to relinquish by the adoption of strict criticisms.

At an early period of the revolution a tract of country had been set apart for the benefit of the Virginia troops serving in the war; and when the land office was opened in May, 1799, that reservation was confirmed.—(P. 96, Chancellor's Revisal.) The grant to General Campbell was placed on the ground with that to the other officers and soldiers in the State and continental line, except that they were to be satisfied first. On December 19, 1783, the resolution passed the house of delegates, and on the 20th became final by the approbation of the senate. At this time the general assembly had full powers over the lands in question, and understood that they possessed and acted on this belief, although they had, on January 2, 1781, offered to cede the country to the United States on very easy terms, which had not been then accepted by Congress. Nay, more; on December 22, 1783, they specially provide for bounties, like that of General Campbell's, out of these lands. On the very same day they passed the law authorizing the delegates from Virginia to Congress to make the cession by a deed, which, however, was not executed until some time in the succeeding year. Is it creditable that, with so recent an attention to the subject, they would have lost the memory of what they had done but a few hours before for General Campbell's heirs? Not forgetting it, can they be presumed intentionally to have renounced their benevolence, springing from gratitude, and to have abandoned him to whom the United States were so deeply indebted? or can there exist a hardihood sufficient to assert that the other States would have paused at the acceptance of the cession, merely because 5,000 acres were to be withdrawn from the millions ceded, and given to the family of a man whose valor achieved, upon a voluntary impulse, what is now recorded in history as an illustrious epoch in our revolutionary struggle?

It is believed, moreover, if the act of cession were to be interpreted as a court of equity would interpret a deed, under such circumstances General Campbell's heir would be sheltered under its construction. The true reason why the resolution of January, 1781, did not speak specially of this and other bounties was, that none such had occurred out of the continental and State lines, which alone were then contemplated and recognized in express terms. But when the act of cession was drawn, the reservation of these lines is not excepted out of the general grant to the United States by the same express and special terms, but by these, "not disposed of by bounties to the officers and soldiers in the American army." General Campbell's is a bounty. He was an officer, not as far as appears in the resolution in his favor in either of the lines; he was an officer of the American army, because, in strictness, the militia, the State troops, and the continental troops, were never so denominated but in a liberal sense. He was an officer in the army, in a military corps serving the American cause. It will not be pretended that this definition will admit pretensions from officers of the militia, because General Campbell claims a bounty particular to himself by special resolution, and officers of the militia in general could not find words even so comprehensive, which before the act of cession would confer bounties on them. But, after all, if the Virginia assembly mistook the real force of the terms American army, or even if, while the act of cession was in its progress through the legislature at the same time with General Campbell's resolution, they should have forgotten the latter, is it possible that the dignity of the United States can so far hazard itself for the paltry quantity of 5,000 acres of wild lands, which they hold in immense quantities, and millions of them by the courtesy of Virginia, as to suffer it to be proclaimed that, without paying a cent from their treasury, they will accept a pure gift from Virginia of federal patriotism, which had been previously encumbered with a perfect debt of public gratitude to an individual, and take refuge in the ambiguity of language from that debt which, but for inattention, misapprehension, or accident, would have been more minutely avowed? Besides, in a case between man and man, this would be reprobated in a court of equity. It might be said that when the seller, who had in the usual course of such transactions clogged the estate sold with any encumbrance, had, from any cause, failed to mention it to the purchaser, the estate itself should continue charged with it. In the present instance the usual style of such business was preserved. Virginia, possessing full sovereignty over the lands, resolve that General Campbell's heir shall have a small portion of them for the most valuable consideration. A patent could not be immediately issued in full form, because it was to be satisfied out of the surplus not yet ascertained. Before the surplus could be ascertained, the property is alienated to a body who paid nothing for it. The grant of this warrant is one of the public resolutions of the Virginia legislature. That body felt the service which dictated the grant as connected with their welfare, if not with their being. It would therefore seem, to reject such a claim, the United States must assume the prerogative of converting what would be a wrong in an individual into a right in their own case. No rule of morality is known to render justice thus flexible, nor are the United States understood ever to have assumed an exemption from the rules of good faith. It is therefore hoped that the commander of King's Mountain, who died in the service of his country, will not be marked as a solitary example of such imminent injustice. It is the descendant of this man who is now seeking her rights from the representatives of this nation, and who, if it had not been for fortuitous circumstances, might have been leading out a life in wretchedness and poverty, with a claim of five thousand acres of land in her pocket, predicated on the bounty of her country, without possessing one solitary acre! It is true, the heir of General Campbell is far from relying on this for her subsistence; yet the possessing it would be more grateful to her than double the number of acres in the ordinary mode of purchase.

Upon the whole, I am so strongly impressed that the Congress of the United States will be actuated by the same justice, liberality, and gratitude, in disposing of this claim, which pervaded the breasts of those who gave it, that it is with confidence and with pleasure I submit the subject to their consideration and disposal.

FRANCIS PRESTON.

No. 3.

To the Committee on Public Lands:

I have deemed it not improper to present to the committee a short statement of the case contained in the petition I had the honor to have presented to Congress, and some ideas which have occurred on the limited consideration I have been enabled to give the subject. For, although it is a matter of considerable interest to me, yet I have never heretofore thought it necessary to investigate the principles of the claim, because, having the evidence, I supposed the faith of the State was pledged for its satisfaction, and that any regulations which she would make in relation to her lands, either with the United States or the State of Kentucky, would always have an eye to the preservation of the rights of her officers and soldiers, and that her bounties and gifts were not merely nominal, but intended to be carried into effect in good faith.

On December 19, 1783, by a resolution of the legislature of Virginia, a warrant of 5,000 acres was granted to Charles Campbell, son of General William Campbell, for the meritorious services of the said General Campbell in the revolutionary war, on the condition it should not be located until the claims for land by the officers and soldiers on continental and State establishment should be satisfied.

On December 22, 1783, another resolution passed the legislature of Virginia, directing that all the surplus lands within the territory laid off by law for the officers and soldiers on continental and State establishments on the east side of the river Ohio, which may be left after such officers and soldiers shall have surveyed their several portions under entries made before the first of July next, (1784,) shall be set apart and reserved for the purpose of making good all such bounties. About this period Charles Campbell died, a minor, whereby this warrant became vested in Sarah B. Campbell, the only remaining child of General Campbell, who was also a minor, and, of course, incapable of transacting any business, or procuring it to be done; but, soon after, guardians were appointed for the said Sarah for this and other purposes, though before they proceeded to act on this warrant further than to deposit it in the proper office, a contest arose as to the propriety of their appointments, which pended until Kentucky became a State, within whose limits the portion of the country allotted to the officers and soldiers lay.

In the year 1793 I became interested in this warrant by my intermarriage with Sarah B. Campbell, but, being in public business at that period, did not bestow attention to it until the year 1795, when I went to Kentucky to have the land located, having learned it had been neglected by the guardians. On applying to the proper office, kept by Major Croghan, he thought he had no authority then to locate or enter the warrant, and advised an application to the legislature of Kentucky, which I immediately made by petition, praying permission to locate it on the lands lying on Cumberland and Tennessee rivers, as reserved by the law of Virginia erecting Kentucky into a separate State; but this application was refused, under the impression, it is believed, that it was a subject which belonged to the general government, and that provision was made for it in the deed of cession made by the State of Virginia to the United States of the lands northwestward of the river Ohio.

On recurring to that instrument, which was executed by the delegates in Congress from the State of Virginia in 1784, I find it provides that in case the good lands on the Tennessee, Cumberland, and Green rivers, which had been reserved for the American army, should be insufficient for the purposes intended, that then the deficiency should be made up between the Scioto and Miami rivers. This provision seems to embrace the present case, and imposes an obligation on the United States to permit this warrant to be located in that portion of the country. If this be not the case, the State of Virginia has either acted with perfidy, or has been overreached in the deed of cession, as it relates to gifts of this description. As to perfidy, the State of Virginia has ever been incapable; her magnanimous generosity to her officers and soldiers of the revolutionary war forbid the idea. The grant of the warrant, now the subject of investigation, does away any imputation of the kind, as there was no positive obligation on her to grant it, but arose from the best motives—a grateful remembrance and a just compensation for the extraordinary services of a meritorious and gallant officer; which services were duly appreciated by Virginia, as appears by the resolutions herewith exhibited. That the State of Virginia may have been overreached in this transaction is not improbable; for acting with the United States, whom she would properly suppose were actuated by the same generous feelings towards the supporters of the revolution that she was, and would do precisely as she would, employed no caution in the terms of that transfer which granted to the United States an extensive fertile portion of her State for the general purposes of the Union, after complying with her special engagements. If a doubt can remain whether the above-recited clause of the deed of cession embraces this case, it would seem there ought to be very little hesitation in the legislature of the Union to carry into execution the intention of the legislature of Virginia, who, most certainly, intended to provide for such claims. Justice seems to demand a liberal construction, and policy requires it; for, being on the eve of a war, it will be poor encouragement, indeed, for men to hazard their lives and fortunes when they observe an unwillingness in the representatives of the nation to make compensation for those hazards and privations. But I am inclined to believe there can be no doubt on this point; and that the only difficulty is, whether this warrant is to remain unlocated until all the claims of the officers and soldiers on continental establishment are satisfied, as appears to be the condition on the face of the warrant. This condition, to be sure, is an extraordinary one, but it would have been infinitely more so if a limitation had not been fixed for the location of warrants on continental establishment. But this was done by a resolution of the Virginia legislature in relation to the claims on the lands southeast of the Ohio, and by the laws of Congress in relation to the claims of the northwest side, though afterwards extended from time to time by Congress, and thereby prevented the location of this warrant. As, then, the limitation has been extended frequently, and may be continued to the entire exclusion of this claim, it would seem but justice that it, which is as obligatory on the faith of the United States as any other claim, ought now to be permitted to rest on the same principles that those on continental establishment do.

CLAIM TO BOUNTY LAND OF AN OFFICER OF THE REGIMENT COMMANDED BY GENERAL GEORGE ROGERS CLARK.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE MAY 8, 1826.

Mr. BARTON, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of William Biggs, of the State of Illinois, with the accompanying documents, reported:

That the petitioner was a lieutenant in the regiment of General George Rogers Clark, for whom a reservation was made by the State of Virginia in her act of cession to the United States, and was entitled, under the laws of Virginia, to the quantity of two thousand acres of that reservation. By a law passed in 1783 Virginia appointed a board of commissioners to distribute the said reservation among the officers and soldiers of that regiment, but provided no mode of giving notice to, or convening the officers and soldiers at, such distribution.

Early in 1785 the petitioner removed from Ohio county, Virginia, to the Illinois country, which had been conquered by General Clark, and has resided there ever since. Sometime in that year the Virginia commissioners met at Louisville, in Kentucky, to make the distribution of the reservation. It appears, from the evidence before the committee, that no regular roll of the said officers and soldiers had been preserved, and that the distribution was made upon the recollection of the officers then present, and without allotting any part of the land to the petitioner, who was then absent, and without notice of either the act of Virginia or the distribution made under it. The whole of the reservation has been distributed among the other officers and soldiers of that regiment. The petitioner must lose his share of the reservation, without his fault, unless either the State of Virginia or the United States will compensate him for his services, as was intended by both governments in forming the compact expressed in the act of cession, and the acceptance thereof by the United States.

Virginia has divested herself of the fund out of which she could place the petitioner in the situation of the other officers of that regiment, and therefore cannot do so. The United States have obtained a liberal cession from the State of Virginia, and has the means of compensating the petitioner without prejudice to the true interests of the Union. The petitioner is now old and has a numerous family, and is in adverse circumstances.

The committee therefore, without insisting upon any legal obligation on the part of the United States to indemnify the petitioner, believe it equitable that the petitioner should be placed in the situation, as nearly as may be, of the other officers of the regiment that conquered the country out of which he asks to be compensated.

They therefore recommend the passage of the bill introduced for that purpose, as amended by the committee.

No. 526.

[1ST SESSION.

RELATIVE TO THE TRUE BOUNDARIES OF THE VIRGINIA MILITARY BOUNTY LAND IN OHIO AND CLAIMS TO LAND WITHIN THE SAME.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE MAY 12, 1826.

Mr. EATON submitted the following statement:

GENERAL M'ARTHUR'S CLAIM.

For detailed and particular information in relation to the merits of the bill referred, "a bill providing for quieting the purchasers of certain lands sold by the United States in the State of Ohio," the committee beg leave to refer to the report which accompanied the bill from the House of Representatives, with the documents thereto appended, and more particularly to the opinion of the Supreme Court in the case of Doddridge's Lessee vs. Thompson and Wright.

This is a matter of fact inquiry, depending upon where a particular line is situated.

Virginia ceded to the United States her western territory, and, lest there might not be a sufficiency of land fit for cultivation in the State of Kentucky, she, in her act of cession, declared "that if the quantity of land reserved on the southeast side of the Ohio for the Virginia troops on continental establishment should prove insufficient for their legal bounties, the deficiency should be made up to said troops in good lands between the Scioto and Little Miami rivers."

The lands reserved for this purpose on the southeast side did prove insufficient, and locations, with a view to the satisfaction of Virginia continental warrants, were permitted to be made in Ohio between those two rivers, the Scioto and Little Miami.

Each of those rivers run from the north in a southern direction, discharging themselves into the Ohio. The source of the Scioto is found to be upwards of fifty miles higher to the north than the Miami. Its head branch, passing round the Miami, rises west of it. It is here the dispute arises, and the question made is, what proper construction is to be given to the words used in the Virginia cession, "between the Scioto and Little Miami?" If the sources of those two rivers were near each other, or on the same parallel, the common sense and plain answer would be to connect the streams by a direct line; and to permit entries and locations between those rivers, and below such a connecting line, would be a compliance with both the design and intention of the declaration contained in the cession by Virginia to the United States. Owing, however, to the circumstance of one river having its source further to the north than the other, and winding, too, further to the west, doubts have arisen as to the manner the line should be run from the Miami to the Scioto, so as to constitute truly a western boundary to the reserve.

In the year 1800 the United States directed the source of the Miami to be ascertained, and thence the western boundary to be run; in pursuance of which direction, in 1802, a line was run and marked from the source of the Miami to the Scioto, which is now known by the name of Ludlow's line. The act of Congress provided that this should be recognized as the west boundary to the reserve if in two years Virginia assented to it. Virginia never did assent; and hence, although the line was run, yet, so far as its establishment required the assent of Virginia, it never having been given, the line was not conclusive.

Another attempt was made in the year 1812, and in that year commissioners on the part of the United States were met by those of Virginia. They did not agree, and of course nothing definitive or conclusive was done. The line was still not established, the Virginia commissioners contending that the correct plan was to commence at the source of the Scioto and run south to the mouth of the Miami; the effect of which would have been, not to set apart the lands between the Scioto and Miami, but to place the line entirely to the west of the latter river. In this state of things, and most probably in expectation of attaining an amicable adjustment of the difference, the commissioners on the part of the United States fixed upon a point very near to where Ludlow had made his beginning and departure; but, instead of running north to the Scioto, they turned west of north, and ran the line directly to the head source of the Scioto, which line is now called Roberts', leaving included between it and Ludlow's the line first run, viz: in 1802, about 55,000 acres of land. To this line of Roberts' the Virginia commissioners never assented, and, accordingly, if the assent of that State be at all necessary, the boundary is as unfixed and uncertain as is that of Ludlow's.

Between these two lines General McArthur, in 1810, made locations to the amount of 14,000 acres, none of which, except one for 255 acres, was perfected into a grant until June, 1812; 9,000 or 10,000 acres are not yet perfected; and, for the residue, grants were obtained after the United States had surveyed and sold lands by him entered upon, and now claimed.

The question, under these circumstances, is, whether Duncan McArthur or those who purchased of the United States have the better title. It is alleged that McArthur has; that the Supreme Court, in the case of Doddridge's Lessee vs. Wright and Thompson, has so decided; and, accordingly, this bill is introduced to pay General McArthur $65,000, and thereby to put aside his opposing claim, and to quiet the claims of those who have purchased of the United States.

It is conceived that, under the cession and contract with Virginia, no obligation existed against the United States in relation to the continental claim of Virginia, to the extent that the State of Virginia could, in any manner, call in question the acts of the United States, or claim any visitatorial right or power. The satisfaction of these claims depended alone on good faith and a proper execution of the trust confided. Virginia, in the cession made by her to the United States, makes no reserve of right, but, in language merely declaratory of her own objects and purposes, says that, if the lands reserved should prove insufficient, the deficiency was to be made up between the Scioto and Little Miami. Here is not a right reserved, but a mere direction of the trust. Her lands were about to be yielded to the general government; a debt was due, founded on previous assurances made to the soldiers of the Revolution engaged in her service; and hence, in the cession made, a language like this is held: "all the lands to the west, within my limits, are ceded, but you must take care of the interests of those to whom my bounty has been promised; and if the lands reserved in Kentucky shall prove insufficient, provision for satisfying their claims must be made between the Scioto and Miami."

With a view to this object, Congress, in May, 1785, enacted "that the lands lying between the rivers Scioto and Miami should not be sold or alienated until there should be laid off and appropriated, for the officers and soldiers of Virginia, the land they were entitled to agreeably to the act of cession." In this is recognized the right both of soil and of sovereignty, and the idea maintained that, until the country should be particularly designated, laid off, and appropriated, and authority to make entries did not attach, and no locations could, of course, be made. Virginia had merely assented that certain lands lying within a particular region of country should be set apart for the satisfaction of her bounty claims; but when this should be done, or how they should be meted and bounded, was a right which, in the nature of sovereignty, attached to the United States, who stood in the character of grantee to Virginia. Suppose the State of Virginia never to have parted with the soil; that she had yet retained it, and, on her statute book, expressions such as Congress has used had been found, to wit, that the lands between the Scioto and Miami should not be sold or alienated, but should be, and was, reserved for the satisfaction of her bounty claims until some definite act was passed authorizing locations and surveys to be made by claimants, it would not be pretended that any one, merely in virtue of the words making the reservation, would be possessed of authority to proceed and perfect their warrants into grants. To authorize this, something more would be necessary; it would be necessary for the sovereign to say that such was permitted to be done, and how, and when, and under what circumstances, the surveys and locations should be made, and to prescribing the whole process necessary to the completion of the right. The transfer being made, the United States possessed every right which Virginia had; and, until they had thrown open the country, there was nothing to authorize a valid entry to be made. The question remaining is, has the United States conceded this authority?

Unquestionably the United States had the right to say that a line should be drawn, and all locations be made within such limits as they might prescribe, and refuse to set apart any other quantity until that should be fully exhausted, taking care, as good faith required, that if the warrants could not all be satisfied, another and another portion of their location should be again assigned.

By an act of Congress passed in May, 1800, Congress undertook to define the western boundary of the reserve, and to appropriate those reserved lands to be entered upon by Virginia claimants. Accordingly land districts and land offices were created, and directions issued to the surveyor general to have the western boundary of the reserve run. Ludlow, who was directed to proceed upon this business, having ascertained the head of the Little Miami, run a line north towards the Scioto until it struck the Indian boundary, where he discontinued it. This line was run and marked in 1802, and immediately thereafter, in pursuance of the same act of Congress, he surveyed the lands lying west of that line, and which lands, so surveyed, were subsequently sold by the United States. They are the same lands which General McArthur now claims in pursuance of location of military warrants made in the year 1810.

Two years after this period, to wit, in March, 1804, Congress again legislated upon this matter, and declared that the line run by Ludlow should constitute the western boundary of the reserve, if Virginia assented thereto within two years. This Virginia, however, never did do, and thence is maintained an authority to make location of warrants west of the line. This opinion, however, must be fallacious, inasmuch as the United States were altogether sovereign, and Virginia, by virtue of the terms of her cession, deprived of every authority to interfere in any manner whatever.

From this period until 1812 nothing more was done in reference to the establishing the western boundary of the reserve. In that act they refer to and declare Ludlow's to be the line, and that it should be so considered until commissioners on the part of the United States and on the part of Virginia should, by consent, establish one. At the same session commissioners on the part of Congress were appointed, who subsequently met those of Virginia, but they did not arrive at any agreement; and a line, under the direction of the United States commissioners alone, was run and marked from the head of the Little Miami to the source of the Scioto, a distance of fifty-three miles. In this case the parties disagreed, and, of consequence, consent not being had, by virtue of the terms of the act, Ludlow's was declared to be the true line. By what sort of argument can it be maintained that Roberts' is truly the line, and Ludlow's not? The United States, not Virginia, had the unquestioned right to ascertain and to decide upon this matter. Early as 1804, in pursuance of this right, legislation took place upon this subject, and Ludlow's line was agreed upon, subject, to be sure, to the condition that the State of Virginia should, in two years, to wit, by March, 1806, give her consent. In 1812, however, when the subject was again legislated upon, this line of Ludlow's is adverted to, and the declaration made that it is to be and remain the true line unless another should, by consent, be established. This consent was never had, and hence it would seem to be a fair conclusion that, if not before, at least in _____, 1812, Ludlow's was, by the proper and competent authority, declared to be the true western boundary to the reserve. If the boundary fixed by the act of 1804 was not absolute and certain, and the consent of Virginia made any difference, it was at least a notice to claimants that beyond that line to the west it was not intended they should proceed with their claims for location; and this restriction and limit, it is believed, the United States, in virtue of the rights she had acquired from Virginia, had the unquestioned authority to do. If the condition annexed, that it rested on the assent of Virginia, can vary the force of the argument, then, at any rate, the act of 1812 did have the effect, there being no condition then annexed to fix and establish Ludlow's as the true line.

We have before remarked that General McArthur made his locations in the year 1810, six years after the United States, by the declaration made that she considered Ludlow's to be the line, had given notice that the lands to the west of that line were not subject to appropriation, and long after the time, too, when the public surveys had been made and the land west of the line sold to legitimate purchasers. Of course McArthur does not present himself to the consideration of the country as a man clear of fault, or acting under such sort of innocent mistake as to be recommended to the favorable notice and consideration of Congress. He advanced upon the danger with a knowledge of all the circumstances. He knew of the act of 1804. He knew of Ludlow's line being run under sanction of the government. He knew of the surveys that had been made west of that line, and of the sales that had been made to innocent purchasers for fair and valuable consideration. He knew, too, of other and good lands, properly and certainly within the reserve, which he might have appropriated to the satisfaction of his warrants: all these things he did know, and yet, disregarding them all, chose to throw himself in collision with the United States, and to draw in question and to embarrass all they had done.

Again: although General McArthur's locations were made in 1810, his grants, most of them at least, are not yet issued. The few that have been issued are posterior to the act of 1812, which positively declares Ludlow's to be the line, with the exception of one of about 250 acres; and this was issued a few days before the passing of the act of 1812. If, then, hardships are to be complained of, they are truly of his own seeking, for justice was within his reach without his coming in contact with those acts which had been authorized by the government. Locations or entries are but incipient inchoate rights; no titles are derived until the grant be issued. The location, to be sure, operates as a lien upon the land appropriated, to the extent of notice to after locators, that they may avoid collision, but against the sovereign authority it creates neither a lien nor bar; it is only when the sovereign, by its own act, in the making a grant, is estopped, and even then the estoppel fails to operate, if, as in this case, previous grants have been made to others. General McArthur consequently had the authority, and yet has it, to the extent of 10,000 acres, of withdrawing his entries, and receiving all that the United States is bound, in right, justice, or under her compact of cession, to do, to be furnished with lands fit for cultivation. With this he is not content, but, with open eyes, ventures in conflict with the government of the United States, subjects her to much trouble and expense, as well in courts of justice as out, and now comes here and asks to be paid the value of lands which, with a full knowledge of all the circumstances, he has improperly entered.

But it is said that the Supreme Court has adjudged all the facts and circumstances of this case, and that the decision in the case of Doddridge's Lessee vs. Thompson and Wright determines every doubt in favor of General McArthur. This is believed not to be the case. Thompson, who was defendant in this case, was, to be sure, a purchaser under and from the United States; but then the very fact which is the material one in the inquiry was yielded. It was an agreed case, and the facts consented to were all spread upon the record; and upon the facts thus agreed to and spread out the court was required to decide. One, and the most material of all, was the admission that Roberts' was the true line; which being conceded, the court determined this, and nothing more, that the locations made were, of course, within the reserve, and if so, then was the result certain that they were subject to entry by the holders of military warrants. The line of Roberts being admitted, the conclusion fairly resulted that those lands were subject to entry and location for the reason that, by the act of 1790, a general authority was given to the holders of warrants to proceed to satisfy them on the lands between the Scioto and Miami, and because, by the act of 1785, not repealed, Congress had absolutely forbid that any of the lands lying between those rivers should be sold or alienated until the Virginia warrants should have been satisfied. The simple isolated inquiry for the Supreme Court to determine was; whether or not was the location of Doddridge situated between the Scioto and Little Miami; and here they were precluded from all inquiry, for the reason that Roberts' line was admitted on the record. Consequently, the court, in delivering their opinion, use this language: "We are relieved from the inquiry respecting the main branches of these rivers by the case agreed. * * * * Admitting this line to constitute the true boundary of the military reserve, the land in controversy lies within it, and the plaintiff's patent would consequently be valid if it depended entirely on the original deed of cession and the acts of Congress which have been recited."

Another material omission in the agreed case of Doddridge's Lessee vs. Thompson and Wright, is found in this, that the date of the plaintiff's location is not given. The Supreme Court, in declaring their opinion, remark, it does not appear when this location was made. "It might have been made previous to the passage of the act of 1807, and the presumption of law is, that it was made before that time, since the patent is presumed to be valid until the contrary is shown."

To arrive, then, at a conclusion favorable to the claim of the plaintiff, the court assumes the fact, through presumption, for the record was silent, that this location was made anterior to 1807. Whether, in the case of Doddridge's Lessee, this was a true or false presumption is material to this investigation only to the extent of showing that such is not the fact in this case. And if, as the Supreme Court appear to have done, this was a material point in that case, then the same fact not now appearing in this, the same conclusion may with propriety be disputed. McArthur's locations are shown to have been made in 1810, three years after the passing of the act of 1807.

By the act of 1807, three years further time was given, as repeatedly since has been the case, to claimants under Virginia warrants to perfect their rights. The act, however, contains this saving provision: provided, that no location by the holders of any warrants should, under any circumstances, "be made on tracts of land for which patents had been previously issued, or which had been previously surveyed." If any such were obtained, they were declared null and void.

After the passing of this act, viz: in 1810, General McArthur having gone into the market, and purchased various claims from various persons, made locations to the amount of fourteen thousand acres, which are the present subject of investigation. They are, in the language of the act, null and void, for the reason that they were made on lands for which patents had been previously issued, or on lands previously surveyed, either of which made them void. It is difficult to conceive what other end or object could have been held in view by the prohibition of the act of 1807, if it was not to guard against the very kind of cases now submitted. Congress, solicitous to do justice, and fairly and faithfully to execute the trusts confided by Virginia, endeavored to arrange the western boundary of the Scioto and Miami reserve, and as early as 1802 directed the line to be run, and which was run by Ludlow. It was provided, however, in 1804, that to this the consent of Virginia should be given in two years. Here, then, in the year 1804, the line of Ludlow is recognized, subject to the approval in two years by the State of Virginia, which necessarily would have fallen in March, 1806; when, therefore, in the following year, 1807, they came to legislate again in reference to this subject, they enlarge the time for making locations to three years, giving a still longer period for making and returning surveys; and with this express and positive limitation annexed, that any locations thus to be made were to be and should be void if made on lands previously patented, or on lands previously surveyed. This precaution taken in the bill evidently was designed to protect locations and titles west of Ludlow's line, and could have been intended for no other purpose. It could not, by any forced construction, have been intended to affect the claims of Virginia bounty land claimants, for a most obvious reason, that it could not reach them. A patent previously issued placed at defiance every warrant-holder and subsequent locator, and hence needed no aid from the statute. He who had a previous location, and whose land had been surveyed, thereby acquired a lien or inchoate right which no future locator or enterer could disturb. It would then have been the veriest imaginable folly for a legislature of well, informed men, or even common sense men, to have set themselves to work to give protection through laws enacted to claims already resting in most perfect security. The adducible inference, and none other can be inferred, is, that the provision of the act of 1807 was alone intended to guard the surveys which had previously been made by Ludlow, and which were situated to the west of the line run by him in 1802, under the orders of the government.

No. 527.

[2D SESSION.]

OPERATIONS OF THE LAND SYSTEM, AND THE NUMBER OF MILITARY BOUNTY LAND WARRANTS ISSUED DURING THE LAST YEAR.

COMMUNICATED TO CONGRESS BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, WITH HIS ANNUAL MESSAGE, DECEMBER 5, 1826.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 1, 1826.

SIR: Referring to the report made by me on December 15, 1825, and then submitted to you, I have now the honor to state that the whole of the very heavy arrearages of the business of the office has been brought up, and that the current business of the office in all its branches has been brought up to the present time, so far as the returns have rendered it practicable; and I feel great satisfaction in adding that, with few exceptions, the returns of the registers and receivers have been promptly and regularly made, and that in most of the cases where there has been delay in making their returns satisfactory reasons have been assigned for such delay. The paper No. 1 exhibits the periods to which the quarterly accounts of the receivers have been returned, the periods to which they have been adjusted, and the amounts in the hands of the receivers at the dates of the accounts respectively. The paper No. 2 is a statement showing the cases where the returns of the registers have been delayed, and the causes of such delay so far as they are known to this office.

In respect to the surveying department, so far as it is connected with this office, I have the honor to state that the returns of the surveyor general whose surveying district embraces the States of Ohio and Indiana and the Territory of Michigan are regularly and promptly made, and that there are no existing embarrassments in relation to the business of that office.

In the surveying district embracing the States of Illinois and Missouri and the Territory of Arkansas every possible exertion is made by the very able officer at the head of that department to bring up the very heavy arrearages which existed in that office previous to his appointment, and to execute the current business.

In the district embracing the States of Mississippi and Louisiana great embarrassments exist in the surveying department, and particularly in relation to the surveying and preparing for patenting the private claims in the State of Louisiana. Some of the causes of embarrassment can only be removed by the interposition of the legislative regulations. On this subject I made a communication to the chairman of the Land Committee of the House of Representatives during the last session of Congress; and, without some further legal provisions, I have great doubts whether the present incumbent will be able to surmount the existing difficulties attending the execution of the surveys in that district.

In the surveying district which embraces the State of Alabama the surveying has generally been executed, with the exception of the surveying of the lands lying south of the 31st degree of latitude in that State. This particular tract of country formed a part of the surveying district embracing the States of Mississippi and Louisiana, but, by the act of February 28, 1824, it was attached to the surveying district of the State of Alabama. As, however, by the existing laws, the surveying of the private claims in this tract of country, which include a large portion of the best land in it, is subject to the direction of one of the principal deputy surveyors for the State of Louisiana, it has been deemed expedient to suspend the surveying generally until the surveying of the private as well as the public lands shall be placed by legislative enactment under the entire control of the surveyor for Alabama. A communication embracing this subject has been made to the chairman of the Land Committee of the House of Representatives.

In the surveying district for the Territory of Florida, the surveying of the public lands has progressed with as much rapidity as was desirable. It is, however, indispensably necessary, for the further due execution of the surveying business in that Territory, that legislative provision be made for the surveying of the private land claims in Florida. Had the bill in relation to this subject, which was reported to the House of Representatives at the last session of Congress, been acted upon and passed, it would have enabled the surveyor to have closed the surveys of the private and public lands in that Territory within a very short period of time.

The arrearages of the business of this office having been brought up, and all that portion of the business relating to military land claims of every description being very much diminished, it becomes my duty to state that the number of the clerks in this office may, with a due regard to the public interest, be diminished. Previous to the act of April 20, 1818, the number of clerks in this office had been increased with a view to expedite the issuing of the military land patents to the soldiers of the late war. The act referred to authorized the employment of twenty-three clerks in this office, and fixed the compensation, which amounted to twenty-two thousand five hundred and fifty dollars, and regulated their salaries agreeably to the annexed schedule, marked No. 3. But as the duties assigned to, and required of, the respective clerks in this office in no manner corresponded with the amount of the salaries which they respectively received, and as the act of 1818 had fixed the salaries of the clerks in this office in a ratio very disproportionate to the salaries of the clerks in all the other departments of the government, its provisions have operated unequally and injuriously in relation to this office.

It is believed that seventeen competent clerks, seven of those being good and efficient bookkeepers, would be adequate to execute the business assigned to this office. I therefore submit the paper marked No. 4, exhibiting a statement of the number of clerks required in this office, the nature of their duties, and their salaries, respectively, having reference to the salaries generally allowed in other offices, and would respectfully recommend that, from and after the fourth of March next, that part of the act of April 20, 1818, which regulates the number and fixes the compensation of the clerks in this office be so amended as to regulate the number and fix the compensation of the same, in conformity to the statement exhibited in the paper now submitted.

I have the honor to be, with very great respect, your obedient servant,

GEO. GRAHAM.

Hon. RICHARD RUSH, Secretary of the Treasury.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 15, 1825.

SIR: I submit to you a report relative to the execution of those acts which have been placed under the immediate superintendence of this office, and the transactions of the office generally.

You have been heretofore furnished with a statement showing the quantity of land sold in the year 1824, and for the first six months of 1825, with the amounts for which they sold, and those paid into the treasury.

The act entitled "An act to provide for the extinguishment of the debt due to the United States by the purchasers of public lands," passed May 18, 1824, having, from its own limitations, expired on the 10th of April last, I have the honor now to submit to you two statements showing the amount of debt which has been extinguished under the provisions of that act, and the balances now due to the United States by individuals; that marked A exhibits, for each land district, the quantity and amount of the purchase money of the lands relinquished; the quantity and amount of the purchase money of the lands fully paid for; the balances due, including interest, on the lands fully paid for, and the manner in which they were paid; the quantity of land, and the amount of money paid thereon, on which further credit has been taken, and which, by the provisions of the act of 1821, has become forfeited to the United States; the quantity of land and the amount of money paid thereon, which, agreeably to the provisions of the act of May, 1800, is subject to be sold for the balance due to the United States; and the amount of debt, including the interest on the purchase money of the lands fully paid for, which has been liquidated. That marked B exhibits a statement of the amount of debt due by individuals for the purchase of the public lands at the periods therein designated. From these exhibits it appears that, by the operation of the act of May 18, 1824, the debt due for the purchase of the public lands has been reduced in an amount equal to $3,906,578 34; that there has been relinquished to the United States 1,140,749 acres of land, which had been sold for $3,314,864 32; and that complete payment has been made for 932,068 acres, the original purchase money of which was $2,361,876, and on which there was due, including interest at the time of payment, $1,511,664 07. It also appears that the debt due by individuals for the purchase of public lands amounted, on December 31, 1820, to $21,213,350 17; and that on June 30, 1825, it had, by payments and relinquishment of lands, been reduced to $6,322,675.

By the provisions of the act for the relief of the purchasers of the public lands, passed March 2, 1821, the debt due by the individuals who availed themselves of the benefit of the act was divided into three classes: on the first class a credit of eight years was given; on the second, a credit of six years; and on the third, a credit of four years, payable by annual instalments; the period of credit on the third class expired in April last, at which time it appears that the debt due in that class had been liquidated, with the exception of that portion which was due on 16,734 acres of land, on which there had been paid $36,663 81, which amount, by the provisions of the act above referred to, has become forfeited, and the lands reverted to the United States. The debt due in the second class will all have accrued and become due on December 31, 1826, and that in the first class on March 31, 1829. Unless the benefits of the act of May 18, 1824, shall be extended, it is believed that it will be impracticable for the purchasers of the lands to make payment, and the lands with the amount paid thereon, to a great extent, will revert and be forfeited to the United States. The provisions of the act of May 18, 1824, are sufficiently liberal, and have afforded general satisfaction to the persons interested. Should it be deemed proper by Congress to renew this act, it is recommended that provision be made by which the owners of the lands embraced in the third class, and which lands have reverted, may be permitted to redeem them; it is probable that owners of a large portion of these lands intended to abandon them, but there are many cases where, from ignorance, inadvertence, or accident, they have become forfeited.

It will be perceived that the great reduction of the debt due from the purchasers of the public lands has been principally effected by a relinquishment of a part of the lands purchased. The lands thus relinquished are, for the most part, those which were purchased at the highest prices; so far as these relinquished lands, however, have been sold, they have, with few exceptions, brought only the minimum price. This is attributable to two causes: 1st. The very large quantity of public lands subject to entry at the minimum price in each land district, which has a general tendency to prevent competition. 2d. The combination of individuals in those districts where the lands, from their value and situation, would have commanded high prices. At some of the public sales it is believed that such combinations of individuals have received from the occupants and actual purchasers of the land a greater sum of money in addition than that received by the government. To remedy this evil, it is recommended that the lands heretofore relinquished, and such as may hereafter be relinquished, should not be sold at public or private sale, unless they brought a given price, to be fixed by law, and which should be greater than the minimum price at which other lands are now subject to be sold. Such a provision would probably prevent combination; it would insure a fair price for the lands, and enable the government to bring into market, without delay, the whole relinquished lands without sacrifice, as such of them as were not sold at public sale would, subsequently, be entered by individuals as their means might enable them to do so. That portion of them which would not bring the minimum price thus fixed, could, at some future period, be again offered at public sale, and be sold as other public lands now are.

On reference to the statement marked A it will be seen that the average price of all the lands relinquished under the act of May 18, 1824, was about $3 per acre. If, in addition to this, authority be given to the register and receiver of the respective land offices to purchase in, on account of the United States, such tracts of land at the public sale of the relinquished lands as they have good and sufficient reasons to believe will not sell for a price equivalent to their fair value, in consequence of the combination or collusion of individuals, it is believed that the interest of the United States, and that of the bona fide purchasers, will be sufficiently secured on the resale of the relinquished lands. It has, however, been represented to this office that many persons who have relinquished lands would repurchase them, within a reasonable time, at the prices originally given for them. To such a provision there could be no reasonable objection, provided the repurchase was made before the public sale of the lands thus relinquished.

Notwithstanding the execution of the act of May 18, 1824, has very much increased the duties and labors of the registers and receivers of all the land offices where lands had been sold on a credit, and those of this office in particular, yet I have the satisfaction to state that the returns for the land offices have been made regularly and punctually, with very few exceptions, and that great progress has been made in bringing up the arrears in the several branches of the business in this office. Patents have been issued for all the lands purchased and paid for under the credit and cash systems previous to the 1st of May last, so far as the returns of the registers and surveyors will enable us to issue them, with the exception of the lands purchased at the offices of St. Louis and Cahaba. In consequence of the delay in the receipt of the returns from those offices, patents have only been issued for the lands purchased at those offices previous to the 18th and 21st of March last. The whole number of patents issued since July, 1823, for lands purchased from the United States is 45,416. Estimating the annual sales to require the issue of 9,000 patents, it will appear that there were nearly three years arrearages to bring up in this branch of the business of this office. The posting of the books of this office has been brought up to the periods respectively to which the patents have been issued—the arrearages of this branch of business were also very great. The paper marked C, herewith transmitted, exhibits the periods to which the accounts of the receivers of public money were settled—the dates to which they have been rendered. The delay in rendering the accounts by the receivers at Cahaba and St. Louis is attributable to the resignations of the receivers of those offices. That branch of the business of this office relating to the issuing of military patents of every description has never been in arrear; and that relative to the issuing of patents for private claims has been brought up so far as the returns of the respective officers and surveyors will justify the issuing of them.

The surveying of the public lands has progressed regularly and satisfactorily, with the exception of the public lands and private claims in the State of Louisiana, and that part of Alabama south of 31° of latitude. In this section of country but little progress has been made in surveying the private claims and such parts of the public lands as it is desirable to bring into market. A variety of causes has occasioned and will continue to occasion much embarrassment and difficulty in completing the surveying of this section of the country. Much of this embarrassment is attributable, however, to the extension of the laws for the adjustment of private claims in Louisiana, to the organization of the surveying department, and to the difficulty of procuring surveyors to survey the public and private lands, and to connect the private surveys which have been made with the township lines in certain portions of this section of the country for the compensation allowed by law.

The surveying of the lands in Louisiana is by law placed under the superintendence of the surveyor south of the State of Tennessee, who resides at Washington, Mississippi; and the surveying of those in Alabama, south of the 31° degree of latitude, by a late act of Congress was placed under the superintendence of the surveyor for that State. But within this district of country there are three principal deputy surveyors who are appointed by the surveyor of the lands south of Tennessee, the duties and powers of one of which officers extend to the surveying of the private claims in that part of Alabama lying south of 31° of latitude. In a report formerly made from this office, and submitted to Congress, it was stated that this organization was defective, and further experience has confirmed that impression. It is therefore respectfully recommended that the offices of the surveyor of lands south of Tennessee, and those of the principal deputy surveyors of Louisiana, be abolished; that a surveyor be appointed for the State of Louisiana whose duties and powers shall be limited to the surveying of the lands within that State; that a principal deputy surveyor be appointed for the State of Mississippi, invested with the powers, and who shall perform the duties required of the surveyor south of Tennessee in relation to the surveying of the lands within the limits of the State of Mississippi; that the surveying of all the lands south of the 31° degree of latitude in Alabama be placed under the direction of the surveyor for that State.

Such an organization, it is believed, would expedite the ultimate completion of the surveying of the lands, would give more general satisfaction to the citizens immediately interested, and might be made more economical. The salaries and clerk hire for the surveyor and principal deputies now amount to five thousand two hundred dollars; the principal deputies are allowed, in addition, a fee of twenty-five cents a mile for every mile of the boundary line of each survey examined by them, and twenty-five cents for every certificate. Allowing to the surveyor for Louisiana, for his own compensation and clerk hire, three thousand five hundred dollars, and to the principal deputy for Mississippi, for his compensation and clerk hire, one thousand five hundred dollars; the expense under the proposed organization would be five thousand dollars.

The objection to the abolishing of the office of the principal deputy surveyors in Louisiana, and consolidating the surveying department for both the States of Louisiana and Mississippi under one office, is, that a large portion of the best lands in each of those States are held as private claims, much of the evidences of titles to which are to be found in the files and on the records of the surveyor's offices; and if they were removed from one or the other of these States, it would subject the claimants to inconvenience, and would produce great excitement among the citizens of the State from which they were removed.

The public lands in Mississippi, so far as the Indian title has been extinguished, have nearly all been surveyed, and no difficulty exists in relation to the surveying to be executed in that State, except as to the resurveying required for the correction of errors. The organization proposed is believed to be entirely adequate for all the purposes of a surveying department located in and confined to the limits of that State. Under the existing laws the maximum price allowed for surveying is four dollars per mile, and that sum has been given indiscriminately for the surveying of all lands for which contracts have been made. It is represented that much of the alluvial lands in Louisiana, and the surveying and connecting the private claims generally, cannot be contracted for at that price; it is therefore recommended that provision be made by law for increasing the maximum price for surveying the alluvial lands, and for surveying private claims and connecting them with the township lines in that section of country within the limits of the land district south of Tennessee, and in that part of Alabama south of the 31° degree of latitude; and, if it is deemed necessary, the price now allowed by law for surveying the other description of lands within those districts might be reduced. Should any new organization of the surveying department in this district be made, it will be necessary to provide for the removal and arranging of the papers, and for the infliction of a penalty on any officer refusing to give up the records and papers of his office.

An act passed on May 26, 1824, providing for the disposition of three several tracts of land in Tuscarawas county, in the State of Ohio, and for other purposes. Mr. Patrick, of New Philadelphia, in Ohio, was appointed the agent for carrying into effect the provisions of this act. It appears from his returns that the lands in the three tracts were valued at twenty-six thousand nine hundred and twenty-two dollars and twenty cents; that those sold by him at public sale, together with the rents, yielded ten thousand one hundred dollars and twenty-one cents; that, after paying the expenses incident to the execution of the act, and six thousand six hundred and fifty-two dollars and forty-six cents due and directed by the act to be paid to the Society of United Brethren, he deposited in the branch bank at Chillicothe one thousand four hundred and seventy-four dollars and ninety-eight cents and a half to the credit of the fund for raising an annuity for the Christian Indians. The lands remaining unsold at public sale being subject to private entry at the land office at Zanesville for the prices at which they were valued, it appears from the returns from that office to the 31st of October that a further sum of four thousand and sixty-nine dollars and ninety-six cents has been received and is applicable to the same fund.

The act passed on March 3, 1823, to establish an additional land office in the Territory of Michigan, provides that all the lands to which the Indian title was extinguished by the treaty of Chicago shall be attached to that district. As there is an interference in the boundaries of the lands ceded by the treaty at Chicago and those ceded by the treaty at Saginaw, which were attached to the land district of Detroit, and as the Grand river is the northern boundary of the lands ceded by the treaty of Chicago, and that river not being navigable in a great part of its course, it is not therefore a convenient boundary for a land district, it is recommended that the law be altered so as to make the division line between those districts correspond with the meridian line, and such of the regular township lines as Congress may deem proper.

With very great respect, &c., &c.,

GEO. GRAHAM.

Hon. RICHARD RUSH, Secretary of the Treasury of the United States.

No. 528.

[2D SESSION.]

APPLICATION OF ARKANSAS FOR RELIEF TO THE SETTLERS ON THE CHOCTAW LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 7, 1826.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the general assembly of the Territory of Arkansas respectfully represents: That your memorialists have noticed, with deep interest and much concern, that the general government has not been able, by the late treaty made and concluded with the Choctaw nation of Indians at the city of Washington, on January 20, 1825, to acquire from that nation all their tract of country within our Territory which had been settled and improved by a civilized and industrious population previous to the cession of this part of our Territory to the said Choctaw nation of Indians, by treaty at Doak's Stand of October 18, 1820.

Your memorialists, therefore, are called upon by that sacred sense of duty which they owe to themselves, and by that regard which is due to a distressed and ruined portion of their community, to notice that distress and misery which await a portion of their fellow-citizens in Crawford and Miller counties, by being driven from their improvements, their houses, and homes, and to implore the munificence of the general government in their behalf.

Your memorialists would, while they appeal to the sympathy, magnanimity, and beneficence of a great nation, invite the consideration of Congress to the peculiar situation of this distressed portion of their fellow-citizens previous to the late treaty with the Choctaws of January 20, 1825.

The tract of country from which our citizens are about to be driven was acquired by the United States from the Quapaw nation of Indians by treaty of August 24, 1818, by which it became a part of the public lands of the United States, and over which the legislature of Missouri, to which this tract of territory then appertained, extended its civil jurisdiction.

That about the year 1819 a part of the said public lands was, by the authority of the United States, surveyed into townships, and subdivided into sections as far as ranges 38 and 39, and within about eight miles of the present western boundary line of the Territory of Arkansas, as lately established by act of Congress.

That on January 5, 1819, an order issued from the headquarters of the division of the south, directed to the commanding officer of the United States troops at Fort Smith, of which the following is an extract:

"In pursuance of orders from the Secretary of War, immediate measures will be taken to remove all settlers on the Red river above the mouth of the Kiamiche, and on the Arkansas above the mouth of the Poto, and to the west of the main branches of the Kiamiche and Poto, and a line drawn between their sources."

The settlers, therefore, in pursuance of the aforesaid order, immediately removed and located themselves below and east of said Kiamiche and Poto upon lands, to the settlement of which they did not conceive there existed any prohibition, as about that time, or soon afterwards, a part of said public lands was surveyed into sections as if with a view to encourage and invite emigrants.

That, under these encouragements and flattering prospects held out by the authorities of the government, there was an immediate and considerable increase of the settlements east of the Kiamiche, on Red river, in Miller county, and below and east of the Poto, in Crawford county, upon and near the lands surveyed into sections as aforesaid, which settlements were then made with a view to a permanent residence, and, consequently, the improvements were large and valuable.

That these settlers, to whose situation your memorialists would call the attention of Congress, became greatly alarmed by the treaty of October 18, 1820, aforesaid, by which the tract of country upon which they did then reside was ceded to the Choctaw Indians, but were soon afterwards more reconciled by the assurances from the President of the United States, received, as they believe, by James Miller, late governor, and also by the late and present delegate in Congress from this Territory, that it was not the intention of the general government to disturb or remove any of the settlers from the lands then ceded to the Choctaw Indians, and that the settled part of said country, ceded to the said Indians, would be repurchased from them; which repeated assurances greatly satisfied our citizens, and they continued to enlarge and extend their improvements.

Your memorialists further respectfully represent that, from the time of their first settlement where they now reside, a civil government and civil jurisdiction has been extended to them, and courts of law established and held within the tract of country which, by the late treaty with the Choctaws, January 20, 1825, has been transferred or reserved for said Indians, and from which a considerable portion of these distressed persons are to be removed.

Your memorialists are well aware that the general government has heretofore removed from Indian lands citizens of the United States who had settled upon lands owned at the time of such settlement by any Indian tribe or nation; but the unfortunate part of our fellow-citizens, whose ruinous situation has excited and enlisted our sympathies, settled upon the public lands of the United States when a part of these public lands had been surveyed into sections, and previous to the treaty of October 18, 1820, by which it was transferred to the Choctaw nation of Indians; and they had, therefore, the strongest reason to believe that they would not in future be molested or deprived of their quiet possessions.

Your memorialists would further respectfully observe that they have been informed that an order issued from the Department of War, in the year 1823, directed to the commanding officer of the United States troops stationed at Fort Smith, which commanded the removal of all those who had settled on the Red river above the mouth of the Kiamiche, and on the Arkansas above the Poto, and a line drawn between their sources; which order, being in accordance with that of January 5, 1819, seems clearly to imply and strongly confirms the belief that all persons settled below said line would not be disturbed in their possessions, inasmuch as a prohibition to settle above said line inferred a permission on the part of the government to settle below the Kiamiche on Red river, and Poto on Arkansas.

Your memorialists would also further represent to the consideration of Congress whether it is not, under all the circumstances in which these settlements and improvements were made, extremely unjust that they should now be forced and driven by our own government from the farms and improvements which they had labored for years to make, under the faith, as they believed, of the government by whom they are to be deprived of their homes, and doomed to poverty and ruin, without some little relief, some small remuneration for years employed in laborious industry.

It is therefore submitted to the general government whether some provision either in money or lands should not be made for the relief of those few of their distressed fellow-citizens who have made the improvements, as aforesaid, east of the Poto and Kiamiche, and west of the Choctaw eastern boundary line as established by the treaty of January 20, 1825. And your memorialists will, as in duty bound, ever pray.

ROBERT BEAN, Speaker of the House of Representatives.
JACOB BARKMAN, President of the Council.

No. 529.

[2D SESSION.]

LEAD MINES IN ILLINOIS AND MISSOURI, AND OPERATIONS THEREAT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 8, 1826.

To the House of Representatives of the United States:

I transmit to the House of Representatives a report from the Secretary of War, with sundry documents containing the information requested by the resolution of the House of the 8th of May last, relating to the lead mines belonging to the United States in Illinois and Missouri.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

WASHINGTON, December 8, 1826.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, December 7, 1826.

The Secretary of War, to whom was referred the resolution of the 8th of May last, requesting "the President of the United States to cause to be obtained, and lay the same before Congress at the next session, a statement showing the number of persons engaged in working the lead mines belonging to the United States in Illinois and Missouri; the quantity of mineral raised at them; the quantity of land that has been ascertained by discovery to be mineral land; and, as nearly as may be, the quantity of lead made at those mines since the first day of July last; and also a statement showing the number of persons engaged in working such mines in said States as belong to private individuals or companies; and, as nearly as may be, the quantity of mineral raised and lead made at those mines since the period aforesaid," has the honor to submit herewith a report of the colonel of ordnance, made in compliance with the resolution.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

JAMES BARBOUR.

The PRESIDENT of the United States.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT, Washington, December 4, 1826.

Sir: In compliance with your instructions to collect and transmit the information required by a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 8th of May last, I have the honor to state that the requisite instructions were given to the superintendent of the lead mines to collect and forward the information required. And I have now the honor to submit his report, which contains all the information upon the subject which it has been in his power to collect.

It will be observed that the report of the superintendent is not limited to the matters mentioned in the resolution, but embraces others which, although not expressly required by the terms of the resolution, are considered material to the subject of it. It is considered proper, therefore, to present the report entire, as in this state it gives a fuller account of the present condition and future prospects of the public lead mines.

The superintendent renews a proposition, heretofore submitted, for opening a road from Potosi to the Mississippi river, and adds another for improving the navigation of the "Upper Mississippi." Both of these propositions are conceived to be of sufficient importance to merit the consideration of the proper authorities. It is believed that the expense of carrying them into effect would in a short time be reimbursed by the increased product of the lead mines. The improvement recommended in the navigation of the Mississippi, it is conceived, would be important to the public service in other respects than in promoting the interests of the lead mines, as it would, doubtless, greatly lessen the difficulties of communicating with the remote military posts situated on the headwaters of that river.

It is presumed that legislative sanction is necessary to measures like these now proposed. They are therefore respectfully submitted in connexion with the report which is made in answer to the resolution.

I have the honor to be, sir, your most obedient,

GEO. BOMFORD, *Brevet Colonel, on Ordnance service.*Hon. JAMES BARBOUR, Secretary of War.

UNITED STATES LEAD MINE OFFICE, St. Louis, Missouri, September 30, 1826.

SIR: In compliance with your instructions, I proceed to report the number of persons engaged in working the lead mines, the property of the United States, in Illinois and Missouri; the quantity of mineral raised at them, and the lead made since July 1, 1825; the number of persons engaged in working private mines; the quantity of mineral raised at them, and the quantity of lead made since July 1, 1825, and the quantity of land that has been, by discovery, ascertained to be mineral land; which information is required by a resolution introduced into the House of Representatives by the Hon. D. P. Cook at the last session of Congress, a copy of which was received with your instructions.

It is necessary to premise that a portion of the information required by the resolution could only be obtained in an incomplete and somewhat unsatisfactory manner, owing to causes beyond my control, and which will be explained in this report. So far as was practicable, I have given facts; when compelled to resort to other sources, I have used due caution in adopting the estimates and information obtained.

First. The number of persons engaged in working the public lead mines.

I am enabled to give with accuracy the number of persons at the public mines in Illinois only, or rather at the mines near the north boundary of that State, and which are supposed to be within its limits, commonly known as the Fever River mines, viz: On July 1, 1825, there were at those mines about one hundred men; on December 31, 1825, one hundred and fifty-one men; on March 31, 1826, one hundred and ninety-four; on June 30, 1826, four hundred and six; and on August 31, 1826, (the date of the last report,) there were four hundred and fifty-three men. You will observe the increase has been gradual, and the number is still augmenting. In Missouri, the number of miners, teamsters, and laborers of every description, (including slaves,) at the public and private mines, may be estimated at about two thousand. They do not, however, work constantly at mining; many are farmers, &c., who, with their slaves, devote to mining such time only as they can spare from their other pursuits. I am of the opinion that not more than the quantum of labor to be derived from the steady application of one thousand men is applied to the mining and other incidental business connected with it in Missouri. The miners working for themselves generally labor when they please and as they think proper. The proprietors or lessees of the mines have no control over the miners other than that of requiring them to deliver the mineral they obtain; they are constantly changing from one mine to another, and it is impossible, under such a state of things, to ascertain the amount of labor bestowed. The estimate I have given is from observation, and information derived from experienced persons.

Second. The quantity of mineral raised and lead made at the public mines.

At the Fever River mines, (Illinois,) from July 1, 1825, to August 31, 1826, there were 2,416,356 pounds of mineral obtained, and 1,042,288 pounds of lead made, leaving on hand, at the latter date, mineral and ashes (fine mineral partly desulphurated) sufficient to make 1,380,000 pounds of lead, including about 1,200,000 pounds of mineral raised at the mines, but not taken to the furnaces. In Missouri, from July 1, 1825, to September 30, 1826, there were obtained from the public mines under lease 2,641,231 pounds of mineral, and 1,738,427 pounds of lead were made, leaving mineral and ashes on hand at the latter date sufficient to make 170,000 pounds of lead.

Third. The number of persons engaged in working the private lead mines in Illinois and Missouri.

As respects Missouri, I have already stated that the miners work indiscriminately at public and private mines. In Illinois there are no private mines wrought.

Fourth. The quantity of lead made at private mines.

I am compelled to estimate when answering this. Persons are naturally unwilling to disclose the amount of their business. From the best sources within my reach, I am of the opinion that about 8,000,000 of pounds of lead were made in Missouri from July 1, 1825, to September 30, 1826, from mines other than those leased from the United States. At least one-fourth of that amount was, however, made from mineral surreptitiously obtained from public mineral lands, principally in small quantities at a time, leaving about 6,000,000 of lead as the product of the mines owned or claimed by individuals in Missouri.

Fifth. The quantity of land which has been ascertained by discovery to be mineral land.

I am somewhat at a loss to answer this. If it is meant to inquire the number of acres from which lead ore, in quantity, has been obtained in Missouri, it may be estimated at 3,000 acres. This amount, it may be observed, is very small compared with the reservations from sale on account of mineral appearances; but as the land is surveyed and subdivided into tracts, the smallest of which is eighty acres, when one acre is found to be mineral land, it is necessary to reserve the whole tract, as the acre of mineral land may produce an immense quantity of mineral in a very short time. The Mine Shiloh has, since its discovery in 1811, produced at least $500,000 worth of lead. This mine covers less than thirty acres. One public mine leased in November, 1824, has, from that period until September 30, 1826, produced 680,000 pounds of lead, exclusive of about 180,000 pounds taken from it previous to the lease. This mine does not cover more than ten acres. Another lease of a mineral tract, of less than eighty acres, has produced about 600,000 pounds of lead principally from one vein covering but a small superficial extent. But if the information required by the resolution is the amount of land which, from geological and mineralogical features, is considered mineral land—land possessing such indices as to leave no reasonable doubt of its containing lead mineral under the surface—the amount may be stated at present at 400,000 acres. This amount includes all which has been reserved from sale by law, as well as all the land claimed and held under French and Spanish grants, pre-emption and settlement rights, and all other incomplete titles which happened to be within the bounds of the reservations.

I have thus replied to the resolution in the best manner I have had it in my power to do, and I will take the liberty to subjoin such other remarks as may probably be illustrative or interesting.

From July 1, 1825, to September 30, 1826, there has accrued as rent of the public mines 278,071 pounds of lead, and there is mineral now on hand sufficient to yield 155,000 pounds more—making a total of 433,071 pounds, which, at the present price, would amount to $21,653 55. After deducting the expenses of collection, transportation, &c., &c., (about $3,000,) the clear revenue would be $17,653 55 for a little more than one year, and this has accrued under unfavorable circumstances; for, in Missouri, owing to a very wet season, mining has been prosecuted with but little success, and, as before stated, much has been lost to the United States from unauthorized mining. At Fever river the operations were not fairly commenced until June. Previous to that time but two furnaces were in operation; subsequently five have been in constant activity. Although the amount of rent above stated is of little comparative importance to the government, yet it is satisfactory to know that the business is in a flourishing condition, and bids fair to increase annually. The number of miners at Fever river is increasing rapidly. Such are the inducements to individual enterprise and industry at those mines, that numbers of the most respectable inhabitants of the "Upper Mississippi" are resorting to them as a source of reward for labor not attainable elsewhere. The market those mines afford for the agricultural productions of the upper settlements is already considerable, and is increasing, as the price of labor at the mines precludes competition with the settlements below, where it is cheap and the cost of transportation trifling. Believing, as I do, that the main object of the government is "a full development of the mineral resources of the country previous to a sale of the lands to individuals," I again take the liberty to recommend to favorable notice the plan of making a road from Potosi (the centre of the principal mines at present wrought in Missouri) to the Mississippi river, which I had the honor to suggest in my report last winter. I am induced to repeat the recommendation from a thorough conviction of the beneficial tendency of the road as respects the value of the public mineral lands, particularly should they be brought into market. I would, for the same reason, also, respectfully urge the consideration of what I conceive to be a still more important measure. I allude to clearing out a boat-channel through the rapids in the "Upper Mississippi"—the first near the mouth of the river Des Moines, the other just above Fort Armstrong or Rock Island. From information which may be relied on, I believe a boat-channel affording three and a half feet water at the lowest stages of the river may be cleared out for a sum not exceeding $30,000. This sum will be about the amount of two years' rent of the Fever River mines even should no material increase take place in their product. The object is one of great importance in many points of view, independent of facilitating the intercourse with and consequent development of the lead mines. The impediments consist principally in loose rocks in the bed of the river. In a communication from one of the most intelligent residents at the upper mines on this subject, he states that he has been detained, in low water, ten days at each of the rapids above referred to, by obstacles which he is of opinion, from particular observation, could be removed for $20,000. These rapids are the only serious impediments in the navigation of the "Upper Mississippi" as far up as the Falls of St. Anthony, more than eight hundred miles above St. Louis. Steamboats ascend that distance in the spring of the year under present circumstances; but were the improvements suggested to be made in the rapids, it is believed the intercourse would be continued for six months in the year.

The extent of the mineral region of the "Upper Mississippi" is immense. That portion of it now wrought for lead ore is trifling compared with the whole, and yet it has yielded $6,000 dollars' worth of lead during the present year. From Apple river (and from below it in fact) to the Wisconsin, a distance of more than one hundred miles, the same geological features present themselves, and there is nothing but labor required to develop the immense value of the country. On the 1st of June last, from the returns of mineral obtained at the Fever River mines during the preceding year, the average amount to each miner was found to be four hundred and fifty-seven dollars for his year's labor. Subsequent returns are equally large. This state of facts leave but little doubt that additional labor will soon be applied when it will be so well rewarded.

With respect to the trespasses on the mineral and timber of the public lands in the mine district of Missouri, I am still of the opinion that the plan of leasing larger quantities than three hundred and twenty acres to one person or company, which I proposed to the department last winter, will have a beneficial tendency. It is the interest of the lessee to prevent all unauthorized proceedings on the land he has leased, be the amount great or small. There are frequently ten or fifteen places in a township where lead ore in small quantities is obtained, neither of which are sufficient to induce a person to lease it, as, under the present regulations, he can have but one lease of three hundred and twenty acres, (to be taken in one place,) even if his ability to work the mines found on five times that quantity be known; consequently all are desirous of leasing the productive mines only, whilst those of less importance are neglected. These places become the resort of trespassers, and although the amount of mineral obtained by them at any one of such places may be small, the aggregate is very large. Not only so, but the pretence of having obtained the mineral from public land not leased is held forth, when, in fact, it is frequently obtained from that which is leased, and also from private property, to the serious injury of the owners. Unfortunately there are persons engaged in smelting lead ore who are so regardless of all moral restraint or law as to make it a practice to purchase ore at an advanced price, (equivalent to the rent required by the United States,) no matter how obtained. This is a serious evil to the whole of the owners of mines, public and private, and I know of no better plan to suppress it than to put all the land at present wrought for ore under lease. When the quantity obtained from five or six of the smaller mines is no greater than that obtained from one of the most productive, I would lease the whole of the former to one person, and thereby place the lessees more upon an equality. The only objection to this plan which suggests itself to me is monopoly, and that is already guarded against by upwards of sixty leases which are now granted, and which are so located as to destroy the connexion of any very large tracts that it would be requisite they should have.

As respects the reservations from sale, it is nothing more than common justice to place all the residents of the mine districts on an equality, either by reserving the whole of the mineral lands from sale or none of it. So long as a portion only of the mineral land is reserved, it holds out a powerful inducement to the adroit and crafty speculator to purchase the remainder, whilst those who are more scrupulous of taking the advantage of the want of information on the part of the government now participate in the great profits which they frequently see others obtain by unworthy means. I have therefore not hesitated to make reservations of mineral land so far as my information would justify. The land is generally poor, rocky, broken, and difficult of access, and it is undeniable that, were it not for the lead mines, those small tracts of good land which are interspersed throughout the mine districts would not sell for scarcely anything. It is very probable that some small tracts, apparently fit for cultivation only, may be reserved as containing lead mines; but such places will be required for the smelting establishments on the adjoining lead mines whether they be leased or sold; and, as the measures now taking are of a general and not of a partial character, it is presumed that the sale of a few small and detached tracts of cultivated land, in so large a district as that of the mines, can be of but little moment whether it takes place now or a few years hence. Should a contrary opinion, however, prevail, I can re-examine the country and release from the reservation the tracts alluded to should any such be found.

In my former report I adverted to the wasteful manner in which the lead ore was smelted. Should it meet your approbation, I would introduce, by way of experiment, the improved modern "reverberatory furnace;" and, as nothing is more difficult than to convince the generality of workmen that any improvement can be made in the process of a business they have grown gray in following, it will be requisite, in order to have it introduced, to build the furnace and put it in operation at the public expense. It is the opinion of some of the most experienced smelters that a very material saving would be made by the adoption of this description of furnace in lieu of the one at present in use here. I am convinced of the fact myself, and that the cost of the experiment would soon be repaid by the increase of the product, and consequently of the rent of the mines, which is, it appears to me, one of the legitimate objects of the government in regard to its lead mines. I therefore trust that the proposition will meet with a favorable consideration. The improvements in the metallurgical department of the French "School of Mines" has amply repaid the expenses attending them. We have authentic information on this subject. In one instance, at the lead mines of "Pescy," the increase of lead from the ore was forty-six per cent., and which was effected by an improvement upon a plan of smelting which had existed for ages. The mine district of Missouri affords a clay of superior quality for making fine brick, very suitable for the new furnace should it be adopted. Another advantage in this furnace is that it requires much less fuel than the old, which is a consideration of importance in this country where it is so scarce.

With respect to the profits arising to the owners of the private mines, which it would appear to be in part the object of the resolution to ascertain, it is considered that the only difference between the owners and lessees of mines is the amount of the rent required by the United States. Private mines are frequently leased upon the same terms as those of the public. They are worked in the same manner also.

I remain, sir, very respectfully, your most obedient,

M. THOMAS,

Lieutenant United States Army, Superintending United States Lead Mines.

[2D SESSION.

APPLICATION OF THE CITIZENS OF MOBILE, ALABAMA, FOR THE ADJUSTMENT OF TITLES TO LAND IN THAT CITY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE DECEMBER 15, 1826.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The memorial and petition of the undersigned inhabitants of the city of Mobile respectfully represent: That the titles and claims to land in this city, although they have often attracted the attention of Congress, and have been the subject of several laws, yet remain in an unsettled and embarrassing situation, injurious to the general prosperity of the place, the fruitful source of expensive lawsuits and contention among our citizens, and, at the same time, exposing the honest, industrious man to the wiles and machinations of the cunning, artful knave.

Thirteen years have nearly elapsed since Mobile has become a component part of the United States; and the inhabitants have ever anxiously looked to Congress for an adjustment of their claims, and, although two boards of commissioners have examined and reported upon them, and several laws have been enacted on the subject, they still find themselves in the same embarrassing, perplexing, and unhappy situation—not secure in the possession of the houses which sheltered them under a foreign government. We would paint no fiction; we feign not our insecurity. The practice of making simulated Spanish grants and papers existed before the American government, and we have reason to believe that machinations of this nature are not yet extinct. New grants, worn, smoked, and antedated—old in date, new in existence—threaten our oldest and dearest possessions; we feel, we know, the difficulties attending the adjustment of land claims in this city. The Spanish records were carried away, or retained here in such careless keeping as to afford ample opportunities for fraudulent practices; claims for mistaken quantity, either more or less, have, in some instances, been honestly exhibited and allowed; certificates have been wrongly issued, giving more or less land than ought to have been given; some have gone to the hands of wrong persons, and some have been lost or destroyed. The surveys are, of course, equally wrong and injurious. Such is the uncertain situation of land claims in this commercial depot of Alabama. In such a state of things, rogues will profit, honest men must suffer; but it is desirable to know the extent of suffering.

Many of us have witnessed, from year to year, the sale of claims rejected by the commissioners, warranty titles given, and valuable houses built thereon. More than fifty dwellings have been erected on such spurious titles. In many instances the sellers are dead, and nought remains but the remembrance of their deeds. The buyers have been deceived by artful men, aided by the long delay of the government to designate clearly their own. The value of lots has advanced from hundreds to thousands of dollars. Shall such purchasers be now turned out from their improvements and their dwellings? Their industry and the growth of the city have given the present value. Ten years ago the same ground was not worth fencing. The possessors of such property must now appeal to the justice and liberality of the government.

That the present situation of land claims in this city may be faithfully and impartially examined into, that errors may be corrected and frauds exposed, your petitioners solicit that commissioners distinguished for talent and integrity, strangers to our population, unprejudiced and impartial, may be appointed to revise and examine the respective claims, with such powers as Congress may, in their wisdom, deem proper to grant them. It is also important that the commissioners should look at the grounds claimed. Had this been done by the former commissioners, it might at once have excited suspicion, and led to an investigation and rejection of the claim, and thus prevented the grant of valuable ground for the prodigious improvement of a pig-stye upon it. Your petitioners further beg leave to remark, that they have learned that a bill in relation to these land claims was before the last Congress, which proposed to appoint the register and receiver of the land office at Jackson Court-house commissioners to examine these claims. The latter of those officers is well known to your petitioners. He long resided in this place, and left it under circumstances we forbear to detail. They were such as give him no claim to our confidence; and we beg leave to add, as a duty we owe ourselves and the government, that we might be more satisfactorily and impartially represented.

LAND CLAIM IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 19, 1826.

MR. BUCKNER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and documents of the heirs of Louis de la Houssaye, deceased, reported:

That at the last session of Congress the same were referred to this committee, who, on the 10th of January, 1826, made the following report:—(See No. 469.)

"Le Peltier de la Houssaye, Chevalier de la Houssaye, for themselves and the other heirs and legal representatives of Louis de la Houssaye, deceased, residents of the county of Attakapas, in the State of Louisiana, represent that sometime about the year 1813, Levin Wailes, register of the land office at Opelousas, and Louis Chachere, sworn interpreter to the board of commissioners, came to the house of the decedent, who was an old and infirm man, for the purpose of taking his deposition, and who then delivered to the said register a complete grant to him from the Spanish government for one league of land, fronting upon each side of the Bayou Cailloux, of the ordinary depth; that the said register promised to record the said grant for confirmation; that soon after their father died; that, upon inquiry at the land office, it was ascertained that the register had not only neglected to record the grant, as he had promised, but had actually lost or mislaid it, so that it could not be regained; that, in consequence of his negligence, their title to the said land has not been confirmed: wherefore they solicit the passage of an act for their relief. The proof exhibited in support of this claim is as follows: Louis Chachere swears that he was present at the house of Louis de la Houssaye with Levin Wailes, the register, for the purpose of taking the said De la Houssaye's deposition in reference to a claim entered for confirmation by the late André Martin; that De la Houssaye exhibited a concession of the Spanish government, granting to him one league of land fronting on each side of the Bayou Cailloux, which concession he handed to the register for the purpose of entering the same before the board. The affiant thinks the concession was signed by Governor Galvez, and was a complete grant; he does not recollect at what time this instrument was handed to the register. Valery Martin swears he was present at the house of De la Houssaye at the time alluded to by Chachere, but does not recollect whether the concession was handed to the register or not.

"The committee do not find the case free from difficulty. The petitioners claim under a complete Spanish title, which has been lost in the hands of a United States officer, whose duty it was to admit it to record. C. Pellerin, whose testimony is strongest as to the character of the grant, swears that Mr. de la Houssaye took possession of the land more than thirty years ago, and has always been in possession of the same, and enjoyed it as his property to the present day, and that his family is now in possession of it. He does not say the possession was actual, or such an one as would be produced by habitation and cultivation. The opinions of men are so variant as to what constitutes a complete Spanish grant that it seems to the committee some doubt may rest on that of Mr. Pellerin. He may in his first affidavit allude merely to an order of survey. He says he went upon the land, and located it, and took possession. The fair deduction is that he acted as Mr. de la Houssaye's agent in having the land surveyed, which was an act preliminary to that of obtaining a perfect title. It was but rarely the case that a patent was given for land prior to the location. Upon what condition this grant was given does not appear.

"As the claim is for a large tract of land, and the case susceptible of more particular and pointed proof, the committee recommend that they be discharged from the further consideration of the petitions and documents, and that they be laid on the table."

The committee do now further report, that it appears, from statements made to them by Mr. Brent, of Louisiana, that Louis Chachere and C. Pellerin, whose affidavits are filed as testimony in this case, were well acquainted with the nature of land titles under the Spanish government, and were competent judges of what were the essential requisites of a complete Spanish grant; that they were in the service of the Spanish government during the existence of that government in Louisiana, and that Mr. Chachere was selected as a translator of land titles in the western district of Louisiana on account of his knowledge of the handwriting and signatures of the different Spanish officers, and of the forms and legal requisites of Spanish grants. Both Chachere and Pellerin swear that they saw the grant above alluded to, and state it to be a complete Spanish grant. The committee do not conceive that such men as they are represented to be could have mistaken a mere order of survey for a complete grant, and are therefore of opinion that such a grant was issued to said De la Houssaye by the said government.

The committee further report that on the 4th day of March last, on the motion of Mr. Brent, they were instructed to report a bill confirming this claim; and that a bill was accordingly reported on March 7, 1826. Under all the circumstances of this case, the committee are of opinion that the petitioners are entitled to relief, and, in pursuance of that opinion, do recommend the passage of the bill which accompanies this report.

[2D SESSION.]

PRE-EMPTION RIGHTS IN THE ST. HELENA LAND DISTRICT IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 20, 1826.

Mr. GURLEY, from the Committee on Public Lands, who were instructed by a resolution of this House, on the 8th instant, to inquire into the expediency of granting to actual settlers, reported by the commissioners of the land office at St. Helena Court-house land district, in the State of Louisiana, under the provisions of the act of Congress of March 3, 1819, a right of pre-emption to a tract of land not exceeding one section, including their improvements, in all cases where such settler is not entitled to the same as a donation, or by title derived from, or confirmed by, the government of the United States, reported:

That, by the law of March 3, 1819, referred to in said resolution, the registers of the land offices in the St. Helena and Jackson Court-house land districts were required to report to the Commissioner of the General Land Office a list of actual settlers prior to the passage of the law, to be by him laid before Congress for their determination thereon.

The resolution referred to your committee proposes to extend the right of preference in the purchase of the public lands to the persons embraced in the list of actual settlers reported under the provisions of this law, and who have not received lands by donation or title derived from, or confirmed by, the government of the United States.

The act of Congress of April 25, 1812, contains a similar provision with the law of March 3, 1819; and, by the last-mentioned act, a right of preference is granted in the purchase of the public lands to every person embraced in the list of actual settlers made under the law of 1812.

Your committee can readily believe that the act before referred to, of March 3, 1819, connected with the previous legislation of Congress, induced the settlers in this district of country to believe that the privilege now asked would be extended to them, and that improvements have been made in consequence thereof which it would be extremely hard, if not unjust, to deprive them of by refusing to grant them the right of preference in the purchase of lands rendered valuable by their own labor. It is not known to the committee that any loss will be experienced by the government in giving the right of preference to lands in this district of country, as they are generally sterile and unproductive, and would not, perhaps, command in market, in a state of nature, the present minimum price at which the public lands are required to be sold.

It is proper, however, to observe that if your committee had entertained any doubt on this subject, it is removed by the law passed at the last session giving the right of pre-emption to actual settlers in the Jackson Court-house land district under the law of 1819, which is equally applicable to both. They are unable to discover any reason why a privilege should be extended to the citizens of one district and withheld from those of the other.

They therefore report a bill.

APPLICATION OF THE LAND DEBTORS IN ALABAMA FOR FURTHER RELIEF.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE DECEMBER 22, 1826.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress:

The undersigned, inhabitants of the State of Alabama, beg leave to represent: That their situation in respect to the public land debt due from them to the United States causes the most painful anxiety to your memorialists, and they believe it will not be disadvantageous to the government to palliate it by the passage of an act for their relief.

The undersigned viewed with the liveliest interest the measure which received the unanimous approbation of the Senate at the last session, giving permission to the person who had relinquished lands to re-enter them at certain fixed prices; and, although that bill was unsuccessful, they cannot but hope that another, founded upon similar principles, with the modifications hereinafter expressed, and embracing other classes of purchasers, will receive the favorable consideration of Congress at the ensuing session. The whole community, the occupant of every tract, is deeply interested in the passage of such an act, and while we present our claims to the justice and liberality of Congress, we are discharging a duty to ourselves and our country by submitting to that body the following facts, viz:

1st. The amount due for lands sold in Alabama previous to the abolition of the credit system was (in round numbers) $10,800,000, nearly equal to the whole amount due from all the other States and Territories, and exceeding the debt due for the same number of acres in the other States, &c., $8,500,000.

2d. The districts in this State which were sold under the credit system are now experiencing the greatest pecuniary embarrassments ever known to an agricultural community; and the inhabitants are wholly unable to make provision for the vast debt which is due to the government.

3d. The debt was contracted principally in 1817, 1818, and 1819, when the commerce of the whole world was at the height of prosperity; when the southern States were apparently flourishing beyond all former precedent; when produce was high and money plenty, or rather when profuse emissions of bank notes inundated the western country.

4th. Immediately thereafter, in 1820, cotton, the staple produce of Alabama, fell to less than one-half of its former value; and at the present time it is scarcely worth one-fourth of the fair market price in 1818, which has checked the settlement of the country and greatly reduced the value of lands.

Under these circumstances we have no other alternative, without the timely intervention of Congress, than to occupy the lands as tenants for a short term of years, and at the expiration of the term to forfeit them, a measure alike odious to one party and distressing to the other. In the meantime we must experience every sort of inconvenience incident to the unsettled state of the inhabitants, and these are obviously of such a nature, so serious and so numerous, as not to require to be particularized. And we have good reason to believe that, after a forfeiture and upon a resale, the occupant will either obtain his farm at the minimum price or purchase it at second hand from a powerful combination of speculators, who would themselves receive a greater amount in profits than the government from the sales.

When this simple statement of naked facts is attentively considered, and the situation of both debtor and creditor duly appreciated, we feel confident that your honorable bodies will not deny us just and equitable relief. But when we reflect that it has been, in no small degree, by the acts of the government that we are reduced to this deplorable condition, by availing itself of the most prosperous times ever known to bring into market very large districts of lands, greatly beyond the wants of the inhabitants and their means to purchase; at a time, too, when the spirit of speculation ran high through all parts of the nation; when, in addition to the recent establishment of seventy new banks, no less than four millions of depreciated public stock had become available in the purchase of these lands alone: all these circumstances combining to excite an active competition and to favor indiscreet speculation, and our own government, the monopolizer of lands, having reduced the price from $2 to $1 25 per acre, thereby lessening the real value of lands everywhere; when all these facts and circumstances are impartially considered, and due allowance made for their influence, we are emboldened to ask a cancelling of the contract as one which it is both contrary to good faith and good conscience to enforce, and we are encouraged to solicit that kind of relief which our peculiar situation requires.

We are well assured, and the general transactions of the country for the last six years confirm our opinions, that the public lands of this State, if sold at any time since the adoption of the cash system, would not have produced to the national treasury a larger amount than has already been paid for the first instalment. Without, however, indulging in the pleasing reflection of what our situation under those circumstances would have been, we will, with becoming deference to the superior wisdom of your honorable bodies, suggest the passage of an act which, although it will not relieve every hardship nor redress every grievance, yet, we respectfully maintain, will be both creditable and highly advantageous to the government, while, at the same time, it will afford to your memorialists that particular relief which the individual necessities and happiness and prosperity of the country imperiously require.

We therefore humbly pray for the passage of an act embracing, among such other equitable and indulgent provisions as your honorable bodies shall deem expedient, the following, viz:

That all lands which have been relinquished under the several acts of Congress for that purpose may be divided into five classes, and be subject to re-entry at the following fixed prices, viz:

First class to embrace all lands which cost $30 per acre, or upwards, at $5 per acre. Second class to embrace all lands which cost more than $20 per acre, and less than $30, at $4 per acre. Third class to embrace all lands which cost more than $10 per acre, and less than $20, at $3 per acre. Fourth class to embrace all lands which cost more than $5 per acre, and less than $10, at $2 per acre; and all lands that cost $5 or less, at the minimum price.

That the person relinquishing, his heirs, &c., may be entitled to re-enter in all cases, except where the holder of the certificate at the time of the passage of the relinquishment act, had afterwards transferred such certificate, but had retained possession of the land and cultivated the same; in such case the person so retaining the possession of and cultivating the land, his heirs, &c., may have the right of re-entry; provided that no person, his heirs, &c., shall have the right to re-enter more than one section.

And also that the holders of certificates of further credit, their heirs, &c., may be permitted to surrender such certificates, and, at the same time, to re-enter the lands described therein at the above graduated prices, and that they be allowed a credit for all sums paid by them since the date of the certificate of further credit, provided such payments do not exceed the fixed prices as graduated above; and that the provisions of this act be extended to September 30, 1829.

In concluding we take occasion to express our warm approbation of the plan which was under discussion at the last session of Congress for disposing of the unsold and refuse lands by suffering them to be entered at certain periods after they shall have been offered at public sale, and at certain graduated and reduced prices.

And your memorialists, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

JOHN COLLINS, and sixty-three others.

[2D SESSION.]

NUMBER AND DESCRIPTION OF LAND CLAIMS IN MISSOURI AND ARKANSAS UPON WHICH PATENTS HAVE BEEN WITHHELD.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE DECEMBER 22, 1826.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 21, 1826.

SIR: In obedience to a resolution of the Senate of the 7th instant, "directing the Secretary of the Treasury to lay before the Senate a statement of the number of land claims in Missouri and Arkansas upon which patents are withheld or have not yet been issued, founded upon patent certificates issued by the recorder of land titles at St. Louis under an act of February 17, 1815, 'for the relief of the inhabitants of the late county of New Madrid, in the Missouri Territory, who suffered by earthquakes,' and the number of claims founded upon confirmation by any act of Congress, or by any board of commissioners, or by the recorder of land titles at St. Louis, or founded upon purchase from the United States at public or private sale, upon which patents are withheld from the claimants, with the reasons for withholding such patents, respectively, in each description of claim," I have the honor to submit a communication this day received from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated the 19th, and another dated the 4th instant, which, with the documents to which they refer, contain the information required by the said resolution.

I have the honor to remain, with the highest respect, your most obedient servant,

RICHARD RUSH.

Hon. the PRESIDENT of the Senate.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 19, 1826.

SIR: In compliance with a resolution of the Senate, dated the 7th instant, in the following words: "Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to lay before the Senate a statement of the number of land claims in Missouri and Arkansas upon which patents are withheld or have not yet been issued, founded upon patent certificates issued by the recorder of land titles at St. Louis, under an act of February 17, 1815, for the relief of the inhabitants of the late county of New Madrid, in Missouri Territory, who suffered by earthquakes, and the number of claims founded upon confirmation by any act of Congress, or by any board of commissioners, or by the recorder of land titles at St. Louis, or founded on purchase from the United States at public or private sale, upon which patents are withheld from the claimants, with the reasons for withholding such patents, respectively, in each description of claim," and which has been referred by you to this office, I have the honor to report that the cases in which patents have been suspended for lands lying in Missouri resolve themselves into the following classes:

First class. Cases in which patents have been withheld in consequence of the lands claimed to be patented containing mineral. In relation to which cases I beg leave to refer to and make part of this report the communication made to you from this office on the 4th instant, and to which it is not deemed necessary to make any addition, except to add a list of ten private claims, the patents for which are suspended in consequence of the tracts being supposed to contain lead mineral, marked A, and the copy of a letter from Lieutenant Thomas, the United States agent, herewith transmitted, marked B.

Second class. Cases arising under the act of February 17, 1815, for the relief of persons suffering by earthquakes. The papers marked C, D, and E, will exhibit the number of cases in which patents claimed under this law have been withheld, and the reasons for withholding them.

Third class. Cases in which patents have been suspended for claims to land supposed to have been confirmed under the act passed April 12, 1814. The paper marked F exhibits these particular cases, and the causes of suspension.

It may be proper to state that the general practice in relation to claims confirmed under the act of April 12, 1814, has been to resurvey, under the authority of the United States, the whole of the claims supposed to have been confirmed under that act, as well those which had been previously surveyed under the authority of the government granting the land as those claimed by a special entry. To the resurvey thus made full faith has been given by this office, except in those cases where satisfactory evidence has been exhibited to induce a belief that the resurvey was not made in conformity to the original survey, or that the land claimed was not that which was originally intended to be granted. In such cases the resurveys have not been approved at this office, and the parties claiming are left to sustain their claims, under the act of confirmation, in the courts of justice or by application to Congress. Under a strict and rigid construction of the act of April 12, 1814, the parties claiming a confirmation, by that act, of an old survey would be entitled to patents for the same without a resurvey. Such patents, however, would necessarily issue in conformity to, and calling for, the old survey, and would therefore place the claimant in all disputed cases in no better situation than he would have been under the act of confirmation and without a patent; and such a construction is liable to so many obvious objections in relation to undisputed cases that it seems never to have been acted upon.

Fourth class. Cases of suspension in consequence of the recorder's certificate not corresponding with the original report on which the confirmation was made.—(See paper marked G.) These cases suggest the propriety of some enactment by which the executive would be enabled to correct cases of error, where there is a discrepancy between the reports of the recorder of land titles as confirmed by Congress and the original title papers in his office.

All which is respectfully submitted.

GEO. GRAHAM.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 4, 1826.

Sir: By the tenth section of the act passed February 15, 1811, (Laws of the United States, volume 4, page 326,) authorizing the sale of the public lands in the then Territory of Louisiana, now State of Missouri and Territory of Arkansas, "lead mines" are reserved from sale.

It does not appear from the records of this office that any special instructions were given to the registers and receivers when the land offices were first established in Missouri in relation to the reservation of lead mines.

The second section of the act passed May 18, 1796, made it the duty of the surveyors to note the situation of all mines, and from this source the land officers have principally derived the information on which they have reserved from sale lands as "lead mines." This source of information, however, being necessarily defective, much land has been sold which contains lead mineral without the knowledge of the fact on the part of the land officers.

From the reports made to this office by Lieutenant Thomas, the agent appointed by the President under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1807, (Laws of the United States, volume 4, page 118,) to lease mineral lands, it appears that the several tracts of land enumerated in the enclosed list contain lead mineral, all of which have been sold, and a large portion of which has been patented as designated in said list; and it is possible that much other land, not yet explored by Lieutenant Thomas, may be similarly situated. As for all those tracts for which patents had not issued previous to the receipt of the reports of the agent, the patents were withheld, and instructions given to the receivers to notify the purchasers thereof, and to return the purchase money. But, as the purchase money has been returned in very few cases, and as the purchasers persevere in claiming patents, and as there is reason to believe that they purchased, in many instances, as well in relation to those tracts which have been patented as those in which patents are withheld, with a knowledge that the lands contained lead, and for the purpose of working them as lead mines, it may be deemed proper and expedient to submit the subject to Congress that measures may be taken by them either to confirm or annul the sales of mineral lands made by the land officers without a knowledge that they contained lead in those cases where patents have not been issued, and to make such provision for those cases in which patents have been issued as by them may be deemed expedient.

All which is respectfully submitted.

GEORGE GRAHAM.

The SECRETARY of the Treasury.

UNITED STATES LEAD MINE OFFICE, St. Louis, Mo., August 14, 1826.

Sir: Your favor of the 16th of June, together with a copy of the correspondence with the register of the land office at St. Louis, was duly received. My engagements have been such as to prevent an earlier attention to this matter.

The register has thought proper to bring my name into question when rebutting charges which appear to have had no existence except in his imagination, for I perceive you disclaim any intention of charging him with "illegal and improper conduct," and, to the best of my recollection, I have never done him the honor to mention him to you, either verbally or in writing, for, in truth, sir, I consider him of far less importance than he appears to consider himself.

He states that he has never sold mineral land knowing it to be such, and I believe him, for, in my opinion, he values his office and its emoluments too highly to jeopardize them by an act which would doubtless cause his dismissal. But, sir, there is such a thing as keeping just within the provisions of a law and yet being hostile to the spirit of it. As before stated, I do not know that the register sold mineral land knowing it to be such, but I have been credibly informed that the register's son, in conjunction with others, purchased mineral land knowing it to be such. I know that the register permitted my letters (franked in my official capacity) to remain untouched in the post office because the postage was not paid, without informing me that such was his rule of office. I further know that somebody regularly gave information of my returns of mineral lands to the office at St. Louis to a vile newspaper printed there, and that such information was the text for long scurrilous articles published against the government and myself. I also know that upon receipt of your letter of 28th April last an appeal to the public was made in this vulgar newspaper, in which the immaculate register was be-praised and the government and superintendent of mines villified and shamefully abused. All this I do know, and can substantiate, if requested.

I must apologize for thus trespassing upon your time, but, sir, it is proper that you should know these details, and that, from the first hour that I commenced checking the abuses in the mine district, there has been a steady uninterrupted stream of abuse and villification poured forth upon me, both verbally and in print. When it is known how much illegal gain I have prevented, the cause will doubtless be obvious and duly appreciated.

As respects my returns of mineral lands, they are made with due caution. When it shall be made to appear that the lands reported as such are not mineral lands I shall acknowledge my error; but they are known to be such, are purchased as such, and, for mining purposes, the preservation of which constitutes the groundwork of the hue and cry against the measures of the government.

When examining the mine district I did not stop to inquire which part was sold or unsold French or Spanish claims. It was sufficient for my purposes to know that it was mineral land. If it so happened that whilst the reports were in transitu between my office and that of the register a part of the land was sold, that is a matter in which I have no control. Whether the holding of a document from the register and receiver showing that a sum of money has been paid for a portion of the public land constitutes an incipient or complete title is a question for others and not for me to decide. I would only observe that it is best that such decision should take place, as it is here contended that a patent must issue, and the custom is to go into possession upon paying money for land.

I am, sir, respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. THOMAS,

Lieutenant United States Army and Superintendent of Lead Mines.

GEORGE GRAHAM, Esq.,

Commissioner of the General Land Office.

A statement exhibiting the number of certificates issued by the recorder of land titles at St. Louis under the act of February 17, 1815, entitled "An act for the relief of the inhabitants of the late county of New Madrid, in Missouri Territory, who suffered by earthquakes," the number of certificates suspended, the number patented, and the number not yet patented on which patents may be issued.

The opinion of the Attorney General will prevent patents from being issued on eighty-five cases.— (See paper marked D).....	85
In eighty-eight cases the evidence furnished to this office that the persons executing the relinquishment to the United States of the tracts originally confirmed had full authority to do so is defective. Of this number, however, twenty-one cases are included in the preceding item.....	67
In ten cases the original confirmations state the tracts to be situated in either the county of Cape Girardeau or in Arkansas, and the law grants relief in those cases only in which the tract injured was situated in the county of New Madrid. Evidence, however, may be produced that the land injured was included within the limits of New Madrid county, as they existed November 10, 1812. In six of these cases the evidence of right to relinquish being defective, they are included in the foregoing item.....	4
There are three cases suspended in consequence of the location certificates having been issued for more land than was confirmed to the claimants, respectively, other than those issued for town lots or tracts of less than 160 acres.....	3
One case is suspended in consequence of the location having been made on lands relinquished to the United States under the acts for the relief of the purchasers of the public lands	1
There are four cases suspended in consequence of the locations having been made on unconfirmed private claims. One of these is included in the number suspended in consequence of the opinion of the Attorney General, and one is included in the preceding item of cases suspended in consequence of defect in the title of the persons executing the relinquishments. Patents are also suspended in six or eight cases of purchased lands, in consequence of their interfering with unconfirmed private claims	2
There are two cases included in the first item in which the certificates have been erroneously issued in lieu of lots that have not been confirmed to the claimant.	237
Patents have been issued on	116
Patents will be issued, unless the locations have been made upon unconfirmed private claims or lands relinquished to the United States, whenever the certificates are presented, on	515

It may be proper to state that patents were issued on some certificates covering relinquished lands, and upon others in which the title to relinquish the confirmed claims is defective, before this office was apprised of those facts.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, General Land Office, January 17, 1822.

Sir: The act of February 17, 1815, for the relief of the sufferers by earthquakes in the county of New Madrid, authorizes them to locate the like quantity of land on any of the public lands in the (then) Territory of Missouri the sale of which is authorized by law: "Provided, That no person shall be permitted to locate a greater quantity of land under this act than the quantity confirmed to him, except the owners of lots of ground, or tracts of land of less quantity than one hundred and sixty acres, who are hereby authorized to locate and obtain any quantity of land not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, nor shall any person be entitled to locate more than six hundred and forty acres."

The point to which I beg leave to call your attention is this: on the list of certificates of the right of new location under that act I find that the same individual has been permitted, in numerous instances, to locate the amount of one hundred and sixty acres for each lot of one arpent, and certificates of location in such cases have been granted by the recorder of land titles. To exemplify my meaning, I would merely mention two instances: Francis Lesieur has received four certificates of one hundred and sixty acres each, for four lots of one arpent each; Joseph Genereux has received four certificates of the same kind, and for the same number of lots of one arpent.

Conceiving that the law never intended to grant to any one owner of town lots the privilege of locating more than one hundred and sixty acres, except, indeed, in cases where the quantity of the lots owned by them, exceeding the quantity of one hundred and sixty acres, would thereby entitle them to the privilege of locating a like greater quantity, whatever such might be, I beg leave to ask advice whether patents can legally be demanded.

And am, with great respect, your most obedient servant,

JOSIAH MEIGS.

Hon. SECRETARY of the Treasury.

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES, January 22, 1822.

SIR: I entirely concur in the opinion expressed by the Commissioner of the Land Office, that it is not the intention of the act of Congress of February 17, 1815, to permit the owners of town lots in the county of New Madrid to locate a tract of one hundred and sixty acres for each town lot they may own, but one tract for the whole of their town lots, however many, unless the aggregate shall exceed the quantity of one hundred and sixty acres, when they will fall within the general enactment of being authorized to locate the quantity they have lost.

I have the honor to remain, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. WIRT.

Hon. WM. H. CRAWFORD, Treasury Department.

D—No. 3.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 26, 1826.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 25th instant, I furnish you with the enclosed statement, showing the cases in which, under the act of February 17, 1815, the recorder has issued more than one certificate of location to persons holding town lots or other tracts containing less than one hundred and sixty acres.

It may be proper to state that, in issuing certificates under the provisions of the act of February 17, 1815, the recorder issued them in the name of the original confirmees or his legal representatives. When the original claim, therefore, was for more than six hundred and forty acres, only one certificate issued. When the original claim was for more than one hundred and sixty acres, and less than six hundred and forty acres, a certificate issued for the quantity contained in the tract; and if one confirmees had more than one tract of this description, he received more than one certificate, provided the whole quantity did not exceed six hundred and forty acres. When the original confirmation was for town lots or tracts less than one hundred and sixty acres, the recorder issued as many certificates for one hundred and sixty acres each, in the name of the confirmees, as he had town lots or tracts not exceeding four certificates.

The statement enclosed embraces these last cases, and it is to them only that the opinion of the Attorney General refers.

Although the recorder issued the certificates in the name of the original confirmees or his legal representatives, he received the relinquishment of the land injured from the persons claiming the same. Many of these relinquishments were made by the same person, or the legal representatives of the confirmees.

I am, very respectfully, &c.,

GEO. GRAHAM.

Hon. JOHN SCOTT, Committee on Public Lands, H. R.

Statement of the cases in which, under the act of February 17, 1815, the recorder has issued more than one certificate of location to persons holding town lots, or other tracts containing less than one hundred and sixty acres, viz:

To 11 persons, 4 certificates each.....	44 certificates.
To 15 persons, 3 certificates each.....	45 certificates.
To 18 persons, 2 certificates each.....	36 certificates.
	125 certificates.

The opinion of the Attorney General will prevent the patents being issued on eighty-five of the above cases.

E—No. 1.

St. Louis, August 23, 1824.

SIR: On the 22d of November last I took the liberty of troubling you with a private letter, enclosing the survey and patent certificate of a New Madrid location for six hundred and forty acres of land, in the name of Peter Noblesse, under Paul Washburn. You were kind enough to say in your answer that, if it should appear from the certificate of General Clark, or from a plat of the township, that the location did not conflict with the claims of other persons, the patent would be forwarded.

I applied to General Clark immediately, who informed me that he would forward the plat with his first convenience. However, within a few days past I have ascertained that the plat has not been sent, but will probably go by the next mail. I have not had an opportunity of inspecting the plat, and am told that our claim conflicts with the claims of August Chouteau and the heirs of James Mackay, the former of which is, I am told, upon the plat, and must have been placed there by Mr. Chouteau long since the location of the land under the New Madrid certificate.

Mr. Chouteau's claim is now pending (on a petition for confirmation) before the district court; it is, therefore, of the utmost consequence to the heirs of Mr. Coulter (whose rights are jeopardized by that proceeding) to have their title perfected as soon as possible, if they have a legal right to demand it. That they have appears to me evident. That you may not suppose this opinion the mere result of an interested bias in the cause, I beg leave to trouble you with a very brief statement of the main reasons which conduct me to this conclusion.

1st. Mr. Chouteau's claim has been exhibited to and rejected by the board of commissioners, (having been initiated in violation of the regulations of the intendant, Morales, the grantee having already as much as the law allowed him to hold.)

2d. Mr. Chouteau's survey, if it appear upon the plat in the surveyor's office at all, is not there officially. It must have been placed there by Mr. C.'s agency, in order to reserve it from public sale by the register and receiver, since the location under the New Madrid certificate.

3d. At the time of the location there was no evidence of the locality of Mr. Chouteau's claim in the surveyor's office at St. Louis. That office was the depository of all the surveys of the country, and, of course, the only proper judge (in the first instance) if an interference would be created by the new location. By receiving the entry and giving a certified copy of the survey he has decided that there was no interference.

4th. The act of Congress of 1815 (the New Madrid law) authorized the sufferers by earthquakes to locate on any lands in Missouri "the sale of which was authorized by law." The sale of the land in question was then authorized by law, and continued so until after the location was made. In fact, had it not been located by Noblesse, it would have been sold at public auction by the register and receiver, but for the subsequent act of Mr. Chouteau, done by virtue of a subsequent law, after the rights of Noblesse had attached and were vested.

5th. By the New Madrid law, the right of the sufferers by earthquakes became vested by the mere act of the party in making the location; and those rights, in the spirit and in the very terms of the law, are officially authenticated by the issuing of the patent certificate, on the production of which the law says the patent shall issue.

6th. Every officer of the government is to be trusted in his own legal sphere of action, and, consequently, the government, in the protection of its own interests, has never by its laws, or the regulation of its offices, required further proof of the claimant's right to his patent than the production of the patent certificate for which the law has provided. This proof we have produced; and believing the issuing of a patent to be a duty purely ministerial, we think we may now demand the patent as a common legal right.

If the patent be now refused us, it is obviously not because we have not produced sufficient evidence of our right as against the government, but because a third person sets up a claim to the same land, and desires the government to withhold the evidence of our title until it can be ascertained whether he has any legal grounds to dispute it with us. I think it is too plain to admit of a doubt that the executive officers of the United States (supreme and subordinate) are not lawful and competent judges of the conflicting claims and interests of individuals; and hence it has often happened (as in the case of the town of Franklin, in this State) that the President has issued two or more patents for the same land, leaving the settlement of the disputed right to the constitutional tribunals—the ordinary courts of justice. There we should have a constitutional judge to expound the law, a jury to ascertain the facts, compulsory process for witnesses, and counsel to explain and enforce the cause. All these helps we are deprived of before the President or the general commissioner. Yet all these are guaranteed by the Constitution. Indeed, there is no trial depending before the President or the land department. We are not called upon and have no opportunity of appearing there to make good our claims. It is a mere suspension of what is our apparent right, on the suggestion of a doubt by a third person, which, whether true or false, and whatever may be its legal effect, is beyond the jurisdiction of any executive officer of the United States.

The law has provided a means of repealing patents issued by fraud or by error, (a scire facias), and has given that power to the courts, because it is a judicial act. But to give the President power to refuse the patent, when all the previous requirements of the law have been strictly fulfilled, would, in my judgment, be a great departure from the general principles of our institutions, and a plain infraction of the letter of the act under which we claim.

If the highest officer can withhold the patent, (which is but the embodying of the evidence of a title pre-existent,) the law having made no distinction between him and his subordinate officers in that respect, I see no reason why they, the recorder and surveyor, in the exercise of a like discretion, may not refuse the documents which the act of Congress requires to emanate from their offices respectively, and thus take to themselves the power of deciding between man and man, which, I apprehend, the law never designed to intrust to them. I am led to believe that Mr. Chouteau's attorney has filed in the General Land Office a notice, in the nature of a caveat, against the issuing of this patent. I know that some of the States have authorized their land officers by law to suspend the issuing of patents under similar proceedings, but I am unaware of any law of the United States recognizing the use of caveats in any case, and I am at a loss to conceive how a man can, by his own act, in filing a notice in a public office, change or suspend the legal rights of individuals, or the powers and duties of public officers.

By delivering to us our patents, which we deem an act of common justice, it is impossible that any wrong can be wrought to Mr. Chouteau. The courts will be open to him; and if his right be, in truth, better than ours, his remedy will be simple, short, and certain. As yet, however, it does not appear that he has any right, while, on our part, we produce the only proof that the law has ever required to entitle the claimant to a patent—I mean the patent certificate.

On consideration of these suggestions, and others, which, for brevity's sake, I omit, but which will doubtless present themselves to your mind, I feel persuaded you will no longer doubt the propriety of issuing the patent, and, consequently, that you will do me the favor to cause it to be transmitted to me at your convenient leisure.

I have the honor to be, most respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

EDWARD BATES.

Hon. GEO. GRAHAM, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES, October 10, 1825.

SIR: The case referred to me by your letter of the 4th instant from the General Land Office has had my earliest attention, and, after a careful examination of the acts of Congress on the subject, I am of opinion that the practice of suspending patents, stated by the commissioner, is perfectly correct. In the particular case I can see no benefit which can arise by issuing the patent immediately, and no injury which can arise to the individual by withholding it, while the issuing it may eventually prove to be a needless expense and trouble, and may, moreover, create improper embarrassment to the petitioner before the district court. The claim on which Mr. Bates demands a patent is one of those which are known to our laws as New Madrid claims. By the act of February 17, 1815, "for the relief of the inhabitants of the county of New Madrid, in the Missouri Territory, who suffered by earthquakes," it is provided that those sufferers might locate an equal quantity of land with that which they had lost, "on any of the public lands of the said Territory (Missouri) the sale of which is authorized by law." In order to ascertain what lands were then authorized by law, we must look to the act of March 3, 1811, "providing for the final adjustment of claims to land," &c., the 10th section of which describes the lands which the President was authorized to sell, and by the proviso to which section it is expressly declared that, "till after the decision of Congress thereon, no tract of land shall be offered for sale the claim to which has been in due time, and according to law, presented to the recorder of land titles in the district of Louisiana, and filed in his office, for the purpose of being investigated by the commissioners appointed for ascertaining the rights of persons claiming lands in the Territory of Louisiana." It is scarcely necessary to remind you that this Territory is the same which, by act of Congress in the following year, (June 4, 1812,) took the name of Missouri. And again, by the 3d section of the act of February 17, 1818, entitled "An act making provision for the establishment of additional land offices in the Territory of Missouri," it is declared that whenever a land office shall have been established in any of the districts aforesaid, the President of the United States shall be authorized to direct a sale of the public lands therein, with the same reservations and exceptions as were provided for the sale of public lands in the Territory of Louisiana by the 10th section of the act of March 3, 1811, which we have just examined. So that the reservation of lands to which claims had been filed, as set forth in the proviso of that section, became permanent, and, being excepted from the sale of public lands, did not fall within the description of those lands on which the New Madrid sufferers were authorized to make their locations. Among the documents handed to me on this subject is a letter from the late Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Crawford, to the Commissioner of the Land Office, Mr. Meigs, bearing date June 10, 1818, in which I perceive that he takes the same view of this exception, and gives the necessary orders to exempt the lands so claimed from public sale. The decision of Congress, until which lands claimed as above were to be reserved from sale, and consequently from location by the New Madrid sufferers, was not finally taken until May 26, 1824, when, by the act of that date "enabling the claimants to lands within the limits of the State of Missouri and Territory of Arkansas to institute proceedings to try the validity of their claims," the claimants were authorized to file petitions in the district court of the United States for the State of Missouri, for the trial of their claims. And by this law it is expressly provided, on the one hand, that when any claim has been decided against the claimant, the land shall belong to the United States; and, on the other, that where the decision shall be in favor of the claimant, and the land shall have been previously sold to another person by the United States, the party interested may reimburse himself by a location elsewhere.

Now, the claim which Mr. Bates represents is a New Madrid claim, which is stated to have been improvidently located upon some of this interdicted land, with regard to which the claimant has filed his petition before the district court, and the case is still sub judice. Mr. Bates demands the patent, because, however these facts may be, he has produced the patent certificate, and the issuing of a patent is an act so purely ministerial that the officer is bound to issue it although he may see distinctly that it is about to issue for lands not at all subject to the claim: that is to say, the President of the United States, whose peculiar constitutional function it is to see that the laws are properly executed, is himself to become instrumental in a conscious breach of those laws by signing the patent, because an inferior officer has ignorantly or inadvertently taken a false step in giving what Mr. Bates calls a patent certificate. I am not of this opinion. On the contrary, I think it most proper that all executive action on the subject should cease until the judiciary shall have decided on the claims. The documents are returned.

I have the honor to remain, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. WIRT.

E—No. 3.

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES, November 25, 1824.

Sir: On the question "whether patents for lands can be withheld by the government where their confirmation has been obtained by fraud," I entertain no doubt that they can and ought to be withheld; nor have I any doubt that, if patents had been actually issued under such circumstances, the courts of the country might and would cancel and avoid them. The documents are returned.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. WIRT.

Hon. WILLIAM H. CRAWFORD, Treasury Department.

F.

Third class of cases in which patents have been suspended for claims supposed to have been confirmed under the act passed April 12, 1814.

1. Case of William Nash, under Joseph Deputy.

This is a case where the claimant resorted to the courts of Missouri to establish his claim, and, failing, required of this office a patent founded on a resurvey made under the authority of the United States. The evidence taken in the suit then pending in the case being of such a character as to induce great doubts whether the land claimed under the resurvey was that covered by an original survey actually made for that quantity under the authority of the Spanish government, and that the certificate was not, therefore, issued agreeably to the true intent and meaning of the act of April 12, 1814, a patent was refused to be issued on the resurvey. It has been contended that the Executive was bound to issue a patent for all the surveys confirmed by the act of 1814, as a mere ministerial act; if so, they can be bound only to issue such patents as call for and recognize the old survey. There would be no objection to issuing a patent of this description in this particular case, but to issue patents in disputed cases on a resurvey made under the authority of the United States would be, in fact and in effect, a judicial, and not a mere ministerial act.

All the papers in this case, numbered 1 to 22, are submitted, that Congress may be the better enabled to judge how far an explanatory act for the further and better execution of that of April 12, 1814, may be necessary.

2. Gregoire Sarpy, for 7,056 arpents.

In this case Gregoire Sarpy obtained a concession for 6,000 arpents from the Spanish government, on which a survey was made under the authority of that government for 4,002 arpents, 8 miles from St. Louis; and another survey, containing 1,400 arpents, was made under the same authority, about 20 miles from St. Louis. Sarpy entered his claim for 6,000 arpents, and filed the two surveys with the commissioners, who rejected the claim. These surveys, however, were confirmed by the act of 1814, and reported by the recorder as confirmed. The resurvey on which the patent is claimed is for 7,056 arpents; it includes one of the original surveys, which appears to have been accurately made, and contains within the courses and distances the quantity called for, 4,002 arpents. The patent on the resurvey is withheld, because it varies from the original survey, and includes a large quantity of land confessedly not included in either of the original surveys, and therefore not confirmed to the claimant. The papers* in this case, and a letter from Colonel McKee, are submitted, that Congress may take such measures as to them may seem expedient and proper.

3. Louis Labaume, for 9,752.38 acres.

In this case Louis Labaume claimed 8,000 arpents before the board of commissioners, who rejected the claim; and it is not included in the subsequent reports of the recorder of land titles. A patent certificate, issued by the recorder of land titles under the act of 1814, has been presented for a patent, accompanied by a survey for 9,752.38 acres, which has been refused, on the grounds that the claim has not been confirmed, and that the recorder had no authority to act upon claims exceeding a league square.

4. Bernard Pratte, under John B. Pujol.

In this case the recorder of land titles has issued a patent certificate in favor of Bernard Pratte, under John B. Pujol, for 204.2 acres, under the act of March 3, 1807, but the reports in the General Land Office do not exhibit such a confirmation.

5. Heirs of William Hays, under P. Miller.

In this case the recorder of land titles issued a patent certificate under the act of April 12, 1814, in favor of the heirs of William Hays, under Philip Miller, for 600 arpents, but there is no such confirmation exhibited on the books of the General Land Office, or on those of the recorder of land titles.

6. Beneto Vasquez.

Vasquez entered this claim before the commissioners in virtue of settlement, and it was rejected by them. It is not included in any of the reports of the recorder confirmed by the 2d section of the act of April 29, 1816. A certificate, issued by the recorder of land titles under the act of 1814, has been presented for a patent, which is refused, as the claim is not embraced in any of the recorder's reports.

7. David Kincaid.

In this case Kincaid claimed before the board of commissioners a settlement right, which was rejected by them; and his claim is not embraced in any of the subsequent reports of the recorder of land titles, who has, however, issued a certificate for a patent, which is refused, as the claim is not considered as having been confirmed.

These two last cases seem to have been cases of omission, as they ought to have been reported by the recorder, and were entitled to confirmation. It is therefore respectfully submitted how far it may be expedient to pass an act of Congress confirming these claims.

No. 1.

FRANKLIN, Mo., July 12, 1822.

Sir: Permit me to call your attention for a few moments to a piece of business which concerns not only my own interest, but that of several other individuals who are placed in a similar situation. Your attention to it, besides the advantage it will confer on us, will tend to avoid some confusion in the affairs of the land office department. Myself, William Taylor, and James Barnes, settled in township 48 north, range 16 west, on sections 5 and 6, in time to acquire the right of pre-emption according to the act of Congress for that purpose. Sometime after our settlement a claim was set up of 800 arpents by several persons, claiming under and by virtue of a concession said to be made by the authority of the Spanish government to Joseph Deputy, which includes our respective settlements. I have every reason to believe the claim to be fraudulent, or, at least, that its original place of location is different from the one where they now attempt to establish it. The Spanish claimants commenced suit against myself and the other individuals above named about five years ago. They have sedulously avoided a trial by having the cause often continued on the slightest ground. It, however, has come to trial twice, and at each trial they were non-suited, which is their present situation, the trial having taken place at our last term of the Calaway circuit court. My request is, therefore, that you will grant instructions to the register and receiver at this place to issue to me and the other individuals concerned our certificates of pre-emption, our right to them having been regularly proved and returned by the register and receiver to your department; and if any further assurance of our being entitled is requisite, the register and receiver here are prepared and willing to give it, they being perfectly satisfied as to the justice of our claim and the impropriety of longer withholding the acknowledgment of it. If, however, this is not done, I must protest against a patent's being issued to the opposite party, and am satisfied that they will never recommence suit unless they succeed in obtaining one by imposing on the government. This would place us in a very disagreeable situation, as they would then meet with no difficulty in maintaining an action of ejectment, and our remedy afterwards would be tedious and expensive before we could receive possession.

* The papers here referred to are not on file.

With the hope that you will give your attention to the above, I remain, sir, your very obedient servant,

SHADRACH BARNES.

JOSIAH MEIGS, Esq.

No. 2.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, September 12, 1822.

SIR: Your letter of the 12th of July last to Josiah Meigs, esq., late commissioner, has been received. It is with pain that I have to inform you that Mr. Meigs departed this life on the 4th instant, and, until a successor shall enter upon the duties of the office, the instructions necessary in your case cannot be given. Meantime, I would suggest that you transmit such evidence in relation to the fraudulence or illegality in the location of the claim of Joseph Deputy as may be in your possession, together with the opinion of the register and receiver.

I am,

JNO. M. MOORE, Chief Clerk.

SHADRACH BARNES, Esq., Franklin, Mo.

No. 3.

To the honorable the Commissioner of the General Land Office at the City of Washington:

The petition of Shadrach Barnes, James Barnes, and William Taylor, of Howard county, Missouri, represents: That, by the enclosed certificate of the register and receiver of the land office at this place, and the enclosed testimony, it appears that your petitioners have claims, as pre-emptors, to tracts of land in said district, and have been in possession of the said land for the period of about twelve years; that their cultivation and inhabitation were satisfactorily established before the officers, who have heretofore declined granting your petitioners title papers thereto, solely on the ground of an alleged claim of one Joseph Deputy interfering with, not entirely covering, the whole of their lands thus claimed by your petitioners; that the right of your petitioners is clear, unless barred by the better claim of the said Joseph Deputy; that the claimants of said claim of Joseph Deputy have urged and pressed their pretensions for the purpose of obtaining a patent from your office, but none have issued; that said claimants have endeavored by law to recover possession of the lands, but have also failed in those endeavors; and that the expenses and delays attendant thereon to your petitioners, and the want of a due grant and title to them, in order fully and legally to establish the justness of their own claim, and the fraudulent pretensions of that of their adversaries, have been to them a source of great vexation and regret, and is calculated to enhance the expenses upon them to a great amount; that, by the enclosed depositions, it must appear that the claim of the said Joseph Deputy is fraudulent; that the land should be considered as vacant, and subject to grant to your petitioners for the following reasons: 1st. That the claim of said Joseph Deputy was never specially located nor surveyed prior to March 10, 1804, as required by act of Congress of April, 1814. 2d. That no survey was made or recorded in the land office prior or subsequent to the change of government over the Territory wherein they lie. 3d. That the survey, as pretended to have been made, was made in the name of the grantee, William Nash, from Joseph Deputy, and purports to have been made prior to March 10, 1804, for the said William Nash, whereas, in fact, William Nash purchased and received his title to the land subsequent to the said date, viz., in August or September, 1804. 4th. That it is a fact that the said claim of Joseph Deputy was adjudged fraudulently by the board of commissioners appointed to adjust the land claims in said Territory, and therefore is void by the said act of April, 1814. 5th. That the said claim is not one of those legally certified by any board of commissioners or recorder of land titles as entitled to confirmation, as required by the same act. 6th. That it is believed there are two grants of record in the recorder's office transferred to William Nash; that, upon those two claims, three surveys of land have been reserved from sale, and the one interfering with your petitioners' was the last survey made upon those grants, and the claimant only entitled to the two first made. 7th. That the land, if ever located, was done so by a claim of 400 arpents, but that now claimed amounted to 800 arpents. Passing by many other suggestions and reasons why the said claim is fraudulent and void, and that the land was vacant and subject to settlement by your petitioners, and by which a patent title should be issued to them, they remonstrated to your department against the issuing of any grant to Joseph Deputy, whose claim is manifestly fraudulent, from the papers enclosed, and from others suggested in the foregoing reasons, which can be forthcoming to your office, and within your power to examine. They further represent and pray that the register and receiver of the Howard land office may be directed to act finally on the case of your petitioners, and grant them such lands as their (without regarding any claim of Joseph Deputy) settlement rights entitle them to upon payment therefor; that such grant can impair no legal claim interfering with them, but, having enjoyed twelve years' possession, the justice of the government will be manifested to them by such grant, and will place them in a situation to defend their possession; and so little doubt is entertained by them of their claim, that their payments will be completed at their own risk. This course will, it is hoped, be not deemed inequitable to them for the reasons assigned, and ever should be adopted towards them in the event of a patent issuing to them for their adversary, as they are aware that the decision of the illegality or legality of those interfering claims depend ultimately on the judicial department; but it is expected the same means of combating their adversaries before that tribunal will be afforded these petitioners as to their adversary, viz: the issuing of title papers to their lands.

FRANKLIN, November 16, 1822.

TERRITORY OF MISSOURI, Northern Circuit, ss:

The United States of America to any justice of the peace of the county of Howard, greeting:

We, reposing special trust and confidence in your integrity and circumspection, do require and command you that you cause to come before you such person or persons as may be named or produced to you by William V. Rector and others, and them examine upon their corporal oaths, to be by you administered on the Holy Evangelist of Almighty God, touching their knowledge of anything that may relate to a certain suit now pending in our superior court of our Territory of Missouri for the northern circuit, between the said William V. Rector and others, plaintiffs, and Shadrach Barnes and others, defendants, on the part of the said plaintiffs; and having reduced the said depositions so by you taken as aforesaid into writing, you send the same, with this deditus closed under your seal, to our said superior court with all convenient speed.

Witness the honorable John B. C. Lucas, esquire, presiding judge of our said court, at St. Louis, this thirteenth day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighteen, and of our independence the forty-second.

[L. S.]

J. V. GARNIER, Clerk S. C. N. C.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT, N. C. S.

William V. Rector and others vs. Shadrach Barnes and others. In vacation, May 13, 1818.

On motion of Colonel Benton, for the plaintiffs, it is ruled that a deditus issue to any justice of the peace of the county of Howard, to take the depositions of witnesses for said plaintiffs.

A copy:

J. V. GARNIER, Clerk.

To Messrs. Shadrach Barnes, Amos Barnes, John Welch, James Welch, William Taylor, and William Ridgway, the above-named defendants:

SIRS: Take notice that, by virtue of a deditus issued pursuant to the above rule, we shall, by ourselves or agent, attend at the house of John W. Michle, in the Rocher Percé bottom, in the county of Howard, in Missouri Territory, on the thirty-first day of this present month, between the hours of seven of the clock in the forenoon, and six of the clock in the afternoon of that day, then and there to take the depositions of witnesses to be read on the trial of the above cause on the part of the plaintiffs, when and where you may attend if you think proper. March 22, 1819.

WILLIAM V. RECTOR,
JAMES H. BENSON,
JOHN W. SCUDDER,
JOSEPH WIGGINS,
By GEORGE TOMPKINS, their Attorney.

On my oath I do say that I gave a copy of the within notice and rule to Shadrach Barnes, Amos Barnes, John Welch, William Taylor, and William Ridgway, on the twenty-third day of March, in the year eighteen hundred and nineteen, and read the same to each of them.

BRADFORD LAWLESS, Deputy Sheriff.

TERRITORY OF MISSOURI, County of Howard:

Before me, a justice of the peace in said county, personally appeared Bradford Lawless, who makes oath that the above affidavit is true, and that he, as therein stated, served the within notice on the persons therein named in manner stated in said affidavit.

Given under my hand and seal this 30th day of March, 1819.

AUGUSTUS STORRS, J. P. [L. S.]

Deposition of witnesses produced, sworn, and examined on the thirty-first day of March, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and nineteen, between the hours of seven of the clock in the forenoon and six of the clock in the afternoon of that day, at the house of John Michle, in the Rocher Percé bottom, in the county of Howard, in Missouri Territory, before me, Augustus Storrs, a justice of the peace within and for the county of Howard aforesaid, by virtue of a deditus for the examination of witnesses in a certain cause now depending in the superior court in the northern circuit of said court for the Territory of Missouri, between William V. Rector and others, plaintiffs, and Shadrach Barnes and others, defendants, on the part of the plaintiffs, directed to any justice of the peace within and for the county of Howard aforesaid.

Ira P. Nash, of lawful age, being produced, sworn, and examined on the part of the plaintiffs, deposeth and saith that he commenced making a survey a few rods above the slough which discharges its waters into the Missouri river; that said slough is about one-quarter of a mile above the town of Franklin, in Howard county; and that said beginning of said survey was very near the Missouri river, and opposite the island in the Missouri river above Franklin.

By the plaintiffs:

Question. For whom did you make this survey?

Answer. I made that survey for no person, but to be covered by a claim for myself, or by a claim owned by some other person who might wish to lay it there.

Question. Whose claim was laid there?

Answer. A claim in possession of William Nash, which he had purchased.

Question. Tell what you know of the claim—that is, from whom it was purchased and from whom it was derived?

Answer. It originated from Joseph Deputy or from Baptist Presee, but I do not certainly know from which of the two; but I think that William Nash purchased it from Antoine Dejarlay.

Question. Did you ever show the beginning of that survey to any one since? If you did, tell to whom.

Answer. I showed the place of beginning first to William Clark, James Whiteside, and William Nash; and, in the month of April, eighteen hundred and eleven, if I recollect right, I showed the place of beginning to Abraham Barnes, but the tree had then fallen into the river, as I supposed, on which the corner was made, it being then seven years after the making of the original survey. I think in May, some one or two years since, I showed the same place to Horatio Christman, at the time he was about to resurvey it by order of the surveyor general of Missouri Territory, as said Christman told me.

Question. Do any persons live on the land included in that survey? If any do, tell who they are.

Answer. It would be a very tough thing for me to tell that. The people in Franklin live on it, and William Taylor likewise.

By the defendants:

Question. Was the survey made previous to the first day of March, in the year eighteen hundred and four?

Answer. I refer you to my certificate of survey to ascertain that.

Question. Do you or do you not recollect the month in which the survey was made?

This question was objected to by the plaintiffs and overruled.

Question. Who were the chain-carriers and marksmen when the survey was made?

Answer. The chaining and marking was done by myself.

Question. Were any persons in company at that time, and who were they?

Answer. I was alone, and run only part of two squares of the survey and called for the balance; nor did I communicate the thing to my company, Stephen Hancock and Stephen Jackson.

Question. Did you show any marked tree to William Clark and James Whiteside, to whom you said you showed the place of beginning?

Answer. I did not call their attention, but made additional marks at the time they were in company with me; I believe they understood that to be the place of beginning.

Question. Was the original marked tree then standing?

Answer. It was.

Question. What kind of compass had you?

Answer. It was a compass having a perfect circle, and degrees marked on the edge; also a needle, being on a pivot, so well balanced that neither end depressed, and, when perfectly horizontal, one end pointed north and the other south, as I supposed; it also had uprights at each extreme end that projected from the circle, through which there were certain crevices or slits through which I could see and take an object.

Question. Was it a pocket compass with wooden sights or not?

Answer. I do not know whether it was a pocket compass or not; if it was a pocket compass, it was larger than I would wish to carry in my pocket. It had wooden sights.

Question. What kind of chain did you use when you made that survey?

Answer. It was a two-pole chain, agreeably to French or Spanish measure, and made of genuine Louisiana hemp.

Question. Was it the same with which you made the survey in company with Stephen Jackson and Stephen Hancock?

Answer. I carried but one chain with me.

Question. Did you mark more than one corner when you made the survey?

Answer. Only one, and that was the bourne miellien, or what I suppose would now be called the middle station on the line.

Question by the plaintiffs. When you made the survey above spoken of, were you a surveyor appointed under law for such purposes?

Answer. I was appointed by the surveyor general, Antoine Soulard, who has sanctioned all my returns as his deputy.

Question by the defendants. At the time that survey was made did Stephen Jackson and Stephen Hancock act as your chain-carriers in making other surveys?

Answer. Yes.

I. P. NASH.

TERRITORY OF MISSOURI, County of Howard, to wit:

The aforesaid deposition of Ira P. Nash was taken, reduced to writing, sworn and subscribed by the said deponent before me, Augustus Storrs, a justice of the peace in said county, at the house of John M. Michle, in the Rocher Percé bottom, in the said county and Territory, on this thirty-first day of March, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and nineteen, between the hours of seven o'clock in the forenoon and six of the clock in the afternoon of said day, and are herewith enclosed, and sent to the clerk of the superior court for the northern circuit, agreeably to the direction of the dedimus issued for the taking of said depositions.

AUGUSTUS STORRS, J. P.

TERRITORY OF MISSOURI, Howard County, to wit:

Be it known that on the eighteenth day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, at the office of David Todd, attorney at law, in the town of Franklin, between the hours of ten o'clock in the forenoon and six o'clock in the afternoon, personally appeared before me, Augustus Storrs, a justice of the peace in said county and Territory, the following witnesses, and their depositions were then and there taken as followeth, before me, agreeably to a de dicimus potestate hereto annexed; and also a notice annexed to be read as evidence in favor of Shadrach Barnes, Amos Barnes, William Taylor, and William Ridgway, in a suit of ejectment pending and undetermined in the superior court for the northern circuit, held at St. Louis, in said Territory, wherein William V. Rector and others are plaintiffs, and the said parties first above-named and John Welch and James Welch are defendants.

William Clark, being produced, sworn, and examined on the part of the defendants, deposeth and saith that on the twenty-second day of July, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and four, this deponent set out from Richard Chetwood's, about four miles below the mouth of the Missouri river, in company with Ira Nash, William Nash, James Whiteside, and Daniel Hubbard, for the purpose of ascending the Missouri and seeing the country. On the way said Daniel Hubbard obtained a canoe and returned back. This deponent landed a little above the mouth of Lamine creek, and went with said Ira Nash, William Nash, and James H. Whiteside to Barclay's lick, and from thence to Boon's lick, in company with said two Nashes, and then returned again to Barclay's lick; from thence the party again, being joined by said Whiteside, returned to a place called Prewitt's trading-house, a small distance above where the town of Franklin is now situated. Ira Nash then said that, being up here sometime before, in February, he had left a compass in a hollow tree, and, with the others, went to hunt it, while this deponent went to a place called Sulphur lick to kill deer, agreeing to meet said party the next day at Barclay's lick, where we met accordingly, said party bringing said compass. Said Ira Nash, together with this deponent, and William Nash, then met to run a line from one survey at the bluff to another on the river, for the purpose, as Ira Nash said, of enabling him to make a correct plot of the same, or of what he had once done before. We run the said line about five outs, and coming to a wet—a grassy place, we were obliged to relinquish our design. We then again parted—this witness by land, to hunt, and the others by water—to meet again the next day at Prewitt's trading-house, which we then did. Something less than a mile below said trading-house said Ira Nash marked a corner on three percon trees; from which corner we commenced running a line down the river Missouri, and ran not exceeding five outs, when said Ira Nash mentioned to the company that he was not getting the land which he wanted, and stopped running. Said Ira Nash then went back, as he said, to make a new corner, while all the rest of the company came down the river to the mouth of a slough, a little above Franklin. William Nash then told this deponent that he had an eight hundred arpent claim, and would locate it below the mouth of this discharge or slough above mentioned. Ira Nash then went from the company, but he set his compass, or ran a line with it, this deponent does not recollect; but sometime afterwards he returned, and mentioned that he, William, had got the plum orchard, making the observation to his brother William. All the company then went down the river to a large spring between the Rocher Percé and the Grand Moniton, and William Nash observed that he had an eight hundred arpent claim that he would lay there; but this deponent does not know whether any corner was made, but knows that no lines were run. The company then went on down the river until they came in sight of the place where Cote Sans Dessein now is, and then landed. William Nash then said that he would lay one of his eight hundred arpent claims in that place. Ira Nash then set the compass, intending to locate it in an oblong form running up the river. The whole of the company then again descended the river, and reached the place from which they set off about the 17th of August, in the same year.

By defendants:

Question. What kind of compass and chain was used by Ira Nash at the times above mentioned?

Answer. It was a large pocket compass, set in a piece of wood, having wooden sights, and the chain was a rawhide tug, and perhaps a piece or some pieces of rope attached to it.

Question. When the percon trees were marked as corners, and the line commenced running, who marked the line trees?

Answer. I do not recollect.

Question. Did you see the lines marked at all?

Answer. I do not recollect that I saw them marked; and whether they were marked at all or not, I cannot say.

Question. How far from the river were those percon corners?

Answer. About five or six poles.

Question. At the time William Nash talked of laying his claim below the slough, do you recollect of any claim by one of the company being set up to the land, and what passed?

Answer. I heard of none.

Question. At or near the percon corners were you shown by any of the company any corner or lines marked which were made at any time previous to that when you were there?

Answer. I saw none; neither heard any of the company mention any.

Question. How far did Ira Nash make the corners on the percon trees from Barclay's lick?

Answer. I do not know exactly, but it was on the Missouri, below said trading-house, and we then called it six or seven miles.

Question. How far from Barclay's lick did he commence to run the line to connect the two surveys you first spoke of?

Answer. It was at or very near the lick.

Question. Did Ira Nash qualify any chain-carriers, or a marker, when he pretended to commence a survey, or did he not?

Answer. He did not when I was with him.

Question. How far was the place Ira Nash was hunting his compass from the corner he made on the percon trees?

Answer. He started from the trading-house, to hunt his compass, toward the slough above mentioned; but I do not know the distance.

Question. How far do you think the percon trees marked as a corner are from the slough where William Nash said he would lay his claim?

Answer. At that time we called it about three miles from said trading-house to the slough; and said percon trees are between three-quarters of a mile and a mile below the trading-house.

Question. Were any corners made about the mouth of the slough, or between the percon trees and the mouth of the slough?

Answer. I saw none made; neither saw any at all.

WILLIAM CLARK.

Stephen Jackson, also being sworn at the same time, deposeth and saith that in the month of February, in the year eighteen hundred and four, this deponent, in company with Stephen Hancock and Ira Nash, set out from a place called Hancock's bottom, about thirty miles above St. Charles, for the purpose of ascending the Missouri and making some surveys; said Stephen Hancock and myself being then employed by said Ira Nash for that purpose, we made several surveys while engaged in the expedition, and the lower line of the lowest survey that we made was just or very nearly opposite the mouth of Lamine creek. After completing said surveys we went to a trading-house called Prew's trading-house, and remained there about two or three days. Said Ira Nash then hid his compass in a hollow cotton-wood tree near said trading-house, and all the company set off home. In passing down passed through a prairie about one mile northwest from Franklin, and returned home between the fifth and tenth days of March, in the same year.

By the defendants:

Question. In what manner were the surveys of Ira Nash made?

Answer. Said Nash carried the compass and took the course, and said Hancock and myself carried the chain, this deponent blazing the lines.

Question. How far above Franklin is the lower line of the last survey you made?

Answer. Between three and four miles on a straight line.

Question. Did you see any people in this country from whom said Nash could obtain assistance in making his surveys, except the company who came up with him?

Answer. I did not.

Question. Do you know of his making any corners after he left the trading-house?

Answer. I do not.

Question. Was the company ever separated so that Nash could have executed a survey where Franklin now stands without your knowing it?

Answer. I do not know how to answer the question. He could not have done so until after we came to the trading-house; and I do not rightly recollect about that. We were there two or three days doing nothing.

Question. Whilst at the trading-house did you hear Nash say anything about making further surveys?

Answer. I did not.

Question. Did you, at any time during the trip, hear Ira Nash say that he had any surveys to make for his brother, William Nash?

Answer. Not that I recollect at this time.

Question. The surveys that he executed, did he not let you know the names for whom he did it?

Answer. He made one survey for Barclay, one for Hyacinthe, one for Barraboo, and one for Allen, and one for himself, as he told this deponent; and I recollect no other.

Question. How far above Franklin is Prew's trading-house?

Answer. Not exceeding two miles.

Question. Is Stephen Hancock alive or dead?

Answer. He is dead.

Question. Will you describe the chain and compass?

Answer. The compass was a pocket compass set in a piece of wood, and having wooden sights; and the chain was a piece of a rope and a tug joined.

Question. Do you know whether Ira Nash was ever in this country before February, 1804?

Answer. He was never to my knowledge, and, from what he told me then, I am satisfied he was not. This deponent is of lawful age, and further saith not.

STEPHEN JACKSON.

The above depositions of William Clark and Stephen Jackson were severally sworn to and subscribed before me, a justice of the peace in Howard county, Missouri Territory, on this eighteenth day of January, in the year eighteen hundred and nineteen; and a further examination of witnesses is hereby adjourned until to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock; at the same place of which adjournment, George Tompkins and Robert Wash, being present during the examination, had notice.

AUGUSTUS STORRS, J. P.

Pursuant to adjournment, met at the same place for the further examination of witnesses; and between the hours of 10 in the forenoon and 6 o'clock in the afternoon, the following depositions were taken:

James H. Whiteside, being sworn before me, a justice of the peace in Howard county, deposeth and saith that in the month of July, in the year eighteen hundred and four, this deponent, in company with Ira Nash, William Nash, and William Clark, ascended the Missouri and landed opposite the mouth of Lamine creek, about the first of August, in the same year. The object of this deponent in coming to this place was to obtain headright under the Spanish government. From the mouth of Lamine we went to a place called Barclay's lick. This deponent was engaged in improving a place for Mr. Barclay, while both the said Nashes went to survey, as they said, although this deponent did not see them survey. On the river, nearly opposite the mouth of Lamine, said Ira Nash made an improvement by deadening some trees and planting some corn, in which this deponent assisted him. This deponent was not engaged particularly in surveying with said Nashes, and knows nothing of their surveying more until they arrived near the mouth of the Grand Osage, where William Nash said that he would lay an eight hundred arpents claim. Several years ago this deponent saw William Nash, who told him that he was living or about to settle at the Grand Osage, on the claim above mentioned. I believe this is all I know relative to the case.

By defendants:

Question. How often had William Nash and Ira Nash been in this country before?

Answer. I understood that Ira Nash had been here once before, and that William Nash had never been in the Territory before; and I lived only one mile and a half from said Ira Nash.

Question. Did Ira Nash or William Nash mention anything of William Nash having surveys here before that time?

Answer. Not to my recollection.

Question. Did either of them make any corners between Barclay's lick and Franklin?

Answer. I saw nothing of the kind except the improvement before mentioned.

Question. Were you present, or do you know anything of any percon trees being marked as corners?

Answer. I do not know anything of it; neither was I present.

Question. When you landed at the mouth of the slough, near Franklin, did you see Ira or William Nash make or mark any corners there?

Answer. I did not, to my recollection.

Question. Did William Nash say that he had any claim at or near that place?

Answer. Not to my recollection. The deponent further adds that if he was present when the percon trees were marked, he has totally forgotten it; but is firmly of the opinion that he was not present.

Question. When you were encamped at the mouth of the slough as aforesaid, did you hear either Ira or William talk of having surveyed as low down as the mouth of the slough while you were at work at Barclay's lick.

Answer. I recollect no such conversation.

JAS. H. WHITESIDE.

William Clark claims two days' attendance and mileage for two hundred miles, and one dollar for his ferriages. James H. Whiteside likewise claims for two days' attendance and mileage for four hundred miles, and one dollar for his ferriages.

AUGUSTUS STORRS, J. P.

Daniel Munroe, also being duly sworn on the same day, deposeth and saith that in the month of January or February, in the year eighteen hundred and eleven, Shadrach Barnes moved to the place where Franklin now is, and immediately commenced clearing a field, which he enclosed with a good rail fence, and raised about fifteen acres of corn during the ensuing summer, which he gathered in the fall; and said Shadrach Barnes has lived on the same place every year since, except when forted, and has, as this deponent believes, raised corn thereon every year since, except since the town of Franklin was laid off thereon. Said Barnes did never move his family to the place above mentioned until June, in the said year eighteen hundred and eleven; and further, this deponent says that William Taylor moved to the place where he now lives, together with his family, in the year eighteen hundred and twelve; and during the summer of the same year raised several acres of corn, and has continued to live on and cultivate the same place every year since, except when necessarily compelled to live in the fort, for two or three years, at intervals; and both said Barnes and said Taylor at this time reside on the places where they first settled; and further, William Ridgway likewise settled, in the year eighteen hundred and twelve, on the Missouri, below where Franklin now is, with his family, and in the same year raised about five acres of corn, and has continued to live on and cultivate said place every year since, except when obliged by Indian hostility to live in the fort; also, Amos Barnes, in the year eighteen hundred and twelve, raised about three or four acres of corn, and settled in the same year on the ground where Franklin now is, together with his family, and built a house on the same place in the same year. And this deponent likewise says that on Friday last, the fifteenth instant, he showed to George Jackson, county surveyor of Howard county, the centre of the four above-mentioned improvements, as they were situated in said year eighteen hundred and twelve, or as near the centre as he could recollect; and all said improvements are, to the personal knowledge of this deponent, in township number forty-eight north, of range number sixteen west of the fifth principal meridian. William Taylor's said improvements are on the northeast quarter of section number six; and William Ridgway's, Amos Barnes', and Shadrach Barnes' said improvements are on the southwest quarter of section number five, except as to Shadrach Barnes' said improvement of eighteen hundred and eleven, which extended into the southeast quarter of section number six. Further, in the spring of the year eighteen hundred and seventeen this deponent was in company when Horatio Christman, a deputy surveyor of the United States, commenced surveying an eight hundred arpents claim of William Nash, this deponent only hearing that the claim was of that size, and including the town of Franklin or a part thereof. Ira Nash went with said surveyor to show the corner or beginning, and was unable to find a corner, saying that it had been marked on a walnut tree. Said party then established a corner above the slough, and about one and a half chain from the Missouri, by marking two or three trees with an axe; said surveyor then took a course from said corner running north twenty degrees west, as this deponent understood, and had the line marked out by blazing the trees near it. The party continued running on said line until they were stopped in Mr. Welch's field, and desisted from running any further.

By defendants:

Question. Did you pay particular attention to find a marked corner or a marked line?

Answer. I looked for a corner, but could find none except the one then made; and as to line trees, I looked for none.

Question. Did Ira Nash, or any one of the company, find a marked corner or a marked line tree?

Answer. If they found any I did not know it. This deponent is of lawful age, and further saith not.

DANIEL MUNROE, JR.

William Munroe, being duly sworn on the same day, deposeth and saith that in the year eighteen hundred and eleven Shadrach Barnes built a house, and raised about fifteen — of corn, and lived in said house with his family during said year; said improvement was on the ground where Franklin now is, and where said Shadrach Barnes now lives. In the year eighteen hundred and twelve this deponent personally knew William Taylor, William Ridgway, and Amos Barnes, each of them, to make separate improvements, by raising, each of them, several acres of corn in fields enclosed with a rail fence; and likewise knew each of them to build houses and inhabit them with their families during the same year—said Amos Barnes on the ground where Franklin now is, the others on quarters adjoining said town of Franklin, in spring, eighteen hundred and seventeen. This deputy surveyor was present when Horatio Christman, a deputy surveyor of the United States, together with others, was engaged in running out or surveying a claim including a part of Franklin, and belonging, as this deponent understood, to William Nash. When assembled at the supposed place of beginning, Shadrach Barnes called on this deponent and others to examine and see if they could find any marked corner or lines; and this deponent, on examining, could find no corner or lines marked; neither heard of any being found at the time, except those then made. This deponent is of lawful age, and further saith not.

WILLIAM MUNROE.

The foregoing depositions of James H. Whiteside, Daniel Munroe, jr., and William Munroe, were severally subscribed by them, and sworn to before me, a justice of the peace in Howard county, at the time of taking the same, and at the place above named; and said depositions, and the foregoing ones of William Clark and Stephen Jackson, are herewith enclosed, annexed to the deditus issued for the taking thereof. Witness my hand this nineteenth day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and nineteen.

AUGUSTUS STORRS, Justice of the Peace.

Justice's fees, paid by defendants, six dollars and seventy cents.

AUGUSTUS STORRS, Justice of the Peace.

Depositions of witnesses produced, sworn, and examined, on the eighth day of September, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and nineteen, between the hours of ten of the clock in the forenoon and six of the clock in the afternoon of said day, at the office of Augustus Storrs, in the town of Franklin and county of Howard, in the Territory of Missouri, before me, Augustus Storrs, a justice of the peace within and for the county aforesaid, by virtue of a deditus for the examination of witnesses in a certain cause now depending in the superior court of the Territory of Missouri, for the northwestern circuit, between William V. Rector and others, plaintiffs, and Shadrach Barnes and others, defendants, on the part of the defendants directed to any judge or justice of the peace within and for the county of Howard, in said Territory.

Daniel Munroe, jr., being produced and sworn, and examined, and being of lawful age, deposeth and saith on the part of the defendants:

By defendants:

Question. Were you along when Horatio Christman run the lines of William Nash's Spanish grant at Franklin?

Answer. I was along.

Question. Did Shadrach Barnes particularly call on you to notice for any marks or corner at that time?

Answer. He did call on the company generally to notice.

Question. Did you particularly notice to marked trees at the beginning or on the line?

Answer. I did notice both at the beginning and on the line, but saw none.

Question. Have you not, since that time, been called to notice again?

Answer. I have.

Question. On the second examination did you discover any old marks on the line?

Answer. I saw none which appeared older than the line first run by Mr. Horatio Christman.

Question. Did you ever have any conversation with Ira Nash relative to the quantity of land included in the Spanish location at Franklin; and, if so, what was it?

This question was objected to by Mr. Tompkins, plaintiffs' attorney, but it is considered that the answer be inserted.

Answer. I have had conversation with Ira Nash on that subject, and he told me that he had a claim of four hundred arpents, including Shadrach Barnes' and William Taylor's improvements.

Question. Did he state where the beginning corner of the said four hundred arpent claim was?

Answer. He did, and told me that the beginning corner was marked on a large walnut tree at the mouth of a slough above Mr. Shadrach Barnes' house.

Question. Was that the slough at the mouth of which Horatio Christman began the survey of the eight hundred arpent claim at the time you mentioned looking for marked trees?

Answer. I know of no other slough which would be included by a four hundred arpent claim including Barnes' and Taylor's improvements.

Question. At what time did the conversation you mentioned take place with Ira Nash?

Answer. I think it was in the year eighteen hundred and eleven.

Question. Did you understand at that time whether the said land was claimed by him, the said Ira Nash, or by his brother, William Nash?

Answer. I do not recollect his saying that it was his brother William Nash's land at that time, but Ira Nash then offered it for sale.

Question. Did you, after that time, hear Ira Nash say that the said four hundred arpent claim did belong to his brother, William Nash; and if so, at what time?

Answer. I do not recollect his saying that the said four hundred arpent claim belonged to William Nash, but he has since told me that the eight hundred arpent claim belonged to William Nash.

DANIEL MUNROE, Jr.

Sworn to and subscribed before me September 8, 1819.

AUGUSTUS STORRS, Justice of the Peace.

After taking the foregoing depositions, it being late in the evening, and it being stated in the notices of the plaintiffs that the depositions would be taken from day to day, if necessary, it is considered that an adjournment take place till to-morrow morning, September 9, at the hour of ten of the clock in the forenoon of said day.

At the hour of ten of the clock in the forenoon of this the ninth day of September, in the year eighteen hundred and nineteen, pursuant to the adjournment of yesterday, I again commenced the examination of witnesses touching this suit

AUGUSTUS STORRS, Justice of the Peace.

George Avery, of lawful age, being produced, sworn, and examined, on this second day of October, eighteen hundred and nineteen, deposeth and saith, that sometime in the year eighteen hundred and fifteen, as well as this deponent recollects, he met with William Taylor and Ira Nash at the house of David Bryant, near Charette village, and heard William Taylor say to said Ira Nash that he had been gone six months and had made four hundred arpents of land; and that he, Nash, had better go and stay six months longer. Said Nash then observed that he had a four hundred arpent claim where William Taylor lived that was not special, and that he had an eight hundred arpent claim that was special; and that he meant to remove his eight hundred arpent claim to the place where the four hundred arpent claim was, on which William Taylor lived.

Question by defendants. Did you hear Ira Nash say that he had laid an eight hundred arpent claim on the place where William Taylor now lives before or since the conversation mentioned before?

Answer. I never heard Ira Nash say that he had laid an eight hundred arpent claim there.

GEORGE ^{his} Avery.
mark.

The foregoing deposition of George Avery was taken, sworn to and subscribed, and reduced to writing, before me, Augustus Storrs, a justice of the peace, on the second day of October, eighteen hundred and nineteen, between the hours of ten of the clock in the forenoon and six of the clock in the afternoon of said day, at the office of Augustus Storrs, in the town of Franklin, in Howard county, and Missouri Territory; and, together with the deditums and notices, and other depositions, as by the notices and certificate affixed will appear, are sent under seal to the clerk of the superior court for the northern circuit.

Given under my hand and seal, at Franklin, this second day of October, eighteen hundred and nineteen.

LAND OFFICE AT FRANKLIN, October 31, 1822.

I certify that Shadrach Barnes, James Barnes, and William Taylor, (pre-emption claimants,) did prove, to the satisfaction of the register and receiver, that they had inhabited and cultivated, as required by law, tracts of land within what appears by the maps to be a private survey in the name of Joseph Deputy, and that certificates would have issued to them but for said survey.

T. A. SMITH, Receiver.

LAND OFFICE AT FRANKLIN, Missouri, November 16, 1822.

I certify that I have examined the application of Shadrach Barnes, James Barnes, and William Taylor, (pre-emption claimants,) and the accompanying testimony in support of their respective claims to the right of pre-emption, filed in this office, and am of the opinion that they have inhabited and cultivated, as required by the law, tracts of land within what appears from the maps to be a private survey in the name of Joseph Deputy.

JOHN MILLER, Register.

No. 4.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, September 20, 1823.

SIR: Application having been made to this office to issue a patent for the claim of William Nash, under Joseph Deputy, for 680.56 acres, in townships 48 and 49, range 16 west, against which you entered a caveat July 12, 1822, I have to request that you furnish this office with evidence in support of your belief that the claim is fraudulent, or at least that its original place of location is different from the present place of location, and this evidence be produced by the 1st day of February next. If it is not produced by that time the patent will be issued on the claim of Mr. Nash.

I am, &c.,
Mr. SHADRACH BARNES, Franklin, Missouri.

No. 5.

FRANKLIN, Missouri, September 25, 1823.

SIR: Sometime in the year eighteen hundred and eleven the writer of this letter, one William Taylor, and James Barnes, settled on section five, in township forty-eight north of the base line and north of the Missouri river, and range sixteen west of the fifth principal meridian, and have ever since continued in the possession of the improvements which were respectively made by them on said land. Agreeably to the act of Congress, they, at the time appointed by law, made application to the register and receiver of the Howard land district to grant them, according to the law extending that privilege to the inhabitants of the Territory of Missouri, the right of pre-emption on said land, and made proof of their inhabiting and cultivating said land, before the register and receiver aforesaid. The said section of land, however, being marked on the books of the said land office as a confirmed Spanish grant, the register and receiver have refused hitherto to grant to us the right of pre-emption. The said pretended Spanish grant was made in the name of Joseph Deputy, and is now held by persons who have purchased under him. Sometime ago they commenced an action of ejectment against the writer of this letter and the persons before named to take from them the possession of said land, but were finally non-suited, and, although more than a year has elapsed since, have made no advances towards a recommencement of their suit. At the time of the non-suit aforesaid the writer forwarded on to the general offices the depositions of witnesses, which went to establish the fact that said Spanish grant was pretended and fraudulent, and that it never had been confirmed by the board of commissioners established for that purpose; but, as he has never received any intelligence of the reception of these depositions, he presumes they have miscarried. The proof of his being entitled to the right of pre-emption under the act of Congress was also forwarded to your department by the register and receiver aforesaid, who have been waiting ever since for instructions from your department how to proceed. As it is the wish of the writer of this letter that the controversy should be settled as speedily as possible, he earnestly requests that these instructions may be forwarded immediately. The persons claiming said grant pretend it was confirmed specially by Congress after the dissolution of the board of commissioners. Any information on that subject will be gratefully acknowledged by the writer.

*There are twenty-seven pages in the original.

Respectfully,
The COMMISSIONER of the General Land Office.

SHADRACH BARNES.

No. 6.

SIR: Agreeably to your request of the 20th September last, I hasten to enclose to you some of the evidence necessary to invalidate the claims of William Nash, under Joseph Deputy, situated in township 48 and 49, range 16 west. This evidence was forwarded to your office more than a year since, and was accompanied by a certificate from the register and receiver of the Howard land district, stating that the evidence I had offered to them in support of my claim to a pre-emption was satisfactory, and that it would have been granted but for the interference of the Spanish grant. I will forward a similar certificate as soon as I can obtain it.

The enclosed depositions, it will appear, were taken in the course of judicial investigation by competent officers, where the opposing parties were present to cross-examine the witnesses. Had I the certificate of the register and receiver now to forward, I should deem it unnecessary to trouble you with any evidence in support of my claim to a pre-emption, but, in its absence, I would call your attention to the depositions marked A, B, and C. By these depositions it will appear that I came completely within the provisions of the pre-emption laws, and unless there be some claim to the same land, valid against the government, I am entitled to the land by the beneficence of the government. As a patent itself may be repealed and annulled on account of fraud in obtaining it, I suppose those proceedings necessary to be had before the emanation of a patent are, at least, liable to the same objections that might be urged against the title when complete. The act of Congress of April 12, 1814, requires, in cases like the present, that it should "appear by the report of, the commissioners, register or recorder, that the concession, warrant, or order of survey, under which the claim is made, should contain a special location, or had been actually located or surveyed, within the late Territory of Orleans, before December 20, 1803, or actually located or surveyed within the Territory of Missouri before March 10, 1804, by a surveyor duly authorized by the government making such grant." These facts were to appear by the report, in order that the claims should be confirmed. By the petition of Deputy, and the concession by the commandant, Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, marked D and E, it will appear that both were general, and referred to no particular part of the domain from which the land was to be taken. It remains to see whether there was any survey according to the act of Congress. The plat only shows that the survey was made in the month of February, 1804, but not for whom it was made. It is signed, as would appear by the record of the recorder's office, by R. L. Nash. This is evidently a mistake in the recording clerk, as will appear by the deposition of Nash, and must have proceeded from the singular manner in which Ira P. Nash signs his name, as Ira P. was certainly the person who made the survey. The original survey is not now to be found. It appears by the deposition of Stephen Jackson, marked F, that in the month of February, 1804, he, together with one Stephen Hancock, (who was dead when the depositions were taken,) ascended the Missouri with I. P. Nash for the purpose of making surveys, and that the lowest line of the lowest survey made to his knowledge was just opposite, or a little above, the mouth of Lamine creek, which is between three and four miles in a straight line above Franklin. Jackson further states that he saw no person then in the country from whom Nash could have received assistance in making a survey; that Nash mentioned the names of those for whom he made the surveys, but did not mention that he made any for his brother, William Nash. He also describes the manner of making the surveys, and what kind of compass and chain Nash used. Take now Nash's own deposition, marked G, on the other side of the case, taken at a different time and place, and see how it corresponds with other statements. First, as to the time of making the survey, he says nothing of it at the beginning, but being asked directly, he refers to his certificate of survey, thereby, as he may suppose, avoiding anything like direct perjury. (See that part of his deposition marked Z.) In subsequent parts of his deposition he identifies the time by saying, in one place, he did not "communicate the thing to his party, Stephen Hancock and Stephen Jackson;" and, in another, that "at the time that survey was made Stephen Hancock and Stephen Jackson acted as chain-carriers in making other surveys. It must, then, have been made when Jackson was with him, or it was not within the time required by the act of Congress.

You will see that Jackson and Nash differ in their description of the compass and chain used by Nash, and, taking Nash's own evidence, the matter must seem improbable that any survey was made at the time he mentions. It is shown by his own deposition that his return on the plat is false. He says on the plat that the survey was made "according to the decree of the lieutenant governor, Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, dated March 5, 1800," in his deposition he says "it was not made for any person, but to be covered by a claim for himself, or by a claim owned by some other person who might wish to lay it there." It was, therefore, not made by the order of the surveyor general, or any other person, or by virtue of any concession, warrant, or order of survey. It appears further from his deposition, "that a claim was laid there that was in the possession of William Nash, which he had purchased." Now, it will appear from the deeds (copies of which are enclosed, H, I, K and L,) that Deputy sold to Don St. Vrain, on February 5, 1804, two hundred arpents of the concession; that afterwards, on July 20, 1804, Deputy sold to Tyson two hundred arpents; that Tyson, on July 21, sold to Dejarlai his two hundred arpents, and that St. Vrain, on the same day, sold six hundred arpents to Dejarlai; and that, on the same day, Dejarlai sold the whole to William Nash. The deed from Deputy to St. Vrain appears by the copy to be for only two hundred arpents, and St. Vrain afterwards sold six hundred. How they managed it I know not, but, admitting them to be correct, I think the whole most clearly, and without question, contradict Ira P. Nash's deposition, and show that, if a claim in the possession of William Nash, and which he had purchased, was laid where he had made his pretended survey, it must have been in July, 1804, and therefore bad; but I call your attention to these deeds once more before I dismiss them. You find William Nash, to whom this land was confirmed, a witness to them all but the one to himself, and that three of them are dated July 21, 1804. This was a time when it was necessary to make haste, and, accordingly, we find by Clark's deposition, marked N, that on July 22, 1804, he, together with Ira Nash, William Nash, James H. Whitesides, and Daniel Hubbard, started up the Missouri. By the deposition of Whitesides, marked O, it appears they started sometime in the month of July, without mentioning the day, but as William Nash is witness to the deed on the 21st, it must have been after that time. Mention is made in Clark's deposition of I. P. Nash running a line to connect a survey at the bluff to one on the river, to enable him to make a correct plat of what he had once done before, and that they had failed. He speaks of Nash marking a corner on three percon trees, and running thence down the river, and of his stopping because he was not getting the land he wanted. This corner has nothing to do with the case now before you, as you will find that it was less than a mile below the trading-house, which is shown by the depositions that speak of its distance above Franklin to have been at least two miles, and the survey pretended to be made by Nash, on which the present claim rests, was commenced, as he himself says, a few rods above the slough that discharged its waters into the Missouri river, and that said slough is about a quarter of a mile above the town of Franklin. You find, further, from Clark's deposition, that the party came down to the mouth of a slough a little above Franklin, when William Nash told Clark "that he had an eight hundred arpent claim, and he would locate it below the mouth of the discharge or slough above mentioned," and "that Ira Nash then went from the company, but whether he set his compass or run a line Clark does not recollect, but sometime afterwards he returned, and mentioned that he, William, had got the plum orchard, making the observation to his brother William." It appears that William Nash had divers eight hundred arpent claims, as he mentioned no less than three to Clark. It appears pretty certain that Ira Nash, when he was up the river in July, 1804, was engaged in making surveys, and, from the whole evidence thus offered, I think it will not be questioned that his fraternal affection for William Nash has carried back the time of the survey on which this claim must rest. I regret extremely that there is no cause now pending in which I could take evidence to prove Ira Nash unworthy of belief on his oath; but if you should deem such evidence material, and would receive affidavits, I believe they can be procured. The cause in which the depositions were taken, of which the enclosed are copies, has been dismissed by the plaintiffs.

You will see by the deposition of Chrisman, marked P, that he pretended to find a corner of beginning and line trees, but this is entirely destroyed by the second deposition of William Munro and of Turner, marked Q and R. The second deposition of Daniel Munro jr., goes as far as it possibly can to show Ira P. Nash's villany. It is marked S, and to it I would ask your attention. It is there shown that Ira Nash himself had a claim of four hundred arpents, covering, as he said, my improvement and that of Taylor, and that the beginning corner was at the mouth of the slough above my house, marked on a large walnut tree. It is further shown to be the same slough, near the mouth of which Chrisman, the deputy surveyor, began his survey; and further, that this conversation was in the year 1811. Ira Nash himself offered to sell the land, and afterwards told Munro that the eight hundred arpent claim belonged to William Nash.

The person who obtained the enclosed copies of the depositions forgot to procure the letter and plat mentioned in Canole's deposition, and therefore I regret it is entirely useless. If you could extend the time, and inform me of the fact, I could send a copy to your office. I shall, lastly, ask you to examine the deposition of Avery, marked T, where you will find that Ira Nash, after claiming a four hundred arpent tract at the same place, was bold enough to avow that, it not being special, he had removed it, and located the land with another claim; this deposition is marked T. Having now recited the principal facts, I leave it to any man to say if, from the testimony, it does not appear that the brothers, William and Ira Nash, have combined to defraud the United States out of eight hundred arpents of land. I do think it appears most manifest that no survey was made before March 4, 1804, and I can only account for the claim being embraced in the report of the recorder of land titles, by supposing the officer who appeared before the commissioners ignorant, as he must have been, of the facts here detailed.

The case resting upon evidence so very lengthy, I shall not trouble you with my remarks on it. I have shown the manifold contradictions of Nash's own evidence, and of his return, as it appears to have been recorded. I need not urge upon you the correctness of the position, that letters patent may be repealed after their emanation, on account of fraud in obtaining them. Nor do I suppose it necessary to attempt the proof of a position so evident, as that the same fraud would vitiate the confirmation itself. The law under which I claim my right of pre-emption was passed on the same day with that authorizing the confirmation of claims on the report of the recorder. If the land was not on that day "rightfully claimed by another," shall I lose the benefits intended to be conferred on persons standing in my situation? Shall I not be placed in a situation to combat the opposing claim? Or, rather, will the government, when convinced of the illegality of the claim, grant a patent to a person in whose hands, as against the government, it is a nullity? I humbly hope that, after an attentive perusal of the enclosed copies, you will with me conclude that the claim of Nash is fraudulent, and that he is not entitled to a patent. I have underscored the particular parts of the depositions to which I wish your attention.

With the highest respect, your obedient servant,

SHADRACH BARNES,
By H. R. GAMBLE.

FRANKLIN, Howard County, December 16, 1818.

GENTLEMEN: Take notice that, on the third Monday in January next, being the eighteenth day of the month, we shall proceed, at the house of David Todd, attorney at law, in the town of Franklin, between the hours of 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 6 o'clock in the afternoon, to take the depositions of William Munro, David Munro, jr., _____ Whitesides, William Clarke, James Riggins, Stephen Jackson, John Sneathen, David Kincaid, Harrison Jamieson, and Matthew Kincaid, and others, to be read as evidence in a case of ejectment, brought by you against us, and John Welch and James Welch, in the superior court of Missouri Territory, held at St. Louis; and, at the same place, and between the same hours, we shall adjourn from day to day thereafter, if necessary, until all said depositions are completed.

JOHN BARNES.

SHADRACH BARNES.

WILLIAM TAYLOR.

WILLIAM RIDGWAY.

Messrs. JAMES H. BENSON, WILLIAM V. RECTOR, JOHN W. SCUDDER, and JOSEPH WIGGINS.

JANUARY 11, 1819.

I received a copy of the within notice, as attorney in fact for Joseph Wiggins.

GEORGE TOMPKINS.

HOWARD COUNTY, Territory of Missouri, scit:

The affidavit of David Todd, taken this 5th day of February, 1819, who states that, on the sixteenth day of December last, he delivered a true copy of the within notice to John W. Scudder, William V. Rector, and James H. Benson; and, also, on the 11th day of January, 1819, he delivered a true copy of the same notice to George Tompkins, attorney in fact for Joseph Wiggins; and that said four named persons reside in the town of Franklin, or within three miles thereof.

DAVID TODD.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, a justice of the peace, at the date above written.

AUG. STORRS, Justice of the Peace.

TERRITORY OF MISSOURI, Howard County, to wit:

Be it known that, on this eighteenth day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, at the office of David Todd, attorney at law, in the town of Franklin, between the hours of 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 6 o'clock in the afternoon, personally appeared before me, Augustus Storrs, a justice of the peace in said county and Territory, the following witnesses, and their depositions were then and there taken as followeth, before me, agreeably to a de dimis potestatem hereunto annexed; and, also, a notice annexed, to be read as evidence in favor of Shadrach Barnes, Amos Barnes, William Taylor, and William Ridgway, in a suit of ejectment pending and undetermined in the superior court for the northern circuit, held at St. Louis, in said Territory, wherein William V. Rector and others are plaintiffs, and the said parties first above named, and John Welch and James Welch, are defendants. (N.)

William Clark being produced, sworn and examined, on the part of the defendants, deposeth and saith that, on the twenty-second day of July, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and four, this deponent set out from Richard Chitwood's, about four miles below the mouth of the Missouri river, in company with Ira Nash, William Nash, and James H. Whitesides, and Daniel Hubbard, for the purpose of ascending the Missouri and seeing the country; on the way, said Daniel Hubbard obtained a canoe and returned back. This deponent landed a little above the mouth of Lamine creek, and went with said Ira Nash, and William Nash, and James H. Whitesides, to Barclay's lick, and from thence to Boon's lick, in company with said two Nashes, and then returned again to Barclay's lick. From thence the party again, being joined by said Whitesides, returned to a place called Prewitt's trading-house, a small distance above where the town of Franklin is now situate. Ira Nash then said that, being up here sometime before, in February, he had left a compass in a hollow tree, and, with the others, went to hunt it, while this deponent went to a place called Sulphur lick to kill deer, agreeing to meet said party the next day at Barclays lick, where we met accordingly, said party bringing said compass. Said Ira Nash, together with this deponent and William Nash, then went to run a line from one survey at the bluff to another on the river, for the purpose, as Ira Nash said, of enabling him to make a correct plat of the same, or of what he had once done before; we run the said line about five outs, and, coming to a wet, grassy place, we were obliged to relinquish our design; we then again parted, this witness by land to hunt, and the others by water, to meet again the next day at Prewitt's trading-house, which we then did. Something less than a mile below said trading-house said Ira Nash marked a corner on three percon trees, from which corner we commenced running a line down the Missouri river, and ran not exceeding five outs, when said Ira Nash mentioned to the company that he was not getting the land which he wanted, and stopped running. Said Ira Nash then went back, as he said, to make a new corner, while all the rest of the company came down to the river to the mouth of a slough a little above Franklin. William Nash then told this deponent that he had an eight hundred arpent claim, and would locate it below the mouth of this discharge or slough above mentioned. Ira Nash then went from the company, but whether he set his compass or ran a line with it this deponent does not recollect, but sometime afterwards he returned, and mentioned that he, William, had got the plum orchard, making the observation to his brother William. All the company then went down the river to a large spring between the Rocher Percé and the Grand Monitoe, and William Nash observed that he had an eight hundred arpent claim, which he would lay there, but this deponent does not know whether any corner was made, but knows that no lines were run. The company then went on down the river until they came in sight of the place where Cote Sans Dessein now is, and then landed. William Nash then said that he would lay one of his eight hundred arpent claims in that place. Ira Nash then set the compass, intending to locate it in an oblong form, running up the river. The whole of the company then again descended the river, and reached the place from which they set off about the seventeenth day of August, in the same year.

By the defendants:

Question. What kind of compass and chain was used by Ira Nash at the times above named?

Answer. It was a large pocket compass, set in a piece of wood, and having wooden sights, and the chain was a rawhide tug, and perhaps a piece, or some pieces, of rope attached to it.

Question. When the percon trees were marked as corners, and the line commenced running, who marked the line trees?

Answer. I do not recollect.

Question. Did you see the lines marked at all?

Answer. I do not recollect that I saw them marked; and whether they were marked at all or not I cannot say.

Question. How far from the river were these percon corners?

Answer. About five or six poles.

Question. At the time William Nash talked of laying his claim below the slough, do you recollect of any claim by one of the company being set up to the land, and what passed?

Answer. I heard of none.

Question. At or near the percon corners, were you shown, by any of the company, any corner or lines marked which were made at any time previous to that when you were there?

Answer. I saw none, neither heard any of the company mention any.

Question. How far did Ira Nash make the corners on the percon trees from Barclay's lick?

Answer. I do not know exactly, but it was on the Missouri, below said trading-house, and we then called it six or seven miles.

Question. How far from Barclay's lick did he commence to run the line to connect the two surveys you first spoke of?

Answer. It was at or very near the lick.

Question. Did Ira Nash qualify any chain-carriers or a marker when he pretended to commence a survey, or did he not?

Answer. He did not when I was with him.

Question. How far was the place Ira Nash was hunting his compass from the corner he made on the percon trees?

Answer. He started from the trading-house, to hunt his compass, towards the slough above mentioned, but I do not know the distance.

Question. How far do you think the percon trees marked as a corner are from the slough where William Nash said he would lay his claim?

Answer. At that time we called it about three miles from said trading-house to the slough, and said percon trees are between three-quarters of a mile and a mile below the trading-house.

Question. Were any corners made about the mouth of the slough, or between the percon trees and the mouth of the slough?

Answer. I saw none made, neither saw any at all.

WILLIAM CLARK.

F.

Stephen Jackson, also being sworn at the same time, deposeth and saith that in the month of February, in the year eighteen hundred and four, this deponent, in company with Stephen Hancock and Ira Nash, set out for a place called Hancock's bottom, about thirty miles above St. Charles, for the purpose of ascending the Missouri and making some surveys, said Stephen Hancock and myself being then employed by said Ira Nash for that purpose. We made several surveys while engaged in the expedition, and the lower line of the lowest survey that we made was just or very nearly opposite the mouth of Lamine creek. After completing said surveys, we went to a trading-house called Frew's trading-house, and remained there about two or three days. Said Ira Nash then hid his compass in a hollow cotton-wood tree near said trading-house, and all the company set off home. In passing down, passed through a prairie about one mile northwest from Franklin, and returned home between the fifth and tenth day of March in the same year.

By the defendants:

Question. In what manner were the surveys of said Ira Nash made?

Answer. Said Nash carried the compass and took the course, and said Hancock and myself carried the chain, this deponent blazing the lines.

Question. How far above Franklin is the lower line of the last survey you made?

Answer. Between three and four miles in a straight line.

Question. Did you see any people in this country from whom said Nash could obtain assistance in making his surveys except the company that came up with him?

Answer. I did not.

Question. Do you know of his making any corners after he left the trading-house?

Answer. I do not.

Question. Were the company ever separated so that Nash could have executed a survey where Franklin now stands without your knowing it?

Answer. I do not know how to answer the question. He could not have done so until after we came to the trading-house, and I do not rightly recollect about that. We were there two or three days doing nothing.

Question. Whilst at the trading-house did you hear Nash say anything about making further surveys?

Answer. I did not.

Question. Did you, at any time during the trip, hear Ira Nash say that he had any surveys to make for his brother, William Nash?

Answer. Not that I recollect at this time.

Question. The survey that he executed, did he not let you know the names of those for whom he did it?

Answer. He made one survey for Barclay, one for Hyacinthe, one for Baraboo, and one for Allen, and one for himself, as he told this deponent, and I recollect no other.

Question. How far above Franklin is Prew's trading-house?

Answer. Not exceeding two miles.

Question. Is Stephen Hancock alive or dead?

Answer. He is dead.

Question. Will you describe the chain and compass?

Answer. The compass was a pocket compass, set in a piece of wood, and having wooden sights, and the chain was a piece of a rope and a tug joined.

Question. Do you know whether Ira Nash was ever in this country before February, 1804?

Answer. He was never to my knowledge, and from what he told me then I am satisfied he was not. This deponent is of lawful age, and further saith not.

STEPHEN JACKSON.

The above depositions of William Clark and Stephen Jackson were severally sworn to and subscribed before me, a justice of the peace in Howard county, Missouri Territory, on this eighteenth day of January, in the year eighteen hundred and nineteen; and a further examination of witnesses is hereby adjourned until to-morrow morning at ten of the clock, at the same place; of which adjournment George Tompkins and Robert Wash, being present during the examination, had notice.

AUG. STORRS, J. P.

Pursuant to adjournment met at the same place for the further examination of witnesses, and, between the hours of 10 in the forenoon and 6 o'clock in the afternoon, the following depositions were taken. (O.)

James H. Whiteside, being sworn before me, a justice of the peace in Howard county, deposeth and saith that in the month of July, in the year eighteen hundred and four, this deponent, in company with Ira Nash, William Nash, and William Clark ascended the Missouri and landed opposite the mouth of Lamine creek, about the first of August in the same year. The object of this deponent in coming to this place was to obtain a headright under the Spanish government. From the mouth of Lamine we went to a place called Barclay's lick. This deponent was engaged in improving a place for Mr. Barclay, while both the said Nashes went to survey, as they said, although this deponent did not see them survey. On the river, nearly opposite the mouth of Lamine, said Ira Nash made an improvement by deadening some trees and planting some corn, in which this deponent assisted him. This deponent was not engaged particularly in surveying with said Nashes, and knows nothing of their surveying more until they arrived near the mouth of the Grand Osage, where William Nash said that he would lay an eight hundred arpent claim. Several years ago this deponent saw William Nash, who told him that he was living or about to settle at the Grand Osage, on the claim above mentioned. I believe this is all I know relative to the case.

By the defendants:

Question. How often had William Nash and Ira Nash been in this country before?

Answer. I understood that Ira Nash had been here once before, and that William Nash had never been in the Territory before; and I lived only one mile and a half from said Ira Nash.

Question. Did Ira Nash or William Nash mention anything of William Nash having surveys here before that time?

Answer. Not to my recollection.

Question. Did either of them make any corners between Barclay's lick and Franklin?

Answer. I saw nothing of the kind except the improvement before mentioned.

Question. Were you present, or do you know anything of any person trees being marked as corners?

Answer. I do not know of it; neither was I present.

Question. Where you landed at the mouth of the slough, near Franklin, did you see Ira or William Nash make or mark any corners there?

Answer. I did not, to my recollection.

Question. Did William Nash say that he had any claim at or near that place?

Answer. Not to my recollection. The deponent further adds that if he was present when the person trees were marked he has totally forgotten it, but is firmly of the opinion that he was not present.

Question. When you were encamped at the mouth of the slough, as aforesaid, did you hear either Ira or William talk of having surveyed as low down as the mouth of the slough while you were at work at Barclay's lick?

Answer. I recollect no such conversation.

J. H. WHITESIDE.

William Clark claims two days' attendance and mileage for two hundred miles, and one dollar for his ferriages. James H. Whiteside likewise claims for two days' attendance and mileage for four hundred miles, and one dollar for his ferriages.

AUG'S STORRS, J. P.

A.

Daniel Munroe, also being duly sworn on the same day, deposeth and saith that in the month of January or February, in the year eighteen hundred and eleven, Shadrach Barnes moved to the place where Franklin now is, and immediately commenced clearing a field which he enclosed with a good rail fence, and raised about fifteen acres of corn during the ensuing summer, which he gathered in the fall; and said Shadrach Barnes has lived on the same place every year since, except when forted; and has, as this deponent believes, raised corn thereon every year since, except since the town of Franklin was laid off thereon. Said Barnes did not move his family to the place above mentioned until June in the said year, eighteen hundred and eleven; and further, this deponent says that William Taylor moved to the place where he now lives, together with his family, in the year eighteen hundred and twelve, and during the summer of the same year raised several acres of corn, and has continued to live on and cultivate the same place every year since, except when necessarily compelled to live in the fort for two or three years at intervals; and both said Barnes and said Taylor at this time reside on the places where they first settled; and further, William Ridgway likewise settled, in the year eighteen hundred and twelve, on the Missouri, below where Franklin now is, with his family, and in the same year raised about five acres of corn, and has continued to live on and cultivate said place every year since, except when obliged by Indian hostility to live in the fort; also, Amos Barnes, in the year eighteen hundred and twelve, raised about three or four acres of corn, and settled in the same year on the ground where Franklin now is, together with his family, and built a house on the same place in the same year; and this deponent likewise says that on Friday last, the 15th instant, he showed to George Jackson, county surveyor of Howard county, the centre of the four above-mentioned improvements as they were situated in the said year of eighteen hundred and twelve, or as near the centre as he could recollect, and all said improvements are, to the personal knowledge of this deponent, in township number forty-eight north, of range number sixteen west of the fifth principal meridian; William Taylor's said improvements are on the northeast quarter of section number six, and William Ridgway's, Amos Barnes', and Shadrach Barnes' said improvements are on the southwest quarter of section number five, except as to Shadrach Barnes' said improvement of eighteen hundred and eleven, which extended into the southeast quarter of section number six. Further, in the spring of the year eighteen hundred and seventeen this deponent was in company when Horatio Chrisman, a deputy surveyor of the United States, commenced surveying an eight hundred arpenter claim of William Nash, this deponent only hearing that the claim was of that size, and including the town of Franklin, or a part thereof. Ira Nash went with said surveyor to show the corners or beginning, and was unable to find a corner, saying that it had been marked on a walnut tree. Said party then established a corner above the slough, and about one and a half chain from the Missouri, by marking two or three trees with an axe. Said surveyor then took a course from said corner, running north twenty degrees west, as this deponent understood, and had the line marked out by blazing the trees near it. The party continued running on said line until they were stopped in Mr. Welch's field, and desisted from running any further.

By the defendants:

Question. Did you pay particular _____ to find a marked corner or marked line?

Answer. I looked for a corner, but could find none except the one then made; and as to line trees, I looked for none.

Question. Did Ira Nash or any one of the company find a marked corner or marked line tree?

Answer. If they found any I did not know it. This deponent is of lawful age, and further saith not.

DANIEL MUNROE, JR.

B.

Harrison Jamieson, also being sworn on the same day, deposeth and saith that this deponent was in this country in eighteen hundred and eleven and twelve, and knew the situation of the improvements near Franklin during those years, and this deponent knew Shadrach Barnes, William Taylor, and William Ridgway, residing on their places near or adjoining Franklin, and each of them to raise corn thereon, and to live thereon with their families during the years eighteen hundred and twelve and thirteen, except when occasionally in the fort; likewise, he knew Amos Barnes in eighteen hundred and twelve to cultivate a field of corn between the fields of Shadrach Barnes and William Ridgway; on the fifteenth day of January instant, in company with Daniel Munroe, jr., this deponent showed to George Jackson, county surveyor of Howard county, the centre of each of the above-mentioned improvements as they were in eighteen hundred and twelve; William Taylor's improvement is on the northeast quarter of section number six, and William Ridgway's and Amos Barnes' improvements are on the southwest quarter of section number five; and Shadrach Barnes' said improvement is on the southwest quarter of section number five, and extending over to the southeast quarter of section number six, all in township number forty-eight, in range number sixteen west of the fifth principal meridian, on the north side of the river Missouri. And this deponent is of lawful age, and further saith not.

HARRISON JAMIESON.

C.

William Munroe, being duly sworn on the same day, deposeth and saith that in the year eighteen hundred and eleven Shadrach Barnes built a house, and raised about fifteen bushels of corn, and lived in said house with his family during said year; said improvement was on the ground where Franklin now is, and where said Shadrach Barnes now lives. In the year eighteen hundred and twelve this deponent personally knew William Taylor, William Ridgway, and Amos Barnes, each of them, to make separate improvements, by raising, each of them, several acres of corn in fields enclosed with a rail fence, and likewise knew each of them to build houses and inhabit them with their families during the same year—said

Amos Barnes on the ground where Franklin now is, and the others on quarters adjoining said town of Franklin. In the spring of eighteen hundred and seventeen this deponent was present where Horatio Chrisman, a deputy surveyor of the United States, together with others, was engaged in running out or surveying a claim, including a part of Franklin, and belonging, as this deponent understood, to William Nash. When assembled at the supposed place of beginning, Shadrach Barnes called on this deponent and others to examine and see if they could find any marked corner or lines, and this deponent, on examining, could find no corner or lines marked; neither heard of any being found at the time except those then made. This deponent is of lawful age; and further saith not.

WILLIAM MUNROE.

The foregoing depositions of James H. Whiteside, Daniel Munroe, jr., Harrison Jamieson, and William Munroe were severally subscribed by them, and sworn to before me, a justice of the peace in Howard county, at the time of taking the same, and at the place above named; and said depositions, and the foregoing ones of William Clark and Stephen Jackson, are herewith enclosed, annexed to the deditus issued for the taking thereof. Witness my hand this 19th day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and nineteen.

Depositions of witnesses produced, sworn, and examined on the eighth day of September, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and nineteen, between the hours of ten of the clock in the forenoon and six of the clock in the afternoon of said day, at the office of Augustus Storrs, in the town of Franklin and county of Howard, in the Territory of Missouri, before me, Augustus Storrs, a justice of the peace within and for the county aforesaid, by virtue of a deditus for the examination of witnesses in a certain cause now depending in the superior court of the Territory of Missouri for the northwestern circuit, between William A. Rector and others, plaintiffs, and Shadrach Barnes and others, defendants, on the part of the defendants, directed to any judge or justice of the peace within and for the county of Howard, in said Territory.

Horatio Chrisman, of lawful age, being produced, sworn, and examined on the part of the defendants, deposeth and saith that—

By the defendants:

Question. Have you ever more than once surveyed William Nash's Spanish claim at Franklin?

Answer. I have run the lines around it twice.

Question. Had you a copy of an old survey at that time?

Answer. I had no old survey, but acted under an order of survey from General Rector, surveyor general.

Question. Did you find any corners of said survey at that time?

Answer. I saw many marked trees at that time which I supposed to be the corner of the beginning.

Question. Where was that beginning?

Answer. Immediately west of the first slough bank putting into the river above Franklin, about half a mile above said town.

Question. Did you speak in a former deposition of lined trees marked; and, if so, on what line were they, and how were they marked?

Answer. On the first line running north twenty west, magnetic meridian, I discovered some marked trees six or eight feet west of me, which were blazed on each side.

Question. Who was with you when you saw said marked trees?

Answer. As well as I can recollect, there were William V. Rector, James H. Benson, Shadrach Barnes, Mr. Roland, and some others.

Question. Did you examine those marks?

Answer. Not particularly; I only saw them.

Question. How old were those marks?

Answer. I did not examine them particularly, and do not know how old they were.

Question. Do you think those marked trees were a line of a survey?

Answer. I cannot tell; they were running the same course which I run.

Question. Might they not have been the blazes of some path or road?

Answer. I do not know; I did not suppose them to be at that time.

Question. How many marked trees did you see at that time on said line?

Answer. I saw several near the beginning, and others near or about half a mile from the corner, towards William Taylor's house, south and west of said house.

Question. Do you consider those marked trees where you began your survey as a corner; and if so, how were they marked?

Answer. That place was shown to me as the place of beginning; where said marked trees were. They were marked different ways, some being notched and some blazed.

HORATIO CHRISMAN.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, a justice of the peace, on this 8th day of September, in the year 1819.

AUG. STORRS, J. P.

S.

Daniel Munro, jr., being produced, sworn, and examined, and being of lawful age, deposeth and saith on the part of the defendants—

By defendants:

Question. Were you along when Horatio Chrisman run the lines of William Nash's Spanish grant at Franklin?

Answer. I was along.

Question. Did Shadrach Barnes particularly call on you to notice for any marks or corners at that time?

Answer. He did call on the company, generally, to notice.

Question. Did you particularly notice to see marked trees at the beginning, or on the line?

Answer. I did notice both at the beginning and on the line, but saw none.

Question. Have you not, since that time, been called to notice again?

Answer. I have.

Question. On the second examination did you discover any old marks on the line?

Answer. I saw none which appeared older than the line first run by Horatio Chrisman.

Question. Did you ever have any conversation with Ira Nash relative to the quantity of land included in the Spanish location at Franklin; and if so, what was it?

This question was objected to by Mr. Tompkins, plaintiffs' attorney, but it is considered that the answer be inserted.

Answer. I have had conversation on that subject with Ira Nash, and he told me that he had a claim of four hundred arpents, including Shadrach Barnes' and William Taylor's improvements.

Question. Did he state where the beginning corner of said four hundred arpent claim was?

Answer. He did, and told me that the beginning corner was marked on a large walnut tree at the mouth of a slough, above Mr. Shadrach Barnes' house.

Question. Was that the slough at the mouth of which Horatio Chrisman began the survey of the eight hundred arpent claim at the time you mentioned looking for marked trees?

Answer. I know of no other slough which would be included by a four hundred arpent claim, including Barnes' and Taylor's improvements.

Question. At what time did the conversation you mentioned take place with Ira Nash?

Answer. I think it was in the year eighteen hundred and eleven.

Question. Did you understand at that time whether the said land was claimed by him, the said Ira Nash, or by his brother, William Nash?

Answer. I do not recollect his saying that it was his brother William Nash's land at that time, but Ira Nash then offered it for sale.

Question. Did you after that time hear Ira Nash say that the said four hundred arpent claim did belong to his brother, William Nash; and if so, at what time?

Answer. I do not recollect his saying that the said four hundred arpent claim belonged to William Nash, but he has since told me that the eight hundred arpent claim belonged to William Nash.

DANIEL MUNRO, Jr.

Sworn to and subscribed before me September 8, 1819.

AUG. STORRS, J. P.

Q.

William Munro, of lawful age, being produced and sworn on the part of the defendants, deposeth and saith—

By defendants:

Question. Were you present at any time when Horatio Chrisman surveyed the Spanish grant at Franklin?

Answer. I was present.

Question. At what time was that survey made?

Answer. It was made in May or June, eighteen hundred and seventeen.

Question. Were you called upon at that time by Shadrach Barnes to notice for marked trees at the beginning corner, or on the line?

Answer. I was.

Question. Did you see any marked trees or marked corner?

Answer. I saw none.

Question. What course did they run from the place of beginning?

Answer. They run nearly a north course.

Question. Did you see any marked trees at that time?

Answer. I saw none except those then marked.

Question. Have you ever examined since at the corner and on said line; and if so, did you see any marked trees at the corner or on said line?

Answer. I saw none except two, which appeared to have been marked about seven years before, and did not run with the line, and being about half a mile from the beginning corner.

Question. Were not there marked trees on a wagon road leading to the Weed's prairie?

This question was objected to by the plaintiffs' attorney as a leading question.

Answer. There is a road now running near where said marked trees then were, but I do not know whether any road was there then or not.

Question. Are not those marked trees in the direction the road now runs, and nearly at right angles to the said line?

Answer. They are.

Question. Did you ever have any conversation with Ira Nash touching said Spanish claim at Franklin; and if so, what was it?

This question was also objected to by plaintiffs' attorney.

Answer. I have had conversation with him in eighteen hundred and eleven. He told me that he had a Spanish claim beginning at the slough above where Franklin now is, and running out to a grassy slough, cornering at a stake in said slough, and containing four hundred arpents.

Question. In what direction and how far is the grassy slough from the Missouri river?

Answer. It is between three-quarters and a mile from the Missouri river, in nearly a northeast direction, and it does not communicate with said river.

Question. Was the corner at which Ira Nash said his four hundred arpent claim commenced the same at which Horatio Chrisman began his survey?

Answer. It was.

Question. On which side of the beginning line did Shadrach Barnes and William Taylor live?

Answer. On the east side.

Question. Did you hear Ira Nash say that William Nash had any part in the four hundred arpent claim?

Answer. I did not.

Question. Did you ever hear Ira Nash offer to sell the four hundred arpent claim as his own?

Answer. I heard him say that he would sell it.

WILLIAM MUNRO.

Sworn to and subscribed before me on September 8, 1819.

AUG. STORRS, J. P.

After taking the foregoing depositions, it being late in the evening, and it being stated in the notices to the plaintiffs that the depositions would be taken from day to day, if necessary, it is considered that an adjournment take place till to-morrow morning, September 9, at the hour of 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day.

AUG. STORRS, J. P.

R.

At the hour of 10 o'clock in the forenoon of this the ninth day of September, in the year 1819, pursuant to the adjournment of yesterday, I again commenced the examination of witnesses touching this suit.

Talton Turner, of lawful age, being produced, sworn, and examined on the part of the defendants, deposeth and saith that—

By the defendants:

Question. Are you a deputy surveyor under the surveyor general of this Territory?

Answer. I consider myself as such.

Question. Did you ever run around the lines of William Nash's Spanish claim at Franklin?

Answer. I have begun at the beginning corner as established by Horatio Chrisman, and run the west, north, and east boundaries.

Question. Did you see any marked line or corner trees; and if so, describe them and the age of the marks?

Answer. I saw four corners, and trees marked from each corner, as established by Horatio Chrisman on the west boundary line from the beginning. I saw blocks cut of the trees, by which the marks appeared to be from two to eight years old. The marks which appeared to be eight years old did not run apparently with the line which I run, but run east and west. One mark cut out appeared to be four years old, and was in range with my line. I followed the said west line from the beginning about fifty or sixty chains, and saw blocks cut out of all the most ancient marked trees, and only one mark appeared to be so old as eight years.

Question. Will you describe the corner trees, and the marks, and the age of the marks?

Answer. I know of no corner trees except those I saw made on the bank of the Missouri river, a little above the first slough above Franklin, by Horatio Chrisman, or under him by his company, in the last of May or first of June, 1817. The marks on the trees were large blazes facing a stake on the bank of the river, marked with letters and figures made with a marking iron.

Question. Were you with Horatio Chrisman when he made the survey of William Nash's claim at Franklin, and did you see, or did he show the company, any marked trees, and at what time did he survey it?

Answer. I was in company with him when he made the beginning, and went with him on the west boundary line about one mile, where he was stopped for that day by John Welch. I saw no marked line or marked trees, neither did Mr. Chrisman point out any to me, nor do I know that he did to any of the company. Said survey was made by said Horatio Chrisman in the latter part of spring or first of summer, in the year eighteen hundred and seventeen.

Question. Were you called on by Shadrach Barnes, when Horatio Chrisman first made the survey of said claim at Franklin, to notice for the beginning corner and marked lines, and did you see any?

Answer. I was asked by Shadrach Barnes to go with him to the place where Horatio Chrisman was about beginning his survey. I looked and examined for marks at the corner and on the line, but saw none except what I have before described.

Jeremiah Murphy, being produced, sworn, and examined, and of lawful age, deposeth and saith—

By the defendants:

Question. Were you present when Horatio Chrisman surveyed Nash's Spanish claim at Franklin?

Answer. I was present.

Question. Did Shadrach Barnes call on you to observe for marked trees or corners?

Answer. He called me as one of the company, calling the company generally to observe.

Question. Did you take particular notice, and did you see any marked trees at the corner or on the line?

Answer. I saw none excepting those marked that day.

Question. How far did you go with the surveyor from the corner; and in what year was the survey made?

Answer. I went with them about three-quarters of a mile from the beginning corner; and the survey was made about two years ago, the last of May or first of last June.

AUG. STORRS, J. P.

Charles Canole, of lawful age, being produced, sworn, and examined, on the part of the defendants, on this second day of October, in the year eighteen hundred and nineteen, deposeth and saith that on the eighteenth day of May, in the year eighteen hundred and fifteen, on his way down Holston river, in the State of Tennessee, in a boat, on his way to the Missouri Territory, William Nash came on board this deponent's said boat, on the said river Holston, and wrote a few lines, requesting this deponent to deliver the same to Mr. Barnes, living in Missouri Territory, at Boon's lick, which lines this deponent delivered to Shadrach Barnes during the ensuing November, near said Barnes' dwelling-house, and read the same to the said Shadrach Barnes. Said William Nash, in said letter or writing, notified said Shadrach Barnes that he, Nash, had been informed that said Barnes had settled on a piece of land claimed by said Nash; and that he, Nash, gave said Barnes the said notice, so that he, Barnes, might not be taken unawares. On my way to Boon's lick I stopped at the house of John E. Allen, in the neighborhood of St. Louis, and, in conversation with said Allen, this deponent informed him that he had a letter from William Nash to Mr. Barnes. Said Allen then informed this deponent that he had William Nash's papers, and that he would send a copy of the plat of said land by this deponent to said Barnes, which he did do; and this deponent delivered the said plat to said Barnes at the same time of delivering the letter above mentioned. This deponent has, at the time of giving in this his testimony, examined said letter and plat, being to him produced by said Shadrach Barnes, and well knows them to be the same that were sent by Nash and Allen, by this deponent, to Shadrach Barnes. This deponent, at the time of giving this testimony, has marked said letter with the letter A, and said plat with the letter B, and has seen them hereunto annexed to his deposition. And further saith not.

George Avery, of lawful age, being produced, sworn, and examined, on this second day of October, 1819, deposeth and saith that sometime in the year eighteen hundred and fifteen, as well as this deponent recollects, he met with William Taylor and Ira Nash at the house of David Briant, near Charette village, and heard William Taylor say to said Ira Nash that he had been gone six months, and had made four hundred arpents of land, and that he, Nash, had better go and stay six months longer. Said Nash then observed that he had a four hundred arpent claim where William Taylor lived that was not special, and that he had an eight hundred arpent claim that was special, and that he meant to remove his eight hundred arpent claim to the place where the four hundred arpent claim was, on which William Taylor lived.

Question by defendants. Did you hear Ira Nash say that he had laid an eight hundred arpent claim on the place where William Taylor now lives, before or since the conversation you mentioned before?

Answer. I never heard Ira Nash say that he had laid an eight hundred arpent claim there.

together with the deditus and notices, and other depositions, as by the notices and certificates affixed will appear, are sent under the seal of the clerk of the superior court for the northern circuit.

Depositions of witnesses produced, sworn, and examined, on the thirty-first day of March, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and nineteen, between the hours of seven of the clock in the forenoon and six of the clock in the afternoon of that day, at the house of John McMichle, in the Rocher Percé bottom, in the county of Howard, in Missouri Territory, before me, Augustus Storrs, a justice of the peace within and for the county of Howard aforesaid, by virtue of a deditus for the examination of witnesses in a certain cause now depending in the superior court, in the northern circuit of said court for the Territory of Missouri, between William V. Rector and others, plaintiffs, and Shadrach Barnes and others, defendants, on the part of the plaintiffs, directed to any justice of the peace within and for the county of Howard aforesaid:

Ira P. Nash, of lawful age, being produced, sworn, and examined on the part of the plaintiffs, deposeth and saith that he commenced making a survey a few rods above the slough which discharges its waters into the Missouri river; that said slough is about one-quarter of a mile above the town of Franklin, in Howard county, and that said beginning of said survey was very near the Missouri river, and opposite the island in the Missouri river, above Franklin.

By the plaintiffs:

Question. For whom did you make this survey?

Answer. I made that survey for no person, but to be covered by a claim for myself, or by a claim owned by some other person who might wish to lay it there.

Question. Whose claim was laid there?

Answer. A claim in possession of William Nash, which he had purchased.

Question. Tell what you know of the claim; that is, from whom it was purchased, and from whom it was derived?

Answer. It originated from Joseph Deputy or Baptiste Presee, but I do not certainly know from which of the two; but I think William Nash purchased it from Antoine Dejarlai.

Question. Did you ever show the beginning of that survey to any one since? If you did, tell to whom.

Answer. I showed the place of beginning first to William Clark, James Whitesides, and William Nash; and in the month of April, eighteen hundred and eleven, if I recollect right, I showed the place of beginning to Abraham Barnes; but the tree had then fallen into the river, as I suppose, on which the corner was made, it being then seven years after the making the original survey. I think in May, some one or two years since, I showed the same place to Horatio Chrisman at the time he was about to resurvey it by order of the surveyor general of Missouri Territory, as said Chrisman told me.

Question. Do any persons live on the land included in that survey? If any do, tell who they are.

Answer. It would be a very tough thing for me to tell that; the people in Franklin live on it, and William Taylor likewise.

By defendants:

Question. Was the survey made previous to the first day of March, in the year eighteen hundred and four?

Answer. I refer to my certificate of survey to ascertain that.

Question. Do you, or do you not, recollect the month in which the survey was made?

This question was objected to by the plaintiffs, and overruled.

Question. Who were the chain-carriers and markers when the survey was made?

Answer. What chaining and marking was done was done by myself.

Question. Were any persons in company at that time; and who were they?

Answer. I was alone, and ran only part of two squares of the survey, and called for the balance; nor did I communicate the thing to my company, Stephen Hancock and Stephen Jackson.

Question. Did you show any marked tree to William Clark and James Whitesides, to whom you said you showed the place of beginning?

Answer. I did not call their attention, but made additional marks at the time they were in company with me; and I believe they understood that to be the place of beginning.

Question. Was the original marked tree then standing?

Answer. It was.

Question. What kind of compass had you?

Answer. It was a compass having a perfect circle, and degrees marked on the edge; also a needle, being on a pivot, so well balanced that neither end depressed, and, when perfectly horizontal, one end pointed north and the other south, as I suppose. It also had uprights at each extreme end that projected from the circle, through which there were certain crevices or slits through which I could see and take an object.

Question. Was it a pocket compass with wooden sights or not?

Answer. I do not know whether it was a pocket compass or not; if it was a pocket compass, it was larger than I would wish to carry in my pocket. It had wooden sights.

Question. What kind of chain did you use when you made that survey?

Answer. It was a two-pole chain, agreeably to French or Spanish measure, and made of genuine Louisiana hemp.

Question. Was it the same with which you made the survey in company with Stephen Jackson and Stephen Hancock?

Answer. I carried but one chain with me.

Question. Did you mark more than one corner when you made the survey?

Answer. Only one; and that was the bourne meillien, or what I suppose would now be called the middle station in the line.

Question by the plaintiffs. When you made the survey above spoken of, were you a surveyor appointed under law for such purposes?

Answer. I was appointed by the surveyor general, Antoine Soulard, who has sanctioned all my returns as his deputy.

Question by defendants. At the time that survey was made, did Stephen Jackson and Stephen Hancock act as your chain-carriers in making other surveys?

Answer. Yes.

LAND OFFICE, Franklin, Missouri, December 11, 1823.

We do hereby certify that Shadrach Barnes, James Barnes, and William Taylor, of Howard county, Missouri, applied for the purchase, by right of pre-emption, of fractional section No. 6, and part of fractional section No. 5, in fractional township No. 48 (N. M.) of range No. 16 west of the fifth principal meridian; and that, in support of their claim, they produce satisfactory evidence of having inhabited and cultivated said land prior to April 12, 1814; and that a certificate of purchase would have been granted them had it not appeared on the maps that the greater part of said fractional sections were covered by a Spanish grant claimed by William Nash under Joseph Deputy.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 30, 1823.

SIR: Your letter of _____, transmitting evidence in support of the claims of J. Barnes and others to a pre-emption right in townships 48 and 49 north, of range 16 west, and tending to invalidate the claim of William Nash, under Joseph Deputy, to the same land, as a Spanish grant, required by my letter of the 20th September last to S. Barnes, was received on the 24th instant.

When I give a decision on the claim I wish to have all the evidence before me, and I have therefore requested the recorder of land titles to furnish me with copies of all the papers in his office in relation to the claim of Mr. Nash; and I will thank you to furnish me with all the evidence you may wish to have taken in consideration when the decision is made, in addition to what has already been received.

Any evidence furnished prior to the 1st of April next will then be examined.

I am, sir,

OFFICE OF THE RECORDER OF LAND TITLES, St. Louis, January 26, 1824.

SIR: I send, as required by your letter of 30th ultimo, copies of all the papers in the claim of William Nash, under Joseph Deputy. The proceedings of the late commissioners will be found, page 326 of the registry of rejections, in the General Land Office. When, under the act of Congress, of April 12, 1814, I took up this claim for examination, it appeared to me that the board had given authenticity to the survey as having been made in proper time; and it was selected under that act for confirmation.

With great respect, I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

FREDERICK BATES.

Hon. GEORGE GRAHAM, Commissioner of General Land Office.

No. 10.

FRANKLIN, Missouri, January 1, 1824.

Sir: Sometime since some papers were transmitted to the General Land Office for a patent to Ira Nash for 800 arpents of land in townships Nos. 48 and 49 north, and range 16 west, including the town of Franklin. I have since been informed that a caveat has been filed by Shadrach Barnes against the issuing of the patent to Nash, setting forth in his caveat that he (Barnes) has had a pre-emption granted him for the same land. I beg leave to refer you to a report made by the register and receiver at Franklin to your office in 1819 of all the pre-emptions claimed, granted, and rejected in the Howard land district. You will there find S. Barnes' pre-emption rejected. If they conceived it their duty to report his case at all, for I know they told him they had no power to act upon his case at all, as he had thought proper to withdraw his application for the land where he resided, and applied for adjoining lands, which were surveyed and laid down upon the maps as private lands. Barnes did know, for years before any pre-emption laws passed, that this Spanish grant was located there. Nash gave him notice of it. I trust, sir, the patent will not be longer withheld, as a greater delay in issuing the patent under the Spanish grant will produce serious damages to a multiplicity of the purchasers and sellers of lots in the town of Franklin. They have been sold by the purchasers under the grant, with bonds to make title by a given time; and as the time has arrived, in most instances, for the titles to be made, the purchasers prefer getting back their money, as the property has fallen, and are suing for the recovery on the grounds that title cannot be made in fee simple without a patent first issuing from the United States. I am interested in the patenting of the grant, which I beg leave to offer to you as my apology for addressing you upon this subject.

I am, with great respect, your very obedient, humble servant,

TAYLOR BERRY.

GEORGE GRAHAM, Esq.,
Commissioner General Land Office, Washington City.

No. 11.

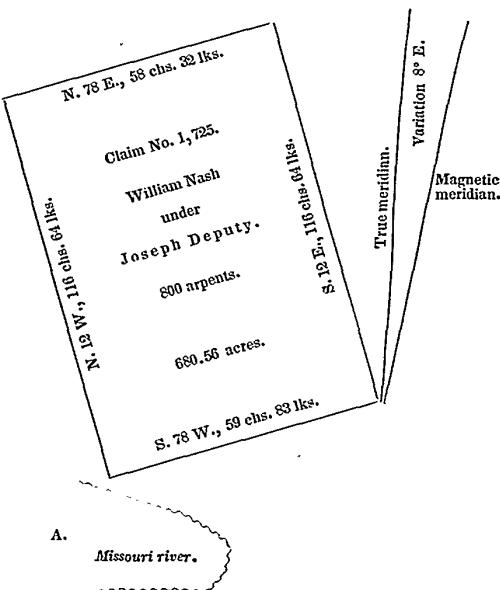

WASHINGTON, January 15, 1824.

The enclosed was received by me to-day. The object is the patent, as appears by the letter of one of the claimants, upon the supposition that Mr. Barnes' claim to a pre-emption right has not been sustained.

Respectfully,

DAVID BARTON.

COMMISSIONER OF GENERAL LAND OFFICE.

Claim No. 1,725.—Surveyed for William Nash, under Joseph Deputy, 800 arpents of land, beginning at a post on the north bank of the Missouri river, opposite an island from which a black walnut, 16 inches diameter, bears N. 76° W., 68 links, and a — 15 in diameter, bears N. 49° E. 48 links; thence N. 12° W., at 78 chains 54 links, intersected the township line between townships Nos. 48 and 49 N., range 16 W., 27 chains 48 links E. of the township corner, on the line between ranges 16 and 17, W. 116°, 64 chains, set a post from which a hackberry, 15 inches diameter, bears N. 33° E., 12 links, and a hackberry, 20 inches diameter, bears S. 38° W., 70 links; thence N. 78° E., 46 chains 4 links, the line between sections 31 and 32, township No. 49 N., range 16 W., 8 chains 20 links N. of quarter-section corner 58 chains 32 links, a hackberry 10 inches diameter, corner, from which a live-oak, 12 inches diameter, by S. 87° W., 18 links, and an ash, 6 inches diameter, bears N. 59° E., 9 links; thence S. 12° E., 51 chains, intersected the south boundary of section 32, 17 chains 84 links west of quarter-section corner, 116 chains 64 links, set a post in the edge of drowned land, from which a hackberry, 10 inches diameter, bears N. 57° E., 27 links, and an ash, 14 inches diameter, bears S. 64° W., 27 links; thence S. 78°, W. 36° 48', intersected the line between sections 5 and 6, 7 chains 67 links north of the corner on the river, 59 chains 83 links in the beginning.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of St. Louis:

William Milburn, being duly sworn, on his oath, sayeth that in August, 1818, he was a clerk in the office of the surveyor of United States lands in Illinois and Missouri, and that as clerk in said office, and a duly commissioned and authorized deputy surveyor, he did, by the authority and under the direction of said surveyor, examine the surveys of the several private claims in the district of Howard, among which was one of 800 arpents, confirmed to William Nash, under Joseph Deputy, No. 1,725, in township Nos. 48 and 49 north, range 16 west; that I was furnished with an authenticated copy of the confirmation of said claim, as certified to said surveyor by the United States recorder of land titles for the Missouri Territory; and that, after examining the survey of said claim, as executed by Horatio Chriesman, and comparing it with the confirmation, I did believe that it had been by him surveyed on the ground where it originally was; that I found natural marks, such as are called for in the confirmation; and that, in tracing the lines, there were trees with ancient notches or blazes which appeared to have been made ten or fifteen years previous; and that I examined the connexion with the section lines and found it to be as stated in the foregoing survey.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Howard, ss:

Before me, Augustus Storrs, a justice of the peace within and for the county aforesaid, on this third day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-three, personally appears Ira P. Nash, who, being first duly sworn, deposeth and saith: That about the year eighteen hundred and four he was authorized by the Spanish government to locate and survey lands belonging to individuals under the said government, and return the survey of lands so made to the surveyor general of the Spanish government at St. Louis; and that he did, in or about that year, locate and survey the claim of one Joseph Deputy, for William Nash, of eight hundred arpents on the Missouri river; opposite a willow island, and made return of the said survey to the surveyor general at St. Louis, agreeably to the views of the Spanish government at that time. He further deposes that about the year eighteen hundred and seventeen he was called on by a deputy surveyor under the government of the United States, by the name of Horatio Chriesman, to show the beginning of the survey so made, as aforesaid, by him, for Joseph Deputy, at the time and in the manner aforesaid, and that he did go with the said Horatio Chriesman and showed him the beginning corner; and that, after tracing the line some little distance, a certain Shadrach Barnes, in company with others, stopped the said surveyor, H. Chrisman, and utterly refused by force to let him pass through their improvements, and that the survey on the opposite page of this sheet is conformable to the original survey made and returned by him as aforesaid in or about the year 1804.

I. P. NASH.

In April, 1811, I was at the improvement of Shadrach Barnes where he now lives. I then told his son that they were on William Nash's land, and showed the beginning, &c., &c.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, General Land Office, January 16, 1824.

SIR: Yours of yesterday, enclosing a survey of the claim of William Nash, under Joseph Deputy, has been received.

As the claim of S. Barnes and others to the same land has not been decided, it would be improper to issue a patent to Mr. Nash at present.

I am, &c.,

GEO. GRAHAM.

Hon. D. BARTON, Senate.

No. 13.

FRANKLIN, Missouri, July 1, 1824.

SIR: I have heretofore transmitted to your department a statement of the evidence in support of the claim of myself and others to a pre-emption right in townships 48 and 49 north, and range 16 west of the fifth principal meridian, and also, as I conceive, conclusive testimony to invalidate the claim of William Nash, under Joseph Deputy, to the same land. It is important to myself, and to those who are similarly situated with me, that a decision should be had in your department as soon as possible as to the merits of those claims. I am fully convinced that the only object of my opponents is to obtain a patent from the government which at law would give them an advantage over me, and compel me, finally, to resort to a tedious and expensive chancery proceeding in order to establish my title to the land in question; if a patent should be issued to me I am convinced that they would give up the contest. It will be seen, by a reference to the papers, that the claim of Nash was rejected by the board of commissioners for non-compliance with the law of Congress making particular requisitions as to the time in which such claims should be surveyed, and that the said claim was only confirmed by Congress with a number of others in 1816, upon a general recommendation of the recorder of land titles at St. Louis, three years after the law had passed granting the right of pre-emption to settlers upon public lands in the Territory of Missouri. I have been favored with the perusal of a letter from you, sir, to my attorney, H. R. Gamble, in which you expressed your willingness to have received further evidence on the subject prior to the 1st day of April last, on which day it was implied in your letter that a decision would be made on the evidence before you. Relying confidently on the testimony heretofore forwarded by me, I have forborne to offer any more, but awaited the decision which was to be made. As no information has yet reached me as to the result of that decision, I am again under the necessity of troubling you for information on the subject, and of urging a speedy determination upon my claim. If, however, any further evidence appears to be necessary in order to a correct decision, and if the points upon which that evidence is required are suggested to me by a letter from your department, it would afford me pleasure to produce it; and such a requisition will be punctually complied with. As I have adduced all the proof that I conceive to be necessary, I would be at a loss, in any other way, on what point to offer additional evidence.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

SHADRACH BARNES.

Hon. GEORGE GRAHAM, Commissioner General Land Office, Washington City.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, August 17, 1824.

GENTLEMEN: From certificates given by you, separately, it appears that pre-emption claims would have been granted to Shadrach Barnes, Joseph Barnes, and William Taylor, but that the lands claimed interfered with a private survey in the name of Joseph Deputy.

On an examination of the papers which have been filed in this office, I am of opinion that the claim of the assignees of Joseph Deputy has not been confirmed, agreeably to the true intent and meaning of the act of April 12, 1814, under which they claim it to have been confirmed, and shall withhold a patent for the same; this claim, therefore, should not prevent Shadrach Barnes and others from obtaining their pre-emption certificates if they are now otherwise entitled to them.

With great respect,

GEO. GRAHAM.

The REGISTER and RECEIVER at Franklin, Missouri.

No. 15.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, August 17, 1824.

SIR: I have informed the register and receiver of the land office at Franklin that I have declined to issue a patent to the assignees of Joseph Deputy, and that that claim ought not to prevent them from issuing certificates to S. Barnes and others, who claim the same land by pre-emption, if they are now otherwise entitled to certificates.

I give you this information that the parties claiming under Deputy may take the necessary measures for trying the title to the land in a court of chancery, the proper tribunal for the final decision of the points in dispute between the parties.

So far as the United States may be interested, the case may be decided under the provisions of the act of the last session.

With great respect, &c.,

GEO. GRAHAM.

TAYLOR BERRY, Esq., Franklin, Missouri.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, August 17, 1824.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 1st July, I have to inform you that I have advised the register and receiver of the land office at Franklin that I have declined to issue a patent on the claim of the assignees of Joseph Deputy, and that that claim ought not to prevent them from issuing a certificate to you for your pre-emption if you now are otherwise entitled to it.

The parties claiming under the assignees of Deputy will, I presume, institute the necessary proceeding in a court of chancery to try the right of title.

Very respectfully, &c.,

GEO. GRAHAM.

Mr. SHADRACH BARNES, Franklin, Missouri.

No. 17.

FRANKLIN, October 8, 1824.

SIR: Your letter of August 17, in answer to mine of July 1, has been received. I immediately waited upon the register and receiver, and was informed by them that your instructions to them to issue me a certificate for my pre-emption had been received, but that they had declined acting upon them, as, in their opinion, you had transcended your legitimate authority in giving them. They say that while the claim of Joseph Deputy stands upon their maps, they are compelled by law to reserve the land from sale. They at the same time express it as their thorough conviction that the claim of Deputy is fraudulent, and it is only upon this matter of form they hesitate. They acknowledge your authority, however, as far as this, that if you will instruct them directly and pointedly to treat the claim of Deputy as a nullity, to issue without regard to that claim certificates of pre-emption to such persons settled on the tract as are entitled to them under the act of Congress, they will obey you. Now, it appears to me that your instructions already given have been as pointedly and directly to that effect as you could possibly word them. In your letter to me you say "that you have advised the register and receiver of the land office at Franklin that you had declined to issue a patent on the claim of the assignees of Joseph Deputy, and that claim ought not to prevent them from issuing to me a certificate, if I was entitled to it otherwise;" nevertheless, they seem to require that you should tell them to treat the claim of Deputy as a nullity, and to issue to me a certificate in the same manner as if that claim were not marked on their map. I know that the business of your department is very laborious and expensive, and feel reluctant again to trouble you on a subject which, compared to your weightier avocations, must appear trifling, but to me it is a matter of the first importance, independently of the pride I feel in asserting and vindicating those rights to which I feel conscious I am entitled. The most valuable part of my property depends upon the issue of this dispute. I am confident of eventually gaining it, but the possibility of losing it prevents me from making improvements that are necessary for the comfort of my family. I am old, too, and wish to be freed from legal difficulty as soon as possible. These considerations I hope will excuse the trouble I give you, and induce you to bestow your consideration again upon the matter. It is impossible that any prejudice can result to the assignees of Deputy by my obtaining a patent. If their claim is good, their remedy in a court of chancery is easy and certain; otherwise the dispute must be protracted for years. If it should meet your approbation, I would therefore request that you would issue to the register and receiver at this place such instructions as would authorize them (in their opinion) to give me my certificate. I should feel grateful, in any event, if you would apprise me of your determination.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, &c.,

SHADRACH BARNES.

GEO. GRAHAM, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office.

N. B.—The proof of my right to a pre-emption is irrefragable. The register and receiver express themselves perfectly satisfied with it; it is only the interference with Deputy's claim that creates any difficulty.

S. B.

No. 18.

FRANKLIN, Missouri, January 20, 1825.

SIR: Your letter of November 9 came to hand, and was immediately laid before the register and receiver. I was aware that the register and receiver were the sole judges of what proof was sufficient to entitle an individual to a pre-emption right, and must have been misunderstood if you supposed I wished your department to assume that right; all I wished was that you should order them to disregard the claim of Deputy's assignees, and to grant me a certificate if my proof was sufficient to fulfil the requisitions of the pre-emption law. This I think you did in the order you had previously issued, but the register and receiver seemed to think your instructions did not amount to that. My object was, therefore, to elicit such an order (to that effect merely) as would be beyond the reach of cavil or objection. You observe, at the conclusion of your letter, that if the register and receiver would make out a special report of the case you would lay it before the Attorney General for his opinion; no alternative could have been more agreeable to me, if it could have been carried into effect; but to this there are insuperable difficulties. To make a report of the case the register and receiver would have had to give the foundation and grounds upon which Deputy's claim rests, and as the evidences of that title are in the office of the recorder of land titles, they would have had to assume data of which they are officially ignorant. Upon this ground they declined to make such report.

I have, however, I imagine, obtained such testimonials from them as will overcome any further difficulty in the issuing of a patent by your department for the land included in my pre-emption claim, which testimonials are herewith transmitted to you. The paper marked No. 1 is a certificate of the register and receiver that the proof of my right to pre-emption is full and satisfactory to them, and goes on to show, as the reason for their withholding my certificate of purchase, that the land is covered with a Spanish grant, which grant, being laid down on their plat, precludes them from acting upon it. This certificate was given with a view that your department might be informed officially that they, the register and receiver, had determined upon the sufficiency of my proof to the land claimed by me, so that you could issue a patent without making yourself a judge of the sufficiency of my proof. On the back of the certificate is a receipt of the receiver that I have paid the amount of money for the land if my claim should be confirmed; this was necessary, in order that all the requisitions of the law should be fulfilled before I could ask a patent of your department. No. 2 is a survey in which my claim is laid down under the direction of the register and receiver, with a field note on the margin showing its boundaries, and a certificate at the bottom in which the amount of acres is certified. This survey was made and is certified by Jeremiah Rice, a deputy surveyor, by authority of the surveyor general. It shows the quantity to be 194.86 acres, which agrees with the amount of money paid in at the rate of $125 per acre, which the register and receiver have determined is all they can now receive for pre-emption rights, as the minimum price of land has been reduced to that. The paper marked No. 3 is a certified copy of two applications made by me to the register and receiver, the first of which was withdrawn by their leave, inasmuch as it called for the two small fractions which, by reference to the accompanying plat, you will observe lay south and east of my claim: these fractions have been subsequently granted by pre-emption right to Amos Barnes and William Ridgway's assignees.

The second application calls for all the land applied for in the first, excepting the two fractions aforesaid, and being under the impression that there were not 160 acres (the quantity to which I was entitled) in the tract laid down on the accompanying plat as my claim, I applied further for an adjoining quarter of section six, instead of the two fractions aforesaid. The subsequent survey has shown, however, that there is in the land marked as my claim even more than 160 acres, to wit: 194.86 acres. The register and receiver have, therefore, properly restricted me to the tract marked on the plat. These applications are sent with no other view than to put you in possession of as many of the facts in the case as possible. They are certified as true copies by the register and receiver.

Upon these premises I ask of your department to grant me a patent for the land marked on the plat (herewith transmitted) as my claim. The register and receiver, declining to act in accordance with your instruction for the reason mentioned in their enclosed certificate, have advised this course, and I adopt it with confidence.

The case presents this view: Your department has decided that the claim of Deputy's assignees is invalid and void. The testimonials upon which that decision was made are in your possession; a patent for their claim (you have observed in your letter to me) will not be issued; the enclosed certificate of the register and receiver shows that they have judged of my proof and found it to be entirely satisfactory; the receipt of the receiver shows that I have paid for the land; the accompanying plat shows (of which they have a counterpart) the boundaries, and defines the land, with the quantity of acres. I have complied, therefore, with every requisition of the law. Your department, then, having decided the claim of Deputy to be fraudulent, and that claim being the only obstacle to the attainment of my title, I think, with deference, that there can no longer be any reason for not issuing me a patent.

I might draw arguments from the peculiar hardship which attends my situation, but, resting my case solely upon its merits, I shall only observe there is no hope that Deputy's assignees will ever bring a suit to determine the dispute. They have sold and executed title bonds for a number of out-lots comprised in my claim for which they have received the money; they know their claim to be fraudulent, and that whenever it comes to a trial it will be declared so; they will then have to refund the money which they have received so iniquitously; they will not on that account sue me, and if a patent is not granted to me they can practice such fraud with impunity. They have heretofore sued me, and although in possession of every title of evidence relating to their claim they would not suffer the case to go to the jury, but took a non-suit; they have licensed individuals to use timber off the land until it is now entirely destroyed. My title being merely equitable, I can do nothing, and have no other remedy but applying for my title papers to your department. If it was their object to have the dispute ended they could do so at once, as our statute authorizes actions of ejectment upon surveys and concessions; but their wish is to procrastinate the result as long as possible; and under these circumstances I am compelled to submit, without any means of redress, to all the grievances I have mentioned. Tendering my sincere thanks for the attention you have been so kind as to give to my former solicitations, I conclude with a confident hope it will be continued to me again.

Your obedient servant,
Hon. GEO. GRAHAM, Commissioner General Land Office.

SHADRACH BARNES.

CERTIFICATE NO. 1.

We certify that the proof established by Shadrach Barnes does establish, to our satisfaction, the fact of his having inhabited and cultivated as the law required to have secured to him the right of pre-emption, had not the land claimed by him been covered by a Spanish claim in the name of Joseph Deputy; which claim, whether valid or otherwise, having been laid down on the plat furnished us by the surveyor general, has precluded us from acting on the subject.

Certified January 13, 1824.

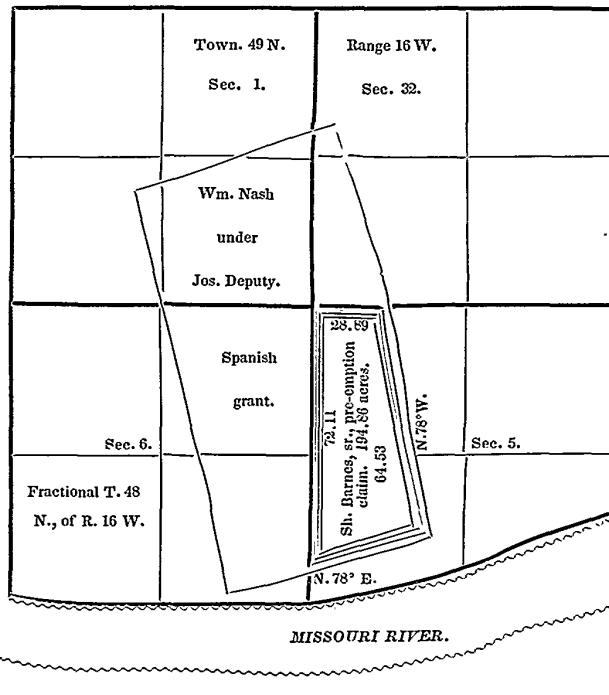

T. A. SMITH, Receiver.
JOHN MILLER, Register.

I certify that Shadrach Barnes has deposited with me two hundred and forty-three dollars and fifty-cents to pay for the lands claimed by him as a pre-emption right if his claim should be confirmed.

No. 2.—Showing the quantity and boundaries of Shadrach Barnes' pre-emption right.

Beginning at southeast corner of Deputy's Spanish grant; thence north 78° west, on the line of said Spanish grant, 64 chains and 53 links, to township line; thence north 88° west, on said township line, 20 chains and 89 links, to the corner of sections five and six, fractional township 48 north, range 16 west; thence south, on said line, 72 chains and 11 links, to intersect the line of said Spanish grant; thence on said line to the place of beginning.

This may certify that I surveyed the above tract of land, marked Shadrach Barnes, sr., on January 6, 1825, and find its contents to be 194.86 acres; the chainmen being duly sworn according to law.

COPY OF PAPER NO. 3.

To the register and receiver of the land office for the Franklin district, at Franklin, December 29, 1818:

I apply for the purchase of the southeast fractional quarter of section six, and the fractional southeast quarter of section five, or the west half thereof, and an equal half of northeast fractional quarter of the same section five, and equal one-half of the northeast quarter of section five, and northwest quarter of section five, all in township forty-eight north of the base line, and in range sixteen west of the fifth principal meridian; and for all the land in said quarters surveyed, notwithstanding the location, appropriation, or survey of the Spanish claim, in the name of William Nash, on any part of the land thus claimed and applied for, by virtue of having inhabited and cultivated a tract of land in the Territory of Missouri, in the Franklin land district, and within the land applied for, and by not removing out of said Territory, by virtue of the act of Congress relative to pre-emption rights for said Territory, passed April 12, 1814, and the amendatory act thereto of April 29, 1816, and offers the following proof.

SHADRACH BARNES.

To the register and receiver of the land office, Howard county, Missouri Territory, March 19, 1819:

The memorial of Shadrach Barnes, of said county and Territory aforesaid, respectfully sheweth: That his original application for purchase by pre-emption calls for a part of fractional section five, in range sixteen, in fractional township forty-eight, (north of the Missouri river,) which lies east of Spanish claim, which part of said section laying east of said Spanish claim your memorialist stands bound not to claim by virtue of his pre-emption; that part of said section five laying east of said claim is also claimed by William Ridgway and Amos Barnes by equal right of pre-emption; also a small fraction in said section five is equally claimed by said William and Amos, and all possessing and living thereon. I therefore request the privilege to withdraw my application of that part of said section which lays east of said Spanish claim; also to withdraw my application of the small fraction which lays south of said line in section five, and, in lieu thereof, beg leave to apply for the purchase of the southwest fractional quarter of fractional section six, in range sixteen, township forty-eight, west of the fifth principal meridian, and north of the Missouri river.

SHADRACH BARNES.

We certify that the foregoing is a true copy from the original papers filed in this office.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, November 9, 1824.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of October 8. The registers and receivers of the land office are the exclusive judges of the propriety of issuing certificates for pre-emption claims. With their rights I never meant to interfere. All that I intended to express in my letter to the register and receiver was, that the claim confirmed in the name of the assignees of Joseph Deputy was invalid, and, as a confirmed claim, should not prevent the issuing of a certificate to you, if you were otherwise entitled to a certificate; but whether you were entitled to a certificate was left to the register and receiver to decide, upon a review of the whole case, as well in relation to the law as the facts, and I cannot undertake to direct what that decision shall be. If they think proper to make a special report of the case to this office, it shall be submitted to the Attorney General for his opinion.

I enclose, for your information, a copy of a letter addressed by me, to Taylor Berry, esq., in relation to this claim.

With great respect, &c.,

GEO. GRAHAM.

Mr. SHADRACH BARNES, Franklin, Missouri.

No. 19.

1. If the concession to Deputy has not been confirmed heretofore, it stands for confirmation now under the late act of Congress for adjusting land claims in Missouri, and is not subject to examination before any other tribunal.

2. If not confirmed, the conduct of the register and receiver at Franklin, in receiving the testimony and money for a pre-emption claim upon it, is illegal and vexatious; the United States having no right to sell, or offer to sell, any unconfirmed claim till Congress shall decide upon its validity. See act of 1811.

3. But the concession to Deputy is confirmed, and has been for eleven years. By the act of 1814 all concessions are confirmed which did "appear" by the "reports" of the commissioners, registers, or recorders of land offices, to possess certain requisites. The concessions in question did "appear" by such "reports" to possess these requisites; it was therefore confirmed by law, and is not reversible by any officer of the law.

The withholding of the patent for eleven years has been almost ruinous to the holders, and I request that it may be issued immediately.

THOMAS H. BENTON.

MARCH 12, 1825.

No. 20.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 15, 1825.

SIR: The papers in the case of the assignees of Deputy to S. Barnes were submitted to you in August last, when you concurred in opinion with me that the evidence filed by Barnes justified the belief that the survey under which Deputy claimed had not been actually made, and that therefore a patent should be withheld. In consequence of that opinion, letters, of which the enclosed are copies, were addressed to the register, Mr. Barnes, and Mr. T. Berry, one of the assignees of Deputy.

Colonel Benton lately applied for a patent to be issued to the assignees of Deputy, on the ground that the claim was confirmed by the 1st section of the act of April 12, 1814, and that the powers vested in the Commissioner of the General Land Office by the third section of that act did not authorize him to inquire into any fact in relation to the validity of the claim. In order that you may review your opinion, I enclose Colonel Benton's memorandum, with an extract from the proceedings of the board of commissioners in relation to Deputy's claim, and a letter from Mr. Bates, the recorder, stating the reason why he issued a certificate of confirmation in this case. These papers will be sufficient to enable you to decide whether the Commissioner of the General Land Office has a right to withhold a patent in this case, on the ground that the evidence filed in bar of the claim is such as to induce him to believe that the survey was not "actually made." Should the opinion heretofore intimated by you remain unchanged, then another question will arise on which your opinion is requested. It is provided by the tenth section of the act passed February 11, 1811, (vol. 4, p. 326, U. S. Laws,) "that, till after the decision of Congress thereon, no tract of land shall be offered for sale the claim to which has been, in due time, and according to law, presented to the recorder of land titles in the district of Louisiana, and filed in his office for the purpose of being investigated by the commissioners appointed for ascertaining the right of persons claiming lands in the Territory of Louisiana." The claim of Deputy was thus filed and marked down in the public surveys as a private claim. Admitting the fact that Deputy's claim was not confirmed by the act of 1814, is it not reserved from sale by the act above alluded to?

I am, with great respect, your obedient servant,

Wm. Wirt, Esq., Attorney General of the United States.

GEO. GRAHAM.

No. 21.

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL, April 12, 1825.

SIR: In relation to your questions which have grown out of the claim of the assignees of Joseph Deputy and Shadrach Barnes, I am of the opinion that the third section of the act of April 12, 1814, makes it your duty to examine whether the certificate of the recorder of land titles in Missouri in favor of the assignees of Deputy was fairly obtained according to the true intent and meaning of that act; and if it does not appear to your satisfaction to have been a case which comes fairly within the proper construction, and the true intent and meaning of the act, it is, in my opinion, within your power, and becomes your duty, to withhold the patent.

On your second question I am of opinion that the land claimed by Deputy had better be reserved from public sale until he shall have had an opportunity of trying his title under the act of May 20, 1824; or, in case of his neglecting that course, until the limitation prescribed by the fifth section of that act shall bar the assertion of his claim under it.

I have the honor to remain, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. WIRT.

GEORGE GRAHAM, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office.

No. 22.

St. Louis, January 16, 1826.

SIR: William Nash claims eight hundred arpents of land by the assignment of a concession made by the Spanish government to Joseph Deputy. This concession was located in townships forty-eight and forty-nine, range sixteen west. This concession was confirmed by the recorder and surveyor, by his order, under the direction of the surveyor general, which proceeding was afterwards reported to Congress, who, by a legislative act, approved all the proceedings of the recorder contained in said report, giving a complete title to Nash, claiming under Deputy.

But the patent to this land has been withheld on account of a pretended right of one Barnes, who claims a pre-emption to the land covered by the concession—a claim without pretext of right, as will be shown by the following statement.

A pre-emption right ought not to be acquired to this land under our laws, because it was not vacant, but had been previously, by the Spanish government, severed from the King's domain, and had become private property before the acquirement of this country by the United States. All private property acquired, as well by the act of the government as the industrious enterprise of individuals, is protected by the treaty of cession.

That this was a just and legitimate concession, and appropriated the land above described, is ascertained by the acts of the recorder and surveyor general, governmental officers appointed to act in this business, who adjudicated the right, and reported their proceedings and decision in favor of Nash to Congress, who, by solemn act, affirm the proceedings and judgment. It may be urged that the land was fraudulently surveyed, but this could only be suggestion, and is negative as a cause for withholding the patent by the following reasons: the land was surveyed by an order of the recorder, under the superintendence of the surveyor general, a sworn officer; the survey returned to the recorder, who confirms the claim according to the survey, and the claim, thus confirmed by metes and bounds, is by him reported to Congress, whose legislative act conveys all right of this government to that part of the public domain contained in said survey to William Nash, who claims under Joseph Deputy; for, on examination, you will find that the act of Congress refers specially to the books reported to that body, containing the proceedings of the recorder, in which this survey and information is contained. The correctness of the survey is further corroborated by the fact that the government has sold all the adjoining land; and if you had the power in the abstract, the acts of the government have produced such a state of things that you cannot now exercise the power; you cannot deprive bona fide purchasers of land acquired from the government, nor can you arbitrarily deprive Deputy of the land acquired from the Spanish authorities, sanctioned by ours. Nash is entitled to eight hundred arpents; and if the survey is inaccurate, and it can be corrected, he is entitled to the land sold by this government; for no reasonable form will hold that an inaccurate survey forfeits a right to land, especially when that inaccuracy is the fault of an officer of the government. But all difficulty in issuing the patent is removed by the indubitable fact that Barnes never was legally entitled to a pre-emption right. This land was surveyed and confirmed by the recorder in the year 1815, and reported to Congress, who approved his decision in 1816. Three years afterwards, in 1819, an act was passed giving pre-emption rights in that district of country where this land is situated. Previous to the passage of this act, the occupation of this land was a violation of policy and laws of the government, and the Executive of the United States had issued orders to the commander of the military stationed at Bell Fontain to remove the intruders, of which number Barnes was one, from that country. Thus, then, when this land was surveyed in 1815, and by that act appropriated to Nash, Barnes could have no pretence of title, no claim even to the generosity of the government. He was then an intruder in open violation of law, and ordered to be removed by military force. Government had exclusive title to the land environing Deputy's concession. The land is as valuable one side as the other. If the survey was inaccurate, the government was not defrauded, for all the adjoining land has been sold, and the proceeds paid into the public treasury. But if this land had not been covered by Deputy's concession, and appropriated previous to 1819, and had continued a part of the public domain, Barnes was and is not entitled under the pre-emption laws to a pre-emption right. By the acts of Congress on the subject of pre-emption rights the claimant must furnish evidence to satisfy the register and receiver of the validity of his claim previous to the day when the said lands are to be exposed to sale under the President's proclamation. There is no discretion left with the register and receiver. The time is prescribed within which the evidence is to be introduced and the claim made; and if all this is not accomplished within the appointed period, the claim is forfeited, and the land must be sold at public auction to the highest bidder. It will appear in your office that sufficient evidence was not produced by Barnes to establish his right previous to the day of sale, and that the register and receiver, in consequence of a deficiency in testimony, postponed a decision upon his application, and, during this postponement, have sold all the adjacent lands. These officers are special agents created by an act of Congress. The act creating defines their powers, and they can do nothing but what that act empowers them to do, and in the manner it directs. Barnes was bound to produce sufficient evidence previous to the day of sale. If he did not furnish sufficient testimony to establish his claim, that fact, appearing from his own showing, had no title, for his title springs out of the law, and must be made out according to the provisions of the law granting pre-emption, or the claim cannot exist. The register and receiver had no right to postpone a claim for the purpose of procuring further testimony in this case; and the postponement itself implies a decision within the legal period against Barnes, for, if there had been sufficient testimony, no postponement would have been required, but the pre-emption would have been granted. Then the conclusion is inevitable that Barnes has, within the period prescribed, established no claim, and his right to establish the claim being now forfeited, his only remedy, if he has any, must be on application to Congress to enable him to purchase elsewhere; for no constitutional power exists in any branch of our government to enable him to get the land in controversy. Congress cannot interfere with Nash's right, because it has by solemn act granted this land to him, which cannot now be re-examined and revoked. I have thus endeavored hastily to give you my view of this case. To me it appears one without difficulty, and I flatter myself you will send the patent by the bearer.

Yours, respectfully,

GEORGE F. STROTHER.

GEO. GRAHAM, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office.

No. 3.

CASE OF LOUIS LABAUME.

In this case Louis Labaume claimed 800 arpents before the board of commissioners, who rejected the claim, and it is not included in the subsequent reports of the recorder of land titles. A patent certificate, issued by the recorder of land titles under the act of 1814, has been presented for a patent, accompanied by a survey for 9,752.38 acres, which has been refused on the ground that the claim has not been legal, and that the recorder had no authority to act on claims exceeding a league square.

RECORDER'S OFFICE, St. Louis, March 1, 1825.

SIR: On the 25th ultimo a caveat was served on me, requesting that a patent certificate (reported to you by my predecessor as having been issued, but one of those at present in the hands of Mr. Milburn,) should not issue for a claim of the representatives of Louis Labaume, situated in the point of the Missouri.

Having no control over this certificate, it being one of those in the hands of Mr. Milburn, I have thought it advisable to furnish you with a copy of the caveat, which is herewith enclosed. In addition, I would remark, in relation to this claim, that I have been unable to find any confirmation of it in the books of this office. The decision of the board of commissioners upon it I herewith forward to you. Nothing subsequent to this decision appears to have been done in relation to this claim either by the board of commissioners or recorder of land titles, except that it appears to have been reported to the surveyor of Missouri, &c., to be surveyed, as will appear by his descriptive list, as given me in the note of Mr. Milburn, a copy of which is herewith enclosed.

The patent certificate is number 388, and is therefore one of those which Mr. Milburn is instructed by Mr. Le Duc not to deliver until re-examined by Mr. Bates, as they relate to New Madrid certificates, a copy of which was forwarded to you on the 15th of February last.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient servant,

THEODORE HUNT.

Hon. GEORGE GRAHAM, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

To the Recorder of Land Titles of the State of Missouri and Territory of Arkansas:

Take notice that sundry persons claiming to be the legal representatives of Louis Labaume in a claim to a tract of land lying and being in the county of St. Charles, containing 8,000 arpents, adjoining on the one side the lands of the late Samuel Griffith, have caused to be surveyed and included in said claim a quantity of land exceeding 11,000 arpents, thereby including a tract of land of which the undersigned is entitled to a preference in becoming the purchaser from the United States. And the undersigned also shows that the tract of land claimed by said Labaume and his representatives has not been confirmed. And because the granting a patent certificate for said land would not only be manifestly unjust and greatly injurious to the United States, but a violation of the rights of the undersigned, he prays that no patent certificate be issued, and that the whole matter be re-examined as to the recorder shall seem just.

DANIEL JOHNSON.

COUNTY OF ST. LOUIS:

This day personally appears Daniel Johnson, and makes oath that he this day saw in the office of the surveyor general a paper purporting to be a patent certificate, issued by the late recorder of land titles, of upwards of nine thousand arpents of land, being the same tract of land mentioned in the foregoing notice.

DANIEL JOHNSON.

Sworn to and subscribed, February 25, 1825, before me.

J. V. GARNIER, J. P.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, March 31, 1825.

The description of Louis Labaume's claim was omitted by Mr. Bates in the first list of confirmations furnished the surveyor's office, and was afterwards, together with several other tracts, furnished by him in a note without date. The note commences as follows:

"Description of sundry tracts of land omitted in the general lists heretofore supplied to the surveyor general's office, but which the undersigned, recorder of land titles for Missouri Territory, is now desirous to add to those lists, to wit:"

Then follows the description of Baptiste Dechoquet's claim, and after it "Louis Labaume, Con. c. page 338, 8,000 arpents, between Missouri and Mississippi rivers, and bounded north by Samuel Griffith, and south (at the time of the survey being vacant lands, but afterwards) by Francis Saucier and Charles Sanguinet.

"Note.—The general limits of the survey contained 9,000 arpents, 1,000 of which were considered worthless on account of inundation, &c. Survey at expense of claimant."

Then comes three other claims, and the note signed Frederick Bates, recorder of land titles, acting as commissioner.

WILLIAM MILBURN.

T. HUNT, Esq.

SATURDAY, January 11, 1812.

Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Louis Labaume, claiming 8,000 arpents of land situate in Portage de Sioux, district of St. Charles, produces record of a grant from Juan Ventura Morales, dated July 5, 1802, with condition for the compliance with the 3d, 4th, 6th, 7th, and 9th articles of the instructions, &c., "and is found in the abstract of all the concessions and patented grants of land appertaining to the district of Louisiana recorded in the registry kept by the Spanish and French governments of the province of Louisiana since July 2, 1756, until April 23, 1802, transmitted to this board by the Secretary of the Treasury."

A majority of the board decline acting on this claim. The original title papers not produced.

John B. C. Lucas, commissioner, declares that he cannot act, as no original title paper is produced.

RECORDER'S OFFICE, St. Louis, March 1, 1825.

Truly copied from the minutes and proceedings of the board of commissioners, book 5, page 556, on file in my office.

THEODORE HUNT.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, May 16, 1825.

SIR: Your letter of the 1st of March has been received. As the claim of Louis Labaume to 8,000 arpents at the Portage de Sioux was not confirmed by the board of commissioners, or by the recorder of land titles, under the provisions of the act of 1814, it must be considered as an unconfirmed claim. Of this fact you will inform the present claimant of the land, in order that the title to the land may be tried agreeably to the act of May 26, 1824.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

GEORGE GRAHAM.

THEODORE HUNT, Esq., Recorder, St. Louis, Missouri.

No. 4.

BERNARD PRATTE, UNDER JOHN B. PERJOL.

In this case the recorder of land titles has issued a patent certificate in favor of Bernard Pratte, under John B. Perjol, for 204.02 acres, under the act of March 3, 1807; but the reports in the General Land Office do not exhibit such a confirmation.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, May 31, 1824.

SIR: The issuing of a patent in favor of Bernard Pratte, under John B. Perjol, for 204.02 acres, is suspended in consequence of the claim not being in your reports. You will please give me a certified copy of that part of the report in your office which embraces the claim.

I am, very respectfully, &c.,

GEORGE GRAHAM.

FRED. BATES, Esq., Recorder, St. Louis.

Extract of a letter from the recorder of land titles at St. Louis to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated July 10, 1824.

"The case of Bernard Pratte, under John B. Perjol, is not very intelligible even to myself at this time, and I must confess that I have fallen into an inadvertency in the issue of the patent certificate. It was acted upon by the late board, who decided in its favor, but not conclusively, as the quantity had not been ascertained by actual survey. This our books show, but I cannot learn at the surveyor's office the authority under which the survey was made. I hope in a short time to give a satisfactory account."

No. 5.

CASE OF HEIRS OF WILLIAM HAYS, UNDER P. MILLER.

In this case the recorder of land titles issued a patent certificate under the act of April 12, 1814, in favor of the heirs of William Hays, under Philip Miller, for 600 arpents; but there is no such confirmation exhibited on the books of the General Land Office, or in the office of the recorder of land titles.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, July 18, 1825.

SIR: Private claim certificate No. 346, in favor of the heirs of William Hays, under Philip Miller, for 600 arpents, has been sent to this office for a patent, but on an examination of the reports in this office the claim cannot be found. The recorder, in his report, recommends for confirmation a claim of the heirs of William Hays to a tract of land in the county of St. Charles, containing 1,000 arpents, founded on a concession from Z. Trudeau, surveyed November 10, 1799, and inhabited and cultivated from 1799 to 1809. If these are different claims, I will thank you to furnish me with a copy of the confirmation of the 600 arpent tract.

I am, very, &c.,

JNO. M. MOORE, Chief Clerk.

THEODORE HUNT, Esq., Recorder, St. Louis.

Extract of a letter from the recorder of land titles to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, August 17, 1825.

"In reply to your letter of the 18th ultimo I do myself the pleasure of enclosing you a list of all the confirmations on record in this office in favor of William Hays or Philip Miller."

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, September 22, 1825.

SIR: I enclose herewith private claim certificate No. 346, in favor of the heirs of William Hays, under Philip Miller, for 600 arpents, in relation to which you were written to on the 18th of July last. The confirmations to the heirs of William Hays, to Philip Miller, and to Ira Cottle, under William Hays, copies of which were received with your letter of the 17th August, are contained in the reports in this office; but the certificate issued by the recorder does not correspond with either of these confirmations, as the confirmation to the heirs of William Hays is for 1,000 arpents, and no mention is made of their having claimed that tract in right of Philip Miller.

You will be pleased to endorse on the certificate a copy of the confirmation for which it was issued, with such remarks as you may deem applicable to the case.

I am, very, &c.,

GEORGE GRAHAM.

THEODORE HUNT, Esq., Recorder.

RECORDER'S OFFICE, St. Louis, November 7, 1825.

SIR: I have the honor of acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 22d September, together with patent certificate No. 346. Upon a strict search in this office, I do not find any confirmation for the land as specified in said certificate. Mr. Le Duc, the former agent or clerk of Mr. Bates, has likewise made a search in this office with the same result; but he told me there were other confirmations made than those in this office, in the surveyor's office, and that he would search there and let me know the result; since which I have not heard from him. I therefore enclose the said private claim certificate No. 346 without any endorsement on it.

I am, very, &c.,

THEODORE HUNT.

BENITO VASQUEZ.

Vasquez entered this claim before the commissioners in virtue of settlement, and the enclosed paper states the reasons why it was rejected by them. It is not included in any of the recorder's reports alluded to in the second section of the act of April 29, 1816. A certificate issued by the recorder of land titles at St. Louis, under the act of 1814, has been presented for a patent, which is refused because the claim is not considered as being confirmed.

JULY 19, 1806.

The board met agreeably to adjournment. Present: the Hons. John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and James L. Donaldson, esqs.

Joseph Brazeau, assignee of Benito Vasquez, claiming two hundred arpents of land, situate in the district of St. Louis, running north and south, bounded northerly by a tract, the property of said claimant, being part of a tract granted said Benito Vasquez by concession from Francis Cruzat, dated November 22, 1796, produces the said concession, together with an assignment of said land, dated May 25, 1800.

Jacques Clamorgan, being duly sworn, says that the said Benito settled on said tract of land about 1788, built a house on the same, and that the same has been actually cultivated either by said Benito or his representatives to this day; and that three crops have been raised on the same prior to the year 1800.

The board reject this claim for want of actual inhabitation on October 1, 1800, and remark that the said Benito, having raised three crops on the same, had, by the Spanish laws and usages, acquired the right of domain.—(Book 1, pages 412, 413.)

MONDAY, August 19, 1811.

Board met. Present: Clement B. Penrose and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Joseph Brazeau, assignee of Benito Vasquez, claiming two arpents front, running back to the road leading from St. Louis to Carondelet.—(See book No. 1, page 412.) The board order that this tract be surveyed—survey at expense of claimant.—(Book 5, page 319.)

WEDNESDAY, January 15, 1812.

Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Joseph Brazeau, claiming under Benito Vasquez.—(See book 5, page 319.) A majority of the board declare that they would have confirmed this claim had it been found not to have exceeded twenty arpents.

John B. C. Lucas, commissioner, makes the same remarks as in the claim of August Chouteau, page 559.—(Book 5, page 562.)

DAVID KINCAID.

In this case Kincaid claimed before the board of commissioners a settlement right, which was rejected, and his claim is not embraced in any of the recorder's reports submitted to Congress. The recorder has, however, issued a certificate for a patent, which has been refused, as the claim is not considered as having been confirmed.

RECORDER'S OFFICE, St. Louis, October 11, 1825.

SIR: On Wednesday last I had the honor of receiving your several letters of the 7th and 14th ultimo, together with the patent of John Andrews. Enclosed you will please receive all the information this office is enabled to furnish relating to the claim of David Kincaid, it being one of the claims referred to in my letter of the 20th of June.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient servant,

THEODORE HUNT.

Hon. GEORGE GRAHAM, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

APRIL 2, 1806.

The board met agreeably to adjournment. Present: the Hon. John B. C. Lucas and James L. Donaldson, esq.

David Kincaid, claiming, as aforesaid, 500 arpents of land situate on a fork of the river Charette, district aforesaid, produces, as a special permission to settle, a concession from Charles D. Delassus, dated June 14, 1803, and a certificate of survey, dated February 27, 1806.

Kincaid Caldwell, being duly sworn, says that claimant having purchased the right of one Francis Woods to the said land, who had then a cabin on the same, did, in the year 1803, proceed to the building of a house; that he had then a family consisting of himself, wife, and eight children, and that early in the spring of 1804 he removed on said land, and has actually inhabited and cultivated it to this day.

The board rejected this claim.

On motion, adjourned till to-morrow, 10 o'clock a. m.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, November 2, 1825.

SIR: Your letter of the 11th ultimo, with copies of the decisions of the commissioners on the claim of David Kincaid, has been received, and I have to inform you that the claim cannot be considered as being confirmed.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. GRAHAM.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, September 7, 1826.

SIR: The recorder's certificate, No. 720, in favor of David Kincaid, for 425.35 acres, survey No. 1830, has been presented to this office for a patent, which has been suspended in consequence of the reports in this office not exhibiting any confirmation in his name. I will thank you to furnish me, as soon as practicable, with a copy of the evidence in your office in relation to this claim.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

CASE OF SEABURN'S REPRESENTATIVES.

A patent certificate, No. 975, has been issued by the recorder of land titles in favor of "George Seaburn's representatives," and presented to this office for a patent. The recorder of land titles was informed that the reports in this office did not exhibit any confirmation to the "representatives of George Seaburn," but that there was one in favor of the "representatives of John Seaburn," and the certificate was sent to him for correction, which he has returned without correction, with information that the reports in his office correspond with the patent certificate.

CASE OF NATHANIEL SIMONDS.

Nathaniel Simonds claims, before the board of commissioners at St. Louis, a tract of 410 arpents on the river Cuiver, by whom his claim was rejected. The recorder of land titles has, in his report of claims founded on settlement, recommended the claim for confirmation in the name of Nathaniel Simonot, on the river Dardenne. On this confirmation a survey in the name of Simonds has been made on the Cuiver.

The report of the recorder was confirmed by the act of April 29, 1816.

CLAIM TO LAND IN TENNESSEE UNDER A GRANT FROM NORTH CAROLINA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 26, 1826.

Mr. BUCKNER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and documents of John Winton, a citizen of Tennessee, reported:

The petitioner alleges that one David Stewart, after the State of North Carolina had opened an office for the entry of vacant and unappropriated lands for the redemption of specie and other certificates, made an entry October 25, 1783, for one thousand acres of land, in the words and figures following: "No. 429. David Stewart, 1,000 acres in Green county, on the north side of Tennessee river, Little Chickamaga creek, including the island opposite the same, and running down the river for complement." That a warrant issued June 25, 1784; that a grant issued to said Stewart thereon, from said State of North Carolina, on November 15, 1800. He states that he purchased said 1,000 acres of land from said Stewart, and received a deed of conveyance from him for said land, dated August 18, 1815. He also states that the tract of country in which said 1,000 acres of land are situated was ceded to the State of Tennessee by the Cherokee nation of Indians, by treaty ratified February 27, 1819; that, by that treaty, 640 acres of land, being part of said 1,000, was reserved in fee simple to a certain William Brown, of the Cherokee nation; that Brown leased part of the land aforesaid to one Cornet, against whom, after said Cornet had taken possession of it, the said Winton instituted an action of ejectment in a court of the State of Tennessee which had jurisdiction of the matter; but that he finally failed in said suit, it being decided by the court that the title secured under said reservation was superior in law to that of Winton; and that he incurred an expense of $69 39 in prosecuting said suit. He states that the 640 acres so secured to said reserve is about the centre of the said 1,000 acre tract. These statements are substantially proven, partly by the exhibits filed with the petition, and in part by other proof. Among the exhibits filed are the entry patent from North Carolina, deed of conveyance from Stewart to Winton, and that part of the record of the suit, referred to in the petition, which shows the failure of the petitioner in said suit. The bill of costs is also filed. By the treaty of February 27, 1819, it appears that a reservation was made to William Brown.—(See Laws of the United States, vol. 6, p. 751.)

Three witnesses, whose respectability of character is well attested, swear that they carefully examined said 640 acres of land, and that they estimated it as worth $5,000. The committee are of opinion that the petitioner ought to be paid the value of said 640 acres, and have reported a bill for that purpose.

SURVEYS IN MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA, SOUTH OF THE THIRTY-FIRST DEGREE OF NORTH LATITUDE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 26, 1826.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 22, 1826.

SIR: In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 19th instant, "directing the Secretary of the Treasury to state to the House the causes that have prevented the surveys of the public lands south of the 31st degree of latitude, in the States of Mississippi and Louisiana, and at what period it is expected the surveys will be completed, and the lands brought into market," I have the honor to transmit a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated December 20, 1826, and the documents to which it refers, which contain the information required by the resolution.

I have the honor to remain, with the highest respect, your most obedient servant,

RICHARD RUSH.

Hon. the SPEAKER of the House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 20, 1826.

SIR: In compliance with a resolution of the House of Representatives, dated the 19th instant, in the following words: "Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to state to this House the causes that have prevented the surveys of the public lands south of the 31st degree of latitude, in the States of Mississippi and Louisiana, and at what period it is expected the surveys will be completed and the lands brought into market," and which has been referred to this office, I have the honor to state that the following causes have had a tendency to retard the completion of the surveys of the public lands and private land claims south of the 31st degree of north latitude, in the States of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama.

1st. A defective organization of the surveying department as applicable to that section of the country.

2d. The renewal, from time to time, of the several acts relative to the adjustment of private land claims.

3d. The detention of the books, records, and papers, by the late principal deputy surveyor, Silas Dinsmoor, who was removed from office in October, 1824.

On these several points I beg leave to refer to the extracts from reports heretofore made by this office, marked Nos. 1, 2, and 3, and to the paper marked No. 4.

In that part of Louisiana east of the Mississippi river, and south of the 31st degree of north latitude, the commissioners have not yet made final reports in relation to private claims. It is believed that they are making due progress, and will close their reports within the period limited by law. The surveying of individual claims is progressing, but the returns of the township plats, which must be made previous to offering the lands at public sale, is delayed in consequence of the second and third causes stated in this report.

In that part of Mississippi south of the 31st degree of north latitude nearly all the public lands have been surveyed, but the private claims which have been confirmed cannot be laid down on the township plats, and those plats examined by the surveyor south of Tennessee, and returned to this office, so as to enable the President to proclaim the lands for sale, until the books, records, and papers shall have been delivered by the late principal deputy surveyor to the person appointed to fill that office.

In that part of Alabama south of the 31st degree of north latitude a large portion of the public lands have been surveyed, but the same causes which operated in Mississippi have had their effect in preventing these lands from being prepared for sale; and, in addition to these causes, it is desirable to place by law the surveying of the private claims in Alabama under the entire control of the surveyor for Alabama; the existing laws place the surveying of those claims south of the 31st degree of north latitude under the superintendence of one of the principal deputy surveyors for Louisiana.

The period when these surveys will be completed must, in a great measure, depend upon the recovery of the books and records. I should presume, however, that within twelve months after their recovery, a portion of the public lands south of the 31st degree of latitude, in each of the States of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama, may be prepared for sale, provided there is a due and vigorous execution of the duties of the surveying department, and provided the acts relative to private claims be not revived or prolonged.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

GEO. GRAHAM.

Hon. RICHARD RUSH, Secretary of the Treasury.

No. 1.

Extract of a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office to the Secretary of the Treasury, dated December 17, 1824.

"The act of April 21, 1806, provides for the appointment of two principal deputy surveyors, with a salary of $500 each, and certain fees of office in the Territory of Orleans; and the act of March 3, 1819, provides for an additional principal deputy.

"This organization of the surveying department in Louisiana was suggested with a view of accommodating the private claimants, and facilitating the surveying and patenting of their lands. If, however, we are to judge from results, it seems not to have been a happy one. A similar organization of the surveying department exists now in no other State; and in every other State or Territory where there have been private claims, and they extend to all, there has been no such delay and difficulties incident to the surveying and patenting of the private claims as have occurred in Louisiana."

No. 2.

Extract of a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office to the Hon. John Scott, dated December 19, 1825.

"SIR: In reply to your letter of the 16th instant, enclosing two resolutions of the House of Representatives, the one relating to the expediency of erecting the State of Louisiana into a separate surveying district, and the other allowing compensation to the land officers for extra services performed under the act passed March 2, 1821, I have the honor, in reference to the first resolution, to enclose you an extract from a report made to the Secretary of the Treasury relative to the surveying district to which Louisiana is attached at present.

"The surveying of the lands in Alabama south of the 31st degree of north latitude by a late act was placed under the superintendence of the surveyor for Alabama, but that act did not repeal the previous law which had placed the surveying of the private claims under the immediate superintendence of the principal deputy surveyor appointed under the provisions of the 11th section of the act of March 3, 1819, vol. 6, page 434, whose powers extended to that district of country south of the 31st degree of latitude, and east of the Mississippi river, in the States of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama.

"Should it be deemed expedient to abolish the office of principal deputy surveyor, it will be necessary to make provision for placing the surveying of the private claims under the superintendence of the surveyors of the respective States, and for the arranging and transporting the papers and records. The records in relation to the private claims in Alabama, south of the 31st degree of latitude, are deposited with the register and receiver of the Jackson Court-house district, in Mississippi, and with the principal deputy surveyor. Special provision will be required to be made in relation to them.

"I have, in my report to the Secretary, suggested the propriety of making provision by law for compelling the officers to surrender up the public papers. It was made in consequence of the refusal of two of the principal deputies, who had been superseded by the surveyor south of Tennessee, to surrender the papers belonging to their office. In one case the papers have been obtained, but in the other they are yet withheld on the plea that they form part of the vouchers of the account of the principal deputy, which has not been settled."

No. 3.

Extract of a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office to the Secretary of the Treasury, dated December 15, 1825.

"The surveying of the public lands has progressed regularly and satisfactorily, with the exception of the public lands and private claims in the State of Louisiana, and that part of Alabama south of the 31st degree of latitude. In this section of the country but little progress has been made in surveying the private claims and such parts of the public lands as it is desirable to bring into market. A variety of causes has occasioned, and will continue to occasion, much embarrassment and difficulty in completing the surveying of this section of the country. Much of this embarrassment is attributable, however, to the extension of the laws for the adjustment of private claims in Louisiana, to the organization of the surveying department, and to the difficulty of procuring surveyors to survey the public and private lands, and to connect the private surveys which have been made with the township lines in certain portions of this section of the country for the compensation allowed by law.

"The surveying of the lands in Louisiana is by the law placed under the superintendence of the surveyor south of the State of Tennessee, who resides at Washington, Mississippi, and the surveying of those in Alabama, south of the 31st degree of latitude, by a late act of Congress was placed under the superintendence of the surveyor for that State; but within this district of country there are three principal deputy surveyors, who are appointed by the surveyor of the lands south of Tennessee, the duties and powers of one of which officers extends to the surveying of the private claims in that part of Alabama lying south of the 31st degree of latitude.

"In a report made formerly from this office, and submitted to Congress, it was stated that this organization was defective, and further experience has confirmed that impression. It is, therefore, respectfully recommended that the offices of surveyor of the lands south of Tennessee, and those of the principal deputy surveyors of Louisiana, be abolished; that a surveyor be appointed for the State of Louisiana, whose duties and powers shall be limited to the surveying of the lands within that State; that a principal deputy surveyor be appointed for the State of Mississippi, invested with the powers, and who shall perform the duties required of the surveyor south of Tennessee, in relation to the surveying of the lands within the limits of the State of Mississippi; that the surveying of all the lands south of the 31st degree of latitude in Alabama be placed under the direction of the surveyor for that State."

No. 4.

Extract of a letter from George Davis, surveyor of the lands south of the State of Tennessee, to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated November 24, 1826.

"I have just heard that the principal deputy surveyor east of the island of New Orleans has at last obtained possession of the documents of that office, so long withheld by Colonel Dinsmoor."

LEAD MINES AND SALT SPRINGS IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, BY THE CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS, DECEMBER 27, 1826.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 23, 1826.

SIR: I had the honor to receive your letter of the 20th instant, enclosing a bill which had been introduced into the Senate, and asking, in behalf of the Committee on Public Lands, certain information in regard to the lead mines and salt springs in Missouri; and having referred the same to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, I beg leave now to enclose his report, which, with the several statements to which it refers, contains the information desired by the committee.

I have the honor to remain, with great respect, your obedient servant,

RICHARD RUSH.

Hon. DAVID BARTON, *Chairman Committee on Public Lands, Senate.*TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
General Land Office, December 22, 1826.

SIR: In reply to the inquiry of the Hon. Mr. Barton, of the Senate, expressed in the enclosed letter addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury, which has been referred to this office, I have the honor to transmit herewith two statements, (marked A and B,) exhibiting the different tracts of land reserved from sale on account of salt springs, by the registers of the land offices at St. Louis and Franklin, in the State of Mississippi, which embrace all the lands reserved from sale on account of salt springs in that State, which have been officially reported to this office.

I would beg leave to remark that it is highly probable that salt springs may exist in that State, other than those designated in these lists, which are not yet known, or which, if discovered, have not yet been reported.

Agreeably to the provisions of the act of Congress passed March 6, 1820, entitled "An act to authorize the people of the Missouri Territory to form a constitution and State government, and for the admission of such State into the Union on an equal footing with the original States," &c., &c., it is provided that all salt springs, not exceeding twelve in number, with six sections of land adjoining to each, shall be appropriated to the use of said State, on certain conditions prescribed by the act.

No official advice has yet been received from the executive of the State of Missouri of any selections which have yet been made under the act; but it will be perceived that all the salt springs in the St. Louis district, designated in the list marked A, (sent by the register of the land office at St. Louis,) have been reserved by the State of Missouri.

I remain, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE GRAHAM.

Hon. RICHARD RUSH, Secretary of the Treasury.

APPLICATION TO MAKE A NEW SELECTION FOR PRE-EMPTION RIGHT, COVERED BY A SOLDIER'S BOUNTY RIGHT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 28, 1826.

Mr. VINTON, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Morgan Magness, reported :

That it appears from the petition and accompanying evidence that in the year A. D. 1821 the petitioner purchased the pre-emption right of one Nicholas Trammell to a quarter section of land in the Territory of Arkansas, for which Trammell held the register's certificate, and which, at the time of sale, was transferred to petitioner. He states that since the purchase he has ascertained that the tract of land which he supposed the certificate called for is covered by a soldier's bounty right; and exhibits the affidavit of one Charles Kelly, who swears that he is well convinced that Trammell intended to obtain a certificate for this quarter section of bounty land, from the circumstance of Trammell's being settled upon it. Petitioner, upon this evidence, asks of Congress to pass a law authorizing him to surrender his right to the quarter section called for by the certificate, and select another quarter in lieu of it.

The committee are not aware of any case where the assignee of a certificate of a pre-emption right or purchase has been permitted, under circumstances similar to the present case, to change his entry. The distinction which it is believed has been uniformly observed is this: that where an erroneous entry has been made in consequence of some mistake of the surveyor, or other agent of the government, by which the purchaser has been misled, he has been permitted to correct the mistake; but where the mistake is the fault of the purchaser, there is no instance of relief in a case like the present. The objections against granting this indulgence are too obvious to require enumeration. The committee therefore recommend the adoption of the following resolution :

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted.

APPLICATION OF SUNDRY HALF-BREEDS OF THE CREEK NATION TO SELL THEIR RESERVATIONS OF LAND IN ALABAMA, AND LIST OF CLAIMS FOR SUCH RESERVATIONS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 29, 1826.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The petition of David and Samuel Hale represents : That they are half-breeds of the Creek nation, and were entitled to have a reservation of land under the treaty of Fort Jackson; that they are still in possession of the lands reserved for them. They are competent to the management of their own concerns, and are anxious to dispose of part of their lands to procure other property. This cannot be done without great loss, unless they could convey in fee simple their title. They therefore pray that the title may be vested in them, and that they may have authority to sell and make fee simple title. They refer to the act for the relief of Tate and others, and pray for a similar provision in their behalf. And, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

SAMUEL HALE.
DAVID HALE.

We, the undersigned, citizens of Monroe county, in the State of Alabama, do hereby certify that we have for several years last past been personally acquainted with Samuel Hale and David Hale, of said county, half-breed Greeks, to whom a patent has been granted from the General Land Office for fractional section twenty-one, of township six, in range five, on the west side of the Alabama river; that the said Samuel and David have been instructed to read and write; have some knowledge of common arithmetic; that their intellectual and moral faculties render them as competent to transact the common business of life as the ordinary class of mankind.

DECEMBER 14, 1826.

CONGRESS HALL, December 18, 1826.

DEAR SIR: Samuel and David Hale, who state themselves to be of the friendly Creek Indians who were provided for in the treaty of Fort Jackson of August 9, 1814, have petitioned Congress to have the land set apart to them under the act of March 3, 1817, confirmed to or vested in them in fee simple. The Committee on Public Lands, to whom the subject was referred, are at a loss on some points, and have directed me to ask information of you:

1. Were Samuel and David Hale chiefs, headmen, or warriors, in their proper persons, or are they the representatives of any chief, headman, or warrior, &c.? And if so, of whom?
2. If they are the original claimants, to what quantity is each entitled, by the report of the agent, under the act of March 3, 1817?
3. Why was but 638 acres set apart for the two, when the treaty secures to each a section?
4. If they are the representatives of a chief, headman, or warrior, &c., are they the only representatives, or was there a widow or other heirs? And if other heirs, how many?
5. If they are representatives, has the department decided that the fee simple does not vest in them absolutely, under the act of 3d March, without the aid of Congress?
6. Has the land they claim been patented to them; and when?

An early reply will oblige the committee.

Your obedient servant,

JOHN SCOTT.

GEORGE GRAHAM, Esq.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 21, 1826.

SIR: In answer to your letter of the 18th instant, I have to state that Samuel and David Hale, who are the descendants of a Creek woman, entered their claim under the third section of the act of March 3, 1817, which grants to such descendants two quarter sections; and that, by the law, they have but a life estate in the same.

The certificate in their favor for the land claimed was issued April 12, 1820.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

GEO. GRAHAM.

Hon. JOHN SCOTT,

Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, House of Representatives.

List of claims entered in pursuance of an act of Congress passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act making provision for the location of the lands reserved by the first article of the treaty of August 9, 1814, between the United States and the Creek nation, to certain chiefs and warriors of that nation, and for other purposes."

REVOLUTIONARY BOUNTY LAND CLAIMS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 29, 1826.

Mr. BUCKNER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and documents of James Raven, of Massachusetts, reported:

The petitioner states that he is a revolutionary soldier and pensioner; that by a law of the continental Congress, for services rendered to his country, he is entitled to one hundred acres of land; that he has applied for a grant for said land to the proper officer of the government, when his claim was rejected, because it appeared that he had assigned his right to said land to one John May. He denies that he ever made such an assignment, and that it is forged if there is any such; that he is unable to read or write, and that he never knew such a man as John May. Upon this statement, to which he has made oath before a justice of the peace, he prays that he may be allowed to locate one hundred acres of land in Michigan Territory. It appears from information received from the Department of War, bounty land office, that warrant No. 4917 was issued in the name of John May, assignee of James Raven, of the 3d regiment of the Massachusetts line, for one hundred acres of land, January 26, 1790. From the same it also appears that the war office, with all its records, was consumed by fire in 1801, and, consequently, that the assignment cannot now be seen. The warrant issued in 1790; the assignment may have been made many years previous to that time, and may, and most probably has, escaped the recollection of the petitioner—charity at least dictates such a supposition; but it is not to be presumed that the warrant would have issued to said May as assignee unless there was such testimony as was deemed satisfactory. The assignment was then exhibited; it was the duty of the officer of the department whence the warrant issued to be satisfied of its being genuine; and it appears to the committee that it would be indulging in presumption, very far indeed, to support this claim by declaring that to be forgery which, upwards of thirty years since, passed the scrutiny of the officer of the government whose duty is to pass judgment upon it, and which we have not an opportunity of even inspecting; and the more so, as, if done, it must be upon the unsupported declaration of the only person interested. The committee therefore advise the rejection of the claim.

19TH CONGRESS.]No. 541.[2D SESSION.

ON CLAIM OF A DEPUTY SURVEYOR FOR SPECIAL COMPENSATION UNDER INSTRUCTIONS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 29, 1826.

Mr. GURLEY, from the Committee on Public Lands, who were instructed by a resolution of this House of the 19th instant to inquire into the expediency of allowing to William Brown the sum of one hundred and sixty-six dollars and seventy-five cents, for surveying done by him for the United States, by order of the principal deputy surveyor, and approved by the surveyor general of the district south of Tennessee, reported:

That, by a letter from Silas Dinsmore, principal deputy surveyor in the district south of Tennessee, exhibited to your committee in support of this claim, under date of October 13, 1821, addressed to the claimant in the present case, he is directed to make an examination of certain surveys by order of the surveyor general of that district.

In this letter of instructions Mr. Dinsmore urges the necessity of employing two chain-carriers of good reputation, sound judgment, and of experience in that business; also a flagman; and, after speaking of the confidence reposed in him, states that the services required to be performed are of a delicate and important character, and concludes his letter in the following words: "You will keep a regular account of your expenditures; for which, and your own services, you will be entitled to receive from the surveyor of the lands south of Tennessee reimbursement for the former and recompense for the latter. The report must be made without delay to this office."

In a letter from the surveyor general to Brown, under date of May 13, 1822, and in reference to this account, he says: "At present I am not authorized to pay this account, but hope I shall be, as I think it just and reasonable you should be paid."

It further appears in evidence that this account has not been paid, and, as your committee believe, for the following reason: that, by the existing laws in relation to the public lands, no daily compensation is allowed. The surveys are made at a fixed price per mile, and no provision appears to have been made for cases like the present, when it may become necessary to examine surveys or lines already made.

But whatever causes may have prevented the payment of this account, as your committee are satisfied that the services have been performed and not paid for, they report a bill for his relief.

LAND CLAIMS IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 2, 1827.

Mr. BUCKNER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and documents of Elijah L. Clarke, Gibson L. E. Clarke, John E. C. Brinton, and James A. Hutchinson, reported:

The petitioners state that, by a report made by Daniel J. Sutten, as register of the land office at Ouachita, in the State of Louisiana, to the Commissioner of the General Land Office at the city of Washington, about January 1, 1821, the claim of Elijah L. Clarke, No. 68, and that of Lewis Clarke, No. 69, were placed in the fourth class of claims, and consequently rejected. They also state that upon a re-examination of said report by order of the Secretary of the Treasury, additional testimony having been furnished to the said register in support of said claims, he made a subsequent report to Mr. Crawford, then Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, (to whom the examination of the prior report is believed to have been submitted,) favorable to both those claims, and requested that they might each be ranked in the third class of claims reported to Congress; all of which were confirmed. They allege that, owing to the omission of the Secretary, arising out of indisposition or a pressure of business, or because said second report was not received by him in time to be presented to Congress, the said claims were not placed in the third class, and that the second report was not submitted to the consideration of Congress. They therefore pray that an act may be passed confirming the claims aforesaid.

The petitioners claim as actual settlers on and before December 20, 1803, with the permission of the proper Spanish officer.—(See 2d section of act of 1805, Land Laws, page 280.)

By an extract from the letter of the register of the land office at Ouachita, dated January 1, 1821, transmitting his report under the act of May 11, 1820, it appears that the fourth class of claims consists of Spanish claims, in which the testimony offered in support of them was not considered as worthy of belief. The register, in that letter, says that the claims in that class "evidently call for land in the State of Mississippi, and are believed to have been already entered in the district west of Pearl river. In fact, the whole of the claims in this last class of cases are considered as a base attempt to defraud the government." Each of those claims was placed by the register in said fourth class. The testimony adduced in the first instance, and upon which the first report was founded, was the affidavit of one Elijah Clarke, who swore that said Elijah L. Clarke and Lewis Clarke each settled on the tracts of land which they respectively claimed in the month of November, 1803; that each of those persons cleared several acres of land, built cabins thereon, and continued to occupy and cultivate his said tract generally ever since. Samuel Durosset, by his affidavit, supported the statement made by said Elijah Clarke, and swears also that the said Elijah L. Clarke and Lewis Clarke actually inhabited and cultivated their said tracts of land, respectively, on December 20, 1803, and since that period either by themselves or by others for their use. He also swore that the said claimants, together with himself and others in the neighborhood, had permission to settle from the Spanish commandant.

The committee were furnished with testimony to show that Mr. Crawford, then Secretary of the Treasury, on April 30, 1821, directed the register at Ouachita to re-examine all the cases upon which he had reported about which any suspicion might arise, and to receive any evidence which he could obtain concerning them.

The register, in a letter addressed to Mr. Crawford as Secretary of the Treasury, dated "Land Office, Ouachita, December 1, 1821," acknowledges the reception of his letter of the 30th of April, and says, "since which time I have nothing further to add, except that recently I have received some additional testimony and information from two respectable persons that induces me to believe the testimony formerly given on the claims of Elijah L. Clarke, No. 68, and Lewis Clarke, No. 69. I consider it my duty to communicate this to you, and request, if not too late, that they may be put in the third class of claims."

The claim of Elijah L. Clarke was for seven hundred and thirty-three acres of land, situated on the Lake St. Joseph, in the county of Concordia, adjoining the claim of Durosset on the south. That of Lewis Clarke was for six hundred and forty acres in same county, and on said lake.

On July 25, 1821, an additional affidavit was filed in the office of the register at Ouachita, as appears from the certificate of John Hughes, register of the land office north of Red river, State of Louisiana, sworn to by David Davenport and seventeen other persons, who state themselves to be inhabitants of Claiborne county, State of Mississippi, opposite and near the Lake of St. Joseph, in which they swear that they are well acquainted with Elijah Clarke and Elijah L. Clarke, and that they believe the said Elijah L. Clarke to be justly entitled to a confirmation of his claim to a tract of land on the Lake St. Joseph, as entered at the office of the register of the land office north of Red river, in the month of December, 1820, from actual settlement prior to December 20, 1803, as well as from its occupancy since by different persons for him up to 1820, with the exception of high waters. And they also swear that they had always understood, and did believe, that the said Elijah L. Clarke, with several other persons, settled and improved lands on Lake St. Joseph in the fall of 1803, by permission received from the Spanish government; and that both he and Elijah Clarke are good farmers, honest men, and that their testimony is entitled to full credit. The affidavit of Gibson Clarke was also filed in said office, dated August 19, 1821, in which he supports the statement made by Elijah Clarke and Durosset. He says that the land so improved lies adjoining a tract in his (Gibson Clarke's) possession at the time said Elijah L. Clarke made said settlement, and that it cornered at the mouth of what was commonly called Clarke's bayou, where it leaves Lake St. Joseph, and which bayou empties itself into the Tensaw, and was in the parish of Concordia and State of Louisiana; that said land has ever since been in said E. L. Clarke's possession, over which he has ever since exercised exclusive ownership, and paid taxes therefor. He states that no one else has ever, that he knows of, made any improvement on said land, nor does he know of any other claim attempted to be set up to said land, and that he has resided almost ever since said E. L. Clarke made said improvement on an adjoining tract.

Whatever doubts might properly have been entertained as to the justice of the claim of Elijah L.

Clarke upon the testimony upon which the register founded his first report, the committee are of opinion that the testimony subsequently furnished renders it very clear. As the claim of Lewis Clarke, who is now dead, was as fully supported as that of Elijah L. Clarke was by the testimony of Durosset, and by that of Elijah Clarke, (whose respectability of character is fully proven,) the committee recommend the confirmation of that also; and have accordingly reported bills confirming each of those claims.

LAND CLAIM IN MICHIGAN.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 2, 1827.

Mr. BUCKNER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and documents of Agnes Slacke, of the city of London, reported :

The petitioner states that by the will of John Slacke, her deceased husband, she has been invested with certain titles to the undivided half of a tract of land called the Seigniory of St. Mary, or Sault St. Mary, in Michigan Territory, which was devised to her late husband by his uncle, Arthur Noble, formerly of Nobleborough, in the State of New York, late of the city of Westminster, in Great Britain, now deceased. She alleges that the land referred to was held by and occupied under the original grantees, and secured to them by the treaties between France and Great Britain by which Canada was ceded to the latter power.

She prays that an act may be passed confirming her title and the titles of the other persons interested, who claim under the original grantees. She also prays that Congress would not authorize the emanation of patents for said land, or any part of it, to any of the occupants of it, unless they hold under the original grantees, according to the usages and laws of Canada in similar cases. In support of the claim she files the following papers:

1st. A paper purporting to be an original grant by the Marquis de la Jonquierre, governor and lieutenant general in what was then called New France, now Canada, and Francis Bigot, intendant of the same, to Sieurs De Bonne, captain of the regiment of Conde, and to Chevalier De Repentiguy, ensign of the troops of Canada, registered at Quebec, with the ratification thereof by Louis XV, King of France, at Versailles, which appears to have been also recorded at Quebec June 24, 1751. The grant aforesaid bears date October 18, 1750, and is for said seigniory called St. Mary, or Sault St. Mary, containing six French leagues in front, by six leagues, like measure, in depth, adjoining the river which separates the two lakes.

2d. An authenticated copy of a deed of conveyance, dated July 12, 1796, from one Pierre Amable de Bonne, at that time one of the judges of his Majesty's court of king's bench for the district of Quebec, in Lower Canada, to James Caldwell, for the undivided half of said seigniory. Said P. A. De Bonne, the grantor in said last-mentioned deed, is stated therein to be the son of De Bonne, one of the original grantees, but of this no proof whatever is exhibited.

3d. A copy of a deed, dated July 18, 1798, from said Caldwell to one Arthur Noble, for an undivided half of said seigniory or tract of land.

4th. A copy of the will of Arthur Noble, by which he devised the whole of his lands in the United States to John Slacke, which appears to have been duly recorded July 22, 1814.

5th. Authenticated copies of the will and codicil to said will of John Slacke, devising all his lands in the United States to Agnes, his wife, in trust, &c.

There was no proof before the committee to show that the original grantees, or any claiming under them, have ever had actual possession of said land or any part of it. The petition is presented by Agnes Slacke only. The committee are of opinion, from the great lapse of time since the emanation of the original grant, that the probability of the death of the Chevalier De Repentiguy amounts to almost certainty. Whether he left any heir capable of inheriting his claim to said land is altogether uncertain. Without, however, intending to give any opinion upon the merit of the claim attempted to be set up, it is clear that, in the deduction of title, there is an omission of important proof as to the heirship of P. A. De Bonne.

The mere declaration in the deed, that he claimed the half of said seigniory by succession, upon the death of his father, furnishes no testimony whatever of that fact, if even true.

The committee advise, at least upon the proof exhibited, the rejection of the claim.

19TH CONGRESS.]No. 544[2D SESSION.

APPLICATION TO COMMUTE MILITARY BOUNTY LAND.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 2, 1827.

Mr. BUCKNER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and documents of Margaret Daniels, late Margaret Repshore, widow of Leonard Repshore, reported:

She states that the said Leonard, who was her former husband, was a soldier in Captain Pentland's company, in the 22d regiment of the United States infantry, and that he died in the United States army during the late war with Great Britain. She alleges that she presented her claim for arrears and bounty, soon after the close of the war, for settlement at the office of the Secretary of War. That it was not allowed because the death of said Leonard had not been reported to the War Department, and which was not proven until after the acts allowing a commutation of the military bounty land for five years' half-pay had expired. That, after waiting about seven years, she had to prove the fact of his death by soldiers who were present when it occurred, and then received said arrears of wages. She alleges that she was regularly appointed as guardian of said Leonard's children August 16, 1822, and then made a regular assignment, in due form of law, of the military bounty land for said children, who are yet under sixteen years of age; which relinquishment she says is on file in the Department of War, as are also the testimonials of her appointment as guardian, and proof of the ages of the children. She prays that, not being prevented by her own negligence, but by that of the officer whose duty it was to make a report of his death to the Secretary of War, she may be restored to her right of claiming, as guardian, a commutation in money in lieu of said bounty land. It is proved that the petitioner married one Stewart after Repshore's death, who died, and that she then married Daniels, who is also dead. It appears from testimony laid before the committee that said Leonard enlisted as a soldier January 28, 1813, for five years, and that he served until he died at Plattsburg, in June, 1814, leaving said Margaret his widow, and five children, who reside in Philadelphia; that he belonged to said Captain Pentland's company of the 22d regiment; and that the War Office contains no record or testimony of his death, except an affidavit of one Joseph Repshore, dated June 5, 1821, filed for the purpose of obtaining the arrears of wages due for the services of said soldier.

Had the petitioner been appointed as guardian of said children before the time limited in the acts for commutation, as they are usually called, had expired, and had desired to obtain the benefit of those acts, it is clear that she would have been prevented from doing so unless she had furnished the proof which she did furnish in 1821. But there is no proof that she made such an application until after the expiration of the time allowed by these acts, nor is there any proof of her appointment as guardian, or that she ever executed, as such, any relinquishment. So far from it, it appears, from information received from the War Department, that on May 22, 1822, which was after the expiration of those acts, she acknowledged that she had neglected to make the relinquishment, and no such relinquishment has been filed. The committee, therefore, are of opinion that the prayer of her petition ought not to be granted.

LEAD MINES IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 2, 1827.

Mr. BARTON, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill "to authorize the President of the United States to cause the reserved lead mines in Missouri to be exposed to public sale," reported:

That, from the best information they have been enabled to obtain upon the subject, there is in Missouri a tract of country of an hundred miles square, extending from the river Missouri southwardly, and from the river Mississippi westwardly, abounding in lead and iron ore, that may be denominated mineral lands.

For the United States to reserve and lease all the mineral lands in Missouri would be to hold one-fourth of her area in a state of tenantry. It would require the creation of a new corps of federal officers or agents to superintend the mining, and ultimately be of less advantage to the Union than if the mines were committed to the care and ardor of individual enterprise.

Such a measure is believed by the committee to be neither the policy nor the intention of the government of the United States.

The committee believe, however, that it is not expedient to authorize the sale of the lead mines of the United States that have been discovered at the present time.

The United States are progressing with the measure of exploring and ascertaining the value of the public mines. Information upon those subjects is believed to be desired by, and due to, all the common owners of that public property before the adoption of the measure proposed in the bill; and, in the present circumstances of the people of that country with respect to their general means of purchasing, it is believed that the proposed sales are not called for by their interests.

The committee, therefore, recommend that the further consideration of the bill under consideration be indefinitely postponed.

19TH CONGRESS.]No. 546.[2D SESSION.

CLAIM TO LAND IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 5, 1827.

Mr. BUCKNER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and documents of Elizabeth Cox, former wife of Thomas Bills, and of the children of said Thomas Bills, reported:

The petitioners state that in the year 1804 Christopher Miller, of Mississippi Territory, obtained from the Spanish government an order of survey for six hundred arpents of land lying in what is now the parish of Feliciana, and State of Louisiana; that in said year he caused the land to be regularly surveyed by a duly authorized surveyor; that, before he could get a patent for it, the person in whom authority was vested to issue the grant had removed to Pensacola, by which he was prevented from obtaining it, although all the requisitions preparatory thereto, according to the regulations of the Spanish government, had been complied with. They allege that said Thomas Bills, in the year 1805, purchased said land from Miller at the price of one thousand dollars upon a belief that the title was valid, being so advised by the Spanish officers of the country. They state that when said Bills purchased the land aforesaid he resided in what is now called East Baton Rouge, and that he did not know that his inhabiting said land would be important to the validity of his title. They also state that in 1815 Thomas Bills entered the claim for confirmation with the commissioner of the proper land office, but that they have not learned what report in relation to it was made. They further allege that in the year 1816 Thomas Bills inhabited said land, having moved to it to render more secure his title thereto; that he died upon it; and that the petitioners have ever since resided upon it. That in the year 1820 they again entered said claim for confirmation at the office of the register of St. Helena, but that it was rejected on account of the late date of the settlement. They state that they are poor; that, unless a law be passed confirming their claim, which they request, they will lose the thousand dollars paid by said Bills, and be reduced to a state of wretchedness and distress, &c.

They produce no evidence in support of their claim, except the deed from Miller to said Bills, which is offered as testimony of the purchase, and the requête, the order of survey, and plat of survey made in pursuance thereof.

The register of the land office at St. Helena certifies that the papers filed in his office in support of the claim consist of a request for the grant of the land, (requête,) an order of survey, and plat of certificate of the Spanish surveyor, such as grants from the Spanish governments are usually made upon; that the respective dates of these papers are such as are stated in the foregoing statements of the petitioners; but that he refused to grant a certificate preparatory to a confirmation of said claim, because the settlement did not begin earlier than the end of the year 1815.

The facts stated present a case of considerable hardship to the petitioners, but the committee do not consider it as one which will justify the relief prayed for; were it granted, it would be extending an indulgence and favor to them which has been denied to others whose claims were not less meritorious.

CLAIM TO LAND IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 6, 1827.

Mr. BUCKNER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and documents of Bartholomew Martin, reported:

The petitioner states that he is the proprietor of a tract of land situated in the State of Louisiana, on the Bayou Benfonca, in the parish of St. Tammany; that he filed his claim with the commissioners of the land office at St. Helena Court-house, but that, owing to some accident or cause unknown, the commissioners failed to make a report on said claim to Congress, and that it has therefore not been confirmed. He prays for the passage of an act by which the title aforesaid may be confirmed to him. The certificate of David Bradford, clerk of the land office at St. Helena, is filed, by which it appears that notice of the claim of the widow Rillieux to a tract of land in the parish of St. Tammany, of two leagues in front on the Bayou Benfonca, and with a depth extending in the prairies from Blantes to the settlements of Pearl river, was filed in his office prior to June 1, 1820, and recorded, and that the titles in support of said claim were also recorded, but that there does not appear to have been any report made on said claim to Congress by the commissioners.

There is also a receipt filed, of the clerk of said office, for certain papers deposited in his office for record in support of said claim.

The petitioner also exhibits a certified copy of a paper signed by the widow Rillieux, dated September 20, 1769, by which she acknowledges to have sold to her son, Vincent Rillieux, the land granted to her late husband by the Spanish government, on Bayou Benfonca and Pearl river; but there is no testimony of title in the petitioner, nor is there a grant exhibited, or other satisfactory testimony of said claim.

The committee therefore recommend the rejection of the petition.

CLAIM TO LAND IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 9, 1827.

Mr. GARRISON, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom has been referred the petition of Simon and Leondre Ducré, reported:

That the petitioners state that they, in copartnership with Hilliare Ducré, now deceased, became the proprietors of a tract of land on Bayou La Cohibe, in the parish of Tammany, in the State of Louisiana, by a conveyance from Louis Reggio; and, by reason of the decease of their brother, Hilliare Ducré, they are legally entitled to the whole of said tract of land as his heirs-at-law. That they duly filed their claims with the commissioners of the land office at St. Helena Court-house; but that, owing to some reason unknown to the petitioners, the commissioners have not reported their claim to Congress for confirmation.

The affidavit of one Stephen Reine, taken before a justice of the peace in the State of Louisiana, January 13, 1820, is filed, who swears that he knows that Louis Reggio had made an establishment on a concession on the Bayou Cohibe, which he, Reggio, obtained from Don —— Miro, governor of Louisiana, made furnaces thereon for making tar, and remained on the land several years. A conveyance from the said Louis Reggio to the petitioners is exhibited, taken before a judge of the parish of St. Barnard, in said State; also a certificate from David Bradford, a clerk in the land office at St. Helena, stating that the notice of claim, and proofs in support of the same, was recorded in the office prior to June 1, 1820.

The committee conceive that the proof in support of the original grant by the Spanish government, resting as it does on the deposition of a single individual, is too vague and uncertain; that the title papers produced in the land office does not prove any title in the grantor to the petitioners.

The committee therefore pray to be discharged from the further consideration of the petition, &c.

19TH CONGRESS.]No. 549.[2D SESSION.]

APPLICATION FOR COMPENSATION ON ACCOUNT OF LAND WARRANTS ISSUED BY THE STATE OF GEORGIA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 10, 1827.

Mr. BUCKNER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petitions and documents of John Overall, reported:

The petitioner states that in the month of February, 1784, the legislature of the State of Georgia passed a resolution upon the subject of extending her settlements to the bend of Tennessee river. That certain commissioners were appointed to carry the same into effect; and also other officers for the regulation of the intended settlement. That, by said resolution, one thousand acres of land were to be allowed to each emigrant to that section of country, at the price of one-eighth part of a dollar per acre, to be paid on the emanation of the grant. He states that in the fall and winter of 1785 the commissioners proceeded to said point on the Tennessee river; and that they employed as guards a number of men, under a promise that each should be entitled to receive one thousand acres of land in said bend of the river, or Tennessee district; that under that agreement they were accompanied, among others, by George Dardin, jr., George Dardin, sen., George Gallohan, Thomas Gallohan, James Gallohan, James Scott, William Nelson, Joseph McConnell, Charles Roberson, Alexander Kelly, John Woods, Alexander Cunningham, William Fisher, Abraham Utter, John Cowin, and David Mitchell; and that warrants issued to each of those men, of which the petitioner now has possession, signed by said commissioners, who were acting, in issuing said warrants, under the authority of said State. The petitioner exhibits one of the warrants as a specimen, and states his willingness to produce the others, if required; and prays that an act be passed allowing a proper compensation, as they never obtained the land promised, and for which said warrants issued. The following is a copy of the warrant exhibited:

"GEORGIA:

"To John Donelson, esq., county surveyor of the county of Houston, in the district of Tennessee:

"You are hereby authorized and required to admeasure and lay out unto George Dardin, sen., a tract of land which shall contain one thousand acres, in the said county of Houston and district aforesaid, taking especial care that the same has not been heretofore laid out to any person or persons. And you are hereby also directed and required to record the plat of the same in your office, and transmit a copy thereof, together with this warrant, to the surveyor general within thirteen months from this date. Given under our hand, December 21, 1785.

"JOHN DONELSON.
"JOHN SEVIER."

The warrant is printed, except as to the name of Dardin, that of the county, and the number of acres. The legislature of Georgia, February 20, 1784, adopted a report of a committee to appoint commissioners vested with powers necessary to ascertain the quantity, quality, and circumstances of the lands lying in what was called the Big Bend of Tennessee. In pursuance of that report, on the next day they did appoint seven commissioners for the object contemplated, who were directed to make a report of their proceedings to the legislature for their consideration, and who, by said report so adopted, were to receive such compensation for their services as might be deemed adequate and satisfactory. In the report is this provision: "Provided, notwithstanding, That the said board shall have power, and they are hereby authorized, if they, or a majority of them, may think it necessary, in such manner as to them may seem most expedient, to proceed to grant warrants of surveys, which shall, when executed, be transmitted, with the plats, to the surveyor general's office, in order that the same may pass to a grant, as the law directs: Provided, That no one person shall be eligible to hold or obtain a grant of more than one thousand acres of land, and that he or they so obtaining a warrant shall, at the same time, give bond and security to pay into the treasury of the State at and after the rate of one-eighth of a dollar per acre; which sum shall be paid before he, she, or they shall obtain a grant."

On December 22, 1785, a majority of the commissioners reported their proceedings to the House, by which, among other things, it appears that they had made divers appointments, and had granted an indulgence of three years to the purchasers, and had taken bonds to a large amount, &c.; which report cannot now be obtained, having been, as it is supposed, lost or destroyed. In the fall or winter of 1785, John Donelson, John Sevier, William Downs, and Stephen Heard, four of the commissioners appointed, attended west of the Appalachian mountains, in company with a considerable number of men whom they had employed to guard them down the river, and to assist them in making the proposed settlement, (great danger being apprehended from the Indians,) and proceeded down the Holston and Tennessee rivers to what was called the Big Bend of Tennessee river, to which region of country they gave the name of Houston county, lying within what was the chartered limits of Georgia, where they proceeded to issue land warrants to be located within the said bend of Tennessee and the county of Houston, taking from the purchasers bonds, with security, for the payment of one-eighth of a dollar per acre for the land sold. The legislature of Georgia understanding that the commissioners, in the performance of said duty, had expended considerable sums of money in quieting the Indians resident in that part of the country, and in bearing their own expenses, &c., by a resolution dated August 14, 1786, declared that each of the commissioners appointed on the Tennessee business who had actually attended their duty should be entitled to 5,000 acres of land in said district as a gratuity and full compensation for their services, but do not mention or allude to the men who had attended them as guards.

There is no proof before the committee which will authorize them to say that the men named by the petitioner as the persons to whom the warrants issued were employed by the commissioners to accompany them, although it is very probable that such was the fact, as it is proven that they were attended by a company employed for the purpose. In determining on this case, among other matters, it is important to inquire into the true nature and extent of the power with which the commissioners were vested, and see if they acted within the pale of that authority. The authority granted was, that the board, consisting of seven commissioners, should have the power, if they or a majority should think it necessary, in such manner as to them should seem most expedient, to proceed to grant warrants of survey, &c. The concurrence of at least a majority was required to issue a warrant. Besides, the persons obtaining warrants were to give bond, with security, to pay into the treasury of the State one-eighth part of a dollar per acre, to be paid previous to the emanation of a grant. The commissioners acted as the agents or officers of the State, under a public resolution of that State, of which those to whom warrants issued are not to be presumed to be ignorant. It is evident, therefore, that no contract which they made with a company of men to guard them was obligatory on the State, and, of course, no warrant issued in virtue of such contract. If warrants were obtained by them, they were bound to procure them, not for labor performed or danger incurred, but at the price of one-eighth of a dollar per acre, secured by bond, &c. Unless they issued in that way, or were afterwards recognized as valid by the legislative power of the State, the surveys made thereon did not entitle the holders of them to grants. This view of the case is taken on the supposition that the warrants named were issued as a compensation for services rendered, and not at the price named in the report or resolution of the legislature, which the petitioner himself declares to be the fact. If, however, he had made no such declaration, it should be remarked that there is no proof showing that bonds were executed or the price paid. Whether any surveys were ever made on these warrants, or attempts to procure patents, we are altogether uninformed, except so far as the declaration of the petitioner is to be regarded. Others, who had most probably secured by bond the stipulated price, applied for grants, which the governor of Georgia refused; for what reasons we are left to conjecture. It was probably, among other reasons, because the warrants had been signed by two commissioners only, as that, from the warrants exhibited, appears to have been their practice, and because the claims depended upon a mere resolution of the House; for it appears by a report of a committee appointed by the legislature of that State, made August 1, 1786, that, at the time the first resolution on the subject passed, in 1784, a committee was directed to bring in a bill for enacting the same into a law, but that no such bill had ever been reported.

On August 7, 1786, a committee appointed for that purpose reported a bill, to be entitled "An act for laying out a district in the bend of Tennessee," which, having been read the first time, was finally rejected. They, however, passed a resolution declaring that the title of any person or persons whatever to any land in the district of Tennessee, so far as the same is sanctioned or authorized by former resolutions of assembly, should not, in any respect, be weakened or injured by the rejection of the bill aforesaid. This resolution does not alter in any manner the condition of those claims. Its object appears to have been to exclude the idea of any intention to interfere with them, and to show that they were to be considered in status quo.

On October 31, 1787, an act was passed in said legislature "to suppress the violence of Indians." The eleventh section of that act, the act having declared in a previous clause that certain portions of land in said district of Tennessee should be given as compensation for services to be rendered to those who should serve as officers and soldiers to suppress the Indians, contains the following proviso: "Provided, That the right of pre-emption on all surveys heretofore made by the authority of this State shall be first set apart."

It has already been observed that the warrants in question appeared to have been issued irregularly and illegally; and, in allusion to this last-mentioned act, it may be remarked that the petitioner says that no surveys were ever executed in pursuance of those warrants. Independent of the foregoing objections, the committee do not conceive that the petitioner has shown the slightest ground for the passage of an act on his petition and for his benefit. None of the warrants are in his name, nor are they assigned to him. Whether they came into his possession by contract, or were placed there for the benefit of others; whether the men to whom they issued are living, or, if dead, have left heirs; and, indeed, whether they pretend to set up a claim against the government, we know not. Forty odd years have elapsed since the warrants were issued; and had they been in every respect regular, they would form at this time the foundation of very stale demands, to say the least of them. The committee are of opinion that the claims ought not to be supported.

To the honorable the members of the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The remonstrance and memorial of John Overall for a compensation for certain old claims, land warrants, now in his possession, formerly issued to the following persons, viz: George Dardin, jr., George Dardin, sr., George Gallohan, Thomas Gallohan, James Gallohan, James Scott, William Nelson, Joseph McConnell, Charles Roberson, Alexander Kelly, John Woods, Alexander Cunningham, William Fisher, Abraham Utter, John Cowin, and David Mitchell, respectfully sheweth: That, consistent with a law or resolution passed by the honorable legislature of the State of Georgia, in the month of February, A. D. 1784, for extending the settlements of that State to the bend of Tennessee river, it appears by said laws that certain commissioners were appointed to carry the same into effect, as well as civil officers for regulating the intended settlement, allowing, at the same time, one thousand acres of land to each citizen or emigrant, under stipulations of one-eighth of a dollar per acre to be paid when such citizen or emigrant should be entitled to receive a grant for said land, agreeably to warrant and survey, under authority of said commissioners.

It appears from undoubted proof, herewith exhibited, that the said commissioners did, in the fall and winter of the year A. D. 1785, proceed to the district of Tennessee aforesaid, and that the said commissioners did employ in their service, and for their guard and safety, a number of men, under a promise that each of those men should be entitled to receive one thousand acres of land in the bend of Tennessee, or Tennessee district aforesaid. It also appears that, guided by the most implicit confidence in the faith of the honorable legislature of the State of Georgia, and in the commissioners acting under the laws, amongst others, the said George Dardin, jr., George Dardin, sr., George Gallohan, Thomas Gallohan, James Gallohan, James Scott, William Nelson, Joseph McConnell, Charles Roberson, Alexander Kelly, John Woods, Alexander Cunningham, William Fisher, Abraham Utter, John Cowin, and David Mitchell, did engage with said commissioners, and, at their own expense and risk, attend them on their expedition to the bend of Tennessee, the premises aforesaid, and did there and then reserve from the said commissioners land warrants for one thousand acres of land each, on the credit and faith of the State, signed by said commissioners, acting under her laws, which will more plainly and fully appear by the said original warrants now in possession of your memorialist, John Overall, in the respective names of the aforesaid persons, to whom the said land warrants were issued; one of which warrants, as a specimen, is hereto annexed, and others of the same tenor and date at the call of your honorable body.

But it appears that the aforesaid commissioners, for judicious reasons, deemed it not proper to continue a settlement of the premises aforesaid at that period. They accordingly, with the men accompanying them, returned to their respective homes, under promise to the emigrants, at a future day, they would proceed to effect a settlement, and lay out and grant to the men whom they employed aforesaid the lands promised and called for in their respective land warrants then issued. It also appears from the journals of the State of Georgia of 1786 that the said commissioners reported their proceedings to the honorable legislature of the State of Georgia, who therefore made compensation of five thousand acres of land to each of the commissioners, to be granted them in the said district of Tennessee, thereby ratifying their proceedings, and binding themselves in the faithful performances of their compact and promises to the emigrants and citizens who had obtained warrants aforesaid. It appears, after this period, that the said commissioners did not attempt the settlement of said county in consequence of the hostility of the Indians and for other judicious causes; therefore the emigrants to whom the promises were made, and the land warrants issued upon the faith and credit of the State of Georgia, in virtue of officers acting under the laws, were never located nor surveyed, but have been ever held and considered as just claims, agreeable to their contract with said State of Georgia, and agreeable to the cession of that territory by the said State of Georgia to the United States, of the — day of —, whenever a provision is made for legal land claims, of which your memorialist begs leave, with submission to the superior judgment of your honorable body, to remark that, in equity, he conceives his claims rank amongst the most deserving. Relying on the wisdom, magnanimity, and justice of your honorable body, your memorialist therefore prays that the legality and equity of the aforesaid land warrants and claims may be taken under consideration, and such compensation allowed him as your honorable body may, in your superior judgment, conceive to be just and equitable and right. And your memorialist will be ever in duty bound to pray.

JOHN OVERALL.

FEBRUARY 1, 1826.

GEORGIA, January 20, 1826.

It appears from the journals of the honorable legislature of the State of Georgia that in February, A. D. 1784, a resolution or law was passed for disposing of certain lands in the bend of Tennessee river; commissioners were appointed for carrying the same into effect, as well as civil officers for regulating the intended settlement.

In the fall or winter of 1785 the said commissioners met on the Holston, now State of Tennessee, and did there raise a number of emigrants, by offering to each able-bodied man one thousand acres of land in the aforesaid bend of Tennessee, agreeably to the aforesaid law; provided the said men should equip themselves with arms for defence, and, at their own expense, provide themselves with provisions, and attend the said commissioners, as a guard for their security and defence, to the bend of Tennessee, the premises aforesaid. On the above conditions a number of men were raised and joined at the mouth of French Broad river; from thence the said men did, on terms aforesaid, attend the said commissioners to the premises aforesaid, and upon the conditions aforesaid. After the said commissioners had ascertained the situation and latitude of the country, in the month of December, A. D. 1785, they held a board upon the premises aforesaid, and, agreeably to the contract and agreement with the said men who accompanied them as their guard and security, they did then and there issue to the men land warrants of survey for one thousand acres of land to each man, to be located or surveyed upon lands in the said bend of Tennessee, or Tennessee district, which they named and called Houston county. I was personally acquainted with said commissioners; often aided them in business, and, to the best of my recollection, the above-mentioned land warrants were the first land warrants issued by said commissioners under the aforesaid law, and for lands in the bend of Tennessee.

It may also be necessary to remark that the said land warrants were printed and carried to the District of Tennessee for the aforesaid purpose; and, to the best of my present recollection, all the said warrants there issued were printed by the same type, upon the same kind of paper, and signed by the commissioners. Some of which warrants, with others, were shortly after lodged in the land office of the surveyor general of the State of Georgia, as will more plainly appear by reference thereto.

I was personally acquainted with George Dardin, sen., who did attend the commissioners in person, and I do believe the annexed land warrant, in the name of said Dardin, to be one of the original land warrants issued by the said commissioners at the time and place aforesaid, as will more plainly appear by reference to such land warrants as were returned to the surveyor general's office aforesaid, of the same tenor and date. After issuing the said land warrants the said commissioners returned, with the men accompanying them, to the then inhabited country, under promise, at some future day, to attend upon the premises aforesaid, where the said emigrants, as they thought proper, should locate their land warrants to such lands as they might choose. From certain intervening causes it appears that the said commissioners did not, after that date, meet again upon the premises aforesaid; but did arrange and settle their future business, agreeably to said law, at sundry meetings held by them in the settled boundaries of the State of Georgia.

ZACHARIAH COX.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, Washington County, ss:

On the 31st day of January, 1826, personally appeared before the subscriber, one of the justices of the peace for the District of Columbia aforesaid, Zachariah Cox, who made oath, in due form of law, that the facts set forth in the aforesaid statement subscribed by him are true to the best of his knowledge and belief.

R. C. WEIGHTMAN, J. P.

"GEORGIA:

"To John Donelson, esq., county surveyor for the county of Houston, and district of Tennessee:

"You are hereby authorized and required to admeasure and lay out, or cause to be admeasured and laid out, unto George Dardin, sen., a tract of land, which shall contain one thousand acres, in the said county of Houston and district aforesaid, taking especial care that the same has not heretofore been laid out to any person or persons; and you are hereby also directed and required to record the plat of the same in your office, and transmit a copy thereof, together with this warrant, to the surveyor general, within thirteen months from this date.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, County of Washington:

Personally appeared John Cocke, of the State of Tennessee, before the subscriber, a justice of the peace for said District, and, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he has been shown fifteen land warrants for one thousand acres each, directed to John Donelson, esq., county surveyor for the county of Houston and district of Tennessee, one in the name of John Cowin, one in the name of William Nelson, one in the name of David Mitchell, one in the name of Abraham Utter, one in the name of William Fisher, one in the name of George Dardin, one in the name of George Gallohan, one in the name of Thomas Gallohan, one in the name of James Scott, one in the name of James Gallohan, one in the name of John Woods, one in the name of Charles Roberson, one in the name of Alexander Kelly, one in the name of Joseph McConnell, and one, I think, in the name of Alexander Cunningham. The above-mentioned and described warrants of survey are signed by John Sevier and John Donelson. This deponent states that he was well and intimately acquainted with John Sevier, formerly governor of the State of Tennessee, and with the handwriting of Governor Sevier, and has no hesitation in saying he is satisfied the signature is in the proper handwriting of John Sevier, former governor of Tennessee; he had no acquaintance with Colonel John Donelson; he has, however, in the course of business, frequently seen writing admitted by all to be Colonel Donelson's, and, from his recollection of its appearance, he thinks said land warrants were signed by him.

JOHN COCKE.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, the subscriber, a justice of the peace for the county and District aforesaid, on this 6th day of January, 1827.

JAMES YOUNG

DECEMBER, 1826.

SIR: The honorable House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled have ordered, last session, my petition for a remuneration for old land warrants issued by authority of the legislature of Georgia to be laid before your honorable committee for their consideration to report on. You will please give the case such support as it merits. I beg leave to refer you to the information I laid before the honorable committee at the last session for the proofs required of me in support of my claim, which you have before you. There is one warrant annexed to my petition; the other fifteen warrants in my possession are ready at the call of your honorable committee.

I beg leave to inform you that I reside in Virginia, about six miles from Georgetown; that any further information required of me respecting the business, you will please favor and drop me a line, directed to me at Georgetown, and it will be punctually attended to.

I am, respectfully, yours,

JOHN OVERALL.

Hon. RICHARD A. BUCKNER, Chairman of Committee on Private Land Claims.

P. S.—The Hon. John Cocke, of the House of Representatives, last session, waited on your honorable committee, I believe, and satisfied them as to the necessary proof of the signature of John Donelson, one of the commissioners who signed the land warrant annexed to my petition, and others in my possession. The Hon. Hugh L. White, senator, will prove the signature of John Sevier, the other commissioner who signed the aforesaid land warrants, if required.

Yours, respectfully,

J. OVERALL.

GEORGETOWN, February 22, 1826.

In this case there is supposed to exist little or no difficulty as to facts. Every allegation upon which the claimants rest their application for relief is susceptible of proof. It appears that, confiding in an express contract entered into with them by public agents of the State of Georgia employed under the authority of the legislature to accomplish public objects, they performed valuable and meritorious services, agreeably to the terms of the stipulations on their part. They executed the contract, and complied with all the terms which entitled them to the remuneration which was promised.

The value of these services is not now in controversy; if it be disputed, that also can be proved. The duty which they assumed, and the services they engaged to render, were, however, wholly contingent when the contract was made. They might be more or less laborious, and more or less perilous. They were, or they might be, exposed to Indian hostilities, and their lives might be lost in the conflicts which they had reason to apprehend. It was in consideration of these contingencies that the contract was framed; in full confidence that its terms would be complied with, the services were rendered. The commissioners did so far comply with the terms of their engagement as to grant the warrants of survey upon which the claim rests. From motives of public policy these public agents did not fully execute all the objects of their appointment as originally contemplated, and therefore did not perfect either the titles of these memorialists or their own. The views and policy of the State were changed, and, in consequence of this alteration, these titles were necessarily and inevitably left imperfect and incomplete. The defects, however, originated neither with the commissioners nor the memorialists, but with the State itself. All that was to be done by the former—all that could be done—was done; what remained to be executed was to be performed by the State. The State, however, for its own purposes, stopped short; left these titles in their imperfect state; took away from these parties the means of completing and perfecting them; and the single question which remains is, whether this omission is to operate injuriously to the interests of those who are wholly innocent. It is presumed this will not be pretended by a government whose foundations are justice—the end and design of whose institutions are to protect and vindicate the rights of the citizen.

If these commissioners were public agents, acting on behalf of and for the benefit of the State; if their acts were within the scope of the authority delegated to them, such acts are the acts of the State of Georgia. If this be conceded, that State was under a legal and equitable obligation to comply fully, on its part, with the terms of the contract, that is to say, to give perfection and validity to the inchoate and imperfect titles of the claimants. Having omitted or neglected to discharge this obligation, this neglect and omission cannot impair or annul the rights of these memorialists.

Having reached this point in the consideration of the case, the question which remains to be examined is, whether this claim, originally valid, both in law and equity, as against Georgia, is equally so against the United States. All the facts upon which the claimants rely are public and notorious; the proceedings of the legislature and the agents of the State, they were of a character to give notice to all the world; and the United States, accepting the cession from Georgia, took the property ceded, subject to all the equitable interests of other parties. If, then, the equitable rights of these claimants; if the State was under a moral or legal obligation to perfect their inchoate title, then it clearly and necessarily results that the United States are under an equally imperative obligation to do what Georgia was bound to do.

If, however, as is understood, the United States have admitted this obligation in its fullest extent in regard to the titles of the commissioners, they have themselves sanctioned every principle which has been contended for. The commissioners, by their agreement with the State, were to receive, as a compensation for their services, five thousand acres of the same lands; their titles rested on the same basis; they were equally imperfect, and from the same causes; but compensation has been awarded them, and the contract has been complied with by the United States. By this contract it is admitted that the commissioners were duly appointed as the public agents of the State of Georgia; that their acts created an imperfect and inchoate title, and that the equitable rights thus created were valid against the United States. This precedent, therefore, if it is correctly understood, seems to settle every question arising in this case, and to leave no one principle open to a contestation in controversy.

RICHARD S. COXE.

19TH CONGRESS.]No. 550.[2D SESSION.

APPLICATION OF ILLINOIS RESPECTING THE PUBLIC LANDS WITHIN HER LIMITS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 12, 1827.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the general assembly of the State of Illinois respectfully shows: That the peculiar relation of this State, in common with all the new States of the federal government, in respect to the public lands, imposes it upon this general assembly as an imperious duty to remonstrate against the present mode of selling those lands, and to urge upon your honorable body the justice and necessity of making some great and radical change therein.

The State of Illinois contains nearly forty millions of acres of land, of which only about one million and a half of acres have yet been sold; and it is a melancholy truth that, if the present minimum price be adhered to, it must be several hundred years before all the soil of the State can be passed out of the hands of the federal government, and be subjected to the laws and jurisdiction of the State.

Your memorialists respectfully represent that such delay will be injurious to the rights and interests of this State, by checking the growth of its population and preventing it from collecting taxes on much the largest proportion of its soil; and will be injurious to the federal government itself, by keeping much money out of the public treasury, and occasioning great waste and destruction of the timber on the public lands; and that it will be a virtual infraction of the compact between this State and the federal government, upon the point of not taxing those lands before they are sold, and for a certain term of years afterwards; which clearly implies, and was so understood by both parties, that the lands should be sold in a reasonable time.

To complete the sales within a reasonable time, or, indeed, within any time at all, it is certain that the lands must be offered for what they are worth; and as the quality varies through all the gradations, from first rate soil, well supplied with wood and water, to second and third rate, and refuse soil without either wood or water, it is clear that there ought to be a corresponding variation of price to induce the people to purchase the inferior tracts.

Such is the practice of private landholders, and such has been the practice of other States in selling their vacant territory.

Your memorialists respectfully represent that land, like every other commodity, ought to be sold for what it is worth, and not held up at one uniform price for all sorts, good, bad, and indifferent; and they believe it would comport with sound policy, and the true interest of a republican government, to make donations of small tracts to actual settlers.

Many half-quarter sections contain only a few acres of tillable land, not enough to make it an object to the purchaser who is able to buy a home, and yet which would be sufficient for a small and poor family, who by their industry and increase of population, and by adding something to the improvement and cultivation of the country, and, above all, by raising up a family of children, would amply indemnify the government for a gratuitous donation of such tracts.

Your memorialists will not inquire how far a compact may be valid which alienates the sovereign powers of the State, with respect to taxing and disposing of the lands within her limits; nor how far it is consistent with the sovereignty and jurisdiction of the State that the federal government should exercise jurisdiction over any part of the soil and timber of the State, and prescribe penalties for trespasses upon it.

They hope that all these questions may forever be avoided by a just and liberal disposition of the public lands, without further delay.

It is not for your memorialists to dictate the course of policy to be pursued by the federal government, as it relates to fiscal or other concerns; but they believe it will be found on examination that no accession has been gained to the public revenue from the sales of the public domain, after the losses and charges upon its survey and sales, and the collection thereof, shall have been deducted. On the score of economy alone, if this should be found to be true, it is an indisputable conclusion that it would be most advantageous to the interests of the nation to make a transfer of the soil to the several States within which it may be situated.

Other considerations of policy, founded on enlarged and enlightened views, public utility, and prosperity, might be urged with much force; and various instances might be cited as memorable examples by other governments of its justice and propriety; but it is believed to be unnecessary to refer to them for the purpose of contrasting the magnanimity or great usefulness of those of remote or recent origin with our own course of policy in respect thereto. The elucidation of the sagacity and discernment of those governments, with reference to an increase of their population, resources and power, by the gratuitous donations of land, might not afford an advantageous comparison with that which has hitherto been pursued among ourselves. As evidences of the propriety and policy of producing a change so desirable, they may, however, with decorum be referred to, and it would certainly prove consolatory to profit by their examples and experience.

Your memorialists therefore pray that your honorable body will take the subject-matter of their memorial into your serious consideration, and remedy the present evils, as well as to prevent all future ones, either by surrendering all the public lands in this State to the State upon equitable terms, or reducing the price and fixing a just graduation according to the different rates of the soil, and ceding all below a certain value to the State for the purpose of promoting education, constructing roads and canals, and making gratuitous donations to actual settlers. All of which is most respectfully submitted.

TH. REYNOLDS,
Speaker of the House of Representatives pro tem.
 WILLIAM KENNEY,
Speaker of the Senate.

NEW MADRID CLAIM.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 12, 1817.

MR. BUCKNER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Joseph Smith, reported:

The petitioner states that in the year 1818 he became the purchaser of a location made by John B. Dupuis, of a Madrid claim, which had been previously made on section 9, township 50 north, of range 17 west, in Howard county, and State of Missouri, which was subsequently claimed by a certain Boone Hayes as a pre-emption right; which last-mentioned claim was sustained. He says that, being informed of the fact previous to the expiration of the time limited by law for the location of the Madrid certificates, he made a location of said claim on relinquished land; but that on application for a patent, at the proper office, he was informed that it could not issue, as it was made necessary by law that the relinquished lands should first be offered for sale, or that two years must elapse before they were subjected to location; of all which he alleges that he was ignorant. He states that he settled upon the land, and made improvements thereon at considerable expense, &c., and requests that a law may be passed authorizing the emanation of a patent on said claim, in the name of said Dupuis. By information received from the General Land Office, it appears that section 9, in township 50 north, of range 17 west, had been located by a Madrid claim, in favor of John B. Dupuis, for six hundred and forty acres, but that the location aforesaid was afterwards withdrawn; the northwest quarter of section 9 having been entered January 20, 1820, as a pre-emption claim, and that the residue of said section had since been sold.

From the same source it is proved that the petitioner applied for a patent upon the certificate in favor of said Dupuis, accompanied by a certificate of the surveyor, that southwest quarter of section 22, the northwest quarter of section 28, and the northern half of section 27, in township 52 north, of range 17 west, had been located in virtue of the aforesaid Madrid certificate April 22, 1823; but as those tracts had been relinquished to the United States in the months of August and September, 1821, under the provisions of the act of March 2, 1821, for the relief of the purchasers of the public lands, the tenth section of which withdraws the lands surrendered under that act from sale for the period of two years after such surrender, that the patent was refused on the ground that relinquished lands were not subjected to location until the expiration of that period. The Commissioner of the General Land Office remarks that some patents were issued for locations covering relinquished lands before the office was apprised of the fact. The object of the law requiring that relinquished lands should first be offered for sale, or that two years should expire previous to their location, was evidently to obtain a fair price for them. The location in question would have been strictly in pursuance of the law if made in the month of September, 1823; and, as it was made only a few months earlier, and the petitioner would otherwise be without remedy, the committee recommend the passage of an act confirming the said location, and have accordingly reported a bill for that purpose.

ALEXANDRIA, January 10, 1827.

SIR: I have seen Mr. Thornton, who said you wanted evidence of my being the legal holder of Dupuis' claim. I do not hold the title from him. He sold to General Rector and Ninian Edwards, who sold to me. I have Rector's deed, but it is in Missouri. I only ask that the location made of Dupuis' claim may be sanctioned by Congress to Dupuis and his legal representatives. The objection to the issuing the patent by the land office was, that it had been re-located, as a part of the first location was held by a pre-emption, which made it necessary to raise the first location, and locate the claim elsewhere. It was re-located, as stated in my petition, upon lands relinquished; and, under the law, relinquished lands were not subject to location for two years, which neither I nor my agent were apprised of until I applied for the patent; and this is the only ground why the patent could not issue. Only twenty months had elapsed from the time of relinquishment when the last location was made; and though many patents had issued under similar circumstances, the law was not discovered at the land office until lately, as they told me, and that my remedy was to apply to Congress to do away that difficulty and sanction the location last made.

In haste, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOSEPH SMITH.

Hon. Mr. BUCKNER, Chairman of the Committee on Private Land Claims.

19TH CONGRESS.]No. 55[2D SESSION.

CORRECTION OF AN ERROR IN THE ENTRY OF A QUARTER SECTION OF LAND.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 15, 1827.

Mr. REED, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Thomas Gulledge, of Pike county, in the State of Mississippi, reported:

That it appears to the committee, not only from the petition and affidavit of the said Thomas Gulledge, but likewise from the affidavits of Thomas Hamilton and James Ellis, that sometime in the month of March, in the year 1821, the said Thomas Gulledge made a written application to the register of the land office at Washington, State of Mississippi, to be permitted to enter the one-half of a quarter section of land, described in said written application as the west half of the northeast quarter of section number 20, in township number 4, and range number 10 east. And it likewise appears to the said committee that through the mistake of the said register a certificate issued to the said Thomas Gulledge, not for the half quarter section before described, and which he intended to enter, but for another and a different half quarter section, described in the patent which issued therefor, dated February 20, 1822, as the west half of the northwest quarter section 20, in township 4, of range 10 east, which it seems is poor land, unfit for cultivation or improvement. It appears, also, to the committee that the said Thomas Gulledge applied to the Register of the Land Office at Washington, and also the Commissioner of the General Land Office at Washington, to have this erroneous entry rectified, and restored to the land intended to be appropriated. But from each of those officers he received an answer that they had no power to rectify erroneous entries after a patent had issued, and was referred to Congress for relief. The committee is of opinion that, as the entry upon which the patent issued was made by mistake of the register, an officer of the government, the petitioner should not be bound thereby to retain lands which he never intended to appropriate, and that, therefore, he has an equitable claim upon Congress for relief. The committee accordingly report a bill for his relief, which is herewith presented.

CLAIM TO LAND IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 16, 1827.

Mr. BUCKNER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and document of Grammont Filhioe, reported:

The petitioner claims to be the owner of a tract of land in the State of Louisiana, of six acres front, and of ordinary depth, in virtue of an order of survey of the Spanish government, dated May 15, 1789; and that in consequence of said order of survey having been mislaid, he could not enter the same before the board of commissioners within the time limited by law, and urges that similar claims presented to the commissioners of the land office at Ouachita, where this tract lies, were confirmed. He prays that a law may be passed confirming to him said claim.

In support of it he presents a petition for settlement, dated April 20, 1789, and the permission granted in pursuance thereof, purporting to have been signed by Estevan Miro, dated May 15, 1789, who was then the Spanish governor of that country. The signature is believed to be genuine. The whole instrument, except the aforesaid signature, is (as the certificate of the register of the said land office proves) in the handwriting of John Filhioe, who was then commandant at Ouachita. The permission to settle was upon the ordinary terms of clearing the road in front, settling thereon, &c., and to be void if not complied with in three years. As there is no proof offered, showing a compliance with the conditions, the claim ought, in the opinion of the committee, to be rejected.

19TH CONGRESS.]No. 554.[2D SESSION.

TO GIVE VALIDITY AND TIME FOR FURTHER EVIDENCE TO LAND CLAIMS IN THE DISTRICT OF OPELOUSAS, IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 17, 1827.

Mr. Scott, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the report of the register of the land office at Opelousas, in the State of Louisiana, of October 1, 1825, (see No. 490,) reported:

That at the last session of Congress a law was passed confirming fifty-nine of the claims contained in the report of the register, and recommended for confirmation; that thirty-seven claims contained in the report of the register were not confirmed by the law of the last session, a part of which, in the opinion of the committee, ought to have been acknowledged as valid as some of those confirmed. It is due to your committee to say, in justification of the course which they now recommend, and as a reason why those claims were not embraced in the law of the last session, that the bill confirming those claims originated in the Senate, and when referred to the Committee on Public Lands was reported with amendments embracing some of the claims now again referred. But the Senate disagreeing to the amendments, the committee consented, and so the House agreed to pass the law without embracing the claims now referred, rather than lose the bill entirely and leave the claims now under consideration for future legislation. Of the thirty-seven claims not embraced in the law of the last session, but contained in the report of the register, the committee think that fifteen, to wit, Nos. 5, 6, 7, 16, 24, 84, 85, 86, 88, 89, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, which are rejected by the report of the register, ought to stand rejected. The committee think that fifteen other claims contained in the report of the register, viz: Nos. 28, 35, 36, 37, 41, 49, 50, 51, 57, 58, 67, 71, 72, 73, 91, and which are neither confirmed nor rejected by the report of the register, but stated to be of doubtful character, are entitled, as is recommended in the report, to a more full examination before a final decision, satisfactory both to the government and the claimants, can be had. The committee are of opinion that seven claims contained in the report of the register, to wit, Nos. 27, 29, 30, 64, 68, 74, 81, and which were not decided on at the last session of Congress, ought to be confirmed. These seven claims are reported for confirmation by the register, and do not vary, either in principle or quantity, from the other claims contained in the register's report, and which have received the sanction of Congress.

The committee therefore report a bill to give validity to the seven claims above stated and referred to, and also to give time to the parties, whose claims are reported by the register as doubtful, to furnish evidence in support of the suspended claims.

JOSEPH NOURSE, Register.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Register's Office, January 12, 1827.

19TH CONGRESS.]No. 556.[2D SESSION.

LAND CLAIM IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 25, 1827.

Mr. SMITH, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred "A bill for the relief of Elihu Hall Bay, and others, confirming grants of lands in the district west of Pearl river derived from the British government of West Florida, and not subsequently granted by Spain or the United States," reported:

That the committee have attentively examined the subject, and find that the petitioners claim their lands under grants from the British government of West Florida, prior to the cession of that country, by Great Britain to Spain, in 1783, and that those grants are as full and ample as any grants formerly made by the British government to their former colonies, now the United States of America, and, like them, contain subsequent conditions, such as that the grants should be recorded in a certain office, which appears to your committee to have been duly executed; to pay a mere nominal quit rent, and to make some small improvement; which latter appear to have been more a matter of form than of substance, and to have become obsolete. Nor could the omission to perform them have divested the claimants of their fee simple estate therein, unless a proceeding for that purpose had been instituted in a regular form by the British government itself, in a court of competent jurisdiction for that purpose; which your committee have no ground to believe had, or could have been done; therefore the grants must remain unimpaired by those subsequent conditions.

By a law providing therefor, passed April 25, 1812, that portion of country which lies south of the then Mississippi Territory, and east of the Mississippi river and island of New Orleans, and west of the Perdido river, was divided into two districts, between which Pearl river was the boundary, and authorizing a commissioner to be appointed for each of these districts, with powers, respectively, to inquire into the validity and justice of all such titles and claims to lands as should be filed in their respective divisions, and to report thereon to the Secretary of the Treasury, whose duty it was to lay the same before Congress at its next session.

In pursuance of the provisions of the aforesaid law, James O. Cosby was duly appointed commissioner of the district west of Pearl river, and in pursuance of his duties did register and examine the grants and title deeds of the petitioners and report their respective claims to the Secretary of the Treasury as claims founded on complete grants derived from the British government, and ranged them in class No. 1 for confirmation.

Your committee further report that on a former occasion, under precisely the same circumstances, of grants derived from the British government in the then Territory of Mississippi, in 1807, a board of three commissioners, of the first respectability, did report in favor of the claims under British grants, with similar subsequent conditions, without any evidence of their performance, that they were "more a matter of form than substance, and obsolete;" and that the same were laid before Congress by the Secretary of the Treasury, and Congress did, by a law of July 5, 1812, ratify and confirm the claims so reported to the respective claimants thereof. Your committee therefore respectfully suggest that they can see no reason why the government should offer any discrimination in the rights of citizens claiming precisely under the same circumstances, and therefore report the bill without amendment.

19TH CONGRESS.]No. 557.[2D SESSION.RESERVATIONS OF LAND IN ARKANSAS UNDER THE TREATY OF NOVEMBER 15, 1824, WITH THE QUAPAW INDIANS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 27, 1827.

Mr. STRONG, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of James Scull and others, of Arkansas Territory, reported:

That on November 15, 1824, a treaty was concluded between the United States and the Quapaw nation of Indians, in the Territory of Arkansas, by which the United States acquired a large and valuable tract of country. That when this treaty was made the Indians acknowledged to owe James Scull, one of the petitioners, seven thousand five hundred dollars; and by the 6th article of the treaty with the Indians it is provided that said Scull should be paid that amount by the United States, either in money or by giving to said Scull two entire sections of land designated in the article. The United States had the privilege, by the treaty, to give to Scull the land or the money, and it appears from the documents herewith that the government has decided to give Scull the land. By the 7th article of the treaty provision is made that certain lands shall be granted to eleven of the tribe by name, amounting in all to the quantity of one thousand and forty acres. The question presented to the committee is what description of title was given, or intended to be given, by the treaty? whether a life estate only, or an estate in fee simple? It appears from the letter of the Commissioner of the General Land Office that, although no absolute decision has been made in relation to the title intended to be granted by the treaty, yet the department inclines to the opinion that a life estate only was intended. The committee think differently. It is true there are no words of perpetuity used in the treaty, but the committee think the words used in the treaty, "there shall be granted," sufficiently clear of the intention of the parties to authorize the conclusion that a permanent interest in the soil was intended to be secured to the grantees. But if the intention of the parties is not sufficiently clear on the face of the treaty itself, the committee think it is rendered entirely so by the statement of Robert Crittenden, appended to the petition. Mr. Crittenden was the commissioner on the part of the United States who concluded the treaty, and his evidence goes the full length to show that the intention of the parties was to give to the grantees a fee simple interest and estate in the reservations. This intention of the parties, the committee are of opinion, ought, in this, as in all other cases, to be the rule of decision, as regards the petitioners. The committee believe that although the treaty provides that "there shall be granted" to the petitioners certain tracts of land, yet that some legislative provision is necessary to enable the grantees to obtain from the government the proper evidences of their title. To settle the question of construction, and obviate all difficulties in behalf of those indigent and unfortunate people, the committee report a bill.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, January 26, 1827.

SIR: On application to the Hon. H. W. Conway, I have the honor to state that by the 6th article of the Quapaw treaty of November 15, 1824, a reservation of land is secured to James Scull, in consideration of a debt of $7,500 due to him by the Quapaws, which reservation the department declined to purchase on an offer made of it by the reservee, preferring to avail itself of the option given in the treaty to do so.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES BARBOUR.

Hon. the CHAIRMAN of the Com. Public Lands, House of Reps. United States.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 20, 1827.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 19th instant, relative to the reservations to the several persons in the Quapaw treaty, I have to state that the question as to the nature of the title which these persons take under the treaty has not been submitted heretofore to the consideration of this office; the opinion of the Attorney General thus far has not been required.

No words of perpetuity being used in the treaty, I presume nothing more than a life estate was granted, and the more particularly so as it has been the usual practice of the United States, in all their Indian treaties, to grant only a life estate in lands to Indians, except unless under particular restrictions and limitations.

Mr. Scull has not applied for a patent. It is understood he has had a survey made.

With great respect, your obedient,

GEO. GRAHAM.

Hon. JOHN SCOTT, Chairman Com. Pub. Lands, House of Representatives.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The petition of the subscribers respectfully sheweth: That whereas a treaty between the said United States and the Quapaw nation of Indians was made and entered into, and concluded, on the 15th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1824, at Harrington's, in the Territory of Arkansas, by the Hon. Robert Crittenden, commissioner on the part of the United States, and certain chiefs and warriors of said nation of Quapaw Indians, the seventh article of which treaty provides for certain small grants of land to your humble petitioners therein named—

Now, therefore, we beg leave to represent to your honorable body that at the time of entering into said treaty, and for a long time thereafter, we did not entertain the shadow of a doubt that the small spot of the land of our nativity, granted to us by the provisions of said treaty for our future and permanent residence, was secured to us in fee simple, and to our heirs and successors forever.

Under that impression, and under the most thorough conviction of the justice and mildness of the administration of your free and salutary form of government, we voluntarily surrendered all claims to a large and valuable tract of country, and were at once willing to exchange the wild pursuits of the hunter's life for the more rational and natural employment of agriculture and husbandry. Some of us are already far advanced in years, and, agreeably to the course of nature, cannot promise ourselves many more days in the land of the living. That the small portion of land allotted to us in the treaty should descend to our heirs and assigns forever is the earnest prayer of your humble petitioners.

We have preferred our cause to the honorable Mr. Secretary Crittenden, with whom we entered into the treaty; and from the unhesitating candor and sincerity with which he assures us of the justice of our claim, we are confidently inspired with the hope of final success before your honorable body.

Cheered with the hopes of brighter prospects in future, we voluntarily placed our all in your hands, and have taken protection under and claim the guardianship of that government which we have always looked up to as an emblem of justice, and as the asylum of the afflicted of all nations.

That your honorable body will pass such a law explaining the provisions of said treaty, and securing our several grants of land to us respectively, is the prayer of your most obedient humble servants,

Joseph Duchasin.

Having been requested by the grantees to the lands conceded by the Quapaws to them by a treaty held at Harrington's in November, 1824, to certify to the United States government the views under which the contracting parties executed that treaty, I state that, from the "talks" held with the Indians pending the treaty, their wish evidently was to concede an estate of inheritance, and not a life estate, in the lands granted by them, and that so understanding them I had designed the treaty so as to meet their wishes, and supposed, for months afterwards, that the phraseology of the treaty conveyed the highest title known to the laws. On reference, however, to precedents settled upon the subject, I am now convinced that the words of the treaty do not fulfil the intentions of the contracting parties.

Given under my hand May 4, 1826.

[2D SESSION.]

GRANT OF LAND IN LIEU OF A FORFEITURE IN THE PURCHASE OF LAND IN OHIO.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 27, 1827.

Mr. BUCKNER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and documents of Samuel Sprigg, of the State of Ohio, reported:

On March 3, 1805, an act of Congress was passed authorizing the sale of all the sections of land theretofore reserved for the future disposition of Congress at not less than eight dollars per acre.—(See Land Laws, page 124.) Under that act Thomas Orr, Joseph Anderson, James Crawford, and Bezaleel Wells purchased fractions near Steubenville, in Ohio. Each paid the first instalment. Wells made his entry in November, 1805, for fractional section twenty-six, in township two, range two, in the Steubenville district, containing 189.56 acres, at eight dollars per acre, and paid, according to law, the first instalment, amounting to three hundred and seventy-nine dollars and a few cents. He made no other payment for it, and, April 4, 1811, the land reverted to the United States. A letter addressed by Wells to the petitioner states that early in April he entered into a contract with him for the sale of said fraction. Wells says he had entered the land for a friend of his who died; that he did not wish to pay for it himself and retain it; that he tried for sometime to sell it at the price he had agreed to give, but failed until he made the contract above alluded to with Sprigg, by which Sprigg agreed to pay to him, Wells, the amount of the first instalment. Each of them was of opinion that if the land reverted to the United States, under the act of February 29, 1808, it might be entered at four dollars per acre.—(See same laws, page 125.) Of that opinion was also the register of the land office in said district. The contract was closed; Sprigg paid Wells the amount of said first instalment, and then entered said fraction, under the last-recited act, at four dollars per acre, in the name of John Thompson, which was paid. Mr. Gallatin, then Secretary of the Treasury, gave a different construction to that act, and directed the register to permit the land to be entered at eight dollars per acre, or that the purchaser should have the four dollars per acre which he had paid refunded to him. Sprigg had in the meantime purchased other land adjoining the said fraction, above and below it, and had executed leases of it to two men for seven years. The fraction aforesaid formed nearly the centre of the land, and it is proven that he would have sustained considerable loss had he yielded it to the United States. Under these circumstances he withdrew the entry in the name of Thompson, which had been made for his benefit, and re-entered it in his own name, at eight dollars per acre, which he paid, and received a patent for it. The committee are of opinion, although it is a question of some difficulty, that Mr. Gallatin's construction of the act of 1808 was correct. The petitioner had been, no doubt, misled by the erroneous construction of the register; and although the government cannot be considered as bound by the erroneous construction of the laws of our public officers, yet the committee conceive that it would be neither magnanimous nor just that we should make a profit by such error in taking money from the pockets of those who were deceived by it.

Such appears to have been the opinion of Congress; for although the other persons who made entries of land at the same time Wells did permitted their lands to revert, and, of course, the first instalment to be forfeited, Congress passed acts for their benefit, and directed the same to be deducted out of the price when they re-entered the same at eight dollars per acre.—(See Land Laws, pages 135, 133 and 134, and 134 and 135.) It is not satisfactorily shown that Wells and Sprigg made the contract alluded to before the land reverted; it is, however, most probable that such was the fact, as it is very certain that the forfeiture of the first instalment was suffered with the intention of locating it at four dollars per acre. Wells acknowledges to have received from Sprigg the amount which he had paid. Sprigg, then, has actually paid, and the government has received, ten dollars per acre instead of eight dollars. The same measure of justice which was extended to the other purchasers alluded to should be observed toward the petitioner. The committee therefore recommend that he be allowed to locate one half section of any land belonging to the United States which has hitherto been offered for sale, and which is now subjected by law to location, as a compensation for said first instalment paid by Wells; and that upon the return of a plat and certificate of survey by the proper surveyor to the General Land Office a patent issue therefor to said Samuel Sprigg. For this purpose the committee present herewith a bill.

[2D SESSION.]

APPLICATION OF MISSOURI FOR FURTHER PROVISION FOR SETTLING LAND TITLES IN THAT STATE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 29, 1827.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The subject of titles to land in this country, derived from the French and Spanish governments, is one which has for a long time engaged the attention of your body; and which, notwithstanding the many laws enacted by you, providing for their adjustment and determination, yet requires the further interposition of Congress. While in the State of Louisiana all these claims have, with few or no exceptions, been confirmed to the claimants, a large portion of those situated in the State of Missouri remain unsettled. The knowledge possessed by this general assembly in relation to the land titles in the late provinces of Upper and Lower Louisiana induces them to believe that no efficient cause can operate against the former which did not operate against the latter. Reposing in the justice and equity of the cause, our citizens confidently expect from the general government an adherence to the precedents established in the adjustment of the land titles in the State of Louisiana, and respectfully invite the attention of Congress to this subject, expecting from the general government that the same justice and liberality will be extended to all her citizens similarly situated. This general assembly would represent that, under an act of Congress entitled "An act enabling claimants to land within the limits of the State of Missouri and Territory of Arkansas to institute proceedings to try the validity of their claims," approved May 26, 1824, a great number of petitions praying a decision on the validity of the claims embraced by said act have been filed; that, of the claims presented for the adjudication of the court, only one has been decided. From the decision of the court in that case an appeal has been taken to the Supreme Court of the United States. The situation in which the claimants are placed by the operation of this act, the expenses to be incurred by them in the prosecution of their claims, and the uncertainty attending the decision thereon, as appears by that already made, have induced those who have filed petitions to delay a decision, and will eventually compel them to withdraw; and those who have not filed petitions to decline the presentation of them under this act; thus leaving our citizens dissatisfied with the government, and constraining that portion who were citizens under the former government and dependent upon those claims as the support of their old age and the resources of their children, to abandon our country, and placing in an uncertain state the land titles in this country; thereby retarding improvements, paralyzing industry, and jeopardizing the fortunes of many who have, in good faith, and at an early period, purchased such claims. From this view of the case, the general assembly urge the propriety of an amendment of the law above referred to, which, in its provisions, will dispense justice; will relieve claimants from the burden of costs that attend the present law; and will bring the claims to a speedy and final determination. They would suggest to the general government the equity, and, indeed, the policy of such amendments as may secure to the inhabitants of the late Territory of Missouri the quiet and peaceable possession of such lands as have been confirmed by the respective boards of commissioners and recorder of land titles who have heretofore adjudicated on their claims, and establish a new board of commissioners to investigate and adjudicate on those claims which have heretofore been deferred by the former boards, and those which have not been presented to them, with powers to decide in all cases, according to equity, and in pursuance of the treaty of cession, the ordinances of the governments under which the claims respectively originated, and the practices of the public authorities of the former governments thereon; or such other tribunal, and with such powers, as to you in your wisdom may seem proper.

Prompted by a feeling of justice to a large and respectable portion of our fellow-citizens who, themselves or their ancestors, were citizens under the Spanish government, and have come under this without consultation or consent, this general assembly presents their claims. Prompted by a feeling of justice to the residue of our citizens, which requires a certainty and security in the land titles of this country, this general assembly asks a speedy and final determination thereof.

In urging this memorial to the consideration of your body, they would refer you to the letter from the King of France to M. D'Abbadie, the director general and commandant of Louisiana, informing the Louisianians of the treaty of cession of this country to Spain, and declaring the expectation of the French King that the inhabitants would be preserved and maintained in their estates, which had been granted to them by the governor and director of the colony; and that, finally, all the grants, though not confirmed by the French authorities, would be confirmed by his Catholic Majesty; the sentiments of which letter, it is believed, correspond with the stipulations of the treaty. They would refer you to the proclamation of Don Manuel de Salcedo and the Marquis of Casa Calvo, commissioners on the part of the government of Spain for the delivery of the province of Louisiana to the French republic, dated at New Orleans, May 18, 1803; whereby the inhabitants of the province are assured that they will be maintained and preserved in the peaceable possession of their estates, and confirmed in all the grants or properties, of whatsoever species, to them made by the governor of these provinces, although the same should not have been confirmed by his Majesty.—(See the proclamation, a governmental paper.) They refer you to the treaty of cession between the United States and the French republic, wherein it is stipulated that the inhabitants of the ceded territory shall be maintained and protected in the free enjoyment of their property. They would recall to your recollection the declaration of Major Amos Stoddard, the first civil commandant of Upper Louisiana, under the government of the United States, wherein the claimants to land in Upper Louisiana are assured that the United States feel all the ardor for their interests which a warm attachment can inspire; that it will be among some of their first objects to ascertain and confirm their land titles; that they are cognizant of the deranged state of these titles; that ultimately the most ample justice will be done; and, in the final adjustment, no settler or landholder will have any just cause to complain. But what is the fact? Twenty-two years have passed away and no final adjustment has been made. Is there no cause of complaint? Let this memorial answer the question. Look at the act of Congress and say, is it not a cause of complaint when a citizen of Missouri is compelled to seek at Washington those rights which, under the former government, were not disputed, and must pay the immense costs of a federal land suit, even when he succeeds?

Whatever may be the decision of Congress on the foregoing part of this memorial, whether a more liberal law be passed in favor of the claimants, or they be constrained to appear at the seat of government, contending with these United States before its supreme judiciary, this general assembly most earnestly asks that wherever the decision of the court, under the existing act of Congress, or of any tribunal hereafter established, shall be against the validity of any claim presented to the said court or tribunal, then, and in every such case, that the claimant, or his legal representatives, who have improved any part of the tract claimed, shall be entitled to the preference of becoming the purchaser or purchasers of one or more quarter sections of land embraced in such claim, so as to include his or their improvements, at the minimum government price; and that, where the public lands adjoining have been exposed to sale, the quarter sections to which the right of pre-emption may be given shall be liable to entry by the claimant, or his legal representatives, and not deferred till the same is advertised for sale.

It is believed that such a privilege would not be injurious to the government, and would be of great benefit to the citizens who settled with a confidence in their rights on such claims.

In urging this latter part of the memorial to your consideration, they would suggest that these improvements were made by the claimants, or their legal representatives, under a conviction of the validity of their claims. With this conviction they preferred improving lands esteemed their own, and which, in their opinion, could not be taken from them, rather than improve lands owned by the United States, and which could be wrested from them. If this request be denied, many of the oldest and most respectable citizens of this country, who have improved the lands and have thereby increased their value, will, from inability to pay for the land and the improvements thereon when brought into the public market, be driven from their homes and their all. From this representation it must be obvious to the justice and liberality of your body that this class of citizens should have a preference of becoming the purchasers of the improvements made by them. It is necessary that the grant of this privilege be immediately made, and to take effect so soon as decisions are made on the claims; because, if their claim is lost, and they have no preference in becoming the purchaser, the mind of the farmer will be corroded with care and anxiety, industry will be suspended, improvements will cease, and that uncertainty in their possessions exist which destroys all equanimity and energy of soul, embitters every day of the poor man's life, and brings many to worthlessness and ruin: Wherefore, the general assembly of the State of Missouri asks the Congress of the United States to pass a law which will dispense that liberality which is due to the claimants to land derived from the French and Spanish governments, and give that despatch in the final determination of the claims which is indispensable to the industry, improvement, and quietude of this country; also a law extending the right of pre-emption to all those claimants, or their legal representatives, who have improved the lands claimed by them, so as to include their improvements, in each and every case where the decision on the claim shall be against its validity.

Resolved, unanimously, That a copy of this memorial be immediately forwarded to our representative and each of our senators in Congress.

Speaker of the House of Representatives.
FELIX SCOTT,

[2D SESSION.

APPLICATION OF MISSOURI FOR FURTHER RELIEF TO THE SUFFERERS BY EARTHQUAKES IN NEW MADRID COUNTY, IN THAT STATE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 29, 1827.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the general assembly of the State of Missouri respectfully sheweth: That by an act of Congress for the relief of the inhabitants of the late county of New Madrid, in the Missouri Territory, who suffered by earthquakes, approved February 17, 1815, it is, among other things, provided that any person who owned land in that county, and which had been materially injured by earthquakes, was authorized to locate the like quantity on any of the public land of that Territory, the sale of which was authorized by law, with certain exceptions provided in that act, provided that no person should be permitted, under said act, to locate a greater quantity than that confirmed to him, except the owners of lots of ground and tracts of land of less quantity than one hundred and sixty acres, who were authorized to obtain a quantity not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres; nor should any person be entitled to locate more than six hundred and forty acres.

Your memorialists respectfully represent that the recorder of land titles of said Territory had certain powers granted to him by said act of Congress, the exercise of which was enjoined upon him as a duty; that, in pursuance of said powers, he did issue certificates, as provided for by said act, upon evidence existing in his office, and that which was adduced before him, for various tracts of land of six hundred and forty acres and under, and town lots, or lots of ground and tracts of land of less quantity than one hundred and sixty acres, upon which latter class he granted certificates for the quantity of one hundred and sixty acres each, but in no case, it is believed, did he grant certificates to any one person for a greater quantity than six hundred and forty acres, being, in his opinion, the maximum quantity any one person was entitled to receive under the law.

Whether the construction of the act of Congress, as given and acted upon by the recorder of land titles, was correct or not, your memorialists forbear to give an opinion; but so it is, that, by means of the confidence placed in his opinion, both as a man and an officer of the United States government, by the people of this State, those certificates have been sold and transferred for a valuable consideration, from one person to another, until they have passed through the hands of many individuals of the most worthy and respectable class of our citizens from the time of their first being issued until they were all located; and since that period the lands located in virtue of said certificates have been in like manner transferred, even up to the present time, in the full expectation and confidence that, after the certificates were located and the land surveyed, patents would be issued therefor, as a matter of right, according to the provisions of the third section of said act of Congress.

Your memorialists further beg leave to represent that most of these certificates were granted prior to the sale of public lands within this State; that they were purchased with great eagerness (and when lands were high) by the new settlers coming to this State at a great price, who have located them on lands which they have chosen for permanent places of residence; that they have built houses, made large improvements, and opened extensive plantations upon the tracts thus located; and should the patents for the land be withheld, and they deprived of their titles, it will be the means of breaking up many families, and cause the ruin of many of our most worthy and respectable citizens.

It is with regret and surprise that your memorialists are informed that the Commissioner of the General Land Office, under an opinion of the Attorney General of the United States, refuses to issue patents upon many of these land claims, as is required of him to do by the third section of the above-quoted act.

Your memorialists therefore pray that your honorable body will be pleased to take the case of the claimants under consideration, and grant unto them such relief as justice, expediency, and good policy may dictate; and, as in duty bound, your memorialists cannot cease to pray, &c.

Resolved, That the executive of this State be required to forward one copy of the foregoing memorial to the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, with a request that he lay the same before Congress, and one to each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

H. S. GEYER,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
B. H. REEVES,
President of the Senate.

Approved December 22, 1824.

FREDERICK BATES.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 26, 1825.

Sir: I had the honor to receive your letter of the 16th instant, enclosing the memorial of the general assembly of Missouri relative to the relief, as provided by the act of Congress of February 19, 1815, of certain inhabitants of New Madrid county, in that State, who had suffered by earthquakes; and requesting my opinion on two points arising under the above act, as they are stated in your letter.

I lost no time in referring your letter to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, that I might have his report upon the subject-matter of it. I have received it accordingly, and beg leave to enclose it herewith, together with the documents to which it refers. With these and other lights bearing upon the same subject, I have adopted the opinion heretofore acted upon at this department, and sanctioned by that of the Attorney General of the United States, on the points mentioned in your letter, viz: first, that the construction given to the first section of the act by the recorder of land titles at St. Louis, in allowing a quarter section for each town lot, &c., not exceeding four quarters, to any one person, is not the true construction; and, secondly, that a discretionary power is reserved under the last section of the act, by which patents may be withheld by the proper officer of the executive government after the recorder has given the final patent certificates.

I have the honor to remain, with great respect, your obedient servant,

RICHARD RUSH.

Hon. DAVID BARTON, Chairman of the Committee on the Public Lands, Senate of the United States.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 22, 1825.

Sir: I return the letter from Mr. Barton, enclosing the memorial of the legislature of Missouri, which was referred by you to this office.

A letter was addressed by me, in January, 1824, to the chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, accompanied by the copies of a number of papers on file in this office, relating to the execution of the act of February 17, 1815. As these documents were voluminous, and as they are not all necessary to enable you to decide on the questions submitted by Mr. Barton, I shall submit to you only a small portion of them. You have enclosed the copy of a letter addressed by Mr. Meigs to the Secretary of the Treasury, and a copy of the opinion of the Attorney General, given in consequence of that letter. Believing that opinion to be correct, and in strict conformity to the law, it has been considered sufficient authority, under the sanction of the President, for withholding the patents in all those cases to which it was applicable. The reasons assigned in the memorial seem to be properly addressed to the legislature, who have the power to grant the relief required.

In respect to the second inquiry made by Mr. Barton, I can only say that it has been considered the constitutional duty of the President to see that the laws be duly executed, and that, in all cases where the subordinate officers have given a construction to law incompatible with that given by the President, he has withheld his sanction, when that sanction was necessary to carry the law into effect, until legislative provision should be made, or a judicial decision had.

It may be proper to avail myself of this opportunity to state another cause for the suspension of patents or certificates given by the recorder of land titles under the act of February 17, 1815, and which has not hitherto been distinctly stated to the Committee on Land Claims in either House.

It is provided by the 1st section of the act referred to, "that in every case where such location shall be made according to the provisions of this act, the title of the person or persons to the land injured as aforesaid shall revert to and become absolutely vested in the United States." With a view to the execution of the law generally, the recorder of land titles required a relinquishment of title from the individual claiming the land injured by the earthquake, but, to guard against any defect in the title of the claimant, he issued his location certificate in the name of the original confirmees and his legal representatives, and for the same reason the patents, since I came into office, have been issued, using the same terms. As evidence of the right of title in the claimant, and therefore the right to relinquish, the recorder relied principally upon the certificate of the clerk of the county of New Madrid, that the records of his office furnished evidence of title in the claimant.

The enclosed copy of a letter from the present clerk of the county of New Madrid shows that the certificates of his predecessors cannot be confided in. In consequence of this information, the patent in the particular case referred to in that letter has been withheld; and, in all cases where the relinquishment has been received, and the cases are very numerous, on the evidence only of the certificate of the clerk of the county of New Madrid, patents are suspended until it can be ascertained whether the certificates that have been given correspond with the records of the county of New Madrid, and, to ascertain this fact, measures have been taken. When this information is received, patents will be withheld in all cases where it shall appear that the party relinquishing had no title to the lands relinquished. In those cases where patents have already issued, if it shall appear that the original confirmees, or his legal representatives, still own the land confirmed, and have not authorized the relinquishment on which the recorder of land titles granted his certificate of new location, such patents will be considered as null and void.

Should it ultimately appear that the recorder of land titles has issued certificates in many cases where the parties relinquishing had no legal title to the land relinquished, the evil complained of by the general assembly of Missouri will be increased, and if it be deemed necessary to apply a remedy, that remedy should be coextensive with the evil. Perhaps the evils complained of might be remedied, and the interests of the United States sufficiently protected, by a provision granting a pre-emption right at the minimum price at which the public lands are sold to the bona fide purchasers of the lands actually surveyed, by virtue of a certificate issued by the recorder of land titles, agreeably to the provisions of the act of February 17, 1815, in all cases where such certificates had been issued for town lots, and in all cases where such certificates were founded on relinquishments of lands injured by the earthquake, by individuals who had no legal right to make such relinquishment.

There is, however, a marked distinction between the cases referred to in the memorial of the general assembly of Missouri and those mentioned in this letter. In reference to their claims for relief on the government, in the first description of cases, no precaution could guard the purchaser against an error of judgment of the United States officer; in the other, the purchasers were admonished by the terms of the certificate of the recorder and those used in the patent to take care that the claim of title was regularly derived from the original confirmees.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

GEORGE GRAHAM.

Hon. R. RUSH, Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, General Land Office, January 17, 1822.

SIR: The act of February 17, 1815, for the relief of the sufferers by the earthquake in the county of New Madrid, authorizes them to locate the like quantity of land on any of the public lands in the then Territory of Missouri the sale of which is authorized by law: "Provided that no person shall be permitted to locate a greater quantity of land under this act than the quantity confirmed to him, except the owners of lots of ground, or tracts of land, of less quantity than one hundred and sixty acres, who are hereby authorized to locate and obtain any quantity of land not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres; nor shall any person be entitled to locate more than six hundred and forty acres."

The point to which I beg leave to call your attention is this: On the list of certificates of the right of new locations under that act, I find that the same individual has been permitted, in numerous instances, to locate to the amount of one hundred and sixty acres for each lot of one arpent; and certificates of location in such cases have been granted by the recorder of land titles. To exemplify my meaning, I would merely mention two instances: Francis Leseur has received four certificates of one hundred and sixty acres each, for four lots of one arpent each. Joseph Genereux has received four certificates of the same kind, and for the same number of lots of one arpent.

Conceiving that the law never intended to grant to any one owner of town lots the privilege of locating more than one hundred and sixty acres, except, indeed, in cases where the quantity of the lots owned by them, exceeding the quantity of one hundred and sixty acres, would thereby entitle them to the privilege of locating the like greater quantity, whatever such might be, I beg leave to ask advice whether patents can legally be demanded. And am, with great respect, your most obedient servant,

JOSIAH MEIGS.

Hon. SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES, January 22, 1822.

SIR: I entirely concur in the opinion expressed by the Commissioner of the Land Office, that it is not the intention of the act of Congress of February 17, 1815, to permit the owners of town lots in the county of New Madrid to locate a tract of one hundred and sixty acres for each town lot they may own, but one tract for the whole of their town lots, however many, unless the aggregate should exceed the quantity of one hundred and sixty acres, when they will fall within the general enactment of being authorized to locate the quantity they have lost.

I have, &c.,

WM. WIRT.

Hon. W. H. CRAWFORD, Treasury Department.

Copy of endorsement on the back of the letter.

"Referred to the Commissioner of the General Land Office; will instruct the recorder of land titles accordingly, and be governed by it himself.

"W. H. C."

St. Louis, August 16, 1825.

DEAR SIR: In reply to your request made of me, as clerk of the circuit court and recorder of the county of New Madrid, for information as to the regularity of the certificates given by the late clerks of the said county, of the claims of titles to lands which have been removed under the act of Congress of February 17, 1815, "for the relief of the inhabitants of the late county of New Madrid who suffered by earthquakes," I take pleasure in stating to you the fact that I do conceive that the late clerks have been extremely careless and remiss in that business; and, as proof of the fact, I lay before you the original certified conveyances of the claim of Elisha Jackson, or his legal representatives, to 240 arpents of land on Bayou St. John and St. Thomas; from which original papers you will see that on November 29, 1796, Jackson sold the same to Jacob Bogard; January, 1799, Jacob Bogard sold to Peter A. Laforge and John Lavallu; and, in February, 1804, Laforge conveyed his half to Lavallu. Now, sir, with what propriety the clerk (with those papers before his eyes) could certify a title to George Tennille, I am at a loss to know.

And mark the great evil that results from this irregularity; Lavallu has a fine farm on this tract of land, which he has cultivated for upwards of twenty years; in 1819 he died, and one of his heirs now lives on the land. Ten days ago (the land having been surveyed as public lands) it was entered at the land office. What is to be done in this matter? Must the heirs tamely submit, and give up their lands? Or must they go to law, and spend the value of the land to clear the title?

You will, sir, confer a favor on a helpless orphan by communicating this case (and I fear it is not a solitary one) to the General Land Office, to prevent the issuing of a patent for the southeast fractional quarter section 34, range 14 east, township 23 north.

In whose name it was entered, I am not sure—either in the name of Evans or Ogden. Any further information which my office affords will be given, with pleasure, at your request.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient and humble servant,

E. G. HOUTS.

THEODORE HUNT, Esq.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 24, 1826.

SIR: In answer to the inquiries contained in your letter of the 21st instant, in relation to the operations under the act of February 17, 1815, for the relief of the inhabitants of the late county of New Madrid, I have to state—

1st. That 515 location certificates have been issued by the recorder of land titles.

2d. That 148 of the certificates issued by the recorder are founded on the relinquishments of town lots and other tracts containing less than 160 acres.

3d. The greatest number of certificates issued in the name of any one person is four, and the quantity called for does not, in any case, exceed 640 acres for one individual.

4th. That 230 patents have been issued, of which number forty have been issued on certificates founded on the relinquishment of town lots or other tracts containing less than 160 acres.

5th. That twenty-two certificates are suspended in this office under the opinion of the Attorney General.

6th. That the whole quantity called for by the location certificates of the recorder is 180,423.56 acres, of which quantity 88,785.22 acres have been patented.

With great respect, your most obedient servant,

GEO. GRAHAM.

Hon. JOHN SCOTT, Committee on Public Lands, House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 26, 1826.

In reply to your letter of the 25th instant, I furnish you with the enclosed statement, showing the cases in which, under the act of February 17, 1815, the recorder has issued more than one certificate of location to persons holding town lots or other tracts containing less than 160 acres.

It may be proper to state that, in issuing certificates under the provisions of the act of February 17, 1815, the recorder issued them in the name of the original confirmee, or his legal representatives. Where the original claim, therefore, was for more than 640 acres, only one certificate issued; where the original claim was for more than 160 acres, and less than 640, a certificate issued for the quantity contained in the tract; and if one confirmee had more than one tract of this description, he received more than one certificate, provided the whole quantity did not exceed six hundred and forty acres. Where the original confirmation was for town lots, or tracts less than 160 acres, the recorder issued as many certificates for 160 acres each, in the name of the confirmee, as he had lots or tracts, not exceeding four certificates. The statement enclosed embraces these last cases, and it is to them only that the opinion of the Attorney General refers.

Although the recorder issued the certificate in the name of the original confirmee, or his legal representatives, he received the relinquishment of the land injured from the persons claiming the same. Many of these relinquishments were made by the same person as the legal representative of their confirmee.

With great respect, your most obedient servant,

GEO. GRAHAM.

Hon. JOHN SCOTT, Committee on Public Lands, House of Representatives.

Statement of the cases in which, under the act of February 17, 1815, the recorder has issued more than one certificate of location to persons holding town lots, or other tracts containing less than 160 acres, viz:

To 11 persons, 4 certificates each	44 certificates.
To 15 persons, 3 certificates each	45 certificates.
To 18 persons, 2 certificates each	36 certificates.
125 certificates.

The opinion of the Attorney General will prevent the patents being issued on 85 of the above cases.

PUBLIC LANDS IN MISSOURI AND ILLINOIS UNFIT FOR CULTIVATION.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 29, 1827.

To the Senate of the United States:

The report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office and accompanying documents, herewith transmitted, are laid before the Senate in compliance with their resolution of the 4th of April last, relating to the public lands of the United States, in the States of Missouri and Illinois, which are unfit for cultivation

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

WASHINGTON, January 29, 1827.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 29, 1827.

SIR: In compliance with a resolution of the Senate, bearing date April 4, 1826, in the following words: "Resolved, That the President be requested to cause a report from the General Land Office to be laid before the Senate at the commencement of the next stated session of Congress, showing, as nearly as can be ascertained from surveys heretofore made, and from other information, the quantities and localities of so much of the public lands of the United States, in the States of Missouri and Illinois, as may be unfit for cultivation on account of being wet and marshy, or subject to inundation from the overflowing of the river, or covered with standing water in ponds or lakes," the Commissioner has the honor to submit to the President a letter from Colonel McRee, the surveyor of the public lands in Missouri and Illinois, marked A, with a copy of a statement accompanying the same, marked B, which contain the information called for, so far as it can be furnished from the surveys.

With great respect, sir, I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

GEO. GRAHAM.

The PRESIDENT of the United States.

A.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, St. Louis, December 31, 1826.

SIR: In compliance with your letter of the 6th of last April, which refers to this office the resolution of the Senate of the United States, requesting the President to cause a report to be laid before it at the commencement of the present session, showing, as nearly as can be ascertained from surveys heretofore made and from other information, "the quantities and localities of so much of the public lands of the United States, in the States of Missouri and Illinois, as may be unfit for cultivation on account of being wet and marshy, or subject to inundation from the overflowing of the rivers, or covered with standing water in ponds or lakes," I have the honor to report:

That the surveys on file in this office do not, except in very few instances, furnish sufficient data to calculate the areas of those portions of the public lands which are unfit for cultivation.

The law prescribing the mode in which the public lands shall be surveyed directs the surveyor to "note in his field book the true situation of all mines, salt licks, salt springs, and mill seats, which shall come within his knowledge; all water-courses over which the lines he runs shall pass; and also the quality of the lands." But it does not require any lines to be run, except such as are boundaries to sections, or fractional sections, or necessary to connect the lines of a private survey with those of the public lands. The practice, under this office, has been regulated accordingly. It is only in a few instances that the meanders of lakes have been taken; the boundaries of swamps, marshes, or inundation tracts, it is believed, have never been surveyed; and their true areas, therefore, cannot be ascertained.

The general instructions issued to the deputy surveyors only require of them to note the distance across any pond, swamp, marsh, or other obstacle, (except a navigable river,) on the line, which may intersect with it, and to state the point of intersection. Ponds, swamps, &c., that are not crossed by any section line are, therefore, not even mentioned in the field notes, or but rarely; and those which are crossed by only one section line can have but one known dimension, and even its position in relation to any other line or side of the tract remains undetermined. The instructions, however, are not always strictly followed, and the intersections with and distances across obstacles are not uniformly given. Lines have, no doubt, been extended, during winter, over surfaces of swamps, marshes, &c., that are unfit for cultivation, and, perhaps, impassable at any other season of the year, but which, in their frozen state, may have escaped the particular observation of the surveyor. A general remark is sometimes made at the end of a line, stating, in substance, that there is a good deal of swampy land upon it, or several ponds, &c.; and it frequently occurs that the field notes of a line give its intersection with an impassable obstacle, or mention when it enters a swamp, marsh, &c., but omit to state at which point the line is regained on the opposite side, in the first instance, or where it leaves the swamp or marsh in the second, and so conversely. These omissions also occur where the swamp, &c., is sufficiently extensive to be traversed by two or more section lines, leaving it without any known dimension, or with only one, from which, evidently, no estimate of the area can be made that would merit confidence.

Only a partial statement could be furnished, therefore, even of the number of tracts, or portions of the public lands heretofore surveyed, as are considered unfit for cultivation; and only a loose estimate of the areas of those portions which have two or more known dimensions. Such information, however, as the public surveys afford is scattered through more than two thousand books of field notes; and the examination of those books, making the necessary extracts from them, and the subsequent calculations, would have occupied nearly the whole force of the office during the past season, to the exclusion of its other duties, and without any certainty, after all, of accomplishing the undertaking. It was therefore conceived most advisable to confine the estimate to such districts of country as might be supposed to have a more immediate relation to the objects contemplated by the Senate.

The "bottom lands," particularly those which border on the principal rivers, naturally drew most attention, as containing, in proportion to their extent of surface, the greatest quantity of wet and inundated lands capable of being reclaimed by drainage or other means, and of being made, at a moderate expense, to unite the advantages of uncommon fertility to those already secured by their position of safe and regular water communication with a market. The examinations were accordingly confined to the surveys of townships and fractional townships binding on the Great Wabash, the Ohio, Mississippi, Illinois, and Missouri rivers, or which embrace any bottom lands lying on either of those streams, (exclusive of the islands,) within the States of Missouri and Illinois.

The abstract enclosed herewith exhibits, in part, the result of these examinations together with estimates founded on the data which they furnish.

Lakes and ponds, swamps, marshes, and wet or inundated tracts, which have no dimensions reported in the field notes, are not included in the abstract; those having one or more known dimensions, exceeding three chains each, are enumerated, and the township specified in which they are respectively situated, accompanied with a statement of the estimated areas of those which have two or more known dimensions.

The whole number of townships amounts to 250, and their aggregate area (roughly estimated from the plats) to 3,913,800 acres; the number of townships which contain ponds, swamps, &c., having two or more dimensions, amount to 181, and contain an estimated aggregated area of 2,977,000 acres, nearly.

In the above-mentioned 250 townships there are 1,096 lakes and ponds, or separate tracts of swamps, marshes, &c., which have one or more known dimensions; and of these there are 332 which have two or more dimensions given, containing an aggregate area of 330,414 acres, nearly, which, compared with the aggregate area of the whole number of townships embraced in the abstract, is in the proportion of one to eleven thirty-five-hundredths, nearly, but compared with the aggregate area of the townships in which they are situated, is in the proportion of one to nine, nearly.

If no probable estimate could be made of the areas of those tracts which have only one known dimension by assuming its position and the figure of each tract, it is also clear that any attempt to infer their areas from the estimated areas of those having two or more dimensions, by assuming the figures of the whole to be similar, would be equally wide of the truth. I have preferred leaving the statement as it stands, which shows that, in addition to the estimated number of acres unfit for cultivation, there are in the 250 townships specified in the abstract 764 lakes and ponds, and separate tracts of wet and inundated land, each less than one mile wide, on the section line by which it is traversed, and probably less than two miles across, in a direction at right angles with the section line.

It is proper to remark that the several tracts of land included in the abstract are not always expressly stated in the field notes to be "unfit for cultivation," but that fact has been taken for granted whenever the description given in other respects made the presumption of it probable, unless the contrary was stated.

The greater part of the bottom lands within this surveying district are more or less liable to inundation from the overflowing of the rivers. What are called "second bottoms" (so frequent on the Ohio, and which are there entirely exempt from inundation) are seldom met with on the Mississippi or its tributaries from the west, or on the streams within the State of Illinois; the third, benches or bottoms, found on the upper Ohio, are, it is believed, peculiar to that river. But the inundation of these river lands, considered as an obstacle to their cultivation, depends on its frequency, the season of the year at which it happens, its depth, and on the exposure of the surface of the ground to the injurious effects of strong currents, which again depends as much on the situation of the tract as on the depth of water which covers it. The casual observations, however, which a surveyor may be enabled to make during a particular season of the year are frequently calculated rather to mislead than to aid his judgment in determining the true character of those lands. Hence the contradictory statements that are sometimes made to this office concerning them; an original survey describing land to be "not fit for cultivation" which is reported to be "first rate" in the resurvey of the tract by a different individual; and hence, also, surveyors have been rendered less careful of noting the circumstance of inundation in ordinary cases, or of expressing an opinion of the fitness or unfitness of such lands for the purpose of cultivation, except where they exhibit striking and unequivocal proofs of extreme inundation, or of almost total exemption from it. It results, therefore, that much of the public lands which are actually unfit for cultivation, in consequence of the overflowing of rivers, are not reported as such to this office, while, no doubt, a good deal has been so described erroneously.

There are two districts of country the surveys of which have not been particularly examined, although both of them contain extensive tracts of swamps and wet or inundated lands. One of these districts is in the northern part of the State of Illinois; the other is near the south boundary of this State. The general surface of the country in both is low and level, and would oppose an insuperable obstacle to the success of partial attempts to reclaim the soil, at the same time that their geographical position is such as cannot, for a long space of time to come, hold out sufficient inducement to more extensive undertakings. The district alluded to in Missouri prevails with little interruption from White river to the Mississippi, extending south to the junction of the two rivers in the Territory of Arkansas. It embraces, notwithstanding its general character, much fine land, and high broken ridges occasionally occur between some of the water-courses which intersect it higher up; but the Castor and St. Francis, Black and White rivers, overflow a great deal of the intermediate country. The surveys in that quarter, however, including several hundred miles of township exteriors, are not yet completed.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. McREE.

GEORGE GRAHAM, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office, Washington City.

[2D SESSION.

APPLICATION OF INDIANA FOR CHANGE IN THE SYSTEM FOR THE SALE OF THE PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 29, 1827.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the legislature of the State of Indiana respectfully represents: That the system adopted by the Congress of the United States for the sale of the public lands is viewed by the legislature, and by their constituents, with the solicitude which its immediate connexion with the prosperity of our State is so highly calculated to inspire.

One great improvement in that system has been effected within a few years by the prohibition of sales upon credit. Another, equally important, in the opinion of the memorialists, to the State and to the nation, yet remains to be accomplished. That is, a judicious graduation of the prices of the public lands with reference to their value. Where many years have elapsed since a public sale, the first choice of the lands in that district are presumed to be purchased; and, as the minimum price under the present system is the same everywhere, without regard to quality, the persons wishing to purchase will, of course, turn their attention almost entirely to the public lands last offered for sale. The consequence is, the population becomes scattered over a wide extent, and many parts of the State where the public lands have been long in market receive, comparatively, no increase of inhabitants from the tide of emigration.

This effect of the present system for the sale of the United States land is extremely injurious to our State. The progress of its population and improvement is impeded, and the only source of its revenue is not permitted to increase as it otherwise would. It is also injurious to the nation. Large districts of the public lands have long remained unsold and exposed to the destruction of timber, and must long continue to remain so, if the minimum price of every description of these lands, from the best to the worst, continues to be the same.

Whilst the memorialists are confident that a very considerable reduction of the minimum price of the public lands which, for many years, have remained unsold, will greatly tend to the promotion of the general welfare, they are aware of the importance of not reducing it so low as to give rise to extensive individual monopolies. A safe and reasonable reduction of the minimum price, to be graduated by the time the lands have remained in the market unsold, is, in the opinion of the memorialists, called for by the particular situation of the country, and by the general policy of an enlightened and liberal government. Such a reduction of price would immediately direct the attention of purchasers to extensive tracts of public lands long since offered for sale, which are now unnoticed and unknown, and would enable many a poor but honest and industrious man to obtain a comfortable home.

The memorialists, confidently believing that this change in the system for the sale of the United States land would be productive of much benefit to the State and to the nation, respectfully submit the subject to the consideration of Congress.

[2D SESSION.]

APPLICATION OF ILLINOIS TO BE ALLOWED TO SELL THE LANDS RESERVED FOR SALINES
IN THAT STATE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 30, 1827.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the general assembly of the State of Illinois respectfully represents: That there is imposed by the United States a restriction on this State that prevents the State from selling any part of the lands reserved for the use of salines in this State, although some of those reserved lands are entirely useless for the purpose of manufacturing salt. It is found, by experience, that much of said land is not, nor will it be hereafter, used for the original object of the donation. There is discovered in the neighborhood of the Ohio saline inexhaustible quantities of stonecoal, which will serve in place of wood in the making of salt; and, likewise, there has recently been discovered at the Vermilion saline stonecoal in great quantities, so that the woodland reserved for the use of the saline will likewise become useless in the manufactory of salt. Some part of the land reserved for the use of the Ohio saline is at so remote a distance from said saline that it is useless for the purpose of the original donation; and, as this reserved land cannot be improved nor cultivated, the farmers are prevented from settling thereon, so that the necessary provisions for said works are thereby more difficult to be procured; therefore, as some part of the lands reserved for the use of those salines has become useless for the benevolent object of the original donation, your memorialists respectfully request that the consent of the United States may be given this State to enable her to sell some part of said reserved lands which may be at the greatest distance from said salines, and such other portions of the land lying on the Saline creek for the erection of water-works as will not interfere with the manufacture of salt, and as may be necessary to improve the navigation of said creek for the purpose of internal improvements of the country, and for the erection of a penitentiary. The improvement of the navigation of the Saline creek is necessary to advance the real interest of the people in relation to the Ohio saline. Salt, by some improvement on said creek, may be the easier conveyed away from said works to the Ohio river. Some part of the proceeds of the sale of said lands ought, in justice to that part of the country, be applied to improve the navigation of the Great and Little Wabash rivers; and, likewise, some of the money raised from the sale of said lands ought to be applied to the humane and benevolent purpose of erecting a penitentiary.

Therefore your memorialists pray your honorable body to pass a law enabling this State to sell thirty thousand acres of the land reserved for the Ohio saline, and ten thousand acres of the Vermilion saline, reserved for the purpose of improving the navigation of the Saline creek and Great and Little Wabash rivers, and for a penitentiary, and for other internal improvements, the people of the State of Illinois, by their representatives in general assembly convened, hereby giving their full and free assent thereto.

LAND CLAIM IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 30, 1827.

Mr. BUCKNER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the memorial of J. H. Thomas, of St. Martin, in the State of Louisiana, reported:

The memorialist states that he is the owner of twelve hundred arpents of land, which is described in the report of the United States commissioners No. 1,114, a copy of which he refers to; which report was unfavorable to his claim. Considering that injustice had been done to him, he prays that the claim may be confirmed by Congress. He attempts to derive his claim from Antoine Patin, in whose name it was entered with the commissioner for confirmation, at Opelousas, in said State. Pierre Moreau swears that, from the year 1789 to 1803 or 1804, the land was occupied as a vachere by the said Patin, and superintended by deponent, who united his stock with Patin's; that several of Patin's slaves were inhabiting and cultivating it until 1803 or 1804. He says that he recollects to have seen an order of survey for the land signed by Miro, in favor of said Patin, but which he has reason to believe was lost. Another witness also swore that he resided on the land for seven or eight years preceding April, 1813, by Patin's permission; and that about seventeen or eighteen years previous to his occupancy thereof the negroes of the claimant, Patin, occupied it as a vachere; and that from the marks of culture when he took possession of it, it must have been previously cultivated. The same facts are proven by other witnesses. Patin, who is proven to be a man of great respectability, swears that about fifty years since the deponent applied to the Spanish government, through the then commandant, for a tract of land at Attakapas, which is described in No. 1,114 of the claims; upon which reports were made to Congress by the commissioners of the land office at Opelousas, which tract is therein designated as entry No. 78, class No. 9. He states that the said commandant drew the petition for him, and recommended it to his government in his capacity of commandant. He says that he obtained an order of survey upon it signed by Miro, then governor of Louisiana, directing a surveyor to put him in possession of it; that he then regularly took possession of the land so conceded to him, and that he used it as a vachere for many years previous to the change of government by which the country passed to the United States. He states that the said concession has been lost; that he has no interest whatever in or to said land, having long since sold it; and that the memorialist is now the true owner.

The committee, from the best information which they have been enabled to obtain concerning the usages of the Spanish government, are not of opinion that the occupancy of land as pasture ground, although a part of the tract may have been cultivated, formed the foundation of a valid title to the occupant. Such claims, under the act of Congress, ought not, they think, to be confirmed. Under the act alluded to the claimant should himself have been settled on the land and cultivating it. Were it otherwise, a man might, by settling his negroes and placing parts of his stock on different tracts, have confirmed to him as many different tracts as he had different slaves. If Patin had never obtained any other tract from the Spanish government it might present a different question; but he does not say that such was the fact. The committee are therefore of opinion that the claim ought not to be confirmed.

APPLICATION OF MISSOURI FOR AUTHORITY TO LOCATE CERTAIN SCHOOL LANDS IN SECTIONS OR PARTS OF SECTIONS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 5, 1827.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The general assembly of the State of Missouri respectfully represent: That the two townships of land granted to the Territory of Missouri by the act of Congress of February 17, 1818, for the endowment of a seminary of learning, and the township set apart for the same purpose by the act of Congress and the ordinance admitting the State of Missouri into the Union, have not yet been selected; and that this general assembly believes that entire townships of land cannot now be obtained without locating them in a remote part of the State. The general assembly therefore prays that an act may be passed authorizing the governor of this State to provide for the selection of all lands thus granted in sections or parts of sections, as may be deemed most advisable.

APPLICATION OF MISSOURI FOR THE RIGHT OF PRE-EMPTION TO THE LANDS ADJACENT TO CERTAIN IRON WORKS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 5, 1827.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the general assembly of the State of Missouri, would represent to your bodies: That a certain Samuel Massey and Thomas James have commenced an establishment for the manufacture of iron on the waters of the Merrimac, in section one, township thirty-seven north, in range six west of the fifth principal meridian, within this State; that, to the successful prosecution of this manufacture, an abundance of timber is indispensable, and to obtain the requisite quantity of timber necessary, to own an extensive tract of country adjacent to this section; that, in the vicinity thereof, the timber is confined to the water-courses, and hence arises the necessity of an increased extent of proprietorship over the land; that, under the proclamation of the President of the United States, reservations from sale in the vicinity of the purchase made by the said Samuel Massey and Thomas James were made, whereby they were precluded from entering the necessary quantity of land; that the said Samuel Massey and Thomas James have begun to improve the tract of land purchased by them, and to erect their furnace and mills for the manufacture of iron; that if the land reserved, and what is adjacent, should now be brought into market, a competition the most unfavorable to the said Massey and James would issue. It would impose upon them the necessity of paying a most extravagant price therefor, or of making a sacrifice of what they have already expended, and thus be a serious disappointment and loss to the citizens of this State.

Wherefore, your memorialists would request that a law be passed giving to the said Samuel Massey and Thomas James the pre-emption right, at the present minimum price, in and to all the land included within the space of two miles on each and every side of the section one, in township thirty-seven north, in range six west of the fifth principal meridian, to be in force for and during the space of two years from its passage: Provided always, That no right of pre-emption created and secured by the act of Congress of April 12, 1814, shall be prejudiced thereby; and the privilege granted by the law shall not extend to any quarter sections whereon there shall be an improvement or settlement at the date of the entry heretofore made by the said Samuel Massey and Thomas James.

APPLICATION OF ALABAMA FOR A CHANGE IN THE SYSTEM FOR THE SALE OF THE PUBLIC LANDS, AND TO PROVIDE FOR THE FINAL SETTLEMENT OF LAND CLAIMS IN THAT STATE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 8, 1827.

REPORT and RESOLUTIONS in relation to the system for the disposal of the public lands, and to the unsettled land claims in this State.

The special committee to whom was referred so much of the governor's message as relates to the system for the disposal of the public lands have had that subject under their consideration, and have instructed me to report the following joint resolutions:

1. Resolved, That this general assembly do highly approve of the plan proposed by the Hon. Mr. Benton, of Missouri, for the future disposal of the public domain, as contained in a bill introduced and advocated by him in the Senate of the United States during the last session of Congress, providing for the future sale of the public lands by entry, at certain fixed and graduated prices, in exclusion of the present mode by auction, and for the ultimate disposal of such as may remain unsold for a certain period by donations to actual settlers, reserving to the actual settler or occupant, in all cases, the right of pre-emption, for a limited time, of a quantity not exceeding one entire section.

2. Resolved, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives requested, to use their utmost endeavors to procure the passage of a law containing the foregoing or similar provisions; and also of a law providing for the final adjustment, upon equitable principles, of the unsettled land claims in this State.

3. Resolved, That a copy of the foregoing resolutions be transmitted by the governor to each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

19TH CONGRESS.]No. 571.[2D SESSION.

APPLICATION OF ALABAMA FOR A DONATION OF LAND TO THE LAFAYETTE ACADEMY IN THAT STATE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 8, 1827.

MEMORIAL to the Congress of the United States on the subject of a donation to the trustees of Lafayette Academy in the village of Lagrange.

The memorial of the legislature of the State of Alabama in general assembly convened respectfully represents: That at the last session of the legislature of this State a female academy was incorporated in the village of Lagrange, in the county of Franklin; that the citizens of said village, at their own expense, erected a handsome building, of small dimensions, for the reception of students of both sexes; that, although it has scarcely been in operation twelve months, it contains at present between eighty and ninety students, and, in a short time, there is not the least doubt, if suitable buildings were erected, the number would be increased to one hundred.

The expense of erecting suitable buildings and obtaining the necessary apparatus for the use of said school is greater than the citizens of said village can in justice to themselves incur. We would remark to your honorable body that the situation of that village is probably better calculated for at least a primary seminary of learning than any other point within the limits of our State, being situated on a beautiful and elevated point of the Cumberland mountain, extending itself into the valley of the Tennessee river, on which nature has exerted her skill to render as well one of the most delightful and romantic situations imaginable, as the seat of health. From the summit of the point, and some miles around, gush a variety of medical springs, possessing different medical qualities, as well as springs of the purest and sweetest water. It is adjoining the most beautiful part of the valley of the Tennessee river, and in the neighborhood of some of the most flourishing towns in said valley. Owing to its having been selected as a retreat from the diseases incident to our climate, the society is not surpassed by that of any community whatever. As education should be peculiarly cherished by governments like ours, and as our government has it fully in her power to endow an indefinite number of primary schools, without the least injury to said government, by making donations of land, or permitting the trustees of different institutions to enter a certain quantity of land at the minimum price, we would therefore respectfully submit to the consideration of your honorable body the propriety of making a donation to the trustees of the said institution of the southeast quarter of section thirty-four, township four, range ten west, in the Huntsville land district, which lies adjoining said village, for the purpose of erecting thereon the necessary buildings for the use of said school; which quarter section is extremely sterile, and of no value except for the purpose aforesaid. We would also respectfully submit to your honorable body the propriety of making a further donation, or permitting the trustees of said institution to enter, at the minimum price, the following designated lands, which lie adjoining said village: The northeast quarter of the aforesaid section, mostly mountainous; also the east half of the southeast quarter of section twenty-seven, and the east half of the northeast quarter of said section twenty-seven, all lying in the aforesaid township and range. Also any other number of quarter sections of land lying in Franklin county, not exceeding fifteen, which has been sold and relinquished, on which there is no occupant.

Resolved, therefore, by the senate and house of representatives of the State of Alabama in general assembly convened, That our senators be, and they are hereby, instructed, and our representatives requested, to use their best endeavors to procure the passage of a law embracing the object of the foregoing memorial.

And be it further resolved, That the governor be, and he is hereby, required to forward one copy of the foregoing memorial and resolution to each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

SAMUEL W. OLIVER, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Approved January 13, 1827.

JOHN MURPHY.

SECRETARY OF STATE'S OFFICE, Tuscaloosa, January 16, 1827.

I do certify the foregoing to be a correct copy of the original roll on file in this office.

No. 572.

[2D SESSION.]

FROM THE SURVEYOR GENERAL SOUTH OF TENNESSEE, RELATIVE TO THE DUTIES OF THE PRINCIPAL DEPUTY SURVEYOR OF THE DISTRICT EAST OF THE ISLAND OF NEW ORLEANS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 8, 1827.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, Washington, Miss., January 12, 1827.

DEAR SIR: I have been so constantly pressed with the other indispensable duties of this office as not to have been able to reply in a suitable manner to your polite letter of the 12th of September last, as I have been constantly and anxiously desirous of doing. Having observed, however, in the National Intelligencer of the 19th ultimo, received this morning, the resolution submitted by you on the preceding day in the House of Representatives, I beg leave to answer, in part and in haste, the queries proposed in your letter referred to above.

In doing this I shall be under the necessity of referring you to the correspondence generally between this office and the General Land Office; from which it will appear that, in consequence of instructions from the General Land Office, I had been compelled, in the latter part of the year 1824, to remove from office the principal deputy surveyor of the land district east of the island of New Orleans, the part of the country to which your resolution is supposed to refer, and that, from that time up to within a couple of months past, everything appertaining to those districts, such as field notes, maps, records, &c., was withheld from the use of the government by Mr. Silas Dinsmore, the ex-principal deputy. This, of necessity, although it did not altogether stop, very much retarded the surveying business, and gave a perfect check to the preparation of township maps for the use of the government, and has, to my great regret and mortification, continued up to this moment to keep honest deputy surveyors out of their hard-earned compensations.—(See the Commissioner's instructions to this office of September 8, 1823, and of April 1, 1824.) I take leave to enclose to you a list, marked A, of the articles lately delivered to the present deputy surveyor of those districts by Mr. Dinsmore's agent. The very disordered state in which the documents were found may be inferred from the disordered manner of representing them on the list, where they appear to have been inserted just as they were found.

In illustration of the same subject, I enclose transcripts of several letters and extracts from letters which have recently passed between myself and Mr. James P. Turner, the present principal deputy surveyor of the districts east of the island of New Orleans, marked B; and, besides the general reference I have made to the correspondence between this and the General Land Office, I beg leave to refer particularly to the following letters, and to those to which they refer: 1824, October 25 and 27; November 8, 13, 14, and 15; December 1, 17, 24, and 31; 1825, January 5 and 21, and February 1; 1826, June 30.

As to the general difficulties of this office, they may be traced almost altogether to defects in the laws. In the first place, by the second section of the act of May 18, 1796, which applies to this office, the books of maps of the surveys of public lands are required to be kept in the surveyor's office for public inspection. This must be wrong. The surveyor's office should be considered as the workshop where the lands are to be prepared for sale, and where the work ought to be conducted with doors closed to all but the deputy surveyors and the land officers. Mathematical calculations actually require some thought, which, under the existing laws, is constantly interrupted by persons calling for information which ought to be obtained at the registers' offices only. In the surveyors' offices the maps, descriptions, and every other thing appertaining to the public lands, ought and are intended to be prepared in triplicates: one set for the register's office, one for the General Land Office, and the third to be retained on file; and whenever the maps and descriptions of a township have been thus prepared and distributed, the surveyors' offices should have nothing more to do with them. The registers of land offices, who are the public brokers for the sale of lands, and who ought to be good surveyors, should be the proper persons to furnish plats to claimants, for which they should be allowed to charge fees.

This office is daily harassed for plats of lands which have been surveyed, and perhaps plats furnished twenty years ago; and if we were to complain, or refuse to stop other business, and promptly furnish them, a complaint would be immediately transmitted to the General Land Office, from which I should be gravely called upon to defend myself. Yet, after more than two years passed in this way, I remain uninformed of the views of the government upon the subject, although I have earnestly and repeatedly inquired whether or not every person who calls for a plat, either of his own or of his neighbor's land, is entitled to receive it. In the meanwhile, a large proportion of the time of the office is consumed in this way. On this subject permit me to refer you to my letters to the General Land Office of December 8, 16, and 29, 1824, and of January 5, 1825.

But this is not the worst aspect of which the subject is susceptible. Owing to the want of sufficient assistance in this office, the necessary plats of private claims in the old Natchez settlement, although pretended to be surveyed twenty years ago, never were furnished to the proper officers. Hence calls for plats, and for subdivisions of fractional sections for relinquishment, are incessantly made upon this office, while the register has scarcely any duties to perform.

But what is still worse, and which has been repeatedly demonstrated to the Commissioner—the want of proper assistance rendered it necessary originally to receive and pay for surveying, without examination, afterwards found either not to have been executed at all, or so incorrectly executed as to be of no kind of use to the office.—(See my letter to the Commissioner of June 30, 1826, and the accompanying papers; as, also, of October 29, November 24, and December 4 and 8, last past, and of the 3d and 5th instant.)

I have already shown, partly by references to my correspondence with the General Land Office, that the preparations of the township maps of the districts formerly under the superintendence of Mr. Silas Dinsmore had been entirely stopped by his detention for about two years of the field notes, maps, records, &c., of his late office. This was not, however, the whole difficulty. Lands cannot be prepared for sale until the surveys and the township maps of such lands are completed and returned to the General Land Office. Nor can this last be done until such reasonable time may have been had, after all the private claims shall have been ascertained, adjusted, and, together with all the public lands in the same townships, surveyed, as, with the assistance allowed in the principal deputy surveyor's office,* may enable him to prepare and return those township maps.

Other difficulties in the way of surveying private claims in the district north of Red river, and which, of course, apply to most of Louisiana, were fully explained and exemplified in a letter from me to the Commissioner of the General Land Office of March 10, 1826, and some of them adverted to in one of May 5, 1825, and again, recently, in a letter from me to the Commissioner of the 3d and 5th instant. They relate to imperfect surveying of private claims, the expenses of which have long since been paid by the government, and to the difficulty of obtaining the copies of title papers to be put into the hands of deputies, to enable them to survey private claims. As respects the obtaining of these papers, I have heretofore represented to the government, as the letters referred to will show, that I have no means of obtaining them but by purchase at my own private expense. In this representation there is nothing fictitious. The obstruction to the surveying business from this cause is so great, and otherwise insurmountable, that nothing but an act of Congress is likely to effectually remove it. I scarcely need say more on this subject, in addition to the reference I have made to letters, than refer you to the acts of Congress of April 12 and 18, 1814, the reading of which always reminds one of the figure of rendering darkness visible.

I shall, in haste, conclude this letter by a kind of synopsis of what I have attempted to show:

1. The want of proper assistance in this office has always been such as, of necessity, to compel the omission of its most important duties. Until I came into it, plans were formed, and, as far as possible, reduced to practice, to compel the deputy surveyors to return their work in such a state as to relieve the clerks of most of the labor strictly belonging to the duties of the office; but which plans had then recently been decided by the Attorney General of the United States to be contrary to law.

2. That decision, together with the minute subdivisions of the public lands in preparing them for sale in conformity with the act of April 24, 1820, has increased the original duties of this office, which, as I have stated above, have been heretofore for the most part omitted, at least tenfold, and now, therefore, are such as to require one clerk for each deputy surveyor employed in this State, and in the district north of Red river in Louisiana. The same necessity for additional assistance exists in a considerable degree in the offices of the principal deputy surveyors.

3. When I took charge of this office, in the summer of 1824, the surveying business had been progressing in this State twenty-one years, and in Louisiana eighteen years; and yet there had not then been one single township map containing private confirmed claims in Louisiana returned to the General Land Office in a fit state for the issuing of patents, (see the Commissioner's letter of December 31, 1823, to my immediate predecessor, Mr. Wailes;) and all the township maps of a similar description, that is, containing private claims belonging to this State, had been returned, and were then here, for, I believe, a third time, for correction. And all this, permit me to repeat, had been chiefly owing to the defects in, and to the inapplicability of, the land laws to the purposes for which they purport to have been made; and which laws cannot now be read by any indifferent person acquainted with those facts with anything like a respectful gravity of muscle.

4. As most of the genuine private claims in Louisiana have been long since surveyed, the surveying expenses paid by the government, and the plats, many of them calculated geometrically and unapproved, lying in this office, (see my letter to the Commissioner of March 10, 1826,) without any reference to the townships in which they are situated, the labor remaining to be performed, with the exception of what relates to the few township maps returned by myself, will be, if not greater, at least equal to what it would be if the business were but now commencing in that State. This is also owing to defects in the laws to the original mal-organization of the surveying business, and to the injudicious execution of the instructions from the treasury in the first instance, occasioning the private claims, even, in some cases, previous to their being confirmed, to be surveyed promiscuously all over the State, before the country had been laid off into townships; and afterwards causing the townships to be laid off, and, in some instances, subdivided into regular square sections, without any regard to or notice being taken of their connexions with the claim lines.

* See note at the end of this letter.

5. The inutility of the offices of the principal deputy surveyors upon the existing plan is so glaringly palpable as scarcely to require any additional remark upon the subject. They are allowed salaries which are believed to be barely sufficient to pay board and office rent. It is true that they are allowed fees also for examining and recording; but, as these fees are not payable until after the recording is actually done, and as it would require the assistance of several clerks in each of the principal deputies' offices, as will be made apparent in the subjoined note, to perform the other duties of those offices exclusive of the recording, those fees are much worse than being merely nominal. They are calculated to operate with a force proportionable to their magnitude, as a constant temptation to a dereliction or violation of duty. Thus, if they examine an incorrect survey and reject it, they, of course, do not record it, and therefore can get no fees; while for examining, passing, and recording the same incorrect survey, they are entitled to fees. That this constant temptation offered to the principal deputy surveyors by the law itself should by degrees and almost insensibly impair their integrity, would be no more surprising than that the hardest marble will, as is well known, yield to the incessant attrition of mere drops of water. One of them has been known to neglect his other duties, and to employ himself agreeably to law, too, in locating and surveying in person, as has been verbally, though not officially, stated to me, and for high fees, late confirmed private claims; and another, in making plats for individuals while the preparation of the township maps of the same lands have been entirely neglected. Yet the defects in the laws place the government entirely at the mercy of this class of officers, as they can neither resign nor be removed, without giving great embarrassment to this office, and through it to the government; which, in addition to the causes I have mentioned, is greatly increased by the want of an allowance for office rent. A recent occurrence of this kind has given rise to the following question, which I proposed to the Commissioner of the General Land Office in a letter dated the 5th instant:

"If a principal deputy surveyor resign, and I should be unable to persuade any fit person to relieve him, what must be done with the public documents in his possession, and who pays the office rent during the vacancy?"

6. For another difficulty arising from the perfect worthlessness to the incumbent of the office of a principal deputy surveyor, I beg leave to refer you to the last extract in the enclosed paper, marked B, and to remark that, if my observations of nearly half a century upon persons in and out of office have not deceived me, the integrity of most men is the better of being propped; and the best prop for the integrity of an office, where a prop is at all wanted, is to make the office worth the holding; for should it fail to have the desired effect in this way, it will enable the government to fill vacancies with honest men. The situations both of principal and other deputy surveyors in the present stage of the surveying business under my superintendence and under the existing laws are altogether unworthy the acceptance of men properly qualified for them. Under those palpable circumstances, how can the head of this office get on with business.—(See my letter to the honorable Mr. Cook, and those to which it refers, a copy of which was enclosed to the Commissioner with my letter of June 30, 1826.)

7. For a considerable portion of the contracts lately taken for surveying, the contractors were induced to enter into them from the hope of an augmentation of the price of surveying, without which, if they do their duty faithfully, they will be utterly ruined.

I enclose you the copy of a letter dated October 11, 1826, to Gales & Seaton, the receipt of which has not yet been acknowledged. It presents, somewhat briefly, some of the difficulties of this office, which I was desirous of presenting to Congress through the medium of the National Intelligencer, in which, however, I have failed.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. DAVIS, Surveyor, &c.

Hon. WILLIAM HAILE, of the House of Representatives, Washington City.

Note referred to.

One man, the principal deputy himself, who is allowed no clerk, to about 300 townships, within the districts east of the island of New Orleans, including a part of Alabama. Those townships, or such of them as contain either private confirmed claims, or traverses of navigable streams or lakes, will require at least one month each in the preparation. Thus the surveys of the private claims have first to be examined as to their accuracy, and their areas calculated; the rough township map has then to be made, and the private claims carefully adjusted to the lines of the public surveys interspersed among them; the length of all the lines of the fractional sections, much of which to be obtained no doubt by calculation, to be marked on them, their areas calculated, and afterwards subdivided for sale, in conformity with the provisions of the act of April 24, 1820; three neat maps and descriptions are then to be made and sent off—one set to the register; another, I should suppose, to this office; and a third to the General Land Office; and lastly, the whole has to be recorded. For I hold it to be an unquestionable principle, that any recording which may have been done of a township survey, in anticipation of the confirmations, surveys, and returns of the private claims contained in it, has not only been a waste of time and of labor, but the money paid for such premature recording has been a fraud upon the government. On this subject I beg leave to refer you particularly to a letter from me to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, of May 5, 1825, enclosing a copy of my instructions to Silas Dinsmore's successor in office.

I find I have not time to copy the papers referred to in this letter, marked A and B. They will be sent in a few days to the General Land Office, with a request that they shall, with other papers referred to, be submitted to the perusal of the honorable Mr. Haile.

G. DAVIS.

19TH CONGRESS.No. 573.[2D SESSION.]

SALE OF SALINES IN ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 10, 1827.

Mr. Scott, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the memorial (see No. 563) of the legislature of the State of Illinois, praying that the State may be allowed to sell and convey certain portions of the land reserved for the use of salt springs, and granted to that State, reported:

That as early as May 18, 1796, when Congress were legislating in reference to the sale of the public lands in the northwestern territory, provisions were made by law for the reservation from sale of all salt springs, together with the section of land on which such spring was situated, and to be retained for the future disposal of the United States. After the State of Ohio was taken from the Northwest Territory and admitted into the Union in 1802, Congress again legislated on the same subject. By the act of Congress of March 26, 1804, three land offices were established in what was then called the Indiana Territory—one at Detroit, one at Vincennes, and one at Kaskaskia. By the sixth section of this law all the salt springs within the Indiana Territory were reserved from sale, and the principle of reservation was extended to as many contiguous sections for the support of each salt spring as should be deemed necessary by the President of the United States, and to be retained for the future disposal of Congress. On February 21, 1812, a law was passed dividing the Kaskaskia land district, and creating out of the same the district of Shawneetown, within the limits of which last district is situated what is called the Wabash or Ohio saline. By this law of 1812 the President was authorized to reserve from sale, for the use and support of this saline, a tract of land of not less than six miles square. It appears to the satisfaction of the committee, by documents from the General Land Office, that, under the authority of the act of 1812, there was set apart and reserved from sale, in the year 1816, ninety-six thousand seven hundred and fifty-six acres and seventy-nine hundredths (96,756.79) of land for the use and support of this particular saline. In the act of Congress of April 18, 1818, by which the people of Illinois were authorized to form a constitution and State government, it is provided that "all salt springs within such State, and the lands reserved for the use of the same, shall be granted to the said State for the use of the said State, and the same to be used under such terms and conditions and regulations as the legislature of said State shall direct: Provided, That the legislature shall never sell nor lease the same for a longer period than ten years at any one time." Under this grant the State of Illinois claims all the salt springs in the State, together with all the lands which have been reserved for their use and support before her admission into the Union, and also all the lands which have been reserved for the use and support of salines within the State since her admission into the Union, or which may be hereafter reserved. The amount of land claimed by the State of Illinois at this time is two hundred and six thousand eight hundred and fifty-six acres and thirty-three hundredths, (206,856.33,) of which quantity it appears to the committee that only 181,256.33 acres were reserved and set apart for the use and support of salines before the passage of the act of April 18, 1818, on the admission of that State into the Union. The committee are not prepared to decide whether all the reservations made by the government in the State of Illinois for saline purposes since the admission of the State into the Union, or which shall be made from time to time as salines are discovered and reservations made, pass by the grant, or vest in the State of Illinois, by virtue of the provisions of the act of April 18, 1818. The construction of the act of 1818, and the extent of the grant made by it, whether prospective or not, may be a question for judicial investigation. The committee will only say, on this branch of the subject, that, if Congress intended to extend the provisions of the act of 1818, not only to the reservations then made, but prospectively to all reservations that should thereafter be made for the use and support of salines in Illinois, they have manifested a spirit of liberality in relation to Illinois not manifested in relation to any other State, and have vested in another branch of the government a discretionary power to give to the State of Illinois millions of acres of lands under the pretext that they are necessary for the use and support of salines within the State. The committee have looked for analogous cases in the acts of April 30, 1802, April 19, 1816, and the act of March 6, 1820, authorizing the people of Ohio, Indiana, and Missouri to form constitutions and State governments, and providing for their admission into the Union as States. In all those acts of Congress referred to, the committee find the grants made are specific, either as to the number of salines granted, and the land that shall be granted for the use and support of each, or by limiting the whole quantity of land that should, in any event, be given to the State. The case of Illinois is different from all others, being indefinite both in time and quantity. So far as regards the reservations of land for the use and support of salines in the district of Shawneetown, it appears to the committee they were made in 1816, before the admission of the State of Illinois into the Union, and the committee have no doubt vested in the State by the act of April 18, 1818. The State of Ohio was authorized by the act of Congress of December 28, 1824, to sell the whole of the salines and reserved lands granted to her by the act of April 30, 1802. The State of Illinois asks to be permitted to sell thirty thousand acres, (30,000,) being a part of the 96,756.99 of the lands reserved in 1816 for the use and support of what is called the Ohio or Wabash saline reservation, and to apply the proceeds to the erection of a penitentiary and objects of internal improvement. The committee see no reason why the same privilege which was granted to the State of Ohio should not be accorded to the State of Illinois, so far as the title to the lands prayed to be disposed of is clear of doubt, leaving the question in relation to the Vermilion saline, and lands reserved for the use of the same, for future investigation. The committee therefore report a bill.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the general assembly of the State of Illinois respectfully represents: That there is imposed by the United States a restriction on this State that prevents the State from selling any part of the land reserved for the use of salines in this State, although some of these reserved lands are entirely useless for the purpose of manufacturing salt. It is found by experience that much of said land is not, nor will it be hereafter, used for the original object of the donation. There is discovered in the neighborhood of the Ohio saline inexhaustible quantities of stonecoal, which will serve in the place of wood in the making of salt; and, likewise, there has recently been discovered at the Vermilion saline stonecoal in great quantities, so that the woodland reserved for the use of that saline will likewise become useless in the manufacture of salt. Some part of the land reserved for the use of the Ohio saline is at so remote a distance from said saline that it is useless for the original donation. And, as the reserved land cannot be improved or cultivated, the farmers are prevented from settling thereon, so that the necessary provisions for said works are thereby more difficult to be procured. Therefore, as some part of the lands reserved for the use of those salines has become useless for the benevolent object of the original donation, your memorialists respectfully request that the consent of the United States may be given this State to enable her to sell some part of said reserved land which may be at the greatest distance from said salines, and such other portions of the lands lying on the Saline creek, for the erection of water-works, as will not interfere with the manufacture of salt, and as may be necessary to improve the navigation of said creek for the purpose of internal improvements of the country, and for the erection of a penitentiary.

The improvement of the navigation of the Saline creek is necessary to advance the real interests of the people in relation to the Ohio saline. Salt, by some improvement on said creek, may be the easier conveyed away from said works to the Ohio river. Some part of the proceeds of the sale of said lands ought, in justice to that part of the country, to be applied to improve the navigation of the Great and Little Wabash rivers; and, likewise, some of the money raised from the sale of the said lands ought to be applied to the humane and benevolent purpose of erecting a penitentiary.

Therefore your memorialists pray your honorable bodies to pass a law enabling this State to sell thirty thousand acres of land reserved for the Ohio saline, and ten thousand acres of the Vermilion saline reserve, for the purpose of improving the navigation of the Saline creek and the Great and Little Wabash rivers, and for a penitentiary, and for other internal improvements, the people of the State of Illinois, by their representatives in general assembly convened, hereby giving their full and free assent thereto.

J. MCLEAN, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

WILLIAM KINNEY, Speaker of the Senate.

VANDALIA, Illinois, Secretary's Office, January 6, 1827.

I, George Forquer, secretary of state of the State of Illinois, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the original memorial enrolled in my office.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the said State of Illinois, at Vandalia, January 6, 1827.

GEORGE FORQUER.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, General Land Office, February 1, 1827.

SIR: The accompanying statement will show, agreeably to the request of your letter of the 31st ultimo, the amount of reservations for salines in the Territory of Illinois to have been 177,224.45 acres in the district of Shawneetown, as reported by Thomas Sloo, esq., the register of the land office, November 1, 1816.

In relation to your inquiry as to the selections for salines on the Vermilion river, in the State of Illinois, I have to advise you that forty sections have been selected for that object.

Paper marked A is a letter from Josiah Meigs, esq., to the President of the United States, suggesting the reservation of certain lands, situate in the Palestine district, strongly indicative of saline properties. On this letter is endorsed the approval by Mr. Monroe of the proposed reservation.

Paper marked B is a copy of the letter from the register of the land office at Palestine, dated November 8, 1822, containing the designation of the selections alluded to in the foregoing, on which is written a copy of the approval by Mr. Adams.

Paper marked C is a copy of a letter to Mr. Coles, governor of Illinois, dated March 30, 1825, transmitting a certificate of the lands reserved for the salines on Vermilion river.

Paper marked D is a copy of the certificate of reservations alluded to in the foregoing.

Herewith are transmitted a general plat of the reservations for salt springs in the district of Shawneetown, and a particular plat of the reservations for the Wabash saline.

I have to observe that the register of the land office at Shawneetown has erroneously sold some of the tracts designated to be reserved in his report of November, 1816, before referred to; but, as it would occasion too much delay to suffer this answer to await the result of an investigation as to the particular sections and parts of sections so erroneously sold, the quantity is not now given.

I will thank you to have the goodness to return the two plats herewith transmitted when your purpose is answered.

I am, with great respect, sir, your obedient servant,

GEORGE GRAHAM.

HON. DANIEL P. COOK, House of Representatives.

A.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, General Land Office, August 8, 1822.

SIR: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the propriety of reserving from sale, for the use of the State of Illinois, certain lands, situate in the district of lands offered for sale at Palestine, in that State, which are strongly indicative of saline properties. At the suggestion of Governor Bond, the Secretary of the Treasury directed an examination to be made of the lands on Vermilion creek, in the district of Palestine, by Thomas Cox, register of the land office at Vandalia, for the purpose of ascertaining the quality and quantity of the salines stated to exist in that section of country. A copy of the instructions to Mr. Cox, and of his report, are herewith transmitted, together with a copy of a letter from the register of the land office at Palestine, suggesting the propriety of making the reserves prior to the public sales in that section of the district, which will take place in November next. At the period when Mr. Cox made his report, the lands in that part of the district where the salt springs are situate were not surveyed, consequently they could not then be designated sectionally. Should you think proper to authorize a reservation to the extent suggested by Mr. Cox—i. e., “for two miles on each side of Vermilion creek, about ten miles in length, and extending six miles below Blackman’s wells”—the register will be instructed to designate the reservation by section, township, and range, as the lands have since been surveyed.

Accept the assurances of my greatest respect,

JOSIAH MEIGS.

The PRESIDENT of the United States.

The reservation proposed is approved.

JAMES MONROE.

REGISTER'S OFFICE, Palestine, Illinois, November 8, 1822.

SIR: Agreeable to instructions from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, bearing date August 12, 1822, by which I was ordered to reserve from sale forty sections of land lying on the Big Vermilion river, including the salines on said river, I was directed to make the reservation four miles in breadth and ten miles in length, making the river, as near as possible, the centre. I discovered that the saline was within a half a mile of the forks of the river. As my instructions did not direct on which branch of the river, to make the reserve, I thought it advisable to go to the salines and examine both branches of the river and ascertain on which of the two branches it would be the most advisable to make the reserve. My instructions were to run six miles below and four miles above Blackman's wells. No doubt that Mr. Cox (when he recommended the reserve to be made in the manner pointed out in his letter) believed, from the best information he could obtain at that time, that to run six miles below and four miles above Blackman's wells would be the most advantageous to the State. Had Mr. Cox have gone over the land, as I have done, I am confident he would have recommended the reserve to have been made six miles up the river and four miles below the wells. The land six miles up the river is heavy timbered generally, and the soil not good, which will prevent it from being sold by government for many years, yet it is more valuable for the use of the salines than the land below. The land below is much more prairie and better soil, and will undoubtedly sell as soon as a sale shall be made for that range of townships, (which is range 11.) I conclude, from a full examination of the land ordered to be reserved, and the lands two miles above the limits recommended by Mr. Cox, that it would be much more to the interest of the State to run but four miles down the river, below Blackman's wells, and six miles above. I consider that it would be a considerable advantage to both the United States and this State to make the reserve six miles above and four miles below the west side of section 16, on which the salines are situated. The lands up the river were offered for sale as directed, but did not any of it sell. As I am confident it will be more for the interest of both parties to make the reserve different from that laid down by Mr. Cox, I have taken the liberty to recommend the propriety of making the following reservation: In township No. 19 north, range No. 12 west, sections Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 26, 27, 29, 30, and 31; in township No. 19 north, range No. 13 west, 13, 14, 15, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 34, 35, and 36; section No. 28, in township No. 19 north, range No. 12 west, I have selected, by the request of Governor Bond, for the use of schools, in lieu of section 16, claimed by the State. The distance to the salines, as the road goes at this time, is upwards of one hundred miles. I was six days going and returning and eight days employed in examining the lands—in all fourteen days. Whatever compensation may be allowed me you will please to inform me through what channel I am to receive it. Should it belong to your department, you will please to take such measures as will procure me an order on the receiver at this place. I am confident that this State will be pleased with the change recommended; but should it be necessary to have the reserve made as laid down by Mr. Cox, you will please to direct accordingly. I have the land selected as I was directed.

I am, &c.,

JOSEPH KITCHELL, Register.

JOSIAH MEIGS, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

Approved March 20, 1825.

C.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 30, 1825.

SIR: Your letter of May 26, 1824, addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury, having been referred to this office, I now, in compliance with the request therein contained, forward you an official statement of the land selected and designated by the President for the use of the saline of the Vermilion river, and of the section substituted by the Secretary of the Treasury in lieu of section 28, 19 N. 12 W.

With great respect, &c.

GEORGE GRAHAM.

EDWARD COLES, Esq., Governor of Illinois, Vandalia.

ILLINOIS SALINES.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, General Land Office, March 26, 1825.

It is hereby certified that, under the provisions of the second proposition of the sixth section of the act of the Congress of the United States approved on the 18th day of April, A. D. 1818, entitled "An act to enable the people of Illinois Territory to form a constitution and State government, and for the admission of such State into the Union on an equal footing with the original States," whereby it is provided "that all salt springs within such State, and the lands reserved for the use of the same, shall be granted to the said State, and the same to be used, under such terms, conditions, and regulations as the legislature of the said State shall direct: Provided, The legislature shall never sell nor lease the same for a longer period than ten years at any one time," there have been selected the following described sections of land for the use of the saline of the Big Vermilion river, in the district of lands offered for sale at Palestine, viz: In township number nineteen north, of range number twelve west, sections numbered one, two, three, four, seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven, twelve, thirteen, fourteen, sixteen, seventeen, eighteen, nineteen, twenty, twenty-one, twenty-two, twenty-three, twenty-four, twenty-six, twenty-seven, twenty-nine, thirty, and thirty-one. In township number nineteen north, of range number thirteen west, the following sections have been selected, viz: sections numbered thirteen, fourteen, fifteen, twenty-one, twenty-two, twenty-three, twenty-four, twenty-five, twenty-six, twenty-seven, twenty-eight, thirty-four, thirty-five, and thirty-six; and it is hereby certified that the said sections of land are reserved for the purposes mentioned, by the authority of the President of the United States.

It is further certified that, in lieu of section number sixteen, in township number nineteen north, of range number twelve west, there has been selected and substituted section number twenty-eight, situate in the same township and range, to be appropriated to the use of schools, agreeably to the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States.

In witness whereof, I, George Graham, Commissioner of the General Land Office, have hereto subscribed my name, and caused to be affixed the seal of said office, at the city of Washington, the day and year above written.

GEORGE GRAHAM,
Commissioner of the General Land Office.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, General Land Office, February 8, 1826.

SIR: Your letter calling for information respecting the saline reservations in the State of Illinois, inquires:

1st. "When was the reservation made for the Ohio or Wabash salines?"

To which I answer that the report of the commissioners on file in this office is dated July 2, 1814, which was made agreeably to instructions from Edward Tiffin, esq., then Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated April 22, 1814, a copy of which is herewith transmitted. This report relates to what is styled the Great Ohio and Wabash reservation. The remainder of the selections were made by Thomas Sloo, esq., register of the land office of Shawneetown district, agreeably to instructions through the General Land Office, dated June 19, 1815, consisting of seven distinct tracts of salines, lying within said district, contiguous to the waters of the Ohio and Wabash rivers.

2d. "By whom was the selection of the lands made?"

By Leonard White, Willis Hargrove, and P. Trammell, commissioners, and by Thomas Sloo, register of the land office at Shawneetown.

3d. "By whom and in what manner was the reservation approved?"

There does not appear to be any record or evidence on file in this office of approval of the selections made in the district of Shawneetown, by the President of the United States, for saline purposes.

4th. "What is the precise quantity reserved for the Ohio and Wabash salines?"

The quantity of land reserved for what is styled the Great Ohio and Wabash reservation is 96,756.79 acres.

The seven other tracts or salines in Shawneetown district contain 84,499.54 acres.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEORGE GRAHAM.

Hon. JOHN SCOTT, House of Representatives.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, General Land Office, April 22, 1814.

GENTLEMEN: I am instructed to request you, or any two of you, to examine the lands on which, and about where, the United States saline is situated in the Illinois Territory, and make a report to this office, that the President of the United States may be properly informed of the quantity and situation of such lands as may be necessary to reserve from the unexpected sales, for the purpose of supporting the works forever. In making this examination and report, you will be pleased to be very particular, noting the timber on such section; the evenness or otherwise of the ground; the necessity or practicability of conveying the water on the grounds in pipes; to coal, and where situated, or wood; relative to the navigation down the saline creek, if practicable, and the depth of water; and, in short, everything calculated to give a comprehensive and particular view of the whole and every part of the premises.

It is desirable that this report should be received as soon as convenient, as the land office is about to be opened there.

With great respect, &c.,

EDWARD TIFFIN.

LEONARD WHITE, WYLIS HARGROVE, and PHILIP TRAMMELL, Esqs.

19TH CONGRESS.]No. 574.[2D SESSION.]

CONFLICTING CLAIMS BETWEEN ROBERTS' AND LUDLOW'S LINES IN OHIO.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 12, 1827.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the undersigned respectfully represents: That they reside in the State of Ohio, in the counties of Champaign and Logan, between Ludlow's and Roberts' lines; that they claim title by purchase from the United States for the lands on which they reside; on them they have made lasting and valuable improvements; there they have formed their connexions and societies; there they have in peace worshipped their God; and beneath that sod rest the bones of their relatives. They confidently believed that the title of the government was a security to their possessions; but since the establishment of the sources of the Little Miami and Scioto rivers, in 1812, by the commissioners, as well on the part of the United States as of Virginia, and the running and marking Roberts' line, under the direction of the former commissioners, and from the best information they have been able to obtain, the most serious apprehensions are entertained that the lands they occupy will be found to lie within the Virginia military district, and subject to be holden by virtue of entries made in 1810 by owners of Virginia military land warrants, and that they will be deprived of their homes and possessions, their societies and relations will be broken up, and they must leave the bones of their families and relatives in the possession of strangers. Your memorialists are informed that the decision of the case of Doddridge's Lessee vs. Thompson and Wright, in the Supreme Court, settles all the principles which can or may arise (except, perhaps, the western boundary line of the Virginia military reservation) in the decision of these conflicting claims. And as the highest judicial tribunal of the country has passed on the question, it is supposed that the justice of the memorial will be duly appreciated by the Legislature of the Union, in whose power alone remains our relief from expensive and harassing litigation and final loss of our possessions. Your memorialists are aware that at two several periods measures were adopted by the House of Representatives, but not acted upon in the Senate for want of time, which would have quieted our apprehensions, and at the same time compensated those who claim title by military warrants; the prosecution of which claims has only been delayed by the interference and advice of the mutual friends of those claiming title under the United States and Virginia. How much longer your memorialists may be exempted from litigation and expense depends alone on the course adopted by your honorable bodies; for your memorialists are informed that those who hold claims for these lands, relying on the decision of the Supreme Court before referred to, will proceed to establish them by judicial proceedings; and those of your memorialists who hold small farms had better abandon them than incur such an expensive contest, which, as they believe, must eventuate in the loss of their lands and their homes.

With these views and under these feelings your memorialists humbly pray your honorable bodies, at your present session, to make such provision by law, as to you may seem meet and proper, for the speedy determination and settlement of these conflicting claims, both emanating from the general government; and that they may be protected and quieted in the possession of their lands, their altars, and firesides. And, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

LAND CLAIM IN WEST FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 13, 1827.

Mr. REED, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of James Moore, of Mississippi, reported:

That it appears to the satisfaction of the committee, by the petition and affidavit of the said James Moore, and by the corroborating testimony of one of the committee, (who has some knowledge upon the subject,) that the petitioner and the other heirs of Alexander Moore, deceased, have claims to land in West Florida, by virtue of British grants issued from the government of West Florida while it was a British province; that the said Alexander Moore, in his lifetime, became a Spanish subject, after the conquest of Florida by the Spanish arms, and continued so until the time of his death; and that the said lands, or some of them so claimed, were settled and cultivated during the continuance of the British government in West Florida. It further appears that the original patents and other evidences of title to the lands so claimed came into the possession of the said James Moore after the death of his father, as one of his heirs-at-law; and that the said patents and other evidences of title were, in due time, transmitted by the said James Moore, to be laid before the board of commissioners for the adjustment of land titles in West Florida, but were lost at sea; which accident prevented their being presented to and acted upon by the said board in due season, during the existence of said commission. It further appears that the British and Spanish archives relating to lands in Florida have been transmitted to the commissions there, and are not now in any of the departments at the seat of government in this city. The committee are of opinion, under these circumstances, that the said petitioner, and the other heirs of Alexander Moore, deceased, have a well founded claim upon Congress to have their titles investigated and decided upon, and have, therefore, instructed me to report a bill accordingly, which is herewith presented

19TH CONGRESS.]No. 576.[2D SESSION.

ON CLAIM OF A RECEIVER OF PUBLIC MONEYS FOR COMPENSATION FOR BRINGING UP ARREARS OF WORK.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 13, 1827.

Mr. REED, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Joseph Dunbar, receiver of public moneys in the district west of Pearl river, State of Mississippi, reported:

That it appears to the satisfaction of the committee that when the said Joseph Dunbar entered upon the duties of his office as such receiver of public moneys the books of his office were very much in arrear, and that he was instructed to cause them to be brought up with as little delay as possible, that he accordingly employed clerks to do a part of the work which was so in arrear, and the balance was done by himself and in his own handwriting. He has been allowed at the Treasury Department, in the settlement of his accounts, $1,500 paid for clerk hire in bringing up the arrearages of business in his office, which sum was actually paid to clerks employed by him; but for his own clerical labors he has received nothing, and one of the objects of the petition is to obtain compensation for those services. The committee are of opinion that the justice of this claim is beyond doubt, and the only difficulty has been with the committee to ascertain what the amount of compensation should be. The chairman, therefore, addressed himself to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, who, in reply, communicated to the committee a report made to his predecessor by A. Anderson, who had been directed to examine and report on the condition of the said office. The following is an extract from Mr. Anderson's report: "The books are now complete, and the work has been neatly and correctly executed. The same work could not have been done, had clerks been employed to perform the whole of it, for a less sum than $2,000. The receiver has been allowed a credit of $1,500 paid to the clerks for the above labor; he also claims $500, in addition to that sum, as a compensation for the work which he executed and the necessary and general superintendence of the whole business. I examined the books page by page, and found that a considerable portion of the work was in the handwriting of Mr. Dunbar. In answer, therefore, to that part of the communication in relation to clerk hire, I feel it my duty to say that the sum allowed appears to me, from my acquaintance with bookkeeping of that description, to be less than reasonable, and less than I have known the same extent and style of work executed for." The committee think, therefore, that $500 is a fair and reasonable compensation for the extra services of the said receiver in bringing up the arrearages of business in his office, and have instructed me to report a bill accordingly.

LAND CLAIM IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 15, 1827.

Mr. REED, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of the representatives of William Scott, deceased, with the accompanying documents, reported:

That, April 26, 1787, William Scott, the ancestor of the petitioners, preferred his petition to the governor of Louisiana for the grant of a tract of land on the river Homochitto, in the district of Natchez, and that on the 21st of May in the same year an order of survey was obtained from Don Estevan Miro, governor of the province of Louisiana, according to the prayer of the petitioner. It also appears by the certificate of William Voudsan, a deputy surveyor under the Spanish government, dated November 23, 1787, that a survey was actually made in favor of the said William Scott for two hundred acres of land situated in the district of Natchez, and about seventeen miles from the fort on the Homochitto river. It also appears to the satisfaction of the committee that the heirs of the said William Scott duly registered their claim before the board of commissioners west of Pearl river March 29, 1804, but that proof of settlement and cultivation not being made the said claim was not confirmed by the board of commissioners, and the said tract of two hundred acres was subsequently sold as public lands belonging to the United States.

It is proved by the depositions of John Bolls and Catharine Bolling that the said tract of land was settled and improved by the said William Scott previous to and during the years 1792 and 1793. It is also proved by the deposition of John Bolls that "the said tract of land was in cultivation October 25, 1795, and for a number of years before and after, and that the children of said William Scott were at that time inhabitants of the province and ever since." From those facts it results that the title of the petitioners was protected by the act of Congress of March 3, 1803, and that the United States have sold a tract of land to which they had no title, and in derogation to the rights of the petitioners. The committee have, therefore, instructed me to report a bill for their relief, which is herewith presented.

CONDITION OF DUNCAN McARTHUR'S CLAIM WITH REGARD TO THE DISPUTED LAND BETWEEN ROBERTS' AND LUDLOW'S LINES IN OHIO.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 16, 1827.

The undersigned, agent of the United States for defending the suits in ejectment, Duncan McArthur vs. John Reynolds, and the said McArthur vs. Henry Vanmetre, now pending before the court of common pleas of Champaign county, Ohio, for the recovery of land in the valley of the Great Miami river, westward of Ludlow's line, south of the Greenville treaty line, sold by authority of the laws of the United States, hereby certifies that the said land lies westward of a direct line from the termination or head of the valley of the Scioto river to the termination or head of the valley of the Little Miami river, and that no part of the land which is proposed to be made the warrant of a donation to the said McArthur of $65,000, lies between the rivers Scioto and Little Miami, or within the territory reserved by the Commonwealth of Virginia for the satisfaction of the land bounties of the officers and soldiers of that Commonwealth who served in the continental line of the revolutionary army; and further, that, by the running of Ludlow's and Roberts' lines into and across the Great Miami country, and the permission given to the holders of warrants granted for these bounties to locate up to these lines, about 160,000 acres of land, without the limits of the reserved territory, have been lost to the United States.

PURCHASE OF LANDS FROM THE INDIANS; SURVEYS, QUANTITY, SALES, EXPENSES OF THE PUBLIC LANDS; THE AMOUNT PAID, BALANCES DUE AND AMOUNT FORFEITED BY THE PURCHASERS OF PUBLIC LANDS SINCE THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 16, 1827.

To the Senate of the United States:

I transmit to the Senate a report from the Secretary of the Treasury, with statements prepared at the Register's and General Land Office, in compliance with a resolution of the Senate of the 16th of May last in relation to the purchases and sales of the public lands since the Declaration of Independence.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

WASHINGTON, February 16, 1827.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 15, 1827.

The Secretary of the Treasury, to whom was referred a resolution of the Senate of May 16, 1826, "requesting the President of the United States to cause to be prepared and laid before the Senate, at the commencement of the next session of Congress, a statement showing the sums annually paid since the Declaration of Independence for purchasing from the Indians, surveying and selling the public lands, showing, as near as may be, the quantities of land which have been purchased; the number of acres which have been surveyed; the number sold and the number which remain unsold; the amount of sales and of forfeitures; the sums paid by purchasers, and the sums due from purchasers in each land district; keeping in separate columns or tables, as far as practicable, the statements for every State and Territory in which there are public lands," has the honor to submit to the President a communication from the Register of the Treasury, and one from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, both dated the 14th instant, which, with the statements to which they respectively refer, contain the information required by the said resolution.

RICHARD RUSH.

The PRESIDENT of the United States.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Register's Office, February 14, 1827.

In compliance, in part, with a resolution of the Senate of the United States of May 16, 1826, I have the honor to transmit herewith statements numbered from 1 to 7, inclusive, viz:

No. 1. Exhibiting the expenditures of holding Indian treaties from 1776 to December 31, 1825.

No. 2. Exhibiting the expenses of surveys of public lands to December 31, 1825.

No. 3. Exhibiting the expenses of selling the public lands to December 31, 1825.

No. 4. Exhibiting special sales of public lands made prior to the opening of the land offices.

No. 5. Exhibiting the quantity of land sold in each State, and amount of purchase money, to December 31, 1825.

No. 6. Exhibiting the amount paid by purchasers, balances due by individuals, and total amount of purchase money from the opening of the land offices to December 31, 1825.

No. 7. Exhibiting the amount of money forfeited to December 31, 1824.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, sir, your obedient servant,

JOSEPH NOURSE, Register

Hon. RICHARD RUSH, Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Register's Office, February 14, 1827.

JOSEPH NOURSE, Register.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 14, 1827.

SIR: In compliance, in part, with a resolution of the Senate, dated May 16, 1826, I have the honor to submit the statement marked A, which exhibits the quantity of land purchased by the United States, the quantity of public lands surveyed previous to January 1, 1826, and the estimated quantity of the public lands remaining unsold January 1, 1826.

The quantities of the lands purchased have been ascertained, as far as practicable, from actual surveys, and, in default of such, by geometrical calculations made from the best maps. The quantities of the lands surveyed have been taken from the surveys which have been returned to this office, and do not include large quantities of land, particularly in the States of Mississippi and Louisiana, which are known to have been surveyed previous to January 1, 1826; but the returns for which have not yet been forwarded to this office. This item also includes the amount of lands surveyed for Indian reservations surrounded by the public lands, but the amount of such reservations have not been included in the column of purchased lands. The tabular statements accompanying this report, numbered from No. 1 to No. 10, will exhibit the data on which the column showing the amount of land remaining unsold in each State and Territory is formed.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient servant,
Hon. RICHARD RUSH, Secretary of the Treasury.

GEO. GRAHAM.

[2D SESSION.]

LAND CLAIM IN INDIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 21, 1827.

Mr. MOORE, of Alabama, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and documents of the heirs of Jeremiah Buckley, deceased, reported:

That George Musser, Sarah Musser, John Smith, and Margaret Smith, James G. Ennis, and Catharine Ennis, the petitioners, represent: That about June 11, 1796, Jeremiah Buckley, of the State of Pennsylvania, purchased of one T. Dubois, then of the territory northwest of the river Ohio, a tract of land containing one hundred acres, situate on the Wabash river, about three miles above the town of Vincennes, for the consideration of one hundred and forty dollars, and shortly thereafter returned to Pennsylvania and deceased, leaving the said Sarah, Margaret, and Catharine, and one son, namely, Thomas Buckley, his infant heirs, of tender years; that afterwards the said Sarah intermarried with George Musser, Margaret with John Smith, and Catharine with James G. Ennis, all living now, and citizens of the county of Warren, and State of Kentucky; that the said Thomas Buckley has sold and transferred his interest in the same to the said John Smith. That the said Dubois, subsequent to the sale and contract as above to the said Buckley, viz: about June 11, 1803, conveyed one hundred arpents of the said land, equal to eighty-five acres, to the United States for the purpose of erecting a garrison, &c., and made a deed of conveyance accordingly, from which it also appears that the said Dubois recognized the conveyance made to the said Buckley, and provided therein for indemnity from the United States, in case the heirs of the said Buckley should ever call on him or his heirs for the land. The petitioners affirm that Dubois sold to the said Buckley one hundred acres, and not one hundred arpents, as represented by the deed to the United States. They now ask a retrocession of the land, and compensation for the destruction of timber, &c., during the time it was occupied by the troops of the United States.

The material facts, as set forth, relative to the contract by Dubois to Buckley, and the deed subsequently made by Dubois to the United States, are satisfactorily proved by documentary evidence. It is also proven by the affidavit of three persons, certified by a magistrate to be respectable citizens of Knox county, Indiana, that the United States kept possession of the said land from 1803 to about 1813; that during this time the timber was destroyed, or made use of for building the garrison, &c., and that its value might be estimated at something like four hundred dollars.

The committee are of opinion that the prayer of the petitioners, as relates to the retrocession of the land, is reasonable and just, and report a bill for that purpose; but, as respects the amount demanded for the timber and use of the land, they consider this extravagant, but propose to give a reasonable compensation, which is also provided for in the bill herewith reported.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The undersigned, the legal heirs and representatives of Jeremiah Buckley, deceased, formerly of Pennsylvania, respectfully represent: That the said Jeremiah, their ancestor, on or about June 11, 1796, purchased of one Toussaint Dubois, of Vincennes, in Indiana, one hundred acres of land, in Knox county, about three miles above the town of Vincennes, on the Wabash river, the metes and bounds whereof are described in the said Dubois' agreement with Buckley, herewith filed, and marked A; that the said one hundred acres so purchased of the said Dubois was valuable and heavily timbered; that their father, the said Jeremiah Buckley, shortly after his said purchase, departed this life, leaving your petitioners infants of tender years; that since they have arrived at age and investigated the said purchase, they find that said

Dubois, by deed bearing date September 11, 1803, conveyed the said one hundred acres, or rather one hundred arpents, of the same to the United States, which deed is duly recorded in the county of Knox aforesaid. Your petitioners would also state that, by reference to said deed, a copy of which is herewith exhibited, marked B, the said Dubois recognizes the sale so made to your petitioners' ancestor, and provides therein for an indemnity from the United States in case the heirs of said Buckley should ever call on him or his heirs for the land. Your petitioners do not admit that said Dubois sold to their ancestor one hundred arpents only, as he has represented in said deed of conveyance, but they insist upon the sale and purchase of one hundred acres.

Your petitioners do not admit that their ancestor owed the said Dubois any balance for said land, nor for money paid as security, which said Dubois has claimed and received of the United States; the receipt of said Dubois for the full amount of the purchase money of said land is herewith filed, marked C.

Your petitioners would further state that at the time the United States took possession of said land under the purchase from Dubois the timber thereon was very valuable, and that the United States officers, soldiers, and agents, as they are informed, have cut down, taken off, and destroyed the whole of the timber on the same, or nearly so; that they are informed that the timber so taken off and used by the United States was reasonably worth $800. Your petitioners are informed that the United States occupied part of the same for a garrison and fort, &c., but that it is not any longer needed by the government for such purposes. Your petitioners, the premises considered, pray that the title to said land may be conveyed to and invested in them; and that they may be compensated for the timber so taken, used, and destroyed by the officers, soldiers, and agents of the government, with interest thereon from September, 1803, until paid, and such reasonable sum for the occupancy thereof as may be deemed reasonable and just.

They represent that said Jeremiah Buckley died, leaving Sarah Musser, late Sarah Buckley, Margaret Smith, late Margaret Buckley, Catharine Ennis, late Catharine Buckley, and Thomas Buckley, his only children, his heirs and representatives; that the said Sarah intermarried with George Musser, the said Margaret with John Smith, and the said Catharine with James G. Ennis, all living, and citizens of the county of Warren and State of Kentucky; that the said Thomas has sold and transferred his interest in the same to said John Smith, as per his writing herewith filed, marked D, and is about removing to the State of Missouri.

And your petitioners, in duty, &c., will, &c.

STATE OF KENTUCKY, Warren County, ss:

This day John Hess and Margaret Hess, of said county, personally appeared before the subscriber, a justice of the peace in and for said county, and made oath that they were well acquainted with Jeremiah Buckley, formerly of Pennsylvania, and then of Virginia, and who departed this life about the year 1800, and that he has been acquainted with Sarah Musser, Margaret Smith, Catharine Ennis, and Thomas Buckley, from their infancy until the present time, and that they were the children and heirs of said Jeremiah Buckley, deceased, so represented and believed and held by every one always, and yet are; which said Sarah Musser, Margaret Smith, Catharine Ennis, and Thomas Buckley are the same named in the foregoing petition; and that the said George Musser is the husband of Sarah, John Smith the husband of Margaret, and James G. Ennis the husband of Catharine, as set out in the same.

Given under my hand this 1st day of October, 1825.

Deed.—Toussaint Dubois and wife to the United States.

This indenture, made the seventh day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, between Toussaint Dubois, of Vincennes, in the county of Knox, in the Indiana Territory, of the one part, and the United States of America, of the other part: Whereas, by certain articles of agreement bearing date the 11th day of June, 1796, and made between the said Toussaint Dubois, of the one part, and one Jeremiah Buckley, of Cumberland county, in the State of Pennsylvania, of the other part, the said Toussaint Dubois, for the consideration of one hundred and forty dollars, did grant, bargain, and sell unto the said Jeremiah Buckley all his, the said Toussaint Dubois', claim and interest of, in, and to one hundred acres of land lying and being in said county of Knox, which said tract of one hundred acres of land was part of three lots, amounting in the whole to five hundred and sixty acres, binding on the Wabash river, and adjoining the lot of Conifou on its northeast side, purchased by him, said Dubois, from Pierre Latulip, Pierre Gamelin, sen., and Pierre Gamelin, jr.; bounds of the aforementioned one hundred acres of land, as follows: beginning on the bank of the said river, in the line of the entire tract and midway thereof, and to extend from thence with the same up the river to its northeast corner on the river, and thence, out from the river with another line of the entire tract, a sufficient distance to include the hundred acres, making the corners at right angles; and reciting therein that the said Dubois was not then in possession of a patent title from the government in and to the said land, and of course could not at that time legally convey to the said Buckley the tract sold to him; under these circumstances the said Toussaint Dubois promised and engaged for himself and his heirs that he would thereafter, as soon as might be in his power so to do, after he had received a patent for said land, make and convey a full and sufficient title in fee simple to the said Jeremiah Buckley in and to the aforesaid land then sold to him, under the penalty of forfeiting to the said Buckley, his heirs, executors, or administrators, the sum of two hundred and eighty dollars, as in and by the said articles of agreement, reference being thereunto had, will more fully and at large appear; and whereas the quantity of land by the said Toussaint Dubois, then sold to the said Jeremiah Buckley, was one hundred arpents only, although the same is, through mistake, mentioned in the said agreement to have been one hundred acres; and whereas there now remains due from the said Buckley to the said Toussaint Dubois, as well for the residue of the said one hundred and forty dollars in the said agreement mentioned as for money he was security for to Thomas Jones, for the proper debt of the said Jeremiah Buckley, the sum of eighty-seven and a half dollars, which, with interest for the same from the year 1796 to this day, amounts to the sum of one hundred and twenty-six dollars; and whereas the said Toussaint Dubois has long since obtained a patent of confirmation for the said tract of land, and was always ready and willing to convey to said Buckley the land by him sold to said Buckley; and whereas no accounts or information have been received or heard from said Buckley from the said year seventeen hundred and ninety-six to this time, although every possible inquiry has been made after him and his family; and it is therefore believed that he is dead without heirs; and whereas the United States have, through the application of William Henry Harrison, esq., governor of the Indiana Territory, and Cornelius Lyman, esq., captain in the first regiment of infantry, and commanding at Fort Knox, applied to the said Toussaint Dubois, by the direction of the Secretary of War, to convey to the said United States, for the purpose of building and establishing a garrison thereon, the said one hundred arpents of land so by him agreed to be sold to the said Jeremiah Buckley, which he, the said Toussaint Dubois, has consented to do on their paying him the said sum of one hundred and twenty-six dollars so, as aforesaid, due by the said Jeremiah Buckley to him, and on condition of the said United States satisfying and compensating, or otherwise agreeing with the said Jeremiah Buckley, or his heirs or assigns, for his or their estate, right, title, or interest of and in the said tract of one hundred arpents of land, by virtue of the said above-recited agreement:

Now, this indenture witnesseth that the said Toussaint Dubois, for and in consideration of the said sum of one hundred and twenty-six dollars to him in hand paid by the said United States, at or before the sealing and delivery of these presents, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, hath granted, bargained, and sold, and by these presents doth grant, bargain, and sell, unto the said United States, all and singular the said tract or parcel of one hundred arpents of land, situate in the said county of Knox, and which is particularly bounded and described as follows, to wit: beginning at a small sassafras on the bank of the river, near to two white oaks; thence south thirty-eight and one-half degrees east, along a line of Antoine Marashal's one hundred and fifty-four perches, to a post near two elms and a hickory; thence along another of said Marashal's lines, north fifty-one and one-half degrees east, eighty and two-tenths perches, to a sugar tree on William McIntosh's line; thence with said line, north thirty-eight and one-half degrees west, to a sugar and sycamore trees at high-water mark, one hundred and eighty-six perches; thence down the Wabash river to the place of beginning; containing one hundred arpents, together with all rights, members, and appurtenances whatsoever to the same tract or parcel of land belonging or in anywise appertaining, and all his estate, right, title, and interest of, in, and to the same; to have and to hold the said tract of one hundred arpents of land, and every part thereof, with the appurtenances, to and to the use of the said United States forever. And the said Toussaint Dubois and his heirs the said tract of land, with the appurtenances, to the said United States forever, against himself, the said Toussaint Dubois, and his heirs, and against all and every other person or persons whomsoever claiming or to claim by, through, from, or under him or them, other than and except the said Jeremiah Buckley, his heirs or assigns, by virtue or in pursuance of the said recited agreement, shall and will warrant and forever defend by these presents.

Provided always, nevertheless, And it is hereby concluded and agreed upon by and between the said parties to these presents, and it is their true intent and meaning, and true intent and meaning hereof, that if the United States do not and shall not satisfy and compensate or otherwise agree with the said Jeremiah Buckley, his heirs or assigns, for his or their estate, claim, or interest in and to the said tract of one hundred arpents of land, to the clear indemnity and discharge of the said Toussaint Dubois, his heirs or assigns; or if the said United States do not, and shall not, from time to time, and at all times hereafter, well and sufficiently save, keep harmless, and indemnify the said Toussaint Dubois, his heirs, executors, and administrators, of and from all costs and charges, damages, sum and sums of money and expenses which he shall or may bear, pay, or put unto, for, or by reason, or on account of, this executing of these presents, or by reason or on account of the said agreement and sale so by him made to the said Jeremiah Buckley, then these presents, and every clause, article, matter, and thing herein contained, shall from thenceforth cease, determine, and become absolutely void to all intents and purposes whatsoever, anything hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding.

In witness whereof, the said parties have to these presents set their hands and seals.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, December 2, 1823.

STATE OF INDIANA, Knox County:

VINCENNES, October 28, 1825.

Whereas Messrs. John Smith and George Musser, of Kentucky, have applied to us, the undersigned, to state the value of the timber which was on a certain tract of land sold by Toussaint Dubois to the United States in the year 1803, which said land was sold to one Jeremiah Buckley in the year 1796 by the said Toussaint Dubois: This land is situate on the river Wabash, about three miles up said river from Vincennes, and contains, agreeably to said Dubois' conveyance to the United States, one hundred arpents French measure, or about eighty-five acres English measure; but said Dubois appears to have sold to said Buckley one hundred acres English measure, and on which said land the United States, by their officers and soldiers, erected a garrison and named it Fort Knox:

Now, we, the undersigned, being well acquainted with the situation of said land, and of the timber thereon in the said year of 1803, are of opinion that the said land might be called a goodly timbered tract; that is to say, not of the first quality of timbered land, but perhaps the second; and after mature deliberation we are of opinion that the timber on said land was worth, at the time it was taken possession of by the United States in the year 1803, the sum of four hundred dollars. We know that there is now no timber of any value on said land. We know that the said timber was taken off of said land by the United States officers and soldiers for the purpose of building the fort, for firewood, and rails for fencing land for the use of said officers and soldiers in raising corn, vegetables, &c.; that the said fort was occupied and held in possession of the United States from the year 1803 until removed to Vincennes, which was in 1812 or 1813.

In testimony whereof, we have hereto set our hand and seals.

VINCENNES, October 28, 1825.

Whereas Messrs. John Smith and George Musser have applied to me to make a statement of the situation of a certain tract of land, and timber thereon, in 1803, which was sold to one Jeremiah Buckley in the year 1796 by one Toussaint Dubois, and again by said Dubois conveyed to the United States in the month of September, 1803, said land being situate on the river Wabash, about three miles up said river from Vincennes, and contains, agreeably to said Dubois' conveyance to the United States, one hundred arpents, or about eighty-five acres English measure:

Now, I, Robert Buntin, Jr., formerly a lieutenant in the army of the United States, and now a citizen of Vincennes, do hereby state that I am not able to say anything as to the timber in 1803. In the year 1812 I commanded at the said place, called Fort Knox, and know that all the timber of any value, or much value, was then cut off of the land; that in 1813, the fort being moved to Vincennes, all the buildings and timber then at the fort was rafted down the river to Vincennes, and used in building another fort; and, further, I always understood that the timber taken off of said land was made use of for building said Fort Knox, for firewood for the fort, and for rails to fence ground to raise corn, vegetables, &c., for the use of the officers and soldiers; that he has understood and believes the United States took possession of said land in said year of 1803, and that it was finally evacuated and removed in the year 1813 to Vincennes.

In testimony whereof, I have hereto set my hand and seal the day and date above written.

Articles of agreement entered into, made, and concluded, the eleventh day of June, anno Domini one thousand seven hundred and ninety-six, between Toussaint Dubois, of the town of Vincennes, and county of Knox, in the territory northwest of the Ohio river, of the one part, and Jeremiah Buckley, of Cumberland county, in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, of the other part, witnesseth:

That the said Toussaint Dubois, for and in consideration of the sum of one hundred and forty dollars to him in hand paid this day by the said Jeremiah Buckley, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, hath bargained and sold, and by these presents doth bargain, set over, and sell, unto the said Jeremiah Buckley, his heirs and assigns forever, all his, the said Toussaint Dubois' title, claim, and interest, of, in, and to, one hundred acres of land lying and being in the county of Knox aforesaid, which said tract of one hundred acres of land is part of three lots, amounting in the whole to five hundred and sixty acres, binding on the Wabash river, and adjoining the lot of Cunnifou on its northeastern side, purchased by him, the said Dubois, from Pierre Letalip, Pierre Gamelin, senior, and Pierre Gamelin, junior; bounds of the before-mentioned one hundred acres of land now intended to be conveyed by the said Toussaint Dubois to the said Jeremiah Buckley to be as follows, that is to say: beginning on the bank of the said river, in the line of the entire tract, and midway thereof, and to extend from thence with the same up the river to its northeast corner on the river, and thence out from the river, with another line of the entire tract, a sufficient distance to include the hundred acres, making the corners at right angles. And whereas the said Toussaint Dubois is not now in possession of a patent title from government in and to any of the above-mentioned land, and of course cannot at this time legally convey to the said Buckley the tract now sold to him; under these circumstances the said Toussaint Dubois promises and engages, for himself and his heirs, that he will hereafter, so soon as it may be in his power so to do, after he shall have received a patent for said land, make and convey a full and sufficient title, in fee simple, to the said Jeremiah Buckley in and to the aforesaid land now sold to him, under the penalty of forfeiting to the said Buckley, his heirs, executors, or administrators, the sum of two hundred and eighty dollars; but, in case it should so happen that the said Dubois cannot obtain a legal title at all to the before-mentioned premises, using proper endeavors to that end, it is to be understood that he shall be no further accountable to the said Jeremiah Buckley, his heirs, executors, or administrators, than to return and refund to him, or his heirs, &c., the sum of one hundred and forty dollars above, said to be paid by the said Buckley to him at this time.

The said Jeremiah Buckley, for his part, promises and engages to and with the said Toussaint Dubois, that whereas there appears to be a body of stone useful for building adjacent to the river, and which may be altogether included within the hundred acres now purchased by him; that in case said stone should be so included within his lot now purchased as aforesaid, that the said Dubois cannot on the residue of the tract discover stone as fit for building as that on the lot now sold, within two feet of the surface, that, in that case, it is agreed by the said Jeremiah Buckley that the said Toussaint Dubois and his heirs shall and may forever enjoy the privilege of quarrying stone for his or their own use on the said lot now sold to him, the said Buckley; and, further, the said Buckley grants the privilege of getting building stone from his lot aforesaid to Francis Vigo, for his own necessary use, at any time and at all times during his life or residence in the neighborhood; but this privilege to be allowed him, the said Vigo, only in case, as was before mentioned with respect to said Dubois, that stone may not be had as aforesaid on the residue of the entire tract. Lastly, the said Toussaint Dubois further promises and engages to sell to the said Buckley forty acres more of land, adjoining the south end of the hundred acres now sold to him, in the ensuing fall, at a proportionate price with that now sold; that is, in proportion of one hundred and forty dollars for one hundred acres, should the said Buckley wish to purchase, making prompt payment for the same, and provided that the said Dubois shall not have sold such land, now engaged, to some other person in the meantime.

In witness of all which agreements, the before-mentioned parties have interchangeably set their hands and affixed their seals the day and date above written.

DUBOIS.
JERRY BUCKLEY.

N. B.—In addition to the before-mentioned agreements on the part and behalf of the said Jeremiah Buckley, he agrees that the said Francis Vigo, in case stone for building cannot be had adjacent to the river on the residue of the above tract, that he shall have liberty of taking stone from his lot on the river bank.

N. B.—The words "within two feet of the surface" interlined between tenth and eleventh lines from the foot of the page on the other side, and the words "he agrees," in the above N. B., were interlined before signing.

APPLICATION OF INDIANA FOR FURTHER RELIEF TO PURCHASERS OF PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 26, 1827.

JOINT RESOLUTIONS of the general assembly relative to the purchases of public lands.

Resolved by the general assembly of the State of Indiana, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives requested, to use their best exertions to procure the passage of a law to extend the time of payment on all lands now forfeited or liable to forfeiture, and to authorize each and every purchaser whose lands are either forfeited or are liable to forfeiture to redeem the same on making prompt payment therefor, at a price the amount of which (including forfeited payments) shall not exceed the minimum price of Congress lands.

Resolved, further, That our senators and representatives aforesaid be requested to procure, if possible, the passage of a law giving to every purchaser and occupant of Congress lands who has made one or more payments, and whose lands have been forfeited or are liable to forfeiture, a privilege, in the nature of a right of pre-emption for — years, to repurchase the same, or other lands of equal value, at a sum which, added to his former payments, shall make the amount per acre not to exceed the minimum price of Congress lands; and that, in the interim, and before government has disposed of the same, every purchaser who has improved his lands without completing the payments shall have the privilege of occupying the same and enjoying the proceeds thereof.

Resolved, That his excellency the governor be requested to transmit the foregoing resolutions to each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

ON CHARGES BY A DEPUTY SURVEYOR AGAINST THE OFFICIAL CONDUCT OF THE COMMISSIONER OF THE GENERAL LAND OFFICE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 27, 1827.

Mr. WHIPPLE, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred sundry charges against George Graham, Commissioner of the General Land Office, by John Wilson, late a deputy surveyor in the southeastern district of the State of Louisiana, reported:

That said charges have been under the consideration of the committee; that the accuser and the accused have been before them; and that all the witnesses produced, and other evidence submitted by the respective parties, have been carefully and, so far as the committee can judge, impartially examined, and the import of the testimony duly considered. The committee deem it their duty to submit, in as brief a manner as possible, a few comments upon the evidence produced in support of each of the charges exhibited against the Commissioner of the General Land Office by Mr. Wilson.

The first charge is one of general and indefinite import, to which it was impracticable for the accused to answer; for which reason the committee conceived it improper to go into its investigation. This will be seen by reference to the charge.

The second charge made by said Wilson against Mr. Graham is for "criminal delinquency in neglecting to comply with instructions of the honorable William H. Crawford," directing said Graham to prosecute, on civil and criminal suits, Gabriel Winter, of Natchez, in the State of Mississippi, who is alleged to have sworn falsely for the purpose of defrauding the United States. Under this charge it appears that the competent authority, viz: the Secretary of the Treasury, who has a general superintendence of the land office, is responsible (if any one has been guilty of a dereliction of duty) for whatever relates to this transaction; but the committee, according to the evidence submitted, see no cause to attach blame to any department of the government, as will satisfactorily appear by the documents herewith submitted.

The third accusation is for permitting one or more letters to be opened and read in his office by a person to whom he (the said Graham) knew they were not addressed. In support of this charge no evidence whatever has been adduced.

The fourth charge is, that the Commissioner of the General Land Office was criminally delinquent in not directing an inquiry into the conduct of the register of the land office in New Orleans. The delinquency here charged would attach to the Secretary of the Treasury, if to any officer of the government; but it appears, by the testimony submitted, that no information was submitted to either Mr. Graham or the Secretary of the Treasury which would have warranted either of them in the belief that the register of the land office at New Orleans ought to be proceeded against.

The fifth charge is for advertising lands for sale by public proclamation, published in one or more of the public papers, on August 5, 1826, on the Bayou Grosse Tête, in the State of Louisiana, in the absence of the President of the United States. This part of the fifth charge was abandoned by Mr. Wilson as indefensible, and was not, therefore, inquired into by the committee, as there was not a shadow of evidence upon which to ground suspicion. That part of the charge which accuses Mr. Graham of proclaiming lands for sale on Bayou Grosse Tête that he knew were confirmed as pre-emption rights, or sold at public sale, is wholly unsupported by evidence; but even admitting the fact, that the proclamation of sale did embrace some private claims, yet the committee are perfectly satisfied, from evidence, that the utmost caution was used by Mr. Graham to guard against its occurrence. Mr. Graham, in a letter to Mr. Harper, register of the land office in the district where those lands are situated, under date of September 19, 1823, suggests to Mr. Harper the possibility that private claims might interfere with lands offered for sale, and directs him to inquire into the fact. The lands proclaimed for sale in August, 1826, were contained in an official list from the same register, as containing lands that had not been offered for sale under a former proclamation. It should be observed that the power of bringing the public lands into market is a discretionary one, and vested in the President; that no lands east of the Mississippi and island of New Orleans, from a variety of causes not necessary to enumerate, have been prepared for sale.

The sixth charge against the Commissioner of the General Land Office is, that he is incompetent to the performance of the duties of his office, in that he has made returns to Congress of unsold lands, the calculations of which produce results so erroneous, and of such data, as to preclude the possibility of their being acted upon. The committee do not deem it their province to decide upon the competency of officers of the government who are appointed by and hold their offices at the pleasure of the Executive of the United States; but they deem it no more than an act of justice to the Commissioner of the General Land Office to say that the records of his office, so far as they have fallen under the examination of the committee, exhibit much accuracy; and that all the returns made to Congress from those records have been made with great care and fidelity; that he has, since his appointment to office, introduced a new method of ascertaining the quantities of land contained in the plats returned to his office; and that the returns made to either branch of the national legislature from his office have been as accurate as it was practicable to make them.

The seventh charge accuses Mr. Graham of withholding private papers, and refusing copies of public papers necessary in the adjustment of legal claims on the government. Mr. Wilson has failed to make out any case that the committee think reprehensible. Mr. Wilson, who it appears was the person making the application, withheld from Mr. Graham, in part, the power to comply with his request, by withholding certain papers that had been loaned him from the office, and which formed a part of the papers of which he desired copies. The committee will state, in justification of Mr. Graham in this particular, that Mr. Wilson, in March and May, 1826, had obtained from the land office the loan of certain original documents for the avowed purpose of taking copies of them, which he wished for, and was to return. Mr. Wilson, though frequently called on, returned, from time to time, but a part of those papers, and has only now, on the order of the committee, delivered to them the residue. When Mr. Wilson called for copies of papers in the office relating to the same subject, of which the papers he had in his possession formed a part, Mr.

Graham declined giving him the copies until he should return the originals, then in his possession, which he (Wilson) refused to do.

No testimony has been adduced to support the eighth accusation; the allegation that authenticated charges had been exhibited against Davis, and that Mr. Graham had neglected to take measures for his removal, is also wholly unsupported. Upon this allegation the committee would remark that the Commissioner of the General Land Office is not the proper officer before whom to exhibit charges against Davis for misconduct in office, nor has he the power of removal, and, consequently, cannot be responsible for his continuance in office, if there were any cause of removal, alwhich the committee regarded as foreign to their inquiry. It may, however, be proper to remark that it appears from testimony before the committee that certain charges were exhibited to the Secretary of the Treasury against Davis, by Wilson, which have never been decided upon; the papers withheld, as before mentioned, by Wilson being a part of the testimony in the case, and consequently no decision could be made upon those charges.

The ninth charge is for permitting George Davis to continue a suit brought against the complainant, and precluding, by his official acts, the complainant from prosecuting suits against Davis, &c.

The history of this charge is shortly as follows: Wilson held the office of principal deputy surveyor for the southeastern district of Louisiana under Davis, who is the surveyor of the lands south of Tennessee. Davis dismissed Wilson from office, who refused to give up the books and records of his office, on the pretext that his accounts were not settled and paid. Davis instituted suit against Wilson, and obtained possession of the papers so withheld, by legal process. It appears the suit was dismissed after the object of it was obtained, and there is no evidence of any impropriety of conduct, whatever, on the part of Mr. Graham, respecting the prosecution of it. Wilson, in his turn, brought suit against Davis for some proceeding in the above-named suit; and to support the charge that Mr. Graham, by his official acts, had precluded him from prosecuting his suit against Davis, he testifies that he was unable to proceed in the prosecution in consequence of the refusal of Mr. Graham to settle his accounts. Upon this testimony it is only necessary to remark that it proves Mr. Graham had no legal authority to settle Wilson's accounts, the proper officer to make the settlement being the surveyor south of Tennessee; nor does it bring into question any official act of Graham.

The tenth charge made by Mr. Wilson against the Commissioner of the General Land Office is for wilful misrepresentations made in an official report to Congress, in which said commissioner is charged with assigning false causes why the lands in the States of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama, had not been surveyed and brought into market, when the said commissioner knew that said lands were surveyed and ready for market. The evidence before the committee most clearly proves that such had been the negligence in the surveying department in this portion of the Union that no patents could be safely issued even for private land claims, and that such was the erroneous nature of the plats of survey returned to the General Land Office that they were not deemed safe documents upon which to act, and that they have been returned to the surveyor for correction. Under these circumstances, the committee think the Commissioner of the General Land Office was not only correct in the assignment of the causes why these lands were not brought into market, but that he was actuated by wise and laudable motives, and consulted the best interests of the United States in not bringing them into market.

The eleventh charge is, that the Commissioner of the General Land Office asserted that the continuance in office of the surveyor of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee was the fault of the President of the United States, &c.

The evidence under this charge is, that the Commissioner of the General Land Office remarked, when representations were made to him respecting the surveyor of lands south of Tennessee, that so long as the President of the United States saw fit to continue said surveyor in office he was bound to respect him as such. Nor does it yet appear that the said surveyor ought to be removed.

The twelfth and the last charge is for having stated wilful and deliberate falsehoods in relation to the settlement of the accounts of deputy surveyors.

The committee have examined the party himself to this charge, also Colonel Dinsmore, and the documentary proof, and are perfectly and fully satisfied that no part or portion of the charge is sustained.

The Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred, for investigation and report, charges against George Graham, Commissioner of the General Land Office, instituted by John Wilson, late principal deputy surveyor of the southeastern district of Louisiana, proceeded to the investigation of the subject.

MONDAY, February 19, 1827.

The committee met. Present: Mr. Scott, chairman, Mr. Jennings, Mr. Vinton, Mr. Gurley, Mr. Whipple, Mr. Strong, and Mr. Wailes.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

TUESDAY, February 20.

The committee met pursuant to adjournment. All the members present.
John Wilson, the complainant, sworn and examined.
Adjourned until 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

WEDNESDAY, February 21.

The committee met. Present: all the members.

Ordered, by the committee, That Mr. Wilson produce to the committee the following papers by 10 o'clock to-morrow morning:

Letter from G. Davis to Commissioner of General Land Office, dated February 17, 1825; same to same, dated February 22, 1825; same to same, (not dated;) same to same, dated March 18, 1825; same to same, dated January 21, 1825; G. Graham to Hon. R. Rush, dated March 15, 1826; G. Davis to Commissioner, dated January 3 and 5, 1825.

Ordered, That Mr. Graham produce the correspondence between himself and G. Davis since December 22, 1824.

The following witnesses were sworn and examined:

John Wilson, the complainant, further examined; Hon. John Wilson, member of Congress; Mr. Haile, Silas Dinsmoor, George Wood, John M. Moore, and Samuel D. King.

The complainant, John Wilson, stated he had no other witnesses to examine.

The committee adjourned till 10 o'clock to-morrow.

THURSDAY February 22.

The committee met. Present: all the members.

John Wilson, the complainant, examined by the committee.

Mr. Wilson produced, in pursuance of the order of yesterday, all the papers required of him except the letter from George Graham to the Hon. R. Rush, dated March 15, 1826, the right to the production of which letter the committee waived.

Samuel D. King was further examined.

Robert King sworn and examined.

George Wood further examined.

Mr. Graham, in compliance with the order of yesterday, produced the correspondence as required.

Ordered. That Mr. Wilson produce the following papers by 10 o'clock to-morrow morning:

Letter from G. Davis to Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated May 27, 1825; same to same, dated February 5, 1825.

A statement made by the deputy surveyor from Donaldsonville, who was present when Mr. Davis' letter to Mr. Wilson was presented to him by Mr. Lyman.

Also a statement by Mr. Turner, mentioned in the postscript to the letter of January 3, 1825.

A copy of a letter received from Mr. Harper, sent in the letter of January 5, 1825.

Two memoranda, marked A and B, contained in the letter of January 21, 1825.

Copies of papers marked 1 and 2, being a letter from Mr. Turner and a list of books and papers received by him; also papers 3 and 4, being the copy of a letter from G. Davis to S. H. Harper, and his original letter in reply, contained in G. Davis' letter of March 18, 1825.

The copy of a letter from G. Davis to J. C. Turner, received April, 1825, from G. Davis, in a letter not dated.

A copy of G. Davis' note to the district attorney at New Orleans, received in George Davis' letter of February 17, 1825.

The committee adjourned till 9 o'clock to-morrow.

FRIDAY, February 23.

The committee met. Present: all the members.

Silas Dinsmoor further examined.

Mr. Wilson, in compliance with the order of yesterday, produced all the papers except the "statement made by the deputy surveyor from Donaldsonville, who was present when Mr. Davis' letter to Mr. Wilson was presented to him by Mr. Lyman;" and being required to produce that paper, he offered the following affidavit.—(See it, marked D, and filed in the papers.)

The committee adjourned till 3 o'clock this day.

The committee met pursuant to adjournment All the members present.

Committee adjourned till 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

SATURDAY, February 24.

The committee met. Present: all the members.

Committee adjourned till Monday morning next at 10 o'clock.

MONDAY, February 26.

Committee met. All the members present.

Letter from Mr. Graham to L. Wailes, dated February 28, 1824, marked A, filed under second charge.

John Wilson, a witness, sworn and examined as follows:

Question. Do you know if any, and what, steps were taken by Mr. Graham for the prosecution of Gabriel Winter at any time subsequent to the letter of February 28, 1824?

Answer. I do not know whether steps were taken to prosecute Winter.

Question. Do you know what reply Wailes made to the letter of February 28, 1824?

Answer. I do not.

Question. Do you know of any other fact in relation to the prosecution of Winter?

Answer. I do not.

Question. Do you, or do you not, know that the prosecution of Gabriel Winter was abandoned by order of the Secretary of the Treasury?

Answer. I do not.

Question. What do you know of the opening of a letter, as specified in the third charge?

Answer. I called at Mr. Graham's office, and was informed by Mr. Graham that there was a letter which had been there for two or three days, and which had been opened; which letter is herewith filed, marked B.

Question. Do you know of any other letter which was opened with Mr. Graham's knowledge?

Answer. None.

Question. Did Mr. Graham inform you that the letter had been broken open, and by whom?

Answer. He informed me that Mr. Wilson, a member of Congress, had broken it open and made the endorsement thereon, which is as follows: "Seal broken through mistake, supposing this letter was intended for John Wilson, a member of Congress." The letter was sealed at the time I received it at Mr. Graham's office.

Question. State all you know in relation to the twelfth charge.

Answer. I called on Mr. Graham for the settlement of my accounts, and stated that I understood from Colonel Dinsmoor that Mr. Graham said that he would settle them when presented; Mr. Graham replied that he had never said he would; that Mr. Davis was the proper person to settle them.

Question. What do you know in relation to the ninth charge?

Answer. In a conversation with Mr. Graham he said that Davis had sent on an account for $100, as charges for prosecuting a suit against witness in behalf of the United States, and that he, Graham, had written to Davis to know why said suit was continued against witness. Said suit was instituted by Davis to recover $2,000 alleged to be due the government, and that he afterwards found that the suit was brought to recover books and papers in possession of witness. Witness believes that said suit was not instituted by order of Graham. That the papers were afterwards taken out of his possession by legal process in said suit.

Question. Did Mr. Graham ever preclude you from prosecuting suits against Davis?

Answer. He refused to settle my accounts, and in that way prevented me from prosecuting suits against Davis.

Question. Do you know that Mr. Graham was informed of the register at New Orleans receiving or exacting illegal fees, as mentioned in the fourth charge, and when was he so informed?

Answer. I do not recollect when; it was between August, 1825, and this time. I informed Mr. Graham that Mr. Harper, the register at New Orleans, had exacted fees which he was not entitled to; that he had received from ten to fifteen dollars each, for making entries of back concessions, when the law entitled him to but twenty-five cents each. I also mentioned that I had a letter in my possession from William Kenna & Co. to R. H. Lee, but did not show the letter to Mr. Graham.

Question. Have you ever exhibited any written charges against the said register at New Orleans?

Answer. I have not.

Question. Have you ever informed Mr. Graham, in writing, that the register had received illegal fees?

Answer. I do not think I have.

Question. Did you request an inquiry into the conduct of the register?

Answer. In a conversation with Mr. Graham I stated that I thought an inquiry ought to be instituted into the official conduct of the register but made no formal request.

Question. Do you know of charges having been exhibited by any other person against the said register?

Answer. I do not.

Question. Did you, or did you not, know that the Secretary of the Treasury was a proper public agent to whom to communicate the alleged misconduct of the register of the land office at New Orleans, as contained in your fourth specification; and if so, did you communicate to the Secretary of the Treasury?

Answer. I have no recollection of having made a communication to the Secretary of the Treasury; I considered Mr. Graham the proper person.

Mr. Wilson abandons that part of the fifth charge which relates to Mr. Graham's having advertised lands for sale without the authority of the President.

Question. Were any of the lands proclaimed for sale August 5, 1826, and referred to in the fifth charge, sold in pursuance of that proclamation?

Answer. Not that I know of; I believe the proclamation was withdrawn before the day of sale.

Question. Do you know that Mr. Graham has knowingly communicated to Congress false calculations of the returns of unsold lands? And if so, state the particular facts.

Answer. I do not know that he has knowingly made false returns to Congress; but I believe they have been erroneous.

Question. In what particular are they erroneous?

Answer. In this: that I believe, from information, that the calculations of the arrears of land surveyed were made geometrically.

Question. Do you know how the calculations of the returns made to Congress of unsold lands were made?

Answer. I do not; but was informed that all the calculations were made geometrically. I did not allude to any particular return to Congress.

Question. What papers do you allude to in the seventh charge, and what person?

Answer. I allude to myself as the person; and the papers I allude to were papers sent to the register's office for the settlement of my accounts, and now filed there; and I allude to no other papers. I think Mr. Graham withheld papers longer than he ought to have done, though they were afterwards filed with the Secretary of the Treasury or the register for the settlement of my accounts.

Question. Did you file the papers alluded to with Mr. Graham yourself, or were they filed with him by the Secretary of the Treasury for his report thereon?

Answer. I understood that they were filed with Mr. Graham by the Secretary for his report thereon.

Question. Were the papers to which you allude papers which related to your official duties, and which it was necessary for you to transmit to the officers of the government for the purpose of settling your accounts; or were they your own private papers, which you reserved for the purpose of preservation to settle your own claims?

Answer. I considered they were public official papers necessary to be filed for the settlement of my accounts; but, that done, I considered myself entitled to a part of them.

Question. Did Mr. Graham promise you copies of papers; did he afterwards refuse to furnish them; and for what reason did he refuse you a reference to public documents necessary in the settlement of your accounts?

Answer. Mr. Graham did promise me copies of papers which I considered important to me in the settlement of my accounts; which papers were afterwards refused by his clerk, or a reference, in any way, to them, assigning as a reason that Mr. Graham had directed that no copies should be furnished me until I returned some papers belonging to the files of his office. Mr. Graham did not ask me to surrender those papers when he promised me the copies.

J. WILSON.

Hon. John Wilson, member of Congress from South Carolina, sworn:

Question. What do you know relative to the breaking open a letter addressed to John Wilson, as mentioned in the third charge?

Answer. I received a letter from the post office at the Capitol addressed to John Wilson or George Graham, and, supposing it intended for me, broke it open. On perusing the letter I discovered that it was not for me. I immediately returned it to the post office, having made the endorsement, in my own handwriting, of the mistake. The letter was sealed by myself or the postmaster.

Question. Did you ever open any letters in Mr. Graham's office, with the privity and consent of Mr. Graham, addressed to John Wilson?

Answer. I never did.

Question by John Wilson, the complainant. Are your letters generally addressed to John Wilson, esq., or to the Hon. John Wilson?

Answer. I have received letters addressed in both ways.

JOHN WILSON.

Hon. Mr. Haile, member of Congress, sworn:

Question. State what you know in relation to the eighth charge.

Answer. I know nothing of his (Graham's) neglect to carry into effect his instructions in relation to George Davis. I know nothing, of my own knowledge, in regard to the settlement of accounts, (the accounts of deputy surveyors;) nor do I know that any charges were ever filed, or representations made, requiring Mr. Graham to remove Mr. Davis, except what others have told me since my arrival in the city of Washington. I am not personally acquainted with George Davis, and I have never officially applied for his removal from office.

WM. HAILE.

Silas Dinsmoor, sworn:

Question. Do you, or do you not, know that George Graham, Commissioner of the General Land Office, has neglected to carry into effect his instruction to George Davis in relation to the settlement of the accounts of deputy surveyors?

Answer. I do not know that Mr. Graham neglected to carry the instructions into effect. It is a fact that they were not carried into effect; but I do not know whose neglect it was.

Question. In what particular were they not carried into effect?

Answer. George Davis neglected and refused to pay the deputy surveyors, according to the instructions of Mr. Graham, dated August 15, 1824, and annexed to the charges.

Question. Do you, or do you not, know whether any charges have been exhibited to Mr. Graham against George Davis?

Answer. I do not know.

Question. Did Mr. Graham state to you that charges had been exhibited to him against George Davis; and if so, when and by whom?

Answer. In February, 1826, I was at Mr. Graham's office, and he inquired if I knew Mr. Wilson, and said that heavy charges had been exhibited against George Davis, but did not say they had been exhibited to him; nor did he specify what the charges were; nor do I know what proof was exhibited to Mr. Graham in support of said charges.

Question. Did you ever exhibit to Mr. Graham affidavits from deputy surveyors and others showing that Mr. Davis had been guilty of improper conduct in office, and complaining of his incompetency to the duties of the office?

Answer. I did present to Mr. Graham, in January last, affidavits from John Gilmore and William Brown, deputy surveyors, and a letter from Joseph Dunbar. These were accompanied by certificates from men of good character; which affidavits stated that said Davis was unworthy of public or private confidence. These papers were returned to me in a letter from the General Land Office, dated January 30, 1827. A few days after they were delivered to Mr. Graham they were returned by my request.

Question. State at whose instance those affidavits were taken, and for what purpose they were given to you, and by whom.

Answer. The affidavits were taken at my instance. They were taken to convince the government of the impropriety of sending me back to Davis for the settlement of my accounts, and not taken for the purpose of filing them as charges for the removal of said Davis from office, but for my own justification; and when returned to me, I presented them to the President of the United States, with the letter of Mr. Graham.

Question. Do you know that Mr. Graham ever took any measures for the removal of Davis?

Answer. I do not. Mr. Graham stated to me that so long as the President retained said Davis in office he (Graham) was bound to respect him.

Question by Mr. Wilson. Please state if you had any other motive in showing those affidavits to Mr. Graham; and if so, what were they, and any remarks made by Mr. Graham in relation to the charges against Davis?

Answer. I am under the impression that I have already fully answered that question.

Question. Do you know that Mr. Graham, in his report to Congress of December 20, 1826, wilfully misrepresented the causes why the lands south of the 31st degree of latitude in Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama, had not been surveyed or brought into market?

Answer. I cannot say he did. I believe there is an error in the statement of the date of my dismissal. I do not know that it emanated from Mr. Graham's office.

Question. Have you retained in your possession, since 1824, any papers relative to surveys south of the 31st degree of latitude?

Answer. I retained the field notes of all the surveys until the 9th of November last, when they were delivered to an agent of the government.

Question. Do you know that Mr. Graham stated any wilful and deliberate falsehoods in relation to the settlement of the accounts of the principal deputy surveyors of the eastern and southeastern districts, in the State of Louisiana?

Answer. Not to my knowledge.

Question by Mr. Wilson. Did Mr. Graham state to you, in conversation, that on presenting my accounts to him they would be adjusted?

Answer. Mr. Graham stated to me that the accounts of Mr. Wilson can be settled on presentation.

Question by Mr. Graham. Have I not uniformly stated to you that the accounts of the principal deputy surveyors should be settled by the surveyor under whom they acted?

Answer. You have.

Question. Did Mr. Graham state to you that your accounts should be settled here?

Answer. He did not.

Question. Do you know of Mr. Graham's withholding any important papers, or any other papers, properly belonging to any person, or of his refusing to furnish copies of any such papers after having promised so to do?

Answer. I do not.

Question. Do you know that Mr. Graham refused to allow to Mr. Wilson, or any other person, a reference to public documents which were necessary for him to have in the settlement of his legal claims on the government?

Answer. Mr. Wilson, in March, 1826, called on Mr. Graham, at the General Land Office, for certain papers addressed to him as the Commissioner, which Mr. Graham directed me to give to Mr. Wilson, and to take his receipt for them, which I did. It was distinctly understood by me, from the Commissioner, that Mr. Wilson was to return them to the files of the office as soon as it was practicable for him to make copies of them. After Mr. Wilson had bad them in his possession for a week or ten days, I called on him, at the request of Mr. Graham, to return them, which he promised me to do without delay. He did not return them. I repeatedly called on him, at the request of Mr. Graham, and received from Mr. Wilson repeated assurances that he would return them. On May 10, 1826, Mr. Graham came into my room, accompanied by Mr. Wilson, and requested me to deliver a bundle of papers, which he then gave me, to Mr. Wilson, and to take his receipt for the same; which I did, and the receipt is now in my possession. A long time elapsed, sufficient for Mr. Wilson to have made copies of them all, when, at the request of Mr. Graham, I called on Mr. Wilson for them; he promised that these papers should be returned in a day or two; that lie was then preparing copies of them. I made many applications for these papers as they were important letters, and the frequent reference made to the files of the surveyor general at Washington made it highly important that they should be in their proper places; this I stated to Mr. Wilson. He returned to the office, about the month of September or October, the letter of Mr. Davis, dated February 4, 1826, and the accompanying papers, and stated that he had not done with the papers still in his hands. In December last the papers which were loaned to Mr. Wilson more than seven months before were returned to the office by the honorable Secretary of the Treasury with other papers, and referring to the Commissioner a communication relating to Mr. Wilson's accounts. These papers were handed me by the Commissioner. On my receiving the fair copy of his reply to the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Graham said to me "that here were the papers which Mr. Wilson had so long detained, and that they should be returned to this office when the Secretary was done with them." I therefore made an envelope over those papers sent to the Hon. Mr. Rush, with Mr. Graham's reply, and wrote on that envelope that the papers enclosed belonged to the files of the General Land Office, and respectfully requested that they might be returned to the General Land Office when he had made his examination of them, which was done. On the 18th December last Mr. Wilson came to the General Land Office and demanded of me those papers received from the Treasury Department, as being his. In reply, I said that they were placed on the files of the office, and, if he wanted them again, he must get Mr. Graham's consent. He then demanded the receipt I had taken of his having received those papers, which I delivered to him. I saw Mr. Wilson on the evening of that day, (December 18,) at the request of Mr. Moore, the chief clerk, and stated to him that the request he had addressed to the Commissioner on that day would not be complied with until he had given up those letters which he had so long withheld; to which he replied that he would not give them up. Those papers delivered in March, 1826, were submitted to the First Comptroller of the Treasury, with the report of the Commissioner, on the accounts of Mr. Wilson, dated January 10, 1827; certified copies are now on the table before the committee. There are now eight letters from George Davis to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, received by Mr. Wilson May 10, 1826, still in Mr. Wilson's hands. Mr. Graham, so far from refusing Mr. Wilson a reference to public documents which he deemed necessary for him to have in the settlement of his legal claims, gave him every facility which the office afforded; nor do I know that he has refused to any other person all the facilities which the office affords in the settlement of their claims.

Question by Mr. Wilson. Did I not, some days after the receipt of the letter from Mr. Moore, call at the office and request a reference to the papers alluded to, and did not you refuse me a reference in any way, stating that it was the orders of Mr. Graham?

Answer. On the 18th of December, the same day on which Mr. Wilson made the request for certain papers of Mr. Graham, while I was at the cases containing the files of the office, examining them to see if Mr. Wilson had delivered up the letters for which I had taken his receipts, before delivering those receipts up to him, Mr. Wilson did make an attempt to overlook me and to examine the papers, which I would not permit. I do not recollect stating that Mr. Graham had directed me to do so; but I did say to Mr. Wilson, as before deposed, that if he wanted the papers he must get Mr. Graham's consent, without which he should not look at them.

GEORGE WOOD.

John M. Moore sworn:

Question. Do you know of Mr. Graham's withholding any important papers, or any other papers, properly belonging to any person, or of his refusing to furnish copies of any such papers after having promised so to do?

Answer. I know nothing of any promise Mr. Graham may have made; but I heard Mr. Graham say that copies of papers which Mr. Wilson wanted could not be delivered until he, Wilson, delivered up the mass of papers which he had borrowed. I do not know of Mr. Graham's having refused to deliver papers properly belonging to any other person.

Question. Do you know that Mr. Graham refused to allow to Mr. Wilson, or any other person, a reference to public documents which were necessary for him to have in the settlement of his legal claims on the government?

Answer. I do not know of Mr. Wilson, or any other person, being refused a reference to public documents which were necessary for the prosecution of their just rights.

Question. Did the papers which were in the possession of Mr. Wilson properly belong to the files of the office?

Answer. I believe they did.

Question by Mr. Wilson. Do you, or do you not, recollect that a day or two previous to your addressing me a note, requesting me to return to your office certain papers in my possession, tha tI applied to Mr.

Wood to allow me to look at other papers; and did he not refuse me, saying that he had received orders from Mr. Graham to do so?

Answer. I can say nothing about it.

Question by the same. Did Mr. Graham direct you not to deliver to me copies of papers which I had called for?

Answer. Mr. Graham declined giving copies of some letters which Mr. Wilson requested until Mr. Wilson should surrender some original letters which he held in his possession belonging to the files of the office, and directed me to advise Mr. Wilson of his determination. I addressed a note to Mr. Wilson, requesting him merely to surrender the originals; but Mr. Wilson demanded the copies without surrendering the originals. After a few days succeeding the date of my note, I then advised him, verbally, of the only condition on which the copies could be granted.

JOHN M. MOORE.

Samuel D. King sworn:

Question. Do you know of Mr. Graham's withholding any important papers, or any other papers, properly belonging to any person, or of his refusing to furnish copies of any such papers after having promised so to do?

Answer. I do not.

Question. Do you know that Mr. Graham refused to allow to Mr. Wilson, or any other person, a reference to public documents which were necessary for him to have in the settlement of his legal claims on the government?

Answer. I do not.

Question by Mr. Wilson. Do you know of Mr. Graham's promising to furnish me with copies of papers and afterwards refusing to do so?

Answer. I understood Mr. Graham to say that if you would address him a note you should have copies of the papers. I afterwards understood that Mr. Graham refused to furnish the copies until you returned certain original papers which you had in your possession belonging to the office.

Question by Mr. Graham. Are you not the clerk in the Land Office who makes out the patents on private land claims?

Answer. Yes.

Question by the same. Have we ever had, previous to December 20, 1826, a township plat in the office south of the 31st degree of latitude, in Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama, east of the Mississippi river, from which a patent for a private claim could be made out with accuracy?

Answer. None that I ever saw.

Question by the same. Has any township plat ever been returned to the office for the same district of country that was correct?

Answer. None.

Question by the same. Have not those few township plats which had been returned to the office in the same district of country, and which were incorrect, been returned for correction, and for laying down the private claims, since the papers have been recovered from Mr. Dinsmoor?

Answer. Yes, with the exception of one plat; the plat of the township including the town of Mobile.

Question by the same. Was not that retained because it was expected the surveyor was obliged to make out an entire new plat, and that that would be useless to him?

Answer. Yes; for that reason, and because it was the only plat in that section of the country that contained any private claims.

Question. Is it not the general practice of the office not to proclaim lands for sale until the township plats have been received?

Answer. It is the general practice.

Question by Mr. Wilson. Have not the lands in the southeastern district of Louisiana been proclaimed twice for sale, once in 1823 and once in 1826; and were township lines run through those lands?

Answer. I cannot say positively as regards the proclamations; the surveys of those lands were not made conformably to the usual method of surveying the public lands, being made under the provisions of a special law.

S. D. KING.

Robert King sworn:

Question. Are you the draughtsman in the General Land Office?

Answer. I am.

Question. Are you the clerk who generally makes out the calculations of the quantity of lands surveyed, when called for by Congress?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Have you not always made out those calculations from the best materials the office afforded?

Answer. I have.

Question. Were not the township plats in many instances defective, in consequence of the surveyors not having returned the table of contents?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Were not those quantities heretofore ascertained, where no table of contents were returned, by geometrical calculations?

Answer. Yes.

Question. In all cases where you ascertained by geometrical calculations, were they as correct as if the quantities had been taken from the table of contents?

Answer. No; they could not be as correct.

Question by Mr. Graham. Previous to my coming into office, was there any book kept in which the quantities contained in each township, as contained in the table of contents, was recorded?

Answer. No.

Question by the same. Did I not, sometime after coming into office, direct you to keep a book in which the quantities of land contained in each township and fractional township was to be recorded?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Was not the return made to Congress this year taken from that book?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Although the geometrical calculations are not precisely accurate, are they not sufficiently so for all useful and practical purposes?

Answer. Yes.

Question. State if there are any papers belonging to the General Land Office that were forwarded by Mr. Davis in reply to the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury, informing him (Davis) of charges made against him, that were delivered to Mr. Wilson, and which have not been returned?

Answer. The letters received for by Mr. Wilson on May 10, 1826, are returned, excepting the letters of George Davis to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated May 27, 1825, and one dated February 5, 1825, and the enclosures referred to by Mr. Davis in his letter of January 3, 1825, in which he says: "I now enclose you a statement made by the deputy surveyor, just now from Donaldsonville, who was present when my letter to Mr. Wilson was presented to him by Mr. Lyman, which puts the infatuation of Mr. Wilson, as regards the withholding of the plats of surveyed, beyond question;" also the statement of Mr. Turner, mentioned in the postscript. This letter was detained by Mr. Davis, and enclosed in his letter of 5th January, in which he states that "the letter and other papers which you will receive, having been sent to the post office a few moments too late for the last mail, I have withdrawn the packet to-day in order to enclose the copy of a letter since received from Mr. Harper." These papers are not returned.

In the letter of January 21, 1825, Mr. Davis, in a postscript, writes: "I send two memoranda, marked A and B, not at first intended for your eye, but now sent to explain what Mr. Dinsmoor means by what he calls regularity and order in an office," &c. These are not returned.

Mr. Davis, in his letter of March 18, 1825, states: "I had the pleasure, yesterday, of receiving a letter from Mr. Turner, covering a copy of the catalogue of the books, papers, and other public property of his office, of which he appears to have been just put in possession by the marshal. I enclose a copy of each, marked Nos. 1 and 2. I also enclose Nos. 3 and 4, respectively, the copy of a letter which I addressed to Mr. Harper, the register, while I was at New Orleans, and his original letter in reply." These papers are not returned.

In the letter, not dated, (received April, 1825,) Mr. Davis says, "he encloses a copy of a letter from himself to J. C. Turner." This is not returned.

The letter of G. Davis, of February 17, 1825, states, "on my arrival here, I addressed, as heretofore stated to you, a note to the district attorney, a copy of which is herewith enclosed." This copy is not returned.

The letters which were given me by Mr. Graham to loan to Mr. Wilson on May 16, 1826, were those sent to the honorable Mr. Rush, with the letter dated March 15, 1826, and the enclosures, (with the exception of Mr. McCrummins' and other contracts, and the bill of Mr. Lloyd,) were filed in the letters, as is the uniform custom of the office. They were letters relating immediately to the charges now preferred by Mr. Wilson; and Mr. Davis' letters of the 3d and 5th of January will be found to sustain the propriety of the conduct of Mr. Harper, the register in New Orleans, in making certain charges for services performed by him for making copies of plats, &c., to applicants for such copies, which is not, I believe, any part of his official duty. The contracts sent in letters to the General Land Office are filed separately; and the bill of Mr. Lloyd for surveys was referred to M. R. King, whose duty it is to examine the accounts of the surveyors.

GEO. WOOD.

Silas Dinsmoor further examined:

Question by Mr. Graham. Were the surveyors which Mr. Davis refused to pay, the surveyors employed by you?

Answer. They were employed by me, but were commissioned by Mr. Davis' predecessors.

Question by the same. Were the field notes of those surveyors in your possession, or in the possession of Mr. Davis, at the time Mr. Davis refused to pay?

Answer. They were in my possession, and retained by me, because I had to certify to the correctness of the surveys according to the field notes deposited in my office.

Question. Do you know that those surveyors made application to Mr. Davis previous to January 1, 1825, and he refused to pay them?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Can you state when the refusal was made?

Answer. I think in November, 1824.

Question by Mr. Wilson. Was it necessary, according to the rules of the office, that the field notes should be returned to Mr. Davis, that he might be authorized to pay the deputies after the certificate had been forwarded to the surveyor?

Answer. I think not; the law does not require it; they never had been formally requested; and the certificates were always considered as sufficient evidence to pay the deputies, and payments were made under them.

SILAS DINSMOOR.

George Wood further examined:

Question. Was the date of the dismissal of Colonel Dinsmoor in the report of Mr. Graham of December 20, 1824, the result of accident; and if so, how did it occur?

Answer. Mr. Graham requested me to give him whatever information the files of the office afforded of the dismissal of Colonel Dinsmoor. I brought him two letters—one dated October 24, 1824, and the other November 24—1824, from George Davis, both of which had some reference to the dismissal of Colonel Dinsmoor and the appointment of General Morgan. From the similarity of the dates of the two letters laid before him, Mr. Graham, in filling up the blank he had left in the draught he was then making, inserted the date October, instead of November, 1824.

Letter from the chairman of the committee to Mr. Graham.

CONGRESS HALL, February 16, 1827.

DEAR SIR: Mr. John Wilson has preferred charges against you, of which, by order of the committee, you have here a copy. The House of Representatives had referred those charges for investigation to the Committee on the Judiciary, who have been discharged, and the subject turned over to the Committee on Public Lands. The committee will meet on Monday morning at 9 o'clock, and will receive from you any communications you shall see proper to make on the subject. Mr. Wilson has been notified to attend and sustain his charges.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN SCOTT.

GEORGE GRAHAM, Esq.

Letter from the chairman of the committee to Mr. Wilson.

CONGRESS HALL, February 16, 1827.

SIR: The charges presented by you against George Graham, esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office, have been referred by the House of Representatives to the Committee on Public Lands. The committee will meet on Monday next at 9 o'clock, and have directed me to say to you that they will expect your attendance before them at the committee room, prepared with such evidence as you may have to sustain the charges. The committee will also expect of you a list of witnesses, and copies, or a reference where copies of such documents as you rely on may be obtained. The committee will prefer written evidence and written statements, as far as practicable.

Your obedient servant,

JOHN SCOTT.

Mr. JOHN WILSON.

Mr. Wilson to the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

WASHINGTON, January 31, 1827.

Sir: I beg leave to enclose herewith charges against George Graham, Commissioner of the General Land Office, the nature of which, it is presumed, will be considered sufficient to require an investigation into his conduct; and all of which, it is confidently believed, are susceptible of the strongest proofs.

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN WILSON,

Principal Deputy Surveyor for the Southeastern District of Louisiana.

Hon. JOHN W. TAYLOR, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

I.

Charges against George Graham, Commissioner of the General Land Office, exhibited by John Wilson, principal Deputy Surveyor of the Southeastern District of the State of Louisiana.

First. For conduct operating against the interests of the United States, and of individuals concerned in lands in the said States.

Second. His wilful and criminal delinquency in neglecting to comply with the instructions of the honorable William H. Crawford, late Secretary of the Treasury, to prosecute, or cause to be prosecuted, on civil and criminal suits, one Gabriel Winter, of Natchez, in the State of Mississippi, who had sworn falsely, for the purpose of defrauding the government of a certain sum of money which the said Graham directed to be deducted from the accounts of an officer of the government, and to be paid to the aforesaid Winter, for his benefit.

Third. His permitting one or more letters to be opened and read in his office by a person to whom he knew they were not addressed nor intended for.

Fourth. His wilful and criminal delinquency in not directing an inquiry into the conduct of the register of the land office in New Orleans, on being informed that he had imposed upon land claimants by making the most exorbitant charges, as fees, which were unauthorized by law, oppressive upon the claimants, and injurious to the interests of the government.

Fifth. His advertising lands for sale by public proclamation, published in one or more of the public papers, bearing date August 5, 1826, on the Bayou Grosse Tête, in the State of Louisiana, in the absence of the President, who alone was authorized to direct the sale; a great part of which lands he must or ought to have known, from the records in his office, had been confirmed as pre-emption rights, or sold at public sale, whilst other lands, long since surveyed and prepared for sale, were not offered.

Sixth. His incompetency to the performance of the duties of his office, in making returns to Congress of unsold lands; the calculations of which produce results so erroneous, and of such data, as to preclude the possibility of their being correctly acted upon.

Seventh. His withholding papers properly belonging to and highly important to the person applying for them, and refusing to furnish copies which he had previously promised, or a reference in any way to public documents, also properly belonging to and equally important to the applicant in the adjustment of his legal claims upon the government.

Eighth. For neglecting to carry into effect his own instructions to George Davis, the surveyor of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee, in relation to the settlement of the accounts of deputy surveyors, (a copy of which is hereto annexed,) and his neglect to take proper measures for the removal of said Davis, who had been repeatedly represented to him as a man of most infamous character, incompetent to the performance of the duties of his office, and against whom charges embracing offences of the most serious nature, and well authenticated, had been exhibited, when he, the said Graham, knew that the interests of the government, as well as of individuals, were materially affected by his continuance in office.

Ninth. His permitting the aforesaid George Davis to continue a suit, instituted by him as the agent of the United States, against an officer of the government, founded upon a false oath made by the aforesaid Davis, which will appear by his correspondence with said Graham, and precluding, by his official acts, the aforesaid officer from prosecuting suits instituted against him, Davis, thereby subjecting him to great delay and pecuniary embarrassments.

Tenth. For wilful misrepresentations made in an official report to Congress bearing date December 20, 1826, in compliance with a resolution of the House of Representatives, dated the 19th of said month, to show cause why the lands in the States of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama, south of the 31st degree of north latitude, had not been surveyed and brought into market, did, in the aforesaid report, represent, as one cause, "the detention of the books, records, and papers, by the late principal deputy surveyor, Silas Dinsmoor, who was removed from office in October, 1824," thereby imposing upon Congress the belief that no lands had been surveyed or prepared for sale in said Dinsmoor's district, whereas he knew, or ought to have known, from the records in his office, that about one hundred townships had been surveyed, the surveys approved of by the proper officer, and that the aforesaid number of townships might have been brought into market more than three years since, and previous to the appointment of the present surveyor south of Tennessee; and further, that he, the said Graham, did assert that the aforesaid Silas Dinsmoor was removed from office in October, 1824, which he, Graham, knew was not the case, as will appear from his correspondence with George Davis, the surveyor of the lands south of Tennessee.

Eleventh. His having asserted that the continuance in office of the surveyor of the lands of the United States south of Tennessee was the fault of the President of the United States, thereby attempting to exculpate himself from his own gross derelictions and violations of duty in relation to the conduct of the aforesaid surveyor by an attempt to impose them upon the President.

Twelfth. His wilful and deliberate falsehoods in relation to the settlement of the accounts of the principal deputy surveyors of the eastern and southern districts of the State of Louisiana.

Respectfully submitted by

JOHN WILSON,

Principal Deputy Surveyor for the Eastern and Southeastern Districts of Louisiana.

Extract from a letter addressed by George Graham, Commissioner of the General Land Office, bearing date August 15, 1824, to George Davis, surveyor of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee, (referred to in the eighth charge.)

"In the Jackson Court-house district the surveying should be confined to the surveying of the private claims, connecting them with the township lines, and completing the plats of all those townships which contain private claims.

"I enclose a copy of a letter from Mr. Dinsmoor. From this letter, and from others addressed to members of Congress from Louisiana by different deputy surveyors, it appears that the credit of the government has been materially injured by the conduct of your predecessors in office. You will therefore take immediate measures to remove any just complaints which may be made by the deputy surveyors, in consequence of any improper detention of the money due to them by the government, by a speedy settlement of their accounts. That the necessary funds may be promptly remitted you will furnish this office with an estimate, exhibiting—

First. "The sums, in detail, actually due to the several deputy surveyors for surveys made in each land district, respectively, distinguishing the sums due for the surveys actually returned, and those not returned."

Second. "The amount required to pay for surveys contracted for, and expected to be finished previous to January 1, 1825, in each separate district."

Third. "The amount required to defray the surveying expenses for 1825. This last estimate will be submitted to Congress with the estimates from the Treasury Department, and must be made in detail, exhibiting the sums required for each land district.

"GEORGE GRAHAM."

Copy of charges against George Davis, referred to in eighth charge.

Charges against George Davis, surveyor of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee, exhibited by John Wilson, late principal deputy surveyor of the southeastern district of Louisiana.

First. For violating the act of Congress of February 28, 1806, and for conduct operating against the interests of the United States, and of individuals concerned in lands within the said district.

Second. For refusing to confirm the appointment of Louis Bringier, made by the principal deputy surveyor, as a deputy, after having promised such confirmation; and appointing one John Fletcher, a man of infamous character, altogether incompetent to perform the duties of the office, and a person who had lately before been confined in the jail or calaboose under some criminal charge, where it is understood the surveyor, who was also confined, made his acquaintance.

Third. That the incompetency and worthless character of the said Fletcher was notorious, and known to the said surveyor before the appointment was made, and that he had previously expressed his opinion in public of Fletcher's incapacity.

Fourth. That the said Davis appointed various incompetent persons as deputy surveyors, against the remonstrances of landholders, who absolutely refused to let such surveyors run their lines, in consequence of which the said lands remained unsurveyed up to the date of these allegations.

Fifth. That one of these deputies, named James Grinage, could not even commence the front grants, although they had natural boundaries, such as rivers and bayous, and was repeatedly making application by letter to know where and how to begin, and when instructed could not proceed; all of which must have been known to said Davis.

Sixth. That the surveys made by the deputy surveyors, who were so improperly appointed, are in most or all instances entirely erroneous, and that the said surveyor was apprised of their errors, and still suffered them to continue.

Seventh. That the said surveys made by these incompetent deputies will create great confusion and difficulty, and that when the general plat of that district is projected the lines will not correspond; all of which must or ought to have been anticipated and plainly foreseen by the said surveyor when he appointed those incompetent deputies.

Eighth. That the inaccuracies of the surveys made by his incompetent deputies have produced various conflicting titles, and that the surveys have tended to confuse and destroy the old admitted claims, and to create litigation and dispute among the claimants.

Ninth. That the said surveyor has very considerably retarded the surveyors in said district by abusive language and ill treatment to the old and experienced deputies, many of whom have been driven from the employment by unwarrantable insults, all of which have resulted from improper partiality, and adopted to displace qualified men from the service, and put in their stead unfit and ignorant partisans.

Tenth. For withholding public moneys from the deputies when in possession of funds, which were to be applied to their use, without any just cause why their accounts should not have been paid.

Eleventh. For compelling deputies to refund money which had been legally paid them, when no just reason existed.

Twelfth. His appointing to the office of principal deputy surveyor for the southeastern district of Louisiana a very young man, who is totally unfit for the duties of the office, having neither practical nor theoretic knowledge of surveying.

Thirteenth. For attempting to intimidate the deputies from urging a settlement of their accounts by the most abusive and threatening language, and acting the part of a common bully to effect his object.

Fourteenth. For having positively forbidden one of his principal deputy surveyors from corresponding with the Commissioner of the General Land Office or the Secretary of the Treasury without first sending the letters to him, that he might judge of the propriety of forwarding them.

Fifteenth. His repeated threats and disrespectful language against the Secretary of the Treasury and Commissioner of the General Land Office.

Sixteenth. His entire incompetency to conduct the surveys and private claims in the State of Louisiana.

Seventeenth. His improper conduct in writing confidential letters to his deputies, endeavoring to get them to act as spies upon the old surveyors, that he might have a pretence for removing them from office, and, when this failed, undertaking to remove them himself without any cause.

Eighteenth. For receiving again into employment surveyors who had been previously dismissed for fraud upon the general government, and extortion from individuals, all of which had been before known to said Davis.

Nineteenth. For wilfully, maliciously, and falsely swearing that John Wilson, late principal deputy surveyor for the southeastern district of Louisiana, was indebted to the general government in the sum of two thousand dollars, and causing the said Wilson to be held to bail in that sum as a debtor to the United States, until, from the manifest showing of the said Wilson, the judge of the district court of the United States for the eastern district of Louisiana discharged and released his bail.

Twentieth. In falsely stating that the said Wilson had defrauded the government of the United States out of fifteen or twenty thousand dollars, and assigning that as a reason for withholding money due to the said Wilson.

Twenty-first. For ordering the said Wilson, then principal deputy surveyor, to Washington, Mississippi, under pretence of settling his accounts, and having detained him there several days when no necessity existed for such detention or settlement, as the said Davis had all the proper receipts from Wilson; all of which was to the injury of the general government, and to the land claimants, in the loss of time, and to the health and interest of said Wilson.

Twenty-second. For improper conduct as surveyor, in making repeated applications for a check of $140 08 in favor of Auguste Bonnet, which had been previously delivered to said Davis' son; and writing to the cashier of the Branch Bank of Donaldsonville to stop that check if offered, when he knew his son had given a written receipt for the same; and still declaring to others that the said check was dishonestly withheld by said Wilson.

Twenty-third. For imposing unnecessary duty upon the principal deputy surveyor, the said Wilson, and his deputies, by requiring triplicate plats of surveys, made previous to his appointment to office, which consumed the time of said surveyor and deputies that should have been usefully devoted to public service.

Twenty-fourth. For the infamous moral character of the said George Davis, and his unfitness to perform the duties of surveyor.

All of which is submitted by

DONALDSONVILLE, March 16, 1825.

JOHN WILSON.

II.

By the President of the United States.

In pursuance of the provisions of an act of Congress approved April 20, 1818, entitled "An act authorizing the disposal of certain lots of public ground in the city of New Orleans and town of Mobile," it is hereby ordered that the register and receiver of the land office at New Orleans shall expose to public sale, to the highest bidder, on the first Monday in January next, the building formerly appropriated by the United States to the use of the naval arsenal, together with the ground occupied by the said building and its appurtenances.

There will also be exposed to public sale, at the same time and place, and in pursuance of the provisions of the act above quoted, six certain lots of ground situate in the city of New Orleans, designated on the official plat of survey filed in the office of the register of the land office as numbers thirteen, fourteen, fifteen, sixteen, seventeen, and eighteen, binding on the Rue de l'Hospital, and fronting on the Rue de Conde, which ground has been relinquished to the United States by the Ursuline nuns of the said city.

There will also be exposed to public sale, at the same time and place, a piece of ground belonging to the United States, situate in the same square as the lots above designated, being three feet and nine inches wide, by one hundred and twenty feet deep.

It is further ordered that, at the same time and place, the said register and receiver shall expose to public sale the following lots of land, situate on the Bayou Gros Tête, in the district of lands offered for sale at New Orleans, viz:

Lots numbered from seven to ninety-four, inclusive of both numbers, situate on the east side of the said bayou.

Lots numbered one to twenty-five, inclusive of both numbers, situate on the west side of the said bayou.

Also a second range of lots, situate on the east side of the said bayou, numbered from one to thirteen, inclusive of both numbers.

The sale will commence on the first Monday in January next, and will be continued until the whole of the property shall have been offered.

The lots on the Bayou Gros Tête, appropriated for the benefit of schools, will be excluded from sale.

Given under my hand, at the city of Washington, this 5th day of August, A. D. 1826.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

By the President:

GEO. GRAHAM, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, August 5, 1826.

By direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, and in virtue of the provisions of the act of Congress passed May 15, 1826, entitled "An act for the sale of a house and lot in New Orleans and a storehouse at the quarantine ground in Louisiana," the register and receiver of the land office at New Orleans will offer at public sale, to the highest bidder, on the first Monday in January next, the house and lot in Royal street, in the city of New Orleans, heretofore used for the district court of the United States.

By order:

GEO. GRAHAM, Commissioner of the General Land Office

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 28, 1824.

SIR: With the instruction dated the 8th of August last, authorizing the payment of the salary claimed by Mr. Winter, I forwarded copies of the papers on which that instruction was founded, together with a copy of Mr. Winter's affidavit.

I now enclose a copy of a letter from Mr. Wilson to the Secretary of the Treasury, together with the copies of the certificates which accompanied it, and am instructed by the Secretary to say to you that he still thinks that Mr. Wilson is not entitled to his salary from a period beyond that to which you were authorized by my letter of the 8th of August last to pay him; but that the facts stated, and the testimony now furnished by Mr. Wilson, show that Mr. Winter had virtually abandoned his office, and therefore should not have received the pay; and he has directed me to request that you will call upon Mr. Winter to refund the amount paid by you, and to assure him that if he does not, both civil and criminal process will be issued against him. You will communicate without delay the answer which Mr. Winter may make in reply to your demand.

With great respect, your obedient servant.

V.—B.

ADAMS COUNTY, Mississippi, January 5, 1826.

DEAR SIR: I was in Claiborne county when your letter of the 27th of November must have arrived at Washington. I received it a few days since. I recollect informing Mr. Davis, by letter, about the time you were settling your account with him in October, 1824, that it would be proper to deduct a certain sum which had been paid to Gabriel Winter, by orders from the Commissioner of the General Land Office. But I have not the most indistinct recollection that two days elapsed between the date of my note to him on that subject and the time of its delivery. This much, however, I can say, that whether there may have been such a delivery or not, nothing could have been more foreign from my mind than a design to defraud either Mr. Davis or the government, or benefit you.

I have seen and heard so much of the extraordinary epistles of this suspicious blockhead that I have ceased to regard anything coming from him in any other light than that of utter contempt.

I perfectly recollect writing to Mr. Harper, register of the land office in the southeastern district, at the time I forwarded to him maps of the lands which had been advertised for sale on the west side of the Mississippi in that district. I had found the maps (if such they might be called) of those lands in the office, without course or distance on any of the lines, nor could I find the field notes of any of them. They appeared to have been divided into sections, somewhat upon the plan for surveying lands under the Spanish government; but the contents of no section had been calculated, or if they had been they were not inserted on the maps. In the short time allowed for the computation, and specially with the data before me, I had no other means of deducing their contents than from the projections. These I knew were not to be relied on for accuracy, and even if they had been, that mode of computation, I need not tell you, would have been but an approximation to truth. I therefore apprised Mr. Harper that the areas which I had returned ought not to be taken as the true ones. I presumed that you, as principal deputy surveyor of the district, would be in possession of the field notes. I therefore informed Mr. Harper that as you would (ex officio) be one of the superintendents of the sales you would be present, and if any section should be sold, you should, before any payment should be made on it, revise the calculations from the field notes, and that your calculations should be regarded as more perfect than any which I might have it in my power to make.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JOHN WILSON, Esq., Washington City.

LEVIN WAILES.

The United States Dr. to John Wilson, late principal deputy surveyor for the southeast district of Louisiana.

For amount of his salary from January 1 to September 30, 1824	$375 00
For amount of his salary from October 1 to December 22, 1824, 88-92 of $125.....	112 77

	487 77

Deduct amount paid to him by treasury warrant No. 8573, dated December 30, 1826, on report No. 51414*	81 40
<hr/>

Leaving this sum due to him, being the amount that was suspended by said report No. 51414, and which is now to be paid conformably to the decision of the Secretary of the Treasury of February 12, 1827.....	406 37
<hr/>

AUDITOR'S OFFICE, February 13, 1827.

COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE, February 13, 1827.

Examined.

WM. ANDERSON.

The balance due to Mr. Wilson, as per annexed statement, arises as follows:

By report No. 51414, for the amount of his salary from January 1 to December 22, 1824.....	$487 77
There was deducted and suspended this amount that had been paid both to him and his prede- cessor in office for salary from May 25, 1821, to March 17, 1822.....	406 37
<hr/>

Leaving this amount, which was paid to him by warrant No. 8573, dated December 30, 1826... .	81 40
<hr/>

Therefore, as it has now been decided that Mr. Wilson is entitled to his salary, which was suspended, as above stated, and as his salary from May 25, 1821, to March 17, 1822, has long since been paid and the account settled, and as the deduction was made from his salary that accrued from January 1 to December 22, 1824, the sum of $406 37 is now strictly due to him for the balance of his salary for said period, viz: from January 1 to December 22, 1824.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office laid before the Committee on Public Lands the following papers in reply to the charges made against him by John Wilson:

On the second charge Mr. Graham submitted the following certified copies of letters, &c., now filed with the accounts of J. Wilson, with the Register of the Treasury:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, April 7, 1821.

SIR: I am authorized to inform you that it is the wish of the President and the Secretary of War that the office of principal deputy surveyor for the eastern district of Louisiana be given, if vacant, to Lieutenant John Wilson, who will present, or cause to be presented, this letter.

I am, very respectfully, yours,

CHOCTAW AGENCY, May 24, 1821.

SIR: Your letter of the 9th ultimo, with its enclosure from the General Land Office, recommending you for the office of principal deputy surveyor for the southeastern district of Louisiana, have been received. That office is considered as vacant, and I am gratified to have the advantage of filling it with a person so highly recommended, and no doubt well qualified.

The principal deputy's office for that district is kept at Donaldsonville, a small village on the left bank of the Mississippi river, about 70 miles above Orleans. The salary annexed to the office is $500 a year, with fees of 25 cents a mile for examining and recording all surveys made by the deputy surveyors in the district.

Should you accept the appointment, I wish you to proceed without delay to that office. Call at my office on your way, in the town of Washington, near Natchez, where you will receive your commission and instructions. It is necessary that you should have some knowledge of the French language, the population of the district being chiefly French Creoles of that country, many of whom do not understand a word of English.

Let me have the pleasure of a line from you on this subject as soon as you receive this.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,
JOHN WILSON, City of New York.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, June 5, 1821.

SIR: Your letter of 7th April, recommending Lieutenant John Wilson for the appointment of principal deputy surveyor of the southeastern district of Louisiana, has been received. I have written to Mr. Wilson on the subject, and directed him to proceed without delay to take charge of that office, to call at this office on his way and receive his commission and instructions.

I shall be very much gratified to find Mr. Wilson qualified and willing to conduct the duties of that office. No surveyor can be found here to take charge of it who is qualified to superintend it. Captain Winter, who last had charge of that office, paid but little attention to it. The back tracts or pre-emptions granted to holders of front tracts in that district remain yet to be surveyed. The difficulty of making surveys of back tracts in that tract of country renders it almost impossible to get a surveyor qualified to undertake those surveys. This, together with the want of the constant attention of a principal deputy in the district, are the causes why the survey of the district has not been completed before this time.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

THOMAS FREEMAN.

SIR: Enclosed you have a commission from the President of the United States, appointing you, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to the office of surveyor of the public lands south of the State of Tennessee, for the term of four years from the date of the commission, (9th instant.) You will please to qualify yourself by taking an oath to support the Constitution of the United States. You have also enclosed an open letter to Nicholas Gray, esq., the chief clerk of the late surveyor, Mr. Freeman, requesting him to deliver to you all the books, papers, &c., appertaining to that office, for which you will please give him duplicate receipts.

SIR: By the same post to-day which brought me a commission from the President of the United States of surveyor of the public lands south of the State of Tennessee I received your letter, dated at Natchez, the 4th current, informing me of your having been appointed by the late Major Freeman to the office of principal deputy surveyor for the southeastern district of the State of Louisiana, and of your determination to remain at Washington, Mississippi, until you should hear from me.

I expect to be in Washington by or before the 1st of the ensuing month. That, however, will depend, in some measure, on the flowing of the river Mississippi, so as to admit of boats passing through Plaquemine. I should regret even this short delay in placing you in charge of the office to which you have been appointed, if I did not know that there are at present no funds at the disposal of the head of the department to enable you to enter upon the duties of your office, and that there probably will be none until appropriation shall have been made by Congress, which I apprehend need not to be looked for until about the close of the present session.

From documents in this office it appears that Gabriel Winter, esq., was paid his salary as principal deputy surveyor for the southeastern district of the State of Louisiana, December 30, 1820. From this date no salary has been paid to a principal deputy of said district until May 24, 1821, when, by the letter of Thomas Freeman, esq., the appointment was given to John Wilson, esq., to whom the salary has been paid from the last-mentioned date. Mr. Wilson resided in the State of New York at the date of his appointment; arrived at Washington at the last of February,* and took possession of his office about April 1, 1822.

DEAR SIR: In answer to your letter of the 7th instant, I state that I considered you as the principal deputy surveyor of the southeastern district of Louisiana up to the time that Mr. Wilson took charge of the office, which, I believe, was in April, 1822. I recollect your being in my office in the capacity of surveyor during the short period that the inhabitants had an opportunity of entering double concessions, and that you entered some yourself on behalf of others.

There was no receiver of public moneys in commission till within five or six months of the expiration of the law.

What work you may have done while principal deputy surveyor I cannot certify, no returns having been made to my office.

I certify that I was employed by Thomas Freeman, esq., late surveyor of the lands of the United States south of the State of Tennessee, as a clerk in his office, before the month of May, 1821, and that I continued to perform the duties of clerk in the surveyor's office until the month of April, 1822, during which time I have no knowledge of Gabriel Winter having acted as principal deputy surveyor of the southeastern district, State of Louisiana, or that he was, between the months specified, in commission. On the contrary, I heard Mr. Freeman remark, on paying Mr. Winter his salary, sometime before the month of May, 1826, that it would be the last he would receive, as the office would from that time be considered vacant, and always understood that it was so considered until the appointment of John Wilson to fill the vacancy. Between the times specified, Mr. Winter was in partnership with Mr. William Moore in the mercantile business, and was absent several months on business to the north connected with the affairs of the firm.

DONALDSONVILLE, Louisiana, January 6, 1824.

SIR: Having been informed by Mr. Wailes that he had been instructed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office to pay to Mr. Winter, late principal deputy surveyor, the salary attached to that office from the date of my appointment to the office until about the last of March ensuing, on the affidavit of Mr. Winter, and to deduct the same which had been previously paid to me from my accounts, I feel constrained to address you in relation to it, and to transmit the enclosed copies of letters and certificates, from which I think it will appear evident that a more palpable perjury and fraud has seldom, if ever, been committed against the United States, or more injustice done towards one of its officers.

I beg leave to state that in the winter of 1821 I was on a visit to Washington city, being at that time an applicant for a civil appointment; while there a letter was received, I think, sometime in the month of March or April, 1821, by Mr. Meigs, late commissioner, from Mr. Freeman, late surveyor, stating that the office of principal deputy surveyor for this district was vacant. Upon the suggestion of Colonel Bomford I became a candidate for the office, and on my wishes being made known to Mr. Monroe, he directed Mr. Meigs to inform Mr. Freeman that it was his wish that I should be appointed to the office, (a copy of which letter I enclose herewith.) Upon the receipt of this letter by Mr. Freeman he forwarded to me the letter of appointment, under date of May 24, 1821, (a copy of which is enclosed,) which I accepted. I did not, however, leave New York until the month of October following, and took passage from Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, for Natchez; but, in consequence of the lowness of the waters, I did not arrive there until the January following, when I heard of the death of Mr. Freeman, and was therefore compelled to remain at Natchez until the appointment of his successor. On the arrival of Mr. Wailes I received my instructions, (an extract from which I enclose herewith,) under date of March 19, 1822, eleven days previous to the time Mr. Winter swears that he was performing the duties of the office, when, at the same time, he was at Natchez, transacting business as a merchant.

The certificates of Messrs. Gray and Robinson, late clerks in the surveyor's office, clearly show that Mr. Winter was neither in commission nor acting as principal deputy in any way; while the certificate of Mr. Moore, his partner, proves that, during the time he has sworn that he was acting as principal deputy, he was absent at Philadelphia for several months upon business connected with the firm. Many other certificates can be obtained in that place, as well as from claimants in this district, showing that Mr. Winter neither resided nor kept an office in the district during the time that he has sworn that he was performing the duties. At the time I received the salary in question from Mr. Wailes, Mr. Winter proposed to me to divide it with him, (Mr. Wailes having refused to pay him after the date of my appointment, knowing that he had not been in service subsequent to that time,) stating that he had preserved the books and papers of the office, but did not pretend that he had performed any of the duties; for this would have been too absurd, where the falsity of such an assertion could so easily be proved. I, however, objected to any division, alleging that it was customary, in all departments of the government, for the salary to commence from the date of the appointment, and that sum would scarcely defray the expenses of my journey from New York to Natchez, and the expenses incurred while compelled to remain there. Mr. Winter acceded to the justice of my remarks, and expressed his willingness that I should draw the salary, saying that he should claim a compensation for having preserved the books and papers of the office. I will now state in what manner those books and papers were preserved. On my arrival in this place I found them in a house belonging to the estate of the late Major Freeman, in which resided the overseer. They were crowded into a couple of drawers in a cupboard, and appeared as if they had not been disturbed in more than a twelvemonth, all the maps and plans having been more or less injured by insects, and many of them rendered entirely useless. A great number of the field notes of surveys made in the district were missing, and not even the evidence of a scratch of the pen to show that Mr. Winter had ever done any duty, or that any surveys had been made in the district, or duties performed in the office, subsequent to the death of Mr. Gilbert, the former incumbent. Mr. Wailes informed me that he had written to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, under date of November 9, 1822, stating his reasons for paying me the salary which Mr. Winter has since received, to which letter I would also beg leave to refer you. I also enclose herewith a copy of a letter from Major Freeman to Mr. Meigs, dated June 5, 1821, wherein he states that Captain Winter, who last had charge of the office, paid but little attention to it; from which I think that nothing can be more plain than that Captain Winter was not then in commission, although he swears he was, until the first of April following; but Mr. Winter never expected that a copy of his oath would have been sent to Mr. Wailes; if he had, he never would have dared to have been guilty of so barefaced a perjury; and although his conduct and principles have for a long time been the subject of much animadversion, he has, by this act, fully disclosed the depravity of his heart, and will, I trust, meet with that punishment which deliberate guilt so justly deserves.

It is with much regret, sir, that I have felt myself constrained to intrude upon your time; but believing, as I do, that it is a duty every man owes to society to expose to merited castigation every offender who is so base or so unprincipled as to rob another of his property, and feeling that from you alone I can only hope for that justice which is due to me, I have thus been induced to encroach upon your time, for which I trust the subject will plead my apology. I would also beg leave to add that if any doubts should exist as to the expediency of instituting a suit upon the documents I forward herewith, I will produce others that cannot leave a doubt upon the minds of the most sceptical that he has been guilty of a most wilful and deliberate perjury.

With sentiments of profound respect, I have the honor to be your most obedient servant,
JOHN WILSON, Principal Deputy Surveyor.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, November 17, 1826.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office has the honor to return to the Secretary of the Treasury the letter of Mr. Wilson, late principal deputy surveyor, bearing date November 1, 1826, and the papers accompanying the same, and, in compliance with the request of the Secretary, submits the following remarks on each item of the charges contained in Mr. Wilson's account.

The first item is a charge for $487 77, on account of salary which he claims for a period previous to his entering on the duties of his office, and previous to any actual appointment. This question was submitted to Mr. Crawford in August, 1823, and, by his directions, the instructions contained in my letter of August 8, 1823, (a copy of which is enclosed,) were given. From subsequent information there was reason to believe that Mr. Winter, although in possession of the papers and records of the office, had performed no duties which entitled him to the salary; and, by direction of Mr. Crawford, the letter of February 25, 1824, was written to Mr. Wailes, (see the letter among the papers submitted by Mr. Wilson.) This letter confirms the instructions of August 8, 1823, so far as it respects the claim of Mr. Wilson to the salary. In giving this decision Mr. Crawford was guided by the general practice of the Treasury Department. With respect to Mr. Winter, he subsequently produced some letters from Colonel Freeman, which induced Mr. Crawford to agree to submit to Messrs. Williams and Rankin the question as to the period to which Mr. Winter was entitled to the salary; but the papers were returned without a decision.

The second item is for $144, on account of travelling expenses incurred in going to and in returning from Washington. Charges of this nature have been admitted by the proper accounting officers of the Treasury, on the sanction of the Secretary of the Treasury. This sanction has never been, I believe, given but in one instance, and that was in the case of Mr. Wilson himself, and was founded on the certificate of the surveyor, Mr. Wailes, then in office.

The third and fourth items are for charges which can be admitted by the First Auditor of the Treasury, in the regular course of the adjustment of the surveyor's accounts, on the exhibition of the necessary vouchers.

The fifth item is for visiting different parts of his district and examining the work of the deputy surveyor. I have no recollection that any such charge has ever been made by any principal deputy surveyor except Mr. Wilson, and there is no instance within my knowledge in which such a charge has been admitted.

The sixth and seventh items are charges for his salary, and interest thereon, from the period of his dismissal from office by Mr. Davis to the first instant, on the ground that Mr. Davis had no right to dismiss him without the sanction of the President. If that sanction had been necessary it was given by the approval of Mr. Turner's appointment, who succeeded Mr. Wilson; but I presume that no such sanction was necessary, as the ninth section of the act of April 21, 1816, gives this particular appointment exclusively to the surveyor of the lands south of Tennessee, by whom Mr. Wilson was dismissed.

I am, very, &c.,

GEORGE GRAHAM.

Copy of endorsement on the envelope of certain papers now printed, which were submitted to the Hon. William H. Crawford, Secretary of the Treasury, and which are referred to in letter to Joseph Anderson, esq., Comptroller, January 11, 1827.

On the receipt of the enclosed papers, Mr. Wailes was instructed to call upon Mr. Winter to refund the money paid him.

It appears to me from those papers, as well as the letter from Colonel Freeman to Mr. Winter, which he has himself exhibited, particularly the letter of March 6, 1821, that Mr. W. is not entitled to receive salary beyond the month of March, 1821.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 11, 1827.

SIR: I now return the papers in relation to the accounts of Mr. Wilson which were referred by the Secretary of the Treasury to this office on the 10th instant, with directions to report to the Comptroller agreeably to the 9th section of the act of April 25, 1812. It may be proper to state that under the 9th section of the act referred to no accounts are audited at this office except those of the receivers of the land offices.

In relation to Mr. Wilson's claim for salaries prior to entering on the duties of the office of principal deputy surveyor, I can only say that it has been twice submitted to Mr. Crawford, who decided against it, and once to the present Secretary of the Treasury, who, it is understood, gave a similar decision.

Although it is intimated in an "expose" accompanying the papers now submitted in behalf of Mr. Wilson that the whole case was not before Mr. Crawford at the time he gave his instructions, it is nevertheless believed that every material paper now submitted was before him, particularly at the period of his last decision.

The papers then before him were the letter of Mr. Wilson to the Secretary of the Treasury, dated January 6, 1824, and the papers numbered from No. 1 to No. 4, in black ink, contained in the envelope marked A, submitted from this office. The endorsement on that envelope was made when the papers were submitted to Messrs. Williams and Rankin, as referred to in a former report of the Secretary of the Treasury, marked B.

The general principles which regulate the auditing the accounts in this office in relation to salaries is to allow the salary from the period at which the duties commence. The date of the bond or oath of office, therefore, regulates the period from which the salary commences. This general rule is not deviated from except by directions through your office. In conformity, therefore, to these rules, the claim of Mr. Wilson for salary previous to entering on the duties of his office cannot be admitted.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

GEO. GRAHAM.

SIR: Since the report was made to you yesterday in relation to the claim of Mr. Wilson for salary, I have examined the records of this office to ascertain upon what authority it was stated that Mr. McLean had given a decision in favor of Mr. Wilson's claim, and I find the letters of which the enclosed are copies.

Whether those letters were submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury or not I have no recollection; but whether they were or were not is altogether immaterial.

On the third charge, Mr. Graham referred to the deposition of the Hon. Mr. Wilson.

On the fourth charge, Mr. Graham submitted the following letters, and referred to the testimony of Mr. Wood:

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, Washington, Mississippi, January 5, 1825.

SIR: The letter and other papers which you will receive herewith having been sent to the post office a few minutes too late for the last mail, I have withdrawn the packet to-day in order to enclose the copy of a letter since received from Mr. Harper. Having understood from Mr. Turner, a deputy surveyor just from Donaldsonville, that Mr. Wilson had, in his abuse of Mr. Harper, Mr. Lyman, and myself, charged us with having combined for the purpose of swindling the government and individuals, I confess I was surprised on receiving Mr. Harper's letter, which is the first he has ever written to me in the course of eighteen years that we have been partially acquainted. The copy of Mr. Harper's letter is communicated without permission, under an impression that it is proper to do so.

Respecting the propriety of a register's receiving certain fees, as mentioned by Mr. Harper, I have not made myself sufficiently acquainted with the subject to form an opinion upon it; but I am certain that demands for copies of plats frequently made upon this office are improper, and should be made at the register's office, who, in my opinion, ought to be entitled to receive fees for them; or suppose, for instance, that Mr. Ruffin had had a right to demand, at this office, a certified copy of his neighbor's plat on the 22d of September last, he would have had an equal right to ask for a second one on the next day, &c., forever; and if Mr. Ruffin had such a right, every other man in the community must have had a similar and equal right; and if so, what time would be left for myself and the clerks in this office to attend to other duties? It appears to me self-evident that the register here ought to be authorized to attend to these inquiries, and to charge fees; in which cases there could be no impropriety in a copy of the same plat of surveys being issued or furnished daily. Before I came into office those demands were answered, and fees charged for them, by my immediate predecessor; and as I have reprobed the practice, I am persuaded that I have been frequently harassed by his friends, who have been sent here for the purpose, among whom Mr. Ruffin is believed to have been one.

I must beg that you will be so good as to instruct me on this subject. After a plat has been furnished to the register, and another to the General Land Office, I am desirous of knowing how many, and under what circumstances, others may be demanded at this office as a matter of right.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

G. DAVIS.

GEORGE GRAHAM, Esq., Commissioner of General Land Office, Washington City.

NEW ORLEANS, December 31, 1824.

SIR: Mr. J. Wilson, late principal deputy surveyor, is now in the city. He says you have denounced me as a "damned rascal and a drunkard," alleging that I ought to be deprived of my office, and requesting him (Wilson) to exhibit charges against me; and I think he said that you observed you either had or would prefer charges against me. Now, I cannot believe all this, even on the supposition that you had received false impressions in relation to me; yet I think it proper to inform you of what this man has said, and request that you will reply to this letter. I have understood that he has exhibited charges against me to the General Land Commissioner, but of what nature they are I am not yet apprised, but suppose, from some remarks of his, that he has accused me of taking fees from applicants for their applications. The law has always made it the duty of persons applying either for the enregistering of lands or for their purchase to deliver to the register a written notice or application to that effect. Whenever any person produced to me a written notice, either drawn by himself or any other person, I never charged him a cent, except sometimes for a certificate and recording fees; but when, as was often the case, the party applied to me to write his notice, I charge him for it, as I had a right to do, it being no part of my duty as register to write his notice. And this has been the invariable custom both in the time of the commissioners and in that of my predecessor. But if Mr. Wilson charges me with having taken illegal fees as register, he states what is untrue, and cannot support the allegation without the aid of bribery and perjury.

As to my having charged for writing notices, he and everybody else who had anything to do in that way were long since acquainted. He knew the reason and propriety, too, of the charge, and never would have resorted to the means he has if it had not been to revenge himself on me for a supposed injury I had done him in one or two of my communications to the General Land Commissioner. He accuses me, also, of having had a considerable agency in procuring the appointment of Mr. Lyman as principal deputy. That you know to be entirely groundless. May I request a speedy answer?

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

SAMUEL H. HARPER.

GEORGE DAVIS, Esq., Surveyor General.

[This letter has been answered, and a copy of the answer will probably be sent, at a time of more leisure, to the General Land Office. I never have spoken a disrespectful or unfriendly word of Mr. Harper in my life—never having had a cause to do so. G. D.]

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, Washington, Miss., January 28, 1825.

SIR: Your note, handed me a few days since, respecting a demand against the government for surveying done by you sometime past in the southeastern district of Louisiana, having been mislaid, I will thank you to furnish me with another, in which you are requested to state, explicitly, the causes of the delays you seem to have experienced in rendering an account for that work and having it liquidated.

I shall be very candid with you: I have heard you mention circumstances in relation to your employment, under the direction of Mr. Wilson, which has had its due influence in removing him from the office of principal deputy surveyor of that district, and this is merely to ask of you to state in writing what you have incidentally stated to me and others verbally respecting what you know of the conduct of Mr. Wilson as principal deputy surveyor of the southeastern district of Louisiana. The subject, I know, is an unpleasant one; but justice to the government, as well as to individuals, requires that the truth should be told.

I am, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

G. DAVIS.

WASHINGTON, January 31, 1825.

SIR: In your note of the 28th instant I am requested "to state, explicitly, the causes of the delays which I have experienced in rendering an account, and having it liquidated, for surveying done in the southeastern district of Louisiana." I am also requested "to state in writing what I have incidentally stated verbally respecting the conduct of Mr. Wilson as principal deputy surveyor of the southeastern district of Louisiana." I will answer your first request as follows:

In the year 1822 I surveyed several tracts of land, (generally denominated "double concessions,") and returned them to the office of Mr. Wilson, principal deputy surveyor. There is among them a tract of land surveyed for the widow Roman. In making the survey of this tract I found the back line would run through a deep cypress swamp. In my certificate of the survey returned to Mr. Wilson's office I explicitly stated the land over which the back line would pass to be impassable.

In June, 1823, I returned another parcel of claims of the same kind. The last returns were made on better paper than the first, and the necessary certificates printed. Mr. Wilson insisted on my copying my first returns on the same kind of paper, which I readily consented to do. But the claim of the widow Roman, he said, must be represented as closed on the ground, alleging, as his reason for having done so, that a very important lawsuit was likely to be instituted by the owner of the adjoining land, and he had promised to obtain a patent for the widow Roman's land as soon as practicable, which, he said, could not be issued unless the survey was represented as closed. He also stated that the principal deputy surveyor of the southwestern district had informed him that such was the common practice when surveys could not be actually closed. I made the copy as he requested, and returned it folded in the original. The survey was approved, and the distance on the back line Mr. Wilson thought proper to put in my account against the government, amounting in all to $317 39, stating, as his reason for so doing, that it had been the practice in the southwestern district to pay for the back lines of double concessions when the course and distance were found by calculation, and the lines could not be actually surveyed. This was done, he said, in consideration of the surveyors frequently being obliged to resurvey the division line between the front and back concessions, for which he could not be paid.

I received triplicate accounts, and received of Mr. Wilson a draft on your predecessor in office for the amount. Mr. Wailes refused to pay the draft until one of the accounts, accompanied by a plat of each survey, was returned to his office. This Mr. Wilson refused to do, alleging that I had presented a false account against government. The back line of the widow Roman's claim was the item to which he attached fraud. It was not at my instance that item was inserted in my account. It was ushered in by a peculiar kind of art, familiar only to such men as Mr. Wilson, when they have some villainous scheme in view.

In answer to your request respecting the conduct of Mr. Wilson while in office, I feel it my duty to state the following facts: When I first reported myself to Mr. Wilson as a deputy surveyor in his district, he assigned to Mr. Milo Johnson and myself the surveying of all the double concessions in the parishes of St. James, St. John the Baptist, and St. Charles, on both sides of the Mississippi river. He told us that he had determined on charging each claimant ten dollars for a certified plat of his land. We were instructed, verbally, as soon as we made a survey, to furnish the claimant with a plat, and tell him it was necessary to go with it to Lafourche and obtain the principal deputy surveyor's certificate to it, for which he would have to pay ten dollars. The first time I saw Mr. Wilson after I had commenced work, he was anxious to know the cause of no claimants having called on him with their plats. I answered that they were not willing to go with them to his office, being a distance of thirty miles. He then proposed that, when I had completed a survey, I should send it to him by mail, when he would approve it and return it in the same manner; on the receipt of which I was to demand of the claimant his fee, ($10.) This conversation took place in the neighborhood where I was then at work; after which he went to a number of the inhabitants and told them that the surveys made by me would not be valid without his approval, for which he should charge each of them ten dollars, and induced them to believe that the surveys would not be approved until he received his fee. The claimants called on me soon after to know if the law justified such a demand? I told them it did not. From my having thus refused to become the tool of Mr. Wilson in extorting money from the inhabitants, (and not his villainous assertion of fraud,) was the only reason he had for withholding my accounts, knowing that, by so doing, I should experience some pecuniary embarrassments; and, probably, he thought to blast the reputation of one who had too much knowledge of his own villainy. It is a notorious fact that Mr. Wilson has charged as high as twenty dollars for a copy of one claim; and he once charged a man, who was both ignorant and poor, sixty dollars for having a short front line and one side line measured, not more than ten arpents in length.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN B. PEYTON, D. S.

On the fifth charge Mr. Graham submitted the following papers:

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

In pursuance of the provisions of an act of Congress approved on April 20, 1818, entitled "An act authorizing the disposal of certain lots of public ground in the city of New Orleans and town of Mobile," it is hereby ordered that the register and receiver of the land office at New Orleans shall expose to public sale, to the highest bidder, on the first Monday in January next, the building formerly appropriated by the United States to the use of a naval arsenal, together with the ground occupied by the said building, and its appurtenances.

There will also be exposed to public sale, at the same time and place, and in pursuance of the provisions of the act above quoted, six certain lots of ground situated in the city of New Orleans, designated on the official plat of survey, filed in the office of the register of the land office, as numbers thirteen, fourteen, fifteen, sixteen, seventeen, and eighteen, binding on the Rue de l'Hospital, and fronting on the Rue de Conde, which ground has been relinquished to the United States by the Ursuline nuns of the said city.

There will also be exposed to public sale, at the same time and place, a piece of ground belonging to the United States, situate in the same square as the lots above designated, being three feet and nine inches wide by one hundred and twenty feet deep.

It is further ordered that, at the same time and place, the said register and receiver shall expose to public sale the following lots of land, situate on the Bayou Gros Tête, in the district of lands offered for sale at New Orleans, viz:

Lots numbered from seven to ninety-four, inclusive of both numbers, situate on the east side of the said bayou.

Lots numbered from one to twenty-five, inclusive of both numbers, situate on the west side of the said bayou. Also, a second range of lots situate on the east side of the said bayou, numbered from one to thirteen, inclusive of both numbers.

The sale will commence on the first Monday in January next, and will be continued until the whole of the property shall have been offered.

The lots on Bayou Gros Tête, appropriated for the benefit of schools, will be excluded from sale.

Given under my hand, at the city of Washington, this fifth day of August, A. D. 1826.

J. Q. ADAMS.

By the President:

G. GRAHAM, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, August 5, 1826.

By direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, and in virtue of the provisions of the act of Congress passed May 15, 1826, entitled "An act for the sale of a house and lot in New Orleans, and a storehouse at the quarantine ground in Louisiana," the register and receiver of the land office at New Orleans will offer at public sale, to the highest bidder, on the first Monday in January next, the house and lot in Royal street, in the city of New Orleans, heretofore used for the district court of the United States.

By order:

GEORGE GRAHAM, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

Printers of the laws of the United States in the States of Mississippi and Louisiana will insert the above once a week until the day of sale.

Extract of a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office to S. H. Harper, register at New Orleans, Louisiana, dated September 19, 1823.

"The private claims on the Bayou Darbonne having been granted on account of the settlement principally, I presume that there is no danger as to interference with them. It is possible, though I think not probable, that there may be some old grants on the Bayou Gros Tête which may interfere with the lands proclaimed for sale. This should be inquired into previous to the sale."

I certify that the above extract is correctly taken from vol. 10, page 302, of the letter-book of the General Land Office.

JNO. H. BAKER, Clerk to Commissioner of Public Lands.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, March 27, 1826.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose you a petition from several citizens of Louisiana settled on the public lands on the Bayou Gros Tête, which were advertised for sale some months since, but which, it appears, were not offered at public sale, which prevents the petitioners from now purchasing them at private sale.

The circumstances under which these settlements were made, the losses the petitioners have sustained in consequence thereof, and the labor they have expended on these lands are fully, and I believe accurately, stated in their petition. It was enclosed to me by the honorable John Dutton, judge of the parish of Iberville, and residing at Plaquemine, in said parish, a gentleman of the first respectability, and who is intimately acquainted with our land claims, and the situation of the public domain in Louisiana. He represents it as very desirable that the public lands in that quarter should be speedily disposed of. Agreeing with him in opinion, and believing it for the interest of the government as well as of the citizens of Louisiana that the public lands in a situation to be offered for sale should be speedily brought into market, I have to request that a sale of the lands belonging to the United States, on said bayou, may be ordered to take place as soon as may meet the convenience of the department.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. H. GURLEY.

GEORGE GRAHAM, Esq.

REGISTER'S OFFICE, New Orleans, April 29, 1826.

SIR: Yours of the 29th ultimo has been received, and I now have the honor of enclosing you another list of the lots which were not offered for sale under the proclamation of August 11, 1823. A former list was sent under date of the 16th of September last. The public lots prepared for sale in this district all lie on the west side of the Mississippi, and parallel thereto, from Atchafalaya to near the mouth of Lafourche. In point of soil, I am told they are all nearly equal, and not very unequally distant from the Mississippi. I therefore cannot advise any particular portion to be offered to the exclusion of others. Some bayous are better known perhaps than others, but which they are I am unable to say. But, as I have on former occasions said, I do not think they will in any reasonable time command upon an average more than the minimum price. I think the month of November would be an inauspicious time to offer lands for sale in New Orleans. That, unfortunately, is often a sickly month here, in which few people like to venture into the city. I would suggest the early part or middle of January in preference; that is the season when the cotton planters and others most frequent the city.

In relation to the public lots in New Orleans which are undisputed, I will mention four: 1st. Six lots obtained from the Ursuline nuns, by compromise, under the authority of the department. 2d. The navy arsenal, authorized to be sold by an act of Congress of April 20, 1818. 3d. The house and lot formerly occupied by the district court of the United States in Royal street. And 4th. A large square parallel to the custom-house, and bounded by Canal, Commerce, Magazine, and Levee streets. The last-mentioned piece of ground is very valuable owing to its proximity to the river, and being in the most commercial part of the city. The navy arsenal is also valuable, being opposite and contiguous to the principal market-house. The surveyor has never furnished me with the plats of any of the above-described lots, but I have reason to believe that the plats of the two former pieces of ground have been transmitted to your office. If any or all of these lots should be offered for sale I would advise that they be offered also in January.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

SAM'L H. HARPER.

GEORGE GRAHAM, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office.

The following is an account of the public lots not offered for sale under the President's proclamation of August 11, 1823. By comparing this list with that contained in the proclamation, there can be no difficulty in ascertaining the lots to be proclaimed hereafter. I follow the order observed in the proclamation.

Of the lots on the west side of the Bayou Depassou, twenty-six in number, from No. 1 to No. 9, inclusive, only were offered.

Of the lots on the east side of Bayou Latorache, thirty-three in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the west side of Bayou Latorache, thirty-seven in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the east side of Bayou Fordocke, sixty-six in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the west side of Bayou Fordocke, eighty-one in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the east side of Bayou Gros Tête, ninety-four in number, from No. 1 to No. 6, inclusive, only were offered.

Of the lots on the west side of Bayou Gros Tête, eighty-one in number, from No. 1 to No. 25, inclusive, were not offered; the remainder were.

Of the lots on the east side of Bayou Gros Tête, (second range,) thirteen in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on Bayou Marangooin, east side, thirty-one in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the west side of Bayou Marangooin, sixty-one in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the east side of the Atchafalaya and south of the Big Fork, twelve in number, none, except No. 1, were offered.

Of the lots on the east side of Atchafalaya and Bear Bayou, sixteen in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the east side of Atchafalaya and west of Cow island, three in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the north side of Bayou Alabama, eight in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the west side of Bayou Alabama, twenty-two in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the east side of Bayou Alabama and west of Tortoise Bayou, fifty-one in number, none, except No. 1, were offered.

Of the lots on the north side of Bayou Goula, fourteen in number, all were offered.

Of the lots on the south side of Bayou Goula, fourteen in number, all were offered.

Of the lots on the north and east side of the Barras or Barrow's Bayou, twenty-seven in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the south and west side of same bayou, thirty-five in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the north side of Cow Bayou, fifty-nine in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the south side of Cow Bayou, forty-two in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the south and east side of Bayou Black, from forty-five to one hundred and forty-three in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the west side of Bayou Black, from eighty-five to one hundred and thirty-seven in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the east side of Bayou Buffalo, forty-seven in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the west side of Bayou Buffalo, forty-two in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the east side of Big Caillou, fifty in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the west side of Big Caillou, fifty in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the east of Little Caillou, eighty-four in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the west side of Little Caillou, one hundred and five in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the east side of Bayou Darbonne, fourteen in number, none were offered.

Of the lots on the west side of Bayou Darbonne, fourteen in number, none were offered.

NOTE.—All the lots on the west side of Bayou Gros Tête which were offered, viz: from twenty-six to eighty-one, have been entered and sold at private sale. Also, all those on the north side of Bayou Goula, except No. 14, have been sold; and those on the south side of Bayou Goula, with the exception of Nos. 2, 10, 11, 13, and 14, have been sold. All the others offered for sale have not yet been entered.

The lots reserved for the use of schools in the order proclaimed for sale are—

No. 10, east side of Bayou Latorache; No. 13, west side of Bayou Latorache; Nos. 12 and 48, east side of Bayou Fordocke; Nos. 18 and 54, west side of Bayou Fordocke; Nos. 9, 45, and 81, east side of Bayou Gros Tête; Nos. 23 and 59, west side of Bayou Gros Tête; No. 1, east side of Bayou Marangoing; Nos. 6 and 42, west side of Bayou Marangoing; No. 5, east side of Atchafalaya; No. 14, west side of Bayou Alabama; No. 28, east side of Bayou Alabama; No. 13, north side of Bayou Goula; No. 21, north and east side of Bayou Barras; No. 30, south and west side of Bayou Barras; No. 31, north side of Cow Bayou; No. 12, south side of Cow Bayou; Nos. 50, 86, and 122, southeast side of Bayou Black; Nos. 99 and 135, west side of Bayou Black; No. 34, east side of Bayou Buffalo; No. 23, west side of Bayou Buffalo; No. 17, east side of Big Caillou; Nos. 3 and 39, west side of Big Caillou; Nos. 25 and 61, east side of Little Caillou; Nos. 13, 49, and 85, west side of Little Caillou; No. 2, west side of Bayou Darbonne. In all, thirty-eight lots and a fraction of twelve remaining, being every thirty-sixth lot.

SAM. H. HARPER, Register.

On the sixth charge, Mr. Graham referred to the testimony of R. King.

On the charges Nos. 7 and 8, Mr. Graham referred to the testimony of Mr. Moore, Mr. Wood, and Mr. S. D. King; to the letter of January 11, 1827, to Joseph Anderson, esq., First Comptroller, filed under the second charge, and to the following papers:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 21, 1826.

SIR: The return of those letters now in your possession, which were loaned you on the 10th day of May last, and which you have so repeatedly promised to return to this office, are now demanded to be brought back without delay. They are the letters of George Davis, esq., to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and dated February 17, 1825, February 22, 1825, March 18, 1825, January 21, 1825, May 27, 1825, February 5, 1825, January 3 and 5, 1826, and a letter from G. Davis, not dated.

Yours, &c.,

GEO. GRAHAM.

Mr. JOHN WILSON, City of Washington.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 12, 1827.

SIR: Mr. Wilson not having yet returned all the original papers which, under your sanction, were placed in his hands on the 11th of May last, I deem it proper to submit for your information the enclosed copy of a letter addressed to him on the 21st of December.

I am, very respectfully, &c.,

GEO. GRAHAM.

Hon. R. RUSH, Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, September 21, 1825.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose herewith copies of charges touching your official conduct which have been transmitted to this department by John Wilson, late principal deputy surveyor of the eastern district of Louisiana, and have to request that you will, as early as convenient, furnish such explanations in relation to said charges as may be necessary and proper.

I am, &c.,

RICHARD RUSH.

GEORGE DAVIS, Esq., Surveyor General, Washington, Mississippi.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 21, 1827.

I certify that the foregoing is a correct copy from the records of this department.

EDWARD JONES, Chief Clerk.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, Washington, Miss., February 4, 1826.

SIR: About the middle of October last I received a note from the honorable Secretary of the Treasury, dated the 21st of the preceding month, under cover, with two sheets of foolscap, containing sundry slanderous falsehoods, which the accompanying note informed me were copies of charges transmitted to the Treasury Department "by John Wilson, late principal deputy surveyor of the eastern district of Louisiana;" and I was requested to furnish, as early as convenient, such facts or explanations in relation to the said charges as might be deemed necessary and proper.

As there were no specifications transmitted with the charges, an omission which left me utterly at a loss, in most cases, to know or conjecture what was meant by the fabrication, I could think of no mode of more likely conforming to the wishes of the honorable Secretary than that of sending to the General Land Office a transcript of my correspondence with, and in relation to, the office of principal deputy surveyor of that district, for the information of the Treasury Department. You will accordingly receive herewith copies and extracts of letters numbered from one to sixty, as also one marked A, which will furnish all the information within my power as regards my official conduct in relation to the southeastern district of Louisiana.

The whole correspondence is not communicated, but I have not intentionally or knowingly withheld any part that could be useful towards the compliance with the wishes of the honorable Secretary. In a few instances you will find copies enclosed of entire letters when extracts only would have been sufficient; and in a few others the clerks, in making extracts, have transcribed more than was necessary or than had been intended. These have been accidents resulting from mistakes in them; and I have not thought it necessary to detain them from other business in correcting them. If copies of the entire letters should be wished for in any cases where extracts only are furnished, or should Messrs. Ripley and Wilson point out any that are withheld, and which they may think might be useful to their cause, you will only have to demand copies of them and they shall be transmitted. On many of the enclosed transcripts you will find explanatory notes, which may prove useful.

Your letter of December 19, 1825, came duly to hand, but indisposition and other causes have prevented an earlier acknowledgment of it. I beg you to accept my acknowledgments and thanks for the full and satisfactory instructions which it communicates on several points. The idea expressed in my letter of the 16th of the preceding month, that in locating private claims it might be somewhat preferable to assign them determinate depths, with such indefinite widths as should take in the required quantities, was occasioned by my having observed that, in decisions of the old board of commissioners, they had assumed such a principle in cases where the quantity of the grant was fixed, while its particular dimensions had been left by the original grant less definite.

In noticing that part of your letter which informs me of General Ripley's having lent his name in support of his charge against me, in the name of Wilson, of improperly appointing Fletcher a deputy surveyor, I would beg leave to remind you that I had long previously informed you that Ripley was Wilson's counsel. That he, in his professional capacity, drew up and was co-author of the falsehoods contained in the charges against me, exhibited in the name of Wilson, there can be no doubt. Of such men as Ripley or Wilson only was it to have been expected, therefore, that the invention of falsehoods, the drawing of them up in form as charges, and the impudence of coming forward as a witness to substantiate them, were to be exhibited as the acts of the same individual. All conjecture aside on this subject, there can be scarcely a doubt but that the mere relation of counsel in which Ripley stands to Wilson in this case, when the circumstances are viewed in all their bearings, would exclude him as a competent witness in a court of justice. For, as the government is in no manner concerned about the character of Fletcher, (he having executed no surveying under his appointment,) except in so far as my character might be implicated, in consequence of making an improper appointment, Ripley's officiousness must have for its object my removal from office; the effects of which upon the minds of a New Orleans jury in the trial of Wilson's suit against me may well be imagined. These facts and considerations, together with others which I shall notice presently, exhibit Ripley in the several incompatible capacities of plaintiff, accuser, counsel, and witness.

I believe it is not an uncommon case in New Orleans, more than elsewhere, however disreputable it may be considered in a legal view for an attorney, in want of employment, when undertaking a suit for a plaintiff in a doubtful case, or when his client is unable to advance a fee, to agree to depend for a remuneration upon the issue of the suit about to be instituted. As this was precisely the situation of the counsel and his client, I am quite as free from doubt of these being the terms upon which Ripley instituted the suit against me in February last, in the name of John Wilson, as I am deficient of positive proof of this supposed fact. This, if admitted, furnishes a clue to Ripley's subsequent movements. He commences a suit which he permits to lie dormant until, by the invention of falsehoods in the form of charges against me, which he modestly attempts to substantiate by the loan of his great name, he hopes to have me removed from office, correctly enough calculating upon the powerful effect it would be likely to have upon a New Orleans jury in giving credit to such false testimony as he might introduce, thus corroborated by an act of government, and in awarding damages for the imaginary injuries for which Wilson and Ripley pretend to be seeking redress.

Without ever seeking, procuring, or caring to procure, a personal acquaintance with General Ripley, after he had left the army and settled in New Orleans, there was none more warmly his friend, owing to the good conduct attributed to him during the late war, than myself. I and some others used to vote for him with great regularity when he was thought of as a candidate for the legislature, while the general mass of the population of New Orleans rejected him with apparent horror. By long-continued attacks in a newspaper, of which he was the reputed editor, upon the French part of the population of Louisiana in consequence of their refusing to vote for him, he drew from another paper an exposition of his character previous to his joining the army. Owing to this, and some little low shifts to which pecuniary embarrassments had continued to drive him, he became with me a doubtful character, until my doubts were removed by the falsehoods contained in his petition to the court with which he commenced the suit against me in Wilson's name, mentioned to you in my letter of February 17, 1825. Ripley's ideas of an attorney's duty to his client, the suit referred to being taken as an exemplification, if put into words, might be taken as a paraphrase on those of the celebrated English advocate Brougham. The latter seemed to think it the duty of a lawyer faithfully to defend his client at even the hazard of bringing down upon himself the vengeance of a King. Ripley seems to think that it is the duty of an attorney out of business to become the partner of a pauper in an action for pretended damages, and to invent falsehoods, and to offer himself as a witness in support of his own suit.

At an interview had with General Ripley in the office of the district attorney in New Orleans a few days after the suit on behalf of the government had been instituted against Wilson, he inquired of me the particular causes of Wilson's removal from office; some of which I enumerated, such as extortion, neglect of duty, the artifices which had been used by him to retain his office, by first borrowing money of me under the pretence of extreme distress, and subsequently, when that hold upon me was about to be removed by a settlement of his accounts, obtaining from me by improper management a check for money in favor of Deputy Surveyor Bonnet, as repeatedly explained to the Commissioner, and afterwards retaining both it and the account for the payment of which it had been furnished, under a belief, no doubt, that I dare not remove him while he had possession of those papers.

On receiving the copy of Wilson's charges against me, evidently drawn up by Ripley, I was surprised to perceive all the offences for which I had been compelled to remove Wilson introduced as charges against myself, even including the circumstance of the check. I was inclined at first to ascribe to Ripley a considerable portion of ingenuity in his mode of reversing the direction of my own battery and turning it against myself; but, on reflection, I have perceived that the only quality of the mind necessary in the case has been a total disregard to truth, of which he had furnished me with a most extraordinary sample in the petition upon which his suit against me in Wilson's name was commenced.

I have had occasion heretofore to inform you that Wilson, having heard of my appointment to this office, in the first instance, before I had heard of it myself, visited me at my house in New Orleans in a very few days after I had received it. During his stay in the city the time which he spared from drinking-houses and gaming tables was divided between his visits to me in quest of money, and in searching for persons inimical to me in order to obtain assistance, when wanted, in slandering my character; in the course of which he fell in with an individual of the name of Rollins, who had sometime previously been dropped from his employment as an officer of the customs, for what I am not able to say with precision, but I believe, in part, for slandering the present collector, of which I knew him to be guilty, though I had never thought it worth while to communicate it. From this individual who, like Lucifer, hated every person whom he had left behind, including myself, and who, although extremely illiterate and deficient of that kind of knowledge which can be obtained only from books, possesses a considerable portion of natural talent and a tolerably deep insight into human nature, Wilson obtained statements upon which many of the insinuations which his charges convey are founded. The activity of Wilson in slandering me after he was dismissed, as communicated to me since by different persons, especially by the editor of the Louisiana Advertiser, in New Orleans, was truly astonishing, and justifies me in asserting that, while a man's moral conduct depends upon himself, his moral character may, and frequently is, made for him by others.

Rollins had not neglected to communicate to Wilson what he conceived to be my prejudices, who, supposing that imputing to me those foibles or vices against which my prejudices were at war would wound me in the most vulnerable points, did not fail to avail himself of those advantages. Thus, having been informed that being not only temperate myself, but that I had a particular aversion to sots and drunkards, which was his own character, on Lyman's presenting to him his letter of dismissal, he pronounced me, among other things, and in public, "a most consummate drunkard." Rollins having represented my prejudices against the appointment of foreigners to office to the exclusion of American citizens as almost amounting to intolerance; that my aversion to the British government amounted, as Rollins supposed, to hatred; and that the mere circumstance of being born an American was one of which every American should be proud, Wilson represented me at Donaldsonville as a deserter from the British army; and Mr. Beardslee, the newspaper editor referred to above, has informed me that happening in a drinking-house about ten o'clock at night in the course of last winter, Wilson came in, and that, although the company who happened to be present were equally unacquainted with him (Wilson) and with me, he immediately commenced slandering me, asserting that I was a Briton, and that I had favored them during the late war, &c.

If I have ever been inclined to bigotry in anything, it has been in my political faith in the rectitude and justice of our own government above those of any other on the globe; but Ripley and Wilson, who had heard of this, have charged me with making use of abusive and threatening language against the Secretary of the Treasury and the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

This vague assertion, which is introduced into Ripley's string of falsehoods as charge 15th, being, in its nature, personal, seems to require some more particular notice. I have always taken upon me to think for myself, and, on all proper occasions, to express my opinions on political matters, and in relation to candidates for office. As regards Mr. Crawford, of whom I had always thought, in the general, well, I can truly say that, for the last year previous to the late presidential election, he stood, in my estimation, second among the candidates for that high office; and if I had not made up my mind some years previously in favor of the present incumbent, which nothing had occurred to change, and had my vote or opinion between them been of importance, I should have felt some difficulty in deciding between them. As for the Commissioner of the General Land Office, all I knew of him at the time of my last interview with Wilson was, that he had sent me the President's commission appointing me to my present office, which, of itself, was calculated, upon a well-known faculty of the human mind, with which reason has no concern, to give him a considerable hold on my friendship. Nothing had, up to that time, occurred to change those feelings; and it forms no part of my disposition or character to join in the course of conversation either in eulogizing or censuring absent persons contrary to my own opinion or feelings.

But in the case under consideration, as well as in others, Ripley has taken care to charge me with an offence of which he had been apprised that Wilson was known to be guilty. In speaking to me when at this office in October, 1824, on the subject of his having been required to refund money which had been improperly paid to him by Mr. Wailes as salary for a period during which he had been amusing himself for several months on the route between New York and this place, Wilson indulged in very irreverent language against the Secretary of the Treasury and the Commissioner of the General Land Office. He observed that the Commissioner having once decided against him, and in favor of Gabriel Winter, he had persisted in his former incorrect determination, and had prevailed on the Secretary of the Treasury to support him in it, after he (Wilson) had proven to the Commissioner that his former opinion and decision had been wrong and unjust.—(See the instructions to Mr. Wailes, dated August 8 and 19, 1823, and February, *1824, all which I had occasion to refer to as authority for withholding the money.)

Wilson on that occasion remarked that he contemplated resigning the office of principal deputy at the end of the year, and entering into copartnership in the editing of a newspaper in New Orleans, when he intended to expose the unjust conduct of the Secretary and Commissioner in causing his—as he called them—"just demands" to be withheld, at the same time intimating that if I was not very prompt in settling his accounts, he should notice me also in his contemplated capacity of a newspaper editor. As this was not the first time he had thrown out similar hints, I took off my spectacles, and laying them down, informed him—with, I suppose, some appearance of sternness—that if he again repeated his threat, he might go elsewhere to obtain a settlement of his accounts, as it was not incumbent on me to submit to be dragooned into a duty, whether real or supposed. The creature recollecting some distorted account given him of me, I presume by Rollins, and being, I believe, a great poltroon, he exhibited symptoms of alarm, apprehending, no doubt, that I was going to chastise his insolence upon the spot. If this simple occurrence, which has been here fairly stated, did not give rise to Ripley's charges, numbered 9, 10, 11, 13, and 15, I am altogether unable to conjecture what did.

The charge thus raised by Wilson against the Commissioner and Secretary of the Treasury, founded upon the letters of the Commissioner to Mr. Wailes, referred to in a preceding page of this letter, and afterwards exhibited as charge 11 against me, must be viewed as a most serious one, especially when it is considered that they were decisions solemnly made under oaths of office. In withholding the money (I believe it would be very difficult to compel a deputy surveyor to refund money,) I only obeyed orders. But who are so high, so great, or so good, as to be safe against the slanders of such men as Eleazer W. Ripley and John Wilson?

This hopeful pair charge me with perjury and some other indictable offences. It might be a sufficient answer to those charges to inquire if the authors of them were restrained by friendship from instituting criminal prosecutions against me when I was in New Orleans during most of the month of February, 1825. But this charge being a serious one, I will observe that the district attorney at New Orleans, when in possession of every fact relating to the case of Wilson's withholding the public property, drew up, at the foot of the petition upon which Wilson was held to bail, such an affidavit as he must have thought I ought to take. He was acting on his oath of office; was said to be a religious man, and could have no motive for misleading me into the error of taking a false oath. The case of thus holding an individual to bail in order to wrest from him property not his own was not a singular one in Louisiana. A case took place in a State court in New Orleans, in the winter of 1818-'19, of the agent of a steamboat (the Tamerlane) against the captain, who refused to be superseded by another. The captain being held to bail, was actually committed to jail, and the property was afterwards sequestered. The consequence was, a suit by the captain against Mr. Story, the plaintiff in the first suit, for damages. False imprisonment was perhaps charged, but the captain undertook to support that charge, I believe, upon the nature of the compact between himself, as master and part owner, and the other owners of the steamboat, and perhaps upon wages due, which gave him a right to keep possession. I heard the case ably argued. Duncan and Hawkins for plaintiff, and Livingston and Morse for Story, defendant. The case involved so many knotty points that the jury were kept out for some time, and left the court, after which I never heard what was the verdict. Malicious or false swearing formed no part of the charge against Mr. Story, who is as honorable a merchant, and, I believe, as much respected, as any other in New Orleans.—(See my notes on the accompanying letters, numbered 22 and 42.)

Wilson and Ripley make charges against me for writing to deputy surveyors who were acting under him, without letting the letters pass through his hands, and for forbidding him (Wilson) to write to the Secretary of the Treasury and Commissioner of the General Land Office. Those charges, false as they are, will be found, when compared together, to be also in the highest degree absurd. In the course of Wilson's boastings of correspondence with different members of the government, and of holding his appointment from the government as principal deputy surveyor, independent of this office, I suggested to him the idea that it must be extremely harassing to the heads of departments to be called upon by deputy surveyors and chain-bearers for instructions in the course of their duty; and I appealed to him as a "man of war," or as a military man, for his opinion as to the propriety of the President of the United States or the Secretary of War issuing their orders to the non-commissioned officers of the army. I was in hopes to have checked, by this mode of turning his conduct into ridicule, an impropriety that must have been extremely troublesome and offensive to the Secretary of the Treasury, and which, I supposed, might have been the cause in part of the hint I had received from the Commissioner, soon after I came into office, to dismiss Wilson.

Whether I have written too much or too little, I am perfectly disgusted with writing, and shall conclude by referring you to a careful perusal of the enclosed correspondence, together with the notes on the backs of the letters, and by a request that, if more be necessary to be said on any point, I may be advised of it.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

G. DAVIS.

GEORGE GRAHAM, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office, Washington City.

P. S.—I omitted in the foregoing letter to notice the assertion of my having made my acquaintance with Fletcher in the calaboose or jail, where he was confined for some criminal offence, and where it is understood that I was also confined. As Ripley, who, without doubt, drew up those charges, is a practitioner in the courts in New Orleans, he must know that his statement respecting Fletcher's being confined on some criminal charge is utterly false. Ripley well knows, and therefore Wilson might and does also know, that assertion to be utterly false. The lie was only invented to reflect upon my character for making an acquaintance with a person while confined in jail under a criminal charge. I have no kind of disposition to defend Fletcher's character. His offence was, however, that of being in debt. On a short acquaintance he appeared to me, as a man of education and talents in distress, to be an object of compassion. But mankind are not, nor am I, in the habit of making bosom friends and intimate associates of all persons who are capable of exciting our compassion. Wilson, as I have said in my notes on the accompanying papers, had made application to me for more deputies, without mentioning Bringier.—(See letter No. 1.) I could prevail on no old hand to work under him; and believing Fletcher to be tolerably well qualified, I was bound, by my official situation, to give him the appointment. It was a transaction which resulted from a sense of duty, and from which all ideas or feelings of friendship were excluded. The appointments of Fletcher and Grinage were made before Bringier was mentioned to me.—(See note on No. 11, accompanying this.)

My own difficulties at the time of my first acquaintance with Fletcher resulted from a faithful and determined execution of my duty to the government as an officer of the revenue, a faithful representation of which would occupy several sheets of paper, and in which I should have to introduce myself as the hero of my own story. It is sufficient, in my opinion, to say that at that time, and under the circumstances to which I have alluded, of my becoming acquainted with Fletcher, (in the winter of 1818-'19,) I was an officer of the customs, in which capacity I continued up to the time of my appointment to this office. I think that during the time I was attached to the custom-house both the collector, naval officer, and surveyor, suffered confinement merely for doing their duty.

It may not be amiss to observe that the laws of Louisiana make, perhaps, at the discretion of the judge, imprisonment a part of the punishment under conviction of offences of every description, however trivial, such as assaults with or without battery, libels of the lowest grade, &c., &c., and that truth, according to the English common law, is there, under the usual circumstances, a libel.

G. DAVIS.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 15, 1826.

SIR: I enclose a letter, together with the accompanying documents, received a few days ago from Mr. Davis, in relation to the charges brought against him by his late principal deputy surveyor.

It appears from these papers that the suit instituted by Mr. Davis against Mr. Wilson at New Orleans is still pending, as well as that brought by Wilson against him. I had been under the impression that these suits had been dismissed, and have written to day to Mr. Davis to inquire the reason of keeping on the docket that against Mr. Wilson. I enclose the letters of Mr. Davis relative to the dismissal of Mr. Wilson, and the measures taken to recover the public documents from him.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

GEO. GRAHAM.

Hon. R. RUSH.

The conduct of Mr. Wilson in relation to the delay in surveying the lands of General Lafayette was, I think, satisfactorily explained by him.

NOTE.—This letter was in the possession of Mr. Wilson from the 10th of May until he was compelled to surrender it and other papers to the committee on Friday morning, 23d of February.

On the 9th charge, Mr. Graham referred to the following letters and extracts:

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, Washington, Miss., January 3, 1824.

SIR: I enclose you an original letter, recently received from Mr. Wilson, dated the 22d ultimo, and the copy of a letter from Mr. William S. Lyman, dated the 24th ultimo. The original of the first is sent in consequence of the superscription on the back, which, I presume, does not deserve any comment.

I should not say anything of Mr. Lyman, but that I understand he is assailed, or is likely to be assailed, in a letter to you from Mr. Wilson; on which account I shall merely observe that, although I have never in my life spoken to Mr. Lyman otherwise than by letter, I know, from information, that there is not in Louisiana a man of fairer character than he. The character of dissipation imputed to him, as I am informed, by Mr. Wilson, is, I can assure you, without the shadow of foundation; and it can only be intended by Mr. Wilson, as a turning of the tables upon Mr. Lyman.

As to the improper conduct imputed, as I understand, to Mr. Harper by Mr. Wilson, I can only say that I know nothing of it, and but little of Mr. Harper himself; but of this more, perhaps, hereafter.

Mr. Wilson appears, and you must have had occasion to perceive it heretofore, to have been laboring under misconceptions with regard to the laws by which his office was created, and some of the duties of it imposed. He has thought proper to seize upon the act of April 28, 1806, pages 508 and 509 of Ingersoll's Digest, which has no relation to the subject.

I enclose you a statement made by a deputy surveyor just now from Donaldsonville, who was present when my letter to Mr. Wilson was presented to him by Mr. Lyman, which puts the infatuation of Mr. Wilson as regards the withholding of the plats of surveys beyond question. Being much occupied in examining Mr. Lawson's accounts, I have but a moment to spare for writing.

I am, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

G. DAVIS.

GEORGE GRAHAM, Esq., Commissioner General Land Office, Washington City.

P. S.—When about to pay Mr. Wilson the money due to himself and Mr. Lloyd, in October, I inquired for the plats of surveys, and he showed and left with me a copy of your letter to him of October 12, 1823; and, having no doubt of your orders having been complied with, I forgot to get his certificates to that effect at that time, and have been unable to obtain them since. On this subject, I beg leave to refer you to Mr. Turner's statement.

G. D.

DONALDSONVILLE, December 24, 1824.

DEAR SIR: On Saturday last I received your letter of the 14th instant, enclosing my commission as principal deputy surveyor. I arrived at this place on Monday morning, and presented a letter to Mr. Wilson, requiring him to deliver over to me all the books, papers, &c., &c., in his possession, as late principal deputy surveyor. After reading it, and pouring forth a torrent of abuse, which he appears well qualified to exhibit, but would not become me to repeat, he refused to comply with the instructions of the letter, and said he must have time to consider whether he would deliver up the papers, &c. Yesterday, on hearing that he was going to New Orleans, I went with a friend of mine, Mr. Dewey, as a witness of the demand which I made for the documents above alluded to, which he positively refused to deliver in the presence of Mr. Dewey. Afterwards, I called for legal advice on C. D. White, esq., who informed me that he knew of no process in the State court whereby I could enforce the delivery of the property belonging to government, and that, if there was any statute in relation to the subject, it was vested in the courts of the United States. I could do no more. In all my interviews with Mr. Wilson, my feelings have been extremely wounded in listening to the most uncharitable, untrue, and insulting epithets heaped on you and Mr. Harper; but, through the whole time, I have not said anything to produce a quarrel, or authorize the treatment he extends to me.

Mr. Harper anticipated the result, and cautioned me to write you immediately, and that, no doubt, you would come to Donaldsonville, which I most sincerely wish you would; for, as you mentioned that my salary will only commence from the time I take possession of the office, and as I expended all my funds in the outfit, it renders my situation extremely embarrassing as well as expensive. Mr. Wilson will go to New Orleans to-morrow, and no one can tell when he will return.

I have executed, as far as in my power, the instructions you gave me. The bond was signed by Mr. Harper and Mr. John Nicholson, and the sufficiency of the sureties certified by the United States district attorney. The bond is now in my possession; and, believing you will come to this place, I do not forward it at this time. On the morning of my departure from New Orleans, I called at your house, and Mrs. Davis showed me that part of the letter which related to the account of Mr. Wilson. I was extremely sorry to find your son unwell; Mrs. Davis said he had caught cold, which produced a fever, but, having taken medicine, was in hopes he would soon recover.

The plats, together with the check to the order of Mr. Bonnet, I understood had been transmitted to you by your son. As respects the triplicate receipts you called for of Mr. Wilson, he refuses to have anything to do with them; and I hope, in consideration of all circumstances, you will come to Donaldsonville.

Mr. Turner left this a few hours since, in the steamboat Rambler, for St. Francisville, I believe.

I hope you will excuse this hastily written and unconnected epistle, as I have to write partly on a bed, with a poor pen, and disturbed almost every minute.

With sentiments of great respect and esteem, I remain, sir, your sincere friend,

WM. S. LYMAN.

GEORGE DAVIS, Esq.

[I answered Mr. Lyman immediately, telling him that his salary should have commenced on the 23d of December, and making him a small remittance. An entire copy is given above, as preferable to an extract.

G. DAVIS.]

Extract of a letter from G. Davis to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated Washington, Mississippi, January 21, 1825.

"Previously to writing my letter of the 12th instant, in which I intimated an intention of resigning, I had received information from Mr. W. S. Lyman that at an interview between Mr. Wilson and himself at the office of the district attorney in New Orleans Mr. Wilson had promised that, on his return to Donaldsonville, where he expected to be on the 12th instant, he would give up the public documents, &c., of his late office of principal deputy surveyor, which, as heretofore communicated to you, he had at first refused to do. Since then I have been informed, through another channel, that Mr. Wilson was still in New Orleans on the day upon which he had promised to put his successor in possession of his late office."

Extract of a letter from G. Davis to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated New Orleans, February 5, 1825.

"Agreeably to the intimation contained in my letter of the 1st instant, I left my office at Washington on the 2d, and arrived at Donaldsonville about 12 o'clock in the night of the 3d instant. Finding, in the morning, that Mr. Wilson had not returned to that village, and that the public property of his late office still remained locked up, I embarked on board the first steamboat that passed, and leaving Donaldsonville about one o'clock yesterday, I arrived at my home here at four o'clock this morning.

"As soon as the public offices were open I addressed a note to Mr. Smith, the district attorney, requesting his aid in obtaining possession of the public property withheld by Mr. Wilson.

"The adventures of this extraordinary man have been communicated to me up to about sunset this afternoon, at which time, however, I may be grieved to write, or you to read, the account, he was seen, in company with one of the marshal's officers, hastening with a quick pace down Chartres street

— towards 'that bourne
Whence no' honest man 'returns.'

because, according to Mr. Wilson's own system of ethics, a man becomes contaminated by being confined within the walls of a jail, even though such a state of degradation should have been the consequence of a faithful, a zealous, discharge of a public duty, as sometimes happens.

"It had been at first intended to have commenced with the process of sequestration, in order to wrest the public property from Mr. Wilson in that way; but after the arrival of the mail of to-day, it was ascertained that Mr. W., who might have been apprised of my movements by letter from one of my late clerks, was about to make his escape on board a steamboat bound up the river. Mr. Smith, who was apprised before me of this circumstance, sent to me for Wilson's bond, with which I had taken care to be armed, and upon which a suit has been commenced holding him to bail. This, I hope, he will not be able to obtain before the marshal shall be in possession of the appurtenances of the principal deputy surveyor's office. For, were Mr. W. to obtain his liberty, and get ahead of that officer, it might be reasonably apprehended that a very bad account would be rendered of the records, maps, &c., belonging to the government. He was caught, I understand, on board a steamboat just as she was about to leave the levee."

"P. S.—Since writing the above, I find, or have reason to believe, that the trouble and opposition I have met with from Messrs. Wilson and Dinsmoor have been influenced in a considerable degree by an individual whose turpitude, as a public officer, I found it my duty to expose some ten years ago; and who, like Milton's devil, has been busily employed in attempts, having fallen himself, to pull me down to a level with himself. His name and character may be found on the files of the Navy Department."

Extract of a letter from G. Davis to the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

"NEW ORLEANS, February 17, 1825.

"Since the date of my last of the 10th instant, a very singular turn has been given to the legal proceedings between myself, on the part of the government, and Mr. John Wilson. He, with the assistance of General Ripley as his counsel, has procured a release of his bail; but whether by an application to the judge of the United States court, or by the mere act and on the responsibility of Mr. Smith, the district attorney, I am unable to say.

"I had at first understood it to be the opinion of the judge that an action upon the bond could not be sustained, because the bond itself was unauthorized by law; but on speaking to Mr. Smith upon the subject myself, he stated that he had himself been doubtful on the subject. Being greatly disgusted with the transaction, I have not yet pursued my inquiries far enough to ascertain whether the release has been the extra-official act of the attorney himself, or the result of an application to the court; but I have reason to believe the former to be the fact.

"The consequence has been that an action for false imprisonment and defamation has been instituted against me in the name of Mr. Wilson; which is not the less vexatious for having, as I assure you, no foundation in truth. No person could have been disposed to act more cautiously, or could have been less influenced by personal feeling than myself in the course of this business. On my arrival here I addressed, as heretofore stated to you, a note to the district attorney, a copy of which is herewith enclosed; the bond, the existence of which had been sometime previously made known to him, was sent for by Mr. Smith. The petition, the form in which all suits are commenced here, was prepared, and the affidavit endorsed on it, and the papers sent in that state to my house, without any other communications having taken place between us than what you will find in my letter to him. It was immediately discovered, however, that there was an omission, amounting, I presume, to a fatal error in the drawing up of the petition, which may perhaps have caused Mr. Smith to adopt the course he has taken. Over his measures I cannot be expected to have any control. If an action upon the official bond of Mr. Wilson could not be sustained, it ought not to have been commenced by Mr. Smith; I asked advice of him, but I certainly offered no suggestion of my own.*

"Wilson, in order to lay the foundation for a double suit, sent his boarding-house keeper with an account against the government for $125, as salary for the first quarter of the last year; which, not being due, I refused to pay, but, for the satisfaction of the individual, I told him that, whenever Mr. Wilson should deliver up the public property in his possession which he was now withholding, there would probably be due from the government fifty or sixty dollars. I was soon informed that this individual was a person of bad character, from whom danger, in any possible case, was to be apprehended. Accordingly I was served the next day, the 11th instant, with the usual citation, copy of petition," &c.

"NEW ORLEANS, February 5, 1825.

SIR: Having been recently compelled, by an indispensable duty, to remove Mr. John Wilson from his office of principal deputy surveyor of the southeastern district of Louisiana, it has been since represented to me by Mr. William S. Lyman, who was appointed his successor, that Mr. Wilson positively refused to deliver up the records and other public property appertaining to his late office; and, although it has been now nearly ten months since the demand was made, yet the books, maps, and other public documents appertaining to the office are still withheld, which has necessarily put an entire stop to the surveying business in the district lately under his superintendence.

Knowing of no means by which a transfer of the property of the office can be obtained without an appeal to the United States court, the object of this communication is to request that you will, in your official capacity, move the court in behalf of the government for such order or process as shall be likely, in the most speedy manner, to compel Mr. Wilson to surrender the documents, &c., of his late office to his successor.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE DAVIS,

Surveyor of the Public Lands south of the State of Tennessee.

JOHN W. SMITH, Esq.,
United States District Attorney, New Orleans.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, Washington, Mississippi, December 14, 1824.

SIR: It has become my duty, rendered so by circumstances with which you are presumed to be acquainted, to revoke your commission as principal deputy surveyor.

* When I became apprehensive that Wilson's bail might, perhaps, be released, I sent a verbal request to Mr. Smith that the release should not take place until the public property withheld by him should be given up; but my messenger not finding him at his office, the release afterwards took place before the message was delivered, as I have been informed.

You will be pleased, therefore, to deliver over to your successor, Mr. William S. Lyman, all the books, papers, instructions, maps, and documents of every description appertaining to the office of principal deputy surveyor for the southeastern district of Louisiana, taking duplicate receipts for the same, one of which you will be pleased to forward to this office. You are requested, also, to deliver to Mr. Lyman the check I gave you about the 15th of October last, drawn to the order of Mr. Auguste Bonnet, for one hundred and forty dollars and eight cents, for which you have never furnished me with a voucher, unless you shall have previously delivered it to any person authorized to receive it for me.

I am, &c.,

G. DAVIS.

JOHN WILSON, Esq., Late Principal Deputy Surveyor, Donaldsonville, Louisiana.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Register's Office, February 19, 1827.

The above is a true copy of the original document on file in this office.

JOSEPH NOURSE, Register of Treasury United States.

Extract of a letter from George Davis to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated New Orleans, February 22, 1825.

"I have heretofore said nothing more of Mr. Wilson than was found indispensably necessary in the course of business. Your letter seems to render it necessary that I should prove to you (I thought I had already proved to you) that he is unfit for any office, if either honesty or industry be a necessary qualification for an office, and that therefore I should have been justifiable in removing him even if it had been necessary to leave the office vacant. This I shall do in due time."

Extract of a letter from George Davis to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated Washington, Mississippi, March 18, 1825.

"I enclose also, numbered 3 and 4, respectively, the copy of a letter which I addressed to Mr. Harper, the register, while I was in New Orleans, and his original letter in reply, and I must ask of you the favor of an attested copy or exemplification of your letter to Mr. Wilson of October 13, 1823, as it may be required of me to show to the satisfaction of a court and jury, not only that he was guilty of extortion in his charges upon claimants whose lands he surveyed, or caused to be surveyed, while principal deputy surveyor, but that he was equally unmindful both of your instructions and of mine, and that he had adopted, in all its essential parts, the old Spanish regime of 'fleecing the natives.'"

Extract of a letter from G. Davis to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated Washington, Mississippi.

"By letters received from Mr. Turner since the date of my last to you from New Orleans, of which I intend to transmit copies as soon as leisure shall permit, it appears that an order which Mr. Wilson gave to Mr. Smith, the district attorney at New Orleans, for the public property at his late office, was addressed to a person who had never been in possession of them, while another person held them as a pledge for a debt owed to the latter by Mr. Wilson; that a writ of sequestration, in the name of the United States, was afterwards obtained, and that the marshal's deputy, after executing the writ, keeps possession of the public property until he shall make return of the writ in May next, instead of delivering them up to Mr. Turner."

Extract of a letter from George Davis to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated Washington, Mississippi, May 27, 1825.

"Lest Mr. Wilson should attempt to have his accounts settled at the city of Washington, without a reference to this office, I will avail myself of this occasion to inform you that I have ascertained that some of the examining and recording accounts approved by Mr. Wailes, paid by myself, and rendered in my account for the fourth quarter of the last year, were false, the recording not having been done. I shall, when more at leisure, transmit, for your information, extracts from the letters on the subject received not long since from Mr. Turner, the present principal deputy surveyor of the southeastern district of Louisiana."

NEW ORLEANS, July 16, 1826.

SIR: On receiving your letters of the 12th ultimo, it appeared to me very desirable that I should have a personal interview with Mr. James P. Turner previous to his setting out for Mobile, and I had intended to travel to his office, a distance of about a hundred miles from Washington by land, but was prevented partly by the excessive heat of the weather, and partly by the accident of my carriage-horse becoming lame at the very time I was about to set out. As Mr. Turner would, very probably, have to come to this place to obtain a passage for Mobile, I notified him of my desire to see him, and of my intention to be here between the 15th and 20th instant; I arrived two or three days earlier than was at first expected, and Mr. Turner is now hourly looked for.

Mr. John C. Turner, the principal deputy of the southeast district, came with me from Donaldsonville to this place; has received his books, stationery, and a case of instruments, the cost of which amounted to $60 75, and has left this on his return to his office to-day.

*Since my arrival here I have learned that the suit commenced against me in the name of John Wilson, in February, 1825, in consequence of his removal from office, was dismissed at the late term of the United States court. This was foreseen; but had I neglected to employ counsel, judgment would have gone against me by default; and as the damages were, without any oath, of course, laid, as well as I now recollect, at $2,000, a fair pretext was thus afforded to the profession of the law to refuse taking it in hand without a large fee, which was, no doubt, the only motive for instituting that fictitious suit.

I am, with due respect, sir, your obedient servant,

G. DAVIS, Surveyor, &c.

GEORGE GRAHAM, Esq., Washington City.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, August 16, 1826.

SIR: Your letter, dated at New Orleans, advising the dismissal of the suit brought against you by Mr. Wilson, has been received, and it is presumed that the suit instituted by you against Wilson has also been dismissed. Your previous letter, in reply to the charges made by Wilson, had been put in his hands, and it was presumed that he would make a rejoinder. He has not, however, yet done so, but has made frequent applications for the payment of a balance which he claims as due to him. He has been informed that his account cannot be settled by the accounting officers until it has been submitted to you for adjustment; this he has declined to do, though I think it probable some balance may be due to him.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEORGE GRAHAM.

GEORGE DAVIS, Esq., Surveyor General, Washington, Mississippi.

A true copy from the record.

J. M. MOORE, Chief Clerk.

On the tenth charge Mr. Graham referred to the testimony of Mr. Wood, and the following extracts of letters of G. Davis, of October 24, 1824, and November 24, 1824, in reply to the charge of misrepresentation as to the date of the dismissal of S. Dinsmoor; and in reply to the other branch of this charge Mr. Graham referred to testimony of S. D. King, and to the following correspondence:

Extract of a letter from George Davis to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated Washington, Mississippi, October 24, 1824.

"I find that I must visit St. Helena in the course of a few, say ten or twelve days, and shall, perhaps, visit General Morgan. Would his appointment be approved? I most respectfully ask."

Extract of a letter from George Davis to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated Washington, Mississippi, November 24, 1824.

"I have not been able to leave this office as intended at the date of my last visit to St. Helena. General David B. Morgan has lately visited me. Please to authorize his appointment as successor to Silas Dinsmoor, who, I am assured, intends to resign when ordered to comply with the law which directs the location of his office in the district of St. Helena. General Morgan resides near Madisonville, in the district of St. Helena, which, on many accounts, is an eligible position for the office. I state to you now, and will demonstrate it hereafter if I have not already done it, that I cannot nor ought not to be held responsible for the correctly conducting of the surveying business in his districts while he has the superintendence of it. He has no bond in this office that I can find, and I am therefore afraid to pay accounts approved by him while the plats and field notes are withheld from this office, let the cause for their detention be what it may. Whatever remaining accounts he may have of his own, I certainly shall not pay them without a bond, or a special order from you. Why is not this fixed by law?"

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 20, 1824.

SIR: The act of March 3, 1819, requiring that the President of the United States should approve of the appointment of the principal deputy surveyor authorized by that act, I enclose a letter from George Davis, Esq., advising of the appointment of General Morgan to that office, and requesting the approval of the President.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

GEORGE GRAHAM.

Hon. WILLIAM H. CRAWFORD.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, Washington, Mississippi, November 22, 1824.

SIR: I enclose for your information the copy of a notice to land claimants and deputy surveyors recently sent to New Orleans for publication. The necessity of the notice to land claimants, as well as in part to deputy surveyors, has been produced by what I have understood to be a fact, that persons holding or pretending to hold old appointments from this office have been in the practice of surveying land, furnishing plats, and charging surveying expenses without any legal authority, and without any intention of ever making returns of their work to the proper offices. The obstructions which such practices must necessarily throw in the way of legally authorized surveyors when afterwards attempting to survey the same lands must be self-evident.

The notice is intended to apply to principal deputy surveyors also, which is rendered necessary by the insufficiency of some of their bonds on file in this office.

Your estimate for the year 1825, so repeatedly called for, has not been received.

Your most obedient servant,

G. DAVIS.

SILAS DINSMOOR, Esq., Principal Deputy Surveyor, Mobile.

P. S.—Your bond, in which Mr. Stone only is joined with you, is deemed insufficient. His township maps are all returned from the General Land Office, and will have to be sent, at Mr. Stone's expense, to your office by express. In the meanwhile, if you have the length of the township and sectional lines marked upon them, respectively, from the field notes, and the want of coincidence between his township and sectional parts on the line of demarcation with those of the work north of that line, if such should exist, time will be saved on the return of the maps to your office.

G. D.

Notice to land claimants in the State of Louisiana, and to deputy surveyors.

Land claimants are hereby notified, and respectfully requested, not to pay deputy surveyors for any surveys made after the present date, unless a certificate that the survey upon which fees may be demanded has been returned to the proper office and approved shall be produced; which certificate must be signed either by the principal deputy surveyor in whose district the land may be situated, or by the undersigned. To the certificate should also be added a receipt, signed by the deputy who may have made the survey, for the amount of fees paid to him.

Deputy surveyors holding commissions or appointments from former incumbents of this office are also respectfully notified that their said commissions or appointments will cease and determine January 1, 1825. Such of them as may desire reappointments will please to apply for them at this office, provided with the necessary recommendations and securities. This last measure has been rendered necessary by a variety of causes, and among others by the circumstance of there having been no regular register heretofore kept in the office by which the number and names of deputy surveyors holding appointments from it can now be known.

G. DAVIS, Surveyor, &c.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, Washington, Mississippi, November 20, 1824.

Extract of a letter addressed by George Graham, Commissioner of the General Land Office, to the register and receiver of the land office at St. Helena Court-house, Louisiana, dated August 13, 1823.

"I enclose a copy of a letter addressed by Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Briggs relative to surveying the private claims in Mississippi. This relates principally to the mode of sectioning the claims as connected with the township; and I will thank you to furnish the principal deputy surveyor with a copy of it, and also submit this letter to him for perusal."

A correct copy from the record.

J. M. MOORE, Chief Clerk.

Extract of a letter from George Graham, Commissioner of the General Land Office, to L. Wailes, surveyor general, Washington, Mississippi, dated August 19, 1825.

"Having received from the register and receiver at St. Helena several applications relative to the execution of the act of March 3, 1819, and that supplemental thereto dated May 8, 1822, for adjusting the land claims in the district east of New Orleans, and finding that no general instructions had been given from this office relative to the construction of these acts, or as to the manner of locating and surveying the claims confirmed by them, I have written to these officers fully on the subject; and as it is particularly to be wished that the manner of surveying all the private claims should be uniform throughout your district, I have forwarded you a copy of my letter to those officers, in order that you may give such instructions to the principal deputy surveyors within your district as you may, from a full view of the subject, deem proper and necessary to obtain that uniformity.

"I give you no positive instructions on the subject, because I presume that the surveying has generally been executed in conformity to the principles stated in my letter, and, in cases of difference, an attempt to correct them may possibly defeat the object we have in view, to wit: an accurate and correct location of the claims and survey of the country, and despatch and economy in the execution."

A correct copy from the record.

J. M. MOORE, Chief Clerk.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, September 17, 1824.

SIR: Your letter of the 21st ultimo has been received. On August 13, 1823, I addressed a letter to the register and receiver at St. Helena, explanatory of the several acts for the adjustment of the claims to lands in the district east of the island of New Orleans, a copy of which was sent to the land officers at Jackson Court-house, with a request that they would submit it to you for your information; but it would appear from your letter that it has not been seen by you, and I now enclose an extract of that part relating to the manner in which the surveys ought to be made, by which you will perceive that when the bounds of any private claim corresponding with sectional or divisional lines, it was not intended to give it any other than regular sectional number, but it must be colored on your maps as a private claim.

By the 5th section of the act of May 8, 1822, it was made the duty of the register and receiver to decide between the parties in all conflicting and interfering claims to lots in the town of Mobile, and it is a duty that must be performed by them before a patent will be issued for any lot the boundaries of which are disputed.

With great respect, &c.,

GEO. GRAHAM.

SILAS DINSMOOR, Esq., P. D. S., Mobile, Ala.

Note by Mr. Graham.

It was the duty of the surveyor general, Mr. Wailes, to have furnished Mr. Dinsmoor with the instructions, but as it was expected that his duties would call him to the office of the register and receiver, they were requested to communicate to him my letter of August 13, 1823.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, Washington, Miss., February 1, 1825.

SIR: I enclose herewith a list of all the maps in this office of townships of land in the districts east of the island of New Orleans. The field notes of these, as well as maps and field notes of all the other townships and sectional surveying done in those districts, remained in the possession of Mr. Dinsmoor, the late principal deputy surveyor, who refuses to deliver them.

A deputy surveyor, Mr. Stephen Roberts, lately here from the district of St. Helena for a renewal of his commission, left with me the field notes of all the private claims, amounting to 37, in four townships, namely, townships 1, 2, 3, and 4, in range 8 east, in that district; and if I were in possession of the maps and field notes of the township and sectional lines, I should be able immediately to have the private claims in them returned in a proper state for being patented. Even if I were in possession of the township maps, nothing could be done with them without the field notes, as the distances on the township and sectional lines are usually left blank by Mr. Dinsmoor. Whether or not the withholding of those distances from the maps has been a part of the systematic plan of independence in which Mr. Dinsmoor has so studiously contrived to keep his office, it would be useless for me to inquire. I think it a great misfortune, however, to the interest of the surveying business, that the construction with which you have furnished me in your letter of the 26th ultimo* had not been earlier adopted; as it is, I perceive no remedy within my reach.

Since commencing this letter, I am informed by a friend in Natchez that he has, in consequence of a request made some days since, engaged me a passage on board a steamboat for Donaldsonville, which leaves Natchez to-morrow morning, and which puts me in a hurry. I shall therefore enclose herewith the vouchers for money paid within the past month, to be referred to in the account at the end of the quarter, viz:

Charles M. Lawson's account, voucher No. 1.....	$1,065 59
Charles M. Lawson's account, voucher No. 2.....	1,439 77
E. S. Ludlow's account, voucher No. 3.....	247 75
John B. Peyton's account, voucher No. 4.....	560 03

Making in all.....	3,313 14
If to this be added fifty dollars, put into the hands of Mr. Harper, to pay for the surveying of General Lafayette's land.....	50 00
Also forty dollars sometime since advanced to Deputy Surveyor Reid, for which the proper voucher has not yet been received.....	40 00
And fifty dollars advanced as a salary to William S. Lyman, principal deputy surveyor of the southeast district of Louisiana.....	50 00

The aggregate becomes.....	3,453 14
Add to this my salary account for the last quarter.....	909 94

And if from the balance remaining at my control, as exhibited in my general account, on the 31st December.....	4,363 08
The foregoing amount be deducted.....	25,629 33

There will remain.....	21,266 25
There is bona fide deposited in the bank at Natchez.....	$17,087 97
And at the United States Bank at New Orleans.....	4,298 78

21,386 75

At the date of your letter of the 20th December you reasonably supposed I had got through with the paying off demands against the government, and I have but a moment to say why your expectations have not been realized.

Doxey's demand of two thousand dollars has not been called for. He resides in the State of Alabama, and has been requested, through a friend of his, to call and settle his account; but he has not yet arrived.

I have paid Lawson all for which he has rendered an account. He is supposed to have still due twelve or thirteen hundred dollars; but when here, in the beginning of January, being in a hurry to attend the State legislature, then in session, and of which he is a member, he could not have waited for the examination of the whole of his work, even if there had been no objections to the complete liquidation of his whole demand. But, considering money in hand the best bond, I should have withheld a part, even had there been no other obstacle in the way, on account of omissions in his work and the very bad state of his field notes. Perhaps I ought not to have paid him any part until those omissions and defects had been removed. If you will take townships 2, 3, and 4, in ranges 1, both east and west of the basis meridian, in the Choctaw district, and place them beside each other, you will perceive that those of the western range are deficient of the traverse of Pearl river in those townships; and if you will compare this omission with the last item in voucher No. 2, now transmitted, the cause of detention will be explained.

The cause of a temporary suspension of payment in the southwest district of Louisiana will be explained in my next letter, to be written at the first place at which I shall make a sufficient stay in my intended excursion to Louisiana.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

G. DAVIS.

GEORGE GRAHAM, Esq., Commissioner General Land Office, Washington City.

NOTE.—This note shows the propriety of suspending all proceedings in relation to the township plats returned by Mr. Dinsmoor, and the payment of the accounts of the deputy surveyors employed by him, until the field notes could be obtained.

G. DAVIS.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, Washington, Mississippi, February 1, 1825.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 16, 1826.

SIR: Your letter of November 23, covering a duplicate of your letter to Mr. J. B. Peyton, has been received. Presuming that Mr. Peyton has been furnished with the original, and that he will reply to it, time will be given for that purpose.

Yours of the 5th, 6th, and 14th of December have also been received, and Mr. Wailes' letter of October 13, 1824, is returned.

I enclose a copy of a letter received from Mr. Doxey relative to his accounts. The reason assigned is, no doubt, not the real one for the delay in paying the account. I have advised him that a copy of his letter has been sent to you, and that the account will be paid, without there are good reasons for withholding payment.

The enclosed letter from Mr. Gurley, in relation to Mr. Gilmore's account, has been submitted to the President, together with your letter of the 19th of September, and the extract from Mr. Morgan's letter to you of June 10, 1825; and he has directed me to say to you that payment should not be withheld on an account presented by a deputy for surveying executed and approved by you, because there may be ground to suspect that surveying previously executed by such deputy, approved and paid for by you or your predecessor, was erroneously executed. He therefore directs the account of Mr. Gilmore to be paid, without deduction, for surveying previously, and supposed to be erroneously executed, unless you have such official information as will enable you to designate the particular errors that have been committed; in which case Mr. Gilmore will be called upon to correct them within a limited time, and if he fails to do so, you will then be at liberty to detain such sum as will cover the reasonable expenses of correcting the specified errors.

By "official information," I mean the township plat and field notes of Mr. Gilmore, or those of other authorized deputies, who have by surveying the same or adjacent lands ascertained the special error of Mr. Gilmore.

This decision of the President has reference altogether to general principles, and not to any of the particular facts in controversy between yourself and Mr. Gilmore; should it ultimately appear that Mr. Gilmore has been paid for surveying grossly erroneous, you will stand completely justified.

The case of Mr. Dinsmoor, jr., is different from that of Mr. Gilmore: he demands payment for surveying returned to, and approved by, a former principal deputy; you require the field notes to be produced, and object to the certificate on which such accounts are paid by you, on account of the omission of date. If you have good reason to believe that the surveying for which payment is required to be made has been erroneously executed, it is your duty to require the production of the field notes, and examine the work previous to payment. But if, in this instance, you have no reason to believe that the surveying charged for in the account presented by Mr. Dinsmoor has been erroneously executed, then the omission of the date to the certificate of the principal deputy surveyor, or the suspicion of errors in surveying previously executed by Mr. Dinsmoor, and for which he has been paid, ought not to be considered as sufficient reasons for withholding the payment.

An extract of your letter, assigning the reasons for the non-payment of Mr. Washington's account, has been forwarded to him.

I am, &c.,

GEO. GRAHAM.

GEORGE DAVIS, Esq., Surveyor General, Washington, Mississippi.

NOTE.—This letter accounts for the non-payment by Mr. Davis of the accounts of those deputy surveyors who executed work under the directions of Mr. Silas Dinsmoor, sr., the field notes of which work he retained in his possession.

Extract of a letter from George Graham to George Davis, surveyor, &c., dated General Land Office, April 4, 1826.

"With respect to the payment of the account of Mr. Silas Dinsmoor, it was not expected, after the expression of your opinions in relation to the execution of the surveys in the district south of the 31st degree of latitude, that you would have paid them until you were furnished with and had examined the field notes, or were otherwise entirely satisfied as to the correctness of the work charged for. Whenever

† The four marked thus † are the ones mentioned by mistake, in my letter to the General Land Office of October 27, as being east instead of west of Pearl river.

that is the case, you will pay the account without reference to the State line, it not having as yet been connected with the township plats south of the 31st degree of latitude."

On the 11th charge, Mr. Graham referred to Mr. Dinsmoor's deposition.

On the 12th charge, Mr. Graham laid before the committee the following letters:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, August 10, 1826.

SIR: Your note of the 9th instant, together with the papers accompanying it, including an account current against the United States for surveying, are this moment received. All surveying accounts are settled by the First Auditor of the Treasury, and there is no power in this office either to approve or reject the accounts.

No surveyors, except the surveyors general and those vested in their particular districts with the powers of the surveyors general, being authorized to transmit their accounts through this office to the First Auditor, your accounts ought to have been presented, as heretofore, for adjustment and payment to the surveyor of the lands south of the State of Tennessee, within whose surveying district the services were performed.

Your account current, and the papers accompanying it, are therefore returned, that you may take that regular course with them which the regulations of the treasury prescribe.

If you desire it, the accounts can be transmitted for adjustment through this office to the surveyor of the lands south of the State of Tennessee.

If there be any special reasons why your accounts should take a course of settlement different from that prescribed by the rules of the treasury for the settlement of the accounts of all other principal deputy surveyors, and the course heretofore pursued in relation to the settlement of your own accounts, application should be made to the Secretary of the Treasury, who will give such directions in your case as the circumstances incident to it may require.

It is proper to state, that this office having been informed by the surveyor of the lands south of the State of Tennessee that you had refused to transfer to the gentleman appointed by him to supersede you in office of principal deputy surveyor the books, papers, and records belonging to that office, instructions have been given to him to take such legal measures as may be deemed proper to compel you to deliver them up.

I am, &c.,

GEO. GRAHAM.

SILAS DINSMOOR, Esq., now in Washington City.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 30, 1827.

SIR: In reply to your letters of the 26th and 29th instant relative to the adjustment of our accounts, I must refer you to my communication heretofore made to you on that subject.

You intimate that the government having obtained possession of the papers and records heretofore withheld by you, the principal cause for not adjusting your accounts at the treasury is removed. The withholding of those papers was a good cause for the refusal to adjust your accounts at all, but the fact of the government having obtained possession of them is no reason why your accounts should be adjusted in a manner different from that prescribed by the rules and regulations of the treasury, and different from that in which you have hitherto been accustomed to settle them; that is, by the surveyor of the district in which you were one of the principal deputies, he being the only person who has the means within his power of checking your accounts, so far as they relate to charges for examining and recording surveys. So far as you may have a claim for salary, the First Auditor may be able to check your account, and may, therefore, under the direction of the Comptroller, settle it out of the usual routine for adjusting those accounts.

You allege the want of confidence in the present surveyor as the reason why your accounts should not be acted upon by him, and submit certain papers to justify the allegation. The allegations are general, and if they are deemed sufficient to withdraw from the settlement of the surveyor your accounts, they are equally applicable to the settlement of all other accounts by him, and the question, therefore, is one for the consideration of the President, and not for that of the accounting officer.

Yours, respectfully,

GEO. GRAHAM.

P. S.—The papers submitted by you are herewith returned.

SILAS DINSMOOR, Esq., now at Washington.

extending to the legislature of the State of Indiana the same right and authority, under similar restrictions, to convey, in fee simple, all or any part of the lands heretofore reserved and appropriated by Congress for the use of schools within this State, as has been given to the legislature of the State of Ohio by an act of Congress entitled "An act to authorize the legislature of the State of Ohio to sell the lands heretofore appropriated for the use of schools in that State," approved February 1, 1826.

No. 585.

[2D SESSION.]

SETTLERS ON THE CHOCTAW LANDS IN ARKANSAS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 27, 1827.

Mr. SCOTT, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the memorial of the legislature of the Territory of Arkansas, praying that some measures might be adopted to relieve the settlers, and remunerate them for the improvements which they had made on the lands ceded to the Choctaw nation of Indians, (see No. 528,) reported:

That by a treaty with the Quapaw nation of Indians, August 24, 1818, the United States acquired title to a large and valuable tract of country in the Territory of Arkansas, upon which settlements had been made, and on which extensive and valuable improvements were made after the date of the treaty. It appears to have been the views of the government to have intended to retain a portion of the country acquired by the treaty aforesaid exempt from settlements, to be given in exchange for the lands belonging to Indian tribes east of the Mississippi river. As early as December 15, 1818, an order issued from the War Department, by direction of the President, to General Jackson, then commanding the division of the south, requiring him to prevent the extension of the settlements in Arkansas west of a line connecting the sources of the Kiamichi, emptying into Red river, and the Poteau, emptying into the Arkansas river. On January 5, 1819, General Jackson issued his orders to the commanding officer at Fort Smith, directing him to carry the views of the government into effect, which, by the papers herewith, appears to have been done. In the year 1819 the lands, by order of the government, were surveyed nearly to the line connecting the sources of the Kiamichi and Poteau, and the people continued to extend their settlements and improvements on these lands, believing that when they were brought into market they could become the purchasers from the government of the improvements they were making. It is stated that about two thousand souls reside on those lands, and form a part of two counties. The committee would remark that before Arkansas was erected into a separate territorial government the people now spoken of were within the civil jurisdiction, and the process of the courts and the laws extended to them. In 1820, on the 18th of October, a treaty was made with the Choctaw Indians, by which all that tract of country west of a line beginning on the Arkansas river, opposite a point where the lower Cherokee boundary strikes the same, and running to Red river, three miles below Little river, was ceded to the Choctaw Indians. This treaty contained no stipulation for the removal of the white people within or settled on the land ceded, although a large portion of the white people of Arkansas was thus transferred to the Indians. Great discontents, however, prevailed, and after repeated remonstrances, and renewed assurances that effective measures should be taken to secure the people settled on this land, a treaty was ultimately concluded with the Choctaws January 20, 1825, by which their title to the lands acquired by the treaty of October 18, 1820, was extinguished as far west as a line drawn from just below Fort Smith due south to Red river. This treaty, however, only provided a partial remedy for the evil and injury of which the people complained; and it is to have some further remedy applied that the memorial now under consideration was draughted and forwarded by the legislature of the Territory of Arkansas.

This memorial emphatically prays that some provisions may be made, either in lands or money, for the relief of those of their fellow-citizens who have settled on and improved lands lying west of a line from below Fort Smith, on the Arkansas river, to Red river, and east of a line connecting the sources of the Kiamichi and Poteau; and allege, as a reason why they apply and think the government bound to comply, that permission, or at least a constructive permission, was given to make those settlements and improvements by the order from the President and War Department, December 15, 1818, and the order from the commanding general of the south, January 5, 1819. The Committee on Public Lands have seen, with regret, that this wandering and migrating spirit of the people leads them into constant violations of the law of the land in relation to the settlement on the public lands. The law in regard to settlement on the public lands is positive and imperative, and makes it the duty of the President to remove all intruders. The committee cannot, therefore, think that, had the orders from the President, through the War Department, of December 15, 1818, been positive in granting permission to settle on those lands, such order would have superseded the established and fixed law on the subject, or secured to the settlers any claims on the government for indemnity for improvements made. It is not, however, contended that the order of December 15, 1818, was positive in giving permission to settle, but that it implied permission to settle on all that tract of country east of a line connecting the sources of the Kiamichi and the Poteau, because it only positively forbids settlements to be made west of that line, and for those who had settled west to be removed east. This implied permission is, then, weaker than the case above stated by the committee, and, in their opinion, gave no right to make the settlement, nor created any claim on the government for remuneration in the event of the ultimate loss of their labor and improvements. It is this wandering and migrating disposition of the people that has been the foundation and given rise to all the doctrine of the rights of pre-emption. At an earlier stage of the government, when it was an object to have the country explored; when the surveying was not completed; when the settlements were unconnected; and the toil, hardships, and dangers of new and distant settlements were infinitely more than at present, there may have been some reason for the special privileges and protection given to settlers; but the committee think that time past. The great abundance of good lands surveyed and prepared for market within the best settlements, at reduced prices, in small tracts, the committee believe, puts it in the power of any man to acquire a home; and that it is full time for Congress to make a decided and unbending stand against all further special privileges or pre-emptions within the several States and Territories.

The committee cannot conclude this report without remarking, in justice to the people here alluded to, that they do not rank them with those lawless intruders on the public lands who resort to it for the mere purpose of destroying the timber, or digging up the bowels of the earth for minerals, and go off with the booty. The people in question were, doubtless, like many others who are far removed from the seat of government, many of them, ignorant of its laws, and apt to believe that whatever a superior officer of the government says or does is certainly right, and within the scope of his powers. These people may have inferred the right to settle from the orders of December 15, 1818, and the orders of January 5, 1819. They appear to have settled bona fide to secure homes, and the committee sincerely regret that they cannot recommend any relief to these unfortunate people without violating the fixed principles in regard to the public lands, establishing a dangerous precedent, awarding a premium for the violation of the law, and holding out assurances that for similar transgressions future rewards will be given; although there was no absolute obligation on the government to provide for or notice the actual condition of the settlers on those lands when the treaty of October 18, 1820, was concluded. It is not the less remarkable that, in that treaty, the Indians made professions to secure the improvements, or an equivalent to those of their tribe residing on the lands in the State of Mississippi, ceded by them to the United States, while the commissioners on the part of the United States entirely overlooked the situation of the white people on the lands ceded to the Indians. The commissioners could not plead ignorance in this matter, because one of them, General Jackson, who made the treaty, was the identical person to whom the order of December 15, 1818, had been directed by the War Department, and who, based on this order, issued his of January 5, 1819, to the commander at Fort Smith. This may, however, be one of the reasons why these people should not now be provided for; because, it is to be presumed, if the government had acknowledged any rights or claims to indemnity, it would have, in all probability, been noticed in that treaty. The committee would be glad to see those people, for whom relief is prayed in the memorial, placed in some situation where they might hereafter realize their wishes, and secure, by purchase from the government, their homes and improvements. This, however, cannot be done without extinguishing the title of the Choctaw Indians which they acquired by the treaty of October 18, 1820. To do this belongs to the treaty-making power, and is not a subject for the committee to pass on. They, however, think it a subject worthy the consideration of the government, and submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Public Lands be discharged from the further consideration of the subject, and that it be referred to the Secretary of War.

Upon the request of Mr. Conway, delegate in Congress from the Territory of Arkansas, I make the following statement:

In the month of June, in the year one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, being in command of the United States troops stationed at Fort Smith, on the Arkansas river, I received an order from the commanding officer of the southern division, (General Jackson,) commanding me to remove all the settlers who should be found west of a line drawn from the sources of the Kiamichi to the Poteau, the former a stream emptying into Red river, the latter into the Arkansas river, and to compel all such settlers to return to the east side of said line. Upon the receipt of the order I sat out with some half a dozen soldiers on horseback, a corporal's guard, and proceeded to the tract of country on which the intruders had settled. I found about two hundred families, in the whole, on the west side of the line designated; some of them had crops growing; others none. I read the orders which I had received to the heads of the different families, requiring those who had no crops growing to obey it immediately, and to those who had time was allowed till October. The order was universally obeyed, and some of those to whom I had given leave to remain till their crop was gathered were driven in before that time by Captain Combs, commanding at Natchitoches, who had received a similar order, and executed it in the district of country next to Red river, in some instances burning the houses and destroying the crops. Afterwards Mr. Downs and Mr. Woodward, being authorized by government to run certain lines in Arkansas, fixed upon a line from the mouth of the Canadian Fork, southwardly to the head of Jack's Fork, of Kiamichi, and down it to its mouth. This line was further west than the one designated in the order which I had received and executed; and immediately after many of those who had removed under the order of myself and Captain Combs reoccupied the ground from thich they had been removed. Information of this having reached the government of the United States, an order was sent to Colonel Arbuckle, commanding at Fort Smith, in the fall of the last year, commanding him to drive back all such intruders to the east side of the line from the sources of the Kiamichi and Poteau. This was accordingly done; and the people then, twice removed back, settled in the counties of Miller and Crawford, and I should suppose that about two thousand souls were cut off from the territory by the line fixed for the western boundary of Arkansas at the last session of Congress.

Given under my hand, at Washington city, March 25, 1824.

W. BRADFORD.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, December 19, 1826.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 13th instant, respecting the removal of certain settlers on the public lands in Arkansas Territory, I transmit herewith a report of the clerk in charge of the Indian business of this department, with documents marked A and B, which gives the information required.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

JAMES BARBOUR.

Hon. THOMAS WHIPPLE, House of Representatives.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, Office of Indian Affairs, December 19, 1826.

SIR: In compliance with your directions, accompanied by a letter from the honorable Thomas Whipple, of the 13 instant, requesting that you will transmit, as soon as may be, the order from the Department of War for the removal of certain settlers on the public lands in the Arkansas Territory, of December 15, 1818, and also the report made on the same subject in the year 1821 by Colonel Henry D. Downs, who was commissioner to run the boundary line established by the Choctaw treaty of October 18, 1820, I have the honor to enclose herewith copies of said order and report, marked A and B.

I have the honor to be your most obedient servant,

THO. L. MCKENNEY.

Hon. JAMES BARBOUR, Secretary of War.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, December 15, 1818.

SIR: Under the late treaty with the Quapaws and Osages very extensive tracts of land have been acquired, a considerable portion of which is not intended to be brought immediately into market, and which may hereafter become the means of exchange for lands on this side of the Mississippi, above the mouth of the Kiamichi, and on the Arkansas above the mouth of the Poteau, and to the west of the main branch of the Kiamichi and Poteau, and a line drawn between their sources.

The President has directed me to issue orders to prevent, for the present, the extension of the settlements on Red river. Those persons settled to the west of the line specified, or at points higher up the Red river and the Arkansas than those mentioned, will be removed.

You will give the necessary orders to carry the views of the President into effect. It will be advisable to take the necessary measures at an early period, so as to give to such families as may be removed an opportunity to make arrangements for planting the next spring.

I have, &c.,

J. C. CALHOUN.

Major General ANDREW JACKSON, Nashville, Tennessee.

WARRENTON, Mississippi, December 24, 1821.

SIR: In obedience to your instruction to me, I have run, according to the treaty, the eastern line of the land ceded by the United States to the Choctaw nation west of the Mississippi; beginning at the mouth of Little river, running thence down Red river to a point three miles below the mouth of Little river; running thence north twenty-nine degrees and fifteen minutes east, one hundred and fifteen miles ten chains and fifty links, to a post on the south bank of the Arkansas river, where the lower boundary line of the Cherokees strikes the same; running thence with the course of the Arkansas river to the mouth of the Canadian Fork; a plat of which survey is herewith enclosed, and a map subjoined thereto of the country west of the eastern boundary which is settled by the whites, designating the position of the settlements; which map, and the field notes accompanying the same, you will please consider as a part of this report, to which I refer you for a more particular description of the line, and for some other information not herein detailed. The connexions of surveys marked in the map were surveys made prior to the Choctaw treaty. The settlements on the Arkansas are immediately on the river, extending from the eastern boundary nearly as far west as the mouth of the Canadian Fork. The settlements on Red river also extend from the eastern boundary westerly as far as the Kiamichi, and are more widely spread than they are on the Arkansas. A direct line from the mouth of the Poteau to the mouth of the Kiamichi would not relieve the white settlers, as was expected. Therefore, the line that I have considered best to suggest to you for that purpose will be a direct line from the junction of the Canadian with the Arkansas to the mouth of Jack's Fork of the Kiamichi; thence down Kiamichi river to Red river. This contemplated line would include about three hundred and seventy-five families, averaging about seven persons to a family, and about six millions five hundred thousand acres of land, which would be, from the best information I have been able to obtain, only a very small part of the Choctaw cession.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

HENRY D. DOWNS, Commissioner, &c.

APPLICATION OF OHIO AND ALABAMA FOR FURTHER RELIEF TO THE PURCHASERS OF PUBLIC LANDS, AND IN RELATION TO LANDS FOR A UNIVERSITY AND SCHOOLS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 28, 1827.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled.

The undersigned inhabitants of the State of Alabama, beg leave to represent: That their situation, in respect to the public land debt. * * * [For this memorial see No. 533.]

MEMORIAL to the Congress of the United States, asking permission for the trustees of the University of Alabama to select other lands in lieu of those herein described.

Memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the senate and house of representatives of the State of Alabama, in general assembly convened, respectfully represents: That section twelve, containing 638.80 acres, the northeast quarter of section seventeen, containing 159.11 acres, the northeast quarter of section twenty-eight, containing 158.81 acres, and the east part of the northeast quarter of section thirty-four, containing 106.12 acres, in township four, range eleven west, in the Huntsville land district, patented to the trustees of the University of Alabama, July 16, 1824, have been subsequently sold by the United States to individuals who are now in peaceable possession thereof, and have made considerable and valuable improvements thereon.

In order that the quiet possession of innocent and bona fide purchasers should not be disturbed, and believing that a selection of other lands could be made as equally beneficial, your memorialists respectfully submit to your honorable bodies the propriety of passing a law granting permission to the said trustees of the University of the State of Alabama to make a selection of other lands in lieu thereof, giving said trustees the power of selecting any lands which have been forfeited, reverted, or relinquished to the United States, at any of the land offices in this State, in lieu of the above-described lands.

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives of the State of Alabama in general assembly convened, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives requested, to use their efforts to obtain the passage of a law in conformity with the foregoing memorial.

Be it further resolved, That his excellency the governor be requested to transmit to our senators and representatives in Congress one copy of the foregoing memorial and resolutions.

JOHN MURPHY.

SECRETARY OF STATE'S OFFICE, Tuscaloosa, January 16, 1827.

I do certify the foregoing report and resolutions to be a correct copy of the original on file in this office.

JAMES I. THORNTON.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the legislature of the State of Ohio respectfully represents: That by the act of Congress passed on the 13th day of April, A. D. 1802, making certain appropriations to the people of the territory northwest of the river Ohio, preparatory to the formation of a State government therein, it was proposed that section No. 16 in every township, and where such section had been sold or disposed of, other lands equivalent thereto, and most contiguous to the same, should be granted to the inhabitants of such township for the use of schools; which said propositions were, by an ordinance of the convention of said Territory, passed November 29, 1802, (after adding certain conditions by way of modification,) acceded to; by which said modification, in addition to the proposition securing section No. 16, as aforesaid, it was proposed that a donation, equal to one thirty-sixth part of the amount of land in the United States military tract, should be made for the support of schools within that district; that a like provision should be made for the Virginia reservation, so far as the unlocated lands in that tract would supply the proportion aforesaid; and, also, that a donation of the same kind, or such other provision as Congress might deem expedient, should be made to the inhabitants of the Western Reserve; and that all the lands which might thereafter be purchased of Indian tribes by the United States, lying within the State of Ohio, the one thirty-sixth part thereof should be given, as aforesaid, for the support of public schools; which said propositions of the convention aforesaid were accepted and agreed to on the part of the general government, as appears from an act of Congress passed March 3, A. D. 1803, granting, agreeably to the propositions aforesaid, to the United States and Virginia military tracts their just proportion of school lands; and granting, also, to the said Western Reserve 56,000 acres of land, being equal in amount to one thirty-sixth part of all that section of said Western Reserve to which the Indian title had at that time been extinguished. From these circumstances, and the acts above alluded to, your memorialists infer that it was the intention of Congress, and the just expectation of the inhabitants of said territory, that corresponding donations should be made for the balance of said Western Reserve as soon as the Indian title thereto might be extinguished; which, in a treaty concluded between the United States and sundry Indian tribes, at Fort Industry, July 4, A. D. 1805, was fully accomplished; and the Indian title to all the residue of said Western Reserve, being all that portion thereof lying west of the Cuyahoga river, containing about 1,540,000 acres, was thereby extinguished; an equivalent, equal to the one thirty-sixth part thereof, amounts, according to the estimates aforesaid, to 44,000 acres, to which your memorialists, agreeably to the acts, ordinance, and propositions aforesaid, conceive themselves justly entitled; and your memorialists doubt not but Congress, on a fair investigation of the subject, will concur with them in opinion as to the justice of their claim, and cheerfully adopt such measures as will render the inhabitants of said Western Reserve equal participants with other sections of their State in the benevolent liberalities of Congress.

The legislature of the State of Ohio being now engaged in making provision by law for the sale of all their school lands, and investing the avails thereof in productive funds, deem it highly important that the entire interest of each section of said State should be fully and clearly defined; your memorialists, therefore, respectfully invite the attention of Congress to this important subject, and earnestly request that provision be made for granting to the State of Ohio, for the use of schools in said Western Reserve, their just proportion of school lands not heretofore appropriated, amounting, as your memorialists have previously shown, to 44,000 acres. And your memorialists would further suggest to the consideration of your honorable bodies, inasmuch as the appropriation has been long delayed, the propriety of permitting said lands to be located in sections, out of any lands belonging to the United States in the State of Ohio not otherwise disposed of, by such agents as the governor of said State, for the time being, may appoint.

Resolved, That the foregoing memorial be submitted to Congress, and that the governor be requested to transmit to the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives of Congress copies thereof, with a request that the same be laid before the Houses over which they respectively preside.
