PUBLIC LANDS.

EVANSTON, II

20TH CONGRESS.] No. 588. [1ST SESSION.

OPERATIONS OF THE LAND SYSTEM AND THE NUMBER OF MILITARY BOUNTY LAND WARRANTS ISSUED DURING THE LAST YEAR.

COMMUNICATED TO CONGRESS BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES DECEMBER 4, 1827.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, November 23, 1827.

SIR: In compliance with your request, I have the honor to submit the following statement relative to the laws passed at the last session of Congress, the superintendence of the execution of which has been placed under the immediate charge of this office.

On the 9th of April last instructions were issued for carrying into effect the act passed January 29, 1827, relative to the location of two townships of land for a seminary of learning in Florida, and to complete the location of the grant to the Deaf and Dumb Asylum of Kentucky. The location of the lands under this act are in progress, but have not yet been completed.

On February 26, 1827, instructions were issued from this office to the surveyor of public lands in Florida to carry into effect the act passed on the 8th of February last, "to provide for the settlement of private land claims in East Florida, and for other purposes," so far as related to the surveying of the private claims. Under those instructions some progress has been made in surveying the private claims in West Florida, and it is expected by Colonel Butler that the survey of the whole of the private claims in West Florida will be completed in the course of the ensuing winter. It is doubtful how far the provisions of the act referred to will be adequate to the completion of the private claims in East Florida within a reasonable period. The survey of the private claims in East Florida will be necessarily suspended until the report of the commissioners, authorized by the act referred to, shall have been made and acted upon by Congress.

The act passed on the 22d of February, for the removal of the office in the Choctaw district, has been carried into effect by the removal of the office to Mount Salus in July last.

The act passed on the 2d of March last, "supplementary to an act to perfect certain locations and sales of public lands in Missouri," has been carried into effect by issuing the patents on the locations therein referred to, so far as returns have been made to this office.

No measures have been taken by this office to carry into effect the several acts passed on the 2d of March last, granting certain lands to the State of Illinois for the purpose of aiding in making a canal, and to the State of Indiana for aiding in making a road and canal; the canals and road therein referred to not having been as yet located by the respective States.

Instructions were issued on the 12th of April to Mr. Tiffin, the surveyor general, to carry into effect the act passed on the 2d of March last, authorizing the President to ascertain and designate the northern boundary line of the State of Indiana; and the return of the plat and survey of this line will probably be received at this office in the course of the ensuing month.

Under the provisions of the act passed on the 2d of March last, authorizing the sale of certain Moravian lands in the State of Ohio, those lands have been proclaimed for sale.

On the 23d of March instructions were given to the register and receiver of the land office at St. Stephen's for carrying into effect the act passed on the 3d of that month, "supplementary to the several acts providing for the adjustment of land claims in the State of Alabama." Between one and two hundred claims have been filed under the provisions of this act, and I am advised by the register and receiver that they will meet at Mobile on the third Monday in December for the purpose of deciding and reporting on those claims.

Under the provisions of "An act to grant a certain quantity of land to the State of Ohio for the purpose of making a road from Columbus to Sandusky," a certain quantity of the public land has been reserved from sale on each side of the road, as located by the Sandusky Turnpike Company; but as there is some difficulty in designating the lands intended to be appropriated by the act, the selections have not yet been actually made.

The several private acts for the relief of individuals, passed at the last session of Congress, the execution of which requires the interposition of this office, have been executed, so far as the individuals interested have as yet claimed the benefits of said acts.

The act passed May 4, 1826, "making further provisions for the extinguishment of the debt due to the United States by the purchasers of public lands," having ceased to be in operation after the 4th of July last by the limitation therein contained, I now submit the table marked A, which exhibits the results of the several operations of that act; from which it will appear that the amount of debt extinguished by it is $1,971,068 49, exclusive of forfeitures; and that there remains a debt yet due from individuals to the government of $4,305,365 28, including the amount forfeited on the lands which have been further credited for six years. The whole debt now due is payable on or before June 30, 1829. The expediency of recommending to Congress the renewal of the provisions of the act of May 4, 1826, is therefore respectfully submitted.

The paper marked B is a synopsis of the public lands brought down to December 31, 1825. That marked C exhibits the operations in respect to the sale of, and the receipts on account of, the public lands for the year 1826, and for the first six months of 1827. The paper marked D exhibits the period to which the monthly returns of the registers and receivers have been made, and that to which the quarterly accounts of the receivers have been returned to and adjusted at this office, and the balances in the hands of the receivers, as exhibited in their returns to the 30th of September last.

I have also the satisfaction to state that the books of this office, and the business of its various branches are generally brought up as nearly to the current period as the returns and the nature of the business would admit.

The surveying of the public lands in the several surveying districts has progressed during the present year without any particular embarrassment; and the returns required to be made by the surveyors to this office have been generally received, with the exception of the surveying district south of Tennessee, embracing the States of Mississippi and Louisiana. On this subject, I take leave to refer to the report made to you from this office on December 1, 1826, and printed with documents accompanying the President's message to Congress in December last.

All which is respectfully submitted.

GEORGE GRAHAM.

Hon. Richard Rush, Secretary of the Treasury.

20TH CONGRESS.] No. 589. [1ST SESSION.

LAND CLAIM IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 18, 1827.

Mr. BUCKNER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the memorial, and documents in support thereof, of John Brest, of the parish of Washita, in the State of Louisiana, reported:

This case was submitted to the Committee on Private Land Claims during the last session of the nineteenth Congress, who made a report thereupon on the 22d day of December, 1826, unfavorable to the claim of the petitioner. They have re-examined said report, and can see no reason by which they are induced to abandon the grounds on which that report is based. They therefore adopt it as a part of this, and are of opinion that the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted.

DECEMBER 22, 1826.

The Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the memorial, and documents in support thereof, of John Brest, of the parish of Washita, in the State of Louisiana, reported:

The petitioner, John Brest, requests of Congress that an act should be passed confirming his title to a tract of land in said parish, containing four hundred and ten superficial arpents. In support of his said claim he relies upon the affidavits of several persons. James McLauchlin, who appears to have been formerly a deputy surveyor in that parish, under the authority of the Spanish government, swears that he surveyed and bounded for one John Pierre Laudernan, now deceased, (with one of whose heirs the petitioner has since intermarried,) a tract of land lying in the Prairie des Chicots, in said parish, containing ten arpents front, or four hundred superficial arpents, on the 22d day of October, 1802, by order of the Spanish commandant of said parish, to indemnify said Laudernan for another tract of land for which he had a requête or order of survey, but which had been taken from him by another claim. From the affidavits of the other witnesses, it appears that a certain tract of land, which the said Laudernan claimed and resided upon in the year 1801, containing about four hundred arpents, and lying above Fort Miro, on the east side of the Washita river, was ascertained, by an experimental survey, to be within an older claim of the Baron de Bastrop; and that, in consequence thereof, the said Laudernan yielded the possession thereof to the said Bastrop; that, by a verbal order of the Spanish commandant, the survey of the land now claimed by the petitioner and other heirs of the said Laudernan was made by said McLauchlin to indemnify said Laudernan for the land the possession of which he had delivered to said Baron de Bastrop; that the said Laudernan took possession of said tract on the Prairie des Chicots in the year 1801, and inhabited and cultivated it from that time until his death, which happened in 1818; and that the petitioner has ever since inhabited and cultivated it, and has incurred considerable expense in its improvement; that when a requête was granted, the Spanish government required only that the land should be inhabited and cultivated by the claimant for three years, and that he should keep the road in front of the land open and in repair.

It is moreover proven that this claim was presented to the board of commissioners at Opelousas for confirmation, who rejected it because it appeared that a certificate had been previously granted in the name of John Pierre Laudernan for land above Fort Miro. Upon an examination of the report of the commissioners upon the claim of one Abraham Moorehouse, Nos. 42, 43, and 44, of the Washita report, it appears that the title to one of the tracts is derived from an order of survey conceded to John Pierre Laudernan, and that it was the opinion of said commissioners that his, Laudernan's, claim to a donation from the United States was thereby barred. Of the correctness of this decision it is presumed there could be no doubt, if the certificate granted by the commissioners in Laudernan's name had been granted for his benefit or by his consent.—(See Land Laws, p. 280, 2d section.) But by Hughes it is proven that the heirs of Abraham Moorehouse entered the said land above Fort Miro in the name of John Pierre Laudernan, and obtained the certificate from the commissioners. The foregoing are the facts upon which this case depends. It remains for the committee to say whether there are any circumstances which, in their opinion, should prevent the application to this case of the provision of the act above referred to, that not more than one tract should be granted to any one individual. They do not conceive that there are any such proven. Whether the land so entered by Moorehouse's heirs be the same, the possession of which was so delivered to Bastrop, is not entirely certain, nor is it important to ascertain. It is not pretended that the possession was delivered in consequence of any legal coercion. Whether Bastrop's claim was superior in law or equity to that of Laudernan is entirely uncertain. Indeed, it is not proven that any one saw the testimony of Bastrop's claim; and the claim which the commissioners confirmed was not upon that claim, but to the heirs of Moorehouse, upon an order of survey conceded to John Pierre Laudernan. There is no proof to show upon what authority said heirs used or claimed said Laudernan's order of survey. It might have been, and most probably was, upon a transfer of it to them or their ancestor. It surely is not to be presumed that the commissioners would have reported in favor of the claims of said heirs upon an order of survey in his name unless there had been proof before them showing such transfer. If Laudernan sold it, or permitted them to use his name, then this claim would, according to the spirit of the act of Congress on that subject, depend on the same principle as if the claim had been granted for his individual benefit. If there was no such contract or authority, some proof in relation to that matter should have been produced; and it should not be forgotten that under such circumstances the grant would, in a court of chancery, enure to the benefit of Laudernan. For the reasons above stated, the committee do report it as their opinion that, upon the proof submitted, the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted.

MEMORIAL of John Brest, of Washita, Louisiana, praying for a law to confirm his claim to a certain tract of land, with accompanying documents.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The memorial of John Brest, of the parish of Washita, in Louisiana, prays your honorable body to confirm him in his title to a certain tract of land in Washita, containing 410 superficial arpents; and, in support of his claim, he respectfully refers to the certified survey of the proper Spanish officer, and the depositions of John Hughes, James McLawchlin, John Heberard and others, properly certified and attached to this memorial; and, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Washita, April 25, 1824.

I do certify that I surveyed and bounded for John Pierre Laudernau, deceased, formerly of this parish, a tract of land lying in the Prairie des Chicots, in said parish, containing ten arpents front, or four hundred arpents superficial, (measure of Paris.) I made this survey on October 22 and 23, 1802, by order of Don Vincent Fernandez Tescheiro, commandant (Spanish) of this parish, to indemnify the said Laudernau for another tract of land for which he had a requête, and which was taken from him by another claim.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Washita, ss:

Before me, Oliver I. Morgan, parish judge in and for the parish of Ouachita, personally came and appeared Bastian Olivoux, inhabitant of said parish, who, being first duly sworn on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, deposes and says that he is fifty-eight years of age; has resided in this parish fifty-five years; that it is within his own personal knowledge that Pierre Olivoux sold his tract of land of four hundred arpents, on the Bayou Leard, in this parish, to the Baron de Bastrop; that John Pierre Laudernau inhabited and cultivated a tract of land on the Ouachita river above Fort Miro, a short distance below the junction of the Bayou Leard with the Ouachita river; that, in consequence of the title of the land sold by Pierre Olivoux to the Baron de Bastrop being of a prior and older date than the title of the land ceded by the Spanish government to John Pierre Laudernau, on making the survey it was found that the claim of Pierre Olivoux embraced the whole, or nearly the whole, of John Pierre Laudernau's land; that the land occupied by John Pierre Laudernau was well improved; that the said John Pierre Laudernau was a cripple, and had a large family, all too young to assist him; that, in consequence of which, the Baron de Bastrop paid the said John Pierre Laudernau about four hundred dollars in merchandise for his improvements; and that the Spanish commandant, Don Vicente Fernandez Teguro y Cota, told him to go to the Prairie de Chicots, about twenty-seven miles below Fort Miro, establish himself, and that he should have four hundred arpents of land there from the Spanish government; that the said Laudernau did go there, inhabited and cultivated the same from the year 1801 until he died; that his heirs and representatives (one of whom is Jean Brest, who intermarried with one of the heirs of the said Laudernau) have inhabited and cultivated the said land up to the present day; that the said John Laudernau removed from the land above Fort Miro against his will and consent; that he was ordered off by the Spanish commandant, and under that government, particularly in the parts under the jurisdiction of a commandant, his will was the only law; that the said John Pierre Laudernau, at the time he was ordered off by the commandant to go to the Prairie de Chicots, cried like a child.

And this deponent, not knowing how to write, hereto makes his ordinary mark, after the same having been fully read and explained to him.

FEBRUARY 4, 1827.

Before me, Oliver I. Morgan, parish judge in and for the parish of Ouachita and State of Louisiana, personally came and appeared General John Hughes, who, being first duly sworn, deposes and says that he has resided in this parish (Ouachita) since June, 1799; that it is within the knowledge of this deponent that the Baron de Bastrop took a tract of land from John Pierre Laudernau (containing about four hundred arpents, lying about two miles above Fort Miro, on the east side of the Ouachita river) by virtue of an older title; that it was ascertained by a survey made by James McLawchlin, then Spanish surveyor for this district, who made the survey, and that the Spanish commandant was present at the survey made by the Baron de Bastrop, which was done in the year 1801; and that the Baron de Bastrop took possession of the same immediately after; and that, to indemnify Laudernau for the loss of his land above Fort Miro, taken by Bastrop, the Spanish commandant gave John Pre. Laudernau a tract of land about fifty-four miles below Fort Miro by water, or twenty-seven miles by land; and that James McLawchlin, Spanish surveyor, made the survey in the year 1802. This deponent further says that the commandant never gave written order to the surveyor to locate or survey lands given by the government, but were always verbal. This deponent further says the land given to Laudernau in lieu of the land above Fort Miro was occupied and cultivated by Laudernau in the year 1801; that the said tract of land was entered with the commissioners, occupancy and cultivation proved; that the commissioners would not grant a certificate for the same because a previous one had issued for the land above Fort Miro in Laudernau's name; this circumstance was not mentioned or explained to the commissioner, if it had this deponent believes they would have granted one. This deponent says he lived with the Spanish commandant at that time, and is well acquainted with the whole circumstance. And further says not.

JOHN HUGHES.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my name and affixed my seal of office the date above written.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Ouachita, sct:

I, Oliver I. Morgan, parish judge in and for the parish aforesaid, do hereby certify that there is no deed or copy of deed on file or of record in the archives of my office (where all conveyances of real estate ought to be) from John Pierre Laudernau, deceased, to the Baron de Bastrop, to Abraham Morehouse, or to any other person.

In testimony whereof, I have signed the present, and hereto affixed my seal of office, this sixth day of February, in the year 1827.

OLIVER I. MORGAN, Parish Judge.

PARISH OF OUACHITA, State of Louisiana, ss:

Before me, Mucius S. Spark, senior justice of the peace in and for the parish of Ouachita, State of Louisiana, personally came and appeared John Heberard, who, being first duly sworn on the Holy Evangelist of Almighty God, deposeth and says that he is seventy years of age in January next; that he emigrated to this country, Louisiana, in the year 1783; that it is within his personal knowledge that, in the year 1801, John Pierre Laudernau inhabited and cultivated the land where John Brest now lives; that the then Spanish commandant, Vicente Fernandez Teguro y Cota, gave to John Pierre Laudernau four hundred arpents of land at the Prairie de Chicot, in this parish, on the east bank of the Ouachita river, which the said Laudernau inhabited and cultivated until his death, (in the year 1818;) that, after his decease, John Brest purchased the rights of two of said Laudernau's heirs, Brest's wife inheriting one share; that the said commandant gave the above land to Laudernau as a compensation for the land above Fort Miro. The tract of land at the Prairie de Chicot was to be ten arpents front by forty deep.

This deponent further says that it is within his knowledge that the above land at Prairie de Chicot was inhabited and cultivated every year from 1801 to the present day by John Pierre Laudernau, and after his decease by his representatives; that John Pierre Laudernau was a poor man and a cripple, and was an honest and inoffensive man; that the deponent is convinced that his having been compelled to remove from the land above Fort Miro was of considerable inconvenience and disadvantage to him, inasmuch as he was poor and infirm, and had no other assistance than such as was afforded him by his two sons; and deponent further says that said Laudernau was the first person who ever settled on and improved said land in Prairie de Chicot. This deponent further says that he was alcade under the Spanish government; that under that government, when requêtes or orders of survey were granted, the only condition required was to keep the road open and improve in front of the land granted; to inhabit and cultivate the same for and during the term of three years, after which period the owner was at liberty to sell or dispose of the same; and on application to the commandant, by petition, the person applying could get the same quantity or more. And further this deponent saith not.

Before me, Mucius S. Spark, senior justice of the peace in and for the parish of Ouachita, also personally came and appeared Charles Betin, who, being first duly sworn, deposes and says that he will be sixty years of age next January; that he emigrated to this country in May, 1795, with the Marquis de Maison Rouge; that it is within his personal knowledge that all the facts stated in the foregoing deposition of John Heberard are substantially true, as relates to the land inhabited by John Pierre Laudernau, and that what relates to requêtes or orders of survey is also true. That this deponent was syndic under the Spanish government for many years; and further he said not.

WM. BRENT, of Louisiana.

PARISH OF OUACHITA, State of Louisiana, ss:

Before me, M. S. Spark, senior justice of the peace in and for the parish of Ouachita, in the State of Louisiana, personally came and appeared General John Hughes, who, being first duly sworn on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, deposes and says that he is forty-nine years of age; that he has resided permanently in this parish (Ouachita) since May, 1799; that it is within his personal knowledge that John Pierre Laudernau, now deceased, removed to and settled on a tract of land in the aforesaid parish, at a place known and called by the name of the Prairie de Chicot; that in the year 1801 the said John Pierre Laudernau inhabited and cultivated the said land until his death, which was in the year 1818; that since his decease, it has been inhabited and cultivated by the present claimant, John Brest, who married one of the heirs, and was entitled to her proportion of the land, and afterwards purchased the right of two of the other heirs to their share of the land. This deponent further says it is within his own personal knowledge that the said land has been inhabited and cultivated every year, since the first settlement made by John Pierre Laudernau, in the year 1801, to the present date, and now is; that the present claimant, John Brest, has been at much expense in building on and improving said land. This deponent further says he was a member of Vicente Tigiero y Cota's family, the Spanish commandant, in the year 1801; that it is within this deponent's knowledge that the said commandant told John Pierre Laudernau to go and settle at the Prairie de Chicot; that he should have four hundred arpents of land, in lieu of the quantity that was taken from him, where he had resided and cultivated for many years, about one and a half mile above Fort Miro. This deponent says that the land above Fort Miro was taken from the said Laudernau by a person who had, or pretended to have, an older title; that, at that time, it was not worth contending for, as land could be procured anywhere at the expense of surveying it. This deponent further says that he believes that John Pierre Laudernau received no advantage from the exchange of the land above Fort Miro and that on which he settled; but, on the contrary, this deponent believes it was a very great disadvantage to him, inasmuch as the land above Fort Miro was improved, whereas the land at the Prairie de Chicot was not. He was a poor man, without slaves, a cripple, and no person to work but two sons, who soon after got married and left him. This deponent further says it is within his knowledge that the Spanish commandant gave orders to James McLawchlin, then deputy surveyor of this district, under Laveau Trudeau, then surveyor general of the State of Louisiana, to survey the said tract of land (four hundred arpents) for John Pierre Laudernau, which he did, as this deponent believes, in 1802. This deponent further says the heirs or representatives of Abraham Moorhouse entered the land above Fort Miro, in the name of John Pierre Laudernau, and got a certificate for the same from the board of commissioners at Opelousas; that this deponent entered the land at the Prairie de Chicot, inhabited and cultivated by John Pierre Laudernau, with the commissioners at Opelousas, and made the necessary proof; that the commissioners would not grant a certificate for the same, in consequence of their having granted one for the land above Fort Miro. It is within this deponent's knowledge that they were not in the habit of granting more than one certificate in the name of the same person. And this deponent further says that, under the Spanish government, when requêtes or orders of survey were granted, the only condition required was to keep the road open and in repair in front of the land granted, to inhabit and cultivate the same for and during the term of three years; after which period the owner was at liberty to sell or dispose of the same; and, on application to the commandant by petition, the person applying could get the same quantity or more; and further this deponent says not.

JOHN HUGHES.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Ouachita, ss:

Before me, Oliver S. Morgan, parish judge in and for the parish aforesaid, personally appeared Mr. Alexander Breard, an inhabitant of said parish, who made oath that in the time of the Spanish government he was ordered and required by the commandant of the post of Ouachita to superintend, as syndic of said post, a survey of a tract of land, to be made for John Pierre Laudernau, by James McLawchlin, deputy surveyor under the Spanish government; and that he did assist the said McLawchlin in making a survey of four hundred arpents, in the Prairie Chicot, as ordered by the said commandant. And this declarant further states that the said commandant of the said post agreed that the said Laudernau should have the land in said prairie, provided Mr. Dupare, commandant of Point Coupee, would give up his pretensions to it, which was done; and the said Laudernau was directed by the said Spanish commandant to move on and take possession of the tract of land, which he did in the winter of 1801; and the survey was made in the year 1802 by the said McLawchlin, assisted by this declarant, by order of the commandant aforesaid.

J. H. OVERTON, Judge Seventh District.

OPELOUSAS, December 30, 1815.

The register of the land office and receiver of the public moneys of the western district of the late Territory of Orleans, now State of Louisiana, have the honor to report their decisions and opinions, for the revision of Congress, on the following claims to land within the said district, which were filed with the register pursuant to the acts of Congress entitled "An act giving further time for registering claims to land in the western district of the Territory of Orleans," passed March 10, 1812, and the act entitled "An act giving further time for registering claims to land in the eastern and western districts of the Territory of Orleans, now State of Louisiana," passed February 27, 1813, classing and arranging the same as follows, viz:

Class No. 7 will comprise claims founded on occupancy subsequent to October 1, 1800, and previous to April 12, 1814; and claims founded on occupancy commenced previous to the said first day of October, by persons holding, or having held, other lands in their own names in Louisiana, under French or Spanish grants or concessions, and which claims do not come within the purview of classes Nos. 5 and 6, ought not, in the opinion of the said register and receiver, to be confirmed, the right of pre-emption, to the extent of one hundred and sixty acres, (a quarter of a section,) being secured to the settler by an act of Congress passed April 12, 1814.—(See note G, at the end of the report.)

SEVENTH CLASS.

No. 473.

Register's No. 975. Hypolite Lauderneau claims six hundred and forty superficial acres of land, situated on the west side of Washita river, in the county of Washita, bounded above by land of widow Colandor, and below by land of the heirs of Augustin Ray. The evidence of John Hebert, aged fifty-seven years, taken November 25, 1813, states that the land has been inhabited and cultivated from the year 1799 to the present date, first by Francis Le Bouef, and subsequently by the claimant, a man of about thirty years of age, and head of a family.—(See note M.)

The following are claims which were reported by the late board of commissioners for adjusting claims to land in the western district of the late Territory of Orleans, now State of Louisiana, in which "written evidence or other testimony" has been adduced, in conformity with the second section of an act of Congress passed February 27, 1813, entitled "An act giving further time for registering claims to land in the eastern and western districts of the Territory of Orleans, now Louisiana:"

Claims to land in the county of Washita.

36. In the claim of John Pierre Lauderneau, jr., reported under the No. 36, John Hughes, esq., being sworn, November 25, 1813, before the register and receiver, deposeth that the claimant, a man more than thirty years of age and the head of a family, took possession of the land claimed in the spring of 1802 or 1803, and has inhabited and cultivated the same from that date to the present time. On reference to the late board of commissioners in this case, it will be seen that a survey was made of the land in question, by a surveyor under the authority of the Spanish government, in 1802, which, with the evidence of occupancy now offered, brings this claim within the fourth class of this report. It ought, therefore, in the opinion of the register and receiver, to be confirmed.

37. In the claim of John Pierre Lauderneau, sr., reported under the No. 37, John Hughes, esq., being sworn, November 25, 1813, before the register, deposeth that the claimant, a man nearly seventy years of age, and the father and grandfather of a numerous offspring, has inhabited and cultivated the land in question, constantly, from the year 1802 to the present date. In the claim of Abraham Moorhouse, reported by the late board of commissioners, Nos. 42, 43, and 44, of Washita report, it appears that the title to one of the tracts of land is derived from an order of survey conceded to John Pierre Lauderneau, whose claim to a donation from the United States is thereby barred. But, from the above evidence, this claim comes properly within the seventh class of this report, entitling the claimant to the pre-emption right of one quarter section.

Notes before referred to.

G.—The act of Congress granting pre-emption rights, which has been referred to in the seventh class, is silent as to the date at which lands should have been settled. The register and receiver have construed the law as granting the right of pre-emption, as far as one-quarter of a section, to any person who may have inhabited and cultivated the tract claimed at any time previous to April 12, 1814, the day on which the act was passed.

M.—The claimants ought to produce authenticated deeds of sale from the previous occupants. It does not necessarily follow that because A had occupied a tract of land in time to entitle him to a donation from the United States, and abandoned his claim thereto, that B, a subsequent settler on the same land, not within the provisions of the law, and without having obtained a legal transfer of the title of A, should be, in like manner, entitled. The register and receiver have, therefore, reported against such claims—claimants, in all such cases, having the right of pre-emption.

All which is respectfully submitted.

LEVIN WAILES, Register of the Land Office.
WM. GERRARD, Receiver of Public Moneys.

REMISSION OF FORFEITURES OF PARTIAL PAYMENTS FOR PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 19, 1827.

Mr. VINTON, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred so much of the President's message as relates to the public lands, having had under consideration so much of said reference as recommends "the remission of the forfeitures of partial payments on account of purchases of the public lands," reported:

That under the credit system, commonly so called, various acts of Congress were passed modifying the manner of selling the public lands, and altering the periods of credit. To attempt to enumerate those laws and their various provisions would lead into tiresome prolixity of detail.

The committee, therefore, deem it sufficient for the present purpose to remark that in all those laws some leading features are uniformly the same. One of these is that in all cases payment of part of the purchase money was required at the time of entering into the contract. Another, that in case of failure of the purchaser to pay according to the conditions of sale, the land sold and money paid were both forfeited to the government.

It could not but happen in the natural course of things that, among the many thousand of purchasers, great numbers should be unable to fulfil strictly their engagements to the government.

Individual miscalculation, misfortune, and disappointment, in every imaginable shape; the fluctuations of trade and of public affairs; the distressing revulsion in the circulating medium of the western country consequent upon the conclusion of the war; all tended (and especially the latter cause to a great extent) to bring about this result—a result, in all probability, beyond the control, in most instances, of human prudence or human calculation. Accordingly, forfeitures have taken place in the different States and Territories to the amount of $560,000, being near two per cent. upon the whole amount of sales of public lands. It is believed that in a great majority of cases these forfeitures have been incurred by actual settlers upon the land contracted for; and, in all cases, the government have, first, the land, (and indeed, in most instances, have resold it,) next, the purchase money paid, and, lastly, where improvements were made by the purchaser, the benefit of those improvements also.

The committee are aware that, by the terms of the contract, this class of purchasers have no legal claim upon the government for relief; but theirs is a case, in the opinion of the committee, of such palpable equity that an equivalent for the money paid cannot be conscientiously withheld. It is proposed to give them that equivalent by issuing scrip for the money paid, to be receivable as cash in payment for public land.

They therefore report a bill accordingly.

20TH CONGRESS.] No. 591. [1ST SESSION.

CLAIM TO LAND IN EAST FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 20, 1827.

Mr. SHEPPERD, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Nicol Turnbull and others, heirs and representatives of Andrew Turnbull, deceased, reported:

That the petitioners seek to be confirmed in their claim to sundry extensive tracts of land situate in the Territory of East Florida. They state that grants for these lands were made by the British government to their ancestor, the said Andrew Turnbull, and several of his children, shortly after the treaty of 1763, ceding the Floridas to the British crown; they further represent that the principal motive for obtaining these extensive tracts of country was for the cultivation of silk, the vine, and the olive; and that with this view they were possessed and, in part, improved by the said Andrew Turnbull, until, by the experience of some years, it was ascertained that the soil and climate were unsuited to such productions, and that from this failure, and the commencement of the war between Spain and Britain, their ancestor, the said Andrew Turnbull, about the year 1779, abandoned his Florida possessions, removed with his family within the United States, and joined them in the war of the revolution; that upon the recession of East Florida to Spain, by the treaty of 1783, a commission was instituted at London in order to inquire into and make compensation to the inhabitants for injuries sustained in consequence of the transfer of the Territory as the price of peace; but that no compensation was made to their ancestor, on account of his having joined the United States in their war with Great Britain.

Upon this representation of facts, the petitioners insist that they have all along continued to possess a right to the lands in question; that Great Britain could not cede, nor Spain acquire, under the treaty of 1783, any power to dispose of or in any way affect individual titles to any portion of the Territory; and that all which, by the law of nations, can be transferred from sovereign to sovereign, in a territorial point of view, is that portion of the soil not previously granted to individuals. They further contend that, as they have continued to be inhabitants or citizens of this government upon our acquisition of East Florida, they are, by the right of postliminium, entitled to claim a repossession of all they or their ancestors held in Florida under grant of the British crown. Your committee cannot perceive the correctness of either of the positions assumed by the petitioners, but think that the converse of both will, upon a moment's consideration, be found to be true. Individual property may, by virtue of the eminent domain residing in the sovereign, be disposed of without the consent of the owner, and the citizen or subject affected thereby can only look for compensation to the government granting whilst the thing granted is absolutely disposed of, and no obligation rests upon the government to which it is transferred. Spain, therefore, acquired Florida and all and singular its territory, discharged of all conditions towards its then inhabitants and the owners of its soil, other than those imposed by the terms of the treaty of cession; and by the fifth article of that treaty, liberty is given to British inhabitants, or those who may have been subjects of Great Britain, to remove their persons and effects, and to make sale of their estates within a limited time; but neither the petitioners, nor he under whom they claim, availed themselves of the terms of this contract, and upon a failure to do so there was a forfeiture of the benefits which it proposed, and, consequently, a loss of all right of claim against the Spanish government. And by the subsequent acquisition of this government it has come under no other nor greater obligations than rested on Spain herself. Not only does the principle above adverted to negative the idea of the recognition of such claims on the part of the Spanish government, but, from the report of the commissioners appointed under an act of Congress to examine and report upon East Florida land claims, we are informed that in the cases now under consideration there had been no affirmance of the claim under that government; and the commissioners rely upon that circumstance as affording strong evidence to show that at the time of cession to this government the petitioners had no subsisting claim. Nor can your committee perceive how the right of postliminium can be applied to the case of the petitioners in relation to this government. This is a right alone subsisting between belligerents and their allies; and as to the war between Spain and Great Britain, this government was a mere stranger; nor, indeed, could the right asserted be made good even against the British government, for it only applies to cases of reacquisition of property or territory by the government to which it originally belonged, either by reconquest during the war or by cession by way of treaty. But, in the case we are considering, instead of the restoration of East Florida to Great Britain, it was actually ceded to Spain.

The committee are therefore unable to discover any fixed principle upon which the petitioners, even according to their own showing, are entitled to relief, nor is there anything offered in their case presenting such strong claims to the bounty or munificence of the government as to induce them to recognize their claim even to any extent. It is true they state that their ancestor took part in our revolutionary struggle, and that on this account no indemnity was allowed by the British government; yet by the terms of the treaty with Spain they were, within a limited time, permitted to make sale of the lands in question, which, it seems, they or their ancestor failed and neglected to do; nor does it appear to the committee that a disposition to aid in our revolutionary contest prompted their ancestor to remove from his possession in Florida; but, on the other hand, it is strongly inferable that had the vine and olive flourished under his culture, such removal would not have taken place.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That it is inexpedient to grant the prayer of the petitioners.

20TH CONGRESS.] No. 592. [1ST SESSION.

GRANTS MADE TO FRENCH EMIGRANTS TO CULTIVATE THE VINE AND OLIVE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE DECEMBER 24, 1827.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 21, 1827.

SIR: In obedience to a resolution of the Senate of May 20, 1826, I have the honor to transmit a copy of the contract made by the Secretary of the Treasury with the agent of the late emigrants from France, in pursuance of "An act to set apart and dispose of certain public lands for the encouragement of the cultivation of the vine and olive," with a list of the names of the emigrants to whom lands were allotted under that contract, and of the allotments made to them, respectively, together with maps of the lands included in the contract upon which the several allotments are designated; also, a report made to this department by a special agent, showing how far, and by whom, any of the conditions of the contract have been performed, and the manner of such performance; and in cases where others than the original allottees are the occupants, under what tenure or authority; and showing, also, in cases where the conditions have not been complied with, the alleged causes of such non-compliance.

Accompanying the report of the special agent is a letter from the agent of the emigrants, which affords additional explanation of the circumstances which have prevented a more full compliance with the contract.

In regard to any forfeitures that are supposed to have been incurred for non-performance of the conditions of the contract, I have the honor to state that, as there is no provision in that instrument that forfeiture should follow the non-fulfilment of any of its conditions, it is considered most respectful to report the facts that have a bearing on the question.

It is deemed proper to state that, as it appeared that in some instances portions of these lands had been taken possession of by trespassers without any color of right, and in opposition to individuals claiming under the contract, instructions were given, by direction of the President, to the marshal of the district to cause such trespassers to be removed if, after three months' notice, they should refuse to do so. It is believed, however, that it has not been found necessary to carry these instructions into effect.

The delay in making this report has been caused by the illness of the agent who was employed by the department, and who is since dead.

I have the honor to remain, with the highest respect, your obedient servant,

RICHARD RUSH.

Hon. the PRESIDENT of the Senate

AIGLEVILLE, February 27, 1827.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 22d of September ultimo, informing me of the appointment of William G. Adams, esq., of Tuscaloosa, as an agent from the Treasury Department to inquire and examine personally what progress had been made by the Tombeckbee Association in the fufilment of the conditions of the contract with the treasury of the United States. The answer thereto has been delayed in order that it might accompany the report of Mr. Adams. In the latter part of November he arrived at Aigleville, and exhibited his instructions from the Treasury Department, of which I am happy to say, from their liberality, we have nothing to fear from misrepresentation, prejudice, or partiality.

Among the instructions, we find that the president of the committee is required to afford every facility to enable the agent to obtain correct information upon the subject of his mission, and also to impart to the department any reason, explanation, or palliation, for the non-performance of any of the conditions of the contract made by the government with our association.

Your excellency will therefore permit me, in obedience to that clause of instruction, briefly to offer you some of the reasons why a failure of performance has, in some instances, occurred.

It will be recollected that the members of our association were chiefly composed of officers and merchants, possessing an extremely limited knowledge of either the science or practice of agriculture; that the region of country to which they were to remove was a perfect wilderness; and, under circumstances like these, it is to be expected that very many unforeseen and unexpected difficulties would present themselves; and as the common necessaries and means of support must be obtained before an entrance could be made upon the principal object of the association, (the cultivation of the vine,) we have, in many instances, been obliged to neglect the performance of our contract, and yield to the more immediate and pressing demands upon our industry for a bare competency and support. Many of the grantees, unfortunately for themselves, came prematurely to their lands; they came to the trackless desert or country, almost impervious to the approach of man, without a road or passway; consequently, the means of transportation to their particular allotments of land was so impracticable and expensive that many persons upon their arrival were compelled to settle, temporarily, on their small lots around the town of Aigleville, where their funds were exhausted, and they became unable to make a second settlement upon their large allotments. The surveyor's report of these lands will exhibit the difficulty of passing through the country, their notes showing that for many days they could not proceed more than two or three miles per day. Many of us were obliged to pay as much as four and five dollars per bushel for corn, and a proportionate price for many other articles of provision, which prices were very frequently doubled by the difficulties of transportation to their residences. Forty or fifty dollars have often been paid for a cow and calf, which can now be purchased for eight or ten dollars. Thus commenced our settlement; and possessing little knowledge of agriculture, strangers to the language, the manners, and habits of the people of this country, we have been greatly retarded from making that rapid progress which, perhaps, the citizens of the United States would have made. In addition to those natural difficulties under which we labored, we had other and more serious ones to encounter; for upon almost all that part of our grant which was the most easy to settle and cultivate, the squatter, who is the pioneer of all new countries, had fixed himself. He, just having experienced the difficulties of settling a new country, at once became hostile to our claims, and sternly refused possession to the grantees, in some instances denying the right of the emigrant, and in many others threatening the most violent and determined vengeance upon any person who would interfere with their settlement. From these circumstances many were deterred coming to their lands, and in many instances those difficulties exist until this day, there having been as yet but one judicial decision upon this subject, which was in 1825, which adjudged to the grantee the right of possession and entry; but many still continue wrongfully to hold our lands, and refuse possession. Again, many of the allotments, from their natural locality, being within the prairie country, admit of no settlement, on account of the impracticability of procuring water, many having dug to a great depth unsuccessfully; these still remain unsettled and unimproved. I further will remark that for several years the colony was remarkably unhealthy, scarcely a family escaped sickness, and numbers of the grantees died. These, sir, are some of the reasons why failures have occurred in regard to the conditions of settlement, &c.

You will now permit me to mention some of the causes which have produced failures in the condition relative to the cultivation of the vine; and here some of the same reasons present themselves that have been previously stated—the necessity of first acquiring the means of subsistence; the difficulty and length of time required in preparing and cleaning land for that purpose, that the seven years had nearly elapsed before this was accomplished; yet very early importations of the vine were made long before the time necessary for planting them. But a large quantity of those first imported arrived out of season; and when we consider the lateness of the season in Europe when the cutting must be taken, and the early time at which they must be planted here, it will be seen that any delay in the arrival of vessels must prove fatal to the vines, and they will arrive out of due season. Many more vines have been shipped in due time, and had they all safely arrived, those would have been more than requisite to comply with the condition of the contract, upon all the allotments, by the time required. All that have arrived alive have been carefully planted, and none wasted; as evidence of which they sold at first for twenty-five cents a piece, then twelve and a half, and the last year at six and a quarter cents. A great number died after planting, owing, as we believe, to the newness of the soil on which we are obliged to plant. The vine requires old land, which we have not; and at first, not knowing the cause, the result was discouraging. Those planted in older soil grew better, and are not so apt to die. Again, many kinds of the vine have been imported which do not succeed in this country, and it is but very lately that we are enabled, in some degree, to ascertain the quality and kind of vine best adapted to this climate. At this time the great question seems to be the proper mode of cultivation, and, instead of seven, perhaps seventy years may be required correctly to ascertain this fact. This will be readily conceded when it is known that in France, in many places, the mode of cultivation is radically different on opposite sides of the same river or mountain, and on farms differently situated in the same country. Your excellency is well aware how many years, nay centuries, Europe has required to obtain this experience and perfection. We can assert that, from our own experience, seven years are not sufficient to enable us to cultivate the vine successfully in an old country, and much more so in a wilderness. We have, however, introduced vine enough to supply the country in due time; and whatever may be our own fate, (perhaps like that of most others who have engaged in a new branch of industry,) the time will arrive when through our exertion others may be profited. It is not, I presume, vanity in us to say that we have awakened the public mind and drawn it to the subject, which is now fairly before the people of this country, and whose attention thereto is favored by the general state of things, and we trust the object of our exertions will be finally accomplished.

You will permit me further to state that Mr. Adams conceived it to be his duty to report facts as they are; consequently, in many instances, when the allottees had transmitted the vine for the purpose of complying with the contract, and they arrived dead, or did not arrive at all, those persons were reported as not having performed the conditions of the contract.

Your excellency will observe from the report of Mr. Adams that many olive trees have been imported; but we have been peculiarly unsuccessful in their cultivation, and it is very uncertain whether our soil and climate will be congenial to their growth. Since Mr. Adams was with us we have had a larger importation of fine-looking olive trees; they have been carefully planted, but their success is very doubtful.

From the very serious and protracted illness of Mr. Adams, we presume his report will not reach the department in time to be presented to the present Congress. Could it have been transmitted, it was the intention of the association to have accompanied it with a petition to government, respectfully asking the full term of the contract to perform the conditions of settlement, cultivation of the vine, &c. During the next session we beg leave to transmit our petition to the Treasury Department, with a hope that your excellency, indulging us with that great liberality which you have heretofore extended to our association, will present to Congress our petition, together with the report of the agent of the department, who exhibited the same to me, and to which I have no further remarks to make.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your excellency's most obedient and humble servant,

F. RAVESIES, Agent of Tombeckbee Association.

SPRING GROVE, Tuscaloosa, February, 1827.

SIR: Your letter, dated September 22, 1826, of instructions and information apprising me of my appointment by the Treasury Department, and the duties of the appointment, accompanied by a copy of an act of Congress passed March 3, 1817, the contract made by Villar, agent of the French emigrants, and the Treasury Department, a list of the grantees, with the number of their allotment, and a general map, with a particular plat of each township named in the contract relative to four townships of land granted to French emigrants, all reached me safe on the 1st of November last, at a time when my health would not permit me to attend to the duties of the appointment until some days thereafter. In that time, however, I apprised Mr. Ravesies, the agent, of my appointment, and furnished him with the information requested by your instruction. In November I attended at Eagleville, and commenced the duties of my appointment, and proceeded without delay until my report was nearly ready to be transmitted to the Treasury Department, when ill health again threw me on a sick bed for six weeks, which has been the cause of such delay in the work, and I fear may prevent it from being so full to every point as may be wished for. I am, however, persuaded that it contains no errors that will materially injure the rights of either of the contracting parties. From the most deliberate examination which I have been able to give to the resolution of the Senate, the instructions furnished to me by the Treasury Department, the contract, and the several acts of Congress, I have been fully confirmed in the belief that it has not been made my duty to determine whether any one or more of the grantees, for the non-performance of any one or more of the conditions in the contract, has or has not forfeited their allotment; nor whether any excuse that they, or any of them, may offer for the non-performance of any one or more of the conditions in the contract does or does not furnish sufficient equitable grounds of relief from forfeiture or not; but that I am to examine fully into the matter and things pertaining thereto, and exhibit a statement of such facts touching the same, as will enable the properly constituted authorities to make that determination; and in conformity to this opinion I have been guided in the work. In the plan of the work I have followed the course advised by yourself, and have found it the most convenient and expeditious that perhaps could have been devised. And here I will explain the manner in which the terms and remarks made use of are to be understood, to wit: the first line of figures shows the number of the section; the second the number of the allotment, and the grantee to the right; and opposite these the exhibition of facts relative to the performance or non-performance of any one or more of the conditions in the contract, and the excuse offered for such non-performance. Wherever the term "settlement made" is used, it is to be understood as a settlement made on that allotment, (unless otherwise noted,) before the expiration of three years from January 8, 1819; and the term "vine planted," is to be understood that the vine was planted on that allotment, or some other, or one of the small allotments laid off on some of the four unnumbered sections, before the expiration of seven years from January 8, 1819; it is also exhibited by whom the settlement was made, and by whom the vine was planted; by whom and to whom sales or transfers have been made or descents passed; and who is in possession, and under what title, except in cases where it could not be ascertained whether the grantee, or the heir, or the claimant by purchase or otherwise, was living; in such cases nothing is said about the possession. You will discover that in some cases it is noticed that a settlement has been made on the small allotments in the unnumbered sections in lieu of the large allotment; this I have done at the request of the party interested, in order that their claim to a performance, if such a one amounted to any, might be laid before Congress. I have inquired into, and heard every cause and excuse which the claimant interested wished to offer for the non-performance of all, or any part of the contract, and such as might furnish any equitable ground for relief, and set forth the facts opposite the number of the allotment. Wherever the term "no performance" is used, it is to be understood that the grantee, nor no one claiming through him or her by purchase or otherwise, has, at any time from the date of the contract up to the present time, attempted to perform any part of the contract, or offer any excuse for the non-performance of the same. In order to avoid repetition, I have in this part of the work made no showing of the quantity of land cleared and in cultivation in the aggregate; the quantity cultivated in vine in the aggregate; the cultivation of the olive tree, (requisites in the second, third, and fourth conditions of the contract,) nor the manner in which the contract has been performed, which by your instructions I am required to do; and the manner of performance is more particularly required by the resolution of the Senate, with other general information touching the things in question, all of which you will find done by turning to the last sheet of my report.

REPORT.

First. As to the manner of the settlement to be made.

This was done by the owner, or some one on his or her account, building on the allotment a log cabin, of a common height for such kind of buildings, hewed down inside and out, covered with a good board or shingle roof, laid with a plank or punchin floor, with a log chimney, and made quite comfortable for a building of the cabin kind. The smallest sized cabin which I examined was sixteen by eighteen feet on the inside; and the largest, nineteen by twenty-three feet. Every building had cleared and enclosed about it from one to five acres of land, and cost the owners (from the best information I could collect, and such as I believe is entitled to full faith and credit) from eighty-five to one hundred and fifty dollars, varying in price according to the size of the cabin and the quantity of land cleared and enclosed.

Second. As to the quantity of land cleared and in cultivation within the four townships granted.

From my own examination, and the best information I could obtain, there are seven thousand four hundred and fourteen acres cultivated, in the vine, corn, cotton, small grain, &c. The most extensive and profitable farms are occupied by Americans, who have purchased and settled on the French grant. The twentieth township has on it the most extensive and profitable farms, and much the largest quantity of open land; and although the land on it is not so rich as either of the other three, yet it is highly valuable, and a great proportion of it well watered with good and delightful spring water and stock water.

Third. As to the quantity of vine planted, and the manner of planting and cultivating it.

First, the quantity of land planted and cultivated in vine within the four townships granted is two hundred and seventy-one and one-half acres, and the manner of planting the vine is by putting the vine ten feet apart in one direction and twenty the other, and fastening the vine to a stake put in the ground for that purpose, of a size and height to suit the vine. As to the cultivation, but a very small proportion is cultivated in vineyards; I suppose not more than one-tenth part of the quantity planted. The plantings are in their cotton fields, and are cultivated in the same manner that their cotton is. Finally, as to the number of olive trees planted within the four townships granted, three hundred and eighty-eight trees have been planted, some of them about six years ago, and the latest three years since. Two hundred trees were imported, and perished on their way, and twenty-five thousand seed have been planted. The tree perishes with every winter's frost, but puts up fresh shoots in the spring, which also perish with the succeeding winter's frost; and I feel confident in the belief that the tree will not succeed in this climate. Lastly, concerning the four unnumbered sections: the seventh section is so frequently covered with water as to render it nearly useless. Twenty-four of the lots of these four sections have been improved; the small lots for the town of Eagleville have no improvement at all. I am highly indebted to the agent, Mr. Ravesies, for the constant and friendly aid which he rendered me in this work.

I have now furnished you with all the information which I am able to do on this question.

I think it advisable to inform you that the letter G has been introduced in my name through mistake, (instead of L,) I suppose, by the gentleman to whose good opinion I am indebted for recommending me to the notice of the Treasury Department.

I have heretofore informed you that the most extensive and profitable farms were in possession of the American purchasers. This is not to be understood to the prejudice of the emigrants; for it is true that they have made handsome improvements in proportion to their different means. I also transmit to the Treasury Department the documents forwarded to me, two copies of my report, and the report of Mr. Ravesies, the agent of the French Association, and president of their board.

I have been thirty-two days employed in the duties of my appointment, and travelled one hundred and thirty miles in going to and returning from Eagleville, equal to six and a half days, making two hundred and thirty-one dollars, which sum you will please direct Mr. William G. Parish (receiver of public moneys at the Tuscaloosa land office) to pay over to me. I am in want of money, and your early attention to this matter will greatly oblige me.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your most obedient, very humble servant,

Whereas, by virtue of the act of Congress entitled "An act to set apart and dispose of certain public lands for the encouragement of the cultivation of the vine and olive," passed March 3, 1817, the Secretary of the Treasury was required, under the direction of the President of the United States, to designate and set apart any four contiguous townships, each six miles square, of vacant public lands, lying in that part of the Mississippi Territory, now the Territory of Alabama, and was authorized to contract for the sale of the said four townships, at the rate of two dollars per acre, to be made payable fourteen years after the contract, which should be concluded with any agent or agents of the late emigrants from France, who have associated together for the purpose of forming a settlement in the United States; provided, that satisfactory evidence was produced that such agent or agents were duly authorized to form such contract, and that the number of such emigrants, being of full age, for which he or they were authorized to act, were equal to, at least, the number of half sections contained in the four townships proposed to be disposed of. And the said Secretary of the Treasury was further authorized to make such allotment of the lands among the individuals aforesaid, to stipulate in the proposed contract for such conditions of settlement, and for the cultivation of the vine and other vegetable productions as might to him appear reasonable: And whereas the Secretary of the Treasury, in pursuance of the authority so vested in him, has, under the direction of the President of the United States, designated and set apart, for the purposes intended by the said act, the four following townships, contiguous to each other, in that portion of the Mississippi Territory, now the Alabama Territory, specified in the said act, to wit: township eighteen, in range three, and townships eighteen, nineteen, and twenty, in range four, and has established and confirmed (with certain exceptions and alterations hereinafter stated) the allotment made by and among the individuals described in the said act, a list of whom was deposited in the office of the Treasury Department on November 10, 1817, a copy whereof, together with maps of the allotment so made, are hereunto annexed: And whereas Charles Villar hath appeared and produced satisfactory evidence that he is duly authorized as agent by the number required of such emigrants to form and to accept, on their behalf the contract authorized for the said four townships:

Now, be it known that I, William H. Crawford, Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, by virtue of the authority aforesaid, and in consideration of the payments to be made, and of the stipulations hereinafter stated to be performed by the said association of individuals, have contracted, and by these presents do contract, with the said Charles Villar, agent, as aforesaid, for and in behalf of the emigrants in the said act described, and whose names are inscribed in the aforesaid list, deposited in the office of the Treasury Department, and whereof a copy is hereunto annexed, to sell to him and them the said four townships of land, lying in that part of the Mississippi Territory, now the Alabama Territory, to wit: township eighteen, in range three, and townships eighteen, nineteen, and twenty, in range four, he or they paying, or causing to be paid therefor, on or before January 8, 1833, the sum of $184,320, and also he and they faithfully complying with the following conditions and stipulations—that is to say:

First. That, before the expiration of three years from the date of this contract, there shall be made upon each tract in the aforesaid four townships allotted to the respective associates a settlement by themselves individually, or by others on their account.

Second. That, before the expiration of fourteen years from the date hereof, there shall be cleared and cultivated within the said four townships at least ten acres of land for each quarter section, taken aggregately.

Third. That, before the expiration of seven years from the date hereof, there shall be cultivated within the said four townships at least one acre to each quarter section, taken aggregately, in vines.

Fourth. That, before the expiration of seven years from the date hereof, there shall be planted within the said four townships not less than five hundred olive trees, unless it shall be previously established to the satisfaction of the President that the olive cannot be successfully cultivated thereon.

Fifth. That a report shall be made annually to the Secretary of the Treasury by the agent of the said association, or his successor, showing the number of settlements made within the said four townships in each year; the progress made in cultivating the vine and olive, and the degree of success with which the same is attended; and describing the number and kinds of such plants which have been cultivated; and also that the said agent, or his successor, shall, from time to time, furnish to the Secretary of the Treasury such other information touching the condition and state of the association as he may require.

Sixth. That the list of the associates deposited in the treasury as aforesaid be recognized, and the persons thereon inscribed confirmed in the allotments of land annexed to their names respectively, with the exceptions following, viz: Martin Piquet Joseph, Wiles and Leclerc, V. M. Garesche, Jaques Braud and John Roster, Jean Thomas Carre, Laurent Faures, Englebert, Samuel Jackson, Joseph Robard, Pierce Freres, Jean Baptiste Neel, William Tablee, Billington, George Gaines, S. Voorhees, Gillaume Montelius, Kimbal, shall be erased therefrom, and Jacques Moncravie, R. A. Terrier, Madame George, Charles Brugiere, Joseph Ducommun, Pierre Garesche, J. Bonno, Pierre Drouet, Emely, and Conde, be inserted thereon, and be entitled, in the order in which they stand herein, to the allotment of the persons thus erased; and the allotments annexed to the names of the others of the persons thus erased shall be assigned to other late emigrants, under such regulations as are hereinafter prescribed.

Seventh. That such emigrants as are inscribed on the said list, who had, previously to knowing of the allotments assigned to them respectively, settled and improved lands within the said four townships, either in those sections set apart for the small allotments, or in others, and before the first day of August last past, shall be entitled to hold the same, to the extent, and in lieu of the quantity allotted to them respectively, in the large or small allotment, as the case may be, unless the party to whom such land was actually allotted shall, within six months from the date hereof, tender to such settler the value of the improvements which he may have made thereon, to be ascertained by two respectable persons under oath; and, on failure to make such tender, the party to whom such land was allotted shall be entitled to the land allotted to such emigrant as aforesaid, to the extent of the allotment so occupied and improved; or, if the same be insufficient, he shall be further indemnified by the assignment of so much land as will make up the quantity, out of any lands not otherwise appropriated.

Eighth. That the land exempted from appropriation by the foregoing provisions may be appropriated to other emigrants from France not already provided for, and whose names shall be presented to the Secretary of the Treasury for his approbation by the agent of the association, or his successor; but actual settlement shall in all such cases be an indispensable condition.

And I, the said William H. Crawford, do further contract and agree that, upon the payment of the above sum of money, and upon the fulfilment of the conditions aforesaid, patents shall be granted to the said individuals, or their assigns, for the lands to which they may be respectively entitled under the said act of Congress; but no patent shall be granted for a greater quantity of land than six hundred and forty acres for any one person; and no patent shall be granted for any of the land aforesaid, nor shall any title be obtained therefor, either at law or in equity, until full and complete payment shall have been made for the whole of the said four townships, and until the aforesaid conditions and stipulations shall have been faithfully complied with and performed on the part of the aforesaid association.

And the said Charles Villar, agent, as aforesaid, for and in behalf of the individuals associated as aforesaid, covenants and agrees that he and they will pay, or cause to be paid, on or before the aforesaid eighth day of January, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, the said sum of one hundred and eighty-four thousand three hundred and twenty dollars, and that he and they will faithfully comply with and perform all the aforesaid conditions and stipulations.

In testimony whereof, I, William H. Crawford, Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the Treasury Department to be affixed; and the said Charles Villar hath also set his hand and seal this eighth day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, and in the forty-third year of the independence of the United States of America.

WM. H. CRAWFORD, Secretary of the Treasury.
CHARLES VILLAR, Agent of the French Association.

Explanation for the general map of the four townships granted to the French emigrants.

The four townships are designated as follows: township 18th, range 3 east; township 18th, range 4 east; township 19th, range 4 east; township 20th, range 4 east.

The ranges east begin from the basis meridian that leaves St. Stephen's to the west and the river Mobile to the east. The townships are numbered from the 31st degree of north latitude, which is the line of separation between the United States and the Floridas. A township is a regular square of six miles on each side; consequently, the township 18th begins at the distance of 102 miles north from the 31st degree of north latitude. A township is divided into thirty-six sections of one mile square, or 640 acres each.

The sections have two numbers, viz: the Roman from I to XXXVI, in each township, which indicate the numbers of the sections as placed by government; and the Arabian from 1 to 140, which indicate the numbers of the sections as adopted by the grantees at the drawing of the lots. They have been placed according to the course pursued by the government, leaving four sections unnumbered, as explained below.

Separate maps.

The large figures, 1, 2, 3, &c., indicate the numbers of sections of the drawing of lots, and correspond with those on the general map.

The smaller figures, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, &c., indicate the individual allotments according to the draught. This subdivision of each section has been formed by following the same course pursued by government, which divides the sections into quarters. The first is always placed at the northeast angle, the second at the northwest angle, the third at the southwest angle, and the fourth at the southeast angle.

The lots A, B, C, &c., have not been distributed, and remain vacant.

On the first township the four sections not numbered are reserved for the site of the town; and the lots of 12, 6, and 3 acres; which lots are to be distributed among the grantees in the following order:

Each grantee having 480 acres will be entitled to 12 acres, besides a city lot 100 feet front, 200 feet deep.

Each grantee having 320 acres entitled to 6 acres, city lot 100 feet front, 100 deep.

Each grantee having 240 acres entitled to 6 acres, city lot 100 feet front, 100 deep.

Each grantee having 160 acres entitled to 3 acres, city lot 50 feet front, 100 deep.

Each grantee having 120 acres entitled to 3 acres, city lot 50 feet front, 100 deep.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 7, 1825.

20TH CONGRESS.] No. 593. [1ST SESSION.

SALE OF LAND RESERVED FOR SALINES IN ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, BY THE CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS, DECEMBER 24, 1827.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 28, 1827.

SIR: I have had the honor to receive your letter of the 17th instant, enclosing a bill providing for the sale of the lands reserved for the use of the Ohio saline, and, having referred the same to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, I now beg leave to enclose his report giving the information asked for, and presenting his views on the subject generally, in which I concur.

I have the honor to remain, with great respect, your obedient servant,

RICHARD RUSH.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, General Land Office, December 24, 1827.

SIR: In reply to the communication from the Hon. David Barton, chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, in the Senate of the United States, dated the 19th instant, and referred by you to this office, I have the honor to inform you that the quantity of land reserved for the use of the Ohio saline in Illinois is nearly ninety-seven thousand (97,000) acres; and there appears to be no objection to the sale of a portion of these lands in conformity to the bill reported.

As a statement of the quantity of land reserved for the use of salines in the State of Illinois, as well as the manner in which the reservations have been made, may possibly render it expedient for the committee to make some additional provision to the bill, it is deemed proper to submit such a statement.

The papers marked A, B, C, D, and E, relate to reservations made for the Ohio saline, from which it appears that on April 22, 1814, Messrs. Hargrove, White, and Trammel, were instructed to select and report to this office such lands as it might be deemed expedient to reserve for the use of the Ohio saline forever. Their report was made July 2, 1814, and was submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury on the 6th of August following. It does not appear from the records of this office that there was an actual approval of these selections under the signature of the President, but instructions were issued from this office August 28, 1814, addressed to the register and receiver of the land office at Shawneetown, directing that those lands be reserved from sale, and they have accordingly been so reserved.

On June 19, 1815, Thomas Sloo, the register of the land office at Shawneetown, was required to explore a portion of the State of Illinois for the purpose of ascertaining and reporting to this office any lands that might bear saline or mineral appearances, and in compliance with which order he made the report dated November 1, 1816. Papers marked F, G, and H, on this subject, are herewith transmitted.

It does not appear from the records of this office that the lands designated in this report, amounting to 84,499.54 acres, were ever reserved from sale by authority of any order issued through this office. The officers in the land district at Shawneetown have therefore proceeded to sell them, and have made sales of the same to about the quantity of 9,000 acres.

The papers marked Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8, relate to a reservation made on the Vermilion river, in the State of Illinois, for the use of salines. From these papers it appears that instructions were issued to the register of the land office at Palestine June 1, 1820, requiring him to select certain lands for the use of salines on the Vermilion river; in consequence of which he made the report dated April 21, 1821, paper marked No. 2; but as the lands were not surveyed at the time of this report, the register made a subsequent report after the lands had been surveyed, designating the tracts reserved by sections, which last designation varied in some manner from the original report, and was approved by the President March 29, 1825, when the certificate marked No. 8 was, by request of the governor of Illinois, issued from this office.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient servant,

GEORGE GRAHAM.

HON. RICHARD RUSH, Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, General Land Office, April 22, 1814.

GENTLEMEN: I am instructed to request you, or any two of you, to examine the lands on which and about where the United States saline is situated in the Illinois Territory, and make a report to this office, that the President of the United States may be properly informed of the quantity and situation of such lands as may be necessary to reserve from the expected sales, for the purpose of supporting the works forever. In making this examination and report you will be pleased to be very particular; noting the timber on each section; the evenness or otherwise of the ground; the necessity or practicability of conveying the water on the ground in pipes; to coal, and where situated, or wood; relative to the navigation down the Saline creek, if practicable, and the depth of water; and, in short, everything calculated to give a comprehensive and particular view of the whole and every part of the premises.

It is desirable this report should be received as soon as convenient, as the land office is about to be opened there.

With great respect, &c.

LEONARD WHITE, WILLIS HARGROVE, and PHILIP TRAMMEL, Esquires.

B.

UNITED STATES SALINE, July 2, 1814.

SIR: In conformity with the instructions contained in your letter bearing date April 22, 1814, we have proceeded to examine particularly the lands on which and about where the United States saline is situated, and beg leave to submit the following report:

We find the country within a short distance of the saline, and on the south side of the works, very broken, and have consequently thought it would be proper to make the greatest part of the reservation on the north side, which is particularly described in the plat herewith.

In recommending any precise quantity of land we feel some reluctance, having no other data than the experience of a few years past, and then the works perhaps only in a state of progression. But in recommending this boundary we have had in view what we conceive to be the probable quantity of water which may be got at the saline annually, and the quantity of fuel necessary to manufacture it into salt, and extending our calculation as to fuel to a term of about forty years, exclusive of the use of stone-coal, which, if it should be found hereafter to answer a valuable purpose, can be applied to the support of the lick in place of wood, and the reservation could then be curtailed.

With this view we report, as our opinion, the exterior bounds of said reservation to run as follows, viz: beginning at the northeast corner of section 19, township 8, in range 9, running west until it strikes the line dividing ranges 6 and 7; thence with said line south to the southwest corner of section 6, township 10, in range 7; thence east to the southeast corner of section 3, in township 10, and range; thence south to the southwest corner of section 14, township 10, in range 8; thence east two and a half miles to the quarter section corner in the north line of section 19, township 10, range 9; thence south to the quarter section corner in the south line of said section; thence east to the quarter section corner on the north line of said section 29, township 10, range 9; thence south to the quarter section corner of said section in the south line; thence east to the southeast corner of section 28; thence south to the southwest corner of section 34; thence east to the southeast corner of said section; thence south to the south corner of section 2, township 11, range 9; thence east to the southeast corner of said section; thence south to the southwest corner of section 12; thence east until it strikes the Ohio river; thence up said river to where the township line strikes it, dividing townships 10 and 11; thence west with that line to the northwest corner of section 6, township 11, range 10; thence north to the northeast corner of section 36, township 10, in range 9; thence west to the northwest corner of said section; thence north to the northeast corner of section 26; thence west to the northwest corner of said section; thence north to the northeast corner of section 22; thence west to the northwest corner of said section; thence north to the northeast corner of section 16; thence west to the northwest corner of said section; thence north to the northeast corner of section 8; thence west to the northwest corner of said section; thence north to the beginning.

In our examinations we have had a particular view to the stonecoal, very great quantities of which are promised by the appearances in many places, particularly in the Saline creek, below the works, which may be transmitted to the works by water, or the water may be conveyed by pipes to the coal banks, but the conveyance of the coal by water to the works must be done in the winter or the spring months; the latter we deem most expedient. We conceive it to be practicable to convey the water through pipes to any point in the boundary before mentioned, lying east, north, or west of the saline, and part of the south side, though the hills are too abrupt and high to convey the water over them. Upon the whole, we are of opinion that the before-mentioned boundary contains a sufficiency of fuel, timber for pipes, troughs, and buildings to last forever.

To the subject of the navigation of the Saline river we have paid particular attention, not only at the present time, but for several years past, and deem it inexpedient, if not impracticable, to make this stream navigable during the summer and fall seasons, owing to the very small quantity of water it affords during the dry season. We have observed that by building a dam three feet six inches high, five miles below the works, (which makes it navigable for small crafts that distance,) which stops the water in the river, and the evaporation consumes it as fast as it comes in, and to render the river navigable it would require a dam of sixteen and a half feet high at the lower ripple to give the same depth of water that the dam above alluded to does above it.

For a minute description of the quality and quantity of the timber upon each section, we refer you to the plat herewith transmitted.

We have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servants,

LEONARD WHITE.
WILLIS HARGROVE.
P. TRAMMEL.

Hon. EDWARD TIFFIN.

[C is a map of the reservation for the Wabash saline, and not published.]

D.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, August 28, 1814.

GENTLEMEN: You will please to reserve from the public sales about to commence at Shawneetown all the lands which Mr. White and the gentlemen associated with him reported to be necessary to support the United States saline on the Wabash with timber, wood, fuel, &c.

I enclose an exhibit of the quantity of acres in each township and range to be reserved, and I presume Mr. White can furnish you with a copy of their report.

I know of no instructions necessary before the sales commence, only that you take great care of your cash which may be received.

I am, &c.,

JOSIAH MEIGS.

E.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, General Land Office, August 6, 1814.

SIR: By the last mail I have received a report from Mr. White, United States agent at the Wabash saline, and the persons associated with him, for the purpose of exploring the lands contiguous to the works, and reporting their situation as to timber, coal, evenness of ground, the necessity or practicability of conveying the salt water in pipes to such timber or coal, the practicability or advantage of the navigation of the saline creek down to the Ohio river, &c., &c.

This report, which is full and satisfactory, is now submitted, in the papers marked No. 1 and No. 2, for the consideration of the honorable the Secretary and the President of the United States, that, if approved of, instructions may be forwarded to the register of the land office and receiver of public moneys at Shawneetown, to reserve those lands (from the sales about to commence) for the purpose of supporting the saline. The act of February 21, 1812, provides "that a tract of not less than six miles square shall be reserved by the President of the United States for the use and support of the public salt-works on Saline creek."

In paper marked No. 3 I have prepared an exhibit of the lands those gentlemen suppose necessary to reserve, showing the quantity of acres of land in each township and range, the whole amount whereof appears to be 96,418.84 acres. The whole number of acres in six miles square is 23,040 acres of land; so that the reservation proposed will embrace more than four times that quantity.

Although this may appear at first view an excessive reservation, yet, with great deference, I cannot but recommend it. The Secretary will recollect it nearly embraces the lands I pointed out to him when I had the honor of a conference with him on the subject, and which resulted in the plan of appointing proper persons to make an actual view and special report.

The value of the saline is great in every point of view, which value will increase; but should timber for necessary uses as well as fuel fail, or coal fail, its value would fail with them; besides, the President of the United States can at any time throw a part of such reservations into market, should time or experience point out its necessity.

EDWARD TIFFIN.

Hon. SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

F.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, April 10, 1815.

SIR: On the 27th January last I had the honor to state to you that the register of the land office at Shawneetown represented to this office that appearances of salt had been discovered in certain townships in that district, and suggested the propriety of reserving from sale some lands in the vicinity of those appearances, to preserve a suitable quantity of timber for any salt-works that may be established there.

The register also stated that there were some valuable buildings at Fort Massac, and suggested the propriety of reserving from sale about two sections of land around said fort.

At the same time I observed that, in my opinion, it was desirable that those reservations should be made under the authority of the President of the United States. Having not had any instructions from you or the President on the subject, I presume it may have escaped your attention or that of the President.

I have the honor, &c.,

JOSIAH MEIGS.

A. J. DALLAS, Esq., Secretary of the Treasury.

G.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, General Land Office, June 19, 1815.

SIR: I wrote you on the 14th instant, and have now to add that the Secretary of the Treasury approves of the exploring of your district for salt springs and minerals, reporting such tracts as ought to be reserved for the use of any discoveries that may be valuable, provided the expense does not exceed five hundred dollars. The execution of this business is left to your discretion. The offer of your personal services is accepted, under the persuasion that the business will be faithfully performed under your superintendence.

I am, &c., &c.

THOMAS SLOO, Esq., Register of the Land Office, Shawneetown, Illinois.

H.

REGISTER'S OFFICE AT SHAWNEETOWN, November 1, 1816.

SIR: In pursuance of your instructions, bearing date June 19, 1815, I proceeded, as early as the season would permit, to carry the instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury into effect, and have explored the whole of the Shawnee district.

I proceeded to the meridian line, and commenced on the waters of Cash river. Near the mouth of said river, in township 14 south, range 1 east, section 20, is a flattering appearance of salt. The timber for about one-half mile around this lick is all young growth, and has the appearance of having been cut off nearly at the same time, which, to me, is an evidence of the lick having been worked at an early period. For a considerable distance around this lick is fine farming land of a first and second quality, somewhat rolling, except the Cash river bottoms.

I have reserved for this lick sections 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, and 33, in the above-described township. Should the government deem it advisable to extend the reserve, it ought, in my opinion, to be taken out of the Kaskaskia district.

In township 11 south, range 1 east, sections 35 and 36, is a saline appearance. Some of the oldest hunters of the country informed me that formerly the Indians made salt at this place. I have reserved for this lick sections 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, and 27, in township 11 south, range 1 east, (a part of sections 33 and 34 were purchased by individuals before the reserve was made;) sections 1, 2, 3, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, in township No. 12 south, of range 1 east; sections 19, 20, 29, 30, 32, in township 11 south, range 2 east, and sections 5, 6, 7, 8, 17, and 18, in township No. 12 south, of range 2 east. The southwest quarter of section 5, in township No. 12 south, of range 2 east, was entered before the reserve was made. The lands for ten miles around this lick are generally of a first and second quality. This lick is situated on the headwaters of Cash, and about four miles from Johnson Court-house. I do not consider this saline appearance flattering. Should it not prove good on making an experiment, the President, at any time, can take off the reserve, and have the land exposed to sale.

In township No. 13, of range No. 5 east, sections 26 and 27, on the waters of Big Bay creek, there is a large saline appearance, known by the name of Flat and Root licks, the former in section 26, the latter in section 27; a fine tract of land for a considerable distance around these licks. I have reserved sections 13, 14, 15, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 33, 34, 35, and 36, in township No. 13 south, of range No. 5 east, and sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 9, 10, 11, 12, in township 14 south, of range No, 5 east; sections 17, 18, 19, 20, 29, 30, 31, 32, in township No. 13 south, range No. 6 east, and sections 5, 6, 7, and 8, in township No. 14 south, range No. 6 east.

In township No. 7 south, of range No. 7, section 22 or 23, there is a very considerable saline appearance. The corner trees around this lick were so decayed and defaced that I could not, without a surveyor, designate the precise situation of the lick. I have reserved the south half of section No. 13, (the northwest quarter of that section was entered before I made the reserve,) the whole of sections 14, 15, 16, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, and 28.

In township No. 8 south, of range No. 8 east, section No. 16, there is a lick immediately on the bank of the north fork of the Saline creek, and adjoining the old saline boundary; also, one in section 3, in the same township, about two and one-half miles northeast of the first-mentioned lick. I have reserved for the two, sections 32, 33, 34, and 35, in township No. 7 south, of range No. 8 east, and sections 2, 3, 4, 5, 8, 9, 10, 11, 14, 15, 16, and 17, in township No. 8 south, of range No. 8 east. The four last-mentioned sections lie immediately adjoining the lines of the old saline reserve; that, should those licks prove good, there is an abundance of timber within the old boundary, and so remote from the old United States saline, that cannot be conveyed thither, and may be made use of at those establishments.

The northwest quarter of section No. 14, in township No. 12 south, of range No. 8 east, contains a saline appearance; it is supposed there can be no salt water procured at this place. I think the case is a doubtful one. The southeast quarter of the same section was sold by government as a pre-emption right in 1814. The lands between the lick and the river, immediately on the margin of the river, were entered shortly after the office was opened, and long before the register knew that there were any saline appearances in that quarter. Under the impression that this saline will not be very valuable, I have reserved only sections 10, 11, 12, and 13, three-quarters in 14, the whole of 22, and the west half of 23. North and east of this lick the lands will not be entered, being rocky and hilly, but covered with good timber.

On the waters of the Little Wabash, in sections Nos. 2 and 3, township No. 4 south, range No. 9 east, are two considerable saline appearances within one-quarter of a mile of each other. The prospect for salt at those places appears good. On the west and south the lands are fine. On the east and northeast they are swampy and wet, but heavily timbered. I have reserved sections 25, 26, 27, 28, 33, 34, 35, and 36, in township No. 3 south, range No. 9 east, and sections Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, in township No. 4 south, range No. 9 east.

There is scarcely a prairie but you find more or less saline appearances, and some of them appears promising. I have not noticed any of them in this report, owing to their being remote from wood. The lands from the third principal meridian line to the Big Wabash are generally of a first and second quality for seven ranges of townships south of the base line. The first four ranges east of meridian are generally good land, from the base line until within a few miles of the Ohio river, where you fall in with a swamp that crosses nearly four townships, from three to six miles from the Ohio, and parallel with it. The lands between these swamps and the river (with the exception of the river and creek bottoms) are generally high and rolling, and a considerable portion of it barrens. Between the fourth and ninth ranges the land from the river is generally hilly, and in many places rocky, the soil thin until you reach the seventh range of townships south of the base line. The ninth, tenth, and eleventh ranges, are generally good lands of a first and second quality, with the exception of a considerable tract of wet lands contained within the old saline boundary; a part of the same swamp embraced in that boundary extends north and east to the Wabash river. About five miles north of Shawneetown you come into the low grounds which are interspersed with a number of fine tracts of good land. At twelve miles from the town the land becomes more rolling and generally of a good quality (a great deal of it first rate) until you reach the base line.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, June 1, 1820.

SIR: Governor Bond having stated to the Treasury Department that salines have been discovered in sections twenty-two and twenty-three, in township two north, of range seven east of the third meridian line, the Secretary of the Treasury directs that you shall proceed to the land in question and report specially to this office the evidence of salt springs upon them, and to describe the quantity and quality of the water, and the nature of the adjoining sections, especially with regard to timber, so as to enable the President of the United States to make a suitable reservation of land for the use of the saline. It has also been stated that there is a valuable saline upon Vermilion river, where, it seems, the land has not been surveyed. The same examination may take place in relation to it, if it be within your district, or if it be not at too great a distance for you to make the examination conveniently.

VANDALIA, April 21, 1821.

SIR: In pursuance of instructions from your office, dated the 1st of June last, (1820,) I proceeded to examine the salines pointed out in your instructions, and beg leave to submit the following report:

The land of the first presents some of the appearances usually supposed to indicate salt water; but as two wells have been sunk by individuals who have sometime since abandoned the object as fruitless, I had an opportunity of examining the water. Its saline qualities are so weak that it is difficult to detect any quality whatever of the kind; therefore I feel no hesitation whatever in expressing the opinion that it is unworthy the notice of government. The timber is of good quality, being chiefly of black oak, post oak, white oak, &c. The saline on the Vermilion river is situated about eighteen miles from the Big Wabash river, fifty miles from Fort Harrison, and about eight miles west of the State line, between Indiana and Illinois. A company are at present engaged in making salt at that on the Vermilion. Their attempts have been attended with very flattering success: the salt made is superior to any manufactured in the western country in strength and beauty of grain. The quantity of water required to make a bushel is one hundred and fifty gallons—less, considerably, than that near Shawneetown. Strong indications of salt are found for four miles above and six below the present wells—along the creek bottom the water exuding from the earth on the margin of the creek in dry weather, when the creek is low, leaving an incrustation of salt on the surface. From appearance there is little reason to doubt its becoming (under proper regulations) a saline of more than ordinary value. Persons are now anxiously waiting for authority to prosecute discoveries and carry on the business extensively. I would suggest that, in consequence of the prairies with which it is encompassed, the reservation, if made, should extend two miles on each side of the creek, and about ten miles in length, extending about six miles below Blackmore's wells. The wells sunk are about twenty-two feet deep, passing first through stratum of clay ten feet deep, below which is a stratum of stonecoal seven feet thick, then through clay and slate stone to the rock, through which they have not penetrated. The creek, a branch of the Vermilion, goes dry in the summer season, but in floods might admit of the descent of boats. The works are, perhaps, eighteen miles from the mouth of the Vermilion river, which is a smart stream in high water; the creek, with a narrow bottom, some part of which occasionally inundates. It is embosomed between two bluffs several hundred feet high. Stonecoal of superior quality is uncommonly abundant. The land is well timbered with white oak, black oak, hickory, walnut, &c. I examined those salines in October last, and, sometime in the last of that month, I forwarded on my report to your office, but I perceived from your letter dated the 20th February that it had not been received.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOMAS COX.

Hon. JOSIAH MEIGS, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, August 8, 1822.

SIR: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the propriety of reserving from sale, for the use of the State of Illinois, certain lands situate in the district of lands offered for sale at Palestine, in that State, which are strongly indicative of saline properties.

At the suggestion of Governor Bond, the Secretary of the Treasury directed an examination to be made of the lands on the Vermilion creek, in the district of Palestine, by Thomas Cox, register of the land office at Vandalia, for the purpose of ascertaining the quality and quantity of the salines stated to exist in that section of country.

A copy of the instructions to Mr. Cox, and of his report, are herewith transmitted, together with a copy of a letter from the register of the land office at Palestine, suggesting the propriety of making the reserves prior to the public sales in that section of the district, which will take place in November next. At the period when Mr. Cox made his report the lands in that part of the district where the salt springs are situate were not surveyed, consequently they could not then be designated sectionally. Should you think proper to authorize a reservation to the extent suggested by Mr. Cox—i. e., for two miles on each side of Vermilion creek, about ten miles in length, and extending six miles below Blackmore's wells—the register will be instructed to designate the reservation by section, township, and range, as the land has since been surveyed.

Accept the assurances of my greatest respect,

JOSIAH MEIGS.

The PRESIDENT of the United States.

The reservation proposed is approved.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, August 12, 1832.

SIR: Your letter of the 12th ultimo has been received. Enclosed you have a copy of a letter dated April 21, 1821, from Thomas Cox, esq., who was authorized to examine the salines on the Vermilion river, and a copy of my letter to the President of the United States, dated the 8th instant. The President having approved of the proposed reservation "of two miles on each side of the creek, and about ten miles in length, extending about six miles below Blackmore's wells," you will please to reserve the same from sale, taking care to make the said reservation by sectional lines, and you will report the numbers of the sections or parts of sections so reserved to this office.

REGISTER'S OFFICE, Palestine, Illinois, November 8, 1822.

SIR: Agreeably to instructions from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, bearing date the 12th of August, 1822, by which I was ordered to reserve from sale forty sections of land lying on the Big Vermilion river, including the salines on said river. I was directed to make the reservation four miles in breadth and ten miles in length, making the river as near as possible the centre. I discovered that the saline was within a half a mile of the forks of the river. As my instructions did not direct on which branch of the river to make the reserve, I thought it advisable to go to the salines, and examine both branches of the river, and ascertain on which of the two branches it would be the most advisable to make the reserve. My instructions were to run six miles below and four miles above Blackmore's wells. No doubt that Mr. Cox (when he recommended the reserve to be made in the manner pointed out in his letter) believed, from the best information he could obtain at that time, that to run six miles below and four miles above Blackmore's wells would be most advantageous to the State. Had Mr. Cox have went over the land as I have done, I am confident that he would have recommended the reserve to have been made six miles up the river and four miles below the wells. The land six miles up the river is heavy timbered generally, and the soil not good, which will prevent it from being sold by government for many years; yet it is more valuable for the use of the salines than the land below. The land below is much more prairie and better soil, and will undoubtedly sell as soon as a sale shall be made for that range of township, which is range 11. I conclude, from a full examination of the land ordered to be reserved and the lands two miles above, the limits recommended by Mr. Cox, that it would be much more to the interest of the State to run but four miles down the river below Blackmore's wells, and six miles above. I consider that it would be a considerable advantage, to both the United States and this State, to make the reserve six miles above and four miles below the west side of section sixteen, on which the saline is situated. The land up the river was offered for sale as directed, but did not any of it sell. As I am confident it will be more for the interest of both parties to make the reserve different from that laid down by Mr. Cox, I have taken the liberty to recommend the propriety of making the following reservation: In township No. 19, range 12 west, sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 26, 27, 29, 30, and 31. In township 19 north, range 13 west, sections 13, 14, 15, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 34, 35, and 36. Section No. 28, township 19 north, range 12 west, I have selected, by the request of Governor Bond, for the use of schools, in lieu of section 16, claimed by the State. The distance of the saline, as the road goes at this time, is upwards of one hundred miles. I was six days going and returning, and eight days employed in examining the lands—in all, fourteen days. Whatever compensation may be allowed me, you will please to inform me through what channel I am to receive it. Should it belong to your department, you will please to take such measures as will procure me an order on the receiver at this place. I am confident that this State will be pleased with the change recommended; but should it be necessary to have the reserve made as laid down by Mr. Cox, you will please to direct accordingly. I have the land selected as I was directed.

I am, &c.,

JOSEPH KITCHELL.

LAND OFFICE AT PALESTINE, July 12, 1822.

SIR: Your letter of the 31st of May last, requiring of me a quarterly return of all lands sold at this office from its commencement up to the 31st of March last, has been received. I have made out a statement agreeably to the form prescribed, and send it enclosed herein. I would wish to know from you if any lands will be reserved from sale adjoining the salines on the Vermilion river, in this district, for the use of this State. If a sufficiency of land and timber is not reserved for the purpose of working the salines, the saline water alone can be of no value to this State. It certainly was not the intention of Congress in granting to this State the salines, nor of the convention who accepted of them, that the saline waters alone were reserved; but a fair and equitable inference would be fairly drawn from the premises of the grant that a quantity of land and timber sufficient for working and improving these grants would be given for their use to this State.

Extract of a letter from Governor Coles, dated Vandalia, Illinois, May 16, 1823, to the Hon. Wm. H. Crawford, Secretary of the Treasury.

SIR: In reply to a letter addressed to you July 27, 1822, by my predecessor in office, relative to the Vermilion saline, Mr. Meigs (in a letter to Governor Bond dated August 28) stated that "the President of the United States had approved of the reservation suggested by Th. Cox, who was appointed to examine the saline in 1820;" that Mr. Kitchell, the register of the land office at Palestine, had been requested to designate, according to the best of his judgment, the lands alluded to in Mr. Cox's report, by sections, township, and range, and to exempt them from sale;" to which Mr. Meigs added, "as section number 16, in township 19 north, in range number 12 west of the second principal meridian, is covered by a salt spring, I would suggest, as the Secretary of the Treasury is at present absent from the city, that you (Governor Bond) make a selection of a section in the same township for the purposes of education, and report the same to the register of the land office at Palestine, who will reserve the same from sale until the decision of the Secretary of the Treasury shall have been obtained."

This designation of the reservation and selection of another section in lieu of 16 has been made by Mr. Kitchell, and, I presume, reported to you by him. The object of this letter, therefore, is to obtain from the government the express designation and formal reservation of lands for the Vermilion saline, and its consent to the exchange of the 16th section and to the selection which has been made of section number 28, in the same township, for the purposes of education. Attention to this subject has become the more necessary, as, relying on the government's fulfilling the declarations and suggestions of Mr. Meigs, I was induced, in December last, to yield to the importunities of the persons who claim to have made the discovery of the saline, and who have been for several years waiting impatiently for the lands to be surveyed, (during which time some of them had been making salt in a small way,) to grant them a lease for four years, on condition of their working and improving the saline.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, General Land Office, March 26, 1825.

It is hereby certified that, under the provisions of the second proposition of the 6th section of the act of the Congress of the United States, approved April 18, A. D. 1818, entitled "An act to enable the people of Illinois Territory to form a constitution and State government, and for the admission of such State into the Union on an equal footing with the original States," whereby it is provided "that all salt springs within such State, and the lands reserved for the use of the same, shall be granted to the said State, and the same to be used under such terms, conditions, and regulations as the legislature of said State shall direct: provided the legislature shall never sell nor lease the same for a longer period than ten years at any one time," there have been selected the following described sections of land for the use of the saline of the Big Vermilion river, in the district of lands offered for sale at Palestine, viz: in township number 19 north, of range number 12 west, sections numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 26, 27, 29, 30, and 31. In township number 19 north, of range number 13 west, the following sections have been selected, viz: sections numbered 13, 14, 15, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 34, 35, and 36; and it is hereby certified that the said sections of land are reserved for the purposes mentioned by the authority of the President of the United States.

It is further certified that, in lieu of section number 16, in township number 19 north, of range number 12 west, there has been selected and substituted section number 28, situate in the same township and range, to be appropriated to the use of schools, agreeably to the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States.

In witness whereof, I, George Graham, Commissioner of the General Land Office, have hereunto subscribed my name and caused to be affixed the seal of said office, at the city of Washington, the day and year above written.

☞ It has so happened that this certificate has date March 26, 1825, whereas the President's approval is dated March 29, 1825. The certificate was not signed until the 30th March, on which day it was sent to the governor.

LAND CLAIM IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 27, 1827.

Mr. BUCKNER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and documents of the heirs and representatives of Alexander Chevalier Delahoussaye, deceased, reported:

The petitioners state that their said ancestor, Alexander, about twenty-five or thirty years since, was in possession of a certain tract of land situated in the county of Attakapas, in the State of Louisiana, containing fourteen arpents in front and forty in depth, on both sides of the Bayou Tigre, and that he held the said tract by virtue of a Spanish concession, which has been lost or mislaid; that he placed on the land an individual named Drake, and had, in the year 1805, a regular survey of the land made by one Ferdinand Victor Potter, who, they state, was then a sworn surveyor of the Territory of Orleans, and who made the survey whilst their said ancestor was in possession of said land. They further state that, being unable to find the original concession, the claim was not presented at the land office for confirmation. Upon this statement they pray that an act may be passed confirming their title to said land. In a supplemental petition they allege that, having been informed that different persons had purchased in good faith of the United States parts of said land, and had settled on and improved the same, they are willing to receive a confirmation of title to that portion of the land only which remains unsold by the general government.

In support of their claim they produce a paper purporting to be a plat and certificate of survey of said land by Ferdinand Victor Potter, dated May, 1805. P. Briant, as justice of the peace for the parish of St. Martin, State of Louisiana, certifies that the honorable Paul ———, judge of the parish of St. Martin, had made oath before him that the signature of Potter to said certificate of survey was, in his opinion, the true signature of said Potter, and that he was known to have been a surveyor of the Territory of Orleans. Two other persons swear that they knew a tract of land situated on the Bayou Tigre, in the parish of Lafayette, county of Attakapas, which was settled and established by the late Alexander Delahoussaye, deceased, on which tract, about twenty-five years ago, he placed one Drake, and that they had seen said land with fences necessary for agriculture.

The committee do not consider the testimony to be of such a character as to justify a favorable report. There is no proof of a concession by the Spanish government, nor of a compliance with any of the conditions upon which such concession may have been made, except that a man by the name of Drake was settled on the land by Delahoussaye. Under what authority Potter made the survey we are left to conjecture. The claimants even did not have such confidence in the validity of their claim as to induce them to lay it before the board of commissioners for the adjustment of land titles in that district. To confirm such a claim would not be in accordance with any precedent, and would, in the opinion of the committee, open a wide door for the practice of frauds on the government. They therefore offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That the claim of the petitioners ought not to be confirmed.

APPLICATION OF MISSOURI FOR A REDUCTION IN THE PRICE OF PUBLIC LANDS AND A DONATION TO ACTUAL SETTLERS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE DECEMBER 27, 1827.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the general assembly of the State of Missouri respectfully represents: That the interest and welfare of this State are intimately connected with the measures which may be pursued by your honorable bodies in relation to the sale and settlement of the public lands of the United States.

This general assembly believe that it is a paramount desire with your honorable bodies to appropriate these vast and fertile regions of the west, the property of the nation, for supplying the wants and promoting the happiness of its citizens. Our country is peculiarly the asylum of the oppressed, and emphatically the poor man's home. Every law, then, which opens before the poor man the way to independence, which lifts him above the grade of a tenant, which gives to him and his children a permanent resting and abiding place on the soil, not only subserves the cause of humanity, but advances and maintains the fundamental principles of our government.

This general assembly also represent that the richest bodies of land lay detached from each other in different parts of the State; and the intermediate lands being of a poorer quality, must long, and perhaps forever, remain unsold at the present price, to the great injury as well of the United States as of this State. This general assembly therefore respectfully request of your honorable bodies that provision may be made by law for the offering to sale of the public lands at a minimum price of fifty cents per acre where they shall have remained unsold at the present price for a certain number of years. That where any of the public lands shall remain unsold at the minimum price of fifty cents per acre, the same may be granted in small fractions of a section to citizens who will actually settle on and cultivate the same for a certain length of time. This general assembly assure your honorable bodies that the passage of such a law would, in their opinion, not only promote the strength and prosperity of this frontier State, but the happiness of thousands who, from the want of pecuniary means, are compelled to remain in an anti-republican state of dependence on rich landlords. And your memorialists, &c.

APPLICATION OF ARKANSAS FOR A GRADUATION OF THE PRICE OF THE PUBLIC LAND AND AN EXCHANGE OF SCHOOL LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE DECEMBER 31, 1827.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the general assembly of the Territory of Arkansas, respectfully represent: That the interests of said Territory are intimately connected with the measures which Congress may adopt in relation to the sale and settlement of the public lands of the United States. Your memorialists humbly conceive it to be the intention of Congress to appropriate the vast unsettled regions of the west to supply the wants and promote the happiness of the citizens of the United States. The western country is peculiarly the asylum of the oppressed, and may emphatically be called the poor man's home. Your memorialists believe that any law which will open to the indigent a way to independence, and give to them and their children a grade above that of tenants, and a permanent home on their own soil, well subserves the cause of humanity, and is in strict accordance with the principles adopted by our government.

Your memorialists further respectfully represent that the rich lands of our Territory are situated in detached parcels, and generally confined to the water-courses; that the intermediate lands are generally of a quality that cannot for a long time, if ever, be sold, to the manifest injury as well of the general government as of this Territory. To advance, then, the interests of the general government, as well as those of our own Territory, your memorialists would respectfully suggest that the laws of the United States regulating the primary disposal of the public lands should be so altered as to permit the same to be disposed of in the manner proposed in the bill introduced in the Senate of the United States by the Hon. Thomas H. Benton, a senator in Congress from the State of Missouri, "to graduate the price of the public lands," his views on that subject being in perfect accordance with the views of your memorialists. Your memorialists believe that the passage of such a law would greatly increase the strength of our frontier settlements, and in a few years place us in a situation to protect and defend ourselves against the various tribes of faithless Indians that now surround us, and create an annual increase of revenue of many thousands of dollars in favor of the treasury of the United States.

The general assembly of the Territory of Arkansas have presented this important subject to the Congress of the United States with the fullest confidence that its decision thereon will be in perfect accordance with our views and wishes.

A. H. SEVIER, Speaker of the House of Representatives.
D. S. WITTER, President of the Legislative Council.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the legislative council and house of representatives of the Territory of Arkansas respectfully represents: That of the lands designated by the laws of the United States for the use of schools in the Territory of Arkansas the following tracts have been confirmed to individuals under grants from the Spanish government, viz: section sixteen, in township eight south, in range three west of the fifth principal meridian, and section sixteen, in township eight south, in range two west of the fifth principal meridian.

Your memorialists would therefore respectfully ask the passage of an act of Congress authorizing the Commissioner of the General Land Office to set apart for the use of schools in said townships two other sections of the public lands in lieu of those appropriated as aforesaid. And your memorialists, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

A. H. SEVIER, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

20TH CONGRESS.] No. 597 [1ST SESSION.

APPLICATION OF THE CORPORATE AUTHORITIES OF NEW ORLEANS TO BE ALLOWED TO SELL THE VACANT LOTS ON THE QUAYS OF THAT CITY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 31, 1827.

To the honorable the members of the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the mayor, aldermen, and inhabitants of the city of New Orleans most respectfully showeth: That your memorialists, relying on the justice of your honorable bodies, come before them and pray that they may be permitted freely to exercise the right which they think they actually possess of alienating, for the use and benefit of the corporation of New Orleans, certain spaces of ground, being a part of the quays of this city, which may be sold without any inconvenience to the public use which the said quays were originally intended for.

That, your memorialists having caused public notices to be inserted in the newspapers announcing the sale of such of the above alluded to spaces of ground as were susceptible to be turned into town lots, John W. Smith, esq., the district attorney of the United States for the Louisiana district, thought it his duty to solicit and obtain from the district court, before whom he prosecutes, an injunction to inhibit your memorialists from selling the said lots, on the ground that the exercise of their pretended right of selling the same would, in fact, be an encroachment upon the rights of the United States as transmitted to them by the treaty of cession of Louisiana.

That if your honorable bodies will turn to the petition which the district attorney of the United States has filed to obtain the said injunction, a copy of which petition is to be found among the documents which your memorialists think it their duty to produce in support of their claim, they will find that the alleged motives of his opposition to the sale of the said lots are that, "by the treaty of cession of the late province of Louisiana by the then French republic to the United States of America, the United States succeeded to all the antecedent rights of France and Spain, as they then were, in and over the said province, the dominion and possession thereof, including all lands which were not private property; that therefore the dominion and possession of the vacant lands so endeavored to be sold by the city council of New Orleans must inevitably be vested in the United States, inasmuch as they had, ever since the discovery and occupation of the said province by France, remained vested in the sovereign, and had not, any time prior to the date of the said treaty, been granted by the sovereign to the inhabitants of the city of New Orleans."

That were the facts set forth in the petition filed by the district attorney of the United States strictly correct, and were it true that the lots which your memorialists intended to have sold for the use and benefit of the corporation of New Orleans do really constitute a part of the vacant lands which are within the dominion of the United States, and of which they alone have the right to dispose, then, perhaps, might it be said that that officer acted properly in soliciting the injunction which he has obtained, in order to prevent the sale of those lots, and to have the rights of the United States to the ownership of the same recognized and confirmed by a court of justice in opposition to the claim and pretensions of the inhabitants of New Orleans.

But that it may be easily demonstrated to your honorable bodies, as your memorialists expect to do, that there is evidently an error of fact in the allegations upon which the injunction was obtained, inasmuch as the lots in question are no part of the vacant lands, which the United States alone have a right to alienate, but are a portion of the quays of New Orleans—that is to say, of one of those public things which, according to the civil laws which have always governed Louisiana, belong to the inhabitants of cities, boroughs, and other similar places, for whose use they are intended.

Indeed, it is fully established by the most authentic documents that, from the very foundation of the city of New Orleans, there was, between the river Mississippi and the first row of houses fronting the river, a space of a certain breadth, extending on the whole length of this first row of houses, left vacant and designated by the appellation of quays, which space the founders intended should remain open for the use of the public, and was therefore without the dominion of those things which the then government of Louisiana had retained the right of alienating.

That if we recur to the work published at Paris in the year 1744 by the Rev. Father Charlevoix, under the title of "General History and Description of New France," which contains the historical statement, perhaps the most ancient now extant, of what relates to Louisiana, we shall find, page 434, volume the 2d, of the 4to edition of this work, that, though so far back as the year 1717, the French government, the then owners of the soil, had begun to lay the foundation of the metropolis of Louisiana under the name of New Orleans, still this project went no further at that time than the mere construction of some few houses upon the spot whereon the said city now lies.

That it appears, from the oldest plans of New Orleans, filed in the office of the marine charts at Versailles, which have furnished the data for making out the one contained in the above-cited work of Father Charlevoix, volume 2d, page 432, that it was only several years after the foundations of the city had been laid by the French government that they thought proper to cause a regular plan of the same to be made out.

That the city council of New Orleans having, by reference to the work of Father Charlevoix, discovered that there existed in the office of the marine charts, at Versailles, one or more plans of the city which might go to establish the rights of its inhabitants to the lots now under consideration, resolved, towards the close of the year 1717, to apply to the proper authorities in France, in order to obtain authenticated copies of the said plans; that the said copies are now filed in their archives and referred to on the present occasion to prove to your honorable bodies that the claim of your memorialists is well founded.

That the plans of New Orleans of which the city council have procured copies are three in number, and appear to have been made out by order of the French government, an inference easily to be drawn, and evidently resulting from the official capacity of the persons employed in draughting the same, and from the fact of their being filed and recorded in one of the offices of the navy department at Versailles.

That the first and oldest of those plans was only made out in the year 1724, by Mr. De Pauge, one of the King's engineers; that this, which may be looked upon as the original plan of the foundation of the city, is styled "Plan of the city of New Orleans;" that the embankment or levee which defended the city from inundation, and the buildings erected since September 1, 1723, are marked on the said plan, at the foot of which the following words are to be found: "New Orleans, May 29, 1724." Signed De Pauge.

That the second, which is in every respect similar to the first, with the exception of such houses as were built since the year 1724, and are marked thereon, was made out in the year 1728, by Nicholas Broutin, esq., a navy engineer, and is styled: "Plan of New Orleans, such as it was in 1728," and is attested as follows: "I, the undersigned, captain and engineer, do hereby certify the present plan to be correct. May 15, 1728." Signed Broutin.

That the third and last of those plans is styled: "Plan of New Orleans, such as it was in 1732;" and that it is thereon mentioned, a circumstance which it is all-important to advert to, that the levee in front of the city was then only twenty inches high, a difference almost incredible when its present height is taken into consideration.

That it appears that the plan annexed to the above-mentioned work of Father Charlevoix was made out from the three referred to, for it is styled: "Plan of New Orleans, taken from the manuscripts in the recording office of the marine charts, of N. B., engineer of the N., 1744," these being initials most assuredly used to designate the name, surname, and official capacity of Nicholas Broutin, navy engineer above mentioned. (Nicholas Broutin, ingénieur de la marine.)

That all those several plans prove most conclusively that the French government, at the time of the foundation of New Orleans, had left between the river Mississippi and the first row of houses fronting the same a certain vacant space not divided into town lots, the breadth of which has considerably increased since, in consequence both of the alluvions of the river and the works which the inhabitants have been successively making to the levee which protects the city against the overflowing of the Mississippi.

That this space so left open must of course have been partly occupied by the levee then existing on the banks of the river in front of the city, and by the public road extending along the levee; but that the balance of this space was evidently set apart for the use of the public, in conformity with the intentions of the founders, inasmuch as the said space is expressly designated in all those plans by the appellation of quays, a word which is to be found immediately after the first row of houses of this city, and which is used to mean that portion of land which it is customary, in the cities of France and Spain, to leave unoccupied between the port and the first row of houses, in order to facilitate the landing of vessels or other water craft, and the transportation of goods and merchandise, or to be applied to other similar public wants.

That an additional fact, which goes still more completely to prove that all the space left vacant between the Mississippi and the first row of houses of New Orleans was to remain open for the use of the public, agreeably to the intentions of the founders, is, that the frame buildings which it became indispensable for the French government to have erected, and which were actually erected by them, which buildings are marked on the plan annexed to the work of Father Charlevoix by letters N O P Q, were situated out of the limits of the city and port of New Orleans, as described in the said plan.

That your honorable bodies may easily convince themselves of this fact by the mere inspection of the plan which your memorialists have annexed to the other documents herewith respectfully submitted to them; a plan which they have caused to be made out by Joseph Pilié, esq., an engineer and the city surveyor, from the one contained in Father Charlevoix's work, this last plan being upon a scale much more reduced than the one upon which the plan by Nicholas Broutin has been made, but being in all other respects altogether similar to its original now on file in the archives of the city council of New Orleans.

That from this simple and correct statement of facts your memorialists are induced to conclude that, even supposing that the inhabitants of the city of New Orleans should have no other title to rely upon but the existence of the original plan of the foundation of their city, still your honorable bodies would find therein the most conclusive evidence that, although the United States have succeeded to all the rights which the governments of France and Spain previously had on Louisiana since the discovery of the said country, yet the rights so ceded to them do not include that of alienating, to the damage and prejudice of the inhabitants of this city, any parcel of that space which the French government, as founders of New Orleans, had left vacant, for the use of the public, between the Mississippi and the first row of houses of this city.

That whenever a town is founded by a private individual upon a given plan, and the lots therein are sold by him accordingly, it is a settled principle that the plan must be taken as the criterion by which the respective rights of both the original owner and the purchaser under him are to be tried.

That this position being incontrovertible, it would be subversive of every principle of reason and equity to contend that the same rule ought not to hold good between the sovereign who has founded a city, and has caused a regular plan of the same to be made out, and the individuals who have settled in the said city under the expectation that the plan would be carried into execution in all its contents.

But that the inhabitants of New Orleans, whose interests are represented by your memorialists, while they rely with confidence upon the rights secured to them by the original plan of the foundation of this city, have it in their power, moreover, to rest their claim upon the very letter of the civil laws which have always been in force in Louisiana under its various changes of government.

That it is expressly provided by the Spanish laws, which have ever since the year 1769 been and still are in force in Louisiana, whenever they are not contrary to the Constitution of the United States or have not been repealed or amended by the statutes of the State, that alluvions on the banks of rivers, either navigable or not navigable, shall belong to the riparian proprietors to whose estates they may be added.

That the law 26, title 6, of Partida III, enacts "that rivers sometimes swell to such a height that they carry away a portion of one estate and join it to another situated elsewhere on their banks: wherefore we say that the earth which a river carries away from an estate little by little and imperceptibly, because not all in a body, becomes the property of him to whose estate it is carried, and he who lost it has no claim whatever to it."

That the reason assigned by commentators as the ground of so positive a provision is, that inasmuch as the riparian proprietors are exposed to all the losses which may be occasioned by the overflowing and irruptions of the rivers along which their estates are situated, the legislator has thought proper to give them an adequate indemnification therefor by ordering that they should profit by such accessions of land as the said rivers might add to their property.

That if the above provisions be all equitable everywhere, they are still more so in lower Louisiana, wherein the inhabitants are obliged to keep in repairs, at their own expense, considerable levees, in order to protect themselves and neighbors from the inundations to which they are exposed in consequence of the periodical swellings of the Mississippi.

That this law being couched in general terms, and making no difference between the riparian proprietors either of urban or rural estates, it follows that the inhabitants of the city of New Orleans are equally as well founded to claim the benefit of its provisions as the riparian proprietors of rural estates in lower Louisiana; and it is notorious that the exercise of the right of the latter to the accessions of land made to their property by the Mississippi and other navigable rivers has never been called in question.

That one single reflection will suffice to prove that there can be no difference in this respect between the riparian proprietors of urban and rural estates. It is this: that should a part of the ground upon which the quays of New Orleans are situated be carried away by the irruption of the river, the inhabitants of the city would inevitably be the only sufferers; and they alone would have to furnish and make, at their own expense, another levee and public road in lieu of the ones which might have been either entirely or partly destroyed in consequence of the said irruption.

That the suit which existed between the corporation of New Orleans and Edward Livingston, esq., as to the right to the batture of the suburb St. Mary, and the judgments given therein by the supreme tribunals of Louisiana, sufficiently prove that, although the doctrine as to the right of ownership to alluvions and accessions of land on navigable rivers had been more controverted in France than in Spain, the laws in the former country being less positive on that subject than in the latter, still the latest decisions of the highest courts of justice in France have at last solemnly settled that point in conformity with the above cited law of the Partidas.

That such being the rule by which the right of property to alluvions on navigable rivers is to be tried, it follows that the privilege of disposing, for the use and benefit of the corporation of New Orleans, of the town lots lying between the first row of houses and the public road extending along the levee, claimed by your memorialists, is the more just and lawful as they have it in their power to prove that those lots have been, as it were, created and formed at the expense of the inhabitants of New Orleans by the immense works which they have been incessantly making to the levee under the various changes of governments, and especially since the United States have taken possession of Louisiana.

That among other depositions on oath annexed to this memorial, together with other written documents, your memorialists beg leave to refer your honorable bodies to that of Joseph Pilié, esq., by avocation an engineer and surveyor, who has been residing in New Orleans for upwards of twenty-two years without interruption, who has been the city surveyor since the month of May, 1818, and whose duty as such has been and still is to oversee the public works of the city, and especially those made to the levee.

That the said deposition establishes the fact that the works made to the levee of the square of the city of New Orleans, to the certain personal knowledge of this witness, that is to say, since the close of the year 1804, have been so considerable, and have so much increased the size and strength of the same, that the river having gradually left a part of its former bed uncovered, and that, too, having been filled up, little by little, by deposits of sand made by the river itself, especially in the upper and lower parts of the square of the city, the levee has been successively pushed forward and extended towards the river in all its width, so that the public road now existing along the levee in the lower part of the city, and the levee itself in the upper part, are both situated on what was but of late a part of the bed of the river, as your honorable bodies may see by reference to the figurative plan of those augmentations in front of the city; which plan has been made out by the witness in question with a view to elucidate the facts and explain more fully his deposition.

That this witness has, moreover, declared that, from the observations which he had been enabled to make previously to his being appointed city surveyor, and those made by him since with still more accuracy, he has no hesitation in saying that the expenses which the inhabitants have had to bear since Louisiana has been taken possession of by the United States of America have, upon an average, amounted to at least three thousand dollars per annum, both for the repairs and augmentations made to the levee of the square of the city alone. That your honorable bodies will no longer be surprised at the enormity of the expenses so incurred for that object when they are informed that the average height of the levee in front of the square of the city, which in 1732 was only twenty inches, as before stated, is now from four and a half to five feet by from fifty to one hundred in breadth, as proven by the testimony of Joseph Pilié, esq., which is owing to the progressive increase of the swellings of the river, in consequence of its banks having been gradually cleared and put in a state of cultivation, and new levees established, which have obstructed and actually shut several of the natural old outlets of the Mississippi.

That Joseph Pilié declares, moreover, that he entertains no doubt that the existence of the town lots within the space known by the appellation of quays, situated between the levee and the first row of houses, is owing altogether to its having been widened by the works which the inhabitants of New Orleans are incessantly making to their levee at their own expense; and also to this circumstance, which is common in the port of New Orleans, that the river, by leaving gradually a part of its former bed uncovered and filling up the same, little by little and imperceptibly, with deposits of sand, formed a real alluvion, which has enabled the inhabitants to push forward and extend the levee towards the river.

That if your honorable bodies, after having duly weighed the facts proved by the said deposition, will turn to the evidence of Gallien Preval, esq., the present secretary of the council, stating not only what he knows of his own personal knowledge, but what is the result of a thorough examination made by him of the records of the former cabildo of this city, both going to establish the fact that the works to the levee in front of the square of the city were always under the Spanish government, that is, since the year 1769, made by its inhabitants, or the expenses thereof defrayed out of the funds of the city treasury, they will not hesitate to acknowledge the justice of the claim of the inhabitants of New Orleans, and that they will recognize that the city council, in their capacity, do actually possess the right of exercising the privilege herein alluded to, without being reduced to the necessity of entering into a long discussion before the district court, and being exposed, in order to have the injunction set aside, to unnecessary delays and inconveniences, which must be the inevitable result of a judicial investigation.

That a powerful consideration which ought to determine your honorable bodies to grant the prayer of your memorialists and to make use of the authority vested in them, in order to raise the obstacles which are the natural consequence of the injunction obtained by the district attorney of the United States, is, that the statement herein respectfully submitted shows, most conclusively, that the lots which the city council wished to sell are no part of the vacant lands the ownership of which was transmitted to the United States by the treaty of cession of Louisiana, but do actually constitute a portion of the quays of the city—that is to say, of one of those things which the French government, at the time of the foundation of New Orleans, had left free and open for the use and convenience of its inhabitants.

That this being the real state of things, the sale of the town lots lying on the quays of New Orleans cannot, in any manner, interfere with the useful dominion enjoyed by the United States—that is to say, the right of disposing of the vacant lands in Louisiana; and your memorialists therefore hope that your honorable bodies will be of opinion that the question relative to the sale of those lots is not essentially within the province of courts of justice, and that they may take upon themselves to decide the same in favor of the inhabitants of New Orleans without the interference of any tribunal if they be convinced, as they must be, that the rights of the United States cannot be affected thereby.

That one of the reasons which induces your memorialists to cherish the hope that they will obtain what they solicit is, that the general government have already, in some measure, impliedly recognized that they had no right of property to the lots claimed by your memorialists.

That towards the close of the year 1817 the city council of New Orleans, being informed that the United States intended to have the lots in question sold for their own use and benefit, as well as the public square and city hall of New Orleans, in the same manner that they had concluded to dispose of the ground on which Fort St. Charles formerly stood, of the barracks and navy yard in this city, deemed it advisable to present a memorial to the general government and Congress of the United States, with a view respectfully to lay before them the rights of the inhabitants of New Orleans to the lots in question.

That it appears that that memorial had the desired effect, and that the general government recognized that the United States had no right to dispose, for their own benefit, of either of the lots claimed by your memorialists, or of the public square or city hall of New Orleans; for Congress, by an act bearing date April 20, 1818, merely ordered the sale of the barracks and navy yard in New Orleans, and made a donation, under certain conditions, to the corporation of this city, of the ground of the old Fort St. Charles.

That, therefore, if the United States have no right to dispose, for their own benefit, of the lots claimed by your memorialists, and if it be true that the said lots have always been a part of the quays of New Orleans, the only point which remains to be inquired into by your honorable bodies is with respect to the nature and extent of the rights of the inhabitants of this city to those things which, since the foundation of New Orleans, have been left and appropriated to their common usage, such as the quays of the city, even laying aside for a moment the consideration of the fact of accessions of land having been successively added to those quays in consequence both of the progressive filling up of the port and the works which the inhabitants of the city have been constantly making to the levee.

That on this question it may be contended that there are countries wherein no other privilege is granted to the inhabitants of cities but that of enjoying such public things as are left for their use, the dominion of which, however, is retained by the sovereign. But if such be the law in certain parts of the world, surely the provisions of the civil laws which govern Louisiana are entirely in opposition to that doctrine, for they most emphatically give to the inhabitants of cities and towns a complete right of property to such public things as are appropriated for their use; that in France, with the exception of the ports of Brest, L'Orient, Rochefort, and Toulon, which are royal navy harbors, quays belong either to the people of cities, towns, or other settlements, or even to private individuals.

That the truth of this position is evidenced, first, by provisions contained in the Ordonnance de la Marine, and Valin's Commentaries thereon; second, by police regulations made for certain ports.

1st. That by the Ordonnance de la Marine, book 4th, title 1st, article 20, it is provided "that the expenses for keeping in good order and repairs the posts, buckles, and rings, put up and appropriated for making fast vessels, as well as the quays intended for the loading and unloading of goods, shall be paid out of the common fund of cities; and the mayors and selectmen thereof shall see that this provision be carried into effect, under penalty of being personally responsible for the non-execution thereof."

On this provision Valin says: "This is applicable to ports wherein there is no wharfage or quay duty imposed for the benefit of private individuals; for, when such a duty does exist, they are to keep in good order and repairs, at their own expense, the said quays and wharves, as it is positively settled by the following article:

"If the expenses for the keeping in good order and repairs be borne by the city, no doubt but that the mayor and selectmen thereof are authorized to levy and receive, for the use and benefit of the said city, the quay and wharfage duty."

The 21st article says: "They shall, nevertheless, be bound to keep quays, buckles, and rings in good order and repairs, who enjoy the privilege of levying and receiving, in ports and harbors, custom or quay duties, under penalty of being deprived of the exercise of the said privilege, and the amount of the said duties being applied to put up anew the objects which have been destroyed by their negligence."

In commenting on this provision Valin observes: "This point had already been so settled by the 27th article of M. D'Herbigny's regulations for the port of La Rochelle, by which it is made the duty of the harbormaster, in case of neglect on the part of the owners to make the necessary repairs to, and to keep in good order, their quays and wharves, to have the same done at their expense by employing hands therefor."

Our article says: "Under penalty of being deprived of the privilege of levying and receiving the duties, and of the amount of the same being applied to the putting up anew of the objects which have been destroyed by their negligence." But the 27th article of D'Herbigny's regulations, while it nearly reaches the same end, is, however, less severe as respects the owners of quays; for it operates no perpetual forfeiture of their privilege, &c.—(See 2d Valin, edition of 1760, page 439.)

2d. By the regulations for the police of the quay of La Rochelle, enacted June 30, 1676, under the authority of the King, and alluded to by Valin, it is expressly provided, article 27, "We order all such persons as receive wharfage duties, individually, to keep in good order and repairs their quays and wharves, to have them furnished with buckles for the making fast of shipping; and we, moreover, command the harbormaster, in case of neglect on the part of said owners, to employ hands therefor at their expense, so that the unlading of goods may easily take place thereon, and the mooring of the shipping be safe."

ART. 28. "Owners of quays and wharves shall furnish the necessary cable and stage timber, and shall be entitled to demand and receive one cent per ton for the unloading of merchandise," &c.—(See 2d Valin, same edition, pages 416 and 417.)

3d. By an ordinance of the admiralty at La Rochelle, bearing date September 7, 1720, in which the above regulations are ordered to be strictly carried into effect, the same words, "proprietors of quays and wharves," are made use of in three instances, and applied to private individuals.

Now, unless it be shown that, as regards the quays in New Orleans, France has deviated from such well established general rules, and declared, during the time that she was in possession of Louisiana, that the said quays should remain the property of the crown, and be kept in repairs at the expense of the royal treasury—unless it be shown, further, that the said quays have ever been kept, maintained, or repaired by the said crown, your memorialists think they are warranted in concluding that the sovereign of France never was the proprietor of the said quays, and, consequently, could never transfer either to the King of Spain or, afterwards, to the United States, any right or title in, upon, or to the same.

That, as to the laws of Spain, your memorialists think that they are likewise in favor of their claim. Indeed, the 9th law, title the 28th, of the third Partida, reads thus: "The things which belong exclusively to the commons of cities or towns are the water fountains, the places where fairs and markets are held, or where the city councils meet, the alluvions and sandy places on the banks of rivers, public places, race grounds, the forests and pastures, and all other such similar places as are appropriated and left for the use of each city, town, or other settlement of the same kind."

That it is evident, especially from the concluding part of the said law, that in Spain, whenever the sovereign has founded a city, town, or other similar settlement, it may be said that he has, ipso facto, relinquished in favor of the people of the said city, town, or other settlement, his right of dominion over all such public things as he leaves or appropriates to their use; and that, from that moment, the exclusive right of property to those things becomes unqualifiedly vested in them. Let us add here, as a confirmation in favor of the city of New Orleans, of the principles and arguments drawn from the laws of France, 1st. That under the Spanish government, the keeping in repair the quays and levee was a charge imposed upon the said city, which was, for that reason, authorized to receive a duty of three dollars from each vessel that moored, anchored, or unloaded in its port. 2d. That, by its charter of incorporation, the said city has been, and still is, authorized to receive the said duty. 3d. That it has uninterruptedly kept in repair up to this day not only the said levee but also the said quays.

That, moreover, the said civil laws prove that this right of property is not to be barely construed into a mere usage, although they do not actually allow city corporations to dispose of those things which belong to them in the same manner that private individuals may do with respect to their own property.

That the law 23d, title 32d, of the 3d Partida, enacts, "No one shall erect a house or other building, or works, in the public places, vacant or threshing grounds, or roads which are common to cities, towns, or other settlements; for, as they are left open for the convenience and advantage of all who reside therein, no one shall presume to take possession of them, or labor there, for his own particular benefit. And if any one contravene this law, that which he builds or erects there shall be pulled down and destroyed. And if the corporation of the place where the works are constructed, or the buildings erected, choose to retain them for their own use, and not to pull them down, they may do so; and they may make use of the revenue they derive therefrom in the same manner as they would of any other revenue they possess."

That the last expressions used in the above law clearly prove that the right of cities and towns to those things which are appropriated for the public convenience does not consist merely of the right of using the same, but actually vests in them the power of disposing of them, so as to derive a revenue therefrom, as the said law positively expresses it.

That not only are the inhabitants of cities, towns, or other similar settlements, possessed, in several instances, of the right of deriving a revenue from the public things appropriated for common use, by either renting or leasing them out, but they even may, in accordance with the Spanish laws, grant to private individuals the privilege of enjoying the same whenever some public advantage may result therefrom.

That this is a natural inference flowing from the very words of the law 3d, of the said title 32d, of the 3d Partida, which are as follows: "If any one begin to erect for his own private use a new edifice in a public square, street, or common threshing ground, of any city or town, without leave of the King, or the permission of the city council (cabildo) of the place wherein the building is erected, any of the inhabitants may forbid him to continue the work."

That if it appears from the expressions contained in that law that the cabildo or council of a city, town, or other similar place, may allow an individual to erect a building or other constructions on a public ground, the irresistible conclusion to be drawn from that provision is, that the cabildo or city council can, a fortiori, exercise for themselves, and for the benefit of the city or town represented by them, the same privilege which they are empowered to grant to others.

That true it is that the law 15, title 5, of the 5th Partida, provides: "That public places, such as public squares, streets, rivers, and water-courses, belonging to the King, or to the commons of any city, cannot be sold or alienated." But this prohibition as to public things, which actually exists even in countries governed by the civil laws, ought not to be considered as intended to impair the right of property which the inhabitants of cities have over public things left for their use; but merely as a wise provision enacted in order to prevent that those things should be diverted from their original destination without strong reasons for so doing.

That, moreover, this provision restricting the right of alienating public things in the countries governed by the civil laws, is not always carried into execution, so as not to admit of an exception, whenever a material advantage may result in favor of the people of the place concerned, from the alienation of the same, or whenever their original destination may be changed without any prejudice or inconvenience, provided it be with the express authorization of the sovereign—a doctrine which is laid down by several commentators.

That if the rule which prohibits the alienation of such public things as belong to the commons of a city were susceptible of no exception, it is plain that the inhabitants of a city or town would not have it in their power to extend it beyond its original limits, even in case of necessity, and of the measure being called for, in consequence of an increase of population, or of changes made by nature itself in the localities, whenever this extension could only be operated by a change in the original destination of those public things which had been left open for common use.

That if, for example, owing to the deposits of sand left by the Mississippi, the alluvion or batture which is now forming in front of New Orleans should so increase as to remove the port at a distance of several acres from the first row of houses, an event which is not impossible, the river having in several instances withdrawn from and abandoned its former bank; and if it should be held that the vacant space of ground now lying between the river and the first row of houses cannot be alienated, the commerce of this city would be exposed to the most serious inconveniences; for the distance between the shipping and the stores and warehouses prepared for the reception of the goods and produce landed on the levee would be so great, and the costs for transporting the same so heavy, that the inhabitants would perhaps be reduced to the necessity of abandoning the city.

That, at all events, the 1st and 13th sections of the act to incorporate the city of New Orleans, an act bearing date February 17, 1805, have not only modified, but expressly repealed the rule which provides that public things belonging to the commons of cities, towns, and other similar settlements, cannot be alienated or sold. The two sections above alluded to vest in this corporation not only such rights as were exercised by the inhabitants of New Orleans and by its cabildo under the Spanish government, but actually do give them the power of holding, possessing, and selling all the real and personal property which they had a right or title to; which must, necessarily, include the rights and titles to those public things which the Spanish laws secured them the right of property to, and clothe them with the discretionary power of selling, and even giving away, those things, according to the exigencies of public interest.

That your memorialists, however, full of respect for the opinions of your honorable bodies, are willing to be considered in the light of applicants for leave to sell the lots in question, if such a permission be deemed necessary. That, at all events, your memorialists pray your honorable bodies to use the authority which they possess, in order to rid them from the opposition formed by the district attorney of the United States, by passing an act in favor of the inhabitants of New Orleans, confirming all the legal, and, with due deference, incontrovertible right, which they have to the said lots, or relinquishing to them such rights as the United States may think they have thereto, if your honorable bodies have any the least doubt as to the validity of the titles by virtue of which the inhabitants of New Orleans claim the ownership of the said lots, and the privilege of disposing of the same.

That, should your honorable bodies be of opinion that the inhabitants of New Orleans have no title to the lots in question, still there is a consideration which will, no doubt, determine them to relinquish in their favor all the rights which the United States may think they have thereto; it is this which is respectfully suggested by your memorialists. The proceeds of the sale of those lots will enable them to pay, in part, the enormous expenses which they have now to incur for paving the city, and making other improvements really indispensable for the prosperity of the commerce of New Orleans; improvements which go not only to promote the particular welfare of this city, but also to secure immense advantages to the citizens of the western States of the Union, and to the foreign traders who resort to this market for the sale of their produce and merchandise.

That, in order to be enabled to meet the expenses necessary for making the said improvements, the corporation of New Orleans have been obliged to apply to the legislature of the State that they might be authorized to borrow, on a long credit, the sum of six hundred thousand dollars; and that the two-thirds of the loan, which they have been able to procure only at eight per centum per annum interest, are nearly spent for the paving of the most commercial streets of the city and its incorporated suburbs.

That your honorable bodies must therefore be convinced that the proceeds of the sale of the lots which your memorialists claim the privilege of alienating will be but a small indemnification for the expenses which they are now incurring for paving the city, as well as for the repairs and augmentations made to the levee; since it is hardly to be supposed that the amount of the sale will exceed two hundred thousand dollars.

That your memorialists, before concluding this their memorial, for the length of which they have no better apology to offer than the importance of the question examined therein, think it their duty to assure your honorable bodies that, while they solicit the confirmation of the rights of the inhabitants of New Orleans to the use and property of the quays of this city, and the permission of alienating the vacant town lots on those quays, they lay no claim to the square whereupon the custom-house is built; and that, in case the inhabitants of this city should have any right and title to the same, they are willing and ready to give them up in their name and behalf if your honorable bodies should think it necessary.

Wherefore your memorialists pray that your honorable bodies be pleased either to recognize and confirm the rights of the inhabitants of New Orleans to the use, property, and ownership of the quays of this city, that is to say, of that space of ground left open for public use, and designated by that appellation in the several plans in this memorial alluded to, which were made at the time of the foundation of the city, or to relinquish in favor of the said inhabitants the rights which the United States have to those quays, if any they be supposed to have; and also to grant to your memorialists leave to dispose, for the use and benefit of the corporation, by bargain and sale, or otherwise, of all the vacant town lots lying on those quays, if such a leave be deemed necessary; and your memorialists will ever pray.

D. PRIEUY, Recorder.

To the Hon. Thomas Bolling Robertson, judge of the district court of the United States within and for the eastern district of Louisiana.

The petition of the attorney of the United States within and for the said district, prosecuting in their name and on their behalf, respectfully states: That the mayor of the city of New Orleans, in pursuance of an ordinance of the city council thereof to that effect, has advertised for sale, for a day now past, and, as your petitioner is informed and believes, is about soon to advertise anew for sale, in lots, the vacant land included between Ursuline, Levee, and Garrison streets, and the public road in the city of New Orleans, and also the vacant land included between the custom-house, Levee and Bienville streets, and the public road in said city.

Your petitioner, in the name and on the behalf aforesaid, further states that, by the treaty of cession of the late province of Louisiana by the then French republic to the United States of America, the United States succeeded to all the antecedent rights of France and Spain, as they then were, in and over the said province, the dominion and possession thereof, including all lands which were not private property; and that the dominion and possession of the said vacant land, so, as aforesaid, endeavored to be sold by the said city council, had, ever since the discovery and occupation of the said province by France, remained vested in the sovereign, and had not, at any time prior to the date of the said treaty, been granted by the sovereign to the said city council.

Wherefore, and inasmuch as the said attempt of the said city council to sell the said land as private property is an invasion of the rightful dominion and possession of the United States in the premises, your petitioner, prosecuting in the name and on the behalf aforesaid, prays that the mayor, aldermen, and inhabitants of the city of New Orleans may be duly summoned to appear and answer this petition; and that, in the meanwhile, they may be inhibited, by injunction, from proceeding further in the said attempt, or from doing any other act whatsoever tending to invade the rightful dominion and possession of the United States in the said land; and that, after due proceeding had, it may be ordered, adjudged, and decreed, that the said injunction be made perpetual.

And your petitioner, prosecuting in the name and on the behalf aforesaid, prays all other suitable and needful relief; and, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

J. W. SMITH,
Attorney of the United States, Eastern District of Louisiana.

J. W. Smith, the said attorney, being duly sworn, doth depose that the foregoing allegations are, as he doth verily believe, true.

J. W. SMITH.

Sworn to before me.

T. B. ROBERTSON, Judge for East District of Louisiana.

The President of the United States of America to the mayor, aldermen, and inhabitants of the city of New Orleans, greeting:

Whereas it has been represented to the district court of the United States for the eastern district of Louisiana, by the attorney of the United States prosecuting therein in their name and on their behalf, that the city council of the said city, by an ordinance of the date of the 22d September ultimo, have directed and required the mayor of the said city to advertise for sale, and to sell at public auction, certain vacant ground in the city of New Orleans, which has been advertised by him by the description of three lots situated in Tchapitoulas, Canal, and Common, and New Levee streets, marked Nos. 1, 2, and 3 on the plan made by the city surveyor; also two lots fronting on Tchapitoulas street, between Canal and Common streets, marked Nos. 5 and 6 on the same plan:

Now, therefore, you, and each of you, are hereby strictly enjoined and commanded that you, and each of you, do absolutely desist from all further proceedings touching the sale of the said vacant lands, and from every act whatever tending in any way to invade or interfere with the dominion and possession of the United States in the said land, until the further order of this court.

Witness the Hon. Thomas B. Robertson, judge of the said court, at the city of New Orleans, November 12, A. D. 1827.

F. W. LEA, Deputy Clerk.

Evidence in support of the claim of the corporation of the city of New Orleans to the quays of that city.

Personally appeared before me, one of the associate judges of the city court of New Orleans, Joseph Pilié, esq., residing in the city of New Orleans, who, being duly sworn according to law, declares that he is, by avocation, an engineer and surveyor; that he has resided in the city of New Orleans for upwards of twenty-two years without interruption; that he is the city surveyor of New Orleans, in which capacity he was appointed in the month of May, 1818; that one of the duties of his office is to oversee the public works of this city, and especially those made to its levee; that, to his personal knowledge, the works to the levee of the square of the city of New Orleans, since the close of the year 1804, have been so considerable, and have so much increased the size and strength of the same, that the river having gradually left a part of its former bed uncovered, and that, too, having been filled up, little by little, by deposits of sand made by the river itself, especially in the upper and lower parts of the square of this city, the levee has been successively pushed forward and extended towards the river in all its width; so that the public road now existing along the levee in the lower part of this city, and the levee itself in the upper part, are both situated on what was but of late a part of the bed of the river, as may be seen by referring to the figurative plan of those augmentations in front of this city, which plan is annexed to this declaration, and has been made out by him, this appearer, at the request of the city council of New Orleans, with a view to elucidate the facts and explain more fully his deposition; and this appearer further declares that, from the observations which he has been enabled to make previously to his being appointed city surveyor, and those made by him since, with still more accuracy, he has no hesitation in saying that the expenses which the inhabitants of New Orleans have had to bear since Louisiana has been taken possession of by the United States of America, have, upon an average, amounted to at least three thousand dollars per annum, for both the repairs and augmentations made to the levee of the square of the city alone; that those heavy expenses have become necessary, first, because the average height of the levee in front of the square of this city, which, in the year 1732, was only twenty inches, as appears by one of the plans of the city of New Orleans deposited in the archives of the city council, is now from three and a half to five feet, by fifty to one hundred feet in breadth, which is owing to the progressive increase of the swellings of the river, in consequence of its banks having been gradually cleared and put in a state of cultivation, and new levees established, which have obstructed and actually shut several of the natural old outlets of the Mississippi; second, because about the centre of the square of this city, that is, between St. Peter and St. Louis streets, the soil on which the levee stands has fallen and broken in so often that it has become necessary to strengthen that part of it by means of works as considerable as they were expensive; third, because the immense trade of which New Orleans is now the emporium has made it indispensable to give to the levee, in all its extent, a sufficient breadth to facilitate the loading and unloading of such goods and merchandise as are brought into this port; and this appearer further swears that he entertains no doubt that the existence of the town lots within the space known by the appellation of quays, situated between the levee and the first row of houses, is owing altogether to its having been widened by the works which the inhabitants of New Orleans are incessantly making to their levee at their own expense, and also to this circumstance, which is common in the port of New Orleans and other parts of this State, that the river, by leaving gradually a part of its former bed uncovered, and filling up the same, little by little and imperceptibly, with deposits of sand, has formed a real alluvion, which has enabled the inhabitants of this city to push forward and extend its levee towards the river; and this appearer further says that he has attentively examined the plans of the city of New Orleans, which have been procured from the office of the marine charts at Versailles, which plans are three in number, and that he has found that the plan engraved in Charlevoix's General History of New France, page 434, volume 2 of the 4to edition of this work, published at Paris in the year 1744, was made out from the three referred to, and is altogether similar to that drawn by Nicholas Broutin, engineer of the French navy, though upon a more reduced scale, which is the reason why he, this appearer, has annexed to this his declaration a copy of the plan which is engraved in the work of Father Charlevoix, and which he swears to be a true and faithful copy thereof in all its parts; and this appearer finally swears that he does verily think and believe that the word quays, which is placed on the three plans deposited in the archives of the city council of New Orleans, alluded to as aforesaid, as well as on the plan engraved in Charlevoix's works, immediately after the first row of houses of this city, and not immediately after its levee, is a full evidence that it was the intention of the founders of the city of New Orleans to leave the space appropriated for the said quays vacant and free for the use of the inhabitants of New Orleans, as it is customary in most of the cities in France and Spain.

P. DERBIGNY, Secretary of State.

Personally appeared before me, one of the associate judges of the city court of New Orleans, Louis Moreau Lislet, esquire and counsellor at law, residing in the city of New Orleans, who, being duly sworn agreeably to law, doth declare and say that sometime in the year 1817 the city council of New Orleans, being apprehensive that the general government of the United States would sell the public square, the city hall, the public prisons of this city, and certain town lots lying on the quays of New Orleans, that is, on that space which has ever been left free for the public use, under that appellation, between the first rows of houses and the river Mississippi, as being a part of the vacant lands, the property of which was transferred to the United States by the treaty of cession of Louisiana, did, in order to prevent the said sale, which the city council considered as an encroachment upon the rights which the laws and usages of this country warranted to the inhabitants of the city of New Orleans over and to the public things which the founders of this city reserved for their usage, present a memorial to the general government and Congress of the United States, stating the claim which, in their opinion, they have to the same, and the reasons why the said sale ought not to take place; that, in support of the said memorial, they forwarded a copy of a plan of New Orleans, which they found engraved in the General History of Nouvelle France, by the Rev. Father Charlevoix, and which was mentioned therein as being a true copy taken from the manuscripts in the recording office of the marine charts by Nicholas Broutin, engineer of the French navy, in the year 1744, from which it appears that a certain space was left vacant and free for the public use, under the name of quays, between the first row of houses of the city of New Orleans and the river Mississippi; that the city council being informed by the title of the said plan that there existed charts and plans of the city of New Orleans, made out sometime after its foundation, in the navy department at Versailles, in France, which might be of great use in support of the claim of the inhabitants of the city of New Orleans to the property of their quays, this appearer advised them, as being then, as he is now, the counsel for the said city, to take the necessary steps to procure authentic copies of the said plans, which they endeavored to obtain through the medium of Joseph M. de la Grange, esquire and counsellor at law, at Paris, and the brother-in-law of him, this appearer, who did forward the said copies to the city council by one Mr. St. Blancard, now deceased, who was the bearer thereof; that he, this appearer, having been called to be present at the opening of the packet containing the said plans, swears that the said plans were three in number, and identically the same which are now deposited in the archives of the city council of New Orleans, and alluded to in the memorial to which this affidavit is annexed; and this appearer further says that, having permanently resided in the city of New Orleans for these twenty-two years past and upwards, it is to his positive knowledge that all the expenses incurred for maintaining and repairing the levee, high road, and quays in front of New Orleans and its incorporated suburbs, to wit: the suburbs St. Mary and Marigny, have always been, during all the said time, paid out of the city funds, and that he has acquired the proof by the examination of the records of the cabildo, under the Spanish government, which are preserved in the archives of the city council; that those expenses were also paid out of the city funds during all the time Louisiana was under the Spanish government, that is, for maintaining and repairing the levee and quays in front of the square of this city.

Personally appeared before me, one of the associate judges of the city court of New Orleans, the Hon. Gallien Preval, one of the associate judges of the said court, who, being duly sworn agreeably to law, doth declare and say that ever since the month of March, in the year 1821, he has been, and still is, the secretary of the city council, and, as such, the keeper of their archives, among which are to be found the books containing the proceedings of the cabildo of New Orleans, to whom the city council have succeeded; that the said books are four in number, all kept in due form, well preserved, and containing all the acts and deliberations of the cabildo for the whole time that Louisiana remained in the possession of the Spanish government, that is to say, from December 1, 1769, the day when the said cabildo were first organized, down to the month of January, 180–, the time when the said cabildo ceased their functions and were succeeded by the municipality, who, in their turn, remained in operation only for the short interval France retained the dominion of Louisiana, until the moment the possession thereof was delivered to the United States; that the official signatures which are required by the laws and usages of Spain to make proceedings authentic are regularly affixed to all the said deliberations, that is to say, the signatures of the several Spanish governors, who were, ex officio, the presidents of the cabildo, as well as of the regidores or members, and of the escribano or secretary of the said cabildo; and this appearer doth declare and say that, from a thorough examination by him made of the deliberations contained in the said books, and more especially from the proceedings had in the months of May and August, 1774; March, October, and December, 1775; March, 1776; August, 1792; January, September, and November, 1793; August and December, 1794; February, November, and December, 1795; December, 1797; March, 1798; October and December, 1799; July, 1801; and January, 1802, which are recorded, folios 95, 97, 104, 112, 116, 121, 192, 204, verso, 223, ditto 224, ditto 226, 229, 230, verso, 255, ditto 256, 266, and 273, verso, of the first and second of those books, and folios 22, verso, 23, 95, 102, verso, 103, 155, verso, 159, ditto 224, verso, 225, and 234, verso, of the fourth of the said books, it is proven that all the expenses incurred for the keeping and repairs of both the levee of the city and the public road along the said levee, which expenses often amounted to large sums of money, were always defrayed out of the city funds, and that the Spanish government never paid any, the least, proportion of the same; and this appearer further doth declare and say that it is likewise proven by the said books, and especially by a deliberation had in the month of May, 1798, folio 109 verso, of the fourth of those books, that a tax of three dollars was actually levied upon every vessel arriving at the port of New Orleans, whatever might be her size or tonnage, as a compensation for the right given to the said vessels of landing their goods on the levee, which was kept in repairs exclusively at the expense of the city, which tax was collected by the mayordomo or treasurer of the city, for the use and benefit of the same; and this appearer moreover doth declare that there are among the archives of the city council, of which he has the keeping, three plans of the city of New Orleans, which are evidently copies of the manuscript ones filed in the office of the marine charts at Versailles, viz: the oldest, entitled "Plan of the city of New Orleans, whereupon is marked the levee which protects it against inundation, together with such additional buildings as has been erected since September 1, 1823," at the foot of which plan the following words are written: "New Orleans, May 29, 1724. Signed, De Pauge;" the next plan, entitled "Plan of New Orleans, such as it was in 1728;" and at the foot of this, "I, the undersigned, captain and engineer, do certify the present plan to be correct. May 15, 1728. Signed, Broutin." That the copy of this second plan is authenticated by several legalizations, the first of which is in the following words and figures: "A true copy. The vice admiral, director general of the depot of charts and plans of the navy and colonies. Paris, November 22, 1819. Signed, Rosilly." That the second legalization is as follows: "I certify the above to be the true signature of Count de Rosilly, vice admiral, director general of the depot of charts and plans of the navy and colonies. Paris, December 15, 1819. For the minister and secretary of state for the navy and colonies, and by his authorization. The secretary general of the department. Signed, V. Vauvilliers, with the seal of the department." That the third legalization, which is the one by the minister of foreign affairs, is as follows: "The minister of foreign affairs certifies that the signature of Mr. Vauvilliers, the secretary general of the department of the navy, is genuine. Paris, December 16, 1819. By authorization of the minister, the master of requests, and chief of the chancery. Signed, Prevost. By the minister, the chief of the office of passports and legalization. Signed, Bruslé, with the seal of the department of foreign affairs." That the fourth and last of the said legalizations is by Isaac Cox Barnet, esq., the consul general of the United States of America at Paris, to wit: "Consulate of the United States of America, Paris. I, Isaac Cox Barnet, consul of the United States of America for Paris, and agent of claims, do hereby certify that the above signatures are truly those of Messrs. Prevost, master of requests, chief of the chancery of the department of foreign affairs of the kingdom of France, and Bruslé, chief of the passports and legalization office of the same department, and that to all acts by them so signed full faith and credit are due in judicature and thereout. In testimony whereof, I hereunto set my hand and seal of office, at Paris, December 18, 1819, and in the forty-fourth year of the independence of the said United States. Signed, I. Cox Barnet, consul United States," and sealed with the seal of the said consulate. That the third and last of the said plans is entitled: "Plan of the city of New Orleans, such as it was in 1732;" and that at the foot of the said plan, to which no signature is affixed, there is the following note: "That the levee of New Orleans was at that time only twenty inches high." And this appearer does further depose and say that it is to his knowledge that ever since the United States have taken possession of Louisiana, by virtue of the treaty of cession, the expenses for keeping in repairs the levee of the city of New Orleans and its incorporated suburbs, as well as the public road extending along the levee, have always been defrayed by, and paid out of, the city funds exclusively.

20TH CONGRESS.] No 598. [1ST SESSION.

LAND CLAIMS IN MICHIGAN.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 2, 1828.

Mr. WHIPPLE, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom were referred the reports of the commissioners on land claims in the Territory of Michigan, reported:

That they have had the same under consideration, and that, having had no new facts or evidence presented to them other than what was by the Committee on Public Lands laid before the nineteenth Congress at its first session, your committee beg leave to refer the House to the report made at said session, and to ask that it may be made a part of this report.

The committee deem it proper further to state that, by rejecting from confirmation the seventh volume of the reports of the commissioners appointed for the adjustment of land claims in the Territory of Michigan, the objections which were felt by the committee to the confirmation of said reports are obviated, and the public interest is protected from committal or injury.

FEBRUARY 14, 1826.

The Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office in relation to the report of the commissioners appointed to examine titles and claims to lands in the Territory of Michigan, together with the reports of said commissioners, reported:

It appears that by a resolution of the House of Representatives, passed January 27, 1825, the Committee on Public Lands were discharged from the further consideration of the reports of the commissioners appointed to examine titles and claims to lands in the Territory of Michigan, and said reports were referred to the Secretary of the Treasury, who was required to report on the same; which report, together with the reports of the commissioners, was to be transmitted to Congress at their then next session.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office has, in obedience to the order of the Secretary of the Treasury, made the report required, to which the Committee on the Public Lands refer, and ask that it may be adopted as a part of their report:

"GENERAL LAND OFFICE, November, 1825.

"The Secretary of the Treasury having lately referred to this office the resolution of the House of Representatives, passed January 27, 1825, in the following words: 'Resolved, That the Committee on Public Lands be discharged from the further consideration of the reports of the commissioners appointed to examine titles and claims to lands in the Territory of Michigan, and that they be referred to the Secretary of the Treasury for his report on the same, to be made at the next session of Congress, together with the reports of the commissioners referred to in the said resolution, contained in the volumes numbered from 1 to 9,' the Commissioner of the General Land Office has the honor to report that the volumes numbered 2, 4, and 5 contain the reports of Messrs. Woodbridge and Kearsley, the commissioners appointed to carry into effect the act 'to revive the powers of the commissioners for ascertaining and deciding on claims to land in the district of Detroit, and for settling the claims to lands at Green Bay and Prairie des Chiens, in the Territory of Michigan,' passed May 11, 1820, and they embrace all the reports of the commissioners under that act which have not heretofore been submitted to Congress.

"The volume No. 2 contains the reports and decisions of the commissioners under the powers with which they were invested by the first part of the first section of the act of May 11, 1820, in relation to the donation rights originally granted by the second section of the act passed April 23, 1812. So far as the confirmations contained in this volume conform strictly to the provisions of the act above referred to, it would, it is presumed, be entirely competent for the Secretary of the Treasury to give effect to the decisions by his approval of the register's final certificate; but as the commissioners, for reasons assigned in their report attached to this volume, deviated from the strict letter of the act of April 23, 1812, it becomes necessary that this report should be approved by Congress to give validity to the claims that are confirmed and recommended for confirmation, in relation to which the commissioners may have deviated from the strict letter of the law. The cases in which such deviation is presumed to have occurred are:

"1st. Confirmations of back concessions on islands in the river Detroit.

"2d. Confirmations of back concessions in divided parcels, whether such division arises from the interposition of previously confirmed claims or navigable water-courses.

"3d. Recommendations to confirm, in lieu of back concessions, lands altogether disconnected with the original concessions.

"The volume marked No. 4 contains the reports of the commissioners in relation to claims 'which had been filed with the commissioners, and not heretofore decided upon;' which claims they were authorized to examine and decide upon by the provisions of the first section of the act of May 11, 1820. It appears from the report that the commissioners have acted upon seventy-eight claims of this description, thirty-five of which they have rejected, and the residue they have confirmed or recommended for confirmation. To give validity to any of the claims contained in this report, it is necessary that Congress should act upon and approve them. The commissioners being vested with equitable as well as legal powers, in relation to these claims, by the several acts of Congress relating to private land claims in Michigan Territory, and as they have exhibited in their report the grounds on which they have confirmed or recommended for confirmation the several claims, it is not deemed necessary, nor has it been usual, in submitting such reports to Congress, to make any comments on the particular claims recommended for confirmation.

"Volume No. 5 is a supplemental report of the commissioners appointed under the act of May 11, 1820. It contains the decisions on twenty-five claims, six of which have been rejected, and the residue recommended for confirmation by the commissioners, principally on considerations of equity, and will require the sanction of Congress.

"The volumes Nos. 1, 3, 6, 7, 8, and 9 contain the reports of Messrs. Woodbury, Kearsley, and Biddle, the commissioners appointed to carry into effect 'An act to revive and continue in force certain acts for the adjustment of land claims in the Territory of Michigan,' passed February 21, 1823. Those numbered 1, 6, 7, and 8 embrace the proceedings of the commissioners in relation to claims filed with them under the provisions of the 5th section of the act above referred to. It seems doubtful whether or not it was the intention of Congress that the proceedings of the commissioners, under this particular section of the law, should be submitted for their approbation; but, as the commissioners themselves have assumed the principle that their decisions, under this clause of the law, were subject to a revising power, and as many of the decisions are liable to objections, which make it extremely doubtful whether the executive government ought to carry them into effect, it was therefore deemed advisable to submit the whole subject to Congress, and withhold the issuing of patents until the decision of the commissioners was approved of by that body. The objections to the proceedings of the commissioners above alluded to are:

"1st. The fifth section of the act of February 21, 1823, seems to require the establishment of two facts to entitle the claimant or his representative to a confirmation of his claim: the one, that he should have occupied the land claimed on July 1, 1812; the other, that he should have continued to submit to the authority of the United States; and it is believed that it was as necessary for the claimant to establish the one as the other of these facts by positive evidence to entitle him to a confirmation. It will, however, be seen, from an inspection of the reports and proceedings of the commissioners, that evidence was required by them only as to the fact of occupancy on July 1, 1812, and that the other fact, of continued submission to the authority of the United States was assumed by them, unless there were positive evidence to the contrary adduced by third persons; and it will also appear that claims were confirmed in cases where information was given to the commissioners by the most respectable characters that there was good ground for belief that the parties claiming had borne arms against the United States during the late war. The paper herewith transmitted, marked A, affords positive evidence furnished to this office that claims have been confirmed to persons who took an active part against the United States in the late war.

"2d. The claims confirmed by the commissioners, as reported in volume No. 7, cover the lands reserved for public purposes at the Sault de Ste. Marie. The relinquishment of the Indian title to a small tract of land at this position was obtained, as will appear from the extract of a letter addressed by the Secretary of War to Governor Cass, accompanying this report, and marked B, for military purposes; and as it had been the practice of Congress, in confirming claims to land in the Michigan Territory, to reserve all lands required or occupied for public purposes, it was deemed advisable, as soon as the facts were known to this office, to address a letter to the commissioners, recommending that they should abstain from confirming claims within the tract of land ceded at the Sault de Ste. Marie, and that they should make a special report in relation to the claims lying within the same. The reasons for declining to pursue the course recommended are assigned by the commissioners in their report, and in the letter addressed to the Commissioner of the General Land Office by Mr. Woodbridge, hereunto annexed, and marked C.

"3d. The commissioners have, in some few cases, confirmed to the representatives of claimants more lands than the original claimants would have been entitled to under the proviso of the fifth section of the act of February 21, 1823.

"Volume No. 3 contains the report of the commissioners relative to the claims confirmed and recommended for confirmation as 'second concessions,' under the provisions of the second section of the act of February 21, 1823. The commissioners, as will appear from their report attached to this volume, having assumed and acted upon the same principles which influenced the former board in deciding on similar claims, the remarks made in this report in relation to the decisions reported in volume No. 2 are also applicable to those contained in volume No. 3, and make it necessary to submit them for the approval of Congress.

"Volume No. 9 is a supplemental report of the commissioners, containing decisions in relation, principally, to second concessions, most of which are recommended for confirmation on principles of equity, and therefore require the sanction of Congress.

"It may be proper to state that a grant from the King of France for the lands at the Sault de Ste. Marie was presented to this office with the view to prevent the issuing of patents for those lands; but the reports of the commissioners having been previously transmitted to Congress, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands, the person presenting the grant was recommended to deposit it with the chairman of that committee.

"All which is respectfully submitted.

"GEORGE GRAHAM.

"Hon. RICHARD RUSH, Secretary of the Treasury."

Considering the foregoing facts, the Committee on Public Lands are of opinion that no general law, confirming the reports of the commissioners appointed to examine titles and claims to lands in the Territory of Michigan, ought to be passed. No such law can at present be passed without seriously jeopardizing the interests of the United States.

It is, however, matter of no small interest to the claimants, as well as to the government, that private titles and claims to lands should be definitively settled, that the rights of individuals, as well as those of the United States, may be settled and known.

To effect this desirable object, the committee propose to vest in the Secretary of the Treasury a general discretion, to be guided and controlled by the provisions of the several laws heretofore passed for the appointment of commissioners and the adjustment of titles and claims to lands in the Territory of Michigan, in the exercise of which he shall be empowered by law to confirm such and so many of the claims reported for confirmation by said commissioners as to him shall appear just and proper, having regard to the existing legal provisions on that subject.

The committee, therefore, report a bill in accordance with these views.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 11, 1826.

SIR: In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives of January 27, 1825, discharging the Committee on Public Lands from the further consideration of the reports of the commissioners appointed to examine titles and claims to lands in the Territory of Michigan, and directing that they be referred to the Secretary of the Treasury for his report on the same, to be made at the present session of Congress, I have now the honor to transmit a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office in relation to the reports in question, together with the documents marked A, B, and C, to which it refers.

I have the honor to remain, with the highest respect, your obedient servant,

RICHARD RUSH.

Hon. the SPEAKER of the House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 19, 1826.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith copies of some affidavits and certificates in relation to the claims at the Sault de Ste. Marie, which have been received since the reports of the commissioners at Detroit have been submitted to Congress.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

DETROIT, December 23, 1824.

SIR: The accompanying affidavit was transmitted to me recently from Mackinac. I felt somewhat at a loss to know what disposition to make of it. More than a year has now elapsed since the business of the commissioners of private land claims was closed agreeably to law; and it certainly appears doubtful whether, in justice to claimants, testimony impugning their rights under the law should now be received. The affidavit is obviously made as a retaliation for similar testimony given against the deponent in relation to a claim preferred by him and rejected by the board of commissioners.

I beg you to make such disposition of the papers as may be proper.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Hon. GEORGE GRAHAM, Commissioner General Land Office.

TERRITORY OF MICHIGAN, County of Michilimackinac:

Personally appeared before me, the subscriber, one of the justices of the peace for the county aforesaid, Samuel C. Lasley, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that on the morning previous to the surrender of Fort Mackinac to the British, in the month of July, 1812, Michael Dousman had his canoe put into the waters at Mackinac for the purpose of going to the British fort of St. Joseph's, as this deponent understood; that it remained there until the sun was but two or three hours high in the evening, when the said Michael Dousman embarked on board, and this deponent saw no more of him till the next morning, when he returned into the village of Mackinac, and went round among the inhabitants, and ordering them to go, with their families, to a place called the distillery for protection, as there was a British guard placed there for that purpose.

That this deponent, upon receiving from said Dousman the intelligence that a large force of British and Indians was at hand for the purpose of capturing the fort, proposed to several persons standing by, to wit, Rufus S. Reed, Daniel Dobbins, and Samuel Abbott, with several others not now recollected, to go up to the fort, and to hold it or to die in the attempt; Dousman observed, and said, "by God, you will die then, and cause every man, woman, and child, to be massacred;" and immediately went on his route to the British troops, who were, at that time, coming up in the rear of Fort Mackinac; and that he came in with the flag of truce that demanded the surrender of the fort.

The next day after the surrender, Michael Dousman went, in company with the British commandant, to the custom-house in Michilimackinac, and demanded and received of Samuel Abbott, esq, collector, a bale of goods as his property, which had been seized and condemned as being smuggled into the United States within the district of Michilimackinac. A very short time after the surrender of Fort Mackinac, this deponent believes within six days, an appointment was made out by the British commanding officer, under the King's great seal, or a large seal used for that purpose, for Michael Dousman, as highroad master, or supervisor of highways; which was put upon the church door, and remained there during the war, and was only taken down the day or day before the American troops arrived at Michilimackinac to receive the fort from the British, in the year 1815; and that the said Dousman did, and continued to do, the duties of that office during that period. This deponent further saith that, at a council held with all the Indians present at Michilimackinac within a short time, and not more than ten days after the surrender of Fort Mackinac to the British in 1812, the British commanding officer took Michael Dousman by the hand and presented him to the Indians, saying, "this is one of our friends—one that is like ourselves." This deponent further saith that Michael Dousman's house was the recruiting rendezvous, and that the British flag was frequently and usually flying there; and that one day, while the said Dousman and this deponent were conversing together in the street, a British corporal came up and told Dousman that he wanted him to go home to his house. Dousman asked him what he wanted of him? The corporal told him he wanted him to pay four recruits their bounty, and that Dousman immediately went away with the corporal. This deponent further saith that Michael Dousman, in another conversation with this deponent, during the time of the late war, and while the British were recruiting at his house as aforesaid, told him that he believed that he could obtain a captain's commission in the British service as a reward for recruiting a certain number of soldiers; and that he had loaned to the British a sum of money for the purpose of enlisting men.

This deponent further deposeth and saith that in 1813 this deponent was a prisoner at Malden, and that news arrived there of the capture of the British fleet on Lake Ontario (Erie) by Commodore Perry; that a general confusion immediately ensued, and most people were endeavoring to escape from them as soon as possible; that this deponent made his escape during the confusion, but was taken and brought before General Proctor, who asked this deponent what he meant by endeavoring to escape, as Colonel Dixon was his security that he should not leave Malden without General Proctor's leave? Deponent told General Proctor that he was afraid of the Indians; deponent was then ordered away, under guard, where he remained for the night; in the morning he was brought before General Proctor again, who asked him where he was going when he attempted to escape? Deponent told him he was going to his family. The General asked him where his family was? Deponent told him at Mackinac. The General then asked this deponent if he permitted him to return to Mackinac, if he would carry a letter for him there? Deponent answered that he would. General Proctor then wrote a short letter, directed to the commanding officer at Mackinac, and observed, holding the letter in his hand, "I will read it to you;" the contents of which were substantially, as follows: "Our fleet on Lake Erie, I believe, is lost. If you have not sufficient force and provisions to maintain your post, you will evacuate it immediately, and proceed to York."

This deponent further saith that he proceeded, with some Indians, immediately to Mackinac, and, upon his arrival, delivered the letter to the commanding officer, who, immediately thereafter, took means to ascertain what quantity of provisions was on hand; and it was found that the amount was very small, and totally inadequate to the purposes of sustaining a siege; that application was made to Mr. Crawford and to Michael Dousman to know what provisions they could furnish, and that it was concluded between the two that they could furnish provisions for sometime; and that Dousman told the commanding officer, in the presence of this deponent and Crawford, that, over and above the provisions he had agreed to furnish to him, he had horses that he would turn in for food for the Indians, should they be wanting, and, by that means, save other provisions; and that he had poultry that he would turn in for the sustenance of the garrison; and further said, "we can keep the garrison yet." And further this deponent saith not.

SAMUEL N. LASLEY.

FORT BRADY, Sault de Ste. Marie, October 15, 1825.

SIR: I enclose herewith an affidavit touching the conduct of all of the original claimants to lands near this post. May I trouble you to inform me whether three affidavits respecting Johnston and Drew, enclosed by me to the honorable Secretary of War, have been received at your office? My communication covering these affidavits was addressed to the honorable the Secretary on the 8th of August last. Should the communication have failed, through any irregularity of the mail, I can probably obtain other depositions in lieu thereof.

GEO. GRAHAM, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office.

Personally appeared before me, at the Sault de Ste. Marie, this 15th day of October, 1825, Francis Dufault, and made oath to the following as being correct and true, to the best of his recollection, viz:

I resided at the Sault de Ste. Marie, Michigan Territory, at the commencement of the war between the United States and Great Britain in 1812, and went with Mr. Ermatinger's company to the attack on Mackinac, in the summer of 1812. Mr. John Johnston, now a resident at the Sault de Ste. Marie, went also, in command of a company in the British service, at the taking of Mackinac. One of the Sayres (Edward) belonged to Captain Johnston's company, and was also there. I do not know whether the Cadots were at the taking of Mackinac, but I believe they were. Francis Noland was in Captain Johnston's company, and Augustin Noland was in Mr. Ermatinger's company, at the same time and place. Francis Gurley, his father and brother, also served in the British ranks at the same time and place in Mr. Ermatinger's company. Mr. Lalancette was at Mackinac during the war, and served in the British ranks. Mr. St. Germain also served on British pay at Mackinac during the war.

Extract of a letter from the Secretary of War to Governor Cass, dated April 5, 1820.

"In relation to procuring cessions of land from the Indians, the government has decided that it would be inexpedient to obtain any further extinguishment of Indian title, except at the Sault of St. Mary's, where it is the wish of the department that an inconsiderable cession, not exceeding ten miles square, (unless strong reasons for a greater cession should present themselves from an actual inspection of the country,) should be acquired upon the most reasonable terms, so as to comprehend the proposed military position there.

"Herewith you will receive a plat of the country about the Sault of St. Mary's, on which is indicated the military site intended to be occupied for the purposes of defence. You will also procure the cession of the islands containing plaster, provided these islands are clearly within the boundary of the United States, and can be obtained without any considerable expense. A commission authorizing you to hold these treaties will be forwarded in a few days. The reason, in part, for the decision not to procure other cessions is the dissatisfaction manifested in Congress at a too rapid extinguishment of Indian title. By extinguishing at remote points this dissatisfaction will probably be increased, and may tend to prevent our obtaining other cessions at more important points.

"As it is desirable to know by what title the people at Green Bay and Prairie du Chien hold their land, and whether or no the Indian title to those lands was extinguished by the French, or at any period subsequent to their possession of the country, which is the impression of this department, you will communicate such information as you possess, or may obtain during your tour, on this subject."

Copy of a letter from the Secretary of War to Governor Cass, dated April 10, 1820.

SIR: Since writing my letter of the 5th instant, I am informed by Lieutenant Colonel Gratiot that the good lands on the south of Sault St. Mary's do not extend back more than two or three miles from the river. This being the fact, the extinguishment proposed should extend along the strait above and below the falls, and running back only two or three miles, so as to comprise the quantity of land required.

I have the honor, &c., &c.,

J. C. CALHOUN.

PHILADELPHIA, January 21, 1823.

SIR: Accompanying this you will receive a communication from Mr. Woodbridge, drawn up for our joint signatures as commissioners on private land claims, under an act of the last session of Congress. As this paper contains some matter which appears to me extraneous to the subject of it, I have preferred to express, generally, my concurrence in the remarks and statements of Mr. W. to adding my name to the paper.

Acting immediately under a law whose provisions we were under oath to carry into effect, it appeared obvious that we could not be governed by any suggestions, from whatever source they might proceed, in the discharge of our duties.

We were invested with no discretionary power by the law in cases where the public interest might be involved. It was therefore presumed that provision could be made for such cases as had been before done when the proceedings of the commissioners were acted upon by Congress.

Very respectfully, you obedient servant, JOHN BIDDLE.

Hon. GEORGE GRAHAM, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

DETROIT, November 20, 1823.

SIR: We were honored by your favor of the 9th ultimo in due course. The intrinsic importance of the subject-matter of it had arrested our serious notice before we received it and our deliberate decision had been made.

The consideration due to official standing, however, as well as a feeling of great personal respect for yourself, sir, induced us, while it was yet time, to reconsider the grounds of the decisions we had made, but we could not feel satisfied to give a different character to them.

None of us doubted but that it was competent to act upon the claims preferred from the Sault de Ste. Marie. They all related to lands in the county of Michilimackinac, and came, therefore, within the scope of the 5th section of the act of Congress you quote. They relate to lands which were also within the land district of Detroit, and of which the Indian title, we have no doubt, was extinguished more than a century ago by the French; for it is matter of history that in the most ancient times that people had missionary, commercial, and military establishments there.

And although it should not appear, by the records of the General Land Office, that any of the claimants whose rights are objected against had founded their claims upon ancient French or British grants, yet, to us, who are acquainted with the habitual carelessness of the Canadians in matters of land title, this circumstance induces no feeling of surprise. It is recollected, however, that some of them were urged before a former board, in virtue of the provisions of the second section of the act of March 3, 1807; and, with due deference, we think they ought then to have been confirmed.

We have examined with some care the act of the last session, and we cannot perceive any such provision or limitation of our powers as you allude to, concerning reservations of land for military purposes. Our duties we consider to be co-extensive with our powers in this respect, and, consequently, we could not have felt ourselves justified in withholding our decisions of confirmation in those cases in which we have affirmed claims, even if testimony had been exhibited of any reservation, especially as none such could have been shown as would have brought the claimants within the restrictive provisions of the second section of the act of March 3, 1807; the whole of which act, among others, we consider to have been revived, and brought down to the time of our decisions, in full force.

The provisions of the third section of the act of last session we consider to be entirely retroactive in their operation, and refer, geographically, to certain claims heretofore confirmed at Prairie des Chiens and Green Bay.

In regard to the matter contained in the representations of military gentlemen at the Sault de Ste. Marie, we beg leave to observe that we have heard, prior to the receipt of your favor, that between Judge Doty, Mr. Schoolcraft, and the principal part of the inhabitants of the Sault, on the one part, and the military gentlemen located there, on the other, a spirit of contention had infused itself. On both sides we consider those gentlemen to be worthy of respect. Judge Doty has been recently honored by one of the highest marks of confidence which the general government could have exhibited in favor of his integrity. Mr. Schoolcraft possesses a character of extended celebrity; and we do not hesitate to say that it would have required testimony, strong and unequivocal, to have persuaded us that any claim, prima facie good, which they might have urged, was either fraudulent or wholly unfounded. We were, however, relieved from the necessity of deciding between these gentlemen, because of the total absence of all testimony in support of the representations of the officers, which you have done us the honor to forward to us; and we could not assume as the basis of any decision the naked representations of gentlemen, unaccompanied by oath, however they may have been uninfluenced on either side by feelings of personal disagreement, personal interest, or by that powerful moral engine, the esprit du corps. As there existed among the commissioners some difference of opinion touching the Sault of St. Marie claims, on points which we will take the liberty to advert to below, we felt, before the receipt of your communication, the propriety of acting with guarded caution; and, the better to secure ourselves against any misconstruction of the law, we consulted the district attorney in the matter, and had the satisfaction to find that, in all material points, he coincided in opinion with the views a majority of us had taken. He filed, it is true, his caveat in one or two cases against the emanation of patents, but this course was taken by him, not because, in his opinion, it should have effect in our decisions, but that the whole matter might be more amply submitted to the revising power, where alone, if anywhere, the power exists, it is believed, to give effect, without purchase, to the wishes of the military.

And now, sir, we proceed, availing ourselves of the occasion, to explain the principles upon which a majority of the commissioners acted, so far as their decisions involved a difference of opinion among the members of the board.

Our much respected associate, Major Hearsley, had spread, in the shape of a protest, his view of the matter upon the records of our proceedings; it will, beyond doubt, arrest the serious attention of the revising power. The first reason of exception to our decision is "that no positive testimony has been exhibited showing that the claimants have submitted to the authority of the United States, except in the case of Madame Cadotte."

We have at no time lost sight of the provision of the law which is here alluded to; and if, therefore, evidence had been adduced of the conviction of any of the claimants of treason or of a breach of the revenue laws, or of any other law of the United States, we should have rejected his claim; or if any facts had been shown upon which to found a reasonable presumption of guilt, we might, in such case, also have refused the claim. But in the absence of positive evidence of guilt, were we to presume it? Would it have been consistent with the fundamental principles of law that we should have presumed every person guilty until, by positive testimony, his innocence, not of a particular crime charged, but of all possible charges, is established? Would a principle of that kind have been recognized, especially by an American politician? From the very nature of the requisition it does not seem susceptible of positive proof, but, in the absence of formal accusation, must be left to that universally admitted and benign presumption of the law itself, that every man is innocent.

But it is said to be matter of notoriety "that all or most of the inhabitants, in 1812, 1813, &c., of that district of country were subjects of Great Britain, and most probably did bear arms against the United States." How far it might have been competent to have predicated our decisions on this point of general refutation, in the absence of other proof, would have been matter for serious consideration, if such general refutation had existed. But we are constrained to say that it is not only true that such general refutation was not shown to us officially, but that we, who have been many years in this country, never, as individuals, have possessed any knowledge of such an allegation; nor, in a matter so interesting to the parties implicated, can we feel justified, without proof, in assuming it for true. We admit that there is much force in the observations prefixed to the second reason assigned in the protest. Their object is to show the general spirit of the several acts of Congress, in virtue of which donations of land or confirmations of title are provided for. But when it is stated that the original occupants were all British subjects, a proposition is advanced which we do not understand, and of which no proof is adduced. If it be meant that those who were in the occupancy of the lands in question in 1812 were British subjects, then we must unequivocally dissent from the proposition. We cannot but believe, especially, that all who were born within the limits of the United States were, and continue to be, citizens of the United States, unless, indeed, any of them, under color of a provision in Jay's treaty, should have made and duly signified his election to become a British subject, of which, however, not a case is surmised.

Neither has there been adduced any proof that these persons are, or ever were, engaged in the northwest fur trade; or that, in 1802, they removed to the British side of the straits.

In regard to the averments of the third exception taken, we consider them obnoxious to the same general strictures. They are presented to our view not only unsupported by proof, and unsupported by any knowledge of our own, but some of them imply motives on the part of claimants so unaccountable and so base—a degree of depravity so revolting, that it is impossible for us to consider them to be well-founded until their truth shall be shown by clear testimony.

With respect to the matter contained in the fourth exception taken, we beg leave to observe that those are most capable of appreciating it justly who are most conversant with the character of the ancient population of this country. Docile and placid in their tempers, intelligent in all matters with which they are conversant, they are, nevertheless, profoundly ignorant in all subjects which regard political or private right. Their carelessness of their land titles is, and for many years has been, proverbial. If the peculiar characteristic of this people be taken into account, no conclusion adverse to their claims can be fairly deduced from their having hitherto neglected to enforce them.

As to any other material allegations set out in this fourth exception, we aver our total ignorance of them.

But while we withhold our assent from them, we cannot avoid remarking the apparent incongruity of supposing that in 1812 the number of fixed inhabitants at the Sault was sufficient to constitute a company of militia; that now the inhabitants are equally numerous; but that three years ago no more than one dwelling or family could be discovered there.

For the rest, we most cordially unite with our much esteemed and highly respected colleague in the expression of our regret that no provision was contained in the last act of Congress authorizing the appointment of an agent with power to investigate the character of these claims on the spot, and to take down testimony concerning all matters connected with them.

We have the honor to remain, sir, your obedient servants,

WILLIAM WOODBRIDGE, Secretary of Michigan,
Commissioner of Public Land Titles, Detroit.

GEORGE GRAHAM, Esq, Commissioner of the General Land Office, Washington.

TERRITORY OF MICHIGAN, County of Brown, ss:

Be it remembered that on the seventeenth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-three, before me, Robert Irwin, jr., one of the justices of the peace within and for the county aforesaid, personally came and appeared John Baptiste Jourvine, of said county, who, being sworn in due form, deposeth and saith that fourteen or fifteen years since Joseph Roi told him that he had surrendered all his property, real and personal, to Alexis Gardapier, his son-in-law, by the said Gardapier agreeing to support him and his wife during their natural lives; that at that period the said Roi did live with the said Gardapier, and has ever since continued, and does at this time live at the cost of the said Gardapier. Embraced in the above-mentioned assignment was a certain tract of land, about three arpents in width, situated on the west bank of Fox river, and lying between a lot confirmed to Jaques Porlier on the north, number one, and on the south by a tract, number two, claimed by Louis Grignon; the said parcel of land is more particularly known as being a vacant strip of land on the plat projected by the commissioners on the first examination of the claims at Green Bay. The deponent further states that he has certain knowledge of the said Alexis Gardapier having occupied and cultivated the said tract of land in eighteen hundred and eleven, as a meadow, as he, the deponent, mowed for him on said land; and that it is a fact notorious among the inhabitants of the Bay that the said Gardapier did claim the land, and has never understood any other persons to have made a claim of it since Roi transferred it to him, the said Gardapier; and further, that the said Gardapier did remain neutral during the late war between the United States and Great Britain.

About one year subsequent to said marriage Alexis Gardapier had surrendered to him all the property, real and personal, which the said Joseph Roi was possessed of, in consideration for the said Gardapier having received and agreeing to support the said Joseph Roi and his wife while they lived; and that the said Alexis Gardapier has supported the said Joseph Roi and his wife ever since that period, and does at this time support them; and further, the deponent saith that the said Joseph Roi did say to him, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ten, that he had voluntarily surrendered to his son-in-law, Alexis Gardapier, all his property that he was possessed of, and, in said grant, a certain tract lying on the west bank of Fox river, and more known as a vacant strip of land situated and lying between a tract numbered one, on the north, confirmed to Jaques Porlier, and tract number two, on the south, confirmed to Louis Grignon; and further, that he has certain and personal knowledge of the said Alexis Gardapier having cultivated the said tract as a meadow from the year one thousand eight hundred and eleven until the year one thousand eight hundred and seventeen, when he was compelled to relinquish it to the United States troops; and further, that in the spring of eighteen hundred and twenty-one, when Judge Lee was collecting testimony relative to the claims at this place, the deponent heard Judge Porlier propose to Joseph Roi to have the before-mentioned tract measured and sell him his right; and that the said Joseph Roi positively refused, and alleged as a reason that he had disposed of it to Alexis Gardapier; and further, that the said Alexis Gardapier did remain neutral during the late war between the United States and Great Britain.

Personally appeared before me, John Dousman, a justice of the peace in and for the said county, Michael Dousman, of lawful age, who, being duly sworn, doth depose and say that in the month of September, in the year 1822, he, this deponent, was at Green Bay, in said Territory, at which time he saw in possession of Major Brevoort a plat of survey, made by Mr. Lee, of the land claims at said Green Bay, and on said plat of survey saw that a lot of land which lies at said place last mentioned, which is bounded on the upper side by land claimed by one Derocher, and on the lower side by land claimed by this deponent, (which said lot is claimed by Francis Laventure,) had been entered on said survey in the name of Louis Beaupraix; and further, that afterwards the said Louis Beaupraix, in a conversation which he, this deponent, had with the said Lewis, told this deponent that he, said Louis, had no claim whatever to said lot of land above mentioned; that the same had been sold by him, the said Louis, to the said Laventure for a valuable consideration sometime previous thereto; that he had received of him, the said Laventure, nearly all the purchase money for said land, and that the same ought to have been entered on the said survey in the name of said Francis Laventure. And further this deponent saith not.

Report concerning the second concessions under the act of May 11, 1820.

The undersigned have the honor to transmit an abstract of their decisions upon claims for back concessions upon the straits of Detroit.

A reference to the map which the board have caused to be made, and upon which the claims for second concessions have been protracted, will exhibit sufficiently, perhaps, the nature, location, and extent of the tracts confirmed. These will appear in many instances to be of very irregular shape, and in some to be even in detached parts. Some explanation of this circumstance may be deemed requisite.

The shore of the river Detroit, like that of most rivers, presents an extremely irregular front—in some places jutting in advancing points, in others marked by varied indents more or less deep. The fronts of the old farms appear to have been immemorially defined with sufficient precision, while the lateral lines have, from times equally ancient perhaps, been occasionally subjects of uncertainty and dispute. The rear lines have seldom been marked by any established boundary.

The decisions of land boards, constituted prior to 1820, confirming these old farms, described them, necessarily, perhaps, as bounding one upon the other, without prescribing either course or distance; and thus indefinite they were put into the hands of the appointed surveyor.

To have run the lateral lines of these farms at right angles with a line which should have corresponded with the general course of the river would doubtless have rendered more general satisfaction, and more universally have insured justice; yet even upon such plan difficulties would have been found, but no fixed rule seems to have been pursued. Mr. Greely, the surveyor appointed, was a man of general talents, and of much skill in his profession; but his surveys caused, in many instances, bitter dissatisfaction, and there can be no doubt that frequent injustice was done. It often occurred that without any cause founded in the particular justice of the case, or in the ascertainment of fixed lateral boundaries, the oblique lateral lines of one man's farm (giving him the whole quantity in which he may have been confirmed) were so run as to diminish perhaps one-half the contents of a half a dozen equally meritorious and confirmed claims in the neighborhood: nevertheless, these surveys, as made by Mr. Greely, were afterwards qualifiedly established by Congress, (see vol. 4, p. 412, U. S. L.) The soundest principles of policy may, perhaps, have required it; and perhaps, too, it might have been because the interests of this Territory were not, in anywise at the time, represented in Congress, and cases of individual hardship, resulting from the manner of the surveys, unknown and unthought of at Washington.

Notwithstanding the establishment of these surveys, it is not denied but that considerations alluded to had weight with the commissioners. Further confirmations were made, and second concessions were allowed of larger extent in some cases than if such injustice had not been done. It was next considered important to combine with the rendition of private justice to individuals the public object of giving to the rear line of the second concessions a course as uniform and as direct as might be. Had the rear of the second concessions been, in every case, at the precise distance of eighty arpents from the front, it would have exhibited a boundary to the public lands far more irregular than a line exactly parallel with the intended shore of the river would have done; because the lateral or long lines run by Greely were not parallel with each other, and often made acute or obtuse angles with the shore. To establish, then, a rear line more corresponding with the general course of the river, more nearly approaching a straight line, would enable the commissioners to render more perfect justice to individuals, while at the same time it made incomparably fewer unsalable fractions of public lands. It rendered the boundaries of private right more certainly ascertainable at any distance of time, and established a more advantageous, seemly, and convenient boundary for the public domain. That course was therefore pursued; and in order to leave less to the hazard of accident, or to the possible caprice of surveyors, the board solicited the surveyor general to depute some suitable person to run the lines, while the commissioners should still retain some control of the subject; and feeling confident that by such means they had better combined the attainment of individual justice with a considerable public benefit, they have not ceased to flatter themselves with the hope that both the motives and the results of their proceedings in this particular will receive the approbation of the government.

A detailed inspection of the commissioners will exhibit some uncertainty in the indemnification of the persons entitled to second concessions. Relatively to that matter, the undersigned beg leave to remark that, in the transfers which have been made of old French farms upon the Detroit since the emanation of patents, it has rarely occurred that any specific provision has been made for the eventual acquisition of the second concessions.

Among a people too much accustomed to consider pedal possession as the best, if not the only, evidence of right, it might have been expected that no provision should be made for contingent prolongations of their farms. Few, indeed, were those cases where such transfers have been made, in which a regular claim of title was exhibited for the front. Little difficulty was felt as to the propriety of confirming to the bona fide proprietor of the front, where he could be identified, the right to the second concession. These concessions were granted by Congress, it is presumed, because an inchoate claim had always before been set up for them by the owners of the front, because they were considered, and justly, to be necessary to the proper enjoyment and cultivation of the fronts, for the fronts of forty arpents had, in general, many years ago, been entirely stripped of wood and timber trees; the right to the rear was therefore considered by the commissioners as incident to the property of the front, and it has uniformly been accorded to the owner of the entire front farm, where he could be identified, unless when, in sales of the front, the right to the second concession was expressly retained. But seeing the difficulty of ascertaining the real and bona fide ownership of the fronts, it has been resolved to insert in the body of many of the specific decisions a clause purporting that the claimant should hold for the use of the bona fide owner of the front farm; and, lest injustice should be done by some casual omission of the clause, the undersigned explicitly declare that, throughout all their decisions, it has been uniformly intended that all their grants or confirmations should be understood as containing a reservation of all equitable rights in favor of all persons having any bona fide interest in all or any of the subjects of grant or confirmation acted upon by the commissioners.

It may be proper also to submit, that some difficulty was experienced in determining to what geographical point the principle of the second concessions should be extended. There are not wanting strong reasons to conclude that the whole extent of the water-course connecting Lakes Erie and Huron was anciently called by the French the "Detroit." Lake St. Clair, which intervenes, is small and shallow; it is but a circumscribed expansion of the connecting waters. It may be further remarked, that whatever reasons influence the government to grant the right to second concessions to the farms below that lake seem to apply with almost equal force to those on its borders. The commissioners devoted some consideration to this topic, but finally concluded to receive only such applications for the second concessions as were below Wind Mill Point, so called; for, although the "river Detroit" might with equal propriety be considered to extend further up, yet in most modern maps, and especially at the office of the surveyor general, the water-course seems there to lose its name, and to become designated by the name of "Lake St. Clair." Although the conclusion of the commissioners in this respect was rather reluctantly adopted, yet it was attended by the satisfactory reflection that if, in the opinion of the government, expediency and equal justice required it, the principle could, with but little inconvenience, be extended.

Some difference of opinion existed among the commissioners upon the question whether the principle of second concessions should apply to islands. Such claims so circumstanced as were presented the board were enabled, however, to decide upon other grounds, and without necessarily involving a decision of that question.

A different question arose, which it became necessary to decide. It was, whether, in order to accord a second concession, it was competent to pass a navigable water. The river Rouge, which empties into the Detroit a short distance below the city, is navigable for sloops and small vessels some miles up from its mouth; it puts into the river Detroit obliquely. A second concession was claimed by the proprietors, of about five hundred acres, upon a peninsula below its junction with the straits, and although serious doubts were entertained on the point, yet a majority of the board were of the opinion that the claim was sustainable, and the concession was granted.

Although, in the prosecution of their labors on this branch of their duties, many difficulties were presented and doubts were entertained, yet it is not recollected that any other than those alluded to occurred of sufficient magnitude to render it indispensable that they should be specifically submitted to the government in this general view which the commissioners have the honor to present.

All which is very respectfully, and with deference, submitted.

WILLIAM WOODBRIDGE,
J. KEARSLEY,
Commissioners.

No. 1.

To the commissioners for ascertaining and deciding upon private claims to lands in the district of Detroit:

As the remote assignee of John, William, and David Macomb, I hereby give notice that I make claim to a donation of land situate within this district, containing one hundred and fifty acres, bounded and described as set forth in the evidence of title herewith submitted.

Respectfully,

JONATHAN KEARSLEY.

DETROIT, September 30, 1823.

To William Woodbridge, esq., one of the commissioners for adjusting private land claims in the district of Detroit:

SIR: Placed in a situation of peculiar delicacy, I am obliged to submit for your consideration all the title papers upon which my claim to a certain tract of land on Grosse Isle is predicated, trusting that such course may be taken as will secure to me the lands claimed, viz: 150 acres of land adjacent to that purchased by me.

It will be perceived that in August last I purchased a certain tract of land on the eastern border of Grosse Isle; that I derive title from Mrs. Sarah Macomb, executrix of the estate of William Macomb, deceased; and as all the lands not heretofore confirmed by a former land board have been confirmed by that board of which you and I had the honor to be members to Mrs. Sarah Macomb, as executrix in trust for the use of the children and legal representatives of said William Macomb, deceased; and as those decisions were made at a time prior to my having any interest in said lands, my object now is, sir, to obtain, in my own right, as a legal representative, such quantity of said lands as may be thought just and equitable, in virtue of my said purchase, either as a donation and back concession or otherwise. The original claims as filed, it will be seen, were made long prior to the sale of that land now owned by me. I therefore claim that the benefit of the entry of John A. Rucker, or Mrs. Macomb, or others, through whom I claim title, may, to the extent of 150 acres, be taken and held to enure to my benefit, as in other parallel cases it has been adjudged by the unanimous decision of the board. I therefore submit the case, with the documentary testimony now presented.

J. KEARSLEY.

DETROIT, September 30, 1823.

The tract claimed by Major Jonathan Kearsley is described as follows, viz:

So much of the tract (reported in the abstract of absolute confirmations transmitted, No. 51) as may satisfy the claim of Major Kearsley, to wit, 150 acres, and is bounded as follows: beginning at the south-east corner of the tract designated by this board by No. 51; thence west, by the line of the tract formerly confirmed to John, William, and David Macomb, and on the map of survey of Aaron Greely, esq., by No. 554, to the river Detroit, upon the western border of Grosse Isle; thence along the margin of said river, up stream, such distance as that a line running east or parallel to the first-mentioned line, and thence south, and upon the western line of the section No. 554, (as numbered upon said map of Aaron Greely,) as confirmed to John, William, and David Macomb, to the place of beginning, shall include one hundred and fifty acres.

The case of Major Kearsley presents a difficulty which can hardly be obviated, except by the direct interposition of the Secretary of the Treasury, or of some competent revising power. As a remote assignee of the original confirmees of the several tracts formerly confirmed upon Grosse Isle, he claims the benefit of the second section of the act of April 23, 1812, authorizing the confirmation of claims for donation lots. He adduces a regular and perfect claim of title from the original patentees to himself for one hundred and fifty acres of land upon Grosse Isle, opposite to "Elba," (so called,) being parts of lots designated on Greely's map of the survey of private lands by Nos. 553 and 554. He shows that entries of claim for donation rights were regularly and in due time filed, and claims that said entries may so far enure to his benefit as that he may obtain, in the rear of his land, a tract which shall be, in quantity, proportionate to the contents of his front, to be assigned to him in that tract designated in the report of absolute confirmations by No. 51.

The principles assumed by the board, after due consideration, would justify the enforcement of his claim, if the right to donation lots or second concessions be applicable to an island in the river Detroit. And it is submitted that a literal adherence to the act of April 23, 1812, would, beyond question, comprehend the case of farms upon Grosse Isle; for those farms "border upon and front the Detroit river;" they "do not extend in depth eighty arpents French measure." When this board acted upon the subject, there were vacant lands adjacent to and back of the lands previously confirmed to the original patentees; they were early, and in due time, claimed as second concession and donation lots.

On the general question, it is believed that Commodore Brevoort, while a member of this board, was decidedly of opinion that the provisions of the second section of the act of April 23, 1812, ought to be extended to farms fronting the Detroit river, upon islands in it; but he ceased to be a member of the board, and Major Kearsley had become a proprietor upon Grosse Isle before any decision had been entered specifically upon any of the Grosse Isle claims; and feeling an interest in the question, Major Kearsley declined to act specifically upon it. All, therefore, which it seemed possible to do was to confirm the claims of claimants there generally, without settling, or meaning to settle, specifically the question whether such decisions should be in the character of donation rights, or of confirmations of previous claims founded upon occupancy, improvement, &c., in the hope that the principle which, in such circumstances, the board could not definitively settle, might be considered as reserved to be specifically acted upon and settled by the Secretary of the Treasury or other revising authority. As one of the members of the board, the undersigned has been invariably of the opinion that the only principle upon which the confirmation of lot No. 54, rear of 549, formerly confirmed, at the head of the island, (consisting principally of morass,) and adjoining the lot now owned by Simon Perkins, esq., could have been justified, under the law, upon no other principle than that of the application to such a case of the provisions of the second section of the act of April 23, 1812. The confirmation of lot No. 51, (rear of 553, formerly confirmed,) and adjoining the lands of Major Kearsley, can hardly be justified, in the opinion of the undersigned, on any so strong ground; and the undersigned has felt himself conscientiously justifiable in assuming that as the ground of his individual opinion. Under this combination of circumstances, is it just or wise that Major Kearsley should lose all benefit of the contingent establishment of that principle, because, from the relation in which he stands to the subject, he deemed it indelicate or indecorous in him to act upon the question? Yet by this board no decision can now be made, specifically, upon that point.

If, then, the revising power should deem it proper to act upon the question, and should be of the opinion that the right to donation lots may, according to the provisions of the law, be enforced upon an island in the Detroit river, it is respectfully submitted that there be inserted in the patents which may issue for lots numbered by this board 54 and 51, upon Grosse Isle, a clause by which the patentees shall be deemed to hold the same to and for the benefit of the present bona fide proprietors of the originally confirmed adjoining tracts; to each in proportion to the quantity of land he may hold in such originally confirmed tract, and to his respective interests therein.

Or (if such a course be compatible) that there be patented, direct, to Major Kearsley and to Simon Perkins, and to such others as may appear the bona fide present owners of the tracts originally confirmed, adjacent to said numbers 51 and 54, (as numbered by the present board,) such proportions and quantities thereof as, upon the principles of the law of April 23, 1812, they may respectively claim therein.

LAND OFFICE, November 28, 1818.

On Wednesday, August 3, 1808, the commissioners of the land office at Detroit confirmed to John, William, and David Macomb, the heirs and legal representatives of William Macomb, deceased, lot No. 553, situate, lying, and being on Grosse Isle, on the border of the river Detroit, containig six hundred and forty acres by the return of the surveyor. In pursuance of the act of Congress passed April 22, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I, Sarah Macomb, administratrix and executrix of the last will and testament of William Macomb, deceased, do enter the rear of said farm, so as to extend it to eighty arpents in depth, French measure.

SARAH MACOMB.

[For decision on this claim see report upon absolute claims, (transmitted,) No. 51.]

It will, however, be observed that Major Jonathan Kearsley makes claim to a small part of this tract; and it is designed and intended that the above claim, confirmed in the absolute reports, should be considered as limited by the claim of Major Kearsley, should the revising power sanction the principles contained in the observations of one of the members of this board.

LAND OFFICE, November 28, 1818.

On Wednesday, August 3, 1808, the commissioners of the land office at Detroit confirmed to John, William, and David Macomb, lot No. 554, situate, lying, and being on Grosse Isle, on the border of the Detroit river, containing, by the return of the surveyor, 639 5-10ths acres.

In pursuance, therefore, of the act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I, Sarah Macomb, executrix of the last will and testament of William Macomb, deceased, do enter the land which is vacant, and adjacent to the above granted farm, No. 554, which is only forty-nine arpents, French measure, in depth. The following tract, commencing at the east corner of the tract 554; thence, running west, along said tract, 104 chains to the river Detroit; thence, following said river south, southwestwardly to the place of beginning; containing, by the return of the surveyor, three hundred and sixty-two acres.

Sarah Macomb, executrix to the estate of William Macomb, claim No. 5, rear of No. 549.

On Wednesday, August 3, 1808, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to John, David, and William Macomb, the heirs of William Macomb, deceased, lot No. 549, situate, lying, and being on Grosse Isle, on the border of the river Detroit, containing, by the return of the surveyor, six hundred and forty acres.

In pursuance, therefore, of the act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act of March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I, Sarah Macomb, executrix of the last will and testament of William Macomb, deceased, do enter the vacant land lying and being adjacent to the said tract, which vacant land is bounded as follows: beginning at the northeast border of tract No. 549, where it touches the river Detroit; thence, running on the water's edge, one hundred chains; thence, across the marsh, west, twenty-five chains; thence, along the water's edge, south, till it strikes the northwest corner of tract No. 549; thence, following the bounds of said tract, to the place of beginning; containing five hundred acres.

DETROIT, March 28, 1818.

[For decision on this claim see report upon absolute claims Nos. 54 and 55; also the previous references and remarks. The entire benefit of the above entry is claimed by Simon Perkins as the present bona fide proprietor of the adjoining tract No. 549, he having shown, in due form, the evidences of that ownership, and insisted upon his right in the premises in virtue of the principles established by the board, and the provisions of the second section of the act of April 23, 1812. See observations of one of the members of the board.]

Simon Perkins, assignee of Grosse Isle, claim No. 6.

DETROIT, September 28, 1821.

The claim of Simon Perkins, of Warren, in the State of Ohio, respectfully showeth: That he, the said Simon Perkins, is the proprietor of two certain tracts and parcels of ground on Grosse Isle, (so called,) in the county of Wayne and Territory of Michigan, to wit: sections number one and number three, recently owned by Gideon Lut.

The said claimant is desirous of obtaining, according to the provisions of the laws of the United States in such case made and provided, a confirmation of his title to certain lands lying between the above-mentioned tracts and the river Detroit; which lands, at the time of the original survey, were either covered with water or considered of so little value as that they were omitted in said survey, and, by a recent recession of the waters from said tracts of land, the said land claimed is, in a great measure, cut off from the privilege of said river Detroit, except by crossing said unsurveyed strip of land lying, as aforesaid, between said sections number one and number three. The said claimant, therefore, respectfully submits to the said commissioners his petition in the premises, and prays a confirmation of his title as aforesaid.

SIMON PERKINS,
By his special agent and attorney, J. J. DEMING.

The UNITED STATES LAND COMMISSIONERS sitting to decide upon claims in the district of Detroit.

It is satisfactorily shown to this board that the above-named claimant, Simon Perkins, is the assignee of the above-described tract of land, to which he derives title from John, William, and David Macomb.

[For decision on the claim see report upon absolute claims.]

William Walker, claim No. 7, rear of No. 245.

SIR: In conformity with the law, I apply for the donation tract to those to whom tracts have been confirmed, bordering on the river Detroit. I am, sir, possessed of a tract of six hundred acres, which is on the border of the river Detroit, and runs back only 127 chains 86 links, and beg to be confirmed in a sufficiency to make up 80 arpents, agreeably to law. My tract is numbered 345.

I am, sir, your obedient,

WM. WALKER.

PETER AUDRAIN, Register of the Land Office at Detroit, in the Territory of Michigan.

It appearing, upon examination, that there was confirmed to the above-named claimant, by a former board of commissioners, on October 25, 1809, a tract of land fronting upon Detroit river, containing 600 acres of land, that the same was subsequently surveyed by a duly authorized surveyor thereto appointed, and that the same was by said survey described as follows, to wit: commencing at a post standing on the border of Detroit river, between this tract and unconceded land; thence west, 112 chains 66 links, to a post; thence north, 50 chains, to a post; thence east, 127 chains 86 links, to a post standing on the border of Detroit river, between this tract and unconceded land; thence along the border of said river, down stream, south 8 degrees west, 14 chains; thence south 35 degrees west, 16 chains; thence south 10 degrees west, 23 chains 39 links, to the place of beginning, containing 600 acres, and is numbered on the books and plat of said commissioners No. 345; and it appearing further to the commissioners that said William, in due time, made entry of his said claim according to the provisions of the law, it is therefore considered and decided in the premises that said William do receive a second concession or donation in rear of said farm, which second concession shall consist of an extension of the front farm to a point which shall be 80 arpents from the river Detroit, provided that the northerly lateral boundary line be run in the same course of the upper lateral line of said front farm, and be an extension thereof, and the southerly lateral line be run along the northerly lateral line of a tract No. 335, formerly confirmed to Adam Brown, now the property of Lewis Cass, esq.; and provided, also, that the survey of said second concession be otherwise so made as not to interfere with the lines of any tract heretofore confirmed, or by competent authority sold, to any other person. And the surveyor thereto duly appointed is hereby authorized and required to survey the same accordingly, and a due return and plat thereof to make according to law.

J. B. Lavignac dit Livre, assignee of Jean Bte. Le Beau, claim No. 8, rear of No. 112.

DETROIT, November 28, 1818.

SIR: Please to take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of the following lot, viz: lot No. 112, as numbered on the general plan or map exhibiting the private claims as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend the said lot or farm to eighty arpents in depth; which said lot is on the border of Detroit river.

GEORGE McDOUGALL,
Attorney and Agent for J. B. Lavignac, Assignee of Jean B. Le Beau.

PETER AUDRAIN, Esq.,
Register of the Land Office for the district of Detroit, in the Territory of Michigan.

It is found, on reference to the books of former commissioners in the office, that this front farm, numbered 112, was confirmed to J. B. Le Beau; and it further appears to the commissioners that Jean Baptiste Lavignac dit Livre purports to be the assignee of said Le Beau.

The commissioners, in considering this claim, find that claimant would be entitled to back concession, (fronting, as his farm does, upon the river Detroit,) but it is found that the survey of Aaron Greely does not extend his front farm beyond about twenty arpents; and that, immediately in rear, another confirmed farm intervenes between claimant's farm and the public lands applicable to back concessions.

Under the circumstances of this case, therefore, the board would recommend for confirmation to the said Jean Baptiste Lavignac dit Livre a tract of land of such quantity as to make the said front farm equal in depth to 80 arpents; provided that the same do not exceed one hundred and twenty acres, and that the said claimant be allowed to locate the same upon public lands adjacent to his said front farm not appropriated by any confirmation or recommendation for confirmation by this or any previous board; and saving, moreover, the just and equitable claims of all persons whatsoever in or to the same, by virtue of title or claim in and to the said front farm, and that the rear or second concession may belong to the bona fide proprietor of the above-described front farm.

Jonathan Sheffelin, claim No. 9, rear of No. 212.

DETROIT, November 28, 1818.

SIR: Please take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of the following lot, viz: lot No. 212, as numbered on the general plan or map exhibiting the private claims as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend the said lot or farm to eighty arpents in depth, which said lot is on the border of the river Detroit.

GEORGE McDOUGALL, Agent and Attorney for Jonathan Sheffelin.

The REGISTER of the Land Office for the district of Detroit, in the Territory of Michigan.

Upon examination of the records of the former land board, it appears that claimant is the original confirmee of the front farm above mentioned, and that he is entitled to a second concession. But it also appears that, by the survey and return of Aaron Greely, esq., the public lands adjacent and in rear have been appropriated to other claimants by the said surveyor, and it is known that confirmations, according to said survey, were made by an act of Congress.

The present board can therefore only recommend that such quantity of land be granted to claimant as may make the front farm equal in extent to eighty arpents in depth by its present front, (not exceeding eighty arpents,) to be located upon such of the public lands next adjacent to his front farm as may not be included within the limits of any tract confirmed, or recommended for confirmation, by this or any former board of commissioners.

Pierre Le Blanc, Gabriel Godfroy, and J. B. Bourrassa, claim No. 10, rear of Nos. 83, 92, 85.

NOVEMBER 28, 1818.

Claim No. 83. Pierre Le Blanc, as assignee of Louis Bourrassa.
Claim No. 92. Gabriel Godfroy, administrator of Joseph Bondie, deceased.
Claim No. 85. J. B. Bourrassa.

Please take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 25, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to land in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of the above-numbered lots or farms, as numbered on the general plan or map exhibiting the private claims as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend the said lots or farms to eighty acres or arpents in depth, which said lots are on the border of Detroit river.

GEORGE McDOUGALL, Agent and Attorney for said Claimants.

Caveat against the claim of James May, as assignee of the St. Cosme family, to the second concession of the farms at the river Ecorces, confirmed to J. B. Rousson, heirs of Joseph Bondie and Pierre Le Blanc, filed with the commissioners of the United States land office at Detroit, July 6, 1821.

The undersigned have the honor, at this time, to adduce their proof and vouchers in support of their entry made of the second concession of their farms on the Detroit river, in conformity to their notices filed with the late register of the land office at Detroit, November 30, 1818, to the following lots, to wit:

To lot No. 85, confirmed to J. B. Rousson, 70.68 acres.
To lot No. 92, Gabriel Godfroy, senr., administrator of Joseph Bondie, deceased, 68.33 acres.
To lot No. 83, confirmed to Pierre Le Blanc, assignee of Louis Bourrassa, all on Detroit river.

1st. Reference is hereby made to the respective patents of the President of the United States to the undersigned for the foregoing tracts of land now filed herewith.

2d. To the act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit"

3d That neither James May, nor any of the St. Cosmes, under whom he claims, ever have had (within the memory of the oldest inhabitants of this country) either the possession, occupancy, or improvement of any of the above farms, viz: lots Nos. 85, 92, or 83, or any of the other farms in the settlement on the Detroit river, above or below, or in the vicinity of the river Aux Ecorces, to the whole of which settlement the said James hath, since the year 1796, laid claim under his Indian deed; and that he and Mr. Thomas Smith, who also claims under the said Indian deed within said settlement, failed in attempting by law, under the British Government, as can still be seen and proved by the records now at Sandwich, of a decree of judgment rendered by the Hon. William Dummer Powell, chief judge of said court, in their proceedings against Ignace Tualt dit Duval; also, in another decision of the supreme court of the Northwest Territory, at Marietta, in the case of the farm on the southwest border of the river Aux Ecorces, No. 113, confirmed to Jonathan Scheffelin, which suit was brought and instituted by the said James May as plaintiff, being the only suit which was taken up into the supreme court at Marietta aforesaid, of a dozen instituted by him in 1796 and 1797 against each individual possessor of farms in said settlement, under his said Indian title. All of the settlers, except the owner of No. 113, (if we mistake not,) had to yield to the decisions of the court of common pleas for the county of Wayne, whereof the said James May then was the presiding judge. That an Indian deed, notwithstanding possession, occupancy, and improvement, was more valid than the naked right of the actual settler, his improvements and occupancy; who had, therefore, on being turned out of possession by the acting high sheriff, at the head of a party of men, to agree to purchase and hold under him, the said James May, in 1797, under the operation of fear and terror, of a pretended legal decision of partial and interested judges absolutely, at that time, ignorant of the first principles of law and equity and of the national law, and particularly of the United States government in such case made and provided.

4th. That a purchase thus made by part of the present applicants, under the influence of fear and compulsion, and contrary to the law of the land, cannot give Mr. May the right to the second concession; for, if he has a right thereto, he is equally entitled to the front farms of every settler on river Ecorces, being twelve arpents fronting the Detroit river, on each side of said river Ecorces.

5th. Reference is hereby made to the King of England's proclamation on the subject of purchases by British subjects, and settlements by them on Indian lands, of October, 1763.

6th. That the decision of the former commissioners of the land board against the present claim to the rear of our lots, Nos. 85, 92, and 83, ought to be conclusive against him, for they so decided from their actual personal knowledge of the foregoing facts stated by us. We now file this our caveat against the said James May's pretensions to the rear of our said farms or second concessions, bottomed only on an Indian deed, without any improvement or possession whatsoever.

JEANE BPT. ROUSSON,
GABRIEL GODFROY, SR.,
Administrators of Joseph Bondie, deceased,
PIERRE LE BLANC,
By GEORGE McDOUGALL, their Attorney.

JULY 6, 1821.

Testimony to substantiate the above claims for second concession.

Antoine Robert, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he was living at the river Aux Ecorces in the year 1784, and continued to cultivate and occupy at the river Aux Ecorces until the year 1794, and that he was one of the first inhabitants of said place; and this deponent further states that there was no appearance of any establishments, excepting Indians that had made cornfields; and further, that he has no knowledge of Mr. May, St. Cosmes, or Smith having any possession of any land at the said river Aux Ecorces at that time, nor since.

Thomas Smith, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that all military commandants were civil officers, ex officio, whether so commissioned or not, and decided questions of property, and put citizens into the guard-house who disobeyed their decisions; there were civil magistrates under the commandant who, in all matters of importance, consulted the commandant. The commandant was considered as chief magistrate; and if any debtor attempted to remove from the country, and the creditor made complaint thereof to the said commandant, he refused permission to such debtor to depart until such creditor was satisfied. Alexis Maisonville, on the other side of the river, was one instance of the commandant's sending a party of men and removing him, upon complaint made to such commandant by the Indians that said Maisonville had settled upon certain lands by them claimed, without the permission of said Indians.

Philip Henry Frey subdivided the lands in question at the river Aux Ecorces. The settlers and Madam St. Cosme requested that this deponent should again subdivide them, and he got permission from the commandant so to do.

This deponent does not know that Mr St. Cosme or family, or Judge May, or any person in the capacity of servants or hired men, (unless the tenants who went on these lands under the permission of the St. Cosme family, as all the tenants did, be so considered,) lived or actually occupied or built houses or fences upon the lands in question. Witness does not know that these persons residing on the lands in question ever leased those lands from Judge May or the St. Cosme family; but witness understood that they had purchased from the St. Cosme family, and were to pay for the same.

In answer to questions put by the board—

Answer. The intention of the British government, at the time these claims and similar ones were first preferred, was to confirm all such claims; and upon that principle the said government has always acted, on the other side of the river, towards bona fide claimants.

Louis Bourrassa, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that the farm, No. 85, confirmed to Jean Bpt. Rousson; No. 92, confirmed to Gabriel Godfroy, senr., administrator of Joseph Bondie, deceased; and lot No. 83, confirmed to Pierre Le Blanc, assignee of this deponent, were first settled about thirty-six or thirty-seven years ago; that is to say, the said Rousson and Bondie's farms, by Pierre Mitchel Compau, and that part of my farm which I sold to said Pierre Le Blanc, and which I now possess, I was put in possession of under the British government by Jean Bpt. Salliotte, who also settled the same originally about thirty-six or thirty-seven years ago, no one but Indians being possessors of said farms prior to the first settlement thereof by the said Pierre Mitchel Compau and the said Jean Bpt. Salliotte. This deponent agreed with said James Bondie to pay for the improvements, or for the land, to whomsoever it should belong; and shortly after the Americans took possession of this country James May gained these three farms at law, as Det Eberts informed this deponent in the court-house. Deponent immediately afterwards paid for his said farms about one hundred and eight dollars to the said James May. This did not satisfy Antoine Vermel, who was the tutor of Jean Bpt. Salliotte's children, at river Aux Ecorces. Whereupon this deponent immediately afterwards paid the said Antoine Vermel, in his said capacity of tutor, thirty pounds for the improvements and settlement rights so, as aforesaid, made by the said Jean Bpt. Salliotte in his life, and by the said Vermel afterwards. Madam St. Cosme informed this deponent that Mr. Frey had surveyed these lands, and that he had cut the river Aux Ecorces, and that she had got Mr. Smith to survey them, so as that Mr. Smith should have the fronts on the river Aux Ecorces, between the forks. This deponent went for Mr. Smith, who gave us the proces verbal of said farms. This deponent has no knowledge, and has never heard any one say, that the said James May, or any of the St. Cosmes, under whom he claimed, either by themselves or by their servants, ever have had the possession, occupancy, or improvement of any of the above-described farms now possessed by the said Jean Bpt. Rousson, by the heirs of Joseph Bondie, deceased, or of my said farm, whereof I sold the front on the Detroit river to the said Pierre Le Blanc; nor has this deponent any knowledge of the said James May, or any of the said St. Cosmes aforesaid, ever having the possession, occupancy, or improving the said farms. This deponent says that the St. Cosmes obtained the lands on both sides of the river Aux Ecorces by a deed from the Indians.

Ignace Tualt dit Duval, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that before the year 1796 he was living at the river Aux Ecorces, and that Louis Bourrassa, deceased, John Bpt. Rousson, Pierre Le Blanc, now live on said farms, and that he lived on them before 1796, and have continued the occupation, &c., of said farms to the present time; and this deponent further saith that he has no recollection of Messrs. May, St. Cosmes, and Smith having possession or occupancy of any land on the said river Aux Ecorces before 1796, nor at any other time.

Jean Bpt. Cicot, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith, in answer to Colonel Godfroy's question, that it is more than thirty years since the lands of J. Bpt. Rousson, James Bondie, and James Bourrassa, were first settled. The land of Jean Bpt. Rousson was first settled by Pierre Melchre Compau, who also first settled the Bondie tract; and the land of Bourrassa was first settled by J. Bpt. Salliotte. He has never heard that either Mr. May, or the St. Cosmes, or Thomas Smith, or either of them, or their agents, ever struck a hoe into the ground.

Question by Colonel Larned in behalf of Judge May. Do you know whether the above-named men, or either of them, have ever bought their claims of Judge May?

Answer. I do not know, but have understood that they bought of the St. Cosmes. Witness is very certain that no person had ever actually settled on the lands in question prior to the possession taken by the above-named persons.

Whereupon, at the instance of Colonel McDougall, Dominique Drouillard was then sworn, and, in answer to the question of Colonel McDougall, says that it must be about thirty-seven or thirty-eight years since the lands in question were first taken possession of by white settlers, and none others came on until it was sold out in parts to others; he has no knowledge that Mr. May, the St. Cosmes, or Thomas Smith, or any of them, or any of their agents, did ever, at any time, cultivate or live upon the lands in question

Upon a full view of the matter of these contested claims it appeared to the commissioners, and was by them decided upon the claim of James May, that the claim of said James to the land here specified and claimed as second concession was prior in point of time, and stronger in point of equity, and it was therefore, upon full consideration, confirmed to him. Nevertheless, the commissioners, considering the equity of the pretensions of claimants and general principles of analogy, do respectfully recommend that there be confirmed to said claimants, respectively, tracts of unappropriated lands in the vicinity, equal to the fronts of each respective farm, to be located upon any public lands in the neighborhood heretofore offered for sale and remaining unsold.

Lewis Cass, claim No. 11, rear of No. 45.

SIR: Agreeably to the provisions of the two acts of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and March 3, 1817, as assignee of Daniel Southerland, assignee of Jaques Lasselle and François Lasselle, I enter a tract of land in the rear of and adjacent to the tract on the border of the Detroit river, being numbered 45, confirmed to Jaques Lasselle and François Lasselle; which tract, now entered, is bounded on the northwest by a tract numbered 718, confirmed to ———; on the northeast by a tract numbered 718, confirmed to ———; southwest by three pre-emption rights, numbered 560, 588, and 589; and on the other side by the river Rouge, which runs between it and the tract numbered 45.

LEWIS CASS.

The REGISTER of the United States Land Office of the district of Detroit.

Filed with the register November 30, 1818.

Lewis Cass, esq., having adduced to the board several deeds of conveyance from the original confirmees, Francis and Jaques Lasselle, to Daniel Southerland, and from said Southerland to the present claimant, the commissioners are therefore convinced that Governor Lewis Cass is the present bona fide proprietor of the front farm. The members of the board having, in their general observations prefixed to this report, stated the difficulties which arose in this case from the intervention of a navigable river (the Rouge) between the front farm and the second concession above claimed, deem it unnecessary again to repeat them here. Subject, therefore, to the control of the revising power, the commissioners confirm to Lewis Cass, esq., as a donation or second concession of the tract of land as claimed by him in his above notice, to be bounded above by lands heretofore confirmed to John Askin, (No. 718,) below by Nos. 589, 588, and 569, confirmed to Bpt. Cicot and Jean Bpt. Duval, and in rear by lands confirmed to McTavish, Forbesher & Co., (No. 505,) usually called the northwest farm or tract of land, provided that the lines thereof be so run as not to extend in rear beyond eighty arpents from the extreme boundary of his front farm upon the Detroit river, and that said lines be not so run as to interfere with the lines of any lands confirmed by this or any former boards.

John Harvey, claim No. 12, rear of No. 39.

LAND OFFICE, Detroit, August 14, 1817.

On Wednesday, the 22d day of July, 1807, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to John Harvey lot No. 39, situate, lying, and being on the border of the Detroit river, containing, by the return of the surveyor, 208.41 acres, bounded in front by said Detroit river, in rear by unconceded lands, commonly called "Spring Wells" farm. In pursuance, therefore, of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now, as agent to said John Harvey, do enter the rear of said farm so as to extend it to eighty arpents, French measure, in depth.

B. STEAD,
For JOHN HARVEY.

To the register of the land office, Detroit:

Upon examination of the records of the former land boards it appears that claimant is the original confirmee of the front farm above mentioned, and that he is entitled to a second concession; but it also appears that, by the survey and return of Aaron Greely, esq., the public lands adjacent and in rear have been appropriated to other claimants by the said surveyor, and it is known that confirmations, according to said survey, were awarded by an act of Congress. The present board can therefore only recommend that such quantity of land be granted to claimant as may make the front farm equal in extent to eighty arpents in depth by its present front, not exceeding eighty arpents, to be located upon such of the public lands next adjacent to his front farm as may not be included within the lines of any tract confirmed or recommended for confirmation by this or any former board of commissioners.

John R. Williams, claim No. 13, rear of No. 30.

DETROIT, September 2, 1817.

SIR: On the 25th day of April, 1812, the President of the United States, by letters patent, granted to me a certain tract of land containing 267.23 acres, situate on the borders of the river Detroit, bounded and described as follows, to wit: beginning at a post standing on the border of Detroit river, between this tract and a tract confirmed to John Harvey; thence north thirty-one degrees west, one hundred and four chains seventy-three links, to a post; thence north fifty-nine degrees east, nine chains forty links, to a white oak tree; thence north thirty-one degrees west, thirty chains fifty links, to a post; thence north fifty-nine degrees east, eleven chains four links, to a post standing on the western line of a tract confirmed to Jacob Visgar; thence south thirty-one degrees east, thirty chains and fifty links, to a post; thence north fifty-nine degrees east, one chain and fourteen links, to a post; thence south thirty-one degrees east, one hundred and one chains seventy-six links, to a post standing on the border of Detroit river; thence, down stream, south twenty-eight degrees west, twenty-five chains eighteen links, to the place of beginning. In pursuance, therefore, of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter and make claim, as rear or back concessions, to a quantity of land equal with that contained, as per patent, in the front farm, viz: 267.33 acres.

I have the honor to remain, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

PETER AUDRAIN, Esq., Register of the Land Office at Detroit.

In support of the above claim John R. Williams produces to the board the patent of the President of the United States, dated April 25, 1812, setting forth that this is the same tract of land granted or intended to be granted to Matthew Ernest, by patent of Thomas Jefferson, President, dated December 22, 1807; which tract was sold at the suit of the United States to satisfy a debt due to them by the said Ernest, and that John R. Williams was the purchaser thereof; and it being found that the original survey and certificate were erroneous, a resurvey of the same has been made to correct the error. The original certificate has been cancelled, and another issued by the register in lieu thereof, and the patent aforesaid surrendered and cancelled. Therefore, the present patent was issued, &c.

It appearing to the commissioners that John R. Williams is the present proprietor of the above-described tract of land, they therefore confirm to said claimant the back concession as claimed, viz: 267.23 acres of land; and that a survey thereof be made by a surveyor duly authorized, to be located upon the vacant and unconceded lands in rear of the lands heretofore confirmed to said claimant, and that a return of said survey be made to the register of the land office at Detroit: provided, however, that the lines thereof be so run as not to interfere with the lines of any tract heretofore, or by this board, confirmed.

SIR: Please to take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of lot No. 20, as numbered on the general plan or map exhibiting the private claims as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend the said lots or farms to eighty arpents in depth; which said lots are on the border of Detroit river.

ROBERT McDOUGALL, Agent and Attorney,
For JEANE MARIE NAVARRE,
Administrator of the estate of Robert Navarre, deceased.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Jeane Marie Navarre, in support of the above claim for back concession, produces the patent of the President of the United States granted to Robert Navarre for the front farm. The commissioners do therefore confirm to the heirs and legal representatives of Robert Navarre, deceased, 145.75 acres of land, situated in rear of the above-mentioned front, to be bounded and described as in the survey and return of the surveyor thereto duly appointed; that is, above by the lands patented to Gabriel Godfroy, senior, and which should have been numbered by Mr. Fletcher 727, and not 728.

Gabriel Godfroy, claim No. 18, rear of No. 727.

LAND OFFICE, July 18, 1818.

On Monday, December 10, 1810, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to me lot No. 727, situate, lying, and being on the border of river Detroit, containing, by the return of the surveyor, 112.94 acres, bounded in front by river Detroit, in rear by unconceded lands, below by lands of the late Robert Navarre, and above by lands of my own, as heir of Jaques Godfroy, deceased. In pursuance, therefore, of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to land in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of said farm so as to make it extend to eighty arpents, French measure, in depth.

G. GODFROY.

Gabriel Godfroy, sr., (rear of 727, erroneously numbered 728 on the plat of survey by Mr. Fletcher,) in support of the above claim, produces the patent of the President of the United States granted to him for the front farm.

The commissioners confirm to Gabriel Godfroy, sr., 34.38 acres of land, situate in rear of the above-mentioned farm, bounded below by the lands confirmed to the heirs of Navarre, above by those confirmed to the heirs of Jaques Godfroy, deceased, &c., as per survey and return of the surveyor thereto duly appointed.

NOVEMBER 30, 1818.

SIR: Please take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now, therefore, as the sole and legal heir of Jaques Godfroy, deceased, to whom and to whose heirs the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed lot No. 729, situate on the border of Detroit river, containing, by the return of the surveyor of the district, 78.41 acres, so as to extend it to 80 arpents in depth of the said lot or parcel of ground.

GABRIEL GODFROY, as sole heir of Jaques Godfrey, deceased.

The REGISTER of the Land Office.

Gabriel Godfroy, sr., produces, in support of this claim, the patent of the President of the United States, confirming to the heirs of said Jaques Godfroy the front farm, in virtue of the possession of which a donation in rear is now claimed. Upon examination of the books, plans, and papers of former boards, it appears that the front farm was confirmed, as aforesaid, to the heirs of Jaques Godfroy. Upon examination of the return of Joseph Fletcher, it appears, also, that there is adjacent to and in rear of said tract vacant lands applicable to that object. Therefore, it is considered by the commissioners, and is decided, that the said heirs of Jaques Godfroy are entitled to demand and receive a patent for a donation tract, or second concession, in rear of said front; provided that the lines of said donation lot do not extend more than forty arpents, French measure, from the rear line of said front farm, nor more than eighty arpents from the border of the river Detroit, nor contain more acres of land than are contained in said front farm; and it is further decided by said commissioners that there be granted to said heirs a patent certificate for said donation lot, upon the production to the register, according to law, of a return of survey, &c., of the surveyor thereto duly appointed, descriptive of said donation tract, and that patent certificate and patent do describe said donation lot according to the survey plan and return of said survey.

Robert A. Forsyth, claim No. 20, rear of No. 474.

NOVEMBER 30, 1818.

SIR: Agreeably to the provisions of the two acts of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and March 3, 1817, as assignee of Daniel Southerland, assignee of Jaques Lasselle and François Lasselle, I enter a tract of land in rear of, and adjacent to, a tract confirmed to Jaques Lasselle and François Lasselle, being numbered 474, on the Detroit river; which tract, thus entered, is two arpents, French measure, in width, and 40 arpents, French measure, in length

ROBERT A. FORSYTH.

The REGISTER of the Land Office.

In support of the above claim Robert A. Forsyth produces a deed for the front farm from Daniel Southerland to claimant, in which deed it is set forth that said Southerland is the assignee of Jaques and François Lasselle, and other circumstances shown to this board, to them so satisfactory, that the above claimant is at this time the bona fide proprietor of the front.

Therefore the commissioners confirm to Robert A. Forsyth a tract of land in rear of the above farm containing 54.34 acres, according to return of the surveyor thereto duly appointed, and to be bounded and described as per the said survey and return.

The widow and heirs of Col. François Chobert, deceased, claim No. 21, rear of No. 338.

MARCH 31, 1818.

SIR: Please take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit, I now enter the rear of lot No. 338, or farm, as numbered on the general plan or map exhibiting the private claims as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend the said lot or farm to 80 arpents in depth; which said lot is on the border of the river Detroit.

GEORGE McDOUGALL, Attorney and Agent for said widow and heirs.

The REGISTER of the Land Office.

The patent of the President of the United States is produced in support of the above claim for the front farm containing 36.69 acres.

The commissioners therefore confirm to the widow and heirs of Colonel François Chobert, otherwise called François Chober Loncaire, a tract of land in the rear of that heretofore confirmed, containing, according to the return of the surveyor thereto duly appointed, 34.54 acres, to be designated according to the said return and survey.

Henry Staunton, assignee of François Lasselle, assignee of Daniel Southerland, claim No. 22, rear of No. 473.

NOVEMBER 30, 1818.

SIR: Please take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now, as assignee of Louis Devotion, who was the assignee of Daniel Southerland, who was the assignee of Francis Lasselle and the heirs of Jaques Lasselle, to whom the patent for the front was given by the United States, enter said tract, so as to extend the said lot or farm to 80 acres in depth; said lot being No. 473, situate on the Detroit river.

HENRY STAUNTON.

The REGISTER of the Land Office.

Major Henry Staunton, in support of the above claim, produces to the board: first, an authenticated copy from the records of Wayne county, Michigan Territory, of a deed of conveyance from François Lasselle and the heirs of Jacques Lasselle, deceased, (who, it appears from the records of the proceedings of former commissioners, were the original confirmees, and to whom a patent accordingly issued,) to Daniel Southerland; second, a like authentic copy of a deed of conveyance from said Southerland to Louis Devotion; also a like authentic copy of deed from said Devotion to the present claimant, Henry Staunton. There also appears on the files of the register's office an entry of claim to this tract, filed in due time, under the act of March 3, 1817.

Therefore the commissioners confirm to Henry Staunton a tract of land in rear of the farm now owned by him, containing 98.26 acres, according to the return of the surveyor duly appointed, and to be bounded and designated as per said return and survey.

Ezra Younglove, administrator of the estate of François Lafontaine, claim No. 23, rear of No. 44.

SIR: Please take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I do now, as administrator to the estate of François Lafontaine, deceased, enter the rear of a farm situate on the Detroit river, and numbered on the general plat of survey No. 44, confirmed to François Lafontaine, so as to extend the same in depth 80 arpents, French measure.

EZRA YOUNGLOVE, Adm'r to the estate of François Lafontaine, deceased.

The REGISTER of the Land Office.

A patent from the President of the United is produced in support of the above claim, granted to the said widow and heirs of François Lafontaine.

The commissioners confirm to the widow and heirs of François Lafontaine, deceased, a tract of land situate in rear of the tract heretofore confirmed, containing 102.96 acres, according to the returns of the surveyor duly appointed to make said survey and return, and to be designated and bounded as per the same.

JUNE 17, 1817.

SIR: Please to take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of the following lot, viz: lot No. 726, as numbered on the general plan or map exhibiting the private claims as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend the said lot or farm to eighty arpents in depth; which said lot is on Detroit river.

GEORGE McDOUGALL, Attorney and Agent for Col. Gabriel Godfroy, sr., Executor of Agate Paupard for the children of Angelique Cicot.

The REGISTER of the Land Office.

A patent of the President of the United States is produced, granting to Angelique Cicot and her children the front farm to which claim is above made for second concession.

The commissioners confirm to Angelique Cicot and her children, or if it should appear satisfactory to the register of the land office at Detroit, prior to the issuing of his final certificate, that the said Angelique is deceased, then the confirmation is hereby made to the children alone, of a tract of land containing 103.79 acres, to be bounded and described as per return made by the surveyor duly authorized to survey said tract.

Solomon Sibley, administrator to the estate of James Henry, deceased, claim No. 25, rear of No. 27.

The commissioners appointed to investigate the title to private land claims in the district of Detroit, and Territory of Michigan, are notified that the subscriber, administrator to the estate of James Henry, deceased, for and in behalf of the heirs and legal representatives of said James Henry, did heretofore file, in the office of the United States register of the land office at Detroit, a notice of claim for the back concession in the rear of the farm granted by the United States to James Peltier, and by said James Peltier sold and conveyed to said James Henry, by deed, in his lifetime, situate on the Detroit river. To said back concession said heirs and legal representatives of said James Henry, deceased, claim and request a confirmation thereof to them.

SOL. SIBLEY, Administrator to James Henry.

AUGUST 9, 1818.

Solomon Sibley, esq., administrator to the estate of James Henry, deceased, produces, in support of the above claim to back concession, the deed of conveyance from James Peltier to said James Henry, now deceased, dated December 6, 1811. The said Peltier appears, from the records of the proceedings of a former land board, to have been the original confirmee, and the board are satisfied that the patent of the President issued to the said Peltier. The administrator also submits a certificate upon the sale of the front farm given to D. W. Guynne, dated May 16, 1819, in which it is stated that said D. W. Guynne purchased, at auction, the said front farm; and therein the back concession, and all right, interest, or title thereto, is expressly reserved by the administrator to the heirs of said Henry; and the front farm, so sold to said Guynne, is expressly bounded and limited in rear by the said back concession. A certificate of Solomon Sibley, esq., as administrator, as foresaid, is also produced, certifying to the above facts of reservation of the back concession in his deed to the said D. W. Guynne, &c., and also expressly at the time of the public sale of the front.

Therefore the commissioners confirm to Solomon Sibley, esq., administrator to the estate of James Henry, deceased, a tract of land containing 101.58 acres, bounded and described as per the return of the surveyor duly authorized to make survey and return thereof; to be holden in trust for the use of the said heirs, creditors, and legal representatives of the said James Henry, deceased.

DETROIT, August 12, 1817.

On July 17, 1807, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to Joseph Beaubien lot No. 22, situate, lying, and being on the border of river Detroit, containing, by the return of the surveyor, 102.53 acres. In pursuance, therefore, to an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to land in the district of Detroit," I now, as assignee of Joseph Beaubien, enter the rear of said farm, so as to extend it to eighty arpents in depth.

JAMES MAY, Assignee of Joseph Beaubien.

To Peter Audrain, register of the land office, Detroit:

William Woodbridge, assignee of James May within named, who was the assignee of Joseph Beaubien, exhibits his claim, as such assignee, for the back concession, in virtue of the entry of Joseph Beaubien, and also of the above-named James May, and exhibits evidence of regular transfers from the said Joseph to the said James, and from the said James to him, in support of his claim in the premises.

The majority of the board (William Woodbridge, esq., one of the members of said board, declining to act upon his own claim) having examined the title papers above alluded to, find that the present claimant did, in the purchase of the said front farm from James May, expressly stipulate and contract for the purchase of all right, interest, or title, to the back concession, and that such right should enure to his benefit, and did accordingly pay for the same. It also appears from said deed that Mrs. Juliana T. Woodbridge is the joint purchaser with her husband, the above claimant. Claimant also adduces the patent of the President of the United States to Joseph Beaubien, and the transfer thereon endorsed from said Beaubien to said James May. All the instruments presented appear to be regularly executed.

Therefore the majority of the board do confirm to William Woodbridge, esq., and to Mrs. Juliana T. Woodbridge, as back concession, in rear of the farm now owned by them, a tract of land containing 103.09 acres, according to the return of the surveyor duly authorized to make the said survey and return to be bounded and described as per said survey and return.

NOVEMBER 30, 1818.

SIR: Please enter my claim to the donation tract which may be in the rear of the tract containing 135.14 acres, by patent dated May 30, 1811, and granted to Jaques and François Lasselle, being No. 248, as assignee of Daniel Southerland, the grantee under Jaques and François Lasselle; also to such donation or second concession as I may be entitled to as assignee of the said Daniel Southerland, the grantee of Jaques and François Lasselle, the grantees of Joseph Beaubien, of fifty-eight feet front, adjoining said tract above described; which fifty-eight feet front is a part of a tract confirmed to said Joseph Beaubien by patent, dated April 20, 1811.

WM. WOODBRIDGE.

The REGISTER of the Land Office for the district of Detroit.

William Woodbridge, esq., adduces, in support of the above claim for back concession, the deed of François Lasselle, the survivor of the original patentees, and the heirs of Jaques Lasselle, the other of the original patentees, duly executed under the direction of the probate court of Wayne county, Michigan Territory, conveying the front farm to Daniel Southerland, and also the deed of Daniel Southerland and wife to present claimant, conveying to claimant all the said front farm, and also granting all right and interest in and to the back concession now claimed.

Therefore, the said claimant declining to decide upon this his own claim, the majority of the board do confirm to the said William Woodbridge 3.74 acres of land in rear of the front farm heretofore confirmed, to be bounded and described as per the survey and return of the surveyor thereto duly appointed.

Louis Le Duc, claim No. 28, rear of No. 24.

AUGUST 6, 1818.

SIR: I hereby notify you, in conformity to the second section of an act of Congress approved April 23, 1812, revived by another act of the 3d of March last, that I claim, as grantee of Alexis Labadie, late of Detroit, deceased, as a donation from the United States, the second concession of a tract of land, No. 44, confirmed to him, the said Alexis, his heirs and assigns, by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, bordering on the river Detroit, not exceeding the depth of eighty arpents, French measure, from said river, adjacent to and back of the said land so confirmed as aforesaid; and for which the President of the United States granted his patent, dated at the city of Washington, April 20, 1811; being 67.37 acres, bounded in the rear of the same, the front being bounded and described as follows, to wit: beginning at a post standing on the border of Detroit river, between this tract and a tract confirmed to Jaques and François Lasselle; thence north twenty-six degrees west, one hundred and fifteen chains two links, to a post; thence north sixty-four degrees east, five chains eighty-five links, to an ash sapling, the southwest corner of a tract confirmed to Dominique Labrasse; thence south twenty-six degrees east, one hundred and fifteen chains thirty-two links, to a post standing on the border of the river Detroit; thence along the border of said river, down stream, south sixty-seven degrees west, five chains eighty-six links.

LOUIS LE DUC.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Louis Le Duc, in support of his claim, shows, from the files of the register's office, the original entry of claim of Alexis Discompte Labadie to the back concession above renewed, dated December 31, 1812. Louis Le Duc also produces the patent of the President of the United States to Alexis Discompte Labadie. Claimant also produces a deed of conveyance from Alexis Discompte Labadie and wife, conveying to said Le Duc all right, interest, and title, whatsoever, of, in, and to the said front farm, subject, however, to the payment of the debts of the said Labadie.

Therefore the board do confirm to the said Le Duc 69.98 acres of land situate in rear of the front farm, patented to Alexis Discompte Labadie, according to the survey of the surveyor duly authorized thereto, and to be bounded and described as per said return; to be holden in trust by the said Louis Le Duc for the use of the bona fide proprietor of the front.

Henry Berthelette, in behalf of Josette Berthelette, his wife, as assignee of Dominique Labrasse, claim No. 29, rear of No. 246.

AUGUST 5, 1818.

SIR: On Thursday, July 21, 1808, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to Dominique Labrasse, now deceased, lot No. 246, situate, lying, and being on the border of the river

Detroit, containing, by the return of the surveyor, 97.77 acres; bounded in front by the said river, in rear by unconceded lands, above by lands of François Gamelin, and below by the lands of the late Alexis Discompte Labadie. In pursuance, therefore, of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I, Henry Berthelette, in behalf of Josette Berthelette, my wife, as assignee of Dominique Labrasse, do enter the rear of said farm, so as to make it extend to eighty arpents, French measure, in depth.

HENRY BERTHELETTE,
In behalf of Josette Berthelette, his wife, as assignee of Dominique Labrasse.

The REGISTER of the Land Office, Detroit.

The original entry of claim to back concession appears on file in the handwriting of the then register of the land office, purporting to be of Dominique Labrasse, dated December 31, 1812; and the renewal thereof, purporting to be of Josette Berthelette, the assignee of said Labrasse, which also appears in the handwriting of the then register, Peter Audrain, esq., under act of March 3, 1817. There also appears upon the files of said register a deed of conveyance from Dominique Labrasse and wife to Josette Berthelette, the present claimant, subject to certain conditions and limitations.

The commissioners do therefore confirm to the claimant, Josette Berthelette, ninety-six acres and forty-six hundredths of an acre of land, in rear of the tract heretofore confirmed to Dominique Labrasse; subject to all the legal or equitable interests of the said Labrasse of, in, or to the said back concession, in virtue of his right to the front; to be bounded and located as per the survey of the surveyor duly authorized to make and return the same.

Philip Lecuyer, assignee of François Gamelin, claim No. 30, rear of No. 23.

SIR: Please take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of the following lot or farm, as numbered on the general map or plan exhibiting the private claims as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend the said lot or farm to eighty arpents in depth; which said lot is numbered twenty-three, and is situate on the river Detroit.

GEORGE McDOUGALL, Agent and Attorney for P. Lecuyer.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

The application of François Gamelin for back concession to the front farm No. 23, situate on the Detroit river as above mentioned, dated August 5, 1817, was filed with the register in due time, and is presented to this board. Philip Lecuyer also produces the patent of the President of the United States to the said Gamelin for the said front farm, and also a deed of conveyance from said François Gamelin, dated May fifteenth, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighteen, duly executed and acknowledged, conveying the same to the present claimant, Philip Lecuyer.

Therefore the commissioners confirm to the said Philip Lecuyer seventy-four acres and ten hundredths of an acre of land, according to the survey and return of the surveyor duly authorized to make the same; to be holden in trust for the use of the bona fide proprietor of the front.

In pursuance, therefore, of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now, as assignee of the said Antoine Lasselle, jr., enter the rear of said farm, so as to extend it to eighty arpents in depth.

LEWIS LOGNON.

PETER AUDRAIN, Esq., Register of the Land Office at Detroit.

The commissioners, in examining this case, find upon the records for the county of Wayne, Michigan Territory, a deed of conveyance from Antoine Lasselle, the original confirmee, to James May, dated July 25, 1810, conveying to him the front farm above mentioned, containing eighty arpents of land, being forty arpents in depth, by two arpents in front, upon the Detroit river. Of same date also is an article of agreement between said Lasselle and May. The said deed and agreement describe the tract as follows: containing two arpents in front, by forty arpents in depth, bounded in front by the Detroit river, in rear by the lands of the United States, above by lands owned by the heirs and legal representatives of William Macomb, deceased, below by lands of François Gamelin, together with all the buildings thereon erected, with all and singular the improvements, of whatever kind the same may be; being all that, in construction of law, now are, or were, on July 10, 1810, on which the terms of this contract were assented to by Jaques Lasselle, authorized by the said Antoine, jr., his brother, attached to the realty, &c. Release of mortgage from Antoine Lasselle to James May, dated June 19, 1814. The deed of conveyance from James May to Lewis Lognon, conveying all the right, interest, and title, received by said May from Antoine Lasselle, jr., dated May 19, 1814. Louis Lognon and De Garmo Jones' covenant of exchange, dated June 12, 1821. Deed of exchange between the same parties, dated June 15, 1821, wherein said Lognon conveys to said Jones all his right and title to the above tract. The board finds also, upon reference to the proceedings of a former land board, that on December 31, 1808, Antoine Lasselle, jr., by a decision of the commissioners, was allowed, under the 2d section of the act of April 25, 1808, to enter this tract by right of pre-emption with the register of the land office; and that he then paid to the receiver of public moneys one-twentieth part of the purchase money; but that he never made further payment, as appears from the books of the receiver, and consequently that the amount paid became forfeited to the United States. The commissioners infer (as the probable reason why payment was not perfected for this rear tract) that Antoine Lasselle, jr., the then owner, anticipated the right to a donation of the same, and therefore alleged that it was not his interest to complete payment. Reference being had to the articles of agreement, and deed from Antoine Lasselle, jr., to James May, an extract of which is given above, it would seem that said Lasselle contemplated a reservation of the second concession when he sold the front to said May, yet there is neither a specific reservation nor sale of said rear expressed in the said deed or article. There can be no doubt that said Jones is now the bona fide owner of the front farm, but how far the claim of the said Jones extends to the back concession this board are not informed, as the said Jones has not made any entry of claim, unless as the assignee of Lognon. It is also matter known to this board that the said Lognon is deceased. The board have not the least doubt of the right of second concession in some one of the parties to this farm; but, from the peculiar circumstances arising out of the case, the board do not deem it within their province to determine to whom the back concession may of right and in equity belong. Under all the circumstances, therefore, the board do confirm the tract claimed as back concession by Louis Lognon, to the heirs and legal representatives of said Lognon in trust, and subject to all the claims in law or equity which Antoine Lasselle, jr., or De Garmo Jones, may have in or to the said tract, containing, by estimation, sixty-eight acres, more or less; and a surveyor, duly authorized and deputed thereto, will survey the same, not to extend in depth beyond eighty arpents from the river Detroit, and return the same, together with a plat thereof, to the register of the land office at Detroit.

Lewis Cass, claim No. 32, rear of No. 55.

NOVEMBER 18, 1818.

SIR: On April 20, 1811, there was granted, by patent from the President of the United States, to John Macomb, William Macomb, and David Macomb, the following tract of land, containing three hundred and nine and one-tenth acres, situate on the border of Detroit river, bounded and described as follows: beginning at a post standing on the border of the Detroit river, between this tract and a tract confirmed to Antoine Lasselle, jr.; thence north twenty-six degrees west, one hundred and seventeen chains eighty-one links, to a post; thence north sixty-four degrees east, eight chains eighty links, to a post; thence north twenty-six degrees west, one hundred and sixteen chains fifty links, to a post; thence north sixty-four degrees east, five chains eighty-two links, to a post; thence south twenty-six degrees east, one hundred and sixteen chains fifty links, to a post; thence north sixty-four degrees east, five chains eighty-two links, to a post standing on the western line of the Detroit commons; thence south twenty-six degrees east, one hundred and eighteen chains seventeen links, to the border of the Detroit river; thence along the border of said river, down stream, south sixty-five degrees west, twenty chains forty-five links, to the place of beginning. I now hold the said land, as the assignee of William Macomb, by deed, in fee simple, bearing date September 9, 1816, and, as assignee of John Macomb, by like deed bearing date October 26, 1816; and therefore claim, as their assignee, under the act of Congress, a tract of land in the rear of said farm equal in breadth to the front, and extending eighty arpents, French measure, from the Detroit river; which land is in two tracts, and bounded and described as follows, viz: one tract beginning at a post standing on the western line of the Detroit commons, being on a course north twenty-six degrees west, one hundred and eighteen chains and seventeen links, from the border of the Detroit, where the said farm joins the town of Detroit, and running from the said post north twenty-six degrees west, one hundred and sixteen chains fifty links, to a post; thence south sixty-four degrees west, five chains eighty-two links, to a post; thence south twenty-six degrees ——, one hundred and sixteen chains fifty links, to a post; thence north fifty-four degrees east, five chains eighty-two links, to the place of beginning; and one other tract, beginning at a post, being on the course, north twenty-six degrees west, one hundred and seventeen chains eighty-one links, from the border of Detroit river, at the dividing line between the tract granted to John Macomb, William Macomb, and David Macomb, and that granted to Antoine Lasselle, jr.; and from the said post running north twenty-six degrees west, one hundred and sixteen chains fifty links, to a post; thence north sixty-four degrees east, eighty chains and eighty links, to a post; thence south twenty-six degrees east, one hundred and sixteen chains fifty links, to a post; thence south sixty degrees west, eight chains and eighty links, to the place of beginning.

LEWIS CASS.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

The claimant in the above case exhibits to the commissioners the patent of the President of the United States, bearing date on the day in said entry of claim mentioned, describing the land as in said entry is stated, and purporting to convey the same to the said John, William, and David Macomb, as tenants in common.

The claimant also exhibits a deed of conveyance from William Macomb and Janette, his wife, and also a deed of conveyance from David B. Macomb and Mary T., his wife, purporting to convey to claimant two undivided third parts of said front farm, so patented as aforesaid. He also exhibits an exemplification of a record of certain proceedings during the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixteen, before George McDougall, esq., then register of the district of Erie, Huron, and Detroit, upon petition of claimant, dated October 8, 1816, whereby it appears that the premises confirmed and granted by said patent to said John, William, and David were not susceptible of partition and division without prejudice; that the undivided interest and estate conveyed by said patent to said John Macomb was of the value of $4,000, and that the said claimant was decreed to pay said sum; further, that, by a certain indenture of mortgage, an interest in the premises was conveyed by said John Macomb, (since deceased,) in his lifetime, to Alexander Macomb, and that the said Alexander had assigned the same interest to John A. Rucker, to whom the said $4,000 were consequently assigned to be paid; that afterwards, as in and by said proceedings it appears, the said $4,000 were paid to said John A. Rucker; wherefore, by reason of all the premises, the entire interest and estate in and to the whole of said tract patented, as aforesaid, to said John, William, and David Macomb, seem to have vested entirely in said claimant. The claimant, therefore, in virtue of his said estate and property in the said farm so, as above mentioned, patented, conveyed, transferred, and described, in due time made entry of claim, and now claims that there be accorded to him second concessions and donation lots in rear of his said front farm, so as to extend the same, and the lines thereof, to the distance of eighty arpents, French measure, from the Detroit river.

Whereupon, examination being made into the books, papers, and records of proceedings of former land boards, it appears that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 25, 1808, regulating the grants of land in the Territory of Michigan, John, William, and David Macomb appeared before the commissioners for adjusting private land claims, &c., in said Territory, and preferred their claim as entitled to a preference in becoming the purchasers of the specific tracts of land now claimed as second concessions; that their claim was affirmed, the same appearing to have been preferred in the time and manner prescribed by said act; that on December 10, 1808, they accordingly obtained a certificate from the register of the land office, purporting that they had purchased said tracts at $2 per acre; that the aggregate sum of purchase money amounted to $340 88, of which $17 22 had been paid. And it is further shown to this board, by the books of the receiver of public moneys at Detroit, (ex-officio a member of this board,) that on February 5, 1811, a further sum of $68, being, with the said $17 22, a quarter part of the said aggregate sum of purchase money, was duly paid according to the provisions of law, for and on account of said tracts, and in part of said purchase money. But it is not shown that any further payments were on that account made, or that the said tracts were ever afterwards fully paid for or patented; and, from all the circumstances which have come to the knowledge of the commissioners, they think it fair to presume that the said John, William, and David afterwards abandoned all intention of making full payment for said land, or of consummating the said purchase.

Upon this view of facts a question forcibly presents itself: Is the land in the rear of claimant's farm, (which had thus been specifically the subject of the claim of pre-emption,) in the sense of the law, vacant land applicable to the object of the claim for the second concessions or donations at present urged? and if so, is the right with the claimant as assignee of the original patentees?

If, by the due payment of the one-fourth part of the purchase money for the tracts in question, an individual, specific, and exclusive right had vested in the assignors of the claimant, there certainly was a period during which the land could not be deemed vacant and applicable to the object of the present claim. The pre-emptive purchasers having failed to make payment of the residuary three-fourths of the purchase money in the time prescribed by law, their right to demand a patent for the land may, doubtless, be considered as lost forever. But if purchases under claims of preference are to be considered as subject to all the conditions, &c., incident to ordinary purchases of the public lands, it does not seem perfectly clear that the assignors of claimant are divested of all their interest in the specific property. Have they a right in that portion of the purchase money paid, and is it a right chargeable specifically upon the land? Have they a right that the land be offered at auction; and if it should be bid off for a greater sum than $2 per acre, have they a right to reclaim that overplus? Is this right in the contingent advance of price upon a public sale susceptible of annihilation, except by the process of a public sale? If it be not, can the land, in the sense of the law, be deemed vacant land, &c.? But if sales of lands in his country, so sold under claim of preference, were not subject to the same conditions, &c., as ordinary sales of public lands, does the matter become less doubtful? An interest will then have been acquired in the lands, and no summary mode will be found to divest it. Upon mature consideration, this board had, for its own government, settled the principle that in case of the alienation of a front farm subsequent to the emanation of a patent by the patentee, without making a specific reservation of the second concession, and unattended by circumstances leading to the conclusion that such contingent grant of second concession was intended to be reserved, then that the second concession now to be accorded should pass to the bona fide proprietor of such front, the contingent right to the second concession being deemed by this board, in such circumstances, as incidental to the right of property in the front.

Although no specific provision has been made in the conveyances shown to this board for the transfer of the right to second concessions to this claimant, (if such right exist,) yet the board, applying the principle above alluded to to the case, have presumed that it was intended that the right, if it exist, should pass to this claimant; and the more so because the assignors of claimant do not appear, for their own use, to have urged any pretension to the lands as donation lands. But little embarrassed by this part of the case, therefore, the question then recurs, is it competent for this board to decide affirmatively upon the claim preferred? Considering that the initiatory measures of the purchase were not followed up after the payment of the one-fourth part of the purchase money; considering that no claim on the part of the patentees has been urged before this board; considering that no measures in the character of a cavcat, or otherwise, have been pursued by them to prevent a confirmation by this board of the claim presented by their assignee, (of the existence of which claim this board cannot presume them ignorant;) considering their conduct relatively to the matter as evidence of a deliberate abandonment of their claim; considering the spirit of the law of 1812, and the beneficent intentions indicated by it; and especially considering that the whole matter, being spread upon this report in such way that the errors of this board in this case may be corrected by a revising power, if such errors exist—

The commissioners have considered, and do so decide, that Lewis Cass, esq., is entitled to demand and have a second concession and donation in two separate tracts in the rear of, and adjacent to, his said front farm: provided that such tracts shall not exceed forty arpents, French measure, in depth, from the rear lines of his said front farm, nor extend in rear to a point further from the Detroit river than eighty arpents, French measure; that the lines of said two tracts be so surveyed and run as that neither of said tracts shall have a greater breadth in any place than they may respectively have at their places of junction with the front farm aforesaid; the long and lateral lines thereof being run, so near as may be, parallel with each other, and forming extensions of the short lateral lines of the front farm, preserving, as nearly as may be, the course of said lateral lines of said front farm; and provided, also, that the said lateral lines of said donation tract shall not be so run as to interfere with the Detroit commons, nor with the lines of any tract heretofore, by this or any other board, confirmed to any other person; and especially so as not to interfere with the lines of any lot or tract of land heretofore given, granted, sold, caused to be surveyed, or otherwise disposed of by the governor and judges of this Territory, under color of an act of Congress entitled "An act to provide for the adjustment of titles of land in the town of Detroit and Territory of Michigan, and for other purposes," passed April 21, 1806.

And it is further decided that it shall be lawful for said claimant to cause the said two tracts to be surveyed by some surveyor thereto by the surveyor general duly authorized according to the directions, provisions, and limitations above specified; upon the production of whose certificate of survey, plat, and return, duly made to the register of the land office at Detroit, the said claimant shall be entitled to demand and receive a patent certificate or certificates for said tracts.

NOVEMBER 30, 1818.

SIR: Please take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit, I now enter the rear of lot No. 181, as numbered on the general plan or map exhibiting the private claims as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend the said lot or farm to eighty arpents in depth; which said lot or farm is situate on the border of Detroit river.

GEORGE McDOUGALL, Attorney and Agent for A. Rivard.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

The commissioners, in examining this claim, are of opinion that this tract may have been originally confirmed to the full extent of eighty arpents. Yet, as the said Antoine Rivard makes entry of claim in due time to a second concession, and as it fully appears that the claimant is justly entitled thereto, if the same be not already confirmed to the full extent, therefore the commissioners confirm to the said Antoine Rivard such small tract or piece of land as may be situated between the rear line of the tract now owned by him, and the general rear line of the back concessions as established by the surveyor duly authorized to make survey thereof; and that if, upon examination, there be found vacant land so as above mentioned situated, it is further decided that a surveyor duly authorized do survey the same, and make return and plat thereof to the register, whereupon a final certificate may issue to the said Antoine Rivard.

JUNE 12, 1818.

SIR: Please take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to land in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of lot No. 12, as numbered on the general plan or map exhibiting the private claims as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend said lot or farm to eighty arpents in depth; which said lot is on the border of the Detroit river.

GEORGE McDOUGALL, Agent and Attorney for Charles Gouin.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Charles Guoin, in support of his claim above mentioned, exhibits to the board the patent of the President, confirming the front farm above described; the same being the farm designated on the books and papers of former boards by the No. 12. And it appearing manifestly that the said claimant is the bona fide proprietor of the front farm aforesaid, and that, according to the provisions of the several acts of Congress which have reference to the subject, the said claimant is entitled to the grant of a second concession or donation in rear of his said front farm, it is therefore decided by the said commissioners that the claim of said claimant be confirmed, and that the same be patented and surveyed to him according to the description and survey by the surveyor thereto duly appointed, made and returned; the said second concession consisting of a tract containing, by said plat, survey, and return, 37.56 acres.

Louis Moran, (pere,) claim No. 35, rear of No. 7.

AUGUST 13, 1818.

SIR: Please take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of the following lot or farm, viz: lot No. 7, as numbered on the general map or plan exhibiting the private claims, as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend the said lot or farm to eighty arpents in depth, which said lot is on the border of the river Detroit.

GEORGE McDOUGALL,
Attorney and Agent for Louis Moran, (pere.)

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Louis Moran, in support of the above claim, adduces the patent of the President of the United States, granted to him as the assignee of Maurice Moran, dated June 16, 1812. The commissioners having no question but that the claimant is entitled to a back concession to the above-described front farm No. 7, do therefore confirm to Louis Moran (pere) the tract of land situate in the rear of the farm heretofore patented to him, and to be bounded and designated as per the survey and return of the surveyor duly authorized to make the same, containing, according to said survey, 57.59 acres.

DETROIT, December 30, 1812.

SIR: In pursuance of an act of Congress of the United States in such case made and provided, please take notice that I claim title to the second concession of the tract of land entered with you heretofore, situated on the border of the Detroit river, of one and three-fourths arpent in front by sixty in rear; and which present claim will extend the same to eighty arpents from said Detroit river; which claim was partly confirmed to me by the commissioners aforesaid on July 6, 1807.

NICHOLAS GUOIN,
By GEORGE McDOUGALL, his Attorney.

PETER AUDRAIN, Esq.,
Register of the United States Land Office at Detroit.

On July 6, 1807, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to Nicholas Guoin lot No. 13, situate, lying, and being on the border of the river Detroit, containing, by the return of the surveyor, 105.65 acres. In pursuance, therefore, of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," we now enter the rear of said farm so as to extend it to eighty arpents in depth.

THE LEGAL HEIRS OF NICHOLAS GUOIN.

To Peter Audrain, register of the land office, Detroit:

Dominique Reopel, in support of his right to a confirmation to the above tract, produces a deed of conveyance, dated June 24, 1819, and duly executed by Archange Guoin, widow and relict of Nicholas Guoin, deceased, and also a deed of the same date, duly executed by Claude Guoin, one of the heirs of said Nicholas Guoin, deceased. By the first of said deeds it appears that the widow aforesaid conveys to Dominique Reopel and his wife, Colette, all her right, title, and interest, by dower or otherwise, in and to the farm above mentioned, and also, expressly, all her right as aforesaid to the back concession, &c. By the second deed it appears that Claude Guoin conveys to the said Dominique Reopel and his wife, Colette, all his right, title, and interest of and to one undivided third part of said farm. It further appears that the said Colette Reopel, wife of the said Dominique, is the daughter of the said Nicholas Guoin, deceased, and, as heir to her father, is entitled to the one undivided third part of the aforesaid front farm. From all which it appears that the said Dominique Reopel and Colette, his wife, now are the bona fide proprietors of two undivided third parts of the said farm granted by the patent of the President of the United States to the said Nicholas Guoin. It is also manifest, from the survey and return of the authorized surveyor, that the original tract was extended, as to part of its width, to the full extent of the 80 arpents, and that the residue does not so extend. Therefore, the commissioners do confirm to Dominique Reopel and Colette, his wife, as tenants in common, a tract of land containing 12.59 acres of land, situate in rear of the southerly part of the above-described farm heretofore confirmed to Nicholas Guoin, to be bounded and described as per the return of the surveyor, who was duly authorized to survey and return the same, in trust, nevertheless, and subject to all the legal and equitable rights of all others, the heirs or legal representatives of Nicholas Guoin, in and to the same, except the above-named widow and Claude Guoin, the heir of the said Nicholas Guoin, deceased.

DETROIT, August 19, 1818.

On July 2, 1807, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to Catharine Dequindre lot No. 8, situate, lying, and being on the border of the river Detroit, containing, by the return of the surveyor, 106.15 acres. In pursuance, therefore, of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to land in the district of Detroit," I, Antoine Dequindre, do enter the rear of the said farm, so as to extend it to 80 arpents in depth.

ANTOINE DEQUINDRE.

It appears satisfactorily to the commissioners that Antoine Dequindre, the above-named claimant, is the assignee of Madame Catharine Dequindre, his mother, per her deed duly executed, dated May 25, 1816, conveying to the above claimant the tract of land above mentioned, and that she was the original confirmee of said front farm; therefore, the board of commissioners do confirm to Antoine Dequindre the back concession of said farm, so as to extend it to the depth of eighty arpents, being 23.86 acres of land, to be bounded and described as per return of the surveyor duly authorized to make the same.

Antoine Dequindre, claim No. 38, rear of No. 17.

NOVEMBER 12, 1818.

On July 8, 1807, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to Francis Guoin No. 17, situate, lying, and being on the border of Detroit river, containing, by the return of the surveyor, 105.07 acres. In pursuance, therefore, of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I, Antoine Dequindre, assignee of Joseph Morass, who was assignee of the said Francis Guoin, do enter the rear of said farm, so as to extend it to eighty arpents in depth.

ANTOINE DEQUINDRE.

To Peter Audrain, register of the land office, Detroit:

Antoine Dequindre, in support of the above claim, produces a deed of conveyance of the above tract from Francis Guoin and wife to Joseph Morass and Moneque, his wife, dated April 30, 1808; also a deed from the said Joseph Morass and wife, November 17, 1813, conveying the said land to Antoine Dequindre.

The commissioners, on examining this claim, are of opinion that this tract may have been originally confirmed to the full extent of eighty arpents; yet as the said Antoine Dequindre makes entry of claim, in due time, to a second concession, and as it fully appears that claimant is justly entitled thereto, if the same be not already confirmed to the full extent, therefore the commissioners confirm to the said Antoine Dequindre such small tract or piece of land as may be situated between the rear line of the tract now owned by him and the general rear line of the back concession established by the surveyor duly authorized to make survey thereof; and that if, upon examination, there be found vacant land so as above mentioned situated, a surveyor, duly authorized, do survey the same, and make return and plat thereof to the register, whereupon a final certificate may issue to the said Antoine Dequindre.

James Witherell, claim No. 39, rear of No. 90.

LAND OFFICE, June 16, 1818.

On Monday, January 14, 1808, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to Jeane Marie Beaubien lot No. 90, and on July 10, 1811, the President of the United States of America granted a patent for the same to Joseph King, assignee of the said Jean Marie Beaubien. This tract is situate, lying, and being on the border of the river Detroit, containing, by the return of the surveyor, 119.76 acres.

In pursuance, therefore, of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of said farm, as assignee of the said Joseph King, who was the assignee of Jean Marie Beaubien as aforesaid, so as to make said farm to extend to eighty arpents, French measure, in depth.

JAMES WITHERELL.

It being made to appear satisfactorily to the board, from sundry title papers, with the patent of the President of the United States, exhibited by the present claimant, that he now is the bona fide proprietor of the front farm as the assignee of Joseph King, who is the assignee of the original confirmee—

The commissioners do therefore confirm to James Witherell, esq., a tract of land containing 18.71 acres of land, according to the survey and return of the surveyor duly authorized to make the same, being all the land contained between the rear line of the aforesaid farm, heretofore confirmed, and the rear line of the back concessions, as established by the said surveyor, at the distance of eighty arpents from the Detriot river.

François St. Aubin, claim No. 40, rear of No. 14.

LAND OFFICE, Detroit, November 30, 1818.

On Monday, July 6, 1807, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to Charles Peltier lot No. 14, situate, lying, and being on the border of the river Detroit, containing, by the return of the surveyor, two hundred acres, it being five acres in front, by forty in depth; bounded in front by said river, in rear by unconceded lands, above by lands owned by Jaques Campau, and below by lands claimed by James Witherell, esq. In pursuance, therefore, of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in this district," I, Francis St. Aubin, assignee of Charles Peltier, do enter the rear of said farm, so as to extend it to eighty arpents, French measure, in depth.

FRANÇOIS ST. AUBIN.

The commissioners, in examining this claim, are of opinion that this tract may have been originally confirmed to the full extent of eighty arpents; yet as the said François St. Aubin makes entry of claim, in due time, to a second concession, and as it fully appears that the claimant is justly entitled thereto, if the same be not already confirmed to the full extent—

Therefore the commissioners confirm to the said François St. Aubin such small tract or piece of land as may be situated between the rear line of the tract now owned by him and the general rear line of the back concession established by the surveyor duly authorized to make survey thereof; and that if, upon examination, there be found vacant land as above mentioned situated, a surveyor, duly authorized, do survey the same, and make return and plat thereof to the register, whereupon a final certificate may issue to the said François St. Aubin.

Jaques Campau, claim No. 41, rear of No. 91.

LAND OFFICE, Detroit, November 30, 1818.

On Wednesday, February 6, 1808, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to me lot No. 91, situate, lying, and being on the border of river Detroit, containing, by estimation, 280 arpents.

In pursuance, therefore, of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of the said farm, so as to make it extend eighty arpents, French measure, in depth.

JAQUES CAMPAU.

The above-named Jaques Campau having produced his patent from the President of the United States, granting to him the tract numbered upon the books and plans of former boards by No. 91; it appearing, also, by the books and papers of former boards that the same was, in due form, confirmed to him by former boards; it appearing, further, that only a part of said lot No. 91 extends to the depth of eighty arpents, French measure, and that another part of said farm, on the southwesterly side thereof, procured by the said Jaques by purchase from a different proprietor, extends to the depth of forty arpents only; and it appearing to the commissioners, manifestly, that the said Jaques is entitled to claim and have a patent for a second concession, in rear and adjoining that part of No. 91 which extends not to the depth of eighty arpents, so that the same may be extended to that depth—

Therefore it is decided by the said commissioners that the said claim of the said Jaques be confirmed, and that he be entitled to have a patent for so much land as is in rear of said part of his said front farm, and as intervenes between it and the rear or boundary line of the second concession. That the same be described as it is in and by the return of the surveyor thereto lawfully deputed described, and that a patent certificate do issue in conformity to the survey and plat thereof returned as aforesaid, the same containing, according to said return, 34.11 acres.

Maurice Moran, claim No. 42, rear of No. 182.

DETROIT, August 7, 1817.

SIR: I hereby notify you that I claim a donation from the United States, by virtue of an act of Congress of the 3d of March last, of one hundred and seventy acres of land, adjacent to and back of the following described tract, which was confirmed to me by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, and for which I hold the President's patent, dated at the city of Washington, June 12, 1812, viz: situate on the border of Detroit river, bounded and described as follows: beginning at a post standing on the border of Detroit river, between this tract and a tract confirmed to Meldrum and Park; thence north twenty-nine degrees west, one hundred and fifteen chains sixty-two links, to a post; thence north sixty-one degrees east, fourteen chains eighty-nine links, to a post, the southwest corner of a tract confirmed to Philis Peltier; thence south twenty-nine degrees east, one hundred and twelve chains and ninety-two links, to a post standing on the border of Detroit river; thence along the border of said river south fifty degrees west, fifteen chains seventeen links, to the place of beginning; the same not to exceed eighty arpents, French measure, in depth, from the Detroit river.

MAURICE MORAN,
By his attorney, GEORGE McDOUGALL.

PETER AUDRAIN, Esq., Register of the United States Land Office at Detroit.

The above-named Maurice Moran having produced to this board his patent from the President of the United States for the farm upon the Detroit river, in front of the tract he now claims as second concession; it appearing that by former boards he was duly confirmed in said front, and no evidence being adduced of his alienation thereof; it appearing, further, that the said claimant is authorized to claim and have a patent for the said second concession, it is therefore decided that the said claim of said Maurice be affirmed, and that he is entitled to demand and have a patent for all that quantity of land lying adjacent to and in rear of his said farm, which intervenes between the rear line of his present front farm and a line established by the surveyor thereto authorized, which is eighty French arpents from the border of the river Detroit; and that the same be described according to the lines and description contained in the plat, survey, and return thereof made by said surveyor; the said tract containing, according to said return, 169.4 acres.

NOVEMBER 30, 1818.

Take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to land in the district of Detroit," I, John L. Leib, as assignee of Shubal Conant, who was assignee of James Connor, who was assignee of Philip Peltier, claim a donation right to the farm on which I now live, No. 15, situate, lying, and being on the border of the Detroit river, and containing, by the return of the surveyor, 146.2 acres; bounded in front by said river, in rear by unconceded lands, above by lands of the late George Meldrum, deceased, and below by lands of Maurice Moran. I do enter the rear of said farm so as to extend it to eighty arpents, French measure, in depth.

JOHN L. LEIB.

The REGISTER of the Land Office, Detroit.

The front farm, in virtue of the property and rightful possession of which the present claimant urges his demand for a second concession and donation lot in rear, appears by the exhibits produced, to have been originally confirmed to Philis Peltier, and to have been patented to him, which patent appears to have been assigned by said Philis to James Conner, his heirs and assigns, which said James Conner, by his regular deed of conveyance, purports to have conveyed the same, or original front farm, to Shubal Conant, who, by deed dated January 4, 1817, conveyed the same to claimant, John L. Leib.

Upon a view of the books, records, and plans of former boards, and particularly of the returns of survey of Joseph Fletcher, esq., surveyor thereto lawfully appointed, it manifestly appears that a just claim exists on the part of the bona fide owner of the said front farm to demand and have a second concession, extending the lateral lines of said front farm to the distance of eighty French arpents from the river Detroit; and although the above-named Philis Peltier appears to have assigned to said James Conner his right, title, &c., in and to said patent only, yet this board do consider, and do so decide, that, for the purposes of a transfer of his equitable right in and to a second concession, an unyielding adherence to all the forms of conveyancing is not indispensable, and that the said right to demand and have said second concession is virtually and equitably passed to the said claimant.

They do therefore consider and decide that the claim of said claimant be confirmed, and that there be patented to him, the said John L. Leib, all that tract of vacant and unconceded land which intervenes between the rear line of said front farm, and the point and line which, by Joseph Fletcher, esq., surveyor thereto lawfully authorized, was established at the distance of eighty arpents from said river Detroit; and, further, that the same tract, so as aforesaid claimed and accorded, be described in the patent certificate and patent, in conformity with the survey plat, and return thereof made by said Joseph Fletcher, by which plat and survey it appears that the said tract contains 129.68 acres.

LAND OFFICE, Detroit, November 18, 1818.

On Wednesday the 18th day of July, 1807, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to my late father, George Meldrum, deceased, lot No. 18, situate, lying, and being on the border of the river Detroit, containing, by the return of the surveyor, 144.7 acres. In pursuance, therefore, of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now, as administrator of the estate of George Meldrum, deceased, enter the rear of said farm, so as to extend it to eighty arpents, French measure, in depth.

JOHN MELDRUM, Administrator.

No. 18.—Heirs of George Meldrum, viz: Mary Ann Scott, John Meldrum, James Meldrum, William Meldrum, David Meldrum, Jane Wendell, George Meldrum, and Robert Meldrum.

The patent of the President of the United States for the front farm upon the Detroit river, in rear of which a second concession is now claimed for the above-named heirs-at-law, is adduced. It appears, also, that the same was, in the lifetime of said George, duly confirmed by a former board to him; that the said George is since dead, and that the right of property in said front farm has descended to the above-named children of said George. It appears, further, to the commissioners that the above-mentioned claim is a valid and just claim, and that the said heirs-at-law are entitled to have a patent therefor. The commissioners do therefore decide that the said claim be affirmed, and that there be patented to the said children and heirs-at-law above mentioned all that vacant and unconceded land which intervenes between the rear lines of said front farm and the lines established and run by Joseph Fletcher, esq., surveyor thereto authorized, and that the same be described in the patent certificate and patent therefor according to the survey, plan, and return of said Joseph Fletcher, and not otherwise; the said tract containing, according to said survey, 141.13 acres.

Louis Beaufait, claim No. 45, rear of No. 19.

JULY 12, 1818.

On Friday, July 10, 1807, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to me lot No. 19, situate, lying, and being on the border of Detroit river, containing, by the return of the surveyor, 139.67 acres. In pursuance, therefore, of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of said farm, so as to extend it to eighty arpents, French measure, in depth.

LOUIS BEAUFAIT.

The patent of the President of the United States is produced in support of this claim. It appears, also, that the front farm on the Detroit river was only confirmed to the extent of one hundred and twenty chains and fifty-three links to the father of the present claimant, who, dying before the emanation of the patent, the right thereto passed to the present claimant, to whom the patent issued. It further appears that there is vacant land in the rear of and adjacent to said front farm applicable to the object.

Whereupon it is considered by the commissioners, and so decided, that the above claim for second concession be affirmed, and that the said claimant is entitled to demand and have a patent for said second concession, and that the patent certificate therefor do describe and bound the same according to, and in the words of, the return of the survey and plat of the same of the surveyor thereto duly appointed; the same containing, according to said surveyor's return, 147.72 acres.

Louis Chapoton, claim No. 46, rear of No. 573.

Louis Chapoton enters his claim, not for back concession, but for an extension, agreeably to his original entry of claim. (See, therefore, the proceedings and decision upon his case under the head of absolute claims.) The board intend that the survey of John Mullet, esq., as returned, shall give extent, boundaries, and description to the said claim of Louis Chapoton.

DETROIT, November 28, 1818.

SIR: Please take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the southwest half of the rear of the following lot or farm, as numbered on the general plan or map exhibiting the private claims as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend the said lot or farm to eighty arpents in depth; which said lot is on the border of the river Detroit, and is numbered 678.

GEORGE McDOUGALL, Agent and Attorney for the heirs of Antoine Boyer.

AUGUST 8, 1818.

Take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I, Gabriel Cheine, as assignee of the widow and heirs of Antoine Boyer, to whom (viz: Cecile Boyer and Antoine Medard Boyer, widow and son of said Antoine, deceased,) said tract, viz: No. 678, was patented by the President of the United States, as assignee, as aforesaid, of said widow and heirs, by deed of conveyance from them, the said widow and heirs, to me, of a tract of land of one arpent in front by forty arpents in depth, holding the breadth of one arpent throughout; bounded in front by the river Detroit, in rear by the second concession, on the northeast by Henry St. Bernard, and on the southwest by the remainder of the vendor's farm, said tract of land being part of lot No. 678, as above mentioned. I do enter the rear of said farm so as to extend the same to eighty arpents in depth, French measure.

GABRIEL CHEINE.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

[See decision on this claim at the end of the next succeeding claim.]

NOVEMBER 20, 1818.

Take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I, Henry St. Bernard, an assignee of Baptiste Bazil Campau, the assignee of the widow and heirs of Antoine Boyer, deceased, to whom said tract was patented by the President of the United States as assignee, as aforesaid, of the said Campau, by a deed of conveyance from the said Campau to me of the northeast half of tract or lot No. 678, do enter the rear of said lot or farm, so as to extend the same to eighty arpents, French measure, in depth.

HENRY ST. BERNARD.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Madame Cecile Boyer and Antoine Boyer, Gabriel Cheine, and Henry St. Bernard, rear of No. 678.

In support of the foregoing claim, the patent of the President of the United States is adduced, granted to the widow and heirs of Antoine Boyer, deceased. Henry St. Bernard makes claim to back concession as assignee of the part of the original front, and also produces a deed, duly executed by the said Cecile and Antoine Boyer, conveying to Baptiste Campau the northeast one-half part of the said tract, and also the right to demand and receive a patent for the back concession to the said one-half of the original front farm, dated March 22, 1815; also the record copy of a deed from said Campau to the said Henry St. Bernard, December 24, 1818. Gabriel Cheine likewise claims back concession to one arpent, extending to the depth of eighty arpents from the river, and, in support of his claim, produces a deed dated August 2, 1819, duly executed by the said Cecile and Antoine Boyer, transferring to said Cheine one arpent in front by forty in depth of the said original farm, with a right to apply for and receive a patent for the back concession, being one arpent by forty in rear of the said front.

The commissioners, in considering this claim, are convinced that the right of back concession clearly belongs to the whole of the original front farm, and that the claimants have right to a patent for the same; but as no subdivision of the rear has been made between the parties by the surveyor duly authorized to survey the said back concessions or donations, the board do therefore confirm to the widow Cecile Boyer and Antoine Boyer, to Gabriel Cheine and Henry St. Bernard, 152.37 acres of land, being the whole quantity contained in the back concession of the front farm above mentioned, according to the return of the surveyor duly appointed to survey the same, to be held as tenants in common by the said claimants above named, according to their respective interests therein, or in the said original front farm.

Henry Campau, claim No. 50, rear of No. 10.

NOVEMBER 30, 1818.

On May 3, 1807, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to Louis Moran, as guardian to the children of the late Francis Campau, deceased, lot No. 10, situate, lying, and being on the border of Detroit river, containing, by the return of the surveyor, 100.36 acres. In pursuance, therefore, of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I, Henry Campau, one of the heirs of the said Francis Campau, deceased, and grantee of the other heirs, do enter the rear of said farm, so as to extend it to eighty arpents, French measure, in depth.

HENRY CAMPAU.

The front farm upon the Detroit river, in virtue of the property in which a second concession is now claimed, appears to have been confirmed originally to Louis Moran, guardian of the children of François (dit Bazil) Campau, deceased; and in conformity with the form of said confirmation, the same front farm appears to have been patented. It further appears that Henry Campau, now lately deceased, one of the said children and heirs-at-law of said Francis, deceased, prior to his death, had become the bona fide assignee of the interest and shares of his co-heirs in and to said front farm, and that he has since died. Whereupon, it appearing to the board that the foregoing claim for a second concession is well founded, and that there is vacant land in the rear of the front farm applicable to the object, it is therefore decided that there be granted to the legal heirs and representatives of said Henry, deceased, as second concession, all the said vacant land which intervenes between the rear line of said front farm and the general rear line of the second concessions, as run and established under the direction of this board by Joseph Fletcher, esq., surveyor thereto legally authorized; and that the same be patented to the said heirs and legal representatives of said Henry, deceased, according to the description and bounds set out in the survey, plan, and return of said surveyor, Joseph Fletcher, esq.; the same containing 95.06 acres, according to said return.

Joseph Campau, of Grand Morais, claim No. 51, rear of No. 152.

I hereby notify you that I claim a donation from the United States, by virtue of an act of Congress of the 3d of March last, as assignee of the widow and heirs of Jean Baptiste Campau, of 97.47 acres of land adjacent to and back of the following described tract, which was confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit to them, their heirs, and assigns, No. 152, and which I acquired of Jean Campau, the heir, by deed, herewith, dated at Detroit, June 4, 1815, viz: beginning at a post standing on the border of Detroit river, between this tract and a tract confirmed to Louis Moran, as guardian of the minor children of Francis Campau dit Bazil, deceased; thence north thirty-one degrees west, one hundred and fourteen chains seventy-two links, to a post; thence north sixty-one degrees east, eight chains and fifty-four links, to a post, the southwest corner of a tract confirmed to Jean Baptiste Chovin; thence south thirty-one degrees east, one hundred and thirteen chains sixty-one links, to a post standing on the border of river Detroit; thence, along the border of said river, south fifty-three degrees thirty minutes west, eighty chains fifty-eight links, to the place of beginning, the same not to exceed eighty arpents in depth from the Detroit river.

JOSEPH CAMPAU, of Grand Morais.
By GEORGE McDOUGALL, his Attorney.

Joseph Campau, of Grand Morais, appears to have made entry of his claim for second concession in due time, and also exhibits to this board the deeds of transfer to him from the original patentees of the widow and heirs of Jean Baptiste Campau, deceased; from all which it appears that the present claimant is the bona fide proprietor of the front farm, and that he is entitled to the back concession as claimed. The commissioners do therefore confirm to Joseph Campau, of Grand Morais, the tract of 104.14 acres of land, to be described in the survey and return of Joseph Fletcher, the surveyor thereto authorized; and that a final certificate and patent, according to the said description, do issue therefor to said Joseph.

Peter Van Avery, claim No. 52, rear of No. 337.

NOVEMBER 30, 1818.

Please take notice that I, Peter Van Avery, of the city of Detroit, claim, by virtue of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of lot No. 337, situate on the border of river Detroit, originally confirmed to Jean Baptiste Chovin, but which, by a regular chain of title, and particularly by a deed from David B. Macomb to me, the said Peter Van Avery, dated September 12, 1818, last past, for the consideration paid by me to him therein mentioned, is now my property, and which said deed is now filed in your office for record, containing sixty-six acres, so as to extend the same to eighty arpents, or French acres, in depth from the Detroit river, on which the original is fronted.

PETER VAN AVERY,
By his agent and attorney, GEORGE McDOUGALL.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

The front farm, in rear of which a second concession is here claimed, appears by the records of former boards to have been confirmed to Jean Baptiste Chovin. A deed from Charles Chovin to Mrs. Sarah Macomb, of the date of June 8, 1816, (also exhibited to this board,) contains, among other things, a recital that the said Charles was formerly proprietor of said front farm, and had, before the original claim for said front farm had been confirmed by any board of commissioners whatsoever, transferred his claim thereto to his son, Jean Baptiste Chovin, upon certain conditions; and that, after said transfer upon condition, the said farm was confirmed to Jean Baptiste Chovin; that after said confirmation the said Jean Baptiste Chovin was, and confessed himself to be, unable to fulfil the said conditions alluded to, and released and abandoned his interests therein to the said Charles Chovin, and afterwards died without issue. The said deed of said Charles, after said recital, then purports to convey the whole of the said front farm to the said Sarah Macomb. The subsequent deed of Mrs. Sarah Macomb, of the date of March 4, 1817, is also adduced, by which it appears that the said Sarah conveyed to David B. Macomb the whole of said front farm, and by the deed of said David B. Macomb, of September 12, 1818, the said David B. Macomb appears to have conveyed to said claimant, the said Peter Van Avery, the whole of said original front farm, as well also as all his right to a second concession therein. It further appears to the commissioners by the books, papers, and plats of former land boards in the premises, and especially by the return of Joseph Fletcher, esq., surveyor, thereto appointed and authorized, that there is vacant and unconceded land in the rear of and adjoining said front farm, and applicable to the object.

Wherefore, and upon consideration of all the premises, it is decided by this board that the claim of said claimant be granted, and that he be entitled to demand and have a patent for so much land in rear of said front farm as intervenes between the same and the rear line established by said Joseph Fletcher as the rear line of second concessions, amounting, by the return of said surveyor, to 71.27 acres, to be patented and described in literal conformity with the plat and return of survey of said Joseph Fletcher, but to be holden by him, the said Peter Van Avery, nevertheless, to and for the use and benefit of the actual and bona fide present proprietor of said front farm.

NOVEMBER 30, 1818.

Please take notice that I, Peter Van Avery, of the city of Detroit, claim, by virtue of an act of Congress of April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of lot No. 257, as numbered on the general plan of private claims confirmed by the commissioners of the United States land office at Detroit, to John, William, and David Macomb, situated on the border of the Detroit river, containing 97.22 acres of land, so as to extend the same to eighty arpents, or French acres, in depth from the said Detroit river, as grantee of said David Macomb, now called David B. Macomb, and agreeably to the deed of bargain and sale of the said David B. Macomb to me, the said Peter Van Avery, dated at Detroit, the twelfth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighteen, last past, as may be more fully seen, reference being had to the deed of the said David B. Macomb now filed in your office for record.

PETER VAN AVERY,
By GEORGE McDOUGALL, his Agent and Attorney.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

In this case it appears that the front farm, in virtue of property in which application is made for a second concession, was confirmed in 1808, by a former board of commissioners, to John, William, and David Macomb. No exhibits are made to this board by any claimant, except a deed appearing to have been executed regularly by David B. Macomb, one of the above-named confirmees, on the 12th of September, 1818, purporting to be a conveyance of the entire farm aforesaid to Peter Van Avery, together with the right to claim and have a patent for the entire back concession thereto. No deed or other evidence whatsoever is adduced tending to show, in anywise, the acquisition by said deed of the respective interests and estates either in the front or second concession of the other confirmees of the tract. In these circumstances the commissioners would wish to discover more satisfactory ground for presuming that the said David, by partition or otherwise, had acquired the entire interest in question. Nothing conclusive on this head has been shown. It appears, by reference to the files of this board, that Alexander Macomb, as agent for David B. Macomb, made regular entry for a second concession to the entire tract on the 7th of May, 1817, at which time, as well as before and subsequent to it, it is manifest that the other confirmees might, if they had interest in the subject, have made entry of their claims. Such appearing not to have been the fact, and it further appearing that the present claimant is in peaceable possession of the front farm, and that he has made a regular entry of claim for the rear, it is decided by the commissioners that the second concession be accorded to him, (the said Peter;) that the same be bounded and described as the same appears and is described in the survey, plat, and return thereof, duly made by Joseph Fletcher, esq., surveyor thereto legally appointed by which return the said second concession purports to contain 102.91 acres, to be holden by the said Peter Van Avery, his heirs, &c., to the use, nevertheless, of all the bona fide proprietors of the said front.

Pierre Cheine, claim No. 54, rear of No. 725.

On Wednesday, December 10, 1810, the commissioner of the land office at this place confirmed to Pierre Cheine lot No. 725, situate, lying, and being on the border of the Detroit river, containing, by the return of the surveyor, 165.11 acres.

In pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I, Touissaint Cheine, for my brother, Pierre Cheine, do enter the rear of the said farm, so as to extend it to eighty arpents, French measure, in depth.

TOUISSAINT CHEINE,
For PIERRE CHEINE.

[The decision on this claim will be found at the end of the next following claim.]

Gabriel Godfroy, sr., claim No. 55, rear of No. 725.

JUNE 9, 1818.

Take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I, Gabriel Godfroy, sr., as assignee of Pierre Cheine, to whom lot No. 725 was patented by the President of the United States, and by the said Pierre Cheine conveyed to me by deed bearing date August 25, 1818, by which said deed I am entitled to the northeast half of said lot No. 725, do enter the rear of the said northeast half of said lot or farm, No. 725, so as to extend the same to eighty arpents, French measure, in depth.

GABRIEL GODFROY, SR.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

It appears from the records of this office that Pierre Cheine was originally confirmed by a former board in the front farm, to which back concession is now claimed, and for which the commissioners have no doubt a patent was granted to him, although the same is not produced.

Gabriel Godfroy, sen., produces a deed duly executed by the said Pierre Cheine, dated August 25, 1818, conveying to the said Godfroy an equal half part of the original front farm, except such part as is situated between the river Detroit and the highway; and also all the right of back concession in rear of the said half part, being the upper or northeast part of the said original farm.

Therefore the commissioners confirm to the aforesaid Pierre Cheine and Gabriel Godfroy, sen., as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, the tract of land surveyed and returned by Joseph Fletcher, and containing, according to said return, one hundred and sixty-five acres and eighty-two hundredths of an acre, to be held by them according to their respective interests in the aforesaid front farm, lying and being situate in the rear of the said front farm, confirmed as aforesaid to Pierre Cheine, and to be further bounded and described agreeably to the said return of the said Joseph Fletcher, esq., thereto duly appointed and authorized as aforesaid.

Joseph Serre dit St. Jeane, claim No. 56, rear of No. 26.

JULY 12, 1818.

On July 26, 1807, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to me lot No. 26, lying and being on the border of Detroit river, containing, by the return of the surveyor, 119.13 acres. In pursuance, therefore, to an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 2, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of said farm, so as to extend it to eighty arpents in depth.

JOSEPH SERRE DIT ST. JEANE.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Claimant, in support of his entry of claim for back concession, produces the patent of the President of the United States, dated July 3, 1812, for the front farm, extending in depth forty arpents, from which it appears manifest that said claimant is entitled to the second concession. It further appears, from the return of the surveyor duly appointed, that there are vacant lands in the rear of the aforesaid front farm.

The commissioners do therefore confirm to Jeane Baptiste Serre dit St. Jeane one hundred and forty-nine acres and forty-two hundredths of an acre of land, to be bounded and described according to the said survey and return of Joseph Fletcher, esq., duly authorized to make the same.

Widow and heirs of J. B. Chovin, claim No. 57, rear of No. 641.

AUGUST 12, 1818.

On April 19, 1809, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to us, the widow and heirs of Jeane Baptiste Chovin, lot No. 641, situate, lying, and being on the border of the river Detroit, containing, by the return of the surveyor, 108.88 acres of land. In pursuance, therefore, of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," we now enter the rear of said farm so as to extend it eighty arpents in depth.

The preceding claim was put in for the widow and heirs of J. B. Chovin.

Claimant, in support of the above entry, produces the patent of the President of the United States, dated July 3, 1812, granted to the heirs of J. B. Chovin, from which it appears that the said farm, so confirmed by patent, does not extend to the full depth of eighty arpents; and as the surveyor's return evidences vacant land for the satisfaction of this claim, therefore the commissioners confirm to the heirs and legal representatives of Jeane Baptiste Chovin, deceased, nineteen acres and eighty-three hundredths of an acre of land, to be bounded and described in the patent certificate and patent (to which said claimants are entitled) according to the plat, survey, and return made by Joseph Fletcher, esq., duly authorized to make the same.

JUNE 8, 1818.

SIR: Please take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of lot No. 638, as numbered on the map or plan exhibiting the private claims as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend the said lot or farm to eighty arpents in depth; which said lot is on the border of the river Detroit.

JOSEPH CAMPAU,
Assignee of Antoine Billon dit Lesperouse.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

In support of the above claim for second concession, Joseph Campau exhibits to this board the patent of the President of the United States for the front farm; by which patent, and especially by the records and proceedings of former boards, it appears that the said front tract was confirmed to Antoine Billon dit Lesperouse, and conveyed by said patent to said claimant as assignee of said Antoine.

It appearing to this board that there is vacant land applicable to the object; that the said front farm does not contain a depth of eighty French arpents; and that said Joseph Campau is entitled to said second concession—

It is therefore decided by this board that said second concession be patented to said Joseph Campau, and that the tract patented be described according to the plat and survey thereof made by Joseph Fletcher, esq., surveyor thereto lawfully appointed, and according to his return thereof, the same tract containing, as appears by said return, eleven acres and five-hundreths of an acre of land.

Jaques Marsac, claim No. 59, rear of No. 687.

NOVEMBER 30, 1818.

SIR: Please take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of the following lot, viz: lot No. 687, as numbered on the plan or map exhibiting the private claims as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend the said lot or farm to eighty arpents in depth; which said lot is on the border of the river Detroit.

GEORGE McDOUGALL,
Agent and Attorney for said Jaques Marsac.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

The commissioners, upon an examination of the proceedings of the former land boards relative to the above tract or front farm, find that the survey thereof did not extend to the full depth of eighty arpents, and that there remain vacant lands in the rear of said front farm, and that the said claimant is justly entitled to a second concession. The board do therefore confirm to Jaques Marsac (or to his heirs, if his death shall be made to appear, as is suggested) twenty-four acres and ninety-two hundredths of an acre of land, being the quantity returned by Joseph Fletcher, esq., as necessary to extend the said front farm to the depth of eighty arpents, French measure, and that a patent certificate therefor be granted according to the survey and return made by the said Joseph Fletcher, who has been duly authorized and appointed to make the same.

Robert Marsac, claim No. 60, rear of No. 392.

SIR: Please take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of lot No. 392, (as numbered on the general plan or map exhibiting the private claims,) as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend the said lots or farms to eighty arpents in depth; which said lot is on the border of Detroit river.

GEORGE McDOUGALL,
Attorney and Agent for Robert Marsac.

In support of the above claim for second concession, the patent of the President of the United States, dated July 24, 1811, is adduced, from which it appears that the claimant is not confirmed in the full distance of eighty arpents originally claimed, and therefore that he is entitled to the second concession so as to extend to that distance; and by the survey and return of Joseph Fletcher, esq., duly authorized, it further appears that claimant is entitled to twenty-four acres and twenty-six hundreths of an acre as second concession. Therefore the commissioners confirm to Robert Marsac, the original patentee of the front farm aforesaid, a tract of land to be bounded and described as per the return of said surveyor, and containing twenty-four acres and twenty-six hundredths of an acre.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Henry Connor, claim No. 61, rear of No. 386.

DETROIT, November 10, 1818.

SIR: Please to take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of the following lot or farm, viz: lot No. 386, as numbered on the general plan or map, exhibiting the private claims as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend the said lot or farm to eighty arpents in depth; said lot being on the border of Detroit river.

HENRY CONNOR.

PETER AUDRAIN, Esq.,
Register of the Land Office for the district of Detroit, in the Territory of Michigan.

The claimant produces evidence satisfactory to the commissioners that he is the bona fide proprietor of the front farm originally confirmed to Joseph Leonard Tremble, No. 386; and it also appearing to the board that claimant is entitled to a back concession—

Therefore the commissioners confirm to Henry Connor forty-two acres and sixty-hundredths of an acre of land, which, as appears by the survey and return of Joseph Fletcher, esq., surveyor, will make up the deficiency necessary to extend the said original farm to the depth of eighty arpents, French measure, and to be bounded and designated agreeably to the said survey and return; to be holden, nevertheless, to the sole use of the bona fide proprietor of the said front farm.

JUNE 6, 1817.

SIR: Please take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of lot No. 322, as numbered on the general plan or map exhibiting the private claims as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend the said lot or farm to eighty arpents in depth; which said lot is on the border of the Detroit river.

GEORGE McDOUGALL,
Agent and Attorney for the heirs of Nicholas Campau.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

There was also filed in the register's office, on the 26th day of August, 1817, a notice of claim for the above tract.

JAQUES CAMPAU,
Administrator to the estate of Nicholas Campau, deceased.

And also another notice, dated November 30, 1818, by the same person, for the same tract.

The commissioners, upon examination of the records of a former land board, find that a tract of land was confirmed to Nicholas Campau, now deceased, extending in depth forty arpents. They are also convinced, from the evidence exhibited, that the heirs of said Campau are justly entitled, under the existing acts of Congress, to a donation of land as second concession; and it appears by the survey and return of Joseph Fletcher, esq., the surveyor thereto duly appointed, that there are vacant lands in rear of the above-mentioned front farm applicable to this object.

Therefore the commissioners confirm to the heirs of Nicholas Campau, deceased, one hundred and sixty-six acres and forty-two hundredths of an acre of land, that being the quantity surveyed and returned by the said surveyor under the instructions of this board, to be bounded and described agreeably to the survey and return of the aforesaid surveyor.

Joseph Campau, assignee of the heirs of Joseph Pomerville, deceased, claim No. 63, rear of No. 315.

AUGUST 6, 1817.

On the 7th day of September, 1808, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to the widow and heirs of Joseph Pomerville, deceased, lot No. 315, situate, lying, and being on the border of the Detroit river, containing, by the return of the surveyor, one hundred and six acres and fifty-four, hundredths of an acre, and bounded in front by the Detroit river, in rear by unconceded lands, above by lands claimed by Louis Moran, below by lands of the late Nicholas Campau, deceased.

In pursuance, therefore, of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I, Joseph Campau, as assignee of the heirs of Joseph Pomerville, deceased, do enter the rear of lot No. 315, so as to extend it to eighty arpents in depth.

JOSEPH CAMPAU,
Assignee of the heirs of J. Pomerville.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

In the examination of this claim, the commissioners find that an entry was in due time made in behalf of the heirs of Joseph Pomerville, deceased; that afterwards this said tract was sold to William Woodbridge; and that he also made entry of claim for second concession, in due time, as assignee of the widow and heirs of Joseph Pomerville, deceased; and that the said claim was duly filed by the register of the land office at Detroit. Claimant also adduces the patent of the President of the United States, granted to the said widow and heirs of Joseph Pomerville, deceased, dated May 30, 1811, for the said front farm; and further shows to the board, by satisfactory evidence, that said front farm was conveyed as aforesaid to the said William, and by him to the said Joseph, and that the said William had transferred to him, said Joseph, all his claim and right to a second concession to the said front farm, without recourse; and that said William had desired that his said entry for said second concession might enure to the sole use of him, the said Joseph, his heirs and assigns; and it appearing further to this board that there is vacant land in rear of said farm applicable to the object, and that said claimant is manifestly entitled to it, and to the benefit of said entry of said William—

Therefore it is considered, and so decided, that the second concession aforesaid be accorded to said Joseph, and that the same be patented to him, his heirs and assigns, according to the survey, plan, and return of Joseph Fletcher, esq., surveyor thereto legally appointed, by which said return it appears that said second concession contains one hundred and twelve acres and forty-seven hundredths of an acre.

NOVEMBER 28, 1818.

SIR: Please to take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of the following lot or farm, viz: No. 689, as numbered on the general plan or map exhibiting the private claims as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend the said lot or farm to eighty arpents in depth; which said lot is on the border of the river Detroit.

JOSEPH CAMPAU,
As Assignee of Pierre Lequire dit Loderonte.

PETER AUDRAIN, Esq.,
Register of the Land Office for the district of Detroit, in the Territory of Michigan.

In this case, the files of the register's office exhibit an entry of claim made in due time. Claimant produces the patent of the President of the United States, granted to Pierre Loderonte, assignee of Louis Moran, for the said front farm, dated July 10, 1811; upon which patent a conveyance is duly executed by the said Pierre Lequire dit Loderonte and wife, conveying to Joseph Campau all their right, title, and interest in and to said tract, dated February 22, 1814.

And it appearing to the commissioners that Joseph Campau, the aforesaid assignee, is justly entitled to a second concession as claimed, and also that, by the return of Joseph Fletcher, esq., there are vacant lands in rear of this farm applicable to the object, the commissioners do therefore confirm to the said Joseph Campau one hundred and nine acres and three hundredths of an acre of land, to be bounded and described according to the survey, plat, and return of the said Joseph Fletcher, esq., surveyor duly appointed and authorized to make the said survey, plat, and return.

NOVEMBER 28, 1818.

SIR: Please take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to land in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of the following lot or farm, viz: lot No. 131, as numbered on the general plan or map exhibiting the private claims as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend the said lot or farm to eighty arpents in depth; which said lot is on the border of the river Detroit.

JOSEPH CAMPAU.

PETER AUDRAIN, Esq.,
Register of the Land Office for the district of Detroit, in the Territory of Michigan.

Joseph Campau, in support of the above claim, produces the patent of the President of the United States, granted to him for the front farm, dated June 13, 1812, from which it appears that the front farm thereby confirmed extends to the depth of forty arpents only; and it further appears to the commissioners, by the return of the surveyor duly authorized, that there are vacant lands in rear of this tract applicable to the object.

Therefore the commissioners confirm to the said Joseph Campau, as second concession, one hundred and seven acres and sixty-two hundredths of an acre, to be bounded and described according to the survey, plat, and return of Joseph Fletcher, esq., the surveyor duly authorized to survey and return the same, and containing, agreeably to said survey and return, one hundred and seven acres and sixty-two hundredths of an acre; and that said Campau be entitled to receive a patent for said tract.

Pierre Grifford, claim No. 66, rear of No. 219.

NOVEMBER 20, 1818.

Take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I, Pierre Grifford, enter the rear of the northeast half of lot No. 219, the whole of said lot being patented to me by the President of the United States. I enter the same as aforesaid, so that the said lot or farm may extend in depth eighty acres; said tract or lot is situated on the border of Detroit river.

PIERRE GRIFFORD.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Pierre Grifford and Isidore Moran appear to be the bona fide proprietors of the front farm to which second concession is claimed. In support of this claim they produce the patent of the President of the United States, dated June 17, 1812, granted to the said Pierre Grifford, upon which patent is endorsed a deed duly executed by the said Grifford, dated December 4, 1819, thereby conveying to Isidore Moran the moiety or equal half part of the tract confirmed to the said Grifford by the said patent, being the southwest part or half thereof. It therefore appears that the said Pierre Grifford and Isidore Moran are entitled to receive a patent for a second concession; and there appearing to the commissioners, from the survey, plat, and return of the duly authorized surveyor, to be vacant lands in the rear applicable to the object—

The commissioners do confirm to the said Pierre Grifford and Isidore Moran one hundred and six acres and twenty-six hundredths of land, to be bounded and described according to the said survey and plat of Joseph Fletcher, esq., duly appointed and authorized to make the same under the directions and instructions of this board.

NOVEMBER 10, 1818.

On December 21, 1808, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to me lot No. 321, situate, lying, and being on the border of the river Detroit, containing, by the return of the surveyor, two hundred and seventeen acres and five hundredths of an acre. In pursuance, therefore, of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of the southwest half of said lot No. 321, so as to make it extend to eighty arpents, French measure, in depth.

LOUIS GRIFFORD, JR.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

James W. Little, claim No. 68, rear of No. 321, northeast half of No. 321.

NOVEMBER 10, 1818.

SIR: Please take notice that I, James W. Little, assignee of Louis Grifford, and Janette, his wife, by deed of bargain and sale, (for the consideration therein mentioned,) dated the tenth day of October, one thousand eight hundred and eighteen, claim, by virtue of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," and I now enter the northeast or upper half of the farm No. 321, confirmed to the said Louis Grifford; the one-half of which contains one hundred and eight acres and seventy-nine and a half hundredths acres of land, numbered on the general plan of private claims confirmed by the commissioners of the United States land office at Detroit, situated on the border of the river Detroit, so as to extend the same to eighty arpents, or French acres, in depth from said Detroit river, as may be more fully seen, reference being had to the deed of said Louis Grifford and Janette Grifford now filed in your office for record.

GEORGE McDOUGALL,
Agent and Attorney for said James W. Little.

The REGISTER of the United States Land Office at Detroit.

From the records of the former commissioners, it fully appears that the front farm above mentioned was confirmed to Louis Grifford, one of the above claimants. A deed duly executed is exhibited to this board, signed by Louis Grifford and wife, conveying to the said John W. Little (the other of the above claimants) the upper moiety or northeast half part of the said front farm, containing one hundred and eight acres and seventy-nine and a half hundredths. From all which the board are satisfied that the said claimants are justly entitled under existing laws to a second concession; and it appearing further, by the survey, plat, and return by the duly authorized surveyor thereto appointed, that there are vacant lands applicable to the object in rear of said front farm—

Therefore the commissioners do confirm to Louis Grifford and James W. Little a tract of land, as second concession, containing one hundred and ninety-six acres and fourteen hundredths of an acre, to be bounded and described according to the survey, plat, and return of Joseph Fletcher, esq., duly appointed and authorized to make the same under the instructions of this board; to be holden by said claimants, nevertheless, as tenants in common, according to their respective interests in said front farm, or according to their agreements relative to the said tract now confirmed.

NOVEMBER 30, 1818.

SIR: Please take notice that I claim, as grantee of Charles Paupard and of Hyacynth Dejerdin, administrator of the estate of Jeane Bpt. Allaire dit Lapierre, late of the city of Detroit, shoemaker, deceased, and by virtue of a decree of the honorable the judges of the supreme court of the said Territory of Michigan, entered up at the term of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighteen, a donation from the United States, by virtue of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and renewed by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit;" and I now enter with you the rear of continuation of two arpents in front and width, being the southwest half of a tract of land confirmed to the said Jeane Bpt. Allaire dit Lapierre, situate on the border of the river Detroit, at the Grand Morais, so as to extend the same to eighty arpents in depth from the said Detroit river, numbered 120 on the general plan or map of private claims in Michigan, containing ninety-three acres and eighty-one and one-half hundredths of an acre of land; being the one-half of one hundred and eighty-seven and sixty hundredths, the whole quantity in said tract, and is particularized in the proceedings before Charles Larned, register of the territorial districts of Erie, Huron, and Detroit, and of the supreme court of the Territory of Michigan, of the term of September, 1818; a copy of the record of which is now filed for the information of the commissioners of the United States General Land Office, and for your own government.

GEORGE McDOUGALL.

The REGISTER of the United States Land Office at Detroit.

[See the decision on this claim at the end of the next succeeding claim.]

Jeane Bpt. Allaire dit Lapierre, claim No. 70, rear of No. 120.

NOVEMBER 28, 1818.

SIR: Please take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed the 23d day of April, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of the northeast half of lot or farm No. 120, on the general plan of survey; the whole of said tract having been originally confirmed to me by patent of the President of the United States, but the southwest half of which has been deeded to George McDougall, esquire, by me, so as to extend it to eighty arpents in depth; said tract is situated on the border of Detroit river.

GEORGE McDOUGALL,
Attorney and Agent of Jeane Bpt. Allaire dit Lapierre.

PETER AUDRAIN, Esq.,
Register of the Land Office for the district of Detroit, in the Territory of Michigan.

From the records of former commissioners it appears to this board that Jeane Bpt. Allaire dit Lapierre was the original confirmee of the front farm above described. It further appears, in virtue of certain agreements entered into prior to the said confirmation, that the said Lapierre was bound to convey a certain portion of the said tract, upon his receiving the patent for the said front farm, to Charles Paupard dit La Fleur, and that George McDougall now claims, as assignee of the said Paupard dit La Fleur. It further appears that, by a decree of the supreme court of the Territory of Michigan, the title and interest of the said George McDougall in said front farm, as assignee of Paupard dit Fleur aforesaid, has been fully recognized. From which premises it appears that the present claimants have an equal interest in the front of said farm; and it appearing also to this board that the claimants are manifestly entitled to a second concession, and that there are vacant lands in rear of said farm applicable to the object—

Therefore, it being suggested that J. B. Allaire is dead, the commissioners do confirm to the heirs of Jeane Bpt. Allaire dit Lapierre and to George McDougall, as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, a tract of land as second concession or donation, according to their respective notices of claim, viz: to the said heirs the northeast or upper part or half, to hold the same according to their respective interests therein, and according to the decree of the court aforesaid, containing in the whole one hundred and thirty-eight acres and forty-three hundredths of an acre of land; and to be further bounded and described as per the survey and return of Joseph Fletcher, esquire, duly appointed, and by this board instructed, to make the same, and containing, agreeably to this return, one hundred and thirty-eight acres and forty-three hundredths of an acre as aforesaid.

NOVEMBER 28, 1818.

SIR: Please take notice that, in pursuance of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I now enter the rear of lot or farm No. 570, as numbered in the general plan or map exhibiting the private claims as confirmed by the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, so as to extend the said lot or farm to eighty arpents in depth; which said lot is on the border of the river Detroit.

CATHARINE THIBAULT.

PETER AUDRAIN, Esq.,
Register of the Land Office for the district of Detroit, in the Territory of Michigan.

Upon reference to the proceedings of former commissioners, it appears that claimant was the original confirmee and patentee of the front farm claimed, and therefore that she is entitled to the second concession. It also appears by the survey, plat, and return of Joseph Fletcher, esquire, surveyor duly authorized to make the same, that there are vacant lands applicable to the object; therefore the commissioners do confirm to the said Catharine Thibault two hundred and twenty-five acres and sixteen hundredths of an acre of land, as back concession or donation, so as to extend the same to the depth of eighty arpents; to be bounded and described agreeably to the return of Joseph Fletcher, esquire, aforesaid, thereto duly appointed.

John Little, claim No. 72, rear of Nos. 126 and 127.

NOVEMEER 8, 1818.

Please take notice that, pursuant to an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I, William Little, as assignee of John Little, enter the rear of lots Nos. 126 and 127, containing, by the return of the surveyor, 266.63 acres, situate, lying, and being on the border of Detroit river, so as to extend the same to eighty arpents in depth.

WILLIAM LITTLE.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Claimant, in support of the above entry of claim for back concession, produces the patent of the President of the United States, dated May 12, 1812, conveying to John Little the front farm, numbered as above. It therefore appears that he is entitled to a donation and second concession, so as to extend the said front farm to the depth of eighty arpents, but to be holden to, and for the use of, said claimant, if he be the present bona fide assignee of the front, as stated.

Wherefore the commissioners do confirm to the said John Little three hundred and forty acres and eleven hundredths of an acre of land, (340.11,) to be bounded and described according to the survey, plat, and return of Joseph Fletcher, esquire, duly appointed to make the same, and so made under special instructions from this board, containing, according thereto, as aforesaid, three hundred and forty acres and eleven hundredths of an acre of land; the same to be holden to the use of the present bona fide owner of said front farm.

JULY 12, 1818.

On Wednesday, the 20th day of July, 1810, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to Beaufait & Loson lot No. 696, situate, lying, and being on the border of Detroit river, containing, by the return of the surveyor, 150.48 acres. In pursuance, therefore, of an act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act passed March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," we now enter the rear of said farm, so as to extend it to eighty arpents in depth.

BEAUFAIT & LOSON.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Louis Beaufait produces the patent of the President of the United States conveying to said Louis Beaufait and Antoine Loson the front farm bordering on the Detroit river, numbered, as above, 696.

The board are therefore of opinion that said claimants are entitled to a second concession and donation, and have accordingly instructed the surveyor, thereto duly authorized and appointed, to survey, plat, and return said back concession accordingly. The commissioners do confirm to the said Louis Beaufait and Antoine Loson 165.68 acres of land, to be bounded, described, and located according to the said return, plat, and survey; upon the production of whose plat and return to the register of the land office at Detroit, the said claimants, their assigns, &c., are, and shall be, entitled to ask for and receive a patent certificate therefor.

BOOK No. 3.

REPORT.

The undersigned commissioners, authorized by the act of Congress of February 21, 1823, to decide upon claims to donations or second concessions of lands situated between Grosse and Milk River Points, where the front farms, as aforesaid, have been heretofore confirmed, but which do not by such former confirmations extend to the depth of eighty arpents, French measure, beg leave to report:

That, in the examination of these claims, they have adopted the general principles which guided a former board in their decisions upon similar claims.

The present board found the same difficulties experienced by the former commissioners, appointed under the act of May 11, 1820, arising from the surveys and boundaries, established by law, of the front farms. It has therefore, in some instances, been found necessary, in according to claimants a donation or second concession of land, to transcend that power which, by a strict construction, the act first above named may seem to have intended. The peculiar hardship, however, of the operation of the first section of the act of Congress of April 23, 1812, it was considered the duty of the present board to consider, and to give to claimants such equitable remuneration as the justice of their former and present claims appeared to merit. By reason of bends in the margin of the adjacent waters, it happened not unfrequently that the original owners of lands bordering thereon were limited, by the lines of adjacent surveys, to a depth very far short of the extent by them claimed, and to a quantity of land much less. In cases of this kind, the board were of the unanimous opinion that where the front farms were thus shut out from a continuity to the public lands in rear, it was within their powers to assign to the bona fide proprietor of a front farm a second concession, to be located upon the public lands immediately adjoining upon the general rear line of the second concession, and as near to the front farm as other intervening confirmed claims would admit.

That the second concession was deemed by Congress a necessary appendage to the advantageous enjoyment of the front farm, for purposes of fuel, fencing, and other timber, appeared evident to this board. The commissioners, therefore, uniformly adopted that principle, unless, in conveyances of the front farm, some special reservation appeared; and it is not recollected that such limitation occurred in any instrument of conveyance exhibited to this board. Lest conflicting confirmations might be made, or the same lands adjudged upon different claims to different claimants, the commissioners deemed it most expedient to submit to the surveyor appointed by the surveyor general to execute the surveys of the private claims general views and instructions as to their confirmations, with the request that the surveys might be made in accordance with them, and a plat and return thereof made to the board. To effect this object has occasioned some delay in the transmission of this report; but the advantages of this course, it is believed, will more than counterbalance any inconvenience which the detention may occasion.

The commissioners, satisfied with the return of the surveyor, have, in most cases, been enabled to report the specific number of acres confirmed to each claimant, and avoided all variance which would otherwise have occurred between the quantity confirmed and the quantity ascertained upon actual admeasurement.

The commissioners would again respectfully repeat the expression of their intention and opinion, that nothing contained in the following, or any former report by them submitted, be construed to confirm to any one person, by any particular decision, any specific tract, in such manner as to affect the right of any individual claiming the same land; but such conflicting claims are intended to remain subject to be decided, according to law, by the proper tribunal.

NOTICE.

Claim No. 1.—J. Kearsley.

DETROIT, September 20, 1823.

SIR: Please to take notice that, as the remote assignee of Mrs. Sarah Macomb, executrix and administratrix of the late William Macomb, deceased, I now enter and make claim to a certain tract of land situated upon Grosse Isle, containing one hundred and fifty acres, in rear of a tract purchased and now owned by me; all which will more fully appear from the documentary evidence of title which will, in due time, be submitted.

J. KEARSLEY.

JOHN. BIDDLE, Esq., Register.

Major Kearsley, in support of the above claim, submits to the majority of the land board appointed under the act of Congress of February 21, 1823, the following remarks and evidence in behalf of his claim:

To the majority of the land board appointed under the act of Congress of February 21, 1823, to adjust the title of lands in the district of Detroit, &c.:

"GENTLEMEN: Being myself interested in a claim filed with the register of the land office for the consideration of this land board, of which I am a member, I beg leave, with the title papers upon which my claim is founded, to submit the following remarks: It will be observed that it was not until the 4th of August last that I became the proprietor of the front farm. The board of commissioners appointed under the act of May 11, 1820, confirmed, in virtue of the various claims filed in due time by the respective heirs and claimants to the several front farms upon Grosse Isle, this tract, of which I now claim a part, to Mrs. Sarah Macomb, as executrix and administratrix of William Macomb, deceased. At the time those claims were considered by the board, in 1821, no claim to land upon Grosse Isle was preferred, unless by the said heirs, &c., except one case, viz: that of Simon Perkins, who claimed, in virtue of an assignment to him, indirectly, as their remote assignee; at that time the then board did unanimously affirm the claim of Mr. Perkins. This case, it will be found, was, in every respect, parallel to that now made by me. This claim is now submitted to the present board, because the purchase was made by me posterior to the removal of Major Brevoort from the board of 1820, by his appointment as Indian agent; but as the report of the commissioners of 1820 was not made up or transmitted prior to the purchase of the front farm by me, I submitted the matter to my colleague, Mr. Woodbridge, the only member then, with myself, remaining of that board, with the request that, although he was aware no decision could by him alone be made, his opinion might be expressed upon this claim. Mr. Woodbridge has expressed his opinion, after having reviewed my chain of title to the front farm, and, I believe, it will be found clearly in favor of my claim, founded upon the general principle unanimously adopted by both the former and present board, viz: that the rear be holden by the present proprietor of the front, where such proprietor makes claim; and, where the present proprietor does not appear, then that the rear be holden by the claimant, who does appear, in trust and for the use of such as may now be the bona fide proprietor of the front. I beg leave respectfully to refer the present board to the opinion of Mr. Woodridge, contained in the report of the board of 1820, upon back concessions.

"I beg, also, to refer to the same report for the evidence of title from the original patentees to myself, which is also now submitted.

"I am, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

"J. KEARSLEY."

In relation to the preceding claim of Major J. Kearsley, it appears to a majority of the commissioners that the tract of land upon the possession of which his claim to back concession was founded, was transferred to the individual under whom he immediately claims subsequent to the entry of claim on the part of the original confirmees, (or their assignees,) but prior to the confirmation made by the commissioners under the law of 1820, agreeably to said entry. He would therefore appear to be entitled to the benefits of the laws of 1812 and 1820 in relation to back concessions. In the report of the proceedings of the commissioners of 1820, a back concession is granted to the tract in question to the person or persons from whom the immediate grantor to the applicant, Major Kearsley, derives his title. In justice, therefore, to the present claimant, it is respectfully recommended by a majority of the commissioners that his rights be guarded by a direct grant to him, or by conditional title to the claimant or claimants to whom confirmation was made under the law of 1820.

Claim No. 2, rear of No. 391.—John Biddle.

DETROIT, September 27, 1823.

NOTICE.—I, John Biddle, hereby enter my claim, agreeably to law, to a donation of land in rear of a farm owned by me at Grosse Point, containing three arpents in front by forty in depth, more or less, and bounded on one side by Joseph Lewis Tremble, and on the other side by lands now or heretofore claimed by Rene Marsac.

JOHN BIDDLE.

John Biddle, in support of his claim to a donation of land in the rear of a farm owned by him at Grosse Point, produces the following papers: a deed from Charles Gouin, sr., to Henry Hudson, dated February 22, 1815, conveying to said Hudson a tract of land containing one hundred and twenty acres and ninety-four hundredths of an acre, situated on the border of Lake St. Clair, bounded and described as follows: beginning at a post standing on the border of Lake St. Clair, between this tract and a tract confirmed to Joseph Louis Tremble; thence north twenty-nine degrees west, one hundred and thirty-five chains seventy-eight links, to a post; thence north sixty-one degrees east, nine chains nine links, to a post, the southwest corner of a tract confirmed to Rene Marsac; thence south twenty-nine degrees east, one hundred and thirty chains thirty-two links, to a post standing on the border of Lake St. Clair; thence, along the border of said lake, south thirty degrees west, ten chains sixty-one links, to the place of beginning. Also a deed dated August 23, 1818, from O. W. Miller, Coonrad Ten Eyck, and Robert Smart; and another from Henry Hudson, of September 22, 1823, conveying the above-described premises to Edward Brooks; also a deed from said Edward Brooks, dated October 31, 1818, conveying the same to David Gwynne and John Biddle; a deed from John Biddle aforesaid to the said David Gwynne, conveying an undivided moiety of the aforesaid premises to him, dated November 6, 1820; and a deed from David Gwynne, conveying to said Biddle the tract of land above described, dated July 21, 1823.

John Biddle, the above claimant, being one of the members of the land board, declines deciding upon his own claim; and thereupon the other members of this board do, upon consideration, confirm to the said John Biddle, as back concession to the farm above described, ninety acres and forty-seven hundredths of an acre, according to the survey thereof made and returned by the surveyor duly authorized. It further appears to the aforesaid members of this board that the front farm was originally confirmed to Charles Gouin November 23, 1808, the assignor above mentioned, to whom they have no doubt a patent issued, but that said patent is lost or mislaid; and therefore that the said John Biddle is justly entitled to a confirmation of the rear or back concession as above described, in virtue of his assignments from said Gouin.

These deeds are stated to convey to Allaire three-fourths of the tract described in the patent; the remaining fourth belongs to Ambrose Tremble.

The said confirmation being in conformity to the survey of John Mullet, made under the direction of this board, with the consent and at the request of the said claimants, as is represented by the said surveyor.

Claim No. 14, rear of Nos. 273 and 262.

DETROIT, May 3, 1823.

NOTICE.—Henry Hudson enters his claim to donations of land in rear of his farms situated on the border of Lake St. Clair, and below Milk River Point, Nos. 262 and 273, by the board of commissioners who originally confirmed the same.

Henry Hudson, in support of his claims to donations of lands in the rear of his farms at Grosse Point, produces the following papers: a patent from the President of the United States to Nicholas Patenode, granting to him a tract of land containing 19.85 acres, situated on the border of Lake St. Clair, bounded and described as follows: beginning at a post standing on the border of Lake St. Clair, between this tract and a tract confirmed to William Robinson and Hugh R. Martin; thence north 64° west, 17 chains 4 links, to a post standing on the east line of a tract confirmed to William Robinson and Hugh R. Martin; thence, on said line, north 29° west, 14 chains 65 links, to a post; thence south 64° east, 30 chains 22 links, to a post standing on the border of Lake St. Clair, between this tract and a tract confirmed to George Meldrum; thence, along the border of said lake, south 34° west, 8 chains 48 links, to the place of beginning; also a transfer duly executed from said Nicholas Patenode to Jean Baptiste Petit, dated June 30, 1814, and a conveyance from said Jean Baptiste Petit to Henry Hudson, dated July 1, 1814. In support of claim to rear of 262, said Hudson also produces the deed of George Meldrum duly executed, to whom, it is believed, the original claim was confirmed to William Robinson; and also evidence satisfactory to the commissioners, deducing the equitable title to this tract from said Robinson to the present claimant, Henry Hudson. Said tract is described as follows: bounded in front by Lake St. Clair, above by lands of Joseph Ellair, or widow Crique, and below by lands of Nicholas Patenode.

The commissioners confirm to Henry Hudson, as back concessions to the two farms above mentioned, the tract of land containing 300.65 acres, according to the returns of the surveyor authorized to make the same, and to be bounded and described agreeably to said return and survey; saving, however, all the legal or equitable rights and interests of Jean Baptiste Petit, or other heirs or legal representatives of Nicholas Patenode, deceased, in and to so much of the above land hereby confirmed as may be granted as donation or second concession in rear of or appurtenant to the lower or southwest of the above-described farms, and numbered by the former commissioners, who confirmed the same, No. 273.

NOTICE.—Jean Baptiste Petit also files his claim for a donation or second concession in rear of the tract of land originally patented to his father-in-law, Nicholas Patenode, deceased, originally numbered 273 by the commissioners who confirmed the same, being the first of the above-mentioned tracts, a back or second concession to which is claimed by Henry Hudson.

The claimant, Jean Bpt. Petit, states that it was not his intention, at any time, to convey the right of second concession to his farm. And it appears, upon reference to the deed of said Patenode, duly executed to this claimant, by him adduced to this board, that said Patenode does therein expressly advert to the fact of his farm being limited in rear by the survey of Aaron Greely, esq., to a depth very far short of that originally claimed and occupied by him, the said Patenode. Said Patenode does also expressly, in said deed, convey to said Petit all the equitable right to a donation of land to which he considered himself entitled by the reason of the injustice done to him by the surveyor. Under all the circumstances of this case, the commissioners are fully of opinion that great injustice was done to the said Patenode; and that the survey, upon which a patent was granted to him, was not made in conformity to the original entry of said Patenode, as appears by that entry and proceedings of former commissioners now before this board. The commissioners do therefore respectfully recommend to the reviewing power that there be confirmed to Jean Baptiste Petit a tract of land, not exceeding two hundred arpents, to be located on such of the adjacent public lands as may remain unappropriated and unsold; and that said Jean Baptiste Petit be allowed to cause the same to be surveyed, or otherwise located, so that, upon return thereof to the register of the land office, a patent certificate and patent may be obtained for the same; to be holden, nevertheless, by the said Petit, in trust for his own use, and the use of the other heirs of the said Nicholas Patenode, now deceased, and in full satisfaction of their claim to said donation or second concession.

DETROIT, September 23, 1823.

NOTICE.—I, Joseph Allaire, hereby enter my claim to a donation in rear of a tract of land situated at Grosse Point, containing one arpent in front; being the same granted, by patent of the President of the United States, to the widow and heirs of Jean Baptiste Crique.

JOSEPH ALLAIRE.

DETROIT, September 23, 1823.

Joseph Allaire, in support of his claim to a donation of land in rear of his farm on Lake St. Clair, below Milk River Point, produces the following papers: a patent from the President of the United States to the widow and heirs of Jean Baptiste Crique, dated October 7, 1811, conveying to them a tract of land containing 12.5 acres, situated on the border of Lake St. Clair, and bounded and described as follows: beginning at a post standing on the border of Lake St. Clair, between this tract and a tract confirmed to George Meldrum; thence north 64° west, 39 chains 31 links, to a post standing on the east line of a tract confirmed to William Robinson and Hugh R. Martin; thence, on said line, north 29° west, 5 chains 7 links, to a post; thence south 64° east, 43 chains 47 links, to a post standing on the border of Lake St. Clair, between this tract and a tract confirmed to the widow Allaire; thence, along the border of said lake, south 51° west, 2 chains 92 links, to the place of beginning; also a deed, duly executed, from Madelaine Crique, widow of Jean Baptiste Crique, conveying to said Allaire all her right and title to the above-described tract, deed dated June 15, 1819; also a deed from Mary King, described as one of the heirs of J. B. Crique, conveying to Joseph Allaire her interest in the above-described tract, and dated June 15, 1819; also a deed from Jean Baptiste Crique, conveying to Joseph Allaire all his right and interest in a piece of land situated at Grosse Point, containing an acre in front, belonging to the estate of his father, J. B. Crique, sen., presumed to be the same tract described in the above-recited patent, deed dated January 24, 1816; also a deed from Bazil Crique and Jean Baptiste Comparet, jr., represented as two of the heirs of Jean Baptiste Crique, sen., conveying to Jean Baptiste Comparet, sen., two-elevenths, being their shares of a tract of land at Grosse Point, confirmed by the commissioners to the widow and heirs of Jean Baptiste Crique, sen., deed dated June 11, 1810; also a deed from Jean Baptiste Comparet, sen., Jean Baptiste Comparet, jr., and George Cottrell, conveying to Anselm Petit a piece of land of fifty feet in front by forty arpents in depth, more or less, being three-elevenths of a tract of one acre in front by the depth before-mentioned, inherited by Bazil Crique and Jean Baptiste Comparet, jr., as having married Anniesse Crique, which they conveyed to Jean Baptiste Comparet, sen., and by George Cottrell, as having married Cicele Crique; said fifty feet bounded in front by Lake St. Clair, in rear by unconceded land, on the northeast by Joseph Allaire, and on the southwest by that part of the said arpent which belongs to the other heirs of the said Jean Baptiste Crique, sen., deceased, deed dated July 16, 1810; also a deed from said Anselm Petit, conveying to Joseph Allaire all the rights acquired by the conveyance above recited, from Jean Baptiste Comparet, sen. and jr., and George Cottrell, to said tract, deed acknowledged April 24, 1815.

Joseph Allaire also produces a paper, dated Grosse Point, February 23, 1819, signed by Pat. McGalpin and Madelaine McGalpin, and witnessed by Timothy Young, by which said Pat. Claim No. 23, rear of François Furton.

NOTICE.

DETROIT, September 30, 1823.

SIR: Please take notice that the land board acting under the law of Congress of May 11, 1820, confirmed to me a certain tract of land bordering upon Lake St. Clair, below Milk River Point, which tract of land, although originally about three arpents in front by forty in depth, yet was so cut off by the lines of the adjacent tracts, as surveyed by Aaron Greely, esq., the surveyor of private claims, that it did not extend more than about six or seven arpents in depth, and then to an entire point, making my tract a small triangle of about twenty-three acres I therefore now make claim, as back concession and to make up the deficiency in front of which the established lines of former surveys have deprived me, to such quantity of land as the board of commissioners appointed under the act of February, 1823, may think me in justice and equity entitled to.

FRANÇOIS his + mark. FURTON.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Witness: JOHN BIDDLE.

The commissioners do therefore, upon examination of the proceedings of the board appointed under the act of May 11, 1820, find that the matters set forth in the above notice of François Furton are strictly true, and do confirm to the said François Furton, to whom the front was confirmed by the board as above stated, 169.67 acres of land in rear of the land heretofore confirmed to him, to be bounded and described as per the survey and return of the surveyor thereto duly appointed.

Claim No. 24, rear of No. 631.—Louis A. Tremble.

NOTICE.—Louis A. Tremble makes entry of claim to a second concession or tract of donation land in rear of that now occupied by him, situate upon Lake St. Clair, bounded above by a tract of land owned by Jean Baptiste Tremble, below by a tract claimed by François Furton.

The claimant, in support of his claim, produces a deed duly executed by François Ambrose Tremble, the original patentee, his father, dated August 23, 1815, from which it appears that the upper moiety or undivided half part was conveyed to the present claimant and the lower half part was conveyed to his mother, Madam Madalaine Minie Tremble, the wife of the grantor.

It fully appears to the commissioners that claimant is entitled to a back concession to that part of the tract above described which was duly conveyed to him by his father, and that the mother of the claimant is equally entitled to a back concession to that part assigned to her by her deceased husband. The commissioners do therefore confirm to Madam Madalaine Minie Tremble, and to her son, Louis Ambrose Tremble, a tract of land (as a donation or second concession) containing 129.48 acres, agreeably to the survey and return of the surveyor thereto duly appointed, to be bounded and described as per said survey, plat, and return; to be holden by them as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, to each an equal undivided half part.

No. 25, rear of No. 240.—J. B. Tremble.

NOTICE.—Jean Baptiste Tremble makes entry of claim to a second concession or tract of donation land in rear of that now occupied by him, situate upon Lake St. Clair, and below Milk River Point, bounded above by a tract of land owned by Leon Vernier dit Ladoucer, below by a tract claimed by Louis Tremble.

John Baptiste Tremble, in support of the above claim, produces a deed from Nicholas Rivard, being for the same tract which Nicholas Rivard bought from Jean Baptiste Doumay.

Nicholas Rivard appeared also before the board and states that he sold the front farm to which back concession is now claimed, and that the claimant, Jean Baptiste Tremble, is the just owner thereof, it being the same tract that was patented to Jean Baptiste Doumay and sold by exchange to this witness.

The commissioners confirm to Jean Baptiste Tremble 91.30 acres, as per two distinct returns and surveys thereof by the surveyor duly authorized to make the same.

THOMAS WILLETS, for Levi Willets.

Thomas Willets, in behalf of Levi Willets, produces the following title papers in support of the claim of the latter to a donation of land in rear of his farm on Lake St. Clair, below Milk River Point, viz: a patent from the President of the United States to Henry St. Bernard for 104.74 acres, bounded and described as follows: beginning at a post standing on the border of Lake St. Clair, between this tract and a tract confirmed to Julien Campau; thence north 75° west, 120 chains 12 links, to a post; thence north 15° east, 8 chains 73 links, to a post, the southwest corner of a tract confirmed to Laurent Grifford· thence south 75° east, 122 chains 13 links, to a post standing on the border of Lake St. Clair; thence, along the border of said lake, south 28° west, 8 chains 96 links, to the place of beginning. Patent dated June 1, 1811.

Also a deed from Thomas Willets to Levi Willets, dated January 25, 1816, conveying to the latter the above-described tract, which deed appears to be duly executed and recorded.

The commissioners confirm to Levi Willets a tract of land in rear of the above-described front, containing 83.21 acres, located, bounded, and described as per the return of the authorized surveyor.

Claim No. 28, rear of No. 183.—François Thibault.

NOTICE.—I hereby make entry of a donation of land in rear of my farm at Grosse Point, on the border of Lake St. Clair, containing some three arpents in front by forty in depth, bounded on the upper side by Jean Baptiste Ladoucer dit Vernier, and on the lower side by land claimed by Willets.

FRANÇOIS his ⋈ mark. THIBAULT.

François Thibault, in support of his claim to a donation of land in rear of his farm on Lake St. Clair, below Milk River Point, produces the following papers: a patent from the President of the United States, dated June 15, 1812, granting to Laurent Grifford a tract of land situate on Lake St. Clair, containing one hundred and three and eighty-four hundredths acres, and bounded and described as follows: beginning at a post standing on the border of Lake St. Clair, between this tract and a tract confirmed to Henry St. Bernard; thence north 75° west, 110 chains 13 links, to a black-ash tree; thence north 15° east, 9 chains 53 links, to a post, the southwest corner of a tract confirmed to Jean Baptiste Vernier dit Ladoucer; thence south 75° east, 109 chains 96 links, to a post standing on the border of Lake St. Clair; thence, along the border of said lake, south 14° west, 9 chains 53 links, to the place of beginning.

DETROIT, March 31, 1823.

NOTICE.—I hereby enter my claim, under the law of February 21, 1823, to a donation of land in rear of my farms on Lake St. Clair, below Milk River Point. The documents on which my claims are founded will be laid before the commissioners.

JOSEPH ⋈ RENEAU.

SEPTEMBER 19, 1823.

Joseph Renau, in support of his claim to a donation of land in rear of his farm, on Lake St. Clair, below Milk River Point, produces the following documents, viz: a joint deed from Antoine Reneau and Archange Reneau, his wife; Jaques Reneau, Laurent Reneau, Francis Reneau and Mary, his wife; Jean Baptiste Durette and Marianne, his wife; Catharine Reneau, Louis Peltier and Harriet, his wife; Jean Baptiste Tremble and Rennette, his wife; François Grifford and Cecile, his wife; Julien Forton and Angelique Forton, his wife; and Archange Reneau and Louis Reneau, the legal heirs of Louis Reneau, conveying to Joseph Reneau a tract of land described as follows: beginning at a post standing on the border of Lake St. Clair, between this tract and a tract confirmed to François Bonhomme; thence north seventy-five degrees west, one hundred and seventeen chains thirty links, to a post; thence north fifteen degrees east, eight chains ninety-one links, to a post standing on the south line of a tract confirmed to Jean Baptiste Sené; thence south seventy-five degrees east, one hundred and fifteen chains ninety-seven links, to a post standing on the border of Lake St. Clair; thence, along the border of said lake, south seven degrees thirty minutes west, nine chains one link, to the place of beginning, containing 103.92 acres.

The commissioners confirm to Joseph Reneau 95.14 acres of land, according to the boundaries and lines given in the return of the surveyor authorized to make the survey thereof.

Claim No. 32, rear of No. 576.—Heirs of J. B. Sené.

NOTICE.—The heirs and legal representatives of Jean B. Sené enter their claim to a donation of land in rear of the farm confirmed to their father, situate upon Lake St. Clair, bounded above by lands claimed by Thomas Noxon, below by lands claimed by Joseph Reneau, so as to extend the said farm to the depth of eighty arpents.

There being no evidence adduced in support of this claim by the claimants, the commissioners have had recourse to the original proceedings of former commissioners upon the claim for the front farm. The following appears: on December 26, 1808, the board considered the claim of J. B. Sené. The notice of claim is as follows:

"To Peter Audrain, esq., register of the United States land office at Detroit:

"SIR: Please take notice that I now enter with the commissioners of the land office at Detroit my claim to a certain tract of land situate and being at La Pointe aux Ginnolet, within the Territory of Michigan, and bounded in front by Lake St. Clair, in rear by unlocated lands, on the northeast side by Jaques Allard, pere, and on the southwest by lands of L. Reneau, being in breadth three arpents and two perches, and in length eighty arpents. I claim and set up title to this tract of land by virtue of occupancy and improvements previous to July 1, 1796.

mark.

"Witness: JOSEPH WATSON."

Testimony in support of the claim is next adduced, and therefore the board did confirm the said claimant in this tract to the full extent of his claim. The present board also find upon the files of the former register the original survey and return of Aaron Greely, esq., the surveyor thereto duly appointed, by which it appears that the said farm was surveyed according to the extent confirmed, as respects the depth thereof, viz: eighty arpents. The copy of the original final certificate of the register is also found upon file, from which it would appear that the patent or final certificate was granted by the register for the same extent (eighty arpents) as stated in the survey and return. From all these evidences, therefore, it does appear to the present board that Jean B. Sené has heretofore been confirmed in the full quantity allowed by law, and that his heirs are not entitled to a further confirmation. Yet, as this board have not seen the patent, and lest there should exist a difference between the patent and the above evidences; and as the claimants are unquestionably entitled to a patent for the full extent of eighty arpents, if they have not heretofore been confirmed therein, therefore the present board do confirm to the said heirs of Jean Bt. Sené, deceased, as donation or back concession, all that tract of land which may be situated between the border of Lake St. Clair and the rear line of the back concessions, (so called,) as established by John Mullet, esq., the surveyor duly authorized to fix and establish the same, at a distance not exceeding eighty arpents from said lake, if, upon proper examination, it shall be found that there is any of the land so situated, and between the boundary lines of lands formerly claimed by Jaques Allard, sen., on the northeast, and by lands formerly claimed by Louis Reneau on the southwest, not heretofore confirmed by patent to the said Jean Bt. Sené, deceased; and that the same be surveyed and returned to the register of the land office at Detroit by a surveyor duly authorized to make the same.

Claim No. 33, rear of No. 184.—Thomas Noxon.

DETROIT, April 11, 1823.

NOTICE.—Agreeably to an act of February 21, 1823, I hereby enter my claim to a donation of eighty arpents in rear of my farm, situated on Lake St. Clair, below Milk River Point, between the farms of Jean Baptiste Sené and lands claimed by Joseph Campau.

THOMAS NOXON.

Thomas Noxon produces a quit-claim deed from Louis Laferté and Catharine, his wife, for a farm described as follows: bounded in front by Lake St. Clair, on the south by Jean Baptiste Sené, on the north side by land claimed by Joseph Campau, and in rear by unconceded lands, being two arpents in front by forty in depth, be the same more or less, being part of the same tract of land confirmed to Jaques Allard, sen., by a patent from the President of the United States, dated June 1, 1811, and being the same tract on which the said Louis Laferté now resides. Also a deed from Antoine Neveux and Genevieve, his wife, to Louis Laferté, dated December 18, 1812, and a deed from Jaques Allard and Genevieve, his wife, to Antoine Neveux, both for the same tract, dated February 19, 1820.

The commissioners confirm the claim of Thomas Noxon, containing 64.98 acres by the boundaries and description returned by the surveyor before named.

Claim No. 34, rear of No. 184.—Joseph Campau.

NOTICE.—Joseph Campau enters his claim to a donation of land in rear of his farm, situate on the border of Lake St. Clair, below Milk River Point, being part of No. 184, heretofore confirmed by the board of commissioners.

The claimant, Joseph Campau, produces a deed of conveyance to him executed by Pierre Allard, son of Jaques Allard, sen., the original patentee, transferring to said Campau all his right, title, and interest to the said farm.

The commissioners do therefore confirm to Joseph Campau a tract of land, in rear of the above-described farm, containing 32.44 acres, as per the return of the surveyor duly authorized to make the same.

DETROIT, April 14, 1823.

NOTICE.—I hereby enter my claim to a donation of a tract of land of one hundred and fifteen chains and twenty links in depth by nine chains in breadth, being in rear of a farm confirmed to me by patent from the United States, and bounded by a tract belonging to me, purchased from Nicolas Rivard, and by another tract belonging to Joseph Campau, situated on Lake St. Clair, below Milk River Point.

Jaques Allard, jr., in support of his claim heretofore presented for a donation in rear of his farm, on Lake St. Clair, produces a patent from the President of the United States, dated June 18, 1811, granting to said Allard a tract of land situate on Lake St. Clair, containing 103.86 acres, bounded and described as follows: beginning at a post standing on the border of Lake St. Clair, between this tract and a tract confirmed to Jaques Allard, sen.; thence north seventy-five degrees west, one hundred and fifteen chains twenty links, to a post; thence north fifteen degrees east, nine chains, to a post, the southwest corner of a tract confirmed to Nicholas Rivard; thence south seventy-five degrees east, one hundred and fifteen chains twelve links, to a post standing on the border of Lake St. Clair; thence, along the border of said lake, south forty degrees thirty minutes west, nine chains, to the place of beginning.

The commissioners confirm to Jaques Allard, jr., 120.38 acres of land in rear of and as back concession to the farm above mentioned, to be bounded and described as per survey and return of the surveyor duly authorized to make the same.

DETROIT, April 14, 1823.

NOTICE.—I hereby enter my claim to a donation of land of forty arpents, of French measure, in depth by one hundred and thirty-four and a half feet, English measure, in breadth, being in rear of a farm conveyed to me by Nicholas Rivard, being part of a tract heretofore confirmed to him, and situated on Lake St. Clair, below Milk River Point, and situated between a tract confirmed to the applicant and a farm held by Jaques Allard, sr.

Witness: FRANCIS AUDRAIN.

Jaques Allard, jr., in support of a second claim to a donation of land in rear of a farm owned by him on Lake St. Clair, below Milk River Point, produces a deed from Nicholas Rivard, dated June 19, 1810, conveying to claimant a tract of land described as follows: a tract of land of seven perches, (seven,) French measure, in front, equal to one hundred and thirty-four and a half feet, English measure, (100 : 1068 : : 126 : 134½,) by forty arpents in depth, situated near Milk River Point, being part of the farm occupied by the grantor. Claimant also refers to the patent adduced in the claim of Jaques Allard, sr., granted to Nicholas Rivard, the above-named assignor, dated July 3, 1812.

The commissioners do thereupon confirm to the above-named claimant, Jaques Allard, jr., such quantity of land as may be contained between the rear line of the tract claimed and owned by him in virtue of the above-described title, the rear line of the back concessions as established by John Mullett, esq., the surveyor duly appointed to survey the same, and an extension of the lateral lines of the said front farm, containing, by computation, from sixteen to twenty-five acres, more or less; and that the same be partitioned to him by a surveyor thereto duly authorized; to be deducted, in proper proportion, from the back concessions next above this claim, and confirmed to Jaques Allard, sr., and Joseph Robertjean.

DETROIT, August 29, 1823.

NOTICE.—I, Jaques Allard, sr., hereby enter my claim to a donation of land in rear of my farm on Lake St. Clair, below Milk River Point, containing two arpents in front and forty in depth, bounded by the lands of Joseph Robertjean and Jaques Allard, jr.

LOUIS ALLARD,
For JAQUES ALLARD, SR.

Jaques Allard, sr., in support of a claim to a back concession to a tract of land on Lake St. Clair, below Milk River Point, produces a deed from Jean Baptiste Daunay and Seraphine Daunay, his wife, conveying to said Allard a piece of land described as follows: containing two arpents in front by forty in depth, situate at Milk River Point, bounded on one side by the lands of Joseph Robertjean, and on the other side by those of Jaques Allard, jr., the same being part of a tract of land granted by a patent of the President of the United States, dated July 3, 1812, to Nicholas Rivard. Claimant also produces as a witness Nicholas Rivard, the original patentee, who states that he, Rivard, sold a tract of land, (by exchange,) of which that above claimed by Jaques Allard, sr., is a part, to Jean Baptiste Daunay, and therefore that Daunay had good right to sell the same.

The commissioners being of opinion that the claimant, Jaques Allard, sr., is the bona fide proprietor of the front, do therefore confirm to him a tract of land containing, according to the return of the surveyor, 76.68 acres; but, as this return manifestly includes the small tract of land containing, by computation, twenty acres, more or less, confirmed to Jaques Allard, jr., and who is most manifestly entitled to the same, the commissioners therefore explicitly reserve from the confirmation to Jaques Allard, sr., so much of the said back concession, included within the survey above alluded to, as shall be found, upon accurate survey thereof by a duly authorized surveyor, to be included between a prolongation (to the extent of the rear line of the back concession) of the eastern or upper line of the tract of one hundred and thirty-four and a half feet, claimed and owned by Jaques Allard, jr., and the lower line of the said small tract, be the quantity more or less, and in accordance with the confirmation of the claim of said Jaques Allard, jr., next preceding.

DETROIT, July 23, 1823.

NOTICE.—I, Joseph Robertjean, enter my claim to a donation of land in rear of my farm, situate upon the border of Lake St. Clair, below Milk River Point, containing two acres in front by forty in depth, bounded on the north by lands belonging to Joseph Dubay, and on the south by lands of Jaques Allard, sr.

JOSEPH JEANNE,
For JOSEPH ROBERTJEAN.

Joseph Robertjean, in support of the above claim, adduces Nicholas Rivard, the original patentee, as a witness, who states that he exchanged the tract above mentioned, together with the two arpents next below this, to Jean Baptiste Daunay. Claimant also adduces Jaques Allard, sr., and Louis Allard, who state their knowledge of the fact that the said Jean B. Daunay sold the upper two arpents in front by forty arpents in depth, of the farm which he got by exchange from Nicholas Rivard, to the present claimant, Joseph Robertjean. The claimant also refers to the patent adduced in the claim of Jaques Allard, sr.

The commissioners, believing that the above-named claimant is the bona fide proprietor of the front farm above noticed, do therefore confirm to the said Joseph Robertjean 60.51 acres of land, to be bounded and designated according to the return of the surveyor duly authorized to make survey and return thereof; subject, nevertheless, to all the legal or equitable interests therein of all persons whatsoever; and provided, also, that it shall appear that an equitable division of this tract was made by the said surveyor between the respective proprietors of the front farm originally confirmed to Nicholas Rivard.

Claim No. 39, rear of No. 657.—Joseph Dubay.

NOTICE.—Joseph Dubay enters his claim to a donation of land in rear of his farm, situate on the border of Lake St. Clair, below Milk River Point, bounded on the north by lands belonging to Joseph Robertjean, and on the south also by lands of said Joseph Robertjean.

Joseph Dubay, in support of his claim, states that, owing to melancholy circumstances, his original title papers were all destroyed; but, in lieu thereof, submits certain papers recently obtained in proof of his being the bona fide proprietor of the front farm, to which back concession is now claimed.

The papers adduced are, first, the deposition of Gabriel Reneau, who appears to have been the original confirmee, stating that he, deponent, sold this tract to Louis Morin, bounded in front by Lake St. Clair, above and below by lands claimed by Joseph Robertjean, being one arpent in front, the same in rear, and forty arpents in depth; second, a deed duly executed by said Morin and wife, purporting to be in confirmation of a deed formerly given by the parties to said Joseph Dubay.

It therefore appearing to this board that the present claimant is the bona fide proprietor of the front farm, the commissioners confirmed to said Joseph Dubay 32.22 acres of land, to be bounded and described as per the survey and return of the surveyor duly authorized to make the same.

Claim No. 40, rear of No. 276.—Joseph Robertjean.

DETROIT, July 23, 1823.

NOTICE.—I, Joseph Robertjean, hereby enter my application, agreeably to law, for a donation in rear of my farm situate on Lake St. Clair, below Milk River Point, containing four acres in front by forty in depth; bounded on the south by lands of Joseph Dubay, and on the north by lands belonging to the heirs of Jean Baptiste Celeron.

JOSEPH JEANNE, JR.,
For JOSEPH ROBERTJEAN.

In the above case it appears, from the testimony of Francis Thibault, that his brother-in-law, Julien Furton, the original confirmee and patentee of the above-mentioned tract, sold (according to the best of the knowledge and belief of witness) to Joseph Robertjean, a tract of land containing two arpents in front by forty arpents in depth.

The commissioners do therefore decide, inasmuch as the above claimant, Joseph Robertjean, has not exhibited to them any proof of the extent of his purchase, whether the same be the whole or a part only of the above-described farm, that the donation or back concession of the farm above mentioned be confirmed to the said Joseph Robertjean in trust for the use of and subject to all the claims in law or equity of Julien Furton, or those claiming the front farm, or any part thereof, under or by virtue of title derived from said Furton, containing 124.80 acres, according to the survey and return of the surveyor duly authorized to make the said survey and return.

NOTICE.—The heirs of John Baptiste Celeron, deceased, enter their claim to a donation of land in rear of the farm confirmed to their father, situate upon Lake St. Clair, below Milk River Point; bounded above by lands claimed by Antoine Reneau, below by lands claimed by Joseph Robertjean, so as to extend the said farm to the depth of eighty arpents.

In the above case it is made to appear to the commissioners that Jean Baptiste Celeron is deceased; and Louis Tremble is produced as a witness, who states that Pierre Tremble, his brother, who was the original patentee, did exchange tracts of land with Jean Baptiste Celeron, deceased, and that said Celeron was, at the time of his decease, the bona fide proprietor of the above-described tract of land, to which back concession is now claimed. The deposition of François Thibault is also produced to the board, from which it appears that Jean Baptiste Celeron did, upon his death-bed, bequeath to his son, Louis Celeron, all his real estate, of whatever kind, and especially the tract of land above mentioned, subject, nevertheless, to certain conditions, by the tenor of which conditions the board are satisfied that the said Louis is now the only just claimant to this second concession. The evidence of other persons also corroborates the above statement.

The commissioners being of opinion, from the foregoing testimony adduced in this case, that Louis Celeron, the acknowledged son of Jean Baptiste Celeron, is, in justice and equity, entitled to all the real estate of his father, do therefore confirm to said Louis Celeron the back concession of the said farm, originally confirmed to Pierre Tremble, containing 62.70 acres, as per return of the surveyor, to be bounded and described as per said survey and return; to be holden, nevertheless, subject to all equitable claims of the heirs-general of said Jean Baptiste Celeron, deceased.

NOTE.—Jean Baptiste Celeron, son to the above-named deceased, also filed a claim for this tract, which the commissioners did not deem it necessary formally to act upon, as the above-named confirmee, Louis Celeron, his brother, in the opinion of the board, was equitably entitled to the confirmation.

Claim No. 42, rear of No. 22.—Antoine Reneau.

DETROIT, August 26, 1823.

NOTICE.—I, Antoine Reneau, hereby enter my claim to a donation of land in rear of my farm, situated on Lake St. Clair, below Milk River Point, being three arpents in front by forty in depth.

Antoine Reneau produces to the commissioners a patent from the United States, granting him a tract of land described as follows: beginning at a post standing on the border of Lake St. Clair, between this tract and a tract confirmed to Pierre Tremble; thence north 75° west, 116 chains 50 links, to a black-ash tree; thence north 15° east, 8 chains 52 links, to a post, the southwest corner of a tract confirmed to Joseph Campau; thence south 75° east, 117 chains 54 links, to a post standing on the border of Lake St. Clair; thence, down the border of said lake, south 22° west, 8 chains 58 links, to the place of beginning.

The commissioners confirm the claim of Antoine Reneau, containing 95.14 acres, as per return of the surveyor before named.

Claim No. 43, rear of No. 544.—Gaget Tremble.

NOTICE.—Gaget Tremble makes entry of claim to a second concession, as donation to a certain tract of land, bounded in front by Lake St. Clair, above by a tract of land heretofore confirmed to claimant below by a tract of land originally granted to Antoine Reneau. Said tract is below Milk River Point.

The claimant, in support of this claim, produces a deed from Gabriel St. Obin, conveying to him all his right, title, and interest in and to a certain tract of land two arpents in front by forty arpents in depth. Gabriel St. Obin gives notice to the board that he sold only the front to the above claimant, as is stated in his said deed to Gaget Tremble, the claimant; and that he, the said St. Obin, makes claim to the rear or second concession, as will appear by his entry filed with the register. The said claim of Gabriel St. Obin is as follows:

Claim No. 43, rear of No. 544.—Gabriel St. Obin.

NOTICE.

SIR: Please take notice that I enter and make claim to a second concession in rear of a tract of land, No. 544, by me bought from Joseph Campau, to whom it was originally confirmed. Said tract is situated below Milk River Point, and bounded above by land of Gaget Tremble, and in front by Lake St. Clair, being two arpents in front by forty arpents in depth.

GABRIEL his + mark ST. OBIN.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit

Witness: WILLIAM WOODBRIDGE.

Joseph Campau appears before the board and admits that he sold the above-described tract of land to Gabriel St. Obin, with all the rights and appurtenances of back concession or otherwise.

The commissioners do therefore confirm to Gabriel St. Obin 65.21 acres of land, situate in the rear of the above-mentioned tract, to be bounded and described as per the return of the surveyor duly authorized to make survey and return thereof; to be holden by the said Gabriel St. Obin in trust, and subject to all the legal or equitable interests which the said Gaget Tremble, or others, may have in and to the same.

NOTICE.—Gaget Tremble hereby makes his entry of claim for a second concession to a tract of land situate below Milk River Point, bounded above by lands owned by the heirs of James Abbot, deceased, and below by a farm confirmed to Joseph Campau.

Claimant, in support of his claim, produces the patent from the President of the United States to the present claimant, dated June 1, 1811, viz: bounded above by lands of the heirs of James Abbott, deceased, and below by a tract of land originally confirmed to Joseph Campau. Said tract contains 538.27 acres.

The commissioners confirm to Gaget Tremble a tract of land containing 179.84 acres, situate in rear of the said front farm, patented as before mentioned, and to be bounded and described as per the return of the surveyor duly authorized to make the same, yet so that the lines thereof shall not interfere with the lines of the tract last above confirmed to Gabriel St. Obin.

BOOK No. 4.

REPORT.

The commissioners directed by the act of Congress of May 11, 1820, to investigate and definitively to decide the unsettled private land claims within the Territory of Michigan, have the honor herewith to transmit an abstract of their decisions.

The very great delay which has been suffered to intervene before its transmission may probably form the first and prominent subject of remark; it is a delay as painful and as little anticipated by the undersigned as it could have been unexpected to the government. Various causes combined to produce this result and to render it unavoidable. And, first, they ask leave to remark that the act of May 11, 1820, purported, among other things, to revive and reinstate in full force all the acts of Congress which had ever been passed relatively to the private land claims of this country, thus opening a course of investigation which seemed almost illimitable, especially when viewed with reference to the short period of time within which it seemed to have been expected the commissioners would have finished their work. Secondly, the claims upon which it was intended by the law the commissioners should decide, (with the exception of those at Prairie des Chiens and Green Bay, which were reported during the winter of 1821 and 1822,) consisted of such as had been preferred under the laws of 1804, 1805, 1807, 1812, and 1817, which had for the most part been reviewed by consecutive boards of commissioners, and which, from the conflicting interests and adverse rights of opposing claimants, and the serious difficulties they otherwise presented in the way of any definitive decision, had in general been postponed, forming an aggregate mass of refuse matter—the examination, classification, and final disposition of which required the most laborious industry, the most scrupulous attention, and certainly as much mental energy and soundness of judgment as the undersigned could command and apply to the object. Other supervening difficulties existed, necessarily retarding the proceedings of the board. In respect to every old claim renewedly presented for confirmation, prudence, and a conscientious regard to their duty, indicated to the undersigned the necessity of reviewing all former proceedings which had been had by all former boards relative to the same claim; and here the most serious and vexatious perplexities impeded their progress at every step. The records of the proceedings of all former commissioners here, as well also as the original papers and documentary evidence of former boards, passed into the hands of the enemy during the late war. They were reclaimed by fragments; they did not escape, unmutilated, the desolations of that period. The manuscript contents of numerous folios were to be consulted, but without the aid of a single index, and of which the numbers designating the volumes had been altered, and pages apparently lost, and the descriptions of tracts defaced.

In the meantime the board had convened at the earliest practicable day in 1820; it duly organized itself, and, in pursuance of directions received from the Secretary of the Treasury, despatched the agent appointed to Green Bay and Prairie des Chiens. His detention in the upper country during the whole of the succeeding winter and early spring, by circumstances beyond his control, has been already made known; and in the interim the commissioners could do no more than receive the renewed applications of claimants here, and take down such further testimony as was adduced, and endeavor, upon discussion, to settle such general principles, applicable to their duties, as were likely to be involved. In the summer of 1821 decisions were made on all the claims preferred from Prairie des Chiens and Green Bay, and considerable progress was made in regard to the claims now reported. Books of former boards and original papers had been examined, principles settled, and decisions summarily made on claims preferred. But a temporary interruption of proceedings now took place. A law for the relief of purchasers of public lands had been passed, by which most important duties, and such as were deemed of paramount obligation, devolved upon the register and receiver.

It had been considered by the board, and there was no dissent from that opinion, that it was emphatically the province of the register to keep a journal, and duly to record all the proceedings of the board. When, in the spring of 1822, the attention of the undersigned was renewedly directed to the object of closing their duties in this matter, by making out and transmitting their reports, the register of the land office had unexpectedly vacated his office, and been appointed Indian agent for Green Bay; and, to the very great disappointment and mortification of the undersigned, it was discovered that a very unsatisfactory, brief, and imperfect list of decisions was all the memorial that could be found of all the proceedings of the board, except the scattered original entries of renewed claims, and the original documentary evidence adduced, and the loose sheets of new testimony taken. Such materials alone could not form the entire subject either of the record or of the reports required.

The old books and papers of former boards were again to be examined, and, without the aid which former examinations ought to have furnished, references were to be made to them and extracts taken; all renewed and original entries of claims, and all newly adduced testimony, to be collated, carefully examined, and, with the decisions made, systematically arranged, and thrown into the shape of a record, before a report could be transmitted. Such were not the only causes of delay. The protracted absence of the governor of this Territory had superadded to the other official functions of one of the members of the board the duties of administering the civil government of the Territory, and those of superintendent of Indian affairs, while sales of public lands often occurred to render unavoidable the absence of the other. The law of February 21, 1823, was next promulgated, by which a new land board, with new duties and new powers, was constituted, and of which the undersigned were, ex officio, made members. Such and so various causes of interruption and delay could neither be avoided nor controlled. Availing themselves of the provisions of the act of March 26, 1804, which they believed might be considered as giving to them the right, and, withal, feeling the indispensable necessity of the measure, the undersigned had, soon after the translation of the late register to another office, appointed a clerk to the board, who, under the superintending direction and assistance of the undersigned, proceeded with much diligence to collate the claims, original documents, and testimony, to examine the old books of former boards, and, properly classifying them, to record the whole; and from the time when the land board constituted by the act of February 21, 1823, had prepared a report of its proceedings, which was about the 1st of November last, the undersigned have not ceased to devote their undivided time and attention to this subject. They have met daily, and, for the most part, have occupied the forenoon, the afternoon, and until a very late hour in the evening, exclusively for the purpose of completing and expediting this onerous business.

In this detail of their transactions the undersigned do not suffer themselves to doubt but that a sufficient explanation and an ample justification will be found for a delay which was so little anticipated.

With respect to the grounds upon which the several decisions were made, it is hoped they will satisfactorily appear by a reference to the abstract and list of them herewith forwarded. The map which the undersigned have caused to be made, and which accompanies likewise this report, was esteemed indispensable. It serves as an index to their decisions; it is explanatory of them; it shows, in general, with sufficient certainty, the relative and geographical situation of the tracts confirmed. It exhibits to the eye how small they are, and how very inconsiderable a contribution from the ample wealth of the nation is called for to satisfy the claims of individual justice, and, by satisfying those claims, at the same time to secure to the nation the zealous, the deeply-rooted, the grateful attachment of a people so faithful, so meritorious, and who have suffered so much, as those who inhabit this remote, isolated, and exposed frontier of the nation.

The undersigned will only further express their hope that in the course of one or two weeks they may be enabled to transmit their report upon the claims for second concessions, the numbers and locations of which claims are indicated also upon the map transmitted.

Hoping that, in all things, their proceedings will receive the sanction of the government, (but it is a hope not unmingled with solicitude,) they will expedite, by every possible means, the transmission of that report, which, they trust, will close their duties under the act of May 11, 1820.

TERRITORY OF MICHIGAN, ss:

I do hereby certify that the preceding five pages contain a true copy of the original documents of the land board at Detroit, and that the following pages, numbered from eleven to one hundred and forty-five, inclusive, contain true abstracts from the records, proceedings, and decisions of the said land board, made and had under the provision of the act of Congress of May 11, 1820, the same having been by me carefully collated, copied, and compared.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand this 11th day of February, 1824.

No. 1.—Pierre Bonhomme.

AUGUST 1, 1821.

Pierre Bonhomme renews his entry and claim for all such tracts of land as are intended and embraced by his three several entries now on file, dated Detroit, December 31, 1808. He founds all his respective claims on possession, occupancy, and improvement, by himself and those from whom he purchased, anterior to July 1, 1796.

PIERRE BONHOMME,
By his attorneys, HUNT & LARNED.

Original entry.

DETROIT, December 31, 1808.

SIR: Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situate on the border of river St. Clair, containing six arpents in front by forty in depth; bounded in front by river St. Clair, in rear by my own lands, and on both sides by unlocated lands. I claim by virtue of possession, occupancy, and improvement made by me.

PIERRE BONHOMME.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Testimony filed with the commissioners in eighteen hundred and twenty-one.

Fort Gratiot is said to be situate about the centre of this tract.

Pierre Brondimone, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he distinctly recollects that Pierre Lovielle was in possession of the tract of land near where Fort Gratiot now stands, about two years before the arrival of General Wayne; said Lovielle had a house on it, and occupied it until he sold it to Pierre Bonhomme, who took immediate possession of said tract of land; said Bonhomme built a house on it, and fenced in a number of acres, and occupied it until the late war in 1812 without interruption.

Pierre Lovielle, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the fall of the year 1792 he took actual possession of a tract of land situate on the river St. Clair, bounded as follows, to wit: in front by the river St. Clair, and on every other side by lands of the United States. Deponent made an improvement, built a house, and raised crops on said lands; that said deponent continued in the uninterrupted possession until 1799, when he sold to Bonhomme; and that he and said Bonhomme have continually occupied the same since 1794.

Jeane Bpt. Courtous, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that eighteen years since he made a deed from Pierre Lovielle to said Bonhomme for a tract of land where Fort Gratiot now stands, being, to the best of his knowledge and belief, six arpents in front by forty in depth; said Lovielle signed, sealed, and delivered said deed to said Bonhomme; that there was a house, stable, and blacksmith's shop on said land, and that said Bonhomme occupied said land until the late war.

And thereupon, after due deliberation, the commissioners do confirm this tract as claimed, containing two hundred and forty arpents, French measure, to the said Pierre Bonhomme. The commissioners would, however, observe that the lands herein confirmed appear to be the same upon which Fort Gratiot now stands, and which have therefore been reserved from the sale of public lands for military purposes. The commissioners, however, have deemed it their incumbent duty to confirm the tract as claimed, inasmuch as this claim was first preferred in 1808, being prior to the location of the present military site, and consequently prior to any reservation by the government. The commissioners, therefore, suggest to the revising powers the expediency of changing the location of the tract should they think it expedient.

No. 2.—Pierre Bonhomme.—Original entry.

DETROIT, December 31, 1808.

SIR: Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situate on the north border of the river Au Delude, containing eight arpents in front by forty in depth; bounded in front by river Au Delude, in rear by unconceded lands, on one side by lands claimed by my brother François Bonhomme, on the other side by unlocated lands. I claim by virtue of possession, occupancy, and improvements made by me.

PIERRE BONHOMME.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Testimony adduced before the former commissioners, and recorded in volume seven of the minutes of their proceedings, page 106.

Joseph Morass, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that previous to and on the first day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-six, the late Antoine Morass, father to deponent, was in possession and occupancy of the above-described premises; he also, afterwards, sold to claimant; deponent cannot say that claimant has cultivated the same, but has heard that he has. Testimony dated August 15, 1810.

Alexander Beauvin, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that Pierre Bonhomme has been in the possession of a tract of land adjoining to lands belonging to François Bonhomme, lying on the lower side thereof, on the north side of river Au Delude, for twenty years past, and has occupied the same till now.

The commissioners confirm this claim to the extent and by the boundaries expressed in the foregoing entry, provided, however, that the rear line thereof shall not extend nearer the Lake Huron or river St Clair than within ten arpents thereof at the nearest point of said rear line; and should the foregoing limitation in depth so curtail this tract that it will not otherwise contain the quantity claimed, the deficiency shall be made up by an extension of the front upon river Au Delude.

No. 3.—Pierre Bonhomme.—Original entry

Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situate on the south side of the river Au Delude, containing sixteen arpents in front by forty in depth; bounded in front by the said river, in rear and on both sides by unconceded lands. I claim by virtue of occupancy and possession, and improvements made by me. Detroit, December 31, 1808. Testimony dated August 15, 1810.

PIERRE BONHOMME.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Alexander Beauvin, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that Pierre Bonhomme has been in the possession of a tract of land on the south side of river Au Delude for sixteen years last past, and that he is knowing to his having worked thereon every year for these thirty-eight years last past.

AUGUST 1, 1821.—Pierre Brondimone, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that about thirty years since he took possession of a tract of land on the south side of river Au Delude, containing ten arpents in front by forty in depth; that he fenced in and cleared about two or three acres; that about twenty-eight years since he sold said tract of land and the improvements to Pierre Bonhomme; that said Bonhomme mowed the same from that time till about one year prior to the late war; and that the deponent continued to occupy and improve the same for said Bonhomme till a year previous to the late war in 1812.

The commissioners decide that this tract be confirmed to the extent claimed, viz: sixteen arpents by forty, French measure, commencing at a point on the south border of the river Au Delude, about two miles from its confluence with the river St. Clair; and thence up stream, upon said river Au Delude, sixteen arpents; thence at right angles with said river Au Delude to the distance of forty arpents; thence in rear sixteen arpents; thence to the place of beginning by a line forty arpents in length. The commissioners would here advert to the fact that this tract appears to be covered by a reservation made to the Chippewa nation of Indians. It is therefore submitted to the revising powers if a change of the location of this tract be not necessary or advisable.

No. 4.—The legal heirs and representatives of the late John Askin, esq., deceased.

To the register of the land office at Detroit:

Take notice that the legal heirs and representatives of the late John Askin, deceased, renew the entry made by the said John Askin, esq., with the former commissioners, on the twenty-eighth day of October, eighteen hundred and five, recorded in volume 3, page 139, of the records of the former commissioners, in the words following, to wit:

Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land of five acres in front and rear by one hundred and fifty deep, situate on the border of river St. Clair, at a place called the Bell River, by purchase from John and Elizabeth Elsworth.

Said deed from John Elsworth and Elizabeth Elsworth is recorded in volume 2 of the records of the said former commissioners, and said deed does, as above stated, convey from the said John and Elizabeth Elsworth to John Askin a tract of land of five acres front and rear by one hundred and fifty in depth.

A deed is also recorded in volume 3, page 157, of said records, &c., from Richard Cornwall to the said Askin, of the above-described tract of land.

Testimony recorded with the original claim in volume 3, page 212, of said records, in the words following, to wit:

NOVEMBER 25, 1805.—William Thorn, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that at least eight or ten weeks ago, previous to the sale and division of this tract, John Askin had laborers on the premises, who built a large house thereon, and were employed for sometime in cutting firewood—1805.

This claim appears to have been fully examined by the then land board, in 1805, and rejected by them. The present board (no additional testimony being adduced) do also reject the said claim.

Francis, Jacob, and William Harsen, and Harvey Stewart.—Claims on Harsen's island, river St. Clair.

The different claimants, Francis, Jacob, and William Harsen, and Harvey Stewart, file a deed from the Chippewa nation of Indians to Bernardus, William, and James Harsen, of the island called Harsen's island. They also produce, in support of their several claims, an agreement or indenture made by and between William Harsen, Jacob Harsen, and Francis Harsen, and Harvey and Mary Stewart, George and Catharine Jacobs, dated the sixth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-one; from which it appears that Jacob Harsen, the father of Francis, William, and Jacob Harsen, and grandfather of Mary Stewart, died without a will, except granting by deed to the now Mary Stewart six hundred and forty acres of land on said island; and that the above-mentioned heirs, after the decease of the said Jacob, the father, entered into an agreement that the island should be divided among them as follows, to wit:

To Francis Harsen, a tract numbered on the map of the said island No. 2, and the tract next adjoining the above, and to the west thereof, called the home farm, where Jacob, the father, lived, and which, after his death, was taken possession of by James Harsen; to which said tract said Francis is entitled by virtue of a purchase from said James, numbered on the map of said island No. 1.

To William Harsen, a tract numbered on said map of said island No. 3, containing six hundred and forty acres.

To Harvey Stewart and Mary, his wife, the tract next westward and adjoining the tract last described, and numbered on the map of said island No. 4, and containing six hundred and forty acres.

To Jacob Harsen, the tract next adjoining and to the westward of said last-mentioned tract, and numbered on said map No. 5, containing six hundred and forty acres.

No. 5.—Francis Harsen.

Francis Harsen appeared and produced his papers in support of his claim to part of an island in river St. Clair, in right of the possession, &c., of his father, and subsequently by his brother, and now by himself, being number one on the plat of survey of said island.

The tract of land now claimed is described on the map of said island as follows, to wit: to the westward of tract number two, and is bounded on the north by the north ship channel of the river St. Clair, east by the road to the north ship channel, south by lands not surveyed, west by William Harsen's home farm; containing in all six hundred and forty acres.

Testimony.—James May, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1805 he came before the commissioners to enter the claims of the heirs of said Jacob Harsen, deceased, but was told by the commissioners that they could not act upon or receive any claims for the islands in the great waters dividing the American and British governments; and that, for this reason, and this alone, the claims of the family were never entered. He further deposeth and saith that said Jacob Harsen occupied said island in the year seventeen hundred and eighty-five, and built a house, out-houses, &c., on the tract now occupied by said Francis.

Louis Beaufait, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he perfectly recollects that Jacob Harsen, deceased, was in possession of Harsen's island long prior to the year seventeen hundred and ninety-six; and that he lived on the place now claimed by Francis Harsen till his decease, and that the family continued in the possession thereof until the late war.

William Thorn, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year seventeen hundred and eighty-five or six Jacob Harsen was in possession of Harsen's island, and built a large house, a blacksmith's shop, a barn, &c., on this tract; that Jacob Harsen first occupied this tract. After his decease it was occupied by James Harsen, and after him, said Francis; and that the said Jacob, James, and Francis have continued in the occupation to the present time.

The commissioners, in virtue of the preceding testimony, and other concurrent facts, which it is not deemed necessary here to detail, do confirm the claimant, Francis Harsen, in the said tract, not to exceed six hundred and forty acres, as bounded and described by the actual survey and plat now submitted to them.

No. 6.—Francis Harsen.

Francis Harsen makes claim to a tract of land, numbered on the map of Harsen's island No. 2, situate on the upper end of said Harsen's island, containing six hundred and forty acres, it being the tract which was given him in the apportionment of said island, and which he claims in his own right; bounded as follows, to wit: on the north by the north ship channel of the river St. Clair, west by the road to the north ship channel, south by lands not surveyed and the south ship channel, east by the south ship channel and the east point of the island, containing 640 acres.

Testimony.—William Thorn, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that this tract was occupied by Jacob Harsen long prior to seventeen hundred and ninety-six; there was a house built on said tract long before the year ninety-six, and that it was improved before said time.

The commissioners, being satisfied that this tract was a separate and distinct improvement upon the said Harsen's island, do confirm the same to the extent claimed, viz: six hundred and forty acres, to be bounded and described agreeably to the survey and plat thereof submitted to them.

No. 7.—William Harsen.

In virtue of the above-recited agreement I now enter in my own right the tract allotted me in said agreement and apportionment, described as follows: bounded on the north by the north ship channel of river St. Clair, west by the road to lands not surveyed, south by lands not surveyed, east by Francis Harsen's home farm; containing six hundred and forty acres.

WILLIAM HARSEN.

Testimony.—William Thorn, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that the farm on which William Harsen now lives has been occupied since the year seventeen hundred and eighty-eight or nine; that Captain Nelson built a house on said farm; and that a number of persons have occupied said farm as tenants under said William; and that said William Harsen now occupies the same

Confirmed by the commissioners for reasons similar to the preceding; to be bounded and designated agreeably to the survey and plat thereof now exhibited; not to exceed six hundred and forty acres.

No. 8.—Jacob Harsen.

In virtue of the above-recited agreement of the several claimants of the lands on Harsen's island I now enter the tract of land allotted to me in said agreement and apportionment, described as follows, viz: bounded on the north by the north ship channel of the river St. Clair, west by the western point of the island and Eagle's channel, south by lands not surveyed, east by Harvey Stewart's home farm.

Testimony.—William Thorn, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that Akoin Tremble lived on the farm now claimed by Jacob Harsen, as tenant to said Jacob, deceased, in the year one thousand seven hundred and eighty-six or seven; said Akoin improved said farm; said Jacob has improved said farm, or caused it to be improved, ever since.

The commissioners confirm this tract to the claimant, Jacob Harsen, to be bounded and designated by the survey and plat thereof now exhibited; not to exceed, in content, six hundred and forty acres.

No. 9.—Harvey Stewart.

Harvey Stewart renews his claim for a tract of land situate on Harsen's island, in river St. Clair, a plat and survey of which accompanies this entry. He claims in right of his wife, Mary Stewart, late Mary Graverest, by possession and improvement a long time anterior to the first day of July, seventeen hundred and ninety-six.

HUNT & LARNED,
Attorneys for H. STEWART.

AUGUST 1, 1821.

Claimant files a deed from Jacob Harsen, the elder, deceased, to Mary Graverest, now Mary Stewart, wife of said Harvey, for a tract of land on Harsen's island, containing six hundred and forty acres of land; said farm is bounded as follows, viz: west by Jacob Harsen's home farm, south by lands not surveyed, east by the road to these lands, or William Harsen's home farm, north by the north ship channel of river St. Clair. Claimant also files a certificate of his marriage with said Mary Graverest.

Testimony.—Ignace Morass, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he has a perfect recollection that about thirty years ago said Harsen's island was occupied by Jacob Harsen; that the tract of land now occupied and claimed by Harvey Stewart and Mary Stewart was occupied, previous to the arrival of General Wayne, by the tenants of said Jacob Harsen, and has been occupied from that time to the present; and that there are large and valuable improvements on said farm.

William Thorn, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he has been acquainted with the farm which Mr. Harvey Stewart now lives on since the year seventeen hundred and eighty-six; that said farm has been continually occupied since that time till the late war, and that the said Harvey and Mary are now in possession of the same.

Francis Harsen, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he distinctly recollects that before the year seventeen hundred and ninety-six this tract of land was occupied by a tenant who went there by permission of Jacob Harsen, senior, deceased, and that it has been occupied from that time to the present by tenants and said Harvey and Mary Stewart, except during the late war.

James May, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he recollects witnessing a deed from Jacob Harsen, the elder, deceased, to Mary Graverest, for a tract of land on Harsen's island; that said tract was improved prior to seventeen hundred and ninety-six by a Mr. Graverest, and that he continued the occupation until his death; then deponent occupied it for a short time; and that it was abandoned during the late war, but was again taken possession of after the war.

Francis Harsen, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he understood that this tract was given to Mary Graverest, now Mary Stewart, by his father, Jacob Harsen, deceased; and that it was occupied long before the Americans took possession of this place.

The commissioners confirm this tract according to the plat of survey exhibited, not to exceed six hundred and forty acres, to Mary Stewart, late Mary Graverest, her heirs and assigns.

Having more carefully examined the plats of the survey of claims on Harsen's island, the commissioners find them manifestly incorrect, and therefore confirm the claims, so that each may include its respective improvements and not interfere with the lines or improvements of the adjacent claims; and that the fronts upon the river St. Clair, or north channel, be limited accordingly.

No. 10.—Joseph Campau.

Joseph Campau renews his entry made before the former commissioners in eighteen hundred and five, recorded in volume 4, page 46, of the records of the former commissioners, in the words and figures following, to wit:

Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situate on the southwest border of the river Huron of Lake St. Clair, containing three acres in front and extending in depth to the lake; bounded in front by said river Huron, on the lower side by Louis Campau, and on the other side by Louis More. This tract was sold and conveyed to me by Jacob Thomas.

A deed is recorded in volume 2, page —, from the said Thomas to said Campau for a tract of land on said river Huron of three acres in front, the depth indefinite.

By the above entry claimant received a patent from the United States for 441.85 acres of land. This renewal of his entry is made with the view to get the deficiency of 198.15 acres to which he claims to be entitled in virtue of the above original entry with the former commissioners.

The commissioners, in considering this claim, are of opinion that the claimant had confirmed to him by the board of commissioners before whom this claim was originally preferred the full quantity then claimed. The commissioners do therefore reject the present claim.

No. 11.—Joseph Campau.

Joseph Campau renews his entry made before the former commissioners in eighteen hundred and five, in the words and figures following, to wit:

Volume 4, page 44.—Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situate on the south side of river Huron of Lake St. Clair; bounded on one side by lands that I claim, on the other side by a tract of land of which the late Hyacinth Dehatre, deceased, was possessed, and in front by said river, containing two and a half arpents in front, more or less, and the depth expressed in the deed of Isaac Williams to Louis More, of March twenty-seven, seventeen hundred and ninety-two, being the same which said More conveyed to me by deed dated September three, seventeen hundred and ninety-six.

JOSEPH CAMPAU.

Said original entry is recorded in volume 4, page 44, of the records of the former commissioners, and the deed referred to in said entry is recorded in volume 2 of said records.

This claim was taken up in 1808 by the commissioners, as appears by their notice of it in volume 4, page 135, where it is stated this tract contains six arpents in front, extending in depth to the lake.

By the above entry claimant received a patent from the President of the United States for 205.90 acres. He now claims a deficiency of 434.10 acres completing the section.

The commissioners, in considering this claim and upon examination thereof, find that all the adjacent or adjoining lands have been confirmed to other claimants, except that already patented to said Campau. The commissioners, therefore, not deeming it within their powers to alter or interfere with the surveys heretofore made and confirmations had thereon, and regretting, too, if injustice may have been done to the present claimant, find it, however, beyond their powers to do otherwise than reject this claim.

No. 12.—Joseph Campau.

Joseph Campau renews his entry made with the former commissioners on the 31st day of December, 1805, recorded in volume 4, page 44, of the records of the said former commissioners, in the words following, to wit:

Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situate on the south border of river Huron of Lake St. Clair, containing six arpents in front, extending in depth to said Lake St. Clair; bounded in front by the said river, in rear by said lake, on the one side by Laurent More, and on the other by another tract that I claim. This is the same tract which I purchased from Jean Baptiste Comparet, pere, as per deed executed to me by said Comparet, on the 23d day of November, 1798.

Claimant renews his entry with a view to obtain 161.87 acres of land, in addition to 96.13 acres for which he received a patent from the President of the United States in virtue of his above entry. To which deficiency of 161.87 acres of land he claims to be entitled in virtue of his said original entry.

No. 13.—Joseph Campau.

Joseph Campau renews his entry made with the former commissioners in eighteen hundred and five, recorded in volume 4, page 45, of the records of said former commissioners, in the words following, to wit:

Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situated on the south side of river Huron, containing eleven arpents, more or less, in front, and extending back in depth to Lake St. Clair; bounded in front by said river, in rear by said lake, on the west-northwest by Louis Peltier, and on the east by lands I also claim.

In virtue of said original entry claimant obtained a patent from the President of the United States for 121.94 acres of land; he now renews his said entry with a view to obtain, in addition to the above-mentioned quantity of land, 461.6 acres of land, to which he claims to be entitled in virtue of his said entry.

The commissioners decide on this as in claim No. 11, and do therefore reject the same.

No. 14.—Joseph Campau.

Joseph Campau renews his entry made with the former commissioners in eighteen hundred and five, recorded in volume 4, page 45, of the records of said former commissioners, in the words following, to wit:

Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situate on the south border of the river Huron of Lake St. Clair, containing 3½ arpents in front and extending in depth to the said lake; bounded in front by the said river, in rear by unlocated lands, on the east by Jaques Lazon, and on the west by Louis More.

By the above entry claimant received a patent from the President of the United States for 176.72 acres of land; whereas he claims to be entitled, by his above original entry, to 257 acres. He now claims the deficiency of 81.28 acres of land.

The commissioners, having examined the patent for this tract, No. 319, find that there are 205.09 acres contained therein, and comparing the boundaries and extent in front with the foregoing original entry, are of opinion that the full quantity then claimed was granted by the patent, and do therefore not confirm this renewed claim.

No. 15.—Joseph Campau.

Joseph Campau renews his entry made with the former commissioners in eighteen hundred and five, recorded in volume 4, page 45, of the records of said former commissioners, in the words following, to wit:

Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situate on the south side of the river Huron of Lake St. Clair, containing three acres in front and running back to said Lake St. Clair; bounded in front by said river, on the upper side by unconceded lands, and on the lower side by Antoine Petit, being the same which was sold and conveyed to me by Antoine Dehatre.

In virtue of said claim, claimant received a patent from the President of the United States for 74.06 acres of land; whereas he claims to be entitled, in virtue of his said entry, to 180 acres in addition to the 74.06 patented to him. He now claims the deficiency of 105.94 acres.

The commissioners are of the same opinion as in the preceding claim, and do therefore reject this claim.

No. 16.—Joseph Campau.

Joseph Campau renews his entry made before the former commissioners in 1805, recorded in volume 7, page 9, of the records of said former commissioners, in the words following, to wit:

To the register of the land office at Detroit:

Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situate on the south side of river Huron of Lake St. Clair, containing twelve arpents in front by —— in depth; bounded in front by said river Huron, above by my own lands, and below by Francis St. Obin.

In virtue of said entry, claimant received a patent from the President for 372.91 acres of land; whereas he claims to be entitled, in virtue of the above entry, to 516 acres of land. He now claims the deficiency of 160 acres.

The commissioners are of the same opinion as in the preceding claim, and do therefore reject this claim.

No. 17.—Joseph Campau, administrator to the estate of Touissant Campau, deceased.

Joseph Campau, administrator of the estate of the late Touissant Campau, deceased, assignee of Louis Campau, makes entry of a tract of land, in the words following, to wit:

The commissioners appointed to investigate the title to private land claims in the district of Detroit and Territory of Michigan will please take notice that I claim title to the following tract of land, as administrator to the estate of the late Touissant Campau, deceased, who was the assignee of Louis Campau, to wit:

A tract of land situate on the southerly side of the river Huron of Lake St. Clair, being lot numbered 168, containing 310.31 acres.

NOTE.—The commissioners will please to observe that the patent for the above tract was lost or mislaid during the late war.

JOSEPH CAMPAU, Administrator.

DETROIT, September 3, 1821.

The commissioners will, moreover, please take notice that I claim the deficiency in the above tract, being 329.69 acres, in order to complete the original contents of said lot.

JOSEPH CAMPAU, Administrator.

It appears, by reference to the records of the former commissioners, that said Louis Campau originally claimed but 280 arpents.

On investigation of this claim it appears that the original claimant was confirmed in the full quantity claimed, and that a patent for the same issued to Louis Campau, the original claimant. The commissioners do therefore reject this renewed claim.

No. 18.—Joseph Campau.

Joseph Campau, as assignee of Alexis Dube, renews the entry made by said Dube September 6, 1808, recorded in volume 7, page 5, of the records of the former commissioners, in the words following, viz:

To the register of the land office at Detroit:

SIR: Take notice that I now enter with the commissioners of the land office at Detroit my claim to a tract of land at Lonce Creuse, of four arpents by forty in depth; bounded in front by Lake St. Clair, in rear by unconceded lands, above by Lemo Loudrie, and below by Michel Comparet. I claim and set up title by virtue of possession, occupancy, and improvements made by me, or those from whom I derive title.

ALEXIS DUBE.

In virtue of the above claim, claimant received a patent from the President of the United States for 88.72 acres of land. He now claims a deficiency of 151.28 acres of land, making in all 240 acres.

Upon examination of this claim, the commissioners are of opinion that the survey, upon which a patent issued for 88.72 acres, falls short of the quantity originally claimed about 39 acres; and it further appears that there may possibly now be unconceded lands on each side of this tract, as surveyed and patented. Therefore the commissioners do confirm to the present claimant, Joseph Campau, a quantity equal to the said deficiency, that is, 39 acres, to be laid off adjoining upon the upper side of said tract heretofore confirmed, provided that the lines thereof be so run as not to interfere with the lines of any lands heretofore confirmed, or which may be confirmed, by the present board.

No. 19.—Joseph Campau.

Joseph Campau, as assignee of J. Dube, renews the entry made by Joseph Dube with the former commissioners in 1808, recorded in volume 4, page 166, of the records of the former commissioners, in the words and figures following, to wit:

To the register of the land office at Detroit:

Take notice that I now enter with the commissioners of the land office at Detroit my claim to the following tract of land situate, lying, and being on Lonce Creuse, in the district of Detroit, containing, by estimation, one hundred and twenty arpents of land, being three arpents in front by forty arpents in depth; bounded in front by Lake St. Clair, in the rear by unlocated lands, on one side by Baptiste Pore, on the other by Pierre Lenau. I make claim and set up title by virtue of possession, occupancy, and improvement made by me, and those from whom I derive title.

JOSEPH DUBE.

In virtue of this claim, said Dube received a patent from the President of the United States for 52.33 acres of land. Claimant now, in virtue of said original entry, claims a deficiency so as to complete the quantity originally claimed.

The commissioners decide upon this claim as in the case of the preceding, No. 11, and do therefore reject the same.

No. 20.—Joseph Campau.

Joseph Campau, as assignee of Jean Bpt. Perot, renews the entry made by said Perot with the former commissioners in 1808, recorded in volume 4, page 152, of the records of the former commissioners, in the words and figures following, to wit:

To the register of the land office at Detroit:

SIR: Take notice that I now enter with the commissioners of the land office at Detroit my claim to a tract of land situate on Lake St. Clair, containing about six arpents in front by forty in depth; bounded in front by Lake St. Clair, in rear by unlocated lands, above by lands claimed by Joseph Dube, and below by lands claimed by Louis Laforge. I claim and set up title by virtue of fifteen years' possession, occupancy, and improvement by me, and those from whom I derive title.

In virtue of the above claim, said original claimant received a patent from the President of the United States for 85.60 acres of land; he now claims the deficiency, it being 155.21 acres.

The commissioners decide this claim upon the same principles as the last, and set forth in the preceding, No. 11, and do therefore reject the same.

No. 21.—Joseph Campau.

Joseph Campau renews his entry made with the former commissioners in 1805, recorded in volume 4, pages 45 and 46, of the records of the land commissioners, in the words following, to wit:

Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land now united into one farm, on the south border of the river Huron of Lake St. Clair, containing nine arpents in front, extending in depth to Lake St. Clair; bounded in front by the said river, on one side by lands claimed by Nicholas Petit, deceased, and on the other by lands that I claim.

By which entry he received a patent from the United States for 314.02 acres of land; whereas, by said entry, he claims to be entitled to 477 acres. He now claims the deficiency of 142.96 acres of land.

The commissioners decide on this upon the same principles as No. 11, and do therefore not confirm this renewed claim.

In deciding upon the foregoing claims of Joseph Campau, the commissioners are convinced that great injustice was done to this claimant, and that by the surveys of Aaron Greely, esq., the tracts confirmed by the commissioners under the act of 1807 were in many instances limited in their contents to a quantity very far short of that confirmed by the board. To remunerate himself for these privations, the claimant has renewed his former entries. The present board, in deciding individually upon these claims, have, for the reasons stated in their respective decisions thereon, found various obstacles to an absolute confirmation; inasmuch as the specific lands claimed have been allotted to other claimants by the said surveys of Aaron Greely. Under these considerations, the present board, taking the strong equity of the claims into view, do respectfully recommend for confirmation the two small tracts of lands adjoining on either side to No. 607, heretofore confirmed, or so much thereof as may remain unsold, and also that tract of low or marshy land bordering upon Lake St. Clair, and between the lake and Nos. 545 and 168, heretofore confirmed, except so much of said neck of land as is heretofore recommended for confirmation to the said Joseph Campau, as administrator of Touissant Campau, deceased, provided the whole quantity thus recommended for confirmation to Joseph shall not exceed six hundred and forty acres.

And the board do also recommend for confirmation to Joseph Campau, administrator of Touissant Campau, deceased, assignee of Louis Campau, such residue of the said tract, bounded as aforesaid by Lake St. Clair, in front and in rear by Nos. 545 and 168, and on the north by river Huron, and containing, by estimation, two hundred acres, more or less; and it is further expressly provided that the tracts recommended for confirmation to said Campau, as administrator, shall be so divided as to give to each respective claim in that proportion above mentioned, if it should be found that the lands described do not contain a quantity sufficient to allow to each the full number of acres mentioned.

No. 22.—The legal heirs and representatives of John Askin, deceased.

The legal heirs and representatives of the late John Askin, deceased, renew the entry made by the said John Askin with the former commissioners, recorded in volume 4, page 118, of the records of the former commissioners, in the following words, to wit:

John Askin claims his half of an undivided tract of land granted by the Chippewa nation to the late Thomas Williams, situated partly on the southwest side of the river Aux Huron, which empties itself into Lake St. Clair, and along the border of that lake towards a tract granted by said Indians to the late James Abbott. The quantity of this tract is not ascertained. I claim by purchase from Peter Williams.

JOHN ASKIN.

The said deed from the said Peter Williams to the said John Askin, for the above-described tract of land, is recorded in liber E, folios 19 and 21. Also a certificate of Isaac Williams of the fact of the sale of said tract by said Peter to said John; said deed is recorded in volume 2 of the records of said former commissioners.

This claim having been presented to a former board of commissioners, and no evidence of occupancy or possession being shown to said commissioners, so far as appears from their records, and no further testimony being now adduced before the present board, this claim is therefore rejected.

No. 23.—John R. Williams and James May.

John R. Williams and James May, on this twenty-first of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-one, file their petition or claim for a tract of land on the river Huron and Lake St. Clair, bounded as follows, to wit: in front by Lake St. Clair, and on the north and northeast by the said river Huron, and on the west and southwest by James Abbott's lands, being one hundred acres in front, and one hundred and fifty acres in depth, containing in the whole fifteen thousand arpents or acres, more or less; said claimants file a deed of conveyance from the Chippewa nation of Indians to Thomas Williams, the father of said John R., and to Isaac Williams, under whom said James May claims, for the above tract of land, bearing date 1780.

The petition sets forth that the said Isaac Williams, one of the grantees as above stated, without any authority, conveyed, in the year 1792, to sundry persons thirty-two arpents in front on the south side of said river Huron, by forty in depth, upon which said tract the first settlement upon the river Huron was made, but that in 1794 said settlers relinquished their possessions and improvements to Mrs. Jaques Lazon, the late widow of said Thomas Williams; that in 1800 Jaques Lazon, the husband of said late widow of said Thomas Williams, without the consent of his wife, sold the said premises to Joseph Campau; that said John R. Williams, one of the petitioners, had lived and labored on said tract for a considerable length of time; that in the year 1806 the said John R. Williams entered with the commissioners a conflicting claim, in behalf of the heirs, against said Joseph Campau's application for a confirmation of said lands. The records will, however, show that this land was confirmed to said Joseph Campau, and also that James May, one of the petitioners, in 1789, having previously conferred with the said John R. Williams, then a minor, granted, under certain express conditions, to a number of individuals the privilege of occupying and settling each on one hundred and twenty arpents of that part of said tract situated on Lake St. Clair. It was stipulated that each of said occupants or purchasers should pay one hundred pounds, New York currency. These settlers, in the year 1806, finding that they could enter these lands in their own names by virtue of their possession, did enter said several tracts in their own names, and obtained patents from Congress for the same. That previous to the entry of said tracts by said individuals they never had exercised an exclusive control over said tracts; but, in all their conveyances to and from each other, they simply sold their improvements, without the least attempt, in any single instance, to warrantee their sales; and, so far as it was deemed practicable under the construction that the then commissioners were pledged to give to the acts of Congress regulating the entries and claims to lands, your petitioners have made and preferred such claims, entries, and demands as they were understood at that time to be justifiable and authorized to make; all of which will more fully appear by their printed petition.

TESTIMONY.

Jaques Campau, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that the first settlement was made on the river Huron, on the premises in question, about the year 1788, and that he well recollects that in the year 1791 or 1792, or thereabouts, the said settlers produced deeds from Isaac Williams for those farms, who, jointly with Thomas Williams, was the reputed owner of the said land, and that said tract comprehends what is called the Lonce Creuse settlements. Deponent well knows that at the time of the establishments made as above stated it was generally known and admitted throughout the country that the lands in question belonged to the Messrs. Williams. Deponent also knows that it was reported that afterwards Judge May acquired an interest in the property from the Messrs. Williams or their family. Deponent knows that a number of persons had authority from Judge May to stay on said land. Deponent frequently heard said Thomas Williams express his determination to reduce to special and actual possession all his lands; but that before he could complete all his plans he died. That at his death he left three children, the eldest of whom could not have been more than three years of age.

Jean Baptiste Comparet, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that the settlers mentioned in the above affidavit (of whom he was one) purchased their lands from Isaac Williams; that the settlement was made, and he is sure that the settlers were there six or seven years previous to the arrival of General Wayne's army.

Jean Baptiste Nontoy, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that previous to the establishment of the American government here, the father of one of the present applicants, (J. R. Williams,) and, after him, Judge May, exercised acts of ownership over the land at Lonce Creuse, and at the river Huron, part of the same now claimed, of which said tract Mr. Williams, deceased, was universally recognized as owner; and afterwards Judge May acquired, by general reputation, an interest in the property; and further knows that, as a matter of general reputation, the persons who located themselves there had obtained permission of, or right in, said land from one or the other of these two claimants; and that many persons, perhaps ten or twelve, had established themselves on said premises long before the arrival of General Wayne; and further, that the establishments thus made were always thereafter kept up, until after the year 1808, and, indeed, to the present time.

Joseph Robertjean, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that on or about the year 1794 one Jaques Lazon and his wife, Cicile, took formal possession of certain lands and improvements occupied on the river Huron by Thomas Edwards, Jeane Marie Comparet, François Comparet, Joseph Comparet, and Michel Comparet; that said Jaques Lazon took possession of said several farms by virtue of the right claimed by Mrs. Lazon in right of her former husband, the said Thomas Williams, deceased, and under whose title peaceable and quiet possession was given to the said Jaques Lazon and his wife, Cicile, by the said Edwards and the said Comparets, of the said several farms aforesaid, and by virtue of the claim and title of Mrs. Lazon aforesaid, the widow of said Thomas Williams, deceased; and, furthermore, that one of the aforesaid farms was sold by Mrs. Lazon to Michel Comparet, one of the aforesaid occupants, for a valuable consideration; that it was the prevailing opinion that the lands aforesaid were the property of the said Thomas Williams, including the lands from the Delaware town, on said river, to a boundary on Lake St. Clair, commonly known by the name of Runs Condele Perelo. Deponent frequently heard Mrs. Lazon, the late Mrs. Williams, observe that if her husband, Mr. Lazon, was a man of business, he would prevent intruders from squatting on said lands; and further, that he (deponent) perfectly recollects to have seen John R. Williams, the son of said Thomas Williams, labor on said lands with a negro man, the property of the said late Thomas Williams, before General Wayne took possession of this country.

John Baptiste Dube, Joseph Dube, and Alexis Dube, being duly sworn, depose and say that they live at Lonce Creuse, on Lake St. Clair, (excepting Joseph Dube;) that deponents severally purchased farms at Lonce Creuse, on Lake St. Clair, from persons who originally settled the said lands, and in all the transfers of said farms the improvements only were transferred; and that sometime after deponents had purchased said improvements they were informed that the lands belonged to John R. Williams and James May; that the said several deponents were not informed that the farms and lands aforesaid were owned by the said John R. Williams and James May until entry of some of said farms had been made before the commissioners appointed by the United States.

Upon mature consideration of this claim, and of the testimony adduced in support of it, considering the minority of Mr. Williams at the date of the first improvements, and the apparently unwarranted and illegal transfer of many of the tracts claimed by persons having no right, by which means many of the occupants who had been merely tenants under the original claimants obtained confirmations purporting to be in their own rights; considering the respectable characters of Messrs. Williams and May; the zeal manifested by them at all times for the welfare of their country, of which the one is a native and the other a citizen of more than forty years' residence; and, moreover, taking into consideration that claims preferred before the land boards of 1807, 1808, and 1809, were not ultimately patented according to the decision of the commissioners, but according to the survey and plat made thereof by the surveyor, which in many instances were for much less than the quantities confirmed by the land board; and as it does appear that, for reasons unknown to this board, the present claimants, although few were more active in promoting the early settlement of lands on this strait, succeeded in but few or no claims, but whose lands were confirmed to those in possession, who, as is shown, were originally the tenants of these gentlemen: Therefore, for the foregoing and other cogent reasons, the commissioners do confirm the claimants in that residuum of their claim not heretofore confirmed to other claimants, adjacent to those lands on the south border of the river Huron, and near Lake St. Clair, which were originally a part of this claim, provided that the lands now confirmed shall not exceed in quantity 640 acres to each of the said claimants, and provided, also, that the lands so confirmed shall not interfere with any lands which may have been sold at the time the said claimants or their legal representatives shall be authorized by the proper authority to make their survey and location of said claim now confirmed.

No. 24.—The legal heirs and representatives of John Askin, deceased, and the legal heirs and representatives of William Ancrum, deceased.

The legal heirs and representatives of the late John Askin, esq., deceased, and the legal heirs and representatives of the late William Ancrum, major of the 34th regiment, deceased, renew the entry made with the former commissioners by the aforesaid John Askin, dated October 28, 1805, recorded in volume 4, page 76, of the records of the former commissioners, to wit:

NEAR SANDWICH, October 28, 1805.

John Askin claims, in behalf of William Ancrum, esq., formerly of the 34th regiment, and himself, 20,000 acres of land, the remainder of twenty-four thousand purchased by them, jointly, of the Chippewa nation, which remainder of land is situated on each side of the river Aux Huron, commencing below the Moravian town, and extending downwards; this river empties itself into Lake St. Clair.

JOHN ASKIN,
For WM. ANCRUM & JOHN ASKIN.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

In behalf of this original entry, first made in 1805, no additional testimony is adduced before the present board. The commissioners have therefore examined the various testimony adduced before the former land board; and from all the circumstances, especially considering the vagueness of the proof as to occupancy and the fact that most or all the lands here claimed have been confirmed by former land boards to other individual claimants, the present board of commissioners do reject this claim.

No. 25.—The legal heirs and representatives of the late John Cornwall, John Askin, sen., and John Askin, jr., deceased.

DETROIT, September 26, 1821.

The legal heirs and representatives of the late John Cornwall, John Askin, sen., and John Askin, jr., deceased, renew their claim made by the aforesaid John Askin, sen., in behalf of himself and two others, with the former commissioners, October 31, 1805, recorded in volume 4, page 96, and in volume 3, page 428, in the words following, to wit:

OCCTBER 31, 1805.

John Askin, in behalf of John Cornwall, John Askin, jr., and himself, claims a tract of land, the quantity not ascertained, situate on each side of the road made through the woods at the expense of William Ancrum, esq., and John Askin, sen., from where the lands already granted, near Tremble's mills, ended, to the old Moravian town, on the part of it not granted, which Moravian town was then situated on the border of the river Aux Huron, which empties itself into Lake St. Clair, by a deed of gift from the Chippewa nation.

JOHN ASKIN.
SIBLEY & WHITNEY, Attorneys for heirs.

TESTIMONY.

Gaget Tremble, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that about the year 1786 Mr. John Askin employed men to cut a road from the said Tremble's creek or mills to the river Huron, where the Moravian village stood; that he knew of sleighs passing back and forth the winter following, and that the said road has been used since.

This claim was, as appears, duly considered and deliberately rejected by a former board in 1805. No additional testimony being now adduced, except that sleighs have travelled upon a certain road adjacent to the land, the present commissioners do reject the same.

No. 26.—François Furton.

JUNE 15, 1821.

I, François Furton, make claim to a certain tract of land situated on the border of Lake St. Clair, bounded on one side by Jeane Bpt. Chovin, and on the other side by Louis Tremble, being three arpents in front by forty arpents in depth.

FRANÇOIS FURTON.

TESTIMONY.

John Grant, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he has lived from his infancy a near neighbor to François Furton; that he well knows said Furton occupied the tract in question at least five years before the Americans took possession of this place; said Furton has continued in the possession and improvement of said tract of land ever since; that before the arrival of General Wayne's army, said Furton had twenty acres of land under fence and cultivation; said Furton has continued to cultivate said land since that time, and is now with his family, consisting of seven children, on said tract; that said Furton is an extremely ignorant man, and that he was frequently told by Mr. Aaron Greely, surveyor, that said Furton was badly advised by his neighbors and friends not to make an entry of his land in 1812; that deponent well knows that two sons and one son-in-law of said Furton entered the regular army of the United States; and that said François Furton served the United States during the late war two years.—June 15, 1821.

François Rivard, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he has a perfect knowledge that, at least five years previous to the arrival of General Wayne's army, François Furton lived on the land in question, where he now lives; that he has continued in the undisturbed possession of said land from that time to the present; that said Furton is an extremely ignorant man, and deponent has always understood that he did not enter his land with the commissioners in 1812 by advice of neighbors as ignorant as himself; that said Furton, in the commencement of the late war, entered the American army, with two of his sons and his son-in-law; that he has long known said Furton, and that he is an honest and industrious farmer.—June 15, 1821.

The commissioners confirm this claim to said François Furton according to the following boundaries: commencing at a post on the border of Lake St. Clair, and on the line between this tract and a tract granted to Jeane Bpt. Chovin; thence, on said line, north 60° west, 50 chains 30 links, to an oak tree 18 inches diameter, standing on the line between that tract and a tract granted to Louis Tremble; thence south 71° east, 47 chains 95 links, to a post on the border of said lake; thence, along said lake, south 40° 30′ east, 8 chains 22 links, to the place of beginning; containing 23 acres, being the only vacant lands remaining unconfirmed in the vicinity of said claim, and being the land upon which said Furton resides; and the surveyor of private claims is hereby authorized to survey the same according to the foregoing boundaries. The commissioners are aware that in this confirmation they may, perhaps, have exceeded their strictly legal powers, yet they feel disposed to take for granted a formal entry made in due time, which it plainly appears the ignorance of the claimant alone prevented, and that the surveyor, Mr. Aaron Greely, left this small tract vacant for claimant's use when he surveyed the adjoining claims in 1812.

No. 27.—Abraham Cook.

DETROIT, June 26, 1821.

GENTLEMEN: Please to take notice that I claim title for myself, my heirs and assigns, and set up title as the assignee of the heirs of Jaques St. Obin, deceased, and of Gabriel St. Obin, of the county of Wayne and Territory of Michigan, as aforesaid, by virtue of a long and uninterrupted possession, occupancy, and improvement thereof, made by me and those from whom I derive title to said premises, previous to the 1st day of July, 1796, to this day, of a tract of land situated on the border of Detroit river, containing two hundred arpents or French acres of land, more or less, with the appurtenances, being five arpents fronting on the Detroit river by forty arpents in rear; bounded on the northeast by lot No. 723, confirmed to John Bpt. Laderonte, on the southwest by lot No. 180, confirmed to François Rivard, and on the northwest by lot No. 153, confirmed to said Gabriel St. Obin, and lot No. 155, confirmed to Joseph Laparle, alias Laquiré, being originally two distinct farms adjoining each other. I claim and set up title to the lower farm, being three arpents in front by forty in depth, by virtue of a deed of purchase from said Gabriel St. Obin, alias St. Aubin, being three arpents in front on the Detroit river by eighty arpents in rear, dated December 13, 1811, recorded in the records of Wayne county, vol. 4, pages 5, 6, and 7, and pages 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, and 31, of said vol. 4, being lot known and described on Greely's large map of private claims in said Territory of Michigan as No. 734, as confirmed to Jaques St. Obin, containing 99.47 acres.

Secondly, of the upper farm, being two arpents in front by forty in depth, claimed by me as above. I acquired the same by deed of purchase from Robert McDougall, jr., dated July 3, 1818, of the same two arpents in front by eighty arpents in rear, from the border of said Detroit river, as recorded in said vol. 4, pages 128, 129, 130, and 131, who, viz: the said Robert McDougall, jr., acquired the same from Joseph Campau, as assignee of the front of said Gabriel St. Obin, and of the rear lot by deed from said Joseph Laparle, alias Lognon, to said Gabriel St. Obin, as recorded in vol. 3, pages 398, 401.

As no entry can now be found among the records of the former commissioners for said tracts of land now claimed by me as the assignee of said Gabriel St. Obin and Jaques St. Obin, heirs, having been entered in conformity to the different acts of Congress relative to private claims in this Territory, in addition to the witnesses I shall produce to you whenever you may think proper to take my peculiar case into consideration, I beg leave to refer you to the 4th volume of the proceedings of the former commissioners, June 18, 1808, pages 155 to 158, for presumptive evidence of the fact; for it will there be seen (claim No. 153) that the above-mentioned Gabriel St. Aubin made an entry with the said commissioners June 12, 1808, of one hundred and twenty arpents of land, being three arpents in front by forty in depth, bounded in front by Jaques St. Obin; and that the said Joseph Laparle (page 157) made his entry on the same day of eighty arpents of land, being two arpents in front by forty in depth, bounded in front by the farm of Gabriel St. Aubin, &c.

Now, can it be believed for a moment that the said Gabriel St. Obin, who, on July 13, 1808, owned and lived on the premises, and was also in the possession and occupancy of the front of said Joseph Laparle's claim, No. 155, would not have made an entry at the same time for the same, as well as for 153, which was confirmed to him as aforesaid? That he who also cultivated and entered No. 153, last mentioned, would not have also entered, at the same time, the farm lying between said No. 153 and the Detroit river, belonging to him and the other heirs of his father, Jaques St. Obin, deceased, which was then possessed and occupied by his brother, Jaques St. Obin.

The fact is, that an entry was made for the farms I now claim a patent for from the United States, as the assignee of said St. Obin, and the proofs thereof are on the files of the former commissioners. I allude to the official certificates signed by Aaron Greely, surveyor of private claims, dated at Detroit, January 4, 1820, now in your possession, being what he states to be a description of No. —, on Detroit river, confirmed to Jaques St. Obin, Nos. 168 and 169, to be a description of No. —, confirmed to Gabriel St. Obin, giving the exact boundaries and contents of these two farms as they now are, as surveyed by him January 8, 1810. All which is humbly submitted.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

ABRAHAM COOK,
By GEORGE McDOUGALL.

The COMMISSIONERS of the United States Land Office for the district of Detroit and Territory of Michigan.

TESTIMONY.

Gabriel St. Obin, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he occupied the tract of two acres in front on the Detroit river by forty in depth, adjoining to Jean Bpt. Laderonte's above, and Jaques St. Obin's, deceased, below, for from twenty-five to thirty years. I procured this farm by an exchange with Pierre Casomell. I am now upwards of seventy years of age, and, from my earliest recollection, this farm has been constantly occupied by claimant, and those under whom he claims. I sold this tract, by deed, to Joseph Campau, who, by deed, sold to Robert McDougall, jr., who also sold, by deed, to Abraham Cook, the present claimant, who is now in possession of this tract. I have no interest whatever in this tract, having sold to Joseph Campau all my right, interest, and claim, to the said tract. I applied to the register in 1808 to make an entry of my claim to this tract, and was then informed by him that it was not necessary to make any further entry, as my title to this tract would be sufficiently evident to the commissioners from the grant or patent which I held from the King of France; and, accordingly, I made no further entry.

The tract containing three arpents in front bordering upon the Detroit river, by forty arpents in depth, now claimed by Abraham Cook; is bounded above by the tract mentioned in the foregoing testimony, below by the tract confirmed to François Rivard, No 180, and is numbered on the large map of private land claims 734; and is further bounded in the rear by lot No. 153, confirmed to Gabriel St. Obin, and now owned by Abraham Cook. I sold the rear or back part of this farm, which was confirmed to me, and No. 153, to Abraham Cook; and the other heir of my father, Jaques St. Obin, deceased, with myself, sold this tract to Abraham Cook. This witness was born and raised upon this farm, and lived upon it for a period of at least sixty-four years, until he gave possession thereof to the present claimant.

Reference to the 4th volume of the records of the former commissioners of private land claims mentioned in the above petition, vol. 4, page 156.

To the register of the land office at Detroit:

Please to take notice that I now enter with the commissioners of the land office at Detroit the following tract of land in the district of Detroit, containing, by estimation, one hundred and twenty arpents of land, it being three arpents in front by forty arpents in depth; bounded in front by the farm of Jaques St. Obin, and in rear by unconceded lands; on one side by François Rivard, and on the other by Joseph

Laparle. I make claim and set up title by virtue of possession and occupancy, and improvements made by me.

GABRIEL ST. OBIN.

DETROIT, June 13, 1808.

Page 57 of the same volume of said records.

To the register of the land office:

Please to take notice that I now enter with the commissioners of the land office at Detroit the following tract of land situate in the district of Detroit, containing, by estimation, eighty arpents of land, it being two arpents in front by forty in depth, bounded in front by the farm of Gabriel St. Obin, and in the rear by United States land; on one side by Gabriel St. Obin, and on the other by Louis Cochois. I make claim and set up title by virtue of possession, occupancy, and improvements made by me and those from whom I derive title.

JOSEPH LAPARLE.

It appears from the records that both of the above claimants' titles were confirmed.

Claimants file three deeds of conveyance: two from the United States to Joseph Laparle for the tract described in the above entry, and to Gabriel St. Obin for the tract mentioned in the above entry, made with the former commissioners; and another from Jaques St. Obin to Gabriel St. Obin.

The commissioners, in considering the foregoing claims of Abraham Cook, would observe that the continued possession of the lands claimed is of as long standing as perhaps any other upon this strait; and that the omission to make regular entries thereof before former land boards apparently arose from the announced belief of said boards that the early French deeds constituted a legal and sufficient title. The commissioners do now, however, in accordance with the wishes of the present claimant, confirm the tracts as claimed, and do direct a survey to be made thereof by the proper surveyor of private land claims, and that said survey be returned to the register of the land office at Detroit. That a patent certificate thereof be issued to the said claimant; and that, with the approbation of the Secretary of the Treasury, a patent do issue thereon for the aforesaid tract, embracing the said two tracts of land as claimed; the same being five arpents in front, and extending forty arpents in depth, and otherwise bounded as in the notice of claim.

No. 28.—François Rivard.

The undersigned renews his entry and application for a confirmation of six hundred and forty acres of land lying immediately adjacent and in rear of the tract of land confirmed to Michael Yax. The undersigned founds his claim on the following facts:

A long time anterior to the arrival of General Wayne's army, his deceased uncle, Michael Yax, was in possession and constant improvement of the above-mentioned tract of land; the possession and improvement were uninterrupted during his life; that by deed he became the assignee of the legal heirs of said Michael Yax. Considering himself entitled to a confirmation of six hundred and forty acres of land, pursuant to the act of Congress he personally made application to the commissioners appointed under the law to make an entry of said described tract of land, (as will appear by his own oath and that of John B. Chapoton,) and was refused permission. The undersigned considers that he has done everything required by the letter or spirit of the act of Congress in relation to his entry. If the land was not confirmed to the present applicant in 1812, it was by the improper rejection of his claim by the commissioners; a confirmation of the claim to the undersigned would not interfere with the claims of others. He conceives he has most unequivocally shown by the accompanying affidavits his uninterrupted possession and continued improvement. If further evidence be required to establish the fact he can procure it. His claim he considers within the present powers of the commissioners, and to their decision he submits his claim.

FRANÇOIS RIVARD.

TESTIMONY.

François Rivard, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that during the time the commissioners, Messrs. Audrain, Abbott, and Atwater, were in session, he went before them, in company with John Bpt. Chapoton, and made application to make an entry of a tract of land lying immediately adjacent and in rear of the land now owned and occupied by him, and confirmed to his late uncle, Michael Yax, stating that the improvement and possession by himself and his late uncle could be proved by witnesses; that they informed him they could not receive his entry, and he made no further efforts.

Pierre Chovin, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he worked upon a tract of land distant about five acres beyond the tract of land now in the possession of François Rivard, confirmed by patent to Michael Yax, extending eighty arpents in rear from Detroit river. That about five acres of this tract was fenced in; and that, by direction of his late uncle, who he believes leased of Michael Yax, he sowed wheat on it; that the said land was improved and fenced in at least ten years before the arrival of General Wayne's army. That he always understood said tract of land was the property of said Michael Yax; and that, after the expiration of said lease of about one year to his uncle, he always understood that said Yax improved said land.

Gabriel St. Obin, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he has lived for the greater part of his life within half a mile of the land in question; and that, at least ten years before the arrival of General Wayne's army, the late Michael Yax possessed and cultivated a certain tract of land in rear of the eighty acres now owned by François Rivard, (and purchased of the heirs of said Yax,) containing about five or six acres; that said Yax, during his lifetime, continued to cultivate said tract, and since the decease of said Yax the possession has been continued up to the present time by François Rivard. That, to the best of deponent's knowledge, said Yax died in the year 1812; that there was a house on said tract when deponent first saw the premises; that he was often on said land while in the possession of said Yax.

John Bpt. St. Obin, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he has lived the greater part of his life within a mile of the tract of land now owned by François Rivard, formerly the farm of Michael Yax. This deponent well knows that, at least ten years before the arrival of General Wayne's army, the late

Michael Yax possessed and cultivated a certain tract of land in rear of the eighty acres now owned by François Rivard, and continued the cultivation till his death; that since the decease of said Yax the possession has been kept to the present time by François Rivard.

And it is further satisfactorily shown to this board that the above claimant, François Rivard, is the assignee of most or all the heirs of Michael Yax, deceased.

And thereupon the commissioners do decide that the said endeavors of the present claimant, François Rivard, as shown, be taken and considered as an entry of claim made in due time; and, as part of the land now claimed has been already confirmed to others, therefore the commissioners do confirm to said François Rivard that part, and so much of fractional section No. 22, in township No. 1 south, of range No. 12 east, in the land district of Detroit, as may not be included within the lines of survey of said fractional section claimed by and confirmed to Joseph Louis Tremble; leaving, however, to the heirs of Michael Yax, deceased, all their legal and equitable rights in and to said tract of land.

No. 29.—Louis Chapoton.

Louis Chapoton renews his entry made with the former commissioners in 1808, recorded in vol. 6, page 150, of the records of said commissioners, in the words following, to wit:

To the honorable the commissioners of the land board:

The subscriber enters his claim to a certain tract of land in the district of Detroit, containing three acres in front, bounded by the river Detroit, extending one hundred acres in depth; bounded on the north by a farm of the late Antoine Boyer, and on the south by the farm of Louis Beaufait.

LOUIS CHAPOTON.

It is stated in the said records that this tract contains, by estimation, two hundred and forty arpents, it being three arpents in front by eighty arpents in depth, and the boundaries described as in the above entry. The claim is No. 573 by the former commissioners.

In virtue of said entry, said Chapoton received a patent from the President of the United States for eighty arpents of land in depth by three arpents in front, making two hundred and eight and ninety-one hundredths acres.

He now produces his patent for said ——— of the above-described tract, and claims, in virtue of his original entry, in addition to the said eighty arpents, ——— so much more in depth as may be sufficient to complete the quantity originally claimed, viz: one hundred arpents in depth.

Testimony adduced before the former commissioners at the time of the entry of said original claim:

George Meldrum, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that many years previous to the 1st day of July, 1796, claimant was in possession and occupancy of the premises claimed, and has continued so without any interruption to the present day.

Testimony adduced before the commissioners in 1821:

Bennoit Chapoton, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he was present at the time Louis Chapoton made the entry with the register. Mr. Audrain asked said Chapoton to produce the witness to prove his possession; said Chapoton replied, Mr. Meldrum would prove the possession of one hundred arpents in depth by three arpents in front. Mr. Meldrum was then sworn, and did testify to this fact, that Louis Chapoton was in the possession of one hundred arpents in depth by three arpents in breadth; and that he had occupied and improved the said quantity of land long prior to the 1st of July, 1796, and continued so to possess said quantity of land to the present time. This witness knows, of his own knowledge, that Louis Chapoton has always claimed this quantity of land, viz: one hundred arpents in depth by three in breadth.

And thereupon the commissioners do confirm to Louis Chapoton eight and thirty-two hundredths acres of land adjacent and in rear of the front heretofore confirmed to him, and being bounded in rear by the line of the back concession and the lands of the United States.

No. 30.—Isidore Moran.

The commissioners appointed to investigate the titles to lands in the district of Detroit will please take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situated on the border of Detroit river, bounded in front by said river, on the lower side and rear by lands confirmed to François Paul Malchere, and on the upper side by land claimed and confirmed to the heirs of Antoine Morass, containing one square arpent above the road; which tract is claimed by virtue of purchase, actual settlement, long possession, and valuable improvements.

ISIDORE MORAN.

It appearing to the commissioners that the one square arpent claimed by Isidore Moran is included within the bounds of a tract confirmed heretofore by a former board to François Paul Malchere, the present board, considering it incompetent for them to interfere with, or reverse the confirmations heretofore made by any former land boards, do decline to act upon the claim now preferred.

No. 31.—Gabriel Cheine and the heirs of Jean Baptiste Campau.

JULY 6, 1821.

The commissioners then proceeded to take into consideration the following claim to a certain tract of land bordering on the Detroit river. The following documents and proceedings before former land boards were adduced as evidence for the consideration of the present board.

The legal heirs of Jeane Baptiste Campau, deceased, renew the entry made by their deceased ancestor, Jeane Baptiste Campau, deceased, July 14, 1807, for a certain piece of land lying on the river Detroit, of three arpents, or acres, in front by eighty in depth, bounded on the northeast side by the farm owned by the heirs of Simon Campau, deceased, and on the southeast by the farm of James Campau; they claim by virtue of the long and uninterrupted possession and improvement of their deceased ancestor.

ORIGINAL ENTRY.—Recorded in volume 3, page 324, of the records of the former commissioners.

TERRITORY OF MICHIGAN, to wit:

To the register of the United States land office at Detroit:

1st. Notice is hereby given that I, Gabriel Cheine, of the district of Detroit, in the name of my father-in-law, Jeane Baptiste Campau, claim a tract of land on the river Detroit, containing nine arpents in front by eighty in depth, originally granted by the governor and intendant of the province of Louisiana, by patent dated the 5th July, 1739, and by virtue of long possession and valuable improvements.

2d. I also claim, jointly with my brother, Touissant Cheine, another tract of land situate on the river Rouge, bounded on the west by Jaques Godfroy, and on the east by lands of Isidore Cheine, containing six arpents in front, extending in depth to lands of the St. Cosme family, by virtue of a deed dated 30th March, 1788, made to us by Isidore Cheine, and by virtue of my possession and valuable improvements thereon.

3d. I also claim, to hold to me and my heirs, a tract of land situate on the river Rouge, containing three acres in front by fifty in depth, bounded below by lands of Alexis, now the property of François Lafontaine, and above by lands of Messrs. Meldrum & Park, by virtue of a deed of sale dated the 14th September, 1799, made me by Redman Condon, who claimed by virtue of a deed of exchange made to him by Meldrum & Park, dated the 15th of August, 1797, and also by virtue of long possession and valuable improvements thereon made and done.

DETROIT, October 28, 1805.

Extract from the minutes of the land office at Detroit

["The original mark of the foregoing entries appears in the handwriting of P. Audrain, esq., late register."]

The words within inverted comas and brackets were inserted at the instance of the dissenting member; no proof of the allegation was adduced.

On the 20th day of October, 1805, Gabriel Cheine filed an entry with the commissioners, in the name of Jeane Baptiste Campau, his father-in-law, in the words and figures following, to wit:

TERRITORY OF MICHIGAN, to wit:

To the register of the United States land office at Detroit:

Notice is hereby given that I, Gabriel Cheine, of the district of Detroit, in the name of my father-in-law, Jeane Baptiste Campau, claim a tract of land on river Detroit, containing nine arpents in front by eighty in depth, originally granted by the governor and intendant of the province of Louisiana by patent dated July 5, 1739, and by virtue of a long possession and valuable improvements.

GABRIEL his × mark. CHEINE.

See volume 4, page 12, of the records of the former commissioners under the date of July 9, 1807 when this claim was considered, and the following testimony was adduced:

Jeane Baptiste Chapoton was brought forward as a witness, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that Jeane Baptiste Campau, father-in-law of the claimant, was in possession and occupancy of three arpents, the middle of the said nine arpents, more than thirty years ago, and continued in the possession and occupancy of the same until he sold it to the present claimant; and that the said claimant, from the day he purchased to this day, has continued in the possession and occupancy of the said tract. The deponent further saith that in January, 1782, he accompanied Jaques Campau, Jeane Baptiste Campau, and Simon Campau, their brothers, each of whom then occupied three arpents of the said nine arpents, when they made the division of three farms, commencing at the river Detroit and extending in depth about eighty arpents, each of them retaining three arpents in front; and that ever since that division was made Jaques Campau and the late Simon Campau have been in the possession and occupancy, each, of their respective farms. The deponent doth further say that it was at the special request of Jeane Baptiste Campau, father-in-law of the claimant, that he, the deponent, accompanied the three brothers when they divided the three farms.

At the request of the claimant, and he declaring on oath that he believes that he can bring forward material evidence in his behalf, the commissioners postpone the consideration of this claim until Monday next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon.

On the 13th day of July, 1807, (see volume 4, page 13, of the records of the former commissioners,) the commissioners took up the claim of Gabriel Cheine. Evidence was adduced and heard. Whereupon Jeane Baptiste Campau, father-in-law to the claimant, came forward, and prayed that time may be allowed him until to-morrow morning to enter his caveat against the granting of a certificate to the present claimant, and it was granted him.

On Thursday, July 14, 1807, (see volume 4, page 14, of said records,) Jeane Baptiste Campau appeared and filed his caveat in the words and figures following, to wit:

TERRITORY OF MICHIGAN, ss:

To the commissioners of the United States for settling the claims to lands in the said Territory:

Whereas it appears from the records of the board of commissioners that Gabriel Cheine, of this township of Detroit, heretofore unknown to the applicant, made entry of a certain piece of land lying upon the said river Detroit, of three arpents, or acres, in front by eighty in depth; bounded on the northeast side by the heirs of Simon Campau, deceased, and on the southwest by the farm of James Campau, all of which said piece of land or farm is the proper inheritance of this applicant, devised by gift of bargain and sale from his ancestor, Louis Campau, and of which the applicant now is and for forty-five years past hath been in the peaceable and uninterrupted possession thereof; and whereas it further appeareth that the said Gabriel Cheine is endeavoring to prosecute his said entry so as to oust this applicant of his inheritance, by obtaining, first, from this board their final certificate that he is the possessor and proprietor of the said piece of land and is entitled to the same; and, secondly, the patent of the President of the United States therefor: These are therefore, in my own behalf, to protest against the said Gabriel Cheine's getting any such certificate as is above mentioned, for the reasons aforesaid, and others accompanying this document; and I do by these presents ask and demand of this honorable board such certificate, in my own name, as shall enable me to obtain a patent therefor; and I do hereby tender unto this board at this time the evidence of my long and uninterrupted possession and improvement of the said piece of land, and that I am the true, sole, and proper owner and possessor thereof.

J. BAP. CAMPAU.

DETROIT, July 14, 1807.

And thereupon the further consideration of the claim of said Gabriel Cheine was postponed.

Charles, marquis of Beauharnois, a commander of the military order of St. Louis, governor and lieutenant general for the King in and over the New France and Louisiana; Gilles Hocquart, knight, counsellor of the King in his councils, intendant of justice, policy, and finances, in and over the New France and Louisiana:

Upon the representations which have been made by the inhabitants of the Fort Pontchartrain of Detroit, of Lake Erie, to MM. Dr. of Boishebert, captain of a company of the detachment of the navy, ex-commandant at the said Fort Pontchartrain, and Peon, knight of the military order of St. Louis, major of the town and government of Quebec, now commanding at said fort, and of which they have made an account to us, containing and stating that till now they had not ventured to undertake any culture and settle any lands at the said place, because they had no title to assure the property of these lands; and that if it was our will to grant some to them they would be not only enabled to work without any danger of disturbance, and that, moreover, great advantages would derive from their labors in obtaining by those means provisions in plenty, which would help the support of the garrison as well as to the inhabitants and travellers. Having taken those things into consideration, in virtue of the patent letters given by his Majesty at Paris in the month of April, 1716, registered to the superior council the 1st of December next, the act of the council of state of the King in date of May 19, 1722, the undersigned, in the name of his Majesty, have given, granted, and transferred, under pretence of cens and rents, from now and forever, to Louis Campau, inhabitant of said Fort Pontchartrain of Detroit, there residing, for himself, his heirs and assigns, one concession of land situated on the strait of Lake Erie, containing five arpents in front and forty in depth, adjoining to the side in a direction west-southwest to the land before granted to —— Binault, by a line north-northwest and south-southeast, and on the other side in a direction east-northeast to the unconceded lands, in front upon the strait of Lake Erie, and in the depth by a line east-northeast and west-southwest, adjoining likewise the unconceded lands, to be held in possession by the said Campau, his heirs and assigns, to the causes and charges, clauses, and following conditions, to wit: that the said Campau, his heirs and assigns, will be bound to carry their grain to be ground to the common mill as soon as one will have been erected, otherwise the said grain will be confiscated and an arbitrary fine will be inflicted; to occupy or to cause to occupy the said place in the course of a year from to-day, the latest; to cover the deserts of the neighbors when they will require it; to cultivate the said land; to give the paths which will be thought necessary to the public utility; to make the partition fences according to the regulations, and to pay every year to the receiver of the King's domain in this country, or to the clerk of said receiver who will reside at Detroit, one sol of cens for each arpent in front, and twenty sols of rent for each twenty arpents in superficies, amounting, for the said five arpents in front by forty in depth, to ten livres five sols of cens and rents, and besides, five barrels of wheat for the said five arpents in front; the whole payable every year to the day and feast of St. Martin, of which the first year will expire November 11, 1735, and continue from year to year, the said cens bearing profit of lots and sales, default and fine, with every all other royal rights, when the case will happen, according to the manner of the court of a provost martial et vis county of Paris. It is, however, allowed to the said Campau to pay the said ten livres of rent and five sols of cens in furs, at the price of Detroit, till the establishment of a current money; reserving, in the name of the King, upon the said habitation, all the wood which his Majesty may want for timber and the construction of his vessels and forts which may be built hereafter, as well as the property of mines, mine ores, and minerals, if there are any found in the extent of the said concession; and the said Campau, his heirs and assigns, obliged to cause to lay out, measure, and bound the said concession, in all its length and depth, at his own expenses, and to execute the clauses inserted in the present title, and to take letters of confirmation of his Majesty in the course of two years; the whole, otherwise, to be considered as null and void.

Made and given at Montreal, July 5, 1734.

HOCQUART.

By order of his excellency: DE VALMIER.

BEAUHARNOIS.

By order of his excellency: DE CHEVEREMONT.

Celeron, knight of the military order of St. Louis, major commanding at Detroit:

Upon the demands which have been made by Louis Campau, inhabitant at Detroit, to grant him the continuations of the lands which he has bought at Detroit, and of those which have been granted to him by the present title, the undersigned, with the permission of their excellencies the general and intendant, have granted and conceded, now and forever, to the said J. Louis Campau, for himself, his heirs and assigns, the said continuations of forty arpents in depth, being the continuation of the lands where he is now settled; and he will have and hold possession of said continuations to the charges expressed in the deed hereto annexed; and besides, for the sum of forty sols for every arpent in front of annual rent, of which the first year will terminate November 11, 1751, amounting, for the nine arpents of land which he holds, to the sum of eighteen livres, payable for the benefit of the King to the receiver of his domain in this country.

CELERON.

NAVARRE, Sub-delegate of his excellency the Intendant.

Before us, the undersigned witnesses, appear John Baptiste Campau, of the district of Hamtramck, in the county of Wayne and Territory of the United States, who doth acknowledge to have sold, ceded, transferred, and abandoned, from now and forever, to Gabriel Cheine, said Cahousa, his son-in-law, to these presents, accepting a purchaser for himself, his heirs and assigns, the said farm or plantation upon which the said John Baptiste Campau is now living, with all the furniture, cattle, and aratorial tools, of which an inventory is annexed to the presents, together with all the buildings erected upon, crops, and, in a word, all the appurtenances whatsoever to the said premises belonging or in anywise appertaining, without excepting or reserving the least thing, for and in consideration of the sum of one thousand pounds current money of New York State, equal in value to two thousand five hundred dollars current money of the United States of America, which said sum the said Gabriel Cheine, said Cahousa, doth promise and oblige himself to pay in the following manner, to wit: the said Gabriel Cheine, otherwise called Cahousa, doth promise and oblige himself to pay the debts of the said John Baptiste Campau, especially a mortgage which Baby's family has upon the said farm; and when the said debts shall have been paid and acquitted, if there is any balance left, it shall be paid to the said John Baptiste Campau or his heirs, who will give a good and lawful receipt for the same to said Gabriel Cheine. It is well understood that the said debts, and in case he should neglect to acquit them directly he, the said Gabriel Cheine, is responsible for all the damages and interests which can arise or come after. The said Gabriel Cheine doth promise and oblige himself, notwithstanding the payment of the sum of one thousand pounds, to harbor, dress, and board the said John Baptiste Campau, in health as well as in case of sickness, in a decent and reasonable manner, during all his lifetime, and after his death to bury him decently, and to have for him all the usual prayers performed.

The said Jeane Baptiste Campau reserves to himself the right and privilege to live with the said Gabriel Cheine, his son-in-law, or any other person whatsoever, according to his own will; and, in the last case, the said Gabriel is, and will be, obliged to pay him a reasonable pension; and, moreover, he will continue to furnish him with the necessary and convenient clothes, and will be bound to nurse him in case of sickness. As long as the said Jeane Baptiste Campau will live with the said Gabriel Cheine, his son-in-law, he will never be compelled to do any work; and even when he would consent to it, it will be considered as an act of his own free will. The said Gabriel Cheine doth promise and oblige himself, besides, to keep with him Archange Campau, a daughter, under age, of the said John Baptiste Campau, to board and dress her decently all the time, till she will become of age, that is to say, till the moment of her complete eighteenth year.

And to enforce the payment of the sum of one thousand dollars as above described, and for the faithful execution of the articles and conditions stipulated therein, the said Gabriel Cheine, otherwise called Cahousa, has no right and power to alien, exchange, or sell the said farm or plantation, together with the furniture, tools, and cattle, specified in the said inventory, without the permission or agreement of the said John Baptiste Campau; and the whole to remain affected and mortgaged till the perfect payment of the said thousand pounds.

The said farm or plantation is the same which he has received from his parents, and makes a part of the nine arpents of the first concession granted by the governor and intendant of New France and Louisiana, consisting of three arpents in front, and extending eighty arpents in depth; bounded west-southwest by the farm of Jaques Campau, and east-northeast by the farm of Simon Campau.

It is well understood, stipulated, and agreed between the parties, that the said Gabriel Cheine, said Cahousa, doth consider himself bound to pay only the debts contracted till the present day by the said John Baptiste Campau, not exceeding the sum of one thousand pounds New York currency; but that he will not be obliged to pay any debt which the said John Baptiste Campau may contract after the date of the presents; that the said Gabriel Cheine, when he will pay the above stated debts, will take receipts from the different creditors; and that the said John Baptiste Campau is bound to receive the said acquittances or receipts in payment of the said sum of one thousand pounds; and that when the payment will be entire and perfect, the said John Baptiste Campau, his heirs or assigns, will be held to present themselves before the clerk of the county to discharge the present mortgage in a legal manner.

Done and signed at Detroit, in the office of the prothonotary of the said county of Wayne, the twenty-seventh day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred, and the twenty-fourth year of the independence of the United States of America, before the children, then of age, of the said John Baptiste Campau, and other witnesses; and the said parties, after the reading of the presents, have signed and sealed.

COPY AND TRANSLATION.

MAY 12, 1817.

Received of Mr. Gabriel Cheine the sum of one thousand pounds, equal to two thousand five hundred dollars, being for full and perfect payment of the said farm which he occupies at present at Detroit.

J. B. CAMPAU, THE ELDER.

Witness: ARCHIBALD LYONS.

[Note by one of the commissioners.—"Fraud was alleged to have been used in obtaining the above document, but no proof was adduced."]

I, John McDonell, of the city of Detroit and Territory of Michigan, do solemnly swear that I have this day examined and compared the above copy of a receipt with the original receipt, and that I found it to be a true and perfect copy thereof. That Archibald Lyons, whose name is written under the original receipt as a witness, is well known to me, having formerly lived with me in capacity of a clerk; that I have very often seen him write his name, and am well acquainted with his handwriting, and am satisfied, and have no doubt, that the name of Archibald Lyons, signed to the original receipt, of which the above is a true copy, is the handwriting of the said Lyons.

JOHN McDONELL.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 29th September, 1821.

DETROIT, September 29, 1821.

I have a perfect recollection that Charles Larned, esq., of counsel for the Campaus, in the claim of Cheine and Campau, did admit that to be the handwriting of Jeane Baptiste Campau which is attached or signed to a receipt of which the above purports to be a copy.

J. KEARSLEY, one of the Commissioners

TESTIMONY.

Antoine Campau, being duly sworn, doposeth and saith that he has seen Jeane Baptiste Campau sign his name. Deponent does not know that he will be able to distinguish between the handwriting of said Campau and that of any other person; witness cannot read or write manuscript; witness was present, in 1817, when Gabriel Cheine and Jeane Baptiste Campau, deceased, made a final settlement of their accounts. Archibald Lyons, Alexis Campau, and Pierre Cheine, were also present; witness saw, at that time, a receipt written, and Jeane Baptiste Campau signed it. Witness would know the paper if he were to see it. Witness saw Archibald Lyons sign the paper as a witness. Deponent understood that the settlement was had respecting the farm in question purchased by said Cheine, and that the receipt was given by said Campau as an acknowledgment of the payment in full by said Cheine for the said farm. Deponent was present when J. B. Campau, deceased, sold the farm to said G. Cheine, and made his mark as a witness to the deed of conveyance. The consideration for which the farm was sold was one thousand pounds to be paid by said Cheine, and the said Cheine was to maintain the said Campau the rest of his life; two daughters and one son of said Campau were to be supported by said Cheine until they arrived at the age of, the daughters 18 or 20, the son 21 years. Deponent knows that the settlement above mentioned, and the receipt then given by said Campau, was for the specific purpose as an acknowledgment, on the part of said Campau, of the fulfilment of the contract on the part of said Cheine. Witness understood, at the time, that said Campau was satisfied with the conduct of said Cheine as to every part of the contract or condition upon which the farm was sold by said Campau to said Cheine. J. B. Campau appeared to this deponent at the time to be in full possession of all his mental faculties, and in good bodily health. There was no objection made to the settlement at that time by any person present. Alexis Campau, one of the heirs, was then present, and made no objection to the fairness and validity of the settlement. Witness is the son of J. B. Campau, deceased, and brother-in-law to Gabriel Cheine, the respective present claimants.

Pierre Cheine, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he was present at an arrangement of accounts between Jeane Baptiste Campau and Gabriel Cheine, when Alexis Campau and Archibald Lyons were present. Deponent does not know in what year, nor does witness know what accounts they settled; they spoke of several accounts, and of lands over the river; deponent saw Mr. A. Lyons writing, and supposed he was putting the accounts in order. Deponent never was present at any settlement between the parties, except at the time when Mr. J. B. Campau gave a receipt to G. Cheine, but does not know for what purpose, or upon what settlement; deponent did not see J. B. Campau sign any receipt. J. B. Campau told witness, after this settlement, that he (Campau) was satisfied with Gabriel Cheine and Alexis Campau, by which deponent understood, or he then understood, that the settlement was not alone with G. Cheine, but also with Alexis Campau and J. B. Campau; J. B. Campau was one party in the settlement, and Gabriel Cheine and Alexis Campau, jointly, the other party. Deponent has no knowledge of Cheine's having been requested by J. B. Campau to pay Alexis Campau any sum of money on account of lands over the river. Deponent knows that Alexis Campau owned lands on the other side of the river. J. B. Campau (as witness understood) gave Alexis Campau a mare in full payment of the demands of said Alexis Campau against him (said J. B.) at this settlement. Deponent never saw said Gabriel Cheine treat J. B. Campau ill, from the time said Campau sold to said Cheine said farm until the day of the decease of said Campau. Campau was as well clothed after he sold the farm to Cheine as he was prior thereto. J. B. Campau told witness that G. Cheine gave him clothing. Deponent never heard J. B. Campau complain of the treatment of Mr. Cheine towards him. J. B. Campau went and lived with Alexis Campau about two or three years; but witness never heard him give any reason for leaving Cheine's. Deponent was authorized by G. Cheine to state to said J. B. Campau that if he wished to live with his son, Alexis Campau, he (Cheine) would pay him (J. Bpt. Campau) a certain sum of money; but if he wished to return and live with him, (Cheine,) that he was at liberty to do so. The sum which deponent was authorized by G. Cheine to offer to J. B. Campau was two hundred dollars and two suits of clothes, in full for his support and clothing for life; and he, moreover, would be at liberty to return to the house of G. Cheine, and be fed and clothed by said Cheine, if he (Campau) should, at any time, wish to return to live with him; and, in the latter event, J. B. Campau would not be charged for the two hundred dollars which he (Cheine) might have previously paid him in the event of his accepting the former proposition. Deponent states that if Mr. Campau accepted the proposition, to wit: to receive the two hundred dollars and two suits of clothes, then Mr. Cheine would expect to be discharged from all the legal responsibility of feeding and clothing said Campau, as contained in his contract; yet if Campau chose, at any time, to return to Cheine's house to live, the door would be open to him; and if any of the children of Cheine treated him (Campau) ill, that he (Cheine) would remove them from the house thus occupied by him (Campau.) Deponent states that when he made the proposition to old Mr. Campau, the old man said he would accept the proposition, and the next day old Mr. Campau went to town, and, on his return, he told witness that he would not accept the proposition; that some people advised him not to accept it; old Mr. Campau did not tell witness who they were that advised him not to accept. Old Mr. Campau, not long before his death, told witness that he had some idea of returning to live with G. Cheine. Mr. Campau went out to look for his horses, and returned sick. He had the pleurisy; was sick two or three days, grew very unwell. The priest was sent for; Mr. Gabriel Cheine came with the priest, but when he arrived the old man was dead; he died at the house of deponent. Alexis Campau occupied the house, and the old man and witness lived with him. Witness does not know that Alexis Campau urged or was the means of inducing the old man to leave the house of G. Cheine. Witness knows that one pair of shoes, and two blue handkerchiefs, and some tobacco, were brought to old Mr. Campau while he was living with his son, Alexis Campau; that these articles were sent to the old man by Gabriel Cheine. Witness knows not of the old man's receiving bread from Mr. Cheine during the time he (the old man) lived with Alexis Campau. The old man continued always to wear the clothing he had when he left Mr. Cheine's as long as he lived. Witness does not believe he ever received any clothing from his son, Alexis Campau, during the time he (the old man) lived with him. After the arrival of the priest and Gabriel Cheine, the old man being dead, Gabriel Cheine asked witness what he (Gabriel) had to do. Witness replied, you know your contract—fulfil it. Gabriel then sent whiskey, candles, sugar, coffee, &c., to the house, for the people sitting up with the corpse, and paid for the coffee and all the funeral expenses, as witness believes. [Receipts were here read, one for $11 50 for funeral services of priest, and another for $7 50 for the anniversary service.]

Cross-examined by C. Larned, counsel for the heirs of said J. B. Campau.—Deponent does not know on what day of the week the settlement above mentioned was made. It was three or four weeks, as deponent believes, before the old man died that deponent communicated to him (the old man) Mr. Cheine's proposition of $200, &c. The mare given to Alexis Campau belonged to J. B. Campau, that was, as before stated, given by him to his son, Alexis Campau, in payment for the lands over the river. J. B. Campau had other horses. There were many accounts spoken of in the settlement alluded to.

John Bpt. Prudhomme, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he lived near Gabriel Cheine, and, as his tenant, upon the tract of land in question for and during the term of one year, and at that time J. Bpt. Campau lived with said Cheine. Witness was in the house of said Cheine almost daily during the time he lived upon this farm. It was in the year 1804 that witness lived upon said farm. Deponent saw Mr. Cheine and family very frequently at their meals; they lived farmer-like, that is, always had plenty to eat. Deponent often bought bread, meat, chickens, cider, and any other articles of food which he wanted from Mr. Cheine. Mr. Cheine then kept a bake-house, and carried on the baking business. J. Bpt. Campau, deceased, was always present at the table of Mr. Cheine. Deponent never heard said Campau complain of the treatment of Cheine towards him. Deponent never heard any such complaint from Campau against Cheine. Mr. Campau was, during the time he lived with his son-in-law, Cheine, clothed in a like manner as he had always previously been. Deponent knew him thirty-five years, and he never was better or worse in his apparel during that period, but was always about the same. Mr. Campau was in the house of deponent almost daily during the above period, that is, during the year 1804. Campau, in conversation with witness, told him that he had given himself up to Gabriel Cheine to be supported by him, and had sold his farm to Cheine, and in these conversations never complained to witness of any bad treatment as received from Cheine. Deponent never saw Cheine treat Campau ill; and, being asked by witness why he so frequently came out of the house and returned, replied it was his own will, he liked to be on foot.

Cheine, so far as deponent saw, always treated Campau with kindness and respect. Deponent was afterwards (the year he does not recollect) in the employment of Henry Berthelette at Sandusky, and old Mr. Campau was also there. The old man (Campau) told deponent that Cheine had wished him to stay at home; but Campau observed that he was desirous of travelling about, as he thought he would live longer by taking this kind of exercise. But the old man (Campau) observed, he wished he had taken Cheine's advice, or that he was at home again, that is, at Cheine's house. Witness never heard old Mr. Campau, when at Sandusky, complain of Mr. Cheine; but, on the contrary, Campau wished he was at home again with Cheine. Deponent has known Mr. Campau since the year seventeen hundred and eighty-four until the time he died. Deponent saw Mr. Campau about one year previous to his death, and never heard him complain of any bad treatment received at the hands of Cheine; witness saw him very often daily while witness lived upon Cheine's farm at the other period; sometimes once a month, sometimes once a year, and at times once a week, and at other times, especially on Sunday, daily. Deponent was a soldier in the army of the United States for a period of five years, and was absent from Detroit not more than fourteen months of that time. Deponent was at Chippewa with Col. Miller. Deponent is now, as he believes, sixty-three years of age.

Abraham Tounier, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he has a perfect recollection that J. B. Campau, deceased, lived upon and occupied the land in question, in the time of the English government, with his family, long before Mr. Cheine lived there at all, and continued there until Cheine established himself upon it. Being questioned by Colonel Larned, he says that he has understood that the land was transferred to Mr. Cheine, and that, by the bargain, Cheine obliged himself to support and clothe Mr. J. B. Campau so long as he lived, as well also as Archange Campau, the daughter, until the daughter was married. That he has also heard Mr. Cheine and Mr. Campau, deceased, say and admit that such was the bargain. Upon further question deponent says he has frequently seen Archange at the Cheines before she had attained the age of eighteen years, and before her marriage. She was clothed neither remarkably well nor ill, but not exactly as well as a young lady of her station in life ought to have been. Deponent married Archange about eighteen years ago. Being further questioned, deponent says he has often seen the deceased at Cheine's, but thinks that he was not there perhaps more than half of the time; that he was not clad as a man of his age and consideration ought to have been. Deponent was often in the room that was assigned for deceased; that it was often with broken windows, and extremely cold and inconvenient in winter. That, in respect to his living, he thinks he has understood from the deceased that his table was sometimes sufficiently and sometimes badly supplied. The old man left Cheine's some years before his death; and he understood from him that the sole cause of his leaving there was his being so badly and uncomfortably situated there; and that, in consequence, he felt himself obliged to live about among his children. Deponent knows that the deceased once sold a horse which he had raised, and that he understood from deceased that he was obliged to sell the horse in order to procure the necessaries of life. Questioned by A. G. Whitney, in behalf of Cheine: When do you understand the contract to have been entered into, for the transfer of the property in question, between deceased and Cheine? Eighteen or twenty years ago. Witness recollects that before deceased finally left the Cheines, sometime before, he had passed two winters in the Indian country trading with the Indians, in the employ of different persons, for the purpose, as the old man told him, of procuring means to obtain better clothing and other little necessaries of life, for that Mr. Cheine was too poor to furnish all he wanted, and, besides, he did not like to live at all with a man or in a family where he was treated with so little tenderness. Deponent, after his marriage, continued to live fifteen days or three weeks with his wife at the Cheines; he occasionally worked with Cheine before, from time to time, but it was never before his fixed abode. He cannot say for how long a period at any one time he worked with him, perhaps five or six weeks in the whole before his marriage, and perhaps two months after in the whole. He helped him at harvesting, as well as other jobs. During the time deponent first worked for Cheine deceased sat with them at the family table. He worked for Mr. Cheine often, and he does not recollect that during that period he ever heard Mr. Campau make complaint of his living, though, for some ten or twelve years before deceased died, he was much in the habit of complaining of his treatment and fare. Deponent does not know of his own knowledge that deceased ever complained to Cheine, though from deceased he had so understood. Deponent, on further examination, says that deceased had a blanket coat and woollen overalls, and sometimes cotton overalls, his dress being much the same summer and winter, but does not recollect that he was ever clothed in winter with summer clothes. Deponent says that when he married Archange she possessed no articles of clothing, except one calico gown; she had neither stockings nor shoes; and that he was in a manner obliged to buy everything appertaining to her wardrobe. Being further questioned by A. G. Whitney, esq., deponent says Archange was in the habit of going to church, but not barefoot, and that he has understood from her that she borrowed shoes and stockings from her sister. The sisters sometimes went to church together.

Thursday, July 25, 1821.—Captain John R. McDougall, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith his knowledge of the matter in question is of so general a nature he prefers to answer such questions as may be thought best to put. Colonel Larned, in behalf of the heirs of J. B. Campau, puts the following questions: Was the tract of land now occupied by Gabriel Cheine, prior to the arrival of General Wayne, occupied and improved by J. B. Campau, deceased, father of the present applicant? Answer. Yes; J. B. Campau, deceased, has occupied and lived upon the tract some thirty years; he was raised and brought up there, and continued so to live, as upon his own property, until certain indentures of agreement were executed between him and the said Gabriel Cheine. Was there ever an old French grant to J. B. Campau, deceased, for the tract in question? Yes; there was a grant of that nature granted to Louis Campau, father of J. B. Campau, for a tract comprehending the one in question, being nine acres in front by the usual depth, eighty acres. Were there long and very valuable improvements made by deceased upon the tract in question? Yes; there were two barns, a stable, a dwelling-house, large orchards, and other improvements, all made in the time of the deceased. Have you always lived a very near neighbor to the deceased? Answer. I have; especially before the giving of the instrument alluded to. Was he then in easy and comfortable circumstances? He lived comfortably, but I have understood he was embarrassed; his farm was mortgaged, as I have understood, for about £500; but deceased refused, a few years before the American government here, £1,300 for it, as informed by deceased; in those days property was low, and £1,300 was then considered a high price. I had given for my own place £660, being half the quantity of land, no orchard, and improvements far less valuable, my farm extending but one-half the distance in the rear. In respect to articles of plate, cattle, and other personal property, the deceased was well off; as well as any person in the country. He (deponent) says, as to Mr. Campau's situation at Mr. Cheine's, he went, by his request, to examine his apartments, and found them very poorly situated, as the want of glass and many other conveniences. He was also very poorly clad, and was under the necessity of going into the Indian country to procure something to clothe himself and subsist on. He further states that he was absent two seasons on the wintering ground, and has been frequently under the necessity of absenting himself for several months at a time, and for about the last three years he resided with his children. Mr. Campau was never clad decently after the first year he lived with Mr. Cheine, which was one of the causes of his leaving the house. Mr. Campau has repeatedly informed deponent that he refused him tobacco, and even the necessaries of life and comfort. Deponent further says that Mr. Campau was a mild, affable man.

At the like instance of Colonel Larned, James Campau was sworn; whereupon, preferring to be questioned concerning what he knew, was asked by Colonel Larned how long has J. B Campau, deceased, been in the actual possession of the tract of land in question? Answer. 30 or 40 years. Before the indenture mentioned by the former witness, I lived many years a near neighbor to him. The deceased was a mild, amiable man. There were, while the deceased was in the exclusive possession and occupancy of the tract, and before the instrument in writing mentioned, the same number of acres of cultivated land as now, i. e., about eighty or ninety acres. Witness went himself with Mr. Beaubien, deceased, twenty-eight years ago, to deceased, and offered £1,200 for the tract in question, but deceased would not take it. Witness further says that at the time of the execution of the instrument of writing mentioned, the deceased delivered to G. Cheine, as he was informed by deceased, and also by Mr. Cheine, all he had of personal property; that deceased was a good farmer, and had all that was necessary to cultivate his farm and live comfortably, as much as the old French settlers generally had; for the last twelve years of his life, deceased sometimes appeared decently enough, at other times, and especially during the fall seasons, very badly clothed, in so much that it was a subject of complaint with his old friends and relatives, who urged upon him repeatedly the necessity of obtaining better and more sufficient and decent clothing. During the last three years of his life he lived with his son, Alexis Campau. During the time of his living with Mr. Cheine he was in the habit of sometimes calling at deponent's house to obtain these little comforts of life which he, deceased, considered necessary for him; and that he was in the habit of calling on others, his old friends and relatives, for the same things, complaining that he did not receive these attentions and little comforts of life which he thought suitable for him, and to which he thought himself entitled.

Question by Colonel Larned. Do you know of Mr. Cheine's selling any of the articles of personal property which were transferred to Mr. Cheine by deceased at the time of the instrument of writing mentioned?

Answer. I saw a mare, which was one of the articles so delivered by the deceased to Mr. Cheine, afterwards in the possession of Alexis Campau, and understood it was on account of some debt due from said deceased to said Alexis.

Question by Mr. Sibley. Were you acquainted with the manner of Mr. Cheine's living? Did he live in the way of most of the French farmers in the country?

Answer. I do not well know. I was not in the habit of going but very rarely into Mr. Cheine's. It was not to be expected that Mr. Cheine could live as well as the old farmers generally, being a newcomer, and the farm in debt—that Mr. Cheine could not have all the necessaries. Witness further says that deceased was obliged to go two winters into the woods or Indian country, in the capacity of a merchant's clerk, in order to obtain means to procure those articles which were necessary for him in his occasional attacks of sickness; also to pay for the Catholic burial ceremonies of his deceased wife; and also some of the money so procured by the deceased was lent by him to Mr. Cheine. Of his own knowledge, witness can only say that deceased did go into the Indian country; the rest of his present answer he acquired by his frequent conversations with deceased.

Question by Mr. Sibley. Do you know of deceased's giving anything to or working with his sons at anytime?

Answer. As to giving them anything I know nothing. Deceased did oftentimes go about doing some work for his children. The reasons which deceased gave for so occupying his time among his children were, that he, deceased, did not receive the attentions and treatment he thought himself entitled to at Mr. Cheine's, for otherwise he should have preferred to have so worked for him.

Cross-examination of Pierre Cheine continued.—Jean Baptiste Campau told witness sometimes that Gabriel promised to send him articles to-day, and now he had not sent them; that is, witness has heard J. B. Campau say that Gabriel Cheine had promised to send him some articles which he did not send him. Witness never heard J. B. Campau say that he was obliged to leave the residence of Gabriel Cheine and go to Sandusky or elsewhere in the winter season to obtain the necessary articles of clothing and subsistence. J. B. Campau never told witness that he had bought any articles of clothing out of his own pocket or from his own means. Deponent has no recollection of having expressed himself in terms of disapprobation (at the office of and in the presence of Colonel Larned, esq.) of the conduct of Gabriel Cheine towards J. B. Campau.

Cross-examined by Messrs. Whitney and Sibley, counsel of G. Cheine.—Deponent was very often at the house of G. Cheine while the old man, J. B. Campau, lived there; saw the old man always at the table with the family at meal times. G. Cheine lived as well as other farmers of this country.

Gabriel Cheine, jr., being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he lived in the house of G. Cheine (who is his father) during the whole time that J. B. Campau lived with G. Cheine. J. B. Campau always set at the same table the family eat at. He was clothed reasonably during the time he lived there. He had the room in the house which he (the old man) thought best suited him, because there was a key to the door. He had his bed and all his property in that room. There was no fire in that room. He came out and sat with the family in another room near his own room, about eight feet from the door of his own room. Deponent never heard the old man wish for a stove in his own room. Deponent often got up at night and made a fire in the fire-place near the old man's room; and sometimes the old man got up and made the fire himself. G. Cheine furnished him with as much whiskey, and pipes and tobacco, as the old man wished for. The old man's bed was, as deponent supposes, comfortable. He had sufficient bed-clothes, blankets, &c. He owned a feather bed, which he exchanged to J. Grant for a woollen bed, upon which he afterwards lay. Deponent never heard J. B. Campau complain of the treatment of G. Cheine. He never heard him (the old man) say whether Gabriel Cheine treated him well or ill. When the old man would remain at home for several days together, he was kind to witness and the children, and took care of witness' sister; but after being at church, or abroad elsewhere, he would return sometimes morose and sullen, and would go to bed in silence; and in the morning would tell witness that he had been sometimes to Mr. Joseph Campau's, and sometimes at J. R. Williams', where he had drank wine and good rum, and other good liquors, at these houses respectively. Deponent then thought that it was perhaps these good liquors that made the old man cross, but does not know whether this or some other thing put the old man into these morose moods of mind. The old man worked for Gabriel Cheine sometimes, especially in harvest; and when he so worked, the old man told witness that Gabriel Cheine paid him a dollar per day. The old man went sometimes to Alexis Campau's, and would stay one or two, sometimes more days. Deponent saw him sometimes at work and sometimes idle. The old man said he sometimes worked for Alexis Campau; sometimes the old man would return home apparently weary. Witness does not know why the old man went to the Indian country. Witness is between twenty-three and twenty-four years of age.

Henry Campau, sworn, deposeth and saith that he was born on the farm of which he is now the lessee as tenant of Joseph Campau; but which, at the time of birth, and for twenty or twenty-five years thereafter, was the proper estate of his father, Simon Campau, which farm adjoins to that now in the tenure of Gabriel Cheine, formerly J. B. Campau; that he heard the said J. B. Campau, not only once, but ten times, tell his father, Simon Campau, that the back concession, viz: that the forty acres back of his (the said Simon's) farm, after computing forty acres from the river, were his, the said J. B. Campau's, and were given to him by his father, Louis Campau, grandfather of deponent, in consideration of the said J. B. Campau's having maintained and clothed the said Louis Campau and wife during their life or lives; and that he, the said J. B. Campau, had papers to show that the said forty acres in rear of his, the said Simon Campau's farm belonged to him, the said John Baptiste; and this deponent further says that he was present when his father, the said Simon Campau, asked his uncle, the said John Baptiste Campau, if he had concluded his business with his son-in-law, Gabriel Cheine. To which the said John replied, yes; and that if he, the said Gabriel, fulfilled his agreement with him, the said John, that he, the said Gabriel, was not only entitled to all that he, the said John, had in possession, but all to which, in anywise, he was entitled; when he, the said Simon, answered, poor little beggar, (the said Gabriel meaning,) he is braver than I am to undertake such a thing; and if he gets through with it, the estate will be very well his Deponent further says that he frequently heard Alexis Campau and John Baptiste Campau, sons of the aforesaid John Baptiste Campau, declare that if he, the said Gabriel Cheine, their brother-in-law, did fulfil the engagements made with their father, the aforesaid John Baptiste Campau, he, said Gabriel, well deserved his, the said John's estate; but that they, the said sons, doubted the said Gabriel's ability to fulfil them; and if he did, it would be owing to his having corn to lay.—September 29, 1821.

Louis Campau, pere, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he was born in the house in which his brother Jaques Campau at present resides, the next farm to that which is now occupied by Gabriel Cheine, then owned by his uncle, J. B. Campau; that he frequently heard his said uncle complain to his brothers, Jaques and Joseph, as he always did to this deponent, of the bad treatment he received from his nephews; that none of them would come forward and assist him in his distress, and aid him in the payment of his debts; that they hated his son-in-law without a reason, meaning the aforesaid Gabriel Cheine, although he was the only person who paid his debts, and treated him with kindness; that, in consideration of the payment of his debts, and his maintenance during life, the said J. B. Campau frequently told this deponent that he had given the said Gabriel Cheine all his estate—all he had in the world; that the several farms now in the tenure of Jaques Campau, Gabriel Cheine, and Joseph Campau, were the estate of Louis Campau, deceased, the father of said John Baptiste Campau, and grandfather of this deponent; that this deponent often heard the said John Baptiste Campau declare to the said Jaques and Joseph that their grandfather, the said Louis, had given to his two sons, Simon and Jaques Campau, now deceased, (the latter the father of the aforesaid Jaques and Joseph Campau,) the two farms of Jaques and Joseph Campau, only forty arpents in depth, and had given to him, the said John Baptiste Campau, the remaining forty acres in rear of the said two farms now of Jaques and Joseph Campau; that, in constant and confidential intercourse with the said uncle, J. B. Campau, until his death, this deponent always heard him applaud the conduct of his son-in-law, Gabriel Cheine, in paying his debts, and kind treatment of him, expressing himself entirely satisfied; at the same time complaining of the conduct of his other relatives towards him, and of their hatred and malice towards his son-in-law, the said Gabriel.—September 28, 1821.

The tract of land which is the subject of the foregoing contested claim, fronts upon the river Detroit, a short distance above the city. It comprehends the whole of that tract which intervenes between the farms designated on Greely's map by No. 91, confirmed to Jaques Campau, and numbered 609, confirmed to Charles Paupard, assignee of S. Compau, sen., by former land boards. It purports to be in breadth three French arpents, in depth eighty French arpents, and to contain two hundred and forty square French arpents, more or less.

No doubt has at any time been entertained but that the farm in question had been constantly occupied, cultivated, and improved, during a period of more than half a century anterior to the passage of the act of Congress of March, 1807; nor has any question been made but that the tract ought to be confirmed to one of the parties claiming.

The commissioners have, from the commencement of their labors, flattered themselves with the hope, considering how illy calculated they were, from the nature of the powers conferred upon them, and the manner prescribed for the exercise of those powers, to adjust, equitably, the relative, proportionate, and conflicting interests of opposing claimants, that some provision would be made by law to secure, against ultimate sacrifice, the rights of successful claimants, by some appropriate judicial procedure; and on these points no diversity of sentiment has existed among the members of this board.

In determining, provisionally, the question of preference between the individual claims in this case presented, many difficulties have been experienced—difficulties more sensibly felt, perhaps, and more deprecated, because of the final difference of opinion in which they terminated But it became necessary that some decision should be made; and the result of the consideration given to the case is, that a majority of the commissioners do decide to confirm, and they do confirm, the tract hereinabove described to the heirs of Jean Bapt. Campau, deceased, to be holden by them, their heirs and assigns, as an estate of inheritance in fee simple; but subject, nevertheless, to all and all manner of just, legal, and equitable claim or claims therein, or thereto, of Gabriel Cheine, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, and do direct that the same be surveyed by some surveyor thereto authorized, whose return, plat, and certificate, upon presentation to the register of the land office at Detroit, shall entitle the said confirmees to a patent certificate for the premises, &c.

In order that the proceedings which resulted in the above-written decision should be more fully understood, one of the board has deemed it proper to state that, anterior to the passage of the act of May, 1820, which constituted him, ex officio, one of the commissioners, he had been applied to by the above-mentioned Jean Bpt. Campau for professional advice and assistance relative to his claim. In such circumstances, he wished to avoid the necessity of expressing any opinion in the case; and, accordingly, he announced to the board, before any measures had been taken in it, that he should take no part in any discussion which might grow out of its investigation unless there should be found ultimately to exist an irreconcilable difference between the other two commissioners. In accordance with such expressed intention, he did not assist at the sittings while this matter was in discussion. There resulted, however, in the end, an unlooked-for and positive division of sentiment between those commissioners who had assumed to decide the claim, and unexpectedly he felt himself compelled to act. Claiming for himself no exemption from the ordinary frailties of human nature, and especially none from that which imperceptibly fashions the opinions of men to circumstances, he felt the necessity of cautious circumspection; he professes to have given the matter a careful and candid examination, and is led to unite in opinion with that member of the board who had previously advocated the decision above expressed. In arriving at this opinion, he has been influenced principally by two different considerations: 1st. He has not been able to discover that any regular entry of claim for the land in question was ever originally made, except in the name of J. B. Campau, whose heirs-at-law have, since the decease of their father, properly renewed that entry, and claimed that it should enure to their use. This is understood to have been the ground of the opinion of that member who unites with him in the decision made. It is observable that the only entry of the claim actually made by Gabriel Cheine purports, on the face of it, to have been made for the benefit of J. B. Campau, since it was emphatically made in the name of Campau; and, in the apprehension of this member of the board, Campau, by his subsequent caveat and entries, and by all his proceedings, claims and appropriates to himself, and his heirs to themselves, all benefit and advantage from it. If, after a regular entry preferred, a bona fide transfer and sale had passed to an assignee, a liberal view of the law might have justified a construction by which such entry might be deemed to enure to the benefit of such assignee; but, in the present case, the instrument adduced by Cheine to establish the allegation that he is a fair assignee of the right of Campau purports to have been executed long anterior to the date of his entry. It is not deemed regular to confirm a claim entered in the name of Campau, the benefit of which he has not ceased to claim, to another not having made his entry regularly, except in the case of an heir claiming by descent, or in the case of an assignee claiming by conveyance posterior to the entry, and whose claim is not adverse to the claim of him from whom he deduces his pretension. It is not surmised that Cheine stands relatively in such predicament. 2dly. In the view of this member of the board, it is not only apparent that the instrument which is at the basis of the claim of Mr. Cheine purports to have been executed anterior to the entry of Campau, but, on the face of it, it appears that no absolute and unconditional transfer of title or claim did or was intended to pass by virtue of that instrument. It purports, there is no doubt, to convey to Cheine a right relatively to the tract, or an interest in it, dependent either upon a condition precedent, or defeasible upon condition subsequent; and what may be its true construction, a regularly constituted judicial tribunal is more competent to decide, it is supposed, than a temporary board of commissioners, constituted as this board is. Nor is it believed that it was ever intended by the law that a board so formed should assume to investigate matters of dispute between conflicting individuals—allegations of fraud and questions of fact so widely diffused in this case (if, in such respects, it were fully investigated) would present; nor to parcel out the respective and nicely graduated interests of different parties in real estate; nor to determine whether the heirs of Campau shall be holden, and in what circumstances, to appear before the clerk or register of the county there, in the spirit of the instrument adduced by Cheine, to release their title in the hypothecated lands; or otherwise, in due form, to transfer their legal title in the premises claimed.

In the view of this member of the board, justice is satisfied, and due regard is had to the positive and undoubted rights of Cheine by the unequivocally expressed provision contained in the decision, that the heirs of Campau shall receive and hold the legal title, subject to all the just, legal, and equitable claims of Cheine.

PROTEST.

The undersigned, with great reluctance, arising from that deference always entertained by him for the unbiased opinions of his highly respected colleague who penned the preceding, deems it a paramount obligation, in the discharge of the trust confided to him, to differ from the above opinion, and enter his protest against the confirmation of the tract of land above described to the heirs of Jean Baptiste Campau. The reasons for this dissent, it is believed, will appear from the facts reported in the case, and the arguments deduced by the gentlemen. A comment upon these will be attempted to justify, if possible, the opinion of the member in the minority.

The facts are briefly these: On May 27, 1800, Gabriel Cheine purchased the farm from his father-in-law, J. B. Campau, upon a consideration similar to that upon which a very large proportion of the old French inhabitants of this Territory formerly, and even at this day, transfer their property to a near relative in whom they have great and implicit confidence, to wit: that the assignee shall maintain them comfortably through life, pay their debts, and decently inter them after death. J. B. Campau, with great deliberation, calls his family around him, and obtains their assent to the act; for it will be observed that all the present litigants were then present and subscribed their assent as witnesses to the deed; at the same time, and it is believed on the day of the execution of the deed, Cheine obtains from J. B. Campau, in presence of the family, quiet and peaceable possession of the house and farm, with all the farming and other utensils. On October 28, 1805, Cheine enters with the commissioners his claim to this tract, with all the other lands by him claimed. On July, 1807, the board took this claim into consideration, together with the evidence of Cheine in support thereof. This, it is observed, was more than seven years after the purchase; and now, for the first time, is offered the objection of J. B. Campau; delay is requested, a caveat is filed, and the board ultimately postpone the further consideration of this case. In virtue of his original entry, Cheine again appears before the present board and renews his claim. The opposing parties also appear, J. B. Campau in the meantime being dead, and much testimony is adduced on either side, of which a compendium is given by this board.

From a review of the whole testimony and evidence in this matter, it will appear, as is believed, that a majority of this board have decided this claim upon grounds which never were assumed by the parties in whose favor the decision is made, to wit, that Cheine made no regular entry. Against what is the caveat entered? The claim and entry of Cheine. What is it that J. B. Campau requests? That the entry of Gabriel Cheine may enure to his benefit. If Gabriel Cheine made no entry, do the whole proceedings exhibit that an entry ever was made by J. B. Campau? This, it is alleged by the gentleman, was the ground of the decision; and this was, in fact, the ground, though not the only one, of the dissent to the opinion which one of the board is obliged to express. The undersigned is convinced that if Cheine did not make an entry in due time, then none was made, and consequently this claim could not come within the authority given by the law to this board to confirm it. Yet, under this view of the case, and upon this alone, a majority of the board have thought proper to report a formal confirmation to the heirs of J. B. Campau.

The undersigned will now proceed to a review of the statement above written by his much-respected colleague, premising that in this he feels himself relieved from the embarrassment under which he labored when differing in opinion with him as a member in the majority of the board.

He observes, that circumstances, arising out of the divided opinion of the two other members of the board, alone induced him to act in order to a decision. Although his sound judgment and opinions always, and most deservedly too, had their due weight, and were highly appreciated by this member, yet in the present case it cannot be conceded that no decision would have been made without his aid. A decision, it is believed, would most certainly have been made by the members who had devoted so much time to the investigation. On this point there was no diversity of opinion; long and uninterrupted possession, occupancy, and improvement were shown beyond all doubt; and that a decision of confirmation should be reported admitted of none. The only question was, in whose favor shall that be made? Could not this have been safely referred without the foregoing evidence, as it now is, for the decision of an umpire at least as competent to decide, and who most assuredly must review and ultimately decide this question?

He felt, says the gentleman, "the necessity of cautious circumspection under the circumstances," that is, the honorable bias of opinion arising from the relation of clients and counsellors, from which, with great candor, he claims no exemption. Nor need he claim it; his course of action in the case is decided upon; his voice is given, and the result follows. The reviewing power is relieved from the task, and the preponderance of an opinion of a majority is, in due time, kindly given in behalf of the parties whose partial and mournful tales had doubtless made a deep impression upon the humane feelings of this gentleman. In arriving at this opinion, the gentleman assumes that which a full view of the facts, it is believed, will not warrant. "The entry of the claim," the gentleman observes, "actually made by Gabriel Cheine, purports, on the face of it, to have been made for the benefit of J. B. Campau," &c. It is, then, here conceded that Gabriel Cheine actually made an entry; yet this is elsewhere denied. The gentleman is here taken at his word; for in this it would appear it is fully accorded that Cheine did make the entry of claim; and why in the name of J. B. Campau may easily be explained. Gabriel Cheine can neither write his name nor read a letter of that written by another. He appears before P. Audrain, late register, and informs him that he wishes to enter his lands agreeably to law; this is the fair presumption from what appears upon the records as the result. Mr. Audrain writes for him first one claim, as will be seen; next, he writes the entry of claim for that tract which Mr. Audrain knew (because, as register for this county, he had recorded the deed) Cheine claimed in virtue of purchase from his father-in-law, J. B. Campau. In this matter, therefore, Mr. Audrain used his own phraseology. He used undoubtedly, too, as would have been supposed, that diction in his entry which was best adapted to the basis and testimony which he knew Cheine must adduce in order to substantiate his claim. It may well be questioned whether a man of the limited information possessed by Cheine ever did, or whether he does at this day, comprehend the reasons assigned by the learned counsellor of his opponents as the grounds upon which the decision adverse to him has been founded. To tell him he had never entered a claim would be to him incomprehensible.

The gentleman, by connecting caveat and entries of J. B. Campau, would appear to allege that he, J. B. Campau, made an entry. The records have been carefully inspected. It is not found; or, if found, why not insert it? None exists. An answer, it is believed, has already been given to all that part of the gentleman's arguments which, with much ability, he predicates upon the anterior date of the conveyance to that of the entry of Cheine. It is only necessary to observe that, if the arguments of the gentleman be taken as demonstrative of that conclusion which he draws, then, indeed, must Cheine be even more ignorant and blind to his own interest than he has been represented. Can it readily be imagined that any man possessed of the natural endowments of reason would first pay a very large consideration for a property, and then take such measures as effectually to bar him forever of all advantage, possession, and enjoyment thereof; and this, too, at the moment when he is in the full possession, and deriving undisturbed all its products? The only rational conclusion, and consistent with common sense, is that already noticed, to wit: Cheine desires Mr. Audrain to write his entry of claim for that tract of land which he had purchased of J. B. Campau, and accordingly it is drawn as the proceedings show. The whole tenor of the testimony, and adductions of both the conflicting parties in the case, from first to last, is conceived conclusively to support this position. On the part of Campau and his heirs unusual pains are bestowed to show that Cheine had not fulfilled his contract, (especially that part relating to the subsistence of the old man,) in consideration whereof the premises were conveyed. It is also observable that the non-performance of that part of the condition which relates to the payment by Cheine of Campau's debts is nowhere alleged; and the receipt of Campau to Cheine puts this matter to rest, and shows conclusively that Cheine, in the opinion then entertained by Campau, had in all respects complied. The bargain, moreover, on the part of Cheine, appears, from the testimony, to have been considered by some of the heirs of Campau to have been a most unprofitable one, as one of them declared his belief that it would beggar him. The whole testimony adduced leads irresistibly, as is the opinion of the undersigned, to this conclusion: that Campau and all his children were perfectly satisfied with the arrangement; that Cheine complied in every particular with his engagements; and that it was not until old age and its concomitant imbecilities and peevishness inclined Campau to lend his ear to the busy mischief-making interference of interested or envious spirits, with which every community is cursed, that we hear of the slightest intimation of a failure on the part of Cheine to comply in any respect. Why Cheine has not long since cited the heirs of Campau to appear before the register or clerk of the county to relinquish, in a formal manner, their interest and title in the premises, may be easily conjectured: first, Cheine supposed that they had none, and that a patent from the government would vest in him a sufficient and indefeasible title; secondly, if the heirs had any title or interest remaining, Cheine, by his counsel, was advised that his only secure course was to delay until the legal title should be vested in him by a patent. The gentleman, in his argument, again forgets his premised cautious circumspection, when he speaks of circumstances under which the heirs of Campau may be holden to appear, and in due form to transfer their legal title in the premises claimed. "Aliquando bonus dormitat Homerus." No member of the board better understands the nature of the titles under which the early French settlers of this Territory claimed their lands, and that, in the whole country, there were scarcely half a dozen of legal titles, until, under the proceedings of former land boards, claims were confirmed and patents issued by the President of the United States. Under what pretence, then, can Cheine appear in a court of law without show or pretence of legal title upon which to cite the appearance of the heirs of Campau? The idea is absurd; the proposition that Cheine could do so is impossible; and the conclusion that the gentleman was in the predicament of his great prototype follows. In what situation, then, does the decision of a majority of the commissioners place Gabriel Cheine? He can have little hopes of ever being able to acquire the legal title; and, until he does so acquire it, he never can call upon the heirs of J. B. Campau to surrender their interest. He stands well, at present, in the chancery court of this Territory, and he ought, as defendant. He is in possession of the premises, and, for aught that has been satisfactorily shown in this case, merits that possession by his having paid a full and valuable consideration for the same. What will be the effect of granting the patent to the heirs of J. B. Campau? Upon their legal title, thus acquired, they sustain their writ of ejectment or quo warranto. Cheine is dispossessed, and it is doubtful whether he can ever again be reinstated in his occupancy by any court vested with the legal or equitable powers. It is a question of great doubt and diversity of opinion whether a court of equity has the power, in cases where patents have been granted upon proof of occupancy, &c., as is the case with the most of all the lands situated upon this strait, to inquire into the title beyond the patent. It is with plausible grounds for the opinion held that all persons who settled upon these lands, whether under the French, British, or American governments, were, at the time of making such settlements, intruders, inasmuch as they did not avail themselves of the provisions of the laws enacted by the respective governments, by which it was within their power to obtain a legal right. This was undeniably the fact as respected the early settlers under the French and British governments. How, then, can Gabriel Cheine appear, or upon what basis is the claimant, in a bill in chancery? A bill is now pending in chancery; Cheine is the respondent to that bill; but grant the patent in accordance with the decision of a majority of this board, and what is the result? Inevitably Cheine is defeated in the present suit; and it is doubtful whether he can ever recover the premises, or even whether that tract of land, or the heirs of Campau, can be holden to account to Cheine for the moneys expended in maintaining J. B. Campau and in the payment of his debts. Under the full view of this case, and especially the circumstances under which the decision is made, impressed with the soundness of the maxim that "aliquis non debet esse judex in propria causa etione ne causidiens chintis," the undersigned considers it to be an imperious duty to protest against the foregoing confirmation to the heirs of J. B. Campau; and he trusts that the decision will be either reversed, and confirmation of the tract accorded to Cheine, in trust for himself and the other heirs, or that all decision as to whom the patent shall issue will be suspended until the termination of the suit pending between the parties; or that, should the decision of the majority be affirmed, then that such saving may be expressed as will prevent the issuing of the patent to the heirs of J. B. Campau until a decree of the court of chancery for this Territory touching the premises shall be awarded.

No. 32.—Henry Berthelette.

DETROIT, October, 1805.

Henry Berthelette renews his entry for the tract of land described in his entry made with the former commissioners in 1805, in volume 1, page 264, renewed in volume 3, page 422.

In the first entry there is no description given, except that it is four arpents in breadth and forty in depth, situated near the river Rouge.

In volume 3 the entry is renewed in the words and figures following, to wit:

Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land of four arpents by forty in depth, situated on the river Detroit, by virtue of a deed of exchange, dated February 16, 1800, and by virtue of long possession and improvements.

HENRY BERTHELETTE.

This claim was reconsidered in 1809. The proceedings of the commissioners are recorded in volume 7, page 84, in the words following, to wit:

The board took into consideration the claim of Henry Berthelette, grantee of Louis Barthe, to a tract of land situated on the river Detroit, which was entered with the former commissioners of the land office in volume 1, as above stated.

This tract contains, by estimation, one hundred and sixty arpents, it being four arpents in front by forty in depth, bounded in front by the river Detroit, in rear by lands of J. Livernois, northeast by lands claimed by John Harvey, and southwest by lands claimed by John Askin.

Whereupon Antoine Reopel was brought forward in behalf of claimant, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that on the 1st of July, 1796, Joseph Livernois was in possession of the premises, and continued so until he exchanged with Louis Barthe. Deponent cultivated the premises for three years previous to 1796—in 1790, 1791, and 1792; that there were then eight or nine arpents under cultivation. There are no improvements or enclosures now on the premises.

On Wednesday, the 4th day of December, the claim was again taken up, and Andre Lapage brought forward as a witness, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that on the 1st day of July, 1796, one Simon Drouillard occupied the premises for Mr. Askin, and continued thereon three years; that he, the said deponent, went on the premises, and remained thereon six years and six months, and enclosed and cultivated about four arpents; that this tract of land was the property of Joseph Livernois, who sold the same to Louis Barthe, from whom the claimant has purchased.

Joseph Weaver, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that one year before Andrew Lapage left the premises he, the deponent, was charged with the care of them by Mr. Askin; that five years ago the improvements were destroyed.

Claimant now produces a deed of conveyance from said Louis Barthe to him, said Henry Berthelette.

Reference is requested by claimant to the deposition of Andrew Lapage, in the claim of Todd & McGill.

Said Lapage, in said case, testifies that John Askin, deceased, was possessed of all the land bordering on the Detroit river, between the high sandy bluffs, a short distance up the river Rouge, and from thence, on the Detroit river, up to the farm now owned by John R. Williams; and that all the front, extending back to Prairie Ronde, was always considered as the property of Mr. Askin, with the exception of one farm belonging to François Livernois, of four arpents in front by forty in depth, &c.

And thereupon the commissioners do confirm this tract as claimed, and by the boundaries designated in his former entry, viz: one hundred and sixty arpents, being four arpents in front by forty in depth; bounded in front by river Detroit, in rear by lands formerly of Joseph Livernois, northwest by lands claimed in 1809 by John Harvey, and southwest by lands then claimed by John Askin: provided, however, that the front of this tract, commencing at the lower or southwest corner thereof, and being the upper corner of the aforesaid Askin, following the meanders of the Detroit river up stream, shall not exceed four arpents, French measure, nor interfere with the lateral or rear lines of lands heretofore confirmed.

No. 33.—The legal heirs and representatives of the late John Askin, esq., deceased.

The legal heirs and representatives of the late John Askin, esq., deceased, renew the entry made by the said John Askin, esq., deceased, with the former commissioners, on August 11, 1808, recorded in vol. 5, page 63, in the words following, to wit:

To the register of the land office at Detroit:

John Askin, sen., claims a tract of land containing one acre, on which there was formerly a house and garden, its situation at what is called the Race Ground, and bordering on the Detroit river, bounded northeast by John Harvey, and in the rear by the same, and on the southwest by what is called the Wind-mill land, claimed by John Askin.

Testimony filed in 1821 with the now commissioners.

Andrew Lapage, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that deponent first went to live on said tract, being one square acre, upon which a house was erected a short distance below the wind-mill, in which house he continued to reside three years and six months, and afterwards removed a short distance above, where deponent resided the same length of time, during which term of years deponent cultivated the tract in question for and in behalf of John Askin. Deponent at the same time tended the mill. Deponent first established himself there the year after the arrival of General Wayne. The mill and house had both been built four or five years before that time. Deponent knows that Mr. Askin, deceased, had, by purchase, a considerable time before deponent's going there, the right to, or was reputed the owner.

Andrew Lapage, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that François Barron purchased one square acre of François Livernois, or his father, on the Detroit river, below and adjoining the wind-mill lot, so called; and said Barron exchanged said lot with John Askin, deceased, for a square arpent above the wind-mill lot, on which said east lot said Barron erected a house five or six years previous to the arrival of General Wayne, which said Barron lived in four years, and then sold said house and lot to said deceased. The deponent occupied it under the deceased three years, and cultivated the land many years after that, when a sale of land adjoining was made to Harvey. The said deceased reserved the tract last mentioned in said sale.

At the time this claim was under consideration, in eighteen hundred and five, claimant filed a deed of conveyance of the above-described tract of land from François Bernard, dated 1796.

He now files a deed of conveyance from François Bernard, dated February 18, 1796.

And thereupon it does not appear to the commissioners that possession or cultivation of the land above claimed was continued until eighteen hundred and seven, or for some years prior to that time; and it would seem, indeed, that it was abandoned long before that period. The commissioners do therefore reject this claim.

No 34.—The legal heirs and representatives of James McGill, deceased.

The legal heirs and representatives of James McGill renew the entry made by the late John Askin, for and in behalf of said James McGill, entered with the former commissioners in vol. 3, page 134, being lot No. 270; the entry is under the date of November 19, 1805. Said lot was assigned by John Askin, deceased, to James McGill, deceased, and they claim by the possession, and occupancy, and improvement of the assignor, John Askin, deceased.

HUNT & LARNED,
Attorneys for heirs and legal representatives.

Original entry.

Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situated near the river Rouge, of six acres in front and rear by fifty in depth; this tract is more fully described in vol. 5, page 62, where it was taken up for consideration. Said tract contains, by estimation, three hundred arpents, it being six arpents in front by fifty in depth, bounded in front by river Detroit, northeast and southwest by lands claimed by Isaac Todd, and in rear by lands claimed by the claimant.

JOHN ASKIN, for James McGill.

Testimony filed with the commissioners in 1821.

Charles Paupard, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he knows that about twenty-six years ago John Askin, sen., claimed all the lands bordering on Detroit river, from the mouth of river Rouge up to what is called the Spring wells; that Mr. Askin had in his employment a man named Lachorite, taking care of cattle on these lands; there were two or three houses on said tracts. Witness knows that Mr. Askin cut hay every year on these lands. Mr. Askin was considered the owner of said lands; there was also a wind-mill erected on said lands.

The witness testifying to the foregoing facts applies his testimony to lot No. 270, claimed by the heirs and legal representatives of James McGill, deceased, being 142.92 acres, entered before the former commissioners in vol. 1, page 134, of the records of said former commissioners, under the date of November 19, 1805, for six arpents in front by forty in depth, the said tract being a tract situate on Detroit river, and intervening between lots Nos. 267 and 268, claimed by the heirs, &c., of Isaac Todd as above mentioned.

To all and each of the foregoing claims Michael Monett was sworn. Deponent corroborates the testimony of Charles Paupard, and further states that previous to the arrival of General Wayne, this witness and his brother-in-law, Joseph Borrors, were employed by Mr. Askin to cut wood on said lands. Deponent saw three houses on said tracts; the upper house was six or seven arpents below the wind-mill, the next house was probably two or three arpents below that, the third was about as far below the last.

Andrew Lapage, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that John Askin possessed all the lands bordering on the Detroit river, between the high sandy bluffs, a short distance up the river Rouge, and from thence, on the Detroit river, up to the farm now owned by John R. Williams; and that all that front, extending back to Prairie Ronde, was always considered as the property of Mr. Askin, with the exception of one farm belonging to François Livernois; about one hundred acres of said land was fenced and improved; that it was so enclosed about twenty-five years ago; that there were two houses on said land. Mr Askin had the undisturbed possession of said tracts of land. Both houses were erected previous to the arrival of General Wayne's army in this country.

The commissioners, for the same reasons as in the preceding case, do reject this claim.

No. 35.—The legal heirs and representatives of Isaac Todd, deceased.

The legal heirs and representatives of Isaac Todd renew the entry made by the late John Askin, deceased, for and in behalf of their deceased ancestor, Isaac Todd, for lots Nos. 267, 268, and 269, entered with the former commissioners of Detroit, in vol. 3, page 124, of the records of said commissioners, under the date of November 19, 1805. The boundaries of said lots aforementioned are described and recorded in vol. No. 5, pages 60 and 61. They claim by possession, occupancy, and improvements of John Askin, assignor of said lots.

HUNT & LARNED,
Attorneys for said legal heirs and representatives.

No. 267.—This tract contains, by estimation, 350 arpents, being seven arpents in front by fifty in depth; bounded in front by river Detroit, and in rear, northeast, and northwest by lands claimed by James McGill.

No. 268.—This tract contains, by estimation, 300 arpents, it being six arpents in front by fifty in depth; bounded in front by the river Detroit, in rear by lands claimed by Joseph Livernois, southwest by lands claimed by James McGill, and northeast by lands claimed by Louis Barthe.

No. 269.—This tract contains, by estimation, seventy-six arpents, it being two arpents in front by thirty-eight in depth; is bounded in front by what is called the wind-mill lands, at the distance of twelve arpents from the river Detroit, in rear by lands claimed by Livernois and Barthe, northeast by lands claimed by John Harvey, and southwest by lands claimed by claimant. Reference is made to the preceding claim of James McGill for testimony.

The commissioners having taken into consideration the preceding claim of the legal heirs and representatives of Isaac Todd to the three preceding tracts of land, and the testimony referred to, are not satisfied that the occupancy and improvement of said tracts were continued according to the contemplation and intent of the several laws of Congress from which this board derive their authority to confirm. This claim is therefore rejected.

No. 36.—François Cicot.

François Cicot renews with the present commissioners his entry of claim made with the former commissioners July 6, 1808, recorded in vol. 4, page 221, of their proceedings, in the words and figures following, to wit:

DETROIT, July 6, 1808.

SIR: Take notice I now enter with the commissioners of the land office at Detroit the claim of my two sons, Jaques and François Cicot, to a tract of land situated on the north side of the river Rouge, containing about twenty arpents in front by fifteen in depth; bounded in front by river Rouge, in rear by John Askin's lands, on one side by the Northwest Company's lands, and on the other side by a ravine near Weaver's house. I claim and set up title by virtue of possession, occupancy, and improvements made by me for them.

JEANE BPT. CICOT,
For Jaques and François Cicot.

PETER AUDRAIN, Register of the Land Office at Detroit.

TESTIMONY.

Claimant produces a deed of transfer to him from Jeane Bpt. Cicot of all his right, interest, and title to the lands claimed by him, and described in said deed as follows: bounded in front by the river Rouge, on the east by lands claimed by the heirs of John Askin, deceased, on the north by a tract of land claimed by the Northwest Company, and on the west and south by lands of John Bpt. Delisle and the said François Cicot, containing three hundred acres of land, be the same more or less, duly executed and acknowledged.

Pierre Le Blanc, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he recollects that about thirty years past there was a small improvement and a house on a tract of land now claimed by François Cicot, which tract of land is bounded in front by the river Rouge, on the northwest side by a tract of land formerly called the Northwest farm, on the southeast or lower side by a tract where Joseph Weaver formerly lived, called Askin's farm, and on the southwest by a tract were François Cicot now lives.

Charles Labadie, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that about twenty-four or twenty-five years past Jeane Bpt. Cicot, senior, had in possession a tract of land situated on the river Rouge, near the place where François Cicot now lives; that there was a fence erected on said land, running from the river Rouge, in front of where François Cicot now lives, which said fence continued across the tract now owned by François Cicot, to the head of the river Rouge, in rear of François Cicot's lands, and across a part of the tract which François Cicot claims of the United States; and that said fence since that period has been kept and repaired by J. B. Cicot and François Cicot until this day.

Joseph Cicot, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that about twenty-four years ago his father, Jno. Bpt. Cicot, obtained by exchange from Jaques Baby the land now claimed by François and Jaques Cicot; and that from that time to this the tract has been continually cultivated and improved by his father, or by his sons claiming under him.

Thomas Smith, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that on March 16, 1800, the heirs of Duperon Baby requested of me (deponent) to survey a tract of land on the north side of the river Rouge, adjoining to a tract of land generally known by the name of the Northwest tract, and that he wished said deponent to make said survey for Jeane Bpt. Cicot; for which said land, that is, the land deponent was requested thus to survey, the said Cicot had given in exchange to the heirs of the before-mentioned Baby all his right, claim, interest, &c., of him, the said Cicot, claimed under the British government, and situated in Upper Canada; and that in the said year 1800 deponent did make said survey. Deponent understood at the time he surveyed it that said Baby had conveyed to said Cicot all his interest in said tract which deponent was surveying. Deponent supposes there may be three hundred and twenty acres of land, more or less. Deponent remembers to have seen some improvements made on this land; he recollects to have seen land cleared on the hollow and fenced. Deponent does not distinctly recollect to have seen any house, but thinks there was a house on said tract; he recollects to have seen an old deed for this land, written in French, given by the Pottawatomie Indians to the before-named Duperon Baby, in the handwriting of said Baby. This deed was dated long prior to July 1, 1796.

Jaques Peltier, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that Jeane Bpt. Cicot, the father of François Cicot, has been in possession of a tract of land bounded by a bend of the river Rouge for about a mile and a half, and Mr. Askin's land on the other side, and a line of the lands formerly claimed by the Northwest Company on another side, for from forty to fifty years past, and has continued in the possession of the same until about twelve or thirteen years since, since which time the said François Cicot has continued in possession of a part of the same tract.

And thereupon appeared before the commissioners Lewis Cass, esq., who gave notice that he must oppose the confirmation of the aforesaid claim of François Cicot, inasmuch as it conflicted with a claim for back concession filed by him with the register of the land office on November 30, 1818; and then came the said François Cicot, by Hunt & Larned, his attorneys, and waived, in favor of Lewis Cass, esq., his pretensions to a confirmation of the above claim in his own name. The commissioners do therefore suspend all further proceedings upon the above claim of François Cicot.

No. 37.—Charles Rulo.

Take notice that I renew my entry of claim to a certain tract of land situated in the rear of a farm upon the river Rouge, upon the south side thereof, which I sold to Charles Chovin. For the original entry and proceedings had thereon by a former board of commissioners see vol. 1, page 298, and vol. 4, page 24, (claim No. 37 of Charles Chovin, as my assignee,) of the records of the proceedings of the former commissioners.

The Register of the Land Office at Detroit.

TESTIMONY.

Joseph Jobin, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that, in relation to the case of the claim of Charles Rulo to a prolongation of No. 37, confirmed as the front of a tract of land situated on the river Rouge two or three years before the arrival of General Wayne at the rapids of Miami, by the direction of his mother-in-law, Angelique Labadie, the widow of Pierre Martin, this deponent sold the tract in question, as her agent, to Charles Rulo; that at the time of the sale this deponent made and regularly executed a deed to said Rulo, which deed he understands is lost; that said deed he distinctly recollects described this tract as including two acres in front by forty in depth, and that it guaranteed to the holder only forty acres in depth, that is, the warrantee was given only to that extent in front and depth; but with respect to the extent in depth this witness has no definite recollection how far this farm might extend, never having had any personal interest in said farm, and never having been upon it; that all the description of the land of which he ever had a knowledge was founded on an old Indian deed, which he understands to have been also lost since he sold to Mr. Rulo. He, this deponent, thinks it most probable that this farm had the same depth with other farms upon the river in that neighborhood; that he distinctly recollects to have transferred, and intended so to transfer, all the rights, and interests, and extent of land which his mother-in-law, Angelique De Labadie, of, in, and to, or arising in any manner from, this tract, either by virtue of the front upon said river Rouge or otherwise.

Charles Chovin, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he purchased a farm on the river Rouge from Charles Rulo, now the property of Robert Abbot, and that said farm was bought for no more than forty arpents in depth from the said Rulo, and sold by this deponent to Gabriel Godfroy for the same depth of forty arpents.

It is considered by the commissioners that Charles Rulo, or those claiming under him, have heretofore been confirmed in the full quantity then claimed, as appears by the records of the former land boards, and the survey made by Aaron Greely, esq., surveyor; and further, that said Rulo purchased to the extent of only forty arpents in depth. This claim is therefore rejected. Nevertheless, the commissioners are advised that a mistaken apprehension has been entertained by said Rulo, that said Chovin entered for confirmation, not merely that part of the original tract sold by said Rulo to Chovin, but the whole tract to the St. Cosme line; and as the ignorance and inexperience of said Rulo in matters of this kind gives strength and apparent fairness to this allegation, thereupon the board do respectfully recommend to the revising powers that there be confirmed to said Rulo the residue of said original tract, viz: all that tract which may be comprehended between the extended lateral lines thereof until their intersection with the St. Cosme line, so called: provided, nevertheless, that the lines thereof be so run as not to interfere with any claims which, by former boards, or by this, may have been confirmed to any other person whomsoever.

No. 38.—Alexander Frazier, administrator to the estate of Francis Trudelle.

Alexander Frazier, administrator of the estate of Francis Trudelle, renews the entry and claim to a tract of land made with the former commissioners, recorded in volume 4, page 117, in the words and figures following, to wit:

DETROIT, January 6, 1808.

Please take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situated on the river Rouge, in the district of Detroit, which I have possessed, occupied, and improved for upwards of twenty years without any interruption. This tract contains three arpents in front by forty in depth, is bounded in front by the river Rouge, on one side by Touissaint Russel, and on the other side by lands of Desplains, deceased.

F. TRUDELLE.

The REGISTER of the Land Office.

TESTIMONY.

Gabriel Godfroy, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he knows that it was the intention of Francis Trudelle to claim and make entry of the tract in question, bounding it in the rear by the St. Cosme line, so called; and at that time this witness, having previously purchased the rear of the tract in question, the same now claimed by the said administrator, appeared before the then board of commissioners and opposed the claim of said Trudelle, so far as the same extended beyond forty arpents rearwards from the front line. Deponent states that he never having made any formal entry to claim the tract in question, or land intervening between the said forty arpents and the said St. Cosme line, he determined to withdraw all controversy to the claim of the said Trudelle or his administrator, and does now continue of the same determination. Trudelle had been in possession of the land confirmed to him for full ten or fifteen years before the arrival of General Wayne, and always occupied the rear now in question, by making rails and cutting wood therefrom, although there was no cleared land nor house upon the rear, and continued so to occupy the same until his death, which occurred about six years since. The distance from the rear line of the said forty arpents to the St. Cosme line may be about forty arpents; that is, making about eighty arpents from the front, on the river Rouge, to the said St. Cosme line. The said Trudelle, when he died, left the following children: François, Catherine, now the wife of the said administrator, Margarette, who married Louis Le Duc, Adelaide, and Terraise.

It appearing to the commissioners that François Trudelle was confirmed by a former land board in the full quantity then claimed, being forty arpents in depth, and that said claimant obtained a patent for the same, this board do therefore reject the claim.

JANUARY 27, 1821.

The undersigned renews his entry for confirmation of his claim to the tract of land described in his entry on file, dated October 31, 1805, and his subsequent entry made and on file, dated October 30, 1808. Said tract is bounded on the east by the fork of the river Rouge, near lot No. 92, and now occupied by Conrad Ten Eyck, on the west side by a white-oak tree blazed on three or four sides, in rear by unconceded lands, and in front by river Rouge. Said land is situated on the south side of said river Rouge. He claims by actual possession and improvement.

JAMES CISNE.

Original entry recorded in volume 3, page 10, of the records of the former commissioners, in the words following, to wit:

OCTOBER 31, 1805.

Notice is hereby given that I claim title to the following tract of land by virtue of long possession had of them, and actual improvements and settlement made thereon, to wit: a tract of land on the south side of the river Rouge, bounded in front by said river, above, below, and in the rear by unconceded lands, containing forty arpents in depth; on which tract I have made an actual settlement and valuable improvements.

JAMES CISNE.

Testimony adduced before the commissioners in 1821.

John Reynolds, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the summer of 1794 James Cisne, now a resident of the State of Ohio, entered upon a piece of land lying on the river Rouge, on the south side, and adjoining a tract of land now supposed to be owned and in the possession of Conrad Ten Eyck, on the east side; that during said summer said Cisne entered upon and took possession of said land, and improved one acre; that said Cisne continued in the peaceable possession, and to improve the same by cultivation, from the summer of 1795 to the year 1799, at which time I left this Territory. I frequently saw said Cisne at work on said land above described.

John Cisne, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1795 he assisted James Cisne to clear a piece of land situated on the river Rouge, on the south side of said river above the fork, and adjoining on the land now occupied, as he is informed, by Conrad Ten Eyck; and in the spring of 1796 he assisted in planting apple trees on said land; and that the said James continued to improve the same until the year 1804 or 1805, at which time he left it, and went to Ohio, intending, as he said, to return in the spring, but did not. In his absence the act was passed in favor of improvements, with a limited time for claims to be entered. Deponent received instructions from his brother to act for him in his absence. He therefore laid in the said James' claim with the commissioners; and on his (the said James') return, he assisted said James in repairing his house on said land. Deponent knows that said claim has never been relinquished by the said James.

The commissioners, after a careful examination of all the proceedings of the former land boards, find that a claim to the foregoing tract was made in accordance with the above renewal before former land boards; but the evidence of continued possession and occupancy was not then shown. The commissioners are, however, of opinion, from the testimony now adduced to this board, that this claim is valid, and that, had the same evidence been presented to a former board of 1808, it would then have been confirmed. The present commissioners do therefore confirm said tract to James Cisne by the following bounds and limits: beginning at that point on the south side of the western fork of the river Rouge, which is the upper corner of the tract heretofore confirmed to George Hoffman, and now said to be in the possession of Conrad Ten Eyck; thence up stream, upon the western border of said west branch of the river Rouge, four arpents, French measure; thence, by a line parallel to the upper line of said tract occupied by said Ten Eyck, to the distance of forty arpents in rear from said river, or as far as the line of public surveys, and so that a line at right angles thereto will strike the rear line of the farm occupied by said Ten Eyck; thence, by the line of said Ten Eyck, to the place of beginning: provided that the tract now confirmed shall not contain more than two hundred and forty arpents, nor exceed four arpents in front upon the said western fork of said river Rouge, nor interfere with any of the lines of the public lands now surveyed and sold.

No. 40.—The heirs of Joseph Harrison.

MAY 7, 1818.

Take notice that, in pursuance of the third section of an act to authorize the granting of patents for lands according to the surveys that have been made, and to grant donation rights to certain claimants of land in the district of Detroit, and for other purposes, passed April 23, 1812, we, Leonard Harrison, Morrenus Harrison, and Charles Harrison, the heirs of Joseph Harrison, late of Detroit, deceased, do make entry and claim to a certain tract of land lying and being situated on the northerly side of the river Rouge, in the district of Detroit and Territory of Michigan, containing five hundred acres, more or less, and bounded and described as follows, to wit: in front by said river Rouge, in rear by lands of the United States, on the upper side by a tract of land granted to Theophilus Lemay, and on the lower side by lands granted to Philip Mettez. They make claim to a confirmation and grant of said tract of land to them, as heirs of said Joseph Harrison, their late father, deceased, by virtue of long and continued possession and improvement of said land by their deceased father, Joseph Harrison, and those under whom he claimed, for a long time before his death, to wit, from July 1, 1796, until his death, and since by them, and in their right as his heirs. Wherefore the claimants pray that they may now be confirmed and quieted in their possession, and that certificate and patent may issue to them accordingly for said land so claimed.

SOLOMON SIBLEY,

Agent and Attorney for and in behalf of the heirs of Jos. Harrison, deceased.

TESTIMONY.

John Cisne, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that James Cisne improved a certain tract of land on the river Rouge, now claimed by the heirs of Joseph Harrison, deceased, and let one James Briggs have said improvements—said Briggs sold said improvements to Oliver Wisewell; and that the said improvements were sold by virtue of an execution against said Wisewell. The above-claimed tract is bounded on the west side by Theophilus Lemay, on the east side by Mettez. Said James Cisne made said improvement in June or July of the year 1795, and the improvement was continued until Joseph Harrison took possession of said tract.

James Cisne, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1795 he made the first improvement on a tract of land situated on the river Rouge, now claimed by the heirs of Joseph Harrison, deceased; and that he commenced the improvement in the spring of the year 1795, and that he continued in the possession and improvement until the winter or spring of 1796, about which time James Briggs entered into the possession of said tract with a relinquishment from him, the said James, of all right, title, interest, claim, &c.

William Brown, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that sometime in the year 1803 or 1804, at the suit of Benjamin Huntington against Oliver Wisewell, a certain piece or tract of land situate on the river Rouge, and then in possession of said Wisewell, and upon which a distillery was erected, was sold by the sheriff of Wayne county as the property of said Wisewell, and was purchased by the late Captain Joseph Harrison; and has, from that time to the present, been claimed by him and his heirs, and is now occupied and cultivated by the heirs of said Harrison.

Aaron Thomas, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1801 or 1802 deponent assisted Oliver Wisewell in building and clearing land; and deponent believes that about the year 1803 said property was sold at sheriff's sale to Jos. Harrison, deceased; and deponent has understood and believes that since that time it has been the property of said Harrison, and that the heirs have been in the possession and occupancy of said premises since the year 1808 or 1809, except a short period during the war; and that, since said Joseph Harrison purchased the premises, deponent has never understood that any other person had any claim to the same.

Josiah Raymond, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that sometime previous to the late war he delivered to Solomon Sibley, esq., the sheriff's deed of sale (of a tract of land on the river Rouge) to the late Joseph Harrison, together with the said Harrison's commission as an officer in the revolutionary war; which said tract of land is now in the possession of and claimed by the heirs of the late Joseph Harrison; and that the said Harrison died about the 22d of February, 1804, and that the widow and heirs of said Harrison moved on the said tract of land in the year 1807; and that, from the death of said Harrison until after the heirs took possession of the premises, neither of the heirs were of age. Sometime previous to the heirs moving on the premises, deponent accompanied the eldest of the heirs (Leonard) and ordered off the premises a man by the name of Stephens who was cutting timber and burning coal thereon; and that the said Stephens, on being informed that the property belonged to the heirs of Joseph Harrison, removed immediately therefrom; and deponent knows that, from the time the heirs took possession of the premises until this time, they have paid taxes for the same. Deponent believes that the sheriff's deed purported to be a deed of sale by virtue of an execution, and sold as the property of Oliver Wisewell to the late Joseph Harrison; and deponent further states that he has resided on the premises since the year 1807, and that since that time he has never understood that any person laid claim to said tract.

James Cisne, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that James Briggs, mentioned in his former affidavit, sold his improvements to Oliver Wisewell, who erected thereon a distillery; and that during the occupancy by said Wisewell it was, as deponent believes, sold as the property of said Wisewell, by virtue of an execution to Joseph Harrison, deceased.

Leonard Harrison, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that the papers, viz: the deeds, &c., relating to a tract of land claimed by his father, Joseph Harrison, deceased, on the river Rouge, were put into the hands of Mr. Sibley previous to the late war, since which time he has not been able to obtain any of the papers, and he does not know at this time where they are.

And thereupon the commissioners, in virtue of the 3d section of the above-recited act of Congress, passed April 23, 1812, do decide that the aforesaid tract of five hundred acres of land, bounded and described as in the foregoing notice of claim, be confirmed to the heirs of Joseph Harrison, deceased, saving expressly, however, to the personal representatives, and to the creditors of the said Joseph Harrison, deceased, all their just and equitable rights therein. The surveyor of private land claims within this district is therefore directed to survey the said tract at the expense of the said heirs, so that the same does not contain more than five hundred acres, and that the lines thereof shall not interfere with the lines of any lands heretofore confirmed; which survey and plat thereof he shall return to the register of the land office at Detroit, and thereupon a patent certificate shall be granted by the said register, upon which, with the approbation of the Secretary of the Treasury, a patent will be issued.

No. 41.—The heirs and legal representatives of John Askin, sen., and the legal heirs and representatives of Wm. Robertson.

DETROIT, August 14, 1821.

The heirs and legal representatives of John Askin, sen., and the legal heirs and representatives of Wm. Robertson, deceased, renew their claim to a certain tract of land supposed to be situated about ten miles up the river Rouge, at a place called the Salt Springs, containing two thousand one hundred acres of land, purchased by Mr. Robertson and John Askin, jointly, of Parlier Benac, May, 1796, and claimed by John Askin, before the former commissioners, December 28, 1804; said tract having twenty arpents in front and one hundred arpents in depth, and containing a salt spring. The said heirs and legal representatives claim by the possession and occupancy of Parlier Benac, and subsequent occupancy and possession of said John Askin, and by deed from said Benac to said Askin and said Robertson, jointly, dated May 20, 1796.

SIBLEY & WHITNEY,
Attorneys for the heirs and legal representatives of John Askin and Wm. Robertson.

Original entry.

Recorded in vol. 2, page 272, of the records of the former commissioners.

Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land, supposed ten miles up the river Rouge, at a place called the Salt Springs, containing two thousand one hundred acres of land, purchased by Wm. Robertson and me, jointly, of Parlier Benac in May, 1796; the deed of sale I now send you for the purpose of being recorded, and to furnish you with further information respecting its situation, boundaries, and extent.

JOHN ASKIN.

Said deed is recorded in volume 2, page 285, of the records of the former commissioners in 1805.

Testimony filed with the commissioners in 1821.

Antoine Le Franc, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1795, as he believes, he was employed by Mr. John Askin to go up to the Salt springs to get a canoe which had been taken there loaded with brick; that at that time a man by the name of Le Tard was living in a house which had been erected at the springs by Mr. Askin, and that the land around said house was cultivated and improved by him as the tenant of Mr. Askin.

Charles Labadie, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1794 or 1795 he went, in company with three or four persons, to the Salt springs on the river Rouge, where they erected a building for Mr. John Askin, and that a person named Le Tard was left in possession of the place for Mr. Askin, who made an improvement of several acres adjoining the spot where said house was situated; that he distinctly recollects that Mr. Askin, a short time afterwards, caused a road to be cut from Prairie Ronde to said house and farm; that sometime afterwards a Mr. Bath made salt on the place above mentioned for Mr. Askin; and further, that the said house was erected within twenty-five feet of the Salt springs, and near the bank of the river Rouge.

Elizabeth Coleman, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that during the year 1801, or about that time, her husband was employed by John Askin to go to a tract of land on the river Rouge, upon which the Salt springs are, to work at the salt-works, set kettles, dig wells, &c., &c.; he worked not more than eight days, when, after having made some bushels of salt, he returned. Deponent understood that some improvements had then been made on the premises, such as a house or cabins, &c. Deponent does not know the nature of Mr. Askin's right, but only knows that the deceased claimed it.

And thereupon it is considered and adjudged by the commissioners that this claim be rejected, inasmuch as continued occupancy, according with the acts of Congress, is not proved; and further, that the lands here claimed are believed, so far as the vagueness of description enables the commissioners to judge, to have been heretofore confirmed or included within the public surveys and sold; or it may be that tract of which six hundred and forty acres have been reserved from sale as including a salt spring.

No. 42.—The legal heirs of François Chobert Jancaire.

AUGUST 8, 1821.

The legal heirs of François Chobert Jancaire renew their entry, made by their deceased father, Colonel François Chobert Jancaire, October 31, 1808, and claim confirmation of a tract of land situate, lying, and being on the river Detroit, containing, by estimation, 639 acres; bounded in front by river Detroit, in rear by lands of Alexis Labadie, northeast by a creek dividing this tract from Lasselle's lands, and southwest by river Aux Vous. Said claim is made from long possession, occupancy, and improvement, &c.

GEORGE McDOUGALL,
HUNT & LARNED,
Attorneys for heirs of Colonel François Chobert Jancaire.

The original entry made by said François Chobert, in the year 1808, recorded in volume 5, page 155, of the records of the former commissioners, in the words and figures following, to wit:

SIR: Take notice that I now enter with the commissioners of the land office at Detroit my claim to a tract of land lying and being situate on the river Detroit, containing, by estimation, six hundred and thirty-nine acres, bounded in front by the river Detroit, in rear by lands of Alexis Labadie, northeast by a creek dividing this tract from Lasselle's lands, and southwest by river Aux Vous. I claim and set up title by virtue of possession, of twenty-four years' occupancy, and improvement, &c.

FRANÇOIS CHOBERT JANCAIRE.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

In 1811 the board reconsidered the claim of said Chobert and rejected the same; whereupon, and at the same time, Solomon Sibley filed an appeal from the decision of the commissioners, which (said reconsideration, rejection, and appeal) is reconsidered in volume 7, page 175.

Testimony adduced at the renewal of the claim in 1821.

Gabriel Godfroy, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that, to the best of his knowledge, many people, previous to the arrival of General Wayne's army, in 1796, cut hay on the above-described tract by permission of the late Colonel Chobert; that he never knew permission to cut hay given by any other person than said Chobert; that said land was, after the purchase of the same from Isidore Cheine, always considered and known as in possession by Colonel Chobert's tenants; that said possession was continued uninterruptedly, by cutting hay, until the death of Colonel Chobert, in 1811 or 1812; that it was impossible to build on said land, from the circumstance that in the fall season there was a great quantity of water on it; said tract of land was only suited for hay; and further, this deponent saith he has no interest in said claim.

The testimony of Louis Bourrassa states that, twenty-eight years since, he well recollects that Joseph Bondie, deceased, cut hay on the above-described tract of land by permission of the late Colonel Chobert; that he assisted him in hauling hay from said land; that many persons each successive year cut hay on said tract by permission of Colonel Chobert; that Colonel Chobert was always considered as the owner of said land; and that about eighteen years since he made a contract with Colonel Chobert to cut hay on said land; that he enclosed a small tract of said land, and for many years cut his hay on said land; said tract of land was, without interruption, in possession of Colonel Chobert's tenants until the period of his death, in 1811 or 1812. Deponent says he hath no interest, directly or indirectly, in the before-mentioned claim.

The commissioners do confirm the said claim to such extent as shall not interfere with lines of lands heretofore confirmed; that is, bounded on the northeast by the tract confirmed to Jaques and François Lasselle, and on all other sides by the tract confirmed to Alexis Discompte Labadie and the river Detroit, containing, according to Greely's map of survey, 237.9 acres. Yet the commissioners do recommend to Congress the confirmation to the heirs of said Chobert the residue of their claim, being 401 acres of land, to be located upon such of the adjacent public lands as may have been offered for sale within the land district of Detroit and remain unsold.

No. 43.—James May.

DETROIT, July 6, 1821.

The petition of James May respectfully showeth that your petitioner, on the first day of March, 1797, purchased from Harmon Eberts, sheriff of the county of Wayne, at public auction, a tract situated at river Ecorces, containing four acres in front by one hundred deep, as per deed of sale from said sheriff herewith will more fully appear; that on the 1st day of May, 1797, he also purchased another farm, adjoining the former, situated at said river Ecorces, from Amable St. Cosme, containing four acres in front by one hundred in depth, as per deed of sale herewith, likewise the evidence of Louis Bourrassa, will fully show. The aforesaid two farms contained eight hundred acres, which your petitioner laid out into four farms of two acres in front by one hundred acres in depth, (to accommodate purchasers,) one of which he sold to Charles Mitchel Campau, a second to J. B. Bondie, a third to Louis Bourrassa, and a fourth to Baptiste Rousson. The three latter farms extended only forty acres in depth; consequently there remained 360 acres unsold out of the aforesaid 800 acres, and for which your petitioner has laid in his claim, and prays that the aforesaid 360 acres of land, lying in the rear of Bondie's, Bourrassa's, and Rousson's farms, which he had formerly sold to those persons, be confirmed to him, &c. And your petitioner, as in duty bound, &c., &c.

JAMES MAY.

The COMMISSIONERS of the Land Board at Detroit.

TESTIMONY.

Charles Mitchel Campau, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that the persons who first settled what is called the river Aux Ecorces were: first, Ignatius Tuat, alias Duval; second, Jeane Salliotte; third, Pierre Campau; being all the settlers on this side, that is, upon the north side of the river Aux Ecorces, and between the said river and what was called the St. Cosme line. In respect to the time of the first settlement of these persons, it was before the Americans took possession of this country some four or five or more years: 1st, the farm now owned by John Baptiste Rousson, No. 85, was first worked by Pierre Mitchel Campau; 2d, the farm now owned by the heirs of Joseph Bondie, No. 92, was first worked by Pierre Mitchel Campau, being a part of the former, it being originally a farm of four arpents in front, but has since been divided into two farms; 3d, the farm now owned by Pierre Le Blanc, No. 83, was first worked by Jeane Salliotte, who first possessed the said farm. I have no knowledge that either Mr. or Madame St. Cosme, the father and mother, or any of their children, nor Judge May, nor any of them, have ever worked or lived upon, or have been established upon, those three farms, or either of them. Suits were brought under the American government against all the inhabitants living on the lands above mentioned by Judge May, about two years, deponent thinks, after the Americans came into the possession of this Territory. The result of these suits was, that the sheriff threatened to turn off the inhabitants aforesaid, and of whom this witness was one, to sell their property; and rather than abandon the possessions, this deponent and others purchased from and paid to Judge May.

In answer to question put by the commissioners: Pierre Mitchel Campau and Jeane Salliotte removed to the land in question, and came into the occupancy, possession, and improvement thereof, by the permission of Madame St. Cosme, whose husband was then absent at Montreal. At the time Campau settled upon these lands there were no lines or boundaries shown or known, but within that year in which they settled them they were run out. No one in particular pointed out these lands, but it was told them by the St. Cosme family that the lands upon which Campau and Salliotte did settle were the lands which they had permission from the St. Cosmes to settle. The said Campau and Salliotte refused to pay Madame St. Cosme for these lands, because Madame St. Cosme did not make them a good warrantee deed for the said lands; and in answer to this demand of Madame St. Cosme for deeds, she said that they should have their deeds, but they did not get them.

Charles Mitchel Campau, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he bought these lands from Madame St. Cosme, who claimed and held under an Indian deed; he remained on the land a few years. This deponent was one of a number who purchased there, and of whom payment was demanded, but not made, as no deed could be got. After remaining on said land four or five years, a new order of things, that is, a change of government, took place, and in the meantime the claim to these lands appears to have got into the hands of Judge May, who demanded payment, and brought suit against this deponent and the others to compel payment, &c. Deponent knows very well that Mr. St. Cosme claimed these lands many years previous to 1796, and more than thirty years ago; said St. Cosme never lived upon this land himself. There were above the river Aux Ecorces the following farms, as divided and surveyed by Mr. Fry: 1. Next the river Aux Ecorces, the farm of Tuat Duval, of four arpents in front by one hundred in depth; next to this farm, and adjoining, is a farm described as follows, to wit: bounded in front by the Detroit river, below by Duval, in rear by unconceded lands, above by Pierre Le Blanc, being two French arpents in front upon the Detroit river and one hundred arpents in depth. The next above is the farm purchased by Jeane Salliotte from Amable St. Cosme, but not paying for it, the same was sold by the sheriff, and purchased by James May, from whom this deponent then purchased the lower half, of two arpents in front by one hundred in depth; the remaining or upper half (part of the four arpents sold by the sheriff to Judge May) was in part purchased by Louis Bourrassa, who sold to Pierre Le Blanc, his son-in-law, viz: Bourrassa bought from Judge May two acres in front by forty arpents in depth, and Bourrassa sold the two arpents in front by twenty in depth, reserving to himself the remainder, viz., two arpents by twenty in the rear. The farm next above Le Blanc's was purchased by Joseph Bondie from deponent's brother Pierre, who purchased from Dominique St. Cosme, and was, as sold, two arpents in front by forty arpents in depth. The adjoining farm next above was purchased by Jeane Bapt. Rousson from Labe Roche, and from whom Labe Roche purchased deponent does not know. Deponent has frequently heard the several owners of these front farms express their intention to purchase the rear from Judge May, and regret their inability to purchase or pay for the whole one hundred arpents at the time they purchased the front, and that all that prevented them from purchasing at the time I heard them speak of this matter was their want of means. The time these conversations passed was about the time deponent purchased.

Thomas Smith, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that, to the best of his recollection, Pierre St. Cosme obtained by purchase the lands in question, together with other lands, in the year 1776. Deponent has seen all the papers of Mr. St. Cosme, and founds his opinion from the recollection he has of those papers. Mr. St. Cosme and the people living on these lands in question jointly applied to this deponent to survey these lands, to the best of deponent's recollection, in the year 1787 or 1788, and the then commandant, Major Wiseman, gave him (this deponent) permission to survey this or any other lands near said place. Deponent has heard that the said St. Cosmes (Amable and Dominique) had sold their interests to their father's estate to the lands at the river Ecorces, but does not know the fact; and further, that occupants of said land have always claimed under the St. Cosmes, and no other, to his knowledge.

Louis Bourrassa, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that about twenty-three years ago he purchased from James May, esq., a farm situated at the river Ecorces, two acres in front by forty in depth, being part of a farm originally two acres in front by one hundred in depth; but not having the means of purchasing the whole, Mr. May sold him the quantity as above stated, with the promise that deponent should have the preference of purchase whenever he was able to pay for it; that is, that deponent should have the preference in becoming the purchaser of two acres in depth, to the extent of Mr. May's claim, viz., one hundred arpents by the said two acres in front. This deponent knows that Mr. May was in the posssesion of the lands claimed by him, the said May, situated upon the river Ecorces, for a long time prior to the year 1796; and that said land was settled by tenants under Mr. May, and by persons who had purchased from him. Jeane Bpt. Salliotte then lived on the farm deponent now owns, and endeavered to claim it without paying Mr. May. Said May brought suit against him, and recovered the land again. Deponent then bought the aforesaid part of this farm from said May, which is two arpents in front by forty in depth, which has since been confirmed to him. Deponent has knowledge, from common report then current, that Mr. May bought his right to all these lands, and also to Turkey island, from the heirs of said St. Cosme; and when this deponent bought of Mr. May, Mrs. St. Cosme was alive, and she and the heirs told him that they had sold to Mr. May.

Claimant files three deeds of conveyance from the St. Cosmes: one from Amable St. Cosme, of a tract of land of four arpents in front by one hundred in depth, bounded on the east by Joseph Bondie, jr., on the west by Joseph Bondie, sen.; two others from Amable St. Cosme, Antoine Beaubien, J. Bpt. Petre, and Dominique St. Cosme, of all their right to said land as heirs of Pierre St. Cosme and Madame St. Cosme, their father and mother; and also another from Hermon Eberts, sheriff of the county of Wayne, to said James May—said deed was made by virtue of a sale of the said sheriff of said county, in virtue of an execution to him, directed against the plantation of Pierre Mitchel Campau. The said tract, so sold and conveyed, is described as follows: situated on the river Ecorces, containing two acres in front by one hundred in depth, more or less; bounded in front by river Detroit, and in rear by unlocated lands, on the northeast by the lands of Alexis Labadie, southwest by Charles Mitchel Campau, &c.

And thereupon the commissioners do confirm to the said James May all that tract or parcel of land which shall be included within the rear lines of the farms heretofore confirmed to J. Bondie, Louis Bourrassa, and J. Bpt. Rousson, on the southwardly and on the westwardly side by the line of the tract heretofore confirmed to Charles Mitchel Campau, and to extend in depth to the rear line of the tract of said Campau; thence, and in the rear, by a prolongation, in an eastwardly direction, of the said rear line of Campau's land; and on the eastwardly or northeastwardly side by the St. Cosme line, or the general course of the rear lines of the confirmed tracts which front on the river Rouge, and to run as nearly as may be upon one continued or straight course, and not unnecessarily following the various indentations of said rear line, containing, by estimation, three hundred and sixty arpents of land, more or less: provided always that the lines of said tract now confirmed shall in no case interfere with the lines of any lands confirmed by any former land boards.

No. 44.—James May.

To the register of the land office at Detroit:

SIR: Take notice that I renew the entry made before the former commissioners, February 17, 1805, for Turkey island, in the river Detroit.

This original entry is found upon the journal of proceedings of the land board on the day above mentioned, in the words following, to wit:

DECEMBER 31, 1804.

SIR: Please take notice that I claim title to the following tract of land, to wit, Fighting island, otherwise called Turkey island, in virtue of a deed of sale from St. Cosme and others.

JAMES MAY.

GEORGE HOFFMAN, Register of the Land Office at Detroit.

A deed of conveyance, regularly executed, is also recorded at length upon the journal of proceedings of said board; and the commissioners did not then act upon this claim affirmatively, as was the case with most other claims, the same not being founded upon a legal French or British grant.

Additional testimony adduced to the present commissioners in 1821.

Charles Mitchel Campau, being duly sworn, deposes and saith that he thinks it is about thirty years since he saw a quantity of timber, for building purposes, taken from the main land to Turkey island by one Durand, by permission of Madam St. Cosme, in the absence of her husband, who was then and for several years at Montreal. Deponent understood distinctly that the said Durand took possession of and made these preparations for improving this island by permission of and in consequence of arrangements entered into with Madam St. Cosme; but deponent does not know whether said Durand had contracted to purchase or only rent the said island. From the appearances of the timber and materials it appeared to witness that it was intended to build a very elegant house; that witness did not see this house erected. Deponent only knows that a cabin was erected by said Durand and workmen sent to the island, who remained on the island for some time. Said Durand did afterwards quit possession of this island, but deponent does not know for what reason, nor does deponent know how long Durand remained upon the same. About thirty-five years ago this witness obtained permission from Madam St. Cosme to go upon the island to cultivate the land thereon, and, in pursuance of this arrangement, did take his horses and cattle over to the island and commenced work, intending to enclose a corn field. Deponent found a kind of fence enclosing a field that was cleared, but not sufficient to preserve grain. After this witness commenced work, there came to the island a large party of Hufon Indians, who threatened to kill his cattle and destroy his property unless he, this deponent, would leave the island; in consequence of which this deponent left the island and reported the circumstances to Madam St. Cosme, and never afterwards returned to the island. Deponent, after this period, frequently saw persons upon the island at work in cutting hay, but does not know by whose permission or authority. The reason, as this witness understood, for the hostility of the Huron Indians towards persons inhabiting this island was from the circumstance of the St. Cosme family having obtained a grant of this island from the Pottawatomies, and it was claimed by the Hurons as theirs; but among the white inhabitants of that time the island was generally acknowledged to belong to the St. Cosme family. Deponent does not know anything about Judge May's having derived a title to the island from Madam St. Cosme, or from that family. Deponent has heard the sons of Madam St. Cosme say that they had transferred all their right or inheritance, or otherwise, to Judge May.

Thomas Smith, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that, in respect to Turkey island, Pierre St. Cosme, father-in-law of Judge May, purchased Turkey island from the Pottawatomie Indians, who always claimed this island, the Wyandotts never having any supposed right to this island; and deponent understood that St. Cosme purchased with approbation of the then governor of Detroit, it being a separately organized government from the Canadas. Durand built a cabin, and cultivated some land upon this island by permission and under the authority of the St. Cosme family, as it was then generally understood, and as this witness understood. After this period, and after Durand left the island, deponent saw several persons at different times cultivate and possess the island, but under whose authority or by whose permission this deponent does not know. It was always understood that the island was owned by the St. Cosme family, and this witness never heard that there was any other claimant. After the death of Mr. and Madam St. Cosme, the latter of whom died about thirty years ago and about ten years after her husband, Judge May claimed this island, and this witness understood had purchased the claims of the St. Cosme family.

Louis Bourrassa, of river Ecorces, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that about twenty-nine years ago Durand, a merchant living at the Petit Cote, came to this deponent and asked him to go and live on Turkey island on shares. Deponent told him if he could find an opportunity to sell his farm he would willingly go and live there, but, not being able to effect a sale, did not accept of Durand's offer, although a very advantageous one. Deponent further states that he, Durand, informed him that he, Durand, had purchased the island from Madam St. Cosme, and that Joseph Lajuness and himself were employed the whole summer cutting fire-wood on said island for said Durand, and received from him four shillings, York, per cord. About two years after Durand had been in possession, finding he was not in circumstances to pay the purchase money, surrendered back the island to Mrs. St. Cosme, after making some improvements on it.

The commissioners, after due deliberation, entertain strong doubts as to their authority to confirm Turkey island, inasmuch as it is an island in the Detroit river, which may ultimately be found without the boundary of the United States. The board do therefore decline to express an opinion upon this claim of James May, but would respectfully recommend the same to the attention of the revising powers.

No. 45.—The legal heirs and representatives of John Askin, deceased.

The legal heirs and representatives of John Askin, esq., deceased, renew the entry made by the said John Askin with the former commissioners October 28, 1805, recorded in volume 3, page 139, of the records of the former commissioners, in the words and figures following, to wit:

To the register of the land office at Detroit:

Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land of six acres, French measure, in front and rear, by what is supposed will be one hundred deep, situated on the northeast side of river Aux Ecorces, having river Detroit in front, by purchase from Baptiste Reaume.

JOHN ASKIN.

Claimant produces, in support of his title before the former board, a deed from Jean Baptiste Reaume to John Askin, senior, dated December 31, 1796. See volume 2 of minutes, folio 291.

It appearing to the commissioners that the land here claimed has been appropriated by a former land board to other claimants, and, further, no testimony being adduced by present claimants in proof of occupancy or improvement, this claim is rejected.

No. 46.—John McDonell, as trustee of John Smith McDonell, Ann Catharine McDonell, Charles Stewart McDonell, Donald Sunday McDonell, and Alexander James Dallas McDonell, (minors.)

To the honorable William Woodbridge, Jonathan Kearsley, and Henry B. Brevoort, commissioners appointed by the United States for settling and adjusting the land claims in the Territory of Michigan:

The undersigned, assignee of Thomas Smith, as the trustee of John Smith McDonell, Ann Catharine McDonell, Charles Stewart McDonell, Donald Sunday McDonell, and Alexander James Dallas McDonell, (minors,) respectfully represents: That a certain tract of land is deeded to him, in trust for the aforesaid minors, by Thomas Smith, the original claimant, situate between the forks of the river Ecorces, adjoining a tract of land in front already confirmed to the said Thomas Smith, the assignor, by a patent from the United States.

The undersigned further represents that, in his opinion, the documents herewith enclosed fully establish the rights of your petitioner to the said tract of land.

Your honorable body will observe that, by the document marked with the letter F, the whole claim was rejected by the former commissioners, but at a subsequent period they did allow, on the same evidence, three hundred and thirty-five acres of said tract of land, as appears confirmed afterwards by patent to the said Thomas Smith. The undersigned fully relies on the justice of his claim from the documentary evidence accompanying the same, that with the impartial and correct line of conduct pursued by your honorable body in relation to claims. From which circumstance your petitioner anticipates a favorable report; and, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

JOHN McDONELL.

DETROIT, August 13, 1821.

Claimant files a deed of conveyance from the said Thomas Smith to the said John McDonell, in trust for the above-named minors, for a tract of land containing by admeasurement fifteen hundred and eighty-five acres, butted and bounded as follows, viz: commencing at a post in the northwesterly angle of a tract numbered forty-eight on the line of the Antoine Barron; thence south sixty chains fifty links, to the intersection of the boundary line of Jonathan Shefflin; thence, along the said line, south 84° 39′ west, one hundred and sixty-five chains; thence south 35° 30′ west, sixty-five chains thirty-nine links; thence north 19° 30′ east, sixty-seven chains fifty-one links, to the intersection of said Barron's line; thence south 70° 30′ east, along said line, one hundred and fifty-seven chains, to the place of beginning; dated June 12, 1821.

Claimant files a certified copy of a deed of conveyance from Maria Catharine Bowes St. Cosme, Amable St. Cosme, Dominique St. Cosme, and Theoliste St. Cosme, of all their right to the gore in the forks of the river Ecorces, dated at Detroit May 6, 1787.

Claimant files certified copies of four deeds of conveyance from Etienne Pierre Labadie, Simon Drouillard, Louis Moreceau, Simon Drouillard, jr., of their several improvements on the above tract claimed, and also of all their right, title, &c., to the said Thomas Smith, dated November 25, 1805.

Extract from the records of the former commissioners of 1807.

Simon Drouillard, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that previous to July 1, 1796, the claimant was in possession and tenanted the premises, and has continued so to this day.

Other affidavits were produced, establishing the occupancy and possession of different parts of said tract by said Smith.

And thereupon the commissioners are of opinion that the original claimant, Thomas Smith, might, with justice and equity, have been confirmed by former land boards to the extent of six hundred and forty (640) acres for each of the said several improvements; but as confirmation was formerly made only to the extent of three hundred and thirty-five acres in the whole, and that, as the present board are advised, embraces, most probably, all the improvements made on the several tracts, therefore the present board do not consider themselves authorized to confirm beyond that which may be the residuum of the one tract heretofore confirmed. The commissioners do therefore confirm to the said John McDonell, as trustee aforesaid, three hundred and five acres, bounded in front by the land heretofore confirmed to said Smith; on the northeastward by lot No. 86, heretofore confirmed to Antoine Barron; and on the southwest by lot No. 113, confirmed heretofore to Jonathan Shefflin; and in the rear by a line drawn parallel to the front line, and extending from the line of said Barron, on the one side, to the line of said Shefflin on the other: this tract to be as nearly as practicable in a square form. And the commissioners do further recommend to the favorable notice of Congress, for confirmation, the residue of said claim not heretofore or now confirmed.

No. 47.—Joseph Barrian.

Joseph Barrian now renews his claim to the following tract of land, situated below the river Ecorces; the situation and extent, as well as improvements made thereon, will appear from the testimony; and for which tract he entered his claim in 1808, with Peter Audrain, esq., the register of the land office, but which claim, it appears, was never presented to the land commissioners, or acted upon by them, and which it is presumed was lost or mislaid by the said register; all of which will more fully appear by the accompanying testimony, August 17, 1821; and also that I paid the entrance fees, and also for recording the title papers in support of my claim.

JOSEPH BARRIAN.

TESTIMONY.

John Bpt. Lebeau, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that the tract of land on which Joseph Barrian now lives, below the river Ecorces, was cultivated thirty years since; that at the time of the arrival of General Wayne's army Joseph Drouillard was in possession of said tract, and had an improvement of about six acres; that said Drouillard sold his possession to Bazil Pepin, and said Bazil Pepin sold the same to Joseph Barrian. The land has been continually cultivated to the present time. Deponent well recollects that about thirteen years ago he came with the said Barrian to the office of the late Mr. Audrain; said Barrian informed him that he was going to enter said land, and pay the entrance fees. Deponent often heard that said Barrian entered said land, and it was always considered, until within a few years, as the land of said Barrian.

Pierre Dellore, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that the tract of land on which said Barrian now lives, below river Ecorces, was cultivated and improved more than thirty years ago; and at the time of the arrival of General Wayne's army Joseph Drouillard was in possession of said land; that said Drouillard sold his improvements to Bazil Pepin, and said Pepin sold them to Joseph Barrian; that the land has been continually occupied up to the present time. He always understood that the said Barrian entered said land with the register.

Amable Bellau, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that the tract of land on which Joseph Barrian now lives was cultivated and improved more than thirty years since; that said land, at the time of the arrival of General Wayne's army at Detroit, was occupied and improved by Joseph Drouillard, and by him sold to Bazil Pepin; that said Drouillard had a house on said tract, and five or six acres cleared at that time; that said Bazil Pepin sold two arpents of said land in front, running back, to Joseph Barrian, and four arpents in front, running back, to this deponent, who had quit-claimed all his right to the same to the said Joseph Barrian. Deponent says that the land sold by him to Joseph Barrian has been uninterruptedly occupied and improved to the present time; and further, that he has always understood from said Barrian that he had entered his land about thirteen years since, and supposed it had been confirmed to him until the late survey and public sales.

The manifest ignorance of the claimant, and entire want of all knowledge respecting land matters, being taken into view, and the facts, as stated by him, that in 1808 he did make application to the then register to enter his claim, and did pay the fees demanded for entering the same, being fully believed; and the commissioners having no doubt that the claim was then entered, but either lost or mislaid, and never presented to the land board in 1808, or to any subsequent board; and that the claimant, supposing the said claim to have been confirmed to him, rested undisturbed in his possession until 1818, when these lands were sold by the government; and it further appearing to this board that, under the late law for the relief of purchasers of public lands, the land claimed, or a greater part thereof, has been relinquished, and is now the property of the United States, therefore this board do confirm to the said Joseph Barrian such quantity of land, being part of fractional sections Nos. 20 and 21, as shall be included between a prolongation of the south line of the tract, containing (126.28) one hundred and twenty-six acres and twenty-eighth hundredths of an acre, retained by him and others, and extending to the river Detroit, and the south line of the private claim No. 112, heretofore confirmed to J. B. Le Beau; bounded, also, in front by the river Detroit, and in rear by the east line of said part of said fractional section No. 20, retained as aforesaid, which tract, now confirmed, will contain and is estimated at two hundred and twenty-five acres, more or less.

No. 48.—Robert Abbott, for himself and in behalf of the heirs of James Abbott, deceased.

The undersigned, for himself and in behalf of the heirs of the late James Abbott, deceased, begs leave to submit to the consideration of the commissioners a tract of land entered with the former commissioners on September 11, 1805, recorded in volume 1, page 257, situated on the river a La Cannor and Detroit, about ten miles below this place, and, in addition to the evidence already on record, and in further support of the claim, encloses the deposition of Michael la Chorite.

ROBERT ABBOTT,
For himself and in behalf of the heirs of James Abbott, deceased.

DETROIT, June 5, 1821.

The volume now numbered 3 was formerly numbered 1. Original entry, volume 3, page 257, and volume 5, page 39, of the record of said former commissioners. This claim is taken up in the words and figures following, to wit:

"This tract contains, by estimation, two thousand two hundred acres, it being fifteen acres in front by one hundred and fifty in depth; bounded in front by river Detroit, in rear by unconceded lands, below by the river a La Cannor, and above by unconceded lands."

James Howard testifies that this tract was occupied in 1785 and considerably improved, but that the tenant was driven off by the Indians.

In volume 7, page 127 of said records, the claim is again taken up by the commissioners, and Israel Ruland brought forward in evidence, who swears that in 1796 James Abbott was in possession of said tract; and that, from time to time, since said 1796, deponent has occasionally seen people working on the premises, and that he knows of no other claim thereto.—(See also volume 7, page 138, where it is ultimately postponed.)

Testimony filed at the renewal of the claim in 1821.

Michael la Chorite, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he cannot exactly recollect the time when James Abbott, deceased, placed a man upon the land heretofore described, which person said he was placed there by James Abbott as a tenant, but thinks it was as much as thirty years ago. The land on which this tenant was placed is situate on the river a La Cannor. There might have been an acre and a half of ground under improvement; he saw an orchard there in 1789. He does not know of any persons living on said premises after he saw said orchard last, until he himself went there to live, which was four years ago in June next. He raised a crop thereon in 1817, and removed from said place in the latter part of said year. He recollects to have seen a house on said place a short time previous to the late war. He knows that the contractor had permission from Mr. Abbott to enclose a small part of this land for the purpose of keeping his cattle from going astray. This was about three years before the war. It has always been the belief of people, since he first knew the place, that Mr. Abbott owned a large tract there; he never knew that any other person claimed this tract, and that Mr. Abbott always claimed it.

The commissioners, after a careful investigation of all the testimony adduced before the former boards of commissioners, together with that adduced before the present board, do find, but for what reasons they pretend not to determine, that this claim was postponed by the board in 1810. The present board express their full conviction of the strong equitable grounds for the confirmation of this claim to the extent allowed by law—six hundred and forty acres; but they find an insuperable barrier to such confirmation arising out of the fact that all or most of the lands embraced by this claim have been sold by the government. This board can, therefore, only express their earnest recommendation that the claimants be confirmed by Congress in a tract of land containing six hundred and forty acres, to be located upon such of the public lands adjacent to the lands claimed as may have been offered for sale and remain unsold at the time said claimants may be authorized to locate their claim; and cause the same to be surveyed or otherwise sufficiently designated to the register of the land office at Detroit, so as to enable him, the said register, to issue a patent certificate for the same.

No. 49.—John R. Williams.

John R. Williams, in behalf of himself and the other heirs of the late Thomas Williams, deceased, hereby renews his entry of claim made to a former land board for a certain tract of land situate upon the Detroit river. He claims title by virtue of the ancient occupancy and possession of Thomas Williams, deceased, his late father. The claimant also submits to the commissioners that the death of his father at a period when all the heirs were minors and very young sufficiently accounts for the long interruption in the possession and improvements of the lands claimed. And claimant further begs the commissioners that should they, by virtue of the limited powers under which they feel themselves bound to act, find it beyond their authority to report a confirmation, in such case to give such favorable representation of this claim as will enable him to present it to Congress upon such strong grounds as its justice and equity, in his opinion, merits.

TESTIMONY.

James Campau, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in 1781 or 1782 he was present and heard a conversation between Thomas Williams, late of Detroit, deceased, and Joseph Bondie, sr., by which he understood that Mr. Bondie had improved a tract of land, then owned by Thomas Williams, at Montguago; and that a short time before the decease of the said Thomas Williams deponent heard him say that he had a good encouragement to settle the lands, having sent his deed to Albany, and taking the advice of his friends in relation to the views and policy of the government of the United States on that subject; that Mr. Williams claimed a large tract of land at Montguago.

Gabriel Godfroy, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that about thirty-eight years ago Joseph Bondie and three of his sons settled on and occupied a tract of land now called the settlement of Montguago, and the same that has since been purchased from the United States by Major General Alexander Macomb, and by Thomas Cowles, and perhaps some others; that the said Bondie settled said tract of land under a claim of the late Thomas Williams, esq., from whom the said Bondie purchased the said lands as was then reported and understood; and that, to the best of his recollection, one of the sons of said Bondie occupied said land near three years successively. Deponent does not know what quantity of land was embraced in the claim of the said Thomas Williams, but understood it to be a large tract. During the time of the occupancy of said Bondie improvements to some extent were made upon the lands—a part of the same fenced and enclosed, &c.

Dominique Bondie, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that his brothers occupied the lands now possessed by Thomas Cowles upwards of thirty years ago; which lands they then held in virtue of a claim derived from the late Thomas Williams, deceased. Deponent understood that his father and brother had purchased the said land, but owing to some difficulty with the Indians they gave up the lands without fulfilling the contract on their parts.

The commissioners are of opinion that the foregoing statements in the notice of claim are strictly true, and do therefore recommend this matter to the favorable notice of Congress. The authority vested in the board, however, forbids a confirmation of this claim by them.

No. 50.—The legal heirs and representatives of John Askin, deceased.

The legal heirs and representatives of John Askin, deceased, renew the entry made by the said John Askin with the former commissioners, recorded in volume 2, page 273, of the records of the former commissioners.

MARCH 1, 1805.

Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situate at Montguago, opposite Grosse Isle, granted to the late Paul Gambier, of Post Vincent, by Monsieur Belestre, the French commandant at Detroit.

JOHN ASKIN.
SIBLEY & WHITNEY, Attorneys for heirs.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

DETROIT, September 20, 1821.

The grant or deed from said commandant is recorded in vol. 2, page 279.

When said Askin's claims were presented before the commissioners for the purpose of getting them recorded in their books, for their information he stated, in relation to this claim, that he obtained this tract of land from said Gambier by a judgment.

The commissioners decided that as no testimony was adduced before the board of 1805, when this claim was first entered, and as no testimony has since that period been produced in support thereof, this claim is rejected.

No. 51.—Sarah Macomb, executrix, &c., of William Macomb, deceased.

PETER AUDRAIN, Esq.,
Register of the Land Office for the district of Detroit, in the Territory of Michigan.

The commissioners decide that the said island be confirmed to Mrs. Sarah Macomb, widow of the late William Macomb, deceased, in trust for the use of the children and legal representatives of the said William Macomb, deceased, saving, however, to the said Mrs. Macomb her rights of dower therein. No. 54.—Sarah Macomb.—Northern end or head of Grosse Isle.

DETROIT, March 23, 1818.

On Wednesday, August 3, 1808, the commissioners of the land office at this place confirmed to John, David, and William Macomb, the heirs of William Macomb, deceased, lot No. 549, situate, lying, and being on Grosse Isle, on the border of the river Detroit, containing, by the return of the surveyor, six hundred and forty acres.

In pursuance, therefore, of the act of Congress passed April 23, 1812, and revived by a subsequent act of March 3, 1817, entitled "An act allowing further time for entering donation rights to lands in the district of Detroit," I, Sarah Macomb, executrix of the last will and testament of William Macomb, deceased, do enter the vacant land lying and being adjacent to the said tract, which vacant land is bounded as follows: beginning at the northeast border of tract No. 549, where it touches the river Detroit; then running on the water's edge one hundred chains; thence, across the marsh, west twenty-five chains; thence, along the water's edge, south, till it strikes the northwest corner of tract No. 549; thence, following the bounds of said tract, to the place of beginning, containing 500 acres.

SARAH MACOMB.

The commissioners, upon the subsequent testimony of Edward McCarty respecting the early, long-continued, and uninterrupted possession and improvements made upon Grosse Isle, do confirm this tract as claimed, be the quantity more or less, provided, however, that the tract here claimed shall not exceed 640 acres; and provided also that the lines of the tract hereby confirmed shall not interfere with the lines of the small tract or gore of land claimed in the entry next following by Simon Perkins, and recommended by this board for confirmation to said Perkins.

No. 55.—Simon Perkins.—Grosse Isle, in river Detroit.

DETROIT, September 28, 1821.

The claim of Simon Perkins, of Warren, in the State of Ohio, respectfully showeth: That the said Simon Perkins is the proprietor of two certain tracts and parcels of ground on Grosse Isle, (so called,) in the county of Wayne and Territory of Michigan, to wit: sections number one and number three, recently owned by Gideon Leet.

The said claimant is desirous of obtaining, according to the provisions of the laws of the United States in such case made and provided, a confirmation of his title to certain lands lying betwixt the above-mentioned tracts and the river Detroit, which lands, at the time of the original survey, were either covered with water or considered of so little value as that they were omitted in said survey; and, by a recent recession of the waters from said tracts of land, the said land claimed is, in a great measure, cut off from the privilege of said river Detroit, except by crossing said unsurveyed strip of land lying, as aforesaid, between said sections numbered one and numbered three. The said claimant, therefore, respectfully submits to the said commissioners his petition in the premises, and prays a confirmation of his title as aforesaid.

SIMON PERKINS,
By his special Agent and Attorney, John J. Deming.

The UNITED STATES LAND COMMISSIONERS, sitting to decide upon claims within the district of Detroit.

DETROIT, May 20, 1821.

It is satisfactorily shown to this board that the above-named claimant, Simon Perkins, is the assignee of the above-described tract of land, to which he derives title from John, William, and David Macomb.

It appears to the commissioners that the above Simon Perkins is entitled to a confirmation to that gore or narrow piece of ground intervening between the tract of land now owned by him, as the assignee of John, William, and David Macomb, and which gore or small tract of land is considered by the board as forming a part of said original tract, as it would seem to be excluded in the preceding entry of Mrs. Macomb, who does not appear to embrace this gore in her claim; the commissioners, therefore, in virtue of the long-continued and uninterrupted possession of those under whom Simon Perkins derives title, would respectfully recommend this, his claim, for confirmation.

The undersigned, acting for himself, as assignee of William Macomb, and for the other legal representatives of William Macomb, deceased, the father of the said William Macomb, begs leave to call the attention of the board to claims numbered 556, 557, in vol. 6, pages 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, of the proceedings of the commissioners, which have been duly entered with the board, and evidence adduced in support thereof, which the undersigned views as conclusive testimony of the possession, occupancy, and improvement contemplated by the act of Congress, and prays the consideration thereof by the board. In addition to the evidence adduced in support of these claims, and in support of his claims and those of the legal representatives of the said William Macomb, deceased, to his and their claims to the upper or north end of Grosse isle, to Isle Celeron, to Hickory island, and to Sugar island, to Fox island, and to Calf island, brings forth Edward McCarty as a witness, who can testify to the possession, occupancy, and improvements of the tracts claimed, and prays that he may be sworn. The last-mentioned tracts have also been duly entered, and are on file with the register.

ALEXANDER MACOMB.

TESTIMONY.

Edward McCarty, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith: I, Edward McCarty, came to Detroit in the year 1784, in the month of August, and was employed by Mr. William Macomb; and in the year following a number of families were settled on Grosse Isle by Mr. William Macomb. About the beginning of September, Mr. Fry, the deputy surveyor, received an order to survey the island, and I accompanied him all round the whole island, laying off the same into farms of seven acres front, except that at the head of the island, which was occupied by one Thomas Williams, who was the first settler on the island, which lot commenced at the northeast or upper end of the thoroughfare; thence running west across the island, and taking in the whole of the point, and was called No. 1. Thomas Williams made his settlement on the meadows at the head of the island, a considerable distance above where Mr. Leet now lives, and afterwards improved the very spot where Mr. Leet now resides, by building a house thereon, and making fields and clearing. That the next lot, which was No. 2, was left vacant for the use of the mill; but ten acres were cleared and enclosed for meadows for the use of the horses employed at the mill. The next lot must be No. 3, on which one Stofflemger lived, and is the same lot on which Mr. William Macomb, the son of William Macomb, the proprietor, now lives. The next lot is No. 4, on which one Scratch lived, and is the same on which the mansion house was built, which house was occasionally occupied by Mr. Macomb and his family while collecting the rents. The next lot must be No. 5, on which one Mungee lived; and afterwards, in the year 1788 till 1796, I lived on lot No. 5. The next lot, No. 6, was occupied by one Peter Mallet. The next lot, No. 7, was rented to John Cray. The next lot, No. 8, was rented to William Lockart. The next, No. 9, was settled by John and Robert Jones. The next lot, No. 10, was rented to and occupied by one Jacob Jar, who now resides in Canada. It was the lime-kiln lot, and was used only for the purposes of making lime thereon. The next lot was No. 11, and was improved by one Hyer, a Dutchman. The next lot, No. 12, was settled by Wolf. The next, No. 13, (the house occupied by Mr. David Macomb,) was settled by one Snyder. Next lot, No. 14, rented by Jacob Dix. No. 15, by Henry Crow. Then there was no settlement until you get down to Frenchman's creek, at the south or lower end of the island, where one Bpt. Duberry, a Frenchman, settled. Then, on the west side of the island, opposite to Duberry, was one Joseph Terris settled. Then further up was settled Charles Mungee; but on what lot I do not recollect. The next settlement was at the mouth of the thoroughfare, by one John Ireland, and afterwards by one Gill, who came on four years afterwards; and further up was John Heartley; on the lot just above him was settled the son of said Heartley, called also John Heartley; and then, betwixt Heartley and Williams, was settled Joseph Terris, the father of Joseph Terris, at the foot of the island. These settlements were all made and established by Mr. William Macomb in the year 1785, and were the first actual settlers. Since that time others have settled under the direction of Mr. McIntosh, the executor of Mr. William Macomb, who died in the year 1796. The small islands, also, around Grosse Isle were also in possession of Mr. William Macomb at the time I came to the country, viz: Stoney island, Fox island, Sugar island, Hickory island, Isle Celeron, and Calf island. In the year 1785 Thomas Williams and his black man, under the permission of Mr. William Macomb, built a small cabin on Sugar island, and made a small clearing at the head of the island. On Fox island a lime-kiln was constructed for the burning of lime. The islands were always considered as the property of Mr. William Macomb, both by the Indians and the white people. They were used as appendages to Grosse Isle to receive the young cattle belonging to his extensive improvements.

MAY 25, 1821.

On May 25, Edward McCarty sworn, in continuation. After the death of William Macomb, esquire, and in April, 1796, I left the island. Williams went on the upper end of the island in the year 1783, and remained on it until a year or two before the death of William Macomb, esquire, which was in April, 1796. After Williams left the island, his family, or part thereof, remained a year or upwards upon the same place. They remained there until after the death of Mrs. Macomb. After the family of Williams left the island, a man named Allen rented this same place, who placed Jesse Hicks, as his tenant, thereon, in the year 1799, to the best of my recollection, who remained there for several years. In the year 1787 or 1788 Charles Munger remained on the upper end of the island, (where he had lived with Williams,) towards the southwest end of the island, opposite to Walker's, on the American shore, and nearly opposite to Crow's, who lived on the east side of the island. In the fall of 1794 Munger was killed at the action of the Miami, and his family remained on the island until the spring following. After the decease of Mr. Macomb, Mr. McIntosh, executor of the estate of Mr. Macomb, took this tract under his care, and that year or the year following leased the same to one Myers, who remained thereon several years. Bpt. Dube was living on the lower end of the island, near the mouth of Frenchman's creek, when I came to the country in 1784, and remained thereon upwards of six years as the tenant of Mr. Macomb. Almost two years after Dube left this tract Joseph Terris went on to the same end of the island, and made an improvement near where Dube had lived, and remained two or three years or more as tenant of Mr. Macomb, and continued there until it was known that the American troops were about to advance and take possession of the country, when he removed; after which, Mr. Macomb, and, after his death, Mr. McIntosh, as his executor, continued always to exercise ownership, and it was always understood by the inhabitants to be the property of Mr. Macomb, and after his death as belonging to his estate; and further, that Sugar island, Hickory island, Isle Celeron, Fox island, and Calf island, were occupied by Mr. Macomb, or tenants under him, as pasture grounds, as from year to year they had occasion for them, from the time I came to the country until the death of Mr. Macomb.

And further, the said Edward McCarty, having examined a certain chart of Grosse Isle, doth further make affidavit that the same exhibits, according to the best of his knowledge, a true view of the said island, and of the ancient subdivisions thereof, and also of the small islands adjacent thereto.

Testimony adduced before the former commissioners in 1808, and recorded in volume 6 of the records of said commissioners, page 131; claim there No. 556, and in the proceedings of 1821, No. 51.

J. Gibe was brought forward as a witness and sworn. He says that previous to July 1, 1796, three improvements had been made on the tract in question by tenants of the late Mr William Macomb; that a year or two previous to 1796 the tenants left the premises, and the land has been idle since that time to this day. Three houses had been built thereon, but are decayed.

Angus McIntosh, another witness, being sworn, says that the reason why this tract of land has remained idle sometimes was that no application was made to him by any person to whom he thought worthy of renting. The deponent further saith that he considers that part of the island as much under his protection and care as any part of it.

Jacob Gibe, in support of the claim No. 557, by the commissioners, December 23, 1808, volume 6, pages 133 and 134, which claim is No. 52 on the proceedings in 1821.

Joseph Gibe, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that many years previous to 1796 the late William Macomb was in possession and tenanted the premises; that eight or ten years previous to 1796 the premises were improved by Charles Munger, as a tenant to William Macomb, to whom he paid the rent; that in the fall of 1794 he was killed, and his wife remained in possession until in the fall of 1795, when she left it; and that from that time until James Mitchell went on, which was three years ago, the land remained idle. Said Mitchell remained thereon one year; since which time it has been occupied by Michael Myers, as a tenant, who pays rent to Mr. McIntosh, as agent, &c. About eight acres are now under fence, and a house erected thereon.—December 23, 1808.

Angus McIntosh, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that the reason of this tract remaining idle sometimes was that no person applied whom he thought worthy to rent it; and further, that he considers this tract as much under his care as any part of the island.—December 23, 1808.

The commissioners, upon full and deliberate consideration of the foregoing testimony, adduced in support of the claims made by the several heirs of the late William Macomb, deceased, have felt themselves authorized in making the decisions of confirmation to the widow, as executrix, in trust for the use of the children and legal representatives generally, without considering the precedence of the right of any one heir to the exclusion of the others, and without undertaking to decide the right in nature of back concession to lands situate as these are.

DETROIT, June 26, 1821.

GENTLEMEN: Please to take notice that, in pursuance of the several acts of Congress for ascertaining and deciding on claims to land in the Territory of Michigan, I now renew my claim and title to a certain tract of land situated on Sandy creek and Rocky river, in this district, being one of several tracts mentioned and described in a deed of partition, of two parts, existing between the late George Meldrum and myself, which deed is recorded by a former board of commissioners, together with my entry at that time made, reference being had to the journal of their proceedings, volume 1, page 325, &c.; and also of another indenture of agreement and partition of said four thousand acre tract, between the said George Meldrum and myself, dated October 24, 1808, herewith; by virtue of which original entry made in 1805, and partitions, I now claim six hundred and forty acres of land, described and bounded as follows, viz: on the southwest by Sandy creek aforesaid, and fronting on said creek, in rear and on the northeast by Rocky river aforesaid, on the southeast by a tract of land, No. 476, confirmed to George Meldrum, and on the northeast by unconceded lands.

I claim title to the above tract of land by right of purchase and partition as aforesaid, and also of continued possession, occupancy, and improvements thereon, made by me, my tenants, and those from whom I derive title, from a period prior to the first day of July, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-six, to the present time; all which will more fully appear, reference being had to the aforesaid proceedings of a former land board above alluded to, and the testimony there adduced, together with the further testimony which I shall take the liberty to offer.

I am, very respectfully, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE McDOUGALL.

The COMMISSIONERS of the United States Land Office for the district of Detroit and Territory of Michigan.

The commissioners having reference to the record of proceedings of a former land board, they appear as follows:

FEBRUARY 6, 1805.—The board took into consideration (volume 1, page 325,) the claim of George McDougall and George Meldrum, in the words following, to wit:

DECEMBER 28, 1804.

SIR: Please receive, for the purpose of entering in your office, titles for a tract of land, and the plat thereof, herewith, which was purchased from François Pepin by George Meldrum and George McDougall, the subscribers, on September 8, 1797. The deed of said Pepin is recorded by the said board, by which said Pepin, for and in consideration of £1,751 18s. 6*d.*, New York currency, conveyed to said McDougall and Meldrum all his right, title, and interest to a certain tract of land, containing 4,000 arpents, being 40 arpents in front upon Lake Erie, beginning at the southern border of Rocky river; thence, in a southern direction, down the border of Lake Erie 40 arpents, and supposed to extend to the northern bank of Sandy creek, and extending in depth by the meanders of said Rocky river 100 arpents, the southern line being of like depth, as per the plat accompanying the said claim, which also exhibits the several improvements on said tract, containing a grist-mill and saw-mill, and sundry other distinct and several improvements. Allusion is also made in the said proceedings of the former board to a deed of partition made and duly executed by the said McDougall and Meldrum, the original of which is presented to this board. An article of agreement, dated October 24, 1808, between the said McDougall and Meldrum, and duly executed by the parties, was also presented, by which it appears that an alteration in said partition was made, by which said alteration the tract now claimed belonged to the said McDougall, and of this fact the commissioners are satisfied. By virtue of the improvements made on certain parts of this large tract two tracts appear to have been confirmed, one to said McDougall and another to Meldrum, as will appear, reference being had to the proceedings of a former land board, Nos. 476 and 56. It also appears from the proceedings of said former board in November, 1805, volume 1, pages 192 and 193, that said McDougall purchased from sundry French settlers, for the sum of £102 16s., New York currency, all their right or title, by virtue of said improvements, to four several tracts, being parts of the aforesaid large tract, as fully appears upon the said record of proceedings where the conveyances of the said French settlers to said McDougall are referred to and recorded at length on pages 194 and 195 of said volume 1; these purchases being made as is there mentioned, page 193, by the said McDougall, with the view of quieting all conflicting claims and of securing to the said McDougall the undisturbed possession and title to said lands.

Claimant also adduced to this board the following additional testimony in support of his present claim to show the improvement and continued occupancy thereof as a distinct claim or tract from that heretofore confirmed.

Pierre Ducheine, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that, relative to the claim of George McDougall to a certain tract of land situate between Sandy creek and Rocky river, in the late county of Wayne, now called the county of Monroe, in said Territory, which is adjoining to, and situate above, the farm on Sandy creek aforesaid, appertaining to the heirs of Josine Linfont, now deceased, and bounded on the southeast by a tract of land confirmed to George Meldrum, deceased, that part of said tract of land so claimed by said George McDougall was occupied and improved on the border of said Sandy creek by one Alexis Guy, now deceased, as a tenant for the said George McDougall, prior to the year one thousand seven hundred and ninety-six; and that the said Guy continued in the occupation thereof, under the said George McDougall, until he was driven away from thence by the Indians at the time all the inhabitants settled in the vicinity, on the river Raisin, had to fly for their lives, shortly after the defeat of the United States troops under Colonel Lewis, at Frenchtown, during the late war with Great Britain. This deponent further saith that there was a house and other buildings then erected on said tract, and about eight or nine arpents of land then under fence and cultivation.

The commissioners having fully examined the records, papers, and proceedings of the former land board, together with all the additional evidence of title adduced to this board, and with much labor and difficulty attending the research, are fully of the opinion that, in virtue of the several distinct improvements made upon the large tract mentioned in this case, a confirmation would have been made upon this tract had claim therefor been properly entered in due time. This board would therefore respectfully recommend for confirmation by the revising power, to George McDougall, the tract of land claimed in the foregoing notice, containing 640 acres, to be located according to the claim, and specially so as to include the improvements as mentioned in the claim and testimony. But should the lands claimed have been sold prior to the time when the said McDougall shall be authorized to have the same located and surveyed, then that said claimant be allowed to locate said claim upon such of the adjacent public lands as may remain unsold. And it is further provided by this board that all the just and equitable rights of all persons whatsoever shall be, and hereby are, expressly reserved by this confirmation; and that the said McDougall shall be considered as receiving and holding the patent (if the same be ultimately confirmed to him) of the President of the United States in trust and for the use and benefit of all such persons as it may appear have the better right to all or any part of said land herein claimed and now recommended for confirmation.

No. 57.—The legal heirs and representatives of John Askin.

The legal heirs and representatives of John Askin, esquire, deceased, renew the entry made by the said John Askin with the former commissioners on the 28th day of October, 1805, recorded in volume 2, page 271, in the words following, to wit:

Take notice that I enter a tract of land called Isle Celeron, below Grosse Isle, being a small sandy island, containing, perhaps, two hundred acres, more or less, by purchase from Bpt. Reaume, in seventeen hundred and ninety-six. The deed of sale I now send you for the purpose of being recorded and to furnish you with further information respecting its situation, boundaries, and extent.

Said deed from said Reaume for said tract of land is recorded in volume 2, page 292, of the records of the former commissioners.

Testimony adduced before the former commissioners, recorded in volume 3, page 171, in the words following, to wit:

John Bpt. Reaume, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that the sandy island mentioned in claimant's notice, and known by the name of Isle Celeron, was purchased of the Indians by deponent in the year seventeen hundred and ninety; for many years previous to which period, and from that time until the present time, it has been cultivated. There are on this island two cabins, formerly built by the Indians. Deponent, for a valuable consideration, some years ago transferred the said island to the said John Askin. Deponent estimates the superficial contents of the said island at 100 arpents. A writing, purporting to be a grant of said island to said Reaume by the Pottawatomie Indians, in the year seventeen hundred and ninety-six, was also filed and recorded in volume 3, page 172, of the records of the former commissioners.

The commissioners are of opinion that the evidence of claim shown by the heirs of William Macomb, deceased, is entitled to a preference for this island, and have confirmed to the said heirs. This claim is therefore rejected.

No. 58.—Charles James Lanman, in his own right, and as guardian, &c., for the heirs of V. Solo, deceased.

Charles James Lanman, in his own right, under V. Solo, deceased, as guardian of Glaude Solo and attorney in fact for Madlin Solo and Catharine Solo, heirs of Pierre Solo, deceased.

To the register of the land office for the district of Detroit:

Take notice that, in right of Vincent Solo, deceased, and as guardian of Glaude Solo, a minor, and in behalf of Madlin Solo and Catharine Solo, all legal heirs of Pierre Solo, deceased, entry is hereby made of a tract of land situate on the north side of the river Raisin, bounded on two sides by land patented by the United States to Jaques and François Lasselle, on one side by the main street, and on the other side by land patented to the legal heirs of Pierre Solo, deceased, containing one acre, or arpent, be the same more or less.

CHARLES JAMES LANMAN,
In his own right, under V. Solo, deceased, &c.

The commissioners having fully investigated the testimony adduced before the former board in 1808, do find to their surprise, judging from the evidence spread upon their records, that the then commissioners did confirm to Jaques and François Lasselle the tract of land of which the above acre purports to have been a part. That land board appears to have had no other evidence of title in the said Lasselle to said tract than a conditional mortgage or deed by the widow of Pierre Solo of all her right; and the said widow, moreover, explicitly avowing that she had no letters of administration upon the estate of her deceased husband, Pierre Solo, or any right whatever to alien the estate of her said late husband from his children or other legal representatives; yet Jaques and François Lasselle seem to have been confirmed in said tract. The present board, under this view of the matter, are therefore of opinion that by said confirmation manifest injury was done to the said heirs or other legal representatives of Pierre Solo, inasmuch as confirmation ought in justice to have been made to them; and the only reason the present board can conjecture why confirmation was not made to the said heirs is, that it does not appear that the said heirs ever entered their claim before the said commissioners in 1808. But, further, as it appears by the allegations of the claimants only, in the succeeding entry made by Thomas Caldwell, as administrator of Jaques Lasselle, before the present board, that this lot or piece of ground was excluded by the patent issued for the said farm, although apparently confirmed by the former commissioners, the present commissioners do not feel authorized to reconfirm or recommend for confirmation this lot of ground to either of the said claimants; yet, if they were allowed to venture an opinion upon the matter, to which they have bestowed more than ordinary attention, the board would certainly incline to admit the claim of the heirs or the representatives of Pierre Solo, deceased.

No. 58.—The legal heirs and representatives of James Lasselle, deceased.

To the commissioners of the private land claims for the district of Detroit:

The legal heirs and representatives of James Lasselle, deceased, renew their claim, as heirs of said Lasselle, deceased, to a tract of land containing about one acre, more or less, and including with a centre tract of land lying on the north side of the river Raisin, in the county of Monroe, and making part of a centre farm on said river, numbered on the plan of survey 124, confirmed to James and Francis Lasselle; and which said one acre of land was excepted out of the patent, as a reservation for military purposes, by the President of the United State, under a misrepresentation made to the President in that behalf.

THOMAS CALDWELL, Administrator of James Lasselle, deceased.

(See the decision annexed to the last preceding claim, as both that and the present refer to the same lot of land.)

No. 59.—The legal heirs and representatives of Jaques Lasselle, deceased.

DETROIT, September 27, 1821.

The legal heirs and representatives of the late Jaques Lasselle, esq., deceased, claim three acres and seven perches in front by one hundred acres in depth, situate on the north border of the river Raisin, bounded in front by said river Raisin, in rear by lands of the United States, on the upper side by lands appertaining at this time to Oliver Johnson, and on the lower side by lands formerly belonging to Richard Pollard; which tract I claim by virtue of purchase, actual settlement, long possession, and valuable improvements.

THOMAS CALDWELL, Administrator de bonis non.

TESTIMONY.

Colonel Francis Navarre, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that Alexander Amittille dit Conplon was a resident on and occupied a farm situate on the north bank of the river Raisin, in the now county of Monroe, of three arpents and several perches, French measure, in front on said river, by one hundred arpents in depth, bounded above, formerly, by Israel Ruland's lands, and below by a farm which has been patented to Richard Pollard, but now the property of Mrs. Sarah Macomb, as is said, for several years before the year 1796, and for several years after, by him, the said Alexander, and others.

Jean Baptiste Cicot, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that on the twelfth day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred, he sold a lot or parcel of land, situate on the north bank of the river Raisin, to Antoine Campau, of the same place, containing three acres and several perches in front and extending in depth one hundred acres, bounded in front by said river Raisin, in rear by lands of the United States, on the upper side by lands appertaining at this time to Oliver Johnson, and on the lower side by lands formerly the property of Richard Pollard. The said deponent further saith that at the time he conveyed the above-described premises to said Antoine Campau there were about twelve or fifteen acres of land under cultivation, and so continued until the said Campau sold to one Jaques Lasselle, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ten.

Claimant, in support of his claim, produces a deed from Jean Baptiste Cicot to Antoine Campau, and also a deed from Antoine Campau to said Lasselle.

The commissioners, having examined the files of the former boards of commissioners, find that Antoine Campau, the then claimant of this tract, did, on the 31st day of October, 1805, make entry of claim to this tract of land, in the words following, to wit: Notice is hereby given that I claim title to a tract of land lying on the north-northeast side of the river Raisin, by virtue of long and uninterrupted possession had thereof by myself and those from whom title to the same is derived, as well as by reason of actual settlement and improvements made thereon. It is bounded as follows, viz: in front by said river, in rear by unlocated lands, on the upper side by lands claimed by Israel Ruland, and on the lower side by lands claimed or in possession of Mr. Richard Pollard, containing four acres or arpents, less three perches, in front by one hundred arpents in depth, it being the same sold and conveyed to me by Jean Baptiste Cicot by his deed executed and bearing date July 12, 1800. I paid him $125 for this piece of land.

ANTOINE CAMPAU.

OCTOBER 31, 1805.

Yet it does not appear, from an investigation of the proceedings of the former boards of commissioners, that this claim was ever taken into consideration by them, as no evidence of such proceedings can be found in their records. Therefore the present board are of opinion that it is properly their province at this time to consider this claim as made in due time and under the provisions of the laws, and that the above claim, entered by Thomas Caldwell in behalf of the heirs of Lasselle, ought to be considered as a renewal of the original claim; and thereupon the commissioners, believing that had this claim been taken into the consideration of the former commissioners it must then have been confirmed, and that the occupancy and improvement of the tract appear as well supported by testimony as in most instances of confirmed claims situate at the river Raisin, do therefore confirm the tract as claimed, provided the heirs thereof do not conflict with the lines of any other tract heretofore, or by the present board, confirmed; and provided, also, that the lines of said tract shall be run parallel from front to rear, and that the width in rear shall not be greater than the width in front; and provided, also, that the lines of said tract shall not interfere or conflict with the lines of any of the public lands surveyed and sold adjacent thereto; and saving, further, all the just or equitable rights of all other persons whatsoever in and to the said tract of land.

No. 60.—George McDougall.

SEPTEMBER 21, 1821.

I have the honor of enclosing herewith, for your inspection, a deed from Jeane Baptiste Cicot, sr., to me, my heirs and assigns, for three hundred acres of land, being the same land or lot numbered by the former commissioners No. 694, entered by the said Cicot with said commissioners on October 31, 1805, situate on the south side of the river Raisin, in the now county of Monroe, bounded in front by said river, in rear by the United States lands, on the west by lot No. 208, which has since been confirmed to Richard

Patterson, &c., and on the east by lands claimed by Jaques Godfroy. The proof taken by the former commissioners will show that the tract now claimed ought to have been confirmed to the said Jeane Baptiste Cicot, and his said deed to me will, I trust, entitle me to a confirmation to me, my heirs and assigns, as the assignee of the said Jeane Baptiste Cicot, and a final certificate issued accordingly

GEORGE McDOUGALL.

The COMMISSIONERS of the United States Land Office for the district of Detroit.

Jeane Baptiste Cicot's original entry of October 31, 1805, recorded in volume 3, page 98, of the records of the former commissioners, in the words and figures following, to wit:

Notice is hereby given that I claim title to the following tract of land by virtue of long and uninterrupted possession had of it, to wit: a tract of land situate on the south side of the river Raisin, containing three acres in front by one hundred acres in depth, bounded on one side by lands claimed by Gabriel Godfroy, being part of a large tract originally granted to me by the Pottawatomie Indians in June, 1786.

J. B. CICOT.

This claim was taken up November 14, 1805, by the commissioners, and recorded in volume 3, page 98, of their records. It was rejected as not founded upon any legal grant made by the French government prior to the treaty of Paris of February 10, 1763, or upon any legal grant made by the British government subsequent to the said treaty, and prior to the treaty of peace between the United States and Great Britain, or any act of Congress subsequent to said treaty.

This claim was reconsidered in volume 7, page 146, of said records, and the following testimony adduced:

Israel Ruland, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that previous to the year 1796 claimant was in possession of the premises, which he then caused to be cultivated, and has continued to do so till now, July 18, 1810. This claim was then finally postponed.

George McDougall, the present claimant, presents a deed of conveyance of the above-described tract from Jeane Baptiste Cicot, pere, dated June 25, 1821.

Satisfied of the validity of this claim upon the testimony, and that it was occupied, cultivated, and improved, according to the requisitions of the law, this board were prepared to confirm this claim; but the investigations of the board having led to the suspicion that Greely had, in a manner not sufficiently explained, comprehended the whole of this tract within his survey of the land confirmed to Gabriel Godfroy, the board deem it expedient to postpone the case for further testimony and advice.

No. 61.—The legal heirs and representatives of James McGill, deceased.

The legal heirs and representatives of James McGill renew their entry made by John Askin for and in behalf of said James McGill, entered with the former commissioners in vol. 3, page 135, which said lot was sold and assigned by said John Askin, deceased, to said James McGill, deceased; and they claim by the possession, occupancy, and improvement of the assignor, and those from whom said Askin purchased.

HUNT & LARNED,
Attorneys to the heirs and legal representatives of James McGill.

DETROIT, September 28, 1821.

Original entry.

Recorded in volume 3, page 135, of the records of the former commissioners, in the words and figures following, to wit:

John Askin, sr., in behalf of James McGill, merchant, of Montreal, claims the following tract of land, with the houses and improvements thereon, to wit:

Two and one-half acres, French measure, in front and rear by one hundred deep, on the north side of river Raisin, fronting said river, by purchase from said J. Askin, sr.

JOHN ASKIN,
For JAMES McGILL.

OCTOBER 31, 1805.

Testimony filed with the commissioners in 1821.

Francis Navarre, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that on the tract above described, entered with the former commissioners about the year 1788 or 1790, Isaac Gognier, a tenant, had a house and barn upon the farm, and cultivated about ten acres; that said Gognier lived on the premises about eight or nine years; that he was informed by said Gognier that he was about selling said land and improvements to John Askin, sr., and he was afterwards informed that he had sold the same to Mr. Askin. After the sale to Mr. Askin, different people residing near said lands cultivated them; deponent does not know whether by the permission of Mr. Askin or not.—September 28, 1821.

François Navarre, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1792 Antoine Bourgard was in possession and occupancy of a tract of land situated on the north border of the river Raisin, bounded on the west by lands belonging to Isaac Gognier, and on the east by a tract of land belonging to John Askin, deceased; and that the said Bourgard built a house and made a field of about three arpents, on which he, this deponent, has seen corn planted; and further, that the said Bourgard remained several years on the said land after July 1, 1796; and that said Bourgard claimed said land.

Dominique Drouillard, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that previous to the year 1790 he, this deponent, has a perfect knowledge that a tract of land situate on the north side of the river Raisin, of three arpents in front and one hundred and twenty arpents in rear, bounded on the west by the farm of Jaque Gognier, and on the east by the farm of Antoine Bourgard, which was then claimed by Isaac Gognier; and further, that the said Isaac occupied and improved said land for several years previous to that period, built a house, fences, &c. This deponent further states that he heard the said Gognier say that he had sold the said land to John Askin, and never to his knowledge has any other persons claimed said land, except said John Askin; and further, that all the tract of land between the said Bourgard and Joseph Hivon was considered as the property of the said John Askin, who, this deponent believes, obtained it from Charles and Baptiste Reaume.

John Anderson, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1794 deponent was on the river Raisin, and was told by Charles Reaume, then living there, that all the lands between his farm and that of Isaac Gognier, on the north side of that river, belonged to the late John Askin; and deponent further saith that about the year 1803 he was living on river Raisin, and then acting as magistrate; and further, this deponent states that Lewis Bond, of said river Raisin, was, in said year, acting as agent for the said John Askin in relation to his lands on said river, and that the said agent brought a suit against two individuals for trespassing by cutting and carrying away timber from said land, and did receive judgment against said individuals; and this deponent further saith that he understood the said Askin had disposed of the aforesaid tract of land to Isaac Todd and James McGill, and does not know, nor did he hear of any other person having any claim to said lands until a year or two past; and this deponent further saith that there were clearings on the different parts of the aforesaid tract of land; and further the deponent saith not.

The commissioners having examined with care the records of the former land boards, and not finding any evidence in support of the continued occupancy or improvement of the tract above claimed, and taking also into consideration the testimony at present adduced, do reject this claim, except so far as the rights of the claimants, in law or equity, may be maintained by the saving thereof expressed in the confirmation recommended by this board to Antoine Bourgard.

No. 62.—The legal heirs and representatives of John Askin, deceased.

The legal heirs and representatives of the late John Askin, esq., deceased, renew their entry made by the said John Askin with the former commissioners on October 28, 1805, in vol. 3, page 138, of the records of the said former commissioners, in the words following, to wit:

Three acres, French measure, in front and rear by seventy-six deep, situate in rear of the water-mill, and on the south side of the river Raisin, being the remainder of land sold George McDougall and others, belonging to said water-mill, by purchase from Louis Guillard.

In volume 4, page 98, of the records of the former commissioners, this claim was taken up and rejected.

In volume 6, page 54, of said records, this claim was again taken up, and the following testimony adduced, and also the following statement of the commissioners in said records, to wit: that this tract contains, by estimation, two hundred and twenty-eight acres.

Whereupon, Joseph Jobin, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that previous to the year seventeen hundred and ninety-six, and from that time till within one or two years before the mill was burnt, which was about six years ago, the said mill was occupied, and that Charles Reaume owned this tract as well as the mill.

The deed for said tract from said Guillard is recorded in volume 2, page 281, of said records, in rear of No. 426.

The commissioners having examined the proceedings had upon this claim before the former land boards, no additional testimony being adduced to the present board, great difficulty being found in identifying clearly the tract, and no sufficient and continued possession being satisfactorily shown, feel themselves obliged to reject the same.

No. 63.—The legal heirs and representatives of John Askin, deceased.

The legal heirs and representatives of John Askin, esq., deceased, renew their entry to a tract of land situate on the river Raisin, and entered with the former commissioners on October 28, 1805, in volume 3, page 138, described as follows:

Two acres, French measure, in front and rear by eighty deep, situate on the north side of the river Raisin, in the rear of forty acres deep, sold at public auction, then the property of Etienne Latour dit Bellair, (in rear of 210.)

This claim was taken up in volume 4, page 98, of the records of the former commissioners, and rejected.

Testimony filed with the commissioners in 1821.

François Navarre, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he has a perfect knowledge that the lot now numbered 210, on the north side of the river Raisin, was cultivated and improved long previous to the year 1796, and that it has continued to be cultivated up to this period; that it was occupied by Joseph Cicere previous to the year 1796, who held it of John Askin, and was occupied for many years by the late John Askin, jr., son to the aforesaid John Askin.

FRANÇOIS NAVARRE.

DETROIT, September 28, 1821.

The commissioners, on examining the claim above alluded to, No. 210, find that all the land there claimed was confirmed to James McGill, assignee of said Askin, and did doubtless embrace all the improvements, as neither occupancy nor cultivation was then or is to this board shown by present claimant to have been made upon the claim now under consideration. This claim is therefore rejected.

No. 64.—The legal heirs and representatives of John Askin, deceased.

The legal heirs and representatives of John Askin, esq., deceased, renew the entry made by the said John Askin, deceased, with the former commissioners on October 28, 1805, recorded in volume 3, page 138, of the records of the former commissioners, in the words and figures following, to wit:

Three acres, French measure, in front and rear by one hundred deep, situate on the south side of the river Raisin, fronting on said river, by purchase from Charles Reaume.

Testimony, volume 3, page 172.

Joseph Jobin, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that this tract was occupied as long since as seventeen hundred and ninety-three or four; six or seven arpents were then cultivated. Since that time this tract has been continually occupied by claimant, and those from whom he derives title. A deed of conveyance from Charles Reaume to the claimant, and a deed of conveyance from Charles Baron to the claimant, each dated July 7, 1796, were also read as evidence of the said claim.—(Vide vol. 2, folios 283, 285; vide vol. 7, page 164.)

Upon a full view of all the testimony this board have been able to glean from the remains of the mutilated records of former boards to which access can now be had, they find: 1st, much uncertainty in the location and identification of the tract; 2d, that testimony of continued possession from July 1, 1796, to March, 1807, is not so clearly and positively proved as to leave the board free from all doubt. Nevertheless, considering that since the original filing of the claim the claimant has died, leaving representatives whose residence is remote from this tract, and who, it may fairly be presumed, were never conversant with the premises; and considering, also, the difficulties presented by the dilapidated condition of the books, papers, and maps which have relation to the subject, and which, if they were perfect, would sufficiently illustrate the claim; and considering it to have been fully made out that this tract was constantly occupied, cultivated, and improved by the ancestor of the present claimants from before 1796 to 1805, and that the same tract was also under cultivation in 1810, without any evidence of intermediate abandonment, the commissioners do not feel justified in rejecting it. This claim is therefore confirmed, according to the boundaries and description given thereof in the claim, subject to the conditions and restrictions following, that is to say, that the lines thereof be not so run as to conflict with the lines of any other tract whatsoever which may have been confirmed by this or any former board of commissioners; that the width thereof be not greater than three arpents, nor its depth from the river exceed eighty arpents, French measure, nor the contents thereof exceed two hundred and forty square French arpents, nor be located so as to comprehend any other than the improvements specified in the testimony exhibited by claimants.

No. 65.—The legal heirs and representatives of John Askin, deceased.

The legal heirs and representatives of John Askin, esq., deceased, renew the entry made by the said John Askin with the former commissioners, on October 28, 1805, in vol. 3, page 138, of the records of the former commissioners, in the words following, to wit:

Six acres, French measure, in front and rear by one hundred deep, situate on the north side of the river Raisin, and fronting on said river, by purchase from Jeane Bpt. Reaume.

This claim was taken up in volume 4, page 98, and rejected. (In rear of Nos. 443 and 434.)

The deed for said tract is recorded in volume 2, page 283, of said records.

The commissioners do not find that any testimony was adduced in support of this claim either before the former or present commissioners; it is therefore rejected.

No. 66.—The legal heirs and representatives of John Askin, deceased.

The legal heirs and representatives of the late John Askin, deceased, renew the entry made by the said John Askin before the former commissioners, in volume 3, page 138, of the records of the former commissioners, in the words and figures following, to wit:

Six acres, French measure, in front and rear by one hundred deep, situate on the north side of the river Raisin, and fronting on said river, by exchange from John Askin, jr.

Volume 3, page 375, the claim, being fully examined by the commissioners, was rejected.

The deed for said tract is recorded in volume 2, page 285, of said records.

Testimony adduced before the former commissioners in December, 1805, recorded in volume 3, page 375, in the words and figures following, to wit:

John Askin, jr., being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1796 this deponent was on this tract, and saw about four acres enclosed and planted. The dwelling-house was not entirely finished.

This claim not being sufficiently supported by the evidence adduced to former boards, and no testimony in support thereof being adduced to the present board, is rejected.

No. 67.—John Anderson.

To the United States land commissioners for the district of Detroit:

John Anderson, of the river Raisin, respectfully showeth: That he has for a long time improved and occupied a tract of land upon the north side of the river Raisin, bounded in front by lot No. 53, upon the map of the river Raisin, east by the United States lands claimed by Robert Navarre, west by lands patented to Joseph Dazet and by land patented to Jaques and François Lasselle, and north by United States lands; said tract so claimed containing four arpents in front and sixty acres in depth, it being the rear of the farm now occupied by the said John Anderson. He therefore prays, should the evidence of his occupancy be deemed sufficient, that this claim may be allowed.

CHAS. JAS. LANMAN, For JOHN ANDERSON.

For the decision of the commissioners see it annexed to the next succeeding claim of Robert Navarre, where the board express their want of authority, under the acts of Congress, to confirm this species of claims.

No. 68.—Robert Navarre.

To the United States commissioners sitting to decide upon land claims within the district of Detroit:

The claim of Robert Navarre, of the river Raisin, respectfully showeth: That he has for a long time occupied a tract of land upon the north side of the river Raisin, bounded in front by the farm of said Robert, numbered on the map of private claims fifty-eight, east by lands patented to Jaques and François Lasselle, west by lands of the United States claimed by John Anderson, and north by United States lands; the said tract of land being the rear of said Robert's farm, and contains four acres in front and sixty deep. He therefore prays, should the evidence of his occupancy be deemed sufficient, that his claim for said tract be allowed.

CHARLES JAS. LANMAN, For ROBERT NAVARRE.

Testimony for Anderson and Navarre's claim in 1821.

Isidore Navarre, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he is well acquainted with the farms of Robert Navarre and of John Anderson, which were deeded by the Indians to said Robert Navarre and François Hurton Navarre, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-six; and that the said François Hurton Navarre sold to said Anderson, in the year one thousand eight hundred and two, and that the said Anderson and Robert Navarre have kept up the possession since that date until the present time; and deponent also knows that said Anderson and Robert Navarre have occupied and improved beyond the forty arpents granted by the United States to said Anderson and Robert Navarre, by mowing hay and cutting of timber, and that deponent knows of no other claim to said land; and the said farms are of eight arpents in width and about eighty arpents long, the same length of the farms confirmed to James and François Lasselle on both sides.

The depositions of Alexander Labadie and Joseph Robert, to the same purport as the foregoing, were also adduced in testimony.

It appears to this board, on an examination of the claim of John Anderson, confirmed by a former board in 1807, that the said claimant was then confirmed in the whole quantity there claimed, and that the surveyor of said claims did survey the said tract according thereto. However just and equitable it would seem to be that the provisions of the act of Congress allowing donations as back concessions should be extended to the inhabitants at river Raisin, and however necessary to the full enjoyment of their farms such back concessions may be, yet, as no such provision can be found, this board feel obliged to disaffirm this claim; at the same time the board ventures to express the hope that the liberality of Congress will, at no distant period, be so extended to this meritorious portion of our ancient settlements.

The claim of Robert Navarre above involves the same principles, and the testimony adduced being the same, the decision, therefore, of the board is similar, and his claim cannot be confirmed.

No. 69.—Heirs and legal representatives of William Knaggs, by Whitmore Knaggs.

To the register of the land office at Detroit:

SIR: Whitmore Knaggs, in behalf of the heirs and legal representatives of William Knaggs, deceased, renews their entry of claim to a certain tract of land situate upon the north border of river Raisin, adjoining (on the upper side) a certain tract of land formerly claimed by George McDougall, and (on the lower side) by lands formerly claimed by Israel Ruland, containing, by estimation, six arpents in front by one hundred and twenty in depth, and, in support thereof, files a deed from Israel Ruland, duly executed and dated October 20, 1801, transferring.

The commissioners, in review of this case, have examined, so far as the imperfect records now remaining of former land boards admit, and are not able to find any former entry of claim for this tract of land. This board is, however, impressed with the belief of the probability that this claim may have been heretofore entered, as is stated in the preceding notice. The board is further impressed with the belief that the continued occupancy and improvement of this tract is susceptible of being satisfactorily established, and that the present claimants are minor children, without father or mother, or other competent representative to attend to their interests; and that, therefore, no evidence has been adduced showing that continued occupancy and improvement. Under these circumstances this board feel unwilling to reject this claim, but would respectfully recommend it to the attention of the revising authority.

No. 70.—Lewis Bond, administrator to the estate of Israel Ruland.

Lewis Bond, administrator on the estate of Israel Ruland, renews the entry made by the late Israel Ruland, bounded as described in vol. 6, page 138, dated Detroit, September 20, 1808; said entry and claim is numbered 559, and testimony adduced by claimant, and said claim postponed, and no final decision had upon it.

HUNT & LARNED, Attorneys of said Lewis Bond, administrator.

Original entry of said Israel Ruland.

DETROIT, December 20, 1808.

SIR: Please to take notice that I now make entry in your office of my land lying on the southerly and northerly border of Salt river, in the district of Huron and Territory of Michigan, consisting of thirty-two acres in front, bounded by said river on the southerly side, and extending back nearly a southwesterly course the distance of twenty acres, bounded on both sides and rear by lands claimed by Meldrum and Park, which I claim by virtue of a deed bearing date the 29th day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eight; also one tract on the north side of said river, bounded in front by said river, of five acres in front by twenty in depth, bounded on the easterly side by lands of George Meldrum, on the northerly and westerly side by uncultivated lands; all of which I claim by virtue of purchase and improvements.

ISRAEL RULAND.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Testimony recorded with said claim in said volume 6, page 138, of the records of said commissioners.

Jeane Bpt. Nontoy, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that previous to July 1, 1796, said tract was improved for about a year; that in 1797 he (the deponent) went and lived there and remained there five or six months; that about five or six years since deponent was on the premises and saw thereon three or four persons; that at the time the deponent was on the premises there were old houses there, and that he helped to build new ones, and cleared three or four acres; deponent knows that about six years ago John Dugard was on the premises, had built two new houses, and had repaired an old one for the claimant.

The commissioners find no testimony in proof of the continued occupancy or improvement of this tract. The claim is therefore rejected.

AUGUST 2, 1821.

Take notice that I now enter my claim, heretofore entered with the former commissioners in 1805, recorded in vol. 3, page 202, in the words following, to wit:

Five arpents in front by forty in depth, containing two hundred arpents, which I purchased from Joseph Hyogue, situate on the north side of Otter creek, bounded in front by said Otter creek, in rear by river Raisin farms, on the east by François Belcour's farm, and on the west by unlocated lands. I claim by virtue of actual improvement, &c.—1805.

JOSEPH JOBIN.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

TESTIMONY.

Dominique Drouillard, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that F. Belcour purchased a tract of land of the Indians in the year 1794, situated on the river Aux Loutre, (Otter creek,) and on the north side of said creek; and in the year 1795 F. Belcour sold said land to Joseph Hyogue; and in the fall of the same year Joseph Jobin built a house on said tract; and in the year 1796 he assisted said Joseph Jobin to cut timber on said land, and to build a grist-mill.

Louis Monimy, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the winter of the year 1795 he assisted in measuring a tract of land belonging to F. Belcour, of fifteen or twenty arpents in width, on the north border of the river Aux Loutre, and joining the rear of the farms of the river Raisin; bounded on the east side by the farms then belonging to Jaques Jacob, and on the west by unconceded lands; and at the same time he assisted to build a small log-house; and further, that in the year 1798 he assisted Joseph Jobin, who then claimed said land, to cut and haul logs to build a house, and timber for a grist-mill; and this deponent further states that the land above claimed by Joseph Jobin, on Otter creek, as above stated, has been in the possession of the said Joseph Jobin since 1796, and that no other person or persons have ever claimed other than said Jobin, the present claimant.

Hiacynth La Joi, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1796 he assisted said Joseph Jobin to cut and haul timber to build a grist-mill on said Jobin's tract of land above described; and that the said Jobin has been in the possession and occupancy of said tract since 1796.

Dominique Drouillard further swears, in addition to his above testimony, that the land above described has been occupied by the said Jobin since the year 1796, except during the late war; and that he knows of no other claimant to the said tract than the said Jobin.

Upon consideration of the testimony above submitted, together with the entry made and testimony adduced to a former board, the commissioners decide that claimant be confirmed in the tract claimed, bounded as follows: on the south by a continuation of the rear line of the claim No. 411, heretofore confirmed to Louis Pierre Le Clerc, and a continuation thereof to a point where the same shall intersect the western line of No. 365, heretofore confirmed to Amable Bellou; thence in a northeasterly direction to Otter creek, and across said creek; thence down stream to a point where the western line of the claim No. 401, confirmed heretofore to Jeane Baptiste Conture, intersects said creek; thence northeasterly, upon said line of No. 401, to the northwardly corner thereof; thence in a westwardly direction to the intersection and upon the rear lines of claims Nos. 539, 208, and 511, heretofore confirmed to Gabriel Godfroy, sr., Richard Pattinson, and Antoine Robert, until its intersection with the eastern lateral line of claim No. 411, above mentioned; thence in a southwardly direction, and upon the said eastern line thereof, to the place of beginning. Provided, however, expressly, that the said tract, so bounded as aforesaid, shall not exceed the quantity claimed, to wit, two hundred arpents, exclusive of fifteen acres heretofore confirmed to said Joseph Jobin by virtue of a pre-emption right, and which fifteen acres it is intended the surveyor shall exclude from his survey and plat thereof, to be returned to the register of the land office at Detroit, that the same may be excluded from his certificate, and, consequently, from the patent to be issued thereon. And should the boundary lines designated as aforesaid contain more than 200 arpents, after excluding the aforesaid fifteen acres, then it is decided by this board that the surplus, whatever it may be, shall be excluded from the northern or northeastern end of this tract, and next adjoining upon the rear lines of the river Raisin tracts. And it is further decided that the lines of this tract shall be so run as not to interfere with the lines of any lands heretofore or by this board confirmed. And it is also recommended that should the lands herein claimed, or any part thereof, have been sold prior to the time when claimant shall be authorized to have the same surveyed and returned, then that said Joseph Jobin be allowed to locate the said claim, or such part thereof as may have been sold, upon other lands in the vicinity which may have been offered at sale and remain unsold.

No. 72.—Jeane Baptiste Rousson, for the heirs of François Paul Campau, deceased.

To the register of the land office at Detroit:

Take notice that I renew the entry made with the former commissioners December 28, 1808, by Jeane Baptiste Rousson, recorded in volume — of the records of the former commissioners, in the words and figures following, to wit:

[NOTE.—The following notice is found upon the old files of commissioners, but seems never to have been recorded upon their journal of proceedings.]

DECEMBER 28, 1808.

SIR: Take notice that we claim title to a tract of land situate on river Aux Loutre, containing six arpents in front by about twenty-five in depth; bounded in front by said river Aux Loutre, on one side by lands of Joseph Monimy, and on the other side by lands of Joseph Drouillard. We claim by virtue of possession, and occupancy, and improvement, made by our late father, deceased, or those from whom he derived title.

JEANE BPT. ROUSSON,
For the heirs of François Paul Campau.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Testimony filed with the commissioners in eighteen hundred and twenty-one.

Catharine Roe Rousson, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that François Paul Campau was in possession of the farm claimed by his heirs previous to the arrival of General Wayne's army, and that the family continued to occupy and possess the said farm until the death of the said François Paul; that after his death the widow of said Campau immediately became very sick and incapable of cultivating the farm; that the long-continued sickness of her husband had deprived them of all means of support; that she had eight children, the eldest of whom, except a daughter, who was then married, was but eight years of age; that, nevertheless, she continued on the farm about one year after the death of her husband, at the end of which time, from absolute want, she was obliged to put out her children, and hire herself out, in order to obtain a living; that she never abandoned the farm voluntarily, nor did she ever intend to abandon her claim, although the necessities above stated obliged her to leave it for a short time; and having afterwards married Jeane Baptiste Rousson, she could not return to the farm; and further, on account of her former sickness, misery, poverty, and hardships, she labored for some years under complete mental derangement; that her children being bound to service, could not, until they were free, occupy or improve the said farm; that sometime during the late war her house was burnt, as she believes, by the Indians, and that their poverty has not allowed them to build since. It is a matter of general notoriety that this land is claimed by these heirs, and that frequent applications have been made to them for the purchase thereof; that no other person has ever claimed this land; no one resides on said tract at present. This farm is bounded by Otter creek in front, and the Plaisance settlement in rear, on one side by Joseph Monimy, and on the other side by Joseph Drouillard.

François Robert, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he recollects of François Paul Campau being in possession of the tract of land claimed by his heirs, and that he died thereon; and that after his death the widow, on account of sickness, poverty, &c., left the place; and further, that there was a house on said place, which he afterwards understood was burnt; and further, that there were ten acres cleared on said tract.

Antoine Guie, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1796 François Paul Campau, deceased, occupied and possessed a tract of land on the north border of the river Aux Loutre, until the year one thousand eight hundred and four, at which time the said Campau died. Deponent further states that the said tract or farm is six arpents in width, running back to the Plaisance settlements; bounded on the west by Baptiste Drouillard, and on the east by my own land.

Louis Lavigne, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that François Paul Campau was in possession and improved a tract of land on the north border of the river Aux Loutre, in 1796; bounded on the west by the farm of Baptiste Drouillard, on the east by Antoine Guie's farm, and in the rear by the Plaisance settlements; said farm being six arpents in width in front and rear; that said Campau occupied the land until the year 1804, when he died.

Baptiste Rousson, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that about fourteen or fifteen years ago he and several other persons attended on the land board, and entered a tract of land on which the said François Paul Campau resided previous to his death, and which he had occupied since the year 1796, until the time of his death in 1804; and that the aforesaid tract of land was six arpents in width, and bounded in rear by the Plaisance farms; and further, that he entered the said tract or farm with the late Peter Audrain, register, in the name of Paul F. Campau, and the heirs of the late Campau, and, at the same time, paid him the office fees.

The commissioners confirm the above claim to the heirs of François Paul Campau, provided that the lines thereof be so run as not to interfere with the lines of any lands heretofore, or by this board, confirmed; and provided also that the said tract do not exceed six arpents in front upon Otter creek, nor, in the whole, 300 acres.

No. 73.—Antoine Guie.

To the register of the land office at Detroit:

Take notice that I renew my entry made before the former commissioners December 6, 1808, recorded in volume —, page —, of the records of the former commissioners, in the words and figures following, to wit:

DETROIT, December 6, 1808.

SIR: Take notice that I now enter with the commissioners of the land office at Detroit my claim to a tract of land situate on the river Aux Loutre, of six arpents in front by twenty-nine in depth, bounded in front by Otter creek, in rear by Midord Coutre, on one side by Antoine Lafontaine, and on the other side by unlocated lands. I claim by virtue of occupancy, possession, and improvements made by me, and those under whom I derive title.

his
mark.

Witness: PETER AUDRAIN.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Testimony filed with the commissioners in 1821.

Louis Lavigne, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1796 Antoine Guie lived on a tract of land on the north border of the river Aux Loutre, bounded on the west by land occupied by François Campau, deceased, on the east by land patented to Antoine Bernard, and at present belonging to Philip Lecuyer, and in rear by the Plaisance farms; and further, that some of said land was fenced and sowed with grain, and that said claimant kept possession of the same until the year 1809.

Baptiste Drouillard, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1795 Antoine Guie was living at Otter creek or a La rivière Aux Loutre, on a farm situated on the north border of said creek, bounded on the west by the farm of François Campau, deceased, on the east by a farm patented to Antoine Bernard, being six arpents in front, and joining on the rear of the farms of the settlements of Plaisance; and this deponent further saith that the said Guie cultivated and remained on it; he had a house on said tract, and planted corn and kept possession, and had improvements continually until 1808.

The commissioners, upon examination of the files of the former register, find that the above entry was duly made and filed, and do therefore confirm the above tract of land to Antoine Guie, as claimed in his notice, saving, however, all the just or equitable claims of others therein, to be located and bounded as follows: in front by Otter creek, (otherwise called river Aux Loutre,) being six arpents in front on said creek, and of the same width in rear; on the lower or eastern side by the line of a tract heretofore confirmed and patented to Antoine Bernard, in rear by the farms of Plaisance settlement, and on the west by lands not heretofore confirmed, and containing, by estimation, one hundred and eighty arpents: provided, always, that the lines of said tract be so run as not to interfere with the lines of any tract confirmed by this or any former board, and provided, also, that the same do not conflict with the lines of any tract which may have been sold by the government; and if, contrary to the belief of this board, said tract should be found to have been so sold or confirmed to others, then that the said claimant be permitted to locate the same number of (one hundred and eighty) arpents upon any tract of public land in the vicinity of this claim which may have been surveyed and offered for sale, and which may remain unsold.

No. 74.—Baptiste Drouillard.

Jeane Bpt. Drouillard renews his claim, heretofore filled with a former register of the land office, in the words and figures following, to wit:

DETROIT, October 30, 1808.

SIR: Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situate on Otter creek, containing four arpents in front, and extending in depth to the lands of the settlement of Plaisance; bounded in front by the said Otter creek, on one side by Joseph Monimy, and on the other side by lands (now) claimed by François Campau. I claim by virtue of possession, occupancy, and improvement made by me or those from whom I derive title.

ANTOINE LASSELLE, JR.,
For BAPTISTE DROUILLARD.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Testimony filed with the commissioners in 1821.

Louis Lavigne, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1785 Baptiste Drouillard was living on the north side of river Aux Loutre on a farm; that he then, and has always since that time, claimed it; being four arpents in front on said river, and bounded on the rear by lands of Plaisance, on the west side by the land patented to Joseph Monimy, and on the east by land claimed by François Campau; and that the said Drouillard cultivated and occupied the same until the year 1810; and this deponent further saith that no other person, to his knowledge, ever claimed said land.

Antoine Guie, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1795 Baptiste Drouillard occupied a tract of land situate on the north side of the river Aux Loutre of four arpents in width on said river, and bounded in rear by the Plaisance farms, on the west by the farm patented to Monimy, and on the other side by lands claimed by François Campau.

The commissioners confirm this tract to Jeane Baptiste Drouillard, as claimed in the above notice, viz: four arpents in front upon Otter creek, and the same width in rear, bounded on the east by lands claimed by François Campau, on the west by lands patented to Joseph Monimy, in rear by the settlement or farms called Plaisance, and being, as is supposed, about thirty arpents in depth from front to rear; provided, however, that the lines of this tract be so run as not to interfere with the lines of lands heretofore or by this board confirmed; and provided, also, that it shall not exceed in quantity two hundred acres in the whole.

No. 75.—Abner Cooley.

To the register of the land office at Detroit:

Take notice that I, Abner Cooley, of Monroe county, do hereby make claim and renew the entry heretofore made by François dit Eutreau Navarre, from whom I derive title, to a certain tract of land described in the original notice of Navarre, recorded in volume 3, page 386, of the proceedings of a former land board, in the words following, to wit:

THURSDAY, December 5, 1805.

The claim of François dit Eutreau Navarre was taken up for consideration, and the notice by him filed with the register of the land office being read, in the words and figures following, to wit:

RIVER RAISIN, October 21, 1805.

François E. Navarre, of Plaisance, hereby gives notice, by George McDougall, his agent, to George Hoffman, esq., register of the land office at Detroit, that he makes entry and claim to a certain tract of land situate, lying, and being on the south side of the creek whereon Lieutenant Colonel François Navarre's mill stands, on the south side of river Raisin, of twelve arpents width in front and rear by about thirty acres in depth, terminating à La Grande Coolie; bounded in front by said mill creek, in rear by Plaisance farms, on the east by lands bordering on the bay of l'Isle à la Savatte, which empties into Lake Erie, and on the west by Jaques Navarre's farm. The said E. Navarre claims the above tract by right of occupancy since the last year, having planted, fenced, sowed, and reaped corn on six acres thereof; he has built a house thereon; and also by virtue of the uninterrupted possession and improvement of the aforesaid tract until the present time.

GEORGE McDOUGALL.
For FRANCIS E. NAVARRE.

Testimony adduced before the commissioners in 1805, in the words and figures following, to wit:

Israel Ruland was brought forward as a witness in behalf of the claimant, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that the said François settled, previously to the year 1787, at Navarre's creek, on the south side of the river Raisin; and at this time there are on the premises a dwelling-house, storehouse, barn, and some other out-houses, together with a small orchard, and a cultivation of about thirty or thirty-six apents. The premises have been constantly occupied.

Testimony filed with the commissioners in 1821.

Pierre Bourdeaux, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that this tract was improved before 1790 by Charles Soudriette, who had a house thereon, and an improvement of about fifteen or twenty acres at that time. Charles Soudriette sold to the witness, who sold to Robert Navarre, and Robert Navarre, in presence of this witness, sold to the present claimant one year ago last fall. Charles Soudriette lived on said farm two or three years; but, having no cattle on said farm to work it, he rented a farm where he got cattle to work the rented farm, and also his own, that is, the farm now claimed, and continued to cultivate this farm until he sold it to witness; and that this farm has been occupied from that time to this.

Joseph Reaume, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that twenty-nine years ago he saw Joseph Chouter, sen., on this farm, and he continued thereon two years; that he has heard of a number of others working on said farm, and has heard that the present claimant bought this tract, and that said claimant now lives on the tract claimed by him.

Pierre Bourdeaux, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that Francis Eutrope Navarre and Robert Navarre, the father and son, bought this tract of land now claimed by Abner Cooley, on which said Cooley now lives, from the witness, in partnership, four years ago. This deponent was not present when said Navarres (father and son) sold to Abner Cooley, but they told this deponent that they had sold to said Cooley. Deponent knows that the tract was delivered to said Cooley, and that the purchase money was delivered to said Navarres.

Peter Bourdeaux, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that the tract of land now claimed by Abner Cooley is twelve acres fronting the forks of Navarre's creek, and southerly, in depth, until it intersects Plaisance creek, thirty acres, more or less.

The commissioners confirm this tract to Abner Cooley as claimed, provided that the said claim shall be so located as to front twelve arpents in width on the forks of Navarre's creek, in accordance with the testimony, extending in depth until the lines intersect Plaisance settlement on the Grand Coolie, (so called,) being computed a distance of thirty arpents, more or less; and provided also that the lines be so run as to embrace the improvements of said Cooley, as described in the testimony, and so as not to interfere with lines of any other tract heretofore or by the present board confirmed, and so as not to contain, in the whole, more than three hundred and sixty arpents.

No. 76.—The legal heirs and representatives of John Askin, deceased.

AUGUST 14, 1821.

The legal heirs and representatives of John Askin, deceased, renew the claim made to a certain tract of land situate at a place called Presque Isle, at the entrance of Miami river, by said John Askin, before the former commissioners of the land office November 19, 1805, and registered in volume 3, page 138, the quantity of land not ascertained, but not to exceed six hundred and forty acres; said tract being claimed by possession and improvement of Joseph Reaume previous to July 1, 1796, and until December 30, 1796, when the said John Askin purchased the same of said Joseph Reaume, and said Askin continued in occupation.

Said tract is numbered 233; and testimony was adduced by the claimant, which is recorded in volume 5, page 2, where it seems they confirmed the said tract to the said claimant, which entry of confirmation appears to have been subsequently erased, and the word "postponed" written above the erasure in volume 7, page 103. The said former commissioners reconsidered the said claim, and thereupon made the following claim or entry, to wit:

"And thereupon it doth appear to the commissioners that this tract of land is not within their district."

Original entry recorded in volume 2, page 272, and volume 3, page 138, of the records of the former commissioners, in the words and figures following, to wit:

Take notice that I make entry and claim title to a tract of land supposed to contain about one thousand acres, with the improvements, situated at a place called Presque Isle, at the entrance of the Miami river, on the left side going up, by purchase from Joseph Reaume. The deed of conveyance for said tract from said Reaume is recorded in volume 2, page 289.

JOHN ASKIN.

NOVEMBER 19, 1805.

Testimony adduced before the commissioners in 1821.

John Anderson, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that, to the best of his recollection, previous to the year 1796 Jean Baptiste Reaume and Martin Nadau were living at a place called Presque Isle, on the Miami river, on which they had buildings, fences, and improvements; and that he understood from the said Reaume that he had sold the said tract of land aforementioned to John Askin. Deponent further saith that Pierre Lagothier occupied some of said land. And further, for nineteen years François Eutrope Navarre has occupied part of the same tract. Deponent further saith that he does not know of any other person having any claim to the tract at Presque Isle but the aforesaid John Askin.

The commissioners have suspended this claim with the view of giving time to claimants to adduce further testimony in support thereof.

No. 77.—The legal heirs and representatives of the late John Askin, deceased.

The legal heirs and representatives of the late John Askin, deceased, renew the entry made by the said John Askin with the said commissioners October 28, 1805, in volume 2, page 273, and also in volume 3, page 139, of the former commissioners.

Original entry.

Thirty acres, French measure, in front, going up the right hand side of the Miami river, setting off from a small river opposite an island, and extending, in depth, to a place called Swan creek, by purchase from Charles Reaume. The deed for said tract from said Charles Reaume is recorded in volume 2, page 293.

The commissioners, having examined all the records of proceedings of former boards, do not find any testimony in support of the foregoing claim; and no additional testimony being adduced to the present board, this claim is rejected.

FRIDAY, June 22, 1821.

Martin Nadau renews his entry of claim on file in the register's office, bearing date December 29, 1804, to a certain tract of land situate upon the south bank of the Miami river, bounded and described as in the testimony in support thereof herewith adduced.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Original entry.

SIR: Take notice that I now enter with the commissioners of the land office at Detroit my claim to a tract of land situated on the south side of the Miami river, containing six arpents in front by one hundred and twenty in depth.

PETER AUDRAIN, For MARTIN NADAU.

GEORGE HOFFMAN, Esq., Register of the Land Office at Detroit.

Theophilus Mettez, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that before General Wayne's army came to this country, twenty-eight years ago, I stayed all night for several nights in the house of Martin Nadau, upon the lands now claimed by Nadau; said Nadau lived upon this land until a year or two after the witness first saw him thereon, and for a year or two after General Wayne came to this country, and then removed. The witness does not know that Nadau ever returned to live upon this land; one Konson lived on the land for a short time after Nadau removed, but soon left it. The witness does not know that any person ever lived upon this land since.

Joseph Reaume, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that twenty-eight years since I saw Martin Nadau living upon the land. This tract is situated upon the left bank of the Miami river of Lake Erie, as you go up stream, and above a small stream emptying into the Miami. Nadau lived upon this farm perhaps three and a half years or more, and then removed. Nadau never lived upon this land since that time. About eight years ago François dit Eutrope Navarre built a house thereon, the old house being rotten, and has lived there until the present time.

The commissioners are of opinion that continued occupancy and improvement, as required by law in order to authorize a confirmation, is not shown by the testimony in this case; the claim of Martin Nadau is therefore rejected.

BOOK No. 5.

Report supplementary.

The commissioners appointed by the act of May 11, 1820, were unanimously of the opinion that the strong equity presented in many of the cases embraced in the following report required the board to take notice of them in some shape. All claims not filed under the law of 1817, or previous to that time, the board were convinced could not be noticed by them under sanction of the law of 1820. No legal report of them could therefore be made. The board, however, deemed it an imperious duty which they owed to this meritorious class, the French native inhabitants of our Territory, to present their claims. They therefore unanimously agreed to receive them, and receive, hear, and report the testimony adduced in support thereof, believing that the liberal views of the government, and what the board considered their true policy, would induce a confirmation by Congress of all such claims as a careful investigation of each should induce the commissioners to recommend. This the board were led the more readily to believe when the small number of this class of claimants is taken into view; and that, in many instances, it is clearly shown that either the minority of the claimants or total ignorance of the provisions or even existence of former laws enacted for their benefit prevented previous applications for those benefits, or any entry whatever of their claims. Under these circumstances the undersigned would respectfully repeat the earnest hope that the claims recommended by the board for confirmation may meet a favorable reception by the government, and that measures may be adopted for securing those lands to the respective claimants by legal titles.

The commissioners would further beg to repeat the desire that the act confirming the foregoing, and all other acts of their board, may be so framed as to save the rights of all conflicting parties; for they are aware that in some instances there are contending claimants, upon whose conflicting rights they did not deem it necessary nor within their province to adjudge, designing that another tribunal, more competent, should decide to whose benefit a patent, when granted, should enure, or, ultimately, to whom, in equity, the better right pertains.

The undersigned would also respectfully submit to the revising power the propriety of causing to be withholden from sale such of the public lands now in market as may have been recommended by the board for confirmation, until the final decision thereon by the proper authority be made known.

J. KEARSLEY,
WM. WOODBRIDGE, Commissioners.

TERRITORY OF MICHIGAN, ss:

I do hereby certify that the preceding five manuscript pages contain a true copy of the original documents of the land board at Detroit, and that the following pages, numbered from 7 to 42, inclusive, contain true abstracts from the records of the proceedings and decisions of the said land board, made and had under the provisions of the act of Congress of May 11, 1820, the same having been by me carefully collated, copied, and compared.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand this 11th day of February, 1824.

WARNER WING, Clerk of the said board.

No. 1.—Victor Morass.

AUGUST 30, 1820.

SIR: Take notice that the heirs of Antoine Morass, of Detroit, and Territory of Michigan, now enter with the commissioners of the land office at Detroit their claim to a tract of land situated on the south border of the river Delude, containing six hundred and forty acres, to be laid out in a square form, bounded in front by said river, and on the lower side by the Chippewa reservations. We claim and make title by virtue of possession and occupancy previous and since the year 1796.

JAMES McCLOSKEY, in behalf of the heirs.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

TESTIMONY.

Pierre Bonhomme, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in 1798 he was in the employ of Antoine Morass, on river Delude; that said Morass had possession of said tract above mentioned; that there was a saw-mill erected on said tract, and was then in operation.—March 17, 1821.

John Bpt. Deschamps, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that twenty-five or twenty-six years ago the above-mentioned tract was improved by Antoine Morass. Deponent is confident that the English government still existed here, and that there were about five or six acres of land under improvement, and a mill had been erected on said tract; that said Morass' family lived on said tract. Witness left the place soon after, but has understood that said Morass continued for many years to reside on said tract.—September 20, 1821.

Ignace Morass, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that Antoine Morass, deponent's father, at least twenty-nine years ago built a mill on Goose creek, on the tract in question, and enclosed about four or five acres, and continued to occupy and, for a greater part of the time, live on said place about sixteen years.—September 20, 1821.

Pierre Brondemone, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that about twenty-six years ago he was in the employ of Pierre Bonhomme, and was present when Antoine Morass, deceased, measured and delivered the land that he, Bonhomme, purchased of him, which was the same that was granted to François Bonhomme; that the said Pierre also wished to purchase the land lying south of it, but was informed by Mr. Morass that he wished him to pay for the one just sold him, but, in the meantime, he would think further of it; that when Bonhomme returned from Detroit he told witness he had purchased the other also, but witness never heard any other person say so, and does not know whether he purchased it or not; he further says that he never knew any other person as the real owner but Antoine Morass, deceased.—September 19, 1821.

Claimant, in further evidence in support of the preceding claim, produced to the commissioners a deed of conveyance, dated June 23, 1815, duly signed and executed by all his brothers and sisters, and their husbands or wives, in which they convey and quit-claim, for a valuable consideration, all their right, title, and interest of, in, or to, the foregoing and several other tracts of land, and of all the property which they claim as heirs of Antoine Morass, deceased, and asks that confirmation thereof may be made to him individually, and not to the heirs generally.

And thereupon the commissioners decide that a part of this land, which is embraced in the public surveys, has been sold, being 107.84 acres thereof. The commissioners recommend the residue for confirmation to Victor Morass, especially as it would seem that the reason why this claim was not made at an earlier period was the death of the elder Morass, and the minority of his heirs. The tract now recommended for confirmation is the residue of the same section, being five hundred and thirty-two and fourteen-hundredths acres, (532.14)

AUGUST 30, 1821.

SIR: Take notice that the heirs of Antoine Morass, of Detroit, and Territory of Michigan, now enter with the commissioners of the land office at Detroit their claim to a tract of land situated on the border of the river St. Clair, containing six hundred and forty acres, to be laid out in a square form, and to include the mouth of Baby creek, as near the centre of the front as may be practicable. We claim and make title by virtue of possession and occupancy previous to and since the year 1796.

JAMES McCLOSKEY, in behalf of the heirs.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

TESTIMONY.

Ignace Morass, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that about thirty-five years since his father built a house and saw-mill on Baby's creek, and cleared about two or three acres of land, and continued to work there every year for about twenty-five years.—September 20, 1821.

Pierre Bonhomme, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that about twenty-seven or twenty-eight years since he was engaged by the late Antoine Morass to work for him; that said Morass had an improvement on, and was then in possession of, a tract of land on which there was a saw-mill, which improvement and mill was on a tract of land now in the possession of Mr. Bewel.—March 17, 1821.

John Baptiste Deschamps, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that about twenty-five years since, but certainly before the English left this country, an improvement was made on the above-described tract of about thirteen acres; there was also a mill on said tract. Deponent left the place soon after, but is confident the occupation was continued for seven or eight years.—September 20, 1821.

And thereupon, it appearing that the greater part of the lands here claimed have been sold by the government, the commissioners can therefore only express their conviction of the validity of this claim, had the same been presented in due time, which they presume and believe the same circumstances prevented as in the foregoing case. The commissioners would therefore recommend the confirmation by Congress of other lands to Victor Morass, adjacent and unsold, in lieu of the land claimed.

No. 3.—John Marie Beaubien.

The petition of Jean Marie Beaubien respectfully represents: That your petitioner was in possession of a tract of land on the river St. Clair, in township five north, range seventeen east, being the fractions of section seven, and the fraction of section seventeen, (the latter named fraction purchased by Joseph Watson at the public sales,) since the year seventeen hundred and ninety-three, as will appear by the accompanying affidavits; and that your petitioner continued and still is in possession of the said several tracts of land contained in said township.

JEAN MARIE BEAUBIEN.

The COMMISSIONERS appointed by the United States for the settlement of land claims in the Territory of Michigan.

TESTIMONY.

Pierre Bonhomme, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that a tract of land described to this deponent to be in township five north, range seventeen east, including the whole of said fractions, and also the whole of fraction eighteen, and the whole of fraction seventeen, in said township, on the river St. Clair, (which latter named fraction this deponent has been informed was purchased since by Joseph Watson.) This deponent is certain that Jean Marie Beaubien claimed and exercised ownership over said tract and fractions of land three years before General Wayne took possession of this country, and that said Beaubien had improvements on said tract; and further, that a part of this tract is situate between a tract of land patented to Meldrum and Park, and bounded on the upper side by a tract of land owned by Louis St. Bernard, bordering on the river St. Clair, running in the rear of the tract patented to Meldrum and Park, binding the rear of the same; and that said Beaubien is the rightful owner.

John Baptiste Ladoronte, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the years one thousand seven hundred and ninety-five and ninety-six said Jean Marie Beaubien claimed and exercised ownership over about eight hundred acres of land, situate on the border of the river St. Clair, bounded as above mentioned; that the land owned by said Beaubien run and covered the rear of that owned by the above-named Meldrum and Park; said Beaubien had three improvements and houses on said premises; which said tract covers the above-mentioned fractions. Deponent believes said Beaubien to be the rightful claimant.

Peter Livea, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that on or about the year one thousand seven hundred and ninety-three John Marie Beaubien claimed and exercised ownership over the above-mentioned tract. The remainder of deponents testimony corroborates the statement of Pierre Bonhomme.

Forty-one and twenty-six hundredths acres of this land is sold, fronting on the river St. Clair. The commissioners are of opinion that this claim would have been confirmed by the former board had it been properly presented them, as it now is. They therefore would recommend the same for confirmation by Congress, to be located, to the extent of six hundred and forty acres, upon adjacent unsold or unconceded lands.

No. 4.—Ann Smith and the legal representatives or assigns of Mary Smith.

DETROIT, July 27, 1821.

I, James W. Litle, make claim and make title for Ann Smith and the legal representatives or assigns of Mary Smith to a certain tract and parcel of land situate on the north side of the river St. Clair, containing one thousand five hundred acres, more or less, in virtue of a purchase from Richard Cornwall, and of possession and improvements made on said land before July, seventeen hundred and ninety-six, and continued to the present time; and pray that the same may be confirmed accordingly.

JAMES W. LITLE.

The REGISTER AND COMMISSIONERS of the United States Land Office at Detroit, in the Territory of Michigan.

Claimant produced a deed from said Richard Cornwall to Ann and Mary Smith, for two tracts of land, numbered 7 and 8—to Ann, lot No. 8, to Mary, lot No. 7; each of the said lots being five acres in front, running back one hundred and fifty acres, both together containing one thousand five hundred acres. The deed, moreover, states that in case of the death of either the said Ann or Mary before the age of sixteen years, or without legal issue, then both the said lots shall become the property of the surviving sister.

TESTIMONY.

Hezekiah Wilcox, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year seventeen hundred and eighty-nine, on the above-described tract of land, there was a house standing; witness left that place a short time after, and has never been there since, but has heard that about the time of the Americans taking possession of this country claimant's father put a tenant on said premises; the said Ann and Mary were very young at that time, and that the father and mother died a short time after. The father was drowned, and the mother and Mary were frozen to death, and Ann was frozen at the same time, and her legs amputated at the knee, and she lives there in a very helpless condition, and miserably poor.

Philip Toul, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that the late Thomas Smith, father of claimant, had a tenant on the above-described tract in the year 1796; and that there was a house standing on said land at that time.

William Thorn, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that said Smith had a tenant on said land in the year seventeen hundred and ninety-six, who cleared a small piece of land and fenced it in. Said land was surveyed for Richard Cornwall, and it was said Richard Cornwall gave this tract of land to Ann and Mary Smith.

James Cortright, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that before 1796 said Thomas Smith had a tenant on said place. It was said to belong to Thomas Smith, of Detroit.

Continued occupancy from seventeen hundred and ninety-six to eighteen hundred and seven is not made out in this case. Although the decease of the original claimant affords plausible excuse for not preferring the claim in due time, yet the commissioners feel obliged to reject this claim, but would still, from the poverty and deplorable condition of the surviving daughter, recommend it to the favorable review of Congress.

No. 5.—Angus McDonald.

SIR: Take notice that I make entry and claim title to a certain tract of land situate on Thompson's island, otherwise called Stromness island, at the mouth of the river St. Clair, bounded as follows, viz: commencing at the north front corner of a farm lately occupied by the widow Lawton, now Mary Jacobs; thence, down the channel commonly known by the name of Eagle channel, eight acres; thence, across the said island, parallel with the farm aforesaid, to the channel commonly known by the name of Channel à Bout Ronde, or the Channel of the Round End; thence up said channel eight acres, till it meets the rear corner of the farm aforesaid; thence along the north boundary of said farm to the place of beginning, containing six hundred acres, more or less.

ANGUS McDONALD.

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

Angus McDonald produces a deed from James Thompson to James Cortright for a large tract of land. Said deed is duly executed by the parties, and dated February 25, 1800, signed by James Thompson and James Cortright, witnessed by Alexander Harrow and Alexander H. Murray. Also the following instrument of writing:

Know all men by these presents that I, James Cortright, of Thompson's island, in river St. Clair, yeoman, am held and firmly bound unto Angus McDonald, of Bal Doun, printer, in the sum of six hundred dollars, current money of the province of Upper Canada, to be paid to the said Angus McDonald, his certain attorney, his executors, administrators, and assigns, which payment, well and truly to be made, I bind myself, my heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, firmly by these presents. Signed with my hand, and sealed with my seal, at river St. Clair, this twenty-seventh day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifteen.

Now, the condition of the above obligation is such that if the above-bound James Cortright, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, do and shall well and truly convey unto the said Angus McDonald, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, by a good and valid warrantee deed, all that certain piece, parcel, or tract of land situate, lying, and being on Thompson's island aforesaid, butted and bounded as follows, to wit: commencing at the north front corner of a farm lately occupied by the widow Loughton, (now Mrs. Jacobs;) thence down the channel commonly known by the name of Loughton's channel, or the channel of the Eagle's Nest, eight acres; thence across the said island, in a line parallel with that of the farm aforesaid, to the channel commonly known by Channel à Bout Ronde, or the Channel of the Round End; thence up said channel eight acres, till it meets the rear corner of the farm aforesaid; thence along the north boundary of said farm, to the place of beginning, containing six hundred acres, be the same more or less, (the said James is to warrantee the said Angus in the quiet and peaceable possession of the said tract of land against himself, his heirs and assigns, and every other person whatsoever, the government only excepted,) then this obligation to be null and void; otherwise to remain in full force and virtue.

JAMES CORTRIGHT.

Signed, sealed, and delivered in presence of—
ALLAN McDONALD.
JOHN BROWN.

TESTIMONY.

William Harsen, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he has been acquainted with Thompson's island since the year 1792, and that there were at that time four separate improvements on said island, two of which were said to belong to said Thompson, since deceased, who then lived on the head of the island, and the other two to a Captain John Loughton. After the decease of said Thompson the first farm on the head of said island, occupied by said Thompson during his lifetime, was occupied by James Cortright; the second by Captain John Loughton, since his death by his son Peter Loughton and heirs; the third by several tenants under said Thompson, and now by Angus McDonald.

William Thom, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he has been acquainted with Thompson's island since the year 1784 and at that time there were four farms occupied and improved on said Thompson's island. The one on the head of said island was occupied by James Thompson, the next one below, or southwest, was occupied by Captain John Loughton, the third by Eddy, a tenant under said Thompson, the fourth by Jacob Hill, said to be a tenant under Loughton; that Angus McDonald is now in possession of said third farm.

James Cortright, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he (the said deponent) has been in possession of that part of Thompson's island which James Thompson owned in his lifetime since the year eighteen hundred, and that he verily believes that said James Thompson was the sole owner of said island in the year 1783, which included the land of which Angus McDonald is now in possession. Witness verily believes said Angus McDonald to be the proper owner and possessor of said farm.

Doubts being entertained as to the fairness and validity of the supposed transfer from James Cortright, sr., to the claimant, Angus McDonald, the commissioners do for the present postpone the further consideration of said claim.

No. 5.—Gage Davenport.

DETROIT, October 12, 1823.

Please take notice that we make claim to a tract of land situate upon an island in river St. Clair, called Cortright's island, being the same land to which the heirs of Leach made entry of claim before a former land board. We claim title to said tract of land as the assignee of the said heirs; and in support thereof we will, as soon as possible, adduce the deed of transfer to us, and such other testimony as may be deemed necessary.

GAGE & DAVENPORT.

The COMMISSIONERS for adjusting land claims in the Territory of Michigan under the act of February 21, 1823.

And thereupon the present land board deem it proper to refer this matter to the consideration of the land board under the act of Congress of 1820, as that board have not yet reported all their decisions upon claims by them considered; and that this matter may be submitted entire to the view of Congress, and not detached, as it would be were the present board to act upon the foregoing notice.

The claim of Gage and Davenport being, as above stated, referred to this board, the said claim was thereupon taken into consideration.

Claimants produced a certified copy of a deed of conveyance from James Thompson to James Cortright for a tract of land situate on Stromness island or Thompson's island, in the river St. Clair; the front of said tract or farm being or lying to the westward, of nine acres extent, along what is called the middle channel, and running in depth westward to the opposite side of the island, bounded on the south and north by the farms of Peter Loughton on the aforesaid island. Said deed is duly executed, and dated February 25, 1800.

On comparison of said certified copy with the original filed in this office by Angus McDonald, it is found that it is a true copy.

Claimant also files another deed from said James Cortright to William Leach and Josiah Phelps, in the words following, to wit:

Know all men, by these presents, that I, James Cortright, of Stromness, for and in consideration of one hundred and thirty pounds, New York currency, in hand received and paid to my full satisfaction, the receipt whereof I hereby acknowledge, have granted, bargained, and sold to William Leach and Josiah Phelps all that tract of land lying between the north and south lines of land belonging to the heirs of the widow Loughton, supposed to be eight acres in front, and extending to the Sny à Boureau, the same in width as at the beginning, bounded east on the channel known by the name of the middle channel, and north and southerly on the lands belonging to the said heirs of the widow Loughton, and westerly on the aforesaid Sny à Boureau; to have and to hold the aforesaid bargained and granted premises to them, the said William Leach and Josiah Phelps, their heirs and assigns forever, to their use, benefit, and behoof. And I, the said Cortright, do furthermore warrant and defend the aforesaid premises from all persons lawfully claiming by, from, or under me, or any claim anterior to the signing and sealing of these presents, by any person or persons whatsoever, otherwise than any claim that government may claim, which I, the said Cortright, do not warrant or defend; but from all and every other I bind myself, my heirs, executors, administrators and assigns to forever warrant and defend.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, at river St. Clair, this thirteenth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nine.

JAMES CORTRIGHT.

In presence of—
THOMAS MILLER.
JOSEPH ROWE.

And also another deed from Henry Leach, in the words following, to wit:

Articles of agreement made and concluded at Detroit, in the Territory of Michigan, November four, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and twenty-three, between Philip B. Gage and Lewis Davenport, of Detroit, in the Territory of Michigan, of the first part, and Henry Leach, of the town of Hudson, Portage county, in the State of Ohio, of the second part:

First. The said party of the first part hereby bind themselves, their heirs, executors and administrators, to pay, or cause to be paid, unto the said party of the second part, his executors, administrators or assigns, the sum of one hundred dollars, lawful money of the United States, in manner following—that is to say, as soon as the said party of the second part shall comply with the underwritten condition, to wit:

And, secondly, the party of the second part, in consideration of the above payment being punctually made, binds and obliges himself, his heirs, executors and administrators, to convey, in fee simple, to the said party of the first part, their heirs or assigns, the following tract, piece, or parcel of land, situate, lying, and being on Cortright's island, so called, in the Territory of Michigan, being the equal undivided half or part of a certain piece of land lying and situate as aforesaid; which said land was conveyed, by deed, from James Cortright to William Leach, father of the said party of the second part, and one Josiah Phelps, dated September 30, 1809, said land being therein described as follows: lying between the north and south lines of lands formerly belonging to the heirs-at-law of the widow Laughton, supposed to be eight acres in front, and extending to the Sny à Boureau, the same in width as at the beginning; bounded on the east by the channel known by the name of the Middle channel, north and south on lands formerly belonging to the heirs-at-law of the widow Laughton, and westerly on the aforesaid Sny à Boureau.

It is understood between the parties to this instrument that the above-mentioned sum of one hundred dollars is to be punctually paid by the said parties of the first part to the said party of the second, so soon as the said party of the second part shall execute to the said party of the first part a perfect, sure, and indefeasible estate of inheritance, in the law, in fee simple, of the above-mentioned undivided equal half of said described property.

In witness whereof, the parties have hereunto set their hands and seals the day and year above written.

PHILIP B. GAGE.
LEWIS DAVENPORT.
HENRY LEACH.

Sealed and delivered in presence of—
HENRY S. COLE.

It is further agreed between the aforesaid parties that the parties of the first part shall bear the expense attending all inquiries into the title of the property aforesaid, and all expense incident to the perfection of a good title from the said party of the second part to the party of the first part, conditioned that a good title be obtained. In the event that no title should be obtained, the party of the second part shall pay all the aforesaid expenses.

Signed and sealed as aforesaid.

STATE OF OHIO, Portage County:

Know all men by these presents, that I, Henry Leach, of Hudson, in said, county, do constitute and appoint, and by these presents have this day constituted and appointed Philip B. Gage and Lewis Davenport, both of Detroit, and Territory of Michigan, my true and lawful agents and attorneys, in my stead and behalf, to settle and adjust all claims in any way relating to the real estate of William Leach, late of Sandusky, in said State, deceased; and more particularly to transact any and all business appertaining to a certain piece or tract of land situate, lying, and being on the island usually known by the appellation of St. Clair's island, in the river St. Clair, and Territory of Michigan aforesaid; for a more particular description of which piece or tract of land reference is had to a deed executed by James Cortright to the said William Leach and one Josiah Phelps; to which piece or tract of land I, as heir to the said William, with my brothers and sisters, (whose attorney I am,) have good right to possess and enjoy.

And I do further authorize my attorneys aforesaid to demand, sue for, and recover said premises, either by suit or otherwise, as to them shall seem most meet and proper; and, for that purpose, to engage and employ such counsel and other means as they shall think fit.

And, generally, I do give my said attorneys, in this behalf, all that power and authority concerning the aforesaid premises which shall be considered proper for the fulfilment and discharge of all the powers hereby vested, or intended to be vested, in them; thereby binding myself and heirs to abide by, approve, ratify, and confirm all and singular the premises, the doings, acts, and proceedings of my said attorneys in the premises, in as full, ample, and complete a manner as though I had personally done the same.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my seal, at Hudson aforesaid, this [L. S.] twenty-fourth day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-three.

STATE OF OHIO, Portage County, ss:

Personally appeared Henry Leach, signer and sealer of the above instrument, and acknowledges the same to be his free act and deed before me.

And it is further satisfactorily shown to the commissioners that the said Henry Leach is the lawful attorney of the other heirs of the said William Leach, deceased.

THE STATE OF OHIO, Portage County, ss:

I, Seth Day, clerk of the court of common pleas in and for said county, do certify that Augustus Baldwin, esq., before whom the foregoing acknowledgment was taken, was, at the time of taking such acknowledgment, and now is, an associate judge of the court of common pleas in and for said county, duly commissioned and sworn, and to whose official acts full faith and credit is and ought to be given.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said court, at Ravenna, this [SEAL.] 24th day of December, A. D. 1823. S. DAY, Clerk.

STATE OF OHIO, Portage County, ss:

The deposition of Sally Lord, of the township of Huron, in said county, is as follows:

This deponent, of lawful age, deposeth and saith that, in relation to the tract of land which was conveyed by James Cortright to William Leach and Josiah Phelps, the said William Leach paid all except a small trifle of the purchase money to said Cortright; and that the said Phelps did only pay to the said Cortright for the same but a very small amount, by way of one-fourth of a kiln of brick; that the said Phelps was a very old man, and lived with the family of this deponent; and her then husband (said William Leach) had no wife, or family, or connexion in this country, as he always said.

That said deed, which embraced the names of said Leach and Phelps as grantees, was so made for the purpose of gratifying the old man's (Phelps) childish notions; and that he always said, and for that purpose made an agreement with said Leach, that if he would suffer him to have his name in the deed he would let the said Leach have the land exclusively when he, the said Phelps, should have done with it; but whether said agreement was ever reduced to writing or not this deponent does not recollect; however, if it was, it is misplaced, destroyed, or lost.

This deponent further says that George Leach, Henry Leach, Jonas Leach, and Hyta Leach are the lawful children and heirs of this deponent and her deceased husband, said William Leach.

MICHIGAN TERRITORY, Wayne County, ss:

Personally appeared before me, the subscriber, one of the justices of the peace in and for the county aforesaid, William Thompson, of lawful age, who, being duly sworn according to law, doth depose and say that on or about the fifteenth day of November, 1823, this deponent was present at Mr. Ainsworth's, in the county of St. Clair, in this Territory, when Louis Davenport, who this deponent understood to be a claimant, or one of the claimants, to a certain tract of land situate on Cortright's island, and being the same tract of land on which Angus McDonald now lives, and to which this deponent understands the said McDonald has also made claim before the commissioners for adjusting the private claims to lands within the Territory aforesaid, called upon James Cortright, who this deponent understood had conveyed the tract of land aforesaid to the assignors of the said Davenport; that said Davenport, in presence of this deponent, informed said Cortright that he had come to see him (Cortright) on the subject of this land. Mr. Cortright observed to Davenport, you must give me time to think about it. This deponent, in company with Davenport and Cortright, went over to the island, (Cortright's,) and Davenport returned to Ainsworth's. As soon as Davenport was gone, Cortright told this deponent that he was in a bad box—that he had sold this land twice; that he had first sold this land to Leach, or Leach and Phelps, and that they, or Leach, had paid him almost the whole of the purchase money; and that he had afterwards sold the same tract of land to the aforesaid Angus McDonald. Said Cortright further observed that he had made a deed of conveyance to the said Leach and Phelps, and he (Cortright) could not deny that, if the deed was not lost or destroyed, as he (Cortright) supposed it had been. Said Cortright then observed to this deponent that when he sold to McDonald, he (Cortright) told McDonald that he had a long time previous sold to Leach and Phelps and given them a deed for it, and that therefore he (McDonald) must take it at his own risk. Cortright then observed that this Yankee (meaning Davenport) expected to obtain a deposition from him, or information respecting this matter; but, said Cortright, he will get nothing out of me, and he will not yankee me; he may go back to Detroit as he came. The following morning Mr. Davenport returned to the island and again saw Mr. Cortright in the presence of this deponent; and upon Mr. Davenport's introducing the subject, and producing a pen, ink, and paper, requesting him (Cortright) to write a statement of the matter, Cortright said he would write nothing nor sign nothing; that he had given a deed to Leach and Phelps, and if it were produced it would show for itself; and further, that if he (Davenport) would go to old Mr. William Thorn, he could tell him as much about this matter as he (Cortright) knew about it. Mr. Davenport then went away. Mr. Cortright then observed that McDonald would come upon him for the amount which he (Cortright) had received; that he (Cortright) had now spent that money, as well as the furs, &c., which he had received from Leach and Phelps, and that this would ruin him if it came upon him; and that he believed that he must now assign or transfer all his property to his son James, in order to avoid the responsibility of his property for this or other debts; that he owed about one thousand dollars if he had to repay McDonald, but he would collect all his debts due to him, and would fix his property so that it could not be taken for any debts which he owed.

MICHIGAN TERRITORY, Wayne County, ss:

Before me, the subscriber, one of the justices of the peace in and for the county aforesaid, personally came Joseph Spencer, of lawful age, who, being duly sworn according to law, doth depose and say that he was formerly well acquainted with William Leach and Josiah Phelps, who are both now dead; that said Leach and Phelps lived on Cortright's island about the years 1808, 1809, and 1810, and then occupied and cultivated a certain tract of land on said island, being the same tract of land which Angus McDonald now lives upon, which he understands said McDonald now claims. This deponent has been often told by Leach and Phelps that they had purchased this land from James Cortright, sr., and said Cortright has also frequently told this deponent that he had sold the same tract to said Leach and Phelps, and that the payments were to be made, as this deponent understood from the parties, in brick and furs. This deponent saw brick-making on the island, which he understood was in payment for the farm, and that he also heard from the parties that furs were given in payment for the farm; but whether complete payment was made or not this deponent does not know. Leach left this country about the commencement of the late war, and Mr. Phelps came to the house of this deponent to live, where he (Phelps) remained about two weeks, and there died. Said Phelps was, as this deponent understood, an old bachelor, and never was married, and had no heirs or relatives that this deponent knows of. This deponent saw young Mr. Henry Leach when he was lately at Detroit, and who, this deponent understands, sold the tract of land aforesaid to Gage and Davenport, of Detroit; and this deponent believes him to be the son of William Leach aforesaid, now deceased, and from conversation had with him this deponent has no doubt of his being the son of the said Leach. This deponent knows that Angus McDonald lived at Belle Domel, on the Canada side, near this island and tract of land, at the time Leach lived on the same; and this deponent thinks he (McDonald) must have known that Leach and Phelps purchased and claimed this tract of land, as it was a matter of general notoriety. This deponent does not personally know that the said Leach is dead, but has heard that he was dead, and particularly from his aforesaid son when he was lately here.

JOSEPH SPENCER.

Sworn and subscribed to December 22, 1823, before me.

GEORGE McDOUGALL,
Justice of the Peace for the County of Wayne, Territory of Michigan.

DETROIT, Wayne County, Territory of Michigan, ss:

Be it remembered that on this twenty-second day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-three, personally appeared before me, the subscriber, one of the justices of the peace in and for the county and Territory aforesaid, William Thorn, sr., of lawful age, who, being duly sworn according to law, doth depose and say that he was well acquainted with Josiah Phelps and William Leach at the time they lived upon the island called Thompson's or Cortright's. Deponent knows, at the time of the purchase made, that said Leach and Phelps lived on said tract of land, being the same tract upon which Angus McDonald now lives. Said deponent further states, of his personal knowledge, that the said Leach and Phelps made a large quantity of brick for said Cortright, which they gave to said Cortright in part or full payment for said land; and this deponent bought part of said brick from said Cortright after the said Cortright had got them from Leach and Phelps. This deponent knows that said Leach and Phelps were put in quiet and peaceable possession of this farm by said Cortright, and they continued to occupy and cultivate said tract; that it was a matter of general notoriety that said Cortright had sold the aforesaid tracts of land to the said Leach and Phelps. This deponent never heard Cortright deny this sale, or that he had not received full payment for the same. This deponent states that James Cortright, sr., and James Cortright jr., are both much addicted to intoxication; that he believes their character for a departure from veracity is such that much confidence is not to be placed upon their assertion, or even oaths, when in any way interested. This deponent never heard it alleged by the elder Cortright, nor any other person, until since the late appearance of young Leach in this country, that said Leach and Phelps had not made full payment for this land according to their contract; and this deponent does believe that said Leach and Phelps did make full payment in bricks and furs, or otherwise; had it not been so, deponent thinks that in his various intercourse and conversations had in former years with the said Cortright, sr., he, the said Cortright, would have mentioned it to this deponent. This deponent saw the young man, Henry Leach, when in this Territory last October or November, and is confident that he is the son of the aforesaid William Leach, as he perfectly recollects him, having often seen him when his father formerly resided on the aforesaid island. This deponent also stated his personal knowledge of the fact that this tract of land was occupied and cultivated by Thompson or Cortright, or other claimants, from a period long prior to the 1st day of July, 1796, and that it has been under them up to the present time. Angus McDonald now lives upon and cultivates the said farm. This deponent further states that when McDonald bought from Cortright, he (McDonald) was aware that Cortright had before sold the same tract to Leach and Phelps; but said McDonald thought the warrantee deed of Cortright good and sufficient for him, and neither McDonald nor Cortright supposed that Leach or Phelps would ever return to trouble them. This deponent knows that Phelps was an old man without any family; he was for several years in this country, and lived with the family of Leach, who always provided for and took care of him in health and in sickness. This deponent heard that said Phelps died at Detroit about the beginning of the late war. And further this deponent saith not.

WILLIAM THORN.

Sworn to and subscribed before me December 22, 1823.

GEORGE McDOUGALL, Justice of the Peace W. C. T. M.

James Cortright, sen., being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that a man by the name of George Leach contracted with this deponent for a piece of land on Thompson's island, in the river St. Clair, county of St. Clair, for which the said Leach did not pay this deponent, but relinquished his claim to said land, and gave this deponent possession of the same land which this deponent contracted to Phelps and Leach. The said Phelps and Leach never have fulfilled the contract for said land, or any other person for them, or in their name or otherwise.

James Cortright, jr., being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he was present when George Leach and James Cortright, sen., had a settlement relating to their deal, in which the said Leach and Cortright, sen., had a settlement relating to a piece of land which the said Cortright, sen., had contracted to let Phelps and Leach have; and this deponent understood by the parties that Leach had not paid the said Cortright, sen., for said land; and that all of the said Leach's account was not equal to that of the said Cortright, sen., not including the land above mentioned, on which, immediately after the said Leach left said land, he, the said Cortright, sen., and the said Cortright, jr., went, within a few days afterwards, and took boards and other things belonging to the said premises and converted them to his own use; and after the said Cortright, sen., had possession peaceably for four years, the said J. Cortright, sen., sold the same piece of land to Angus McDonald, who is now living on said land.

This case presents for consideration distinct and conflicting claims for the same tract. The nature of the powers conferred upon the commissioners, the subject-matter of their investigations, and the manner in which they are obliged to execute their trust, combine to preclude the hope, in most cases, of determining the relative and conflicting right of opposing claimants, as between the governmental claim, however, and that of individual. This presents a strong case. There remains no doubt but that the land claimed was occupied, cultivated, and improved by individuals long before the epoch established by the law, (1796,) and that it has been continually occupied, cultivated, and claimed, as the property of individuals, since that period; and if, from circumstances not clearly explained, there had not been a failure to make a regular entry of the claim in due time, there can be no doubt but that the tract in question would have been confirmed as individual property. The commissioners, however, are of opinion that the circumstances of the claimants, and, more especially, the probable notoriety of the fact that former boards were at all times unwilling to act upon claims to islands in the straits and lakes along the national boundary, before that national boundary had been defined and established, constitute a sufficient excuse for the omission. They believe that the tract in question was regularly, and upon sufficient consideration, transferred by James Cortright to Leach and Phelps; that Phelps died before Leach, and that the claim to it survived to Leach, in whose heirs, and their assigns, the equitable claim now rests. The agreement between Cortright and McDonald appears to have been posterior, in point of date, to the purchase of Leach and Phelps, to be irregular on the face of it, and, probably, to have been entered into with a full knowledge of the previous sale to Leach and Phelps. McDonald, therefore, it is presumed, can have no valid specific claim for the land. His claim is therefore rejected. Taking this general view of the matter, the commissioners venture to recommend and to request that one moiety of the premises be confirmed to Henry Leach, George Leach, Jonas Leach, and Hyta Leach, heirs-at-law of William Leach, deceased, and to Lewis Davenport and Philip B. Gage, assignees aforesaid; the other moiety thereof to be holden by them, respectively, according to their respective interests, in trust for themselves and such others as may have any or better right therein.

No. 6.—François Yax.

To a tract of land containing 440 acres, more or less, upon Lake St. Clair. François Yax appears to make claim to a certain tract of land, which he states has been entered with the late register, P. Audrain, he thinks about eight years ago, and he now has the permit of the register to remain upon said tract; and this appears to be what he (this claimant) considers as his entry.

TESTIMONY.

Pierre Yax, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that this tract was taken possession of before General Wayne's arrival in this country; that François Yax, son of deponent, who then took possession of this tract, has continued to occupy, cultivate, and possess the said tract from that time to the present. The farm claimed is adjoining the farm on which witness then lived. When claimant obtained permission from the register to remain on said tract there were about ten acres cleared.

Joseph Bassonnet, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that about twenty-three or four years ago, and ever since the recollection of deponent, said claimant has worked on said farm every year up to the present time.

The testimony in this case does not appear to bring the occupancy and improvement clearly within the provision of the law requiring them to be made prior to the first of July, seventeen hundred and ninety-six. It further does appear that Pierre Yax, the father of claimant, did, in due time, file his claim to adjoining lands, and was confirmed therein; and, at that time, no claim or entry was made to this tract either by the present claimant or his father. The present commissioners do therefore, under consideration of all the circumstances, reject this claim.

No. 7.—William Forsyth.

SEPTEMBER 29, 1821.

Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situate on Lake St. Clair, about one mile and a half above Milk River Point, bounded in front by Lake St. Clair, in rear by unlocated lands of the United States, being six arpents in front and rear by eighty in depth; which tract I claim by virtue of actual possession and improvements.

WILLIAM FORSYTH.

The COMMISSIONERS.

TESTIMONY.

Peter Yax and François Furton, being duly sworn, depose and say that, to deponents' certain knowledge, William Forsyth had possession of a tract of land situate on the border of Lake St. Clair, about one mile and a half above Milk River Point, bounded in front by Lake St. Clair and in rear by unlocated lands of the United States, being six arpents in front and running in rear eighty acres; which said tract of land deponents know the said William Forsyth to have occupied since twenty-seven years, and still occupies and cultivates the said tract of land; that deponents have always considered, and do now consider, that the said William Forsyth was, and is, the lawful owner of said tract, and has been for these twenty-seven years past.

The commissioners, upon considering the foregoing claim of William Forsyth, consider that the title thereto would have been deemed good and valid under the laws of Congress if the same had been preferred in due time; and it is regretted that the testimony does not set forth the cause of delay in making the claim. The commissioners do, however, from a sense of the strong equity of the case, earnestly recommend the claim for confirmation by Congress, and that it be located on fractional sections Nos. 23 and 22, in township No. 1 north, of range No. 13 east, in the land district of Detroit, and being, as the commissioners judge, the land claimed in the above notice; provided that this claim be so laid off by the survey thereof as not to interfere with any private claims heretofore confirmed, or which may be confirmed to other claimants by this board, or with the lines of the south fraction of section No. 14 in said township and range, which appears to have been heretofore sold.

No. 8.—Gaget Marsac.

DETROIT, April 24, 1821.

Take notice that I make entry and claim a title to a tract of land situate on the south side of Tremble's creek, being fractional section No. 15, in township No. 1 south, range No. 12 east of the meridian, containing 479.77 acres. I claim the above-described tract from having made an actual settlement thereon.

JAMES McCLOSKEY,
For GAGET MARSAC.

The REGISTER of the Land Office of the district of Detroit.

TESTIMONY.

Joseph Tremble, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that several years previous to the year 1796 he commenced making an improvement on a tract of land now claimed by Gaget Marsac, situated as above mentioned. Deponent continued in the possession and occupancy of said tract of land until about the year 1799, when he sold all his claim and possession to Gaget Marsac, who entered into the possession, and continued occupying and cultivating said tract until sometime in the year 1806 or 1807.

Robert Marsac, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he has knowledge of the fact that Joseph Tremble settled upon the tract of land in question thirty years ago; at that period he had enclosed about one or two arpents. He has seen said Tremble thereon three or four times within two years of the time of the first period above mentioned. Said Gaget Marsac bought said tract of land of Joseph Tremble, and immediately took possession, and continued to possess and occupy said land for the three subsequent years. That for fifteen or sixteen years last past, said tract has not been occupied or improved by any one. About the time said claimant went to take possession of said tract, after having purchased said tract from said Tremble, Nicholas, the German, made a present to said Marsac of his improvement on said land.—1821.

The commissioners, in considering the above claim of Gaget Marsac, do decide to recommend the same to Congress for their confirmation.

No. 9.—Asquire Aldrich.

DETROIT, June 28, 1821.

I, Asquire Aldrich, make claim and title to a tract of land containing six acres in front by forty in depth, making two hundred and forty acres, situate on the northerly side of Tremble's creek, in the county of Wayne and land district of Detroit, bounded in front by said creek, easterly by lands granted to the late John Little and myself, westerly by public lands, and in rear by public lands. I claim by purchase from Thomas Tremble, in right of possession and improvements made on said tract of land at and before July, 1796, and continued to the present time by the claimant and those under whom he claims title and makes claim, and prays that he may be confirmed therein, and a certificate of such confirmation granted, &c.

ASQUIRE ALDRICH.

The REGISTER and COMMISSIONERS of the United States Land Office at Detroit, in the Territory of Michigan.

TESTIMONY.

Joseph Tremble, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that, in the case of the claim of Asquire Aldrich to the above-mentioned tract, before the year 1796 an American by the name of Thomas Hobbs settled on and improved said tract; that when General Wayne came on, said Hobbs left said tract and Thomas Tremble took possession, and continued the occupation until he disposed of his claim to Asquire Aldrich.

Thomas Tremble, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that previous to the year 1796 said farm was cultivated and a house built upon it. Hobbs went away, and witness took possession of said farm. Witness cleared and made fence on said land eight or nine years ago, with a view to keep possession of it.

The commissioners feel bound to reject this claim, it appearing to them that the lands here claimed were, in part, sold by the government to present claimant, and that the residue has been confirmed to others whose claims the commissioners adjudge paramount to that of Asquire Aldrich.

No. 10.—Jacob Baker.

Jacob Baker enters his claim to a tract of land situate on Tremble's creek, containing—[Omission in the original.]

TESTIMONY.

Joseph Louis Tremble, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that about ten years previous to July, 1796, he well recollects that George Baker, deceased, occupied and improved a tract of land on Tremble's creek; that he built a house and cleared eight or nine acres of land; that said Baker was compelled to leave said tract by the hostility of the Indians; that since the death of said George Baker he has considered the land in the possession of Jacob Baker; that said tract of land has been, and still is, known by the name of Baker's land.

François Furton, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he has knowledge that George Baker, deceased, during his lifetime, and at least five years before the arrival of General Wayne's army, occupied and improved said tract of land; that said Baker was driven from said farm by the Indians, but afterwards returned; and that after the death of said George Baker, his son, Jacob Baker, occupied and cultivated said tract; and that said occupation was continued until 1814; said tract still bears the name of Baker's land. Deponent well knows that during the time the people of the country entered their claims to land said Baker resided in Canada.

This tract is confirmed to Henry Connor. See confirmation under claim of said Connor, next following.

DETROIT, June 26, 1821.

Notice is hereby given that I, Henry Connor, of the district of Detroit, make claim to a tract of land containing six hundred and forty acres, situate, lying, and being in the county of Wayne and Territory of Michigan, and within the land district of Detroit, and bounded as follows, to wit: on the northwest side by Joseph Tremble, and on the southwest by lands owned by Asquire Aldrich, and on the other side by United States land; said tract of land claimed lies on the northeast side of Tremble's creek, and is known by the name of Baker's improvement. The said Henry Connor sets up claim and makes title to the above tract of land as assignee of Jacob Baker and Mary Flin, late Mary Miers, the only children and heirs-at-law of John Baker, their late father, now deceased, who, whilst living, claimed said land to be granted and confirmed to him and his heirs and assigns by virtue of occupancy, possession, and improvement by the deceased had and made thereon prior to the year 1796, and continued thereafter; whereupon the said Henry prays that he may be confirmed in and to said land as above described.

HENRY CONNOR.

The REGISTER and COMMISSIONERS of the United States Land Board in and for the district of Detroit.

The claimant refers for evidence of occupancy and improvement of the above claim to the testimony adduced by Jacob Baker in his claim next preceding. Henry Connor also produces deeds of quit-claim and conveyance from Jacob Baker, the aforesaid claimant of this land, as specified by the foregoing entry, No. 10, and his sister, Mary Flin, being the sole heirs of George Baker, deceased; and also evidence that the said claimants, Jacob and Mary, desire that the said entry, by them or either of them made, may enure to the benefit of the said Henry Connor.

In satisfaction of this claim, the commissioners do recommend to Congress for confirmation the tract or parcel of land included within the following boundaries, to wit: beginning at that point on Tremble's creek which shall be the southwest or lower corner on said creek of the farm or tract of land next following, and recommended for confirmation to the heirs of Joseph Pomerville; thence northeasterly, by the southern line of the said tract of said Pomerville, extending in depth along said line to the southeast corner of said tract recommended for confirmation to the said heirs of Pomerville; thence in a southwardly direction, and upon the course of the rear line of a tract of land confirmed by a former land board to Joseph Tremble, and being an extension of said rear line, to the point where the same shall intersect the rear line of the back concessions confirmed by the present board; thence by the said line of the back concessions, in a southwardly direction, to the east border of Tremble's creek aforesaid; provided that the lines of this tract be so run as not to interfere with the lines of any other tract of land confirmed or recommended for confirmation by the present or any former board of commissioners.

JULY 14, 1821.

No. 11.—Heirs of Joseph Pomerville.

SIR: The bearer of this, Joseph Pomerville, claims a tract of land on Tremble's creek lying between a tract confirmed to Joseph Tremble and a tract claimed by the Bakers or Henry Connor. The bearer says that his father made an improvement on the land, and wishes the evidence of the two Griffords taken.

JAMES McCLOSKEY.

TESTIMONY.

Personally appeared before the commissioners for adjusting private land claims in the district of Detroit, at the instance of the heirs of Joseph Pomerville, deceased, in behalf of the whole of said heirs of said Joseph Pomerville, deceased, Louis Grifford, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he well recollects to have seen Mr. Louis Pomerville at work on the land opposite to the land of Mr. Bean, and is southwesterly of the south line of Tremble's land, one farm of about three acres intervening, about three years ago; but he does not know the extent of his improvements. Mr. Pomerville was living at that time on the place afterwards confirmed to his heirs on the strait of Detroit.

And, at the instance of same claimants, Mr. Laurent Grifford, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that Louis Pomerville, deceased, was one of the first settlers on Tremble's creek, and that it is more than thirty years since he saw him at work on the lands in question, which lie southerly of the land of Tremble; that he cleared and enclosed with good fence two or three acres in a field, and he also built a house on said tract. Mr. Pomerville died about twenty years ago, leaving one son and five daughters, all under the age of twenty-one, and very young.

Upon examination of this case, the commissioners recommend to Congress for confirmation to the heirs of Joseph Pomerville, deceased, a tract of land bounded on the north by the tract confirmed by a former land board to Joseph Tremble, and to extend in depth as far as the south line of said Tremble's farm extends in front upon Tremble's creek, to the extent of four arpents; thence by a line parallel with the said northern boundary on Tremble's line, so that a line running from the extremity thereof in a northern direction will intersect the rear extremity of the aforesaid line of Tremble's farm.

No. 12.—Joseph Louis Tremble.

DETROIT, July 27, 1821.

Please take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situate in the district of Detroit and Territory of Michigan, containing, by estimation, six hundred and twenty-five acres, it being twenty-five acres in front by twenty-five acres in depth, bounded in front by Tremble's creek and lands of the claimant, on the south also by lands of the claimant, and in the rear and on the north side by unconceded lands, the property of the United States. I have been in possession of the same for the last forty years. Possession, &c., can be verified by Joseph Leonard Tremble.

JOSEPH LOUIS TREMBLE.

The COMMISSIONERS, &c.

The testimony of Joseph Leonard Tremble, whose name is mentioned in the above claim, was either not taken or has been mislaid by the commissioners, and in lieu thereof Joseph Tremble's, jr., testimony was taken.

Joseph Tremble, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the years of our Lord 1795 and 1796 Joseph Louis Tremble was in possession of a tract of land on the south border of Tremble's creek, Entrout du Morais, upon which there were about ten acres cleared and under constant cultivation; and the said Joseph Tremble, jr., further swears that the same tract has continued in the quiet and peaceable possession of the said Joseph Louis Tremble from said year 1796 to the present time; and further, that the said tract contains, according to the best of this deponent's knowledge and belief, six hundred and twenty-five acres of land, be the same more or less.

Upon consideration of this claim the commissioners recommend to the revising power for confirmation to Joseph Louis Tremble a tract of land containing the quantity claimed, to be bounded and described as follows: beginning at a point on the west side of Tremble's creek where the rear line of the back concession intersects said creek; thence up stream to a point where the east line of fractional section No. 15 intersects said creek; thence south, upon the said east line of said fractional section No. 15, to a point where the lines of fractional sections Nos. 15 and 23 corner; thence west, and upon the line dividing fractional sections Nos. 15 and 22, so far as that a due south line extending to the rear line of said back concessions, and thence in an easterly direction and upon the said rear line to the place of beginning, will contain the quantity claimed, viz: 625 acres.

No. 13.—Joseph Campau.

Joseph Campau, son of the late John Bpt. Campau, and assignee of the widow and heirs of the said Jean Baptiste Campau, deceased, makes application and entry for confirmation of six hundred and forty acres of land lying immediately in rear of the tract of land, forty acres in depth, confirmed to the widow and heirs of Jean Bpt. Campau, deceased. Said applicant predicates his claim on the following facts: that ten years previous to the arrival of General Wayne's army, in 1796, his late father improved and occupied a tract of land about five acres in the rear of the land confirmed as aforesaid; that, in pursuance of the act of Congress, he conceives, had an entry been made pursuant to the law, he would have been entitled to a confirmation of six hundred and forty acres; that the improvement and possession were continued and have been uninterrupted to the present time, by his deceased father during his lifetime, and by this applicant since his death; that, being of French extraction, not understanding the English language, and not having received an education which would enable him to obtain information necessary to the prosecution of his claim under the act of Congress, he is in a great measure excusable for neglecting to make his entry in proper season, and thereby avail himself of the bounty of the government. His claim, he is aware, must in a great measure depend for its confirmation on the liberality of the government. The land for which he solicits a confirmation is of comparatively little value but to himself; to him it would be valuable, to the government of little consequence. He submits this application, and the accompanying evidence in support of it.

mark.

TESTIMONY.

Constant St. Obin, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he is of the age of sixty-two years; was born in the county of Wayne, and has always been a resident in said county; he knows that John Bpt. Campau, deceased, occupied and improved, during his lifetime, a tract of land now lying immediately in rear of the farm now occupied and improved by Mr. Jaques Campau, son of said deceased. That said deceased built a house and enclosed about four acres of land; he cleared off the timber and improved it in the cultivation of grass, corn, and grain. That said possession and improvement was at least ten years before the arrival of General Wayne's army; that the possession and improvement have been continued from that time to the present by said deceased during his lifetime and by his son, Joseph Campau, since. Said improvements and possession are about four acres in the rear of the land already confirmed to the widow and heirs of said deceased; that he lived a neighbor to said deceased, and frequently saw him, and has since seen his son at work improving said land; that, to the best of his knowledge, the possession and improvement have been quiet and uninterrupted.

Claimant produces patent No. 152, to widow and heirs of J. B Campau; also a quit-claim from said widow and all the heirs, except one daughter, Bazilade, to Jean Bpt. Campau, son and brother; also a deed of exchange between said J. B. Campau and present claimant; and also the quit-claim of said sister Bazilade and her husband, François St. Obin, to the present claimant; by which respective instruments all the rights, interests, and titles of the widow and several heirs seem to have been transferred to present claimant in and to the lands herein claimed; but it appearing, also, that the lands here claimed are already appropriated to the purposes of back concessions and otherwise, yet, in consideration of the apparent justice of the present claim, and the distinct and long-continued occupancy thereof, the commissioners do recommend the same to the favorable attention of Congress.

No. 14.—Henry Campau.

DETROIT, May 20, 1821.

Henry Campau, son of the late François Campau, and assignee of the heirs of François Campau, deceased, makes application and entry for confirmation of six hundred and forty acres of land, lying immediately in rear of the tract of land, forty acres in depth, confirmed to Louis Moran, in trust for the heirs of François Campau. Said applicant predicates his claim on the following facts: that ten years previous to the arrival of General Wayne's army in 1796 his late father improved and occupied a tract of land, about five acres, in the rear of the land confirmed as aforesaid; that, in pursuance of the act of Congress, he conceives, had an entry been made pursuant to the law, he would have been entitled to a confirmation of six hundred and forty acres; that the improvement and possession were continued, and have been uninterrupted until the present time, by his deceased father during his lifetime, and by this applicant since his death; that, being of French extraction, not understanding the English language, and not having received an education that would enable him to obtain the necessary information to the prosecution of his claim under the act of Congress, he is in a great measure excusable for neglecting to make his entry in proper season, and thereby avail himself of the bounty of the government. His claim, he is apprised, must in a great measure now depend for its confirmation on the liberality of the government. The land for which he solicits a confirmation is of comparatively little value but to himself; to him it would be valuable, to the government of little consequence. He submits his application, and the accompanying evidence in support of it.

HENRY CAMPAU.

TESTIMONY.

Gabriel St. Obin, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he well knows that François Campau, during his lifetime, occupied and improved a tract of land now lying immediately in rear of the farm occupied and improved by Henry Campau, son of deceased; that said deceased built a house, and made an improvement of about five acres in rear of the lands confirmed to Louis Moran, in trust for the heirs of François Campau, deceased, upon which land said deceased cleared off the timber, made fences, and improved it in the cultivation of grass and grain; that said possession and improvement were at least ten years before the arrival of General Wayne's army; that the possession and improvement have been continued from that time to the present by said deceased during his lifetime, and by the heirs of said deceased since that time; that he lived a neighbor to said deceased, and has frequently, in passing said improvement, seen the said deceased at work on said land, and since has seen his son, Henry Campau; that said possession has been quiet and uninterrupted, to the best of his knowledge.

Constant St. Obin, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he well knows that François Campau, deceased, during his lifetime occupied and improved a tract of land now lying immediately in rear of the farm occupied and improved by Henry Campau, son of said deceased; that said deceased built a house, and made an improvement of about five acres in rear of the land confirmed to Louis Moran in trust for the heirs of François Campau, deceased; cleared off the timber, made fences, and improved it in the cultivation of grass and grain; and that said improvement was at least ten years before the arrival of General Wayne's army; that the improvements and possession have been continued from that time to the present by said deceased during his lifetime, and by the heirs of said deceased since. Deponent has frequently seen said deceased at work on said land, and since his death has seen his son, Henry Campau, at work on it.

(See proceedings of the former commissioners, vol. —, pages 13 and 14.)

And thereupon, it being represented to the commissioners that the said Henry Campau is now lately deceased, and it appearing that the lands herein claimed are already appropriated to the purposes of back concessions and other confirmed claims, the commissioners think it proper only to express their opinion that the occupancy and improvement of this tract is clearly shown to have been prior to 1796, and continued to the present time. The board would therefore recommend this claim of the widow and heirs to the favorable attention of Congress.

No. 15.—Dominique Reopel.

The commissioners appointed to investigate the titles to lands in the district of Detroit will please take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situate on the Detroit river, bounded in front by the Detroit river; on the lower side by a lane running to the high road, by land claimed by François Lafontaine, deceased; on the rear by the highway; and on the upper side by lands claimed by the heirs of Angelique Cicot, containing about three arpents, more or less, French measure.

DOMINIQUE REOPEL.

Claimant files a deed of conveyance from his father, Ambroise Reopel, to him, the said Dominique Reopel. of said tract claimed.

And thereupon, the board having examined the surveys and patents of the said Cicot and Lafontaine farms, by which this claim is bounded on all sides, (of the latter of which it would seem to have originally formed a part,) find that the said farms of Cicot and Lafontaine do embrace all the lands here claimed by said Reopel; therefore the commissioners, although persuaded that injustice may have been done to said Reopel by the former surveys and confirmations thereon, owing, perhaps, to the ignorance or inertness of said Reopel in the prosecution of his claim before former land boards, do not feel themselves authorized to interfere, or in any manner to contravene the acts of former surveys confirmed by Congress. The commissioners are of opinion that Mr. Reopel can only find redress in a court of equity. They are therefore constrained to postpone this claim.

No. 16.—Joel Thomas.

DETROIT, June 27, 1821.

Take notice that I claim title and make entry of a tract of land situate on the south border of the river Rouge, opposite a tract now owned and occupied by Mr. Buckline. I claim title to 640 acres, bounded in front by river Rouge, as above stated, on the upper side by a tract purchased at public sale by Henry McGee, on the lower side by land claimed by James Cisne, and in rear by United States land. I claim title to the said tract in consequence of an improvement made on the same by John Reynolds, and as his assignee.

JOEL THOMAS,
By JAMES McCLOSKEY.

The REGISTER of the Land Office of the district of Detroit, Michigan Territory.

TESTIMONY.

Aaron Thomas, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that twenty years ago last spring he was on the premises now claimed by Joel Thomas, on the river Rouge, as assignee of John Reynolds; that there was on said premises an improvement of about two acres, which had been cultivated, and that, in addition to the two acres, there were some six or eight acres which were partly enclosed; that, from appearances, there had been on said premises a log cabin, which had been burned; and that, previous to the late war, I understood that Joel Thomas claimed the tract of land alluded to; and that the improvement which was made thereon previous to my going on the premises I have always believed to have been made by John Reynolds.

Amos Gorden, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that about three years ago he was on a tract of land on the south side of the river Rouge, now claimed by Joel Thomas, on which said tract there appeared to be an old improvement; that about ten acres of which appeared to be enclosed with the old rails; which improvement I have been informed was originally made by John Reynolds.

John Reynolds, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four or five he took possession of a tract of land situate on the south border of the river Rouge, and opposite a tract of land now owned by William Bucklin; that he cleared some three or four acres of land on said tract, and that deponent continued in possession of said tract until sometime in the year 1798 or 1799, about which time I left this Territory, and has since been absent until a short time since. Deponent states that he has ceded to Joel Thomas all his right, title, interest, or claim to said tract, in consequence of the improvements made by deponent in 1794 or 1795.

Claimant produces a deed of conveyance from said Reynolds to said Thomas of a tract of land situate and described as above in said Thomas' claim, containing six hundred and forty acres; said deed is dated May 22, 1821.

The commissioners are of opinion that continued and uninterrupted possession from 1796 to 1807 is not proved by the claimant, but that said improvement was abandoned by Reynolds in 1799, and was never reoccupied by him or the present claimant. This claim is therefore rejected.

No. 17.—Gabriel Godfroy.

DETROIT, September 28, 1821.

The commissioners appointed to investigate the titles to land claims in the district of Detroit will please take notice that I claim title to a tract of land situate on the northeast side of river Huron of Lake Erie, bounded in front by said river, to be laid out in a square form, to contain six hundred and forty acres, lying opposite to lands patented to me and my heirs; which tract I claim by virtue of actual settlement, long and valuable improvements, and possession.

G. GODFROY.

TESTIMONY.

Charles Chovin, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that previous to July 1, 1796, a tract of land situate on the north border of the river Aux Huron, at or near a place commonly called the establishment of La Chambre, claimed by Gabriel Godfroy, sr., was then occupied and cultivated by the said Gabriel; that there was always a field fenced in of about ten acres; and further, that this field was kept in cultivation, and claimed by said Gabriel, until the year 1812, when the war broke out and prevented the cultivation. Deponent never knew of any other claim to said tract than the said Gabriel's.

John Bpt. Sans Crainte, jr., being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that previous to July 1, 1796, a tract of land situate on the north border of the river Huron, near Detroit river, and near the place commonly called the establishment of La Chambre, claimed by Gabriel Godfroy, sr., was then occupied and cultivated by the said Gabriel; that there was a field fenced in of about ten or twelve acres; and further, that this field was continually cultivated and claimed by said Gabriel until the late war in 1812. Deponent knows of no other claimant than the said Gabriel.

The commissioners, on examining this claim, do find that the lands here claimed have been sold by the government. The exhibits furnish strong evidence of validity, and good grounds in equity for confirmation. The commissioners would therefore recommend to the revising authorities for confirmation to the said Gabriel Godfroy a tract of land not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, to be located upon one entire quarter section of the public lands in the vicinity of the lands so claimed and sold, which may have been offered at public sale, and which may remain unsold at the time said claimant may be authorized to locate his claim.

No 18.—J. B. Sans Crainte.

DETROIT, July 6, 1821.

GENTLEMEN: I beg leave to draw your attention to my claim to a tract of land situate on the north side of river Huron of Lake Erie, containing six hundred acres; bounded in front by said river; on the west by lot No. 636, confirmed to Gabriel Godfroy; on the east by the strait of Lake Erie; and to the northeast by the United States lands; reference being hereby made to the said claim No. 636, being part of my original tract, and the evidence produced and recorded in volume 7, page 60, being said Godfroy's seventeenth claim, and book called by Mr. Audrain No. 1, but lately numbered 3, page 298. I claim by virtue of my long possession at the Old Ferry stand (below which No. 636 the present toll-bridge is erected at river Huron aforesaid) and improvements thereon made by me at this ferry stand for several years previous to July 1, 1796, and for several years after, until he sold part of the said original tract to said Gabriel Godfroy, who had charge of said premises now claimed, and occupied the same occasionally as a ferry, for this claimant, from December 3, 1800, for several years afterwards. While I occupied this ferry stand in 1795 I had the honor of crossing Captain Shonbury and a party of dragoons who were sent from Greenville by General Wilkinson to demand the delivery of the post of Detroit; and I was promised by General Wayne that this tract should be certainly confirmed to me by the United States government in part recompense for the influence I exercised in taking all the Pottawatomie Indians and others to the treaty of Greenville, at great personal hazard and expense; and also for my said services at said treaty of Greenville.

B. SANS CRAINTE.

The COMMISSIONERS of the United States Land Office for the district of Detroit and Territory of Michigan.

TESTIMONY.

Pierre Cheine, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1795, during the month of June, he crossed at the old or lower crossing place, at said river Huron, about one mile below the present crossing or toll-bridge across said river, and was ferried over said river by Pierre Sans Crainte, the son of the said Jean Bpt., who at that time had a house erected there, a field enclosed of about nine acres, and this deponent has always understood that the said Jean Bpt. Sans Crainte and his sons occupied, possessed, and improved the same until two years ago, ever since the said month of June, in 1795, aforesaid.

Antoine Barron, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the fall of the year 1794 he assisted Perish and Francis Barron to build a log-house on the tract at the ferry for Jean Bpt. Sans Crainte, near the present toll-bridge. In the spring following, deponent went to the river Huron and aided the said Sans Crainte and his sons in building another log-house at the lower traverse on the said river Huron, on the east side, where the said Sans Crainte cultivated a tract of land. Sometime after said Sans Crainte sold a piece of land to Gabriel Godfroy, situate where the old toll-bridge now stands. From the time above mentioned (when said deponent assisted in building a house) the said J. B. Sans Crainte, by himself and his children, kept possession, occupied, and improved the land at said lower ferry, and, moreover, from the spring of the said year 1795 until the commencement of the late war; but at the return of peace they returned and cultivated said premises until the same were partly disposed of by the commissioners of the United States land office at Detroit, and sold at public auction.

It appears to the commissioners, after investigating this claim, that said claimant, Jean Bpt. Sans Crainte, did possess, occupy, and cultivate a tract or piece of ground situate below that tract or parcel of ground sold by him to Gabriel Godfroy, and that, in this tract, the said claimant would have been confirmed had he preferred his claim in due time. But as this was not made by him, and the lands claimed are now sold by the United States government, therefore the present commissioners can only recommend for confirmation to the revising power a tract of land containing three hundred and twenty acres, to be located on such entire half section of the public lands, in the vicinity of that claimed, as may have been offered at public sale, and shall remain unsold at the time said claimant may be authorized to locate the same.

No. 19.—Antoine Lasselle.

DETROIT, September 22, 1821.

Take notice that I claim title to a small island situate in the river Raisin, containing about three acres, more or less, which island forms part of my mill-dam. I claim by virtue of possession, occupancy, and improvement.

ANTOINE LASSELLE.

The COMMISSIONERS of the Land Office.

TESTIMONY.

Gabriel Godfroy, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he purchased a farm at the river Aux Raisin, about twenty years ago, from one Baptiste Contour, which property has since been sold, and is now the property of the heirs of James Lasselle. A small island is situate close to the mills of Antoine Lasselle, which is on the north side of the river Aux Raisin and adjoining the farm of said Antoine. A dam, which is one of the appurtenances of said mill, is bounded by the farm of the late James Lasselle, on the south side of said river. Deponent has seen the said island improved, and believes it to have been cultivated up to the present time.

Colonel Francis Navarre, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that about thirty-one years ago this deponent lived at the river Aux Raisin, and that he, this deponent, tilled, ploughed, &c., the ground on a small island situate in the river Aux Raisin, in the county of Monroe, for the Pottawatomie tribe of Indians, whose chief claimed the same as belonging to said tribe. The said island is situate close to the mills owned by Antoine Lasselle, on the north side of said river, and touching the said mill of the said Antoine, and also bounded by the farm of said Antoine Lasselle, and on the south side of said river; the other said dam, which is an appendage to the said mills, is bounded by the farm of the late James Lasselle, deceased. From that period until the same came into the possession of Antoine Lasselle, by purchase, in 1806, and from that period until this present time, the said island has been cultivated more or less every year.

It appears to the commissioners that the said Antoine Lasselle would have been entitled to a confirmation of said island had it been included in his entry of claim for the tract adjacent, and which was confirmed to him by a former board. The commissioners would therefore recommend to Congress for confirmation the said island as claimed, containing three acres, more or less, provided that the said island has not been included within the lines of any tract of land confirmed by any former board of commissioners, subject, however, to all the rights in law or equity of all creditors, mortgagees, or other persons whatsoever, of, in, or to the said island, as an appurtenance to said mill or farm, so formerly confirmed to the said Antoine.

DETROIT, September 29, 1821.

The heirs and legal representatives of James Lasselle, deceased, enter their claim to a certain island of land, containing about three acres, more or less, lying on the river Raisin, in the county of Monroe and Territory of Michigan. They claim said island by right of occupancy, possession, and improvement, made and had by the said James Lasselle, deceased, in his lifetime, and those under whom he derived title and possession, from and since July 1, 1790, which said island lies in front of the farm purchased from Parre Solo, and by him patented to Antoine Lasselle, and numbered 46 on the plan of survey remaining in the office of the register of the land office at Detroit.

THOMAS CALDWELL, Administrator of James Lasselle, deceased, for and in behalf of the heirs of James Lasselle, deceased.

The COMMISSIONERS of the Land Office at Detroit.

No testimony being adduced in support of this claim, and the same island being recommended for confirmation upon the last foregoing entry of Antoine Lasselle, the commissioners do reject the same.

No. 21.—Antoine Bourgard.

To the commissioners of the land office at Detroit, Michigan Territory:

Take notice that I claim title to a tract of land lying on the north border of the river Raisin, containing five hundred and sixty arpents, being seven arpents in front by eighty in depth; said tract being situate and lying between a tract, No. 486, confirmed to James McGill, and a tract, No. 479, confirmed to J. B. Racine. I claim title to said tract in consequence of occupancy and improvement previous and since the year 1796.

ANTOINE BOURGARD.

TESTIMONY.

Louis Monimy, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that previous to the first day of July, in the year seventeen hundred and ninety-six, Antoine Bourgard was in possession and occupancy of a tract of land situate on the north border of the river Raisin, lying between a tract of land on the west belonging then to Isaac Gagnier, and on the east by a tract belonging to John Askin, deceased, being seven arpents in front and eighty arpents in rear; and this deponent further states that several years previous to said 1st day of July, 1796, the said Antoine Bourgard fenced a field of about three acres of land; said Bourgard lived on said premises several years after the said 1st day of July, 1796; and that he always claimed said premises, and has had a son for several years living on said premises.

Joseph Jobin, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1787 Antoine Bourgard was in possession of a tract of land situate on the north border of the river Raisin, lying between a tract of land on the west belonging then to Isaac Gagnier, and on the east by a tract of land belonging to John Askin, deceased, being seven arpents in front by eighty in depth; and this deponent further states that several years previous to the 1st day of July, 1796, the said Antoine Bourgard fenced in a field, raised corn, potatoes, rye, &c., and built a house on said tract, and lived in the same for a number of years after 1796; that said Bourgard has always claimed said tract, and one of his sons has lived on said tract for a number of years.

Francis Navarre, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1792 Antoine Bourgard was in possession of a tract of land situate on the north border of the river Raisin. The remainder of deponents' affidavit confirms the two preceding ones.

The present commissioners are of opinion that had this claim, with the testimony now adduced, been presented to a former board, it would then have been confirmed; and had this claim been filed according to law this board could not have refused to confirm the same. The board do therefore recommend the said claim to Congress for confirmation to the extent claimed, provided that the western line of the tract, No. 486, heretofore confirmed to James McGill, and a prolongation thereof, extending to the distance of eighty arpents from the river Raisin, shall form the eastern line of this tract, at which point, eighty arpents at right angles thereto from the said river, a line to be run seven arpents in length, to be the rear boundary; and thence, by a line parallel to the first mentioned, to the said river Raisin, to such point as shall be seven arpents upon said river from the place of beginning; and thence, by the meanders of said river, to said beginning, provided that the lines of this tract shall not interfere with the lines of any lands heretofore or by the present board confirmed, nor with the lines of any of the public lands that may be sold prior to the period when said Bourgard or his legal representatives may be authorized to have the said claim surveyed; and further, saving expressly all the legal or equitable rights which the heirs or legal representatives of James McGill, deceased, may have in or to said tract.

No. 22.—Joseph Menard.

AUGUST 27, 1821.

I, Joseph Menard, enter my claim for a tract of land situate on the south border of the river Raisin, containing two hundred arpents, French measure, more or less, bounded as follows, to wit: on the east by a farm claimed or owned by Jean Baptiste Gerome, and on the west and rear by United States lands, in front by the river Raisin. I claim this tract in virtue of actual possession and improvement made on said tract prior to 1796, and continued from that time until 1807, and I still improve said tract.

JOSEPH MENARD.

TESTIMONY.

Joseph Robinet, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that the farm claimed by Joseph Menard was occupied in the year 1795, and that the possession was kept up until the year 1807, and at this time there is a house and a large field enclosed; that he knows of no other claimant to said farm. It is bounded on the east by Jean Baptiste Gerome, in rear and on the west by United States lands, in front by the river Raisin. That said Menard held a deed from Joseph Cheine, which was recorded at Detroit by George Hoffman, which has been burnt.

Jean Baptiste Gerome, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that on or about the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four he was acquainted with a farm claimed by Joseph Menard, on the south border of the river Raisin, sold by Joseph Cheine to said Menard; that the farm was improved at that time, and that the improvement was kept up from that time until 1807, and it still is improved. The said farm is bounded on the east or lower side by a farm claimed by me, and on the west and rear by United States lands, in front by the river Raisin, and he knows of no other claimant to said farm; that he knows of said Menard's having a deed for said farm from Joseph Cheine; that it was burnt in the office of Laurent Durocher.

The commissioners do recommend to Congress for confirmation to the said Joseph Menard the tract of land claimed, provided the same do not exceed five arpents in front, French measure, and not exceeding in depth forty arpents, upon the line of the tract of land claimed by Jean Baptiste Gerome, upon which this claimant's purports to be bounded, nor in the whole two hundred arpents; and provided also that said claim shall not interfere with the lines of any public lands which may be sold, nor with the lines of any lands confirmed by former commissioners, or heretofore confirmed or recommended for confirmation by the present board; and it is further recommended by this board that should the lands above described have been sold prior to the period when said claimant shall be authorized to have the same surveyed and returned to the register of the land office, then the said claimant be allowed to locate this claim upon such of the public lands adjacent to said claim as may have been offered for sale and remain unsold.

No. 23.—Jean Baptiste Gerome.

I, Jean Baptiste Gerome, make entry and claim title to a tract of land situate on the south border of the river Raisin, containing seven hundred and twenty apernts, it being six arpents in front by one hundred and twenty in depth, bounded on the east by Mr. Giles, on the west by United States lands. I claim in virtue of possession, occupancy, and improvement made on said tract prior to the year 1796, and continued from that time until 1807, and up to the present time, August 27, 1821.

JEAN BPT. GEROME.

TESTIMONY.

Joseph Reaume, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he is well acquainted with the farm claimed by Jean Baptiste Gerome, on the south border of river Raisin, sold by Joseph Cheine to said Gerome; that previous to the year 1793 said farm was improved, and that the improvement has been kept up until the present time; that he knows of no other claimant to said farm. There is a large field fenced in and under improvement. Said farm is bounded by Mr. Giles on the lower side, and on the upper side by United States lands, and in front by the river.

Robert Navarre, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he is well acquainted with a farm claimed by Jean Baptiste Gerome on the south border of river Raisin, sold by Joseph Cheine to said Gerome; that previous to 1794 said place was improved, and a house built on it, and that the improvement has been kept up to the present time. Said farm is bounded by Mr. Giles on the east, and on the west by United States lands. He knows of no other claimant to said land.

Claimant produces a deed from Joseph Cheine to him (the said Jean Bpt. Gerome) for a tract of land of six arpents in front by one hundred and twenty in depth, bounded and described as above.

Upon consideration of this case, the commissioners do recommend to Congress for confirmation to the said Jean Baptiste Gerome a tract of land situate as above described, provided that said tract do not exceed five arpents, French measure, in front upon said river by forty arpents in depth, nor in the whole two hundred arpents; and provided also that the lines of said tract shall not interfere with the lines of the tract last above recommended for confirmation to Joseph Menard, nor with the lines of any tract confirmed by a former board, or by the present board confirmed or recommended for confirmation, nor with the lines of any public lands which may be sold. And it is further respectfully recommended that in the event of the lands herein claimed having been sold prior to the time that the said Gerome shall be authorized to have the same surveyed, then that the said Gerome be allowed to locate the land so confirmed to him upon such of the public lands adjacent to this claim as shall have been offered for sale and remain unsold.

No. 24.—Bt. Sousore, Menard Labadie, and Etienne Duval.

Take notice that we, B. Sousore, Menard Labadie, and Etienne Duval, do respectively enter and make claim to the several tracts mentioned and described in the following depositions.

The Register of the Land Office.

TESTIMONY.

Jeane Bpt. Sans Crainte, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the month of April, in the year of our Lord 1794, the chiefs of the Ottaway nation came and requested of this deponent to go with them to Otter creek, near river Raisin, for the purpose of receiving a tract of land which they had given to the Cheine family in consideration of the good-will and affection which they bore towards said Charles Cheine and his sons, in consequence of their friendship towards their nation, by suffering them to lodge on their premises, and giving them nourishment as often as they came to Detroit on business. He further testifies that he went as interpreter, in company with Antoine, and Franc, and Touissant Cheine, to Otter creek, where the chiefs showed them the tract of land, and proceeded, according to their custom, to butt and bound the same by planting a post at each corner, and making their customary mark with vermilion. He further testifies that the tract of land, according to estimation, was about three miles square.

Medare Labadie, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that about twenty-two years ago Mr. Pierre Cheine, in company with Baptiste Sans Crainte and Mr. Neuveville, a surveyor, came to Plaisance, near the river Raisin, and laid out several farms or parcels of land belonging to the late George Lyons and Thomas Surechley's children. This deponent further states that Col. Choabert was also with the aforesaid persons, and was aiding and assisting in surveying said lands, being a party interested in the deed of gift of said lands. He further deposeth that Pierre Cheine, uncle to the late George Lyon's children, sold and conveyed to Francis Robert a farm of four acres or arpents in front, and in rear about twenty-five arpents; also to Gabriel Bondy another farm, and to Etienne Duval another farm, all of four arpents in front by twenty-five arpents in depth. This deponent further deposeth that he was personally present when the bargain and sale of the aforesaid farms was made by P. Cheine to the persons aforesaid, for and in the name of the late George Lyons' children, who were under his charge as administrator to said estate and guardian to said children; that the said Robert Bondy and Duval promised to give said P. Cheine a good and sufficient security for the faithful payment of sixty pounds, New York currency, for each of said farms for the children aforesaid. This deponent further deposeth that François Robert, about two years ago, sold this farm to Bt. Sousore, who actually resides upon said farm; and that Gabriel Bondy sold his farm to Antoine Goie; that said A. Goie resided upon it about three years, and then sold it to this deponent, who is now in possession of it; that Etienne Duval continues to remain on the one he purchased; and further this deponent saith not.

Claimant files a deed from the Indians, dated 1796, to Cheine.

Upon examination of the testimony adduced in support of the above-mentioned claim, the board does not discover proof of actual possession and cultivation in 1796, nor do they find that any entry was made thereof within the time prescribed by law. The commissioners do therefore disaffirm the same. But, in so much as the said claimants appear now to be, and for a long time have been, in the actual possession and cultivation of the same, they respectfully recommend their case to the favorable notice of the government.

No. 22.—Hyacinthe La Joie.

Take notice that I now, [the remainder omitted in the original.]

The REGISTER of the Land Office at Detroit.

TESTIMONY.

François Lasselle, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he has no knowledge of Joseph Jobin's having sold to Jaques and François Lasselle a tract of land situate on the north side of Otter creek, as per contract or deed executed by Joseph Hyroque to said Joseph Jobin, dated February 5, 1800.

Dominique Drouillard, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1800 he saw on a tract of land now claimed by Hyacinthe La Joie a small field of corn and a small house; and that said improvement had been made on said land by François Monimy, who afterwards sold to Hyacinthe La Joie; said land is situate on the Bay settlement, bounded in front by the Fourche aux Cyne, in rear by unconceded lands, on the east side by Jaques Martin, and on the west by Dominique Drouillard.

Louis Monimy, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1800 the tract of land now claimed by Hyacinthe La Joie at the Bay settlement was improved; said tract is bounded in front by the Fourche aux Cyne, in rear by unconceded lands, on the east side by Jaques Martin, and on the west by Dominique Drouillard. Deponent further saith that these improvements were made by François Monimy, and afterwards sold to the said Hyacinthe La Joie.

No testimony being adduced showing the continued occupancy and improvement from 1796 to 1807, the board do therefore reject this claim.

In the rejection of the foregoing claims the commissioners have been governed by a sense of duty. They are aware that a rule is prescribed to them which they may not transcend. Motives of policy, principles of humanity, circumstances of individual hardship, form considerations for the framers of the law rather than for those who execute it. The commissioners venture to submit to the government, however, that had they suffered themselves to be influenced in this respect by the considerations above alluded to, they would have confirmed not only to the above-named claimant the tract applied for by him, but they would also have extended the same benefit to the other heads of families established at the settlement called "La Bay." This settlement was principally formed after the arrival of General Wayne, and the consequent establishment of the American government here; it consists of about twenty families of Canadian French. Prior to the late war, the settlement is represented as having been as thriving as any other of the Canadian settlements in the Territory. The notoriously faithful, zealous, and active part its inhabitants took in supporting the cause of their country during the war resulted in the burning and utter destruction of their houses, barns, and property by the British Indians. The most deplorable sufferings followed in the train of so barbarous an act. In the fond hope that the government would, in consequence of their fidelity and distress, confirm their possessions to them, they again returned, even before the termination of the war, and with renewed industry erected cabins and temporary shelters, and have since reoccupied their former fields. In the view of these facts, represented to the commissioners in a manner to preclude doubt of their truth, it is respectfully submitted to the government that an act may be passed for their relief.

TERRITORY OF MICHIGAN, County of Michilimackinac, ss:

Be it remembered that on the 18th day of August, in the year one thousand eight hundred and twenty-one, personally came before me, the undersigned justice of the peace for said county, Patrick McGulpin, who, after being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he has resided in this country since the year 1776, and well acquainted with Charles Gauthier in his lifetime; that as early as the year 1780 the said Charles had a farm under cultivation and improvement at Point aux Peris, on Bois Blanc island, where this deponent believes he continued to reside until about the year 1807; that the said Charles erected a house on said point, in which he lived, the remains of which may be now seen on the place where it stood. This deponent recollects that said Charles always claimed the whole of Bois Blanc island below Point aux Peris, and a short distance above; and that the farm before mentioned was a part of said tract; that the title of said Charles to said tract was founded on a sale or grant to him by the Indians, and was ratified and confirmed to said Charles by Governor St. Clair by a deed or patent; that while this country was in the possession of the English the said Charles always obtained payment for timber cut on said land without his permission, and his title to it was acknowledged by the British officers and others at this post.

TERRITORY OF MICHIGAN, County of Michilimackinac, ss:

Be it remembered that on the 30th day of July, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-one, personally came before me, the undersigned justice of the peace, Louis Chevallier, who, after being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he has long resided in this country, and was well acquainted with Charles Gauthier in his lifetime; that in the year 1796 he saw a deed of confirmation from Governor Sinclair to the said Charles Gauthier of a tract of land which said Charles had purchased from the Indians, situated on Bois Blanc island. It conveyed to said Charles all that part of the island lying east of a line commencing opposite to a small stony island above Point aux Peris, in a sandy bay, and running thence directly across said Bois Blanc island to a marked tree on the shore which was then standing, but has since fallen; that Doctor David Mitchell had cut a quantity of pine timber on said tract near Point aux Peris, which said Charles demanded as belonging to him, it having been taken from his land; that the dispute between them was referred to Major Burbeck, of the American army, then commanding at this post, and then the deed above alluded to was produced by said Charles in support of his claim and title, and it was then this deponent saw it. He recollects the Major's decision was that the timber should be delivered to said Charles, and that the said deed conveyed to the said Charles a clear title to the tract before mentioned, and this deponent well remembers how the said timber was afterwards used by said Charles; and further, that the said Charles was in possession of the said land long before the English took possession of and commenced fortifying the island of Michilimackinac, and that he then had a house at Point aux Peris, on said tract, where he and his family resided, and had six or seven acres under improvement and cultivation; that the said Charles, by himself or his family, continued to reside there until the year 1807, as this deponent believes, although of this he is not positively certain. And further he saith not.

Sinclair, who then commanded the British forces, ratified, by a deed, part of the island of Bois Blanc to Charles Gauthier, King's interpreter, for past services, which tract had been ceded to the said Charles Gauthier by the Indians; that he knows that the said Charles Gauthier always had possession of the said tract, and the right was respected by the American officers when the American government took possession of Mackinac; and further, that the said tract of land has been cultivated and improved by the said Charles Gauthier until the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seven, or thereabouts.

Ezekiel Solomons' claim.

DETROIT, October 30, 1823.

Upon consideration of the testimony adduced in relation to the occupant of the tract on the 1st day of July, 1812, under whom the present claim is made, the commissioners would not deem themselves justified in confirming it. No testimony adverse to the present claimant appearing, and many informal statements having been made contravening the testimony offered against the occupant in 1812, to which the commissioners attach weight, they recommend the claim for confirmation. The time to which the powers of the commissioners are limited does not admit of additional testimony being asked for in the case.

Jean Baptist Bertrand's claim.

NOTICE.—I, Jean Baptist Bertrand, hereby enter my claim, under the laws for ascertaining and deciding upon claims to lands in the Territory of Michigan, to a piece or tract of land situated at Point St. Ignace, in the county of Michilimackinac, in the Territory of Michigan, opposite to the island of Michilimackinac, lying upon the shore of the bay or head of Lake Huron, and bounded as follows, to wit: on the north by land claimed by Pierre Muller, and on the south by land claimed by Augustin Amlin, being about seven arpents in front, and extending back from the margin of said lake eighty arpents, be the same more or less; said piece or tract of land having been purchased by me of one Louis Babba, about three years ago, who is since deceased, and a valuable consideration paid him therefor by me, as appears by the deposition of Joseph Delvare and Antoine Martin, senior, herewith transmitted.

Amlin; being about seven arpents in front and extending back, from the margin of said lake, eighty arpents, be the same more or less; that this deponent has heard the said Louis Babba say, during his lifetime, that he had sold and disposed of said piece or tract of land to one Jean Baptist Bertrand, of said county of Michilimackinac, and this deponent verily believes that the said Bertrand did, at the time of purchase, pay the said Babba a valuable consideration therefor; and that as well said Babba as the said Bertrand have at all times submitted to the authority of the United States of America. I, the undersigned, do hereby certify that in the beginning of August last I visited the French inhabitants at the Point of St. Ignace, in the vicinity of the island of Michilimackinac, and that I then did see Jean Baptist Bertrand in full possession of a tract of land placed between Augustin Amlin on the south and Pierre Muller on the north side, about seven acres, more or less, in front, and eighty in depth; and that

Also a copy of a certificate of survey of a claim of Joseph Vaillincourt at the same place. It is the desire of those interested that these papers be attached to the proceedings of the commissioners acting under the law of February 11, 1823, before whom the claims were brought.

I have the honor to be, &c., your obedient servant,

MICHILIMACKINAC, October 18, 1817.

I certify that I have surveyed the claim of Joseph Vaillincourt in conformity with the original survey of this village. This claim contains one hundred and three thousand nine hundred and fifty-two square feet.

Book No. 7.

Claims at the Sault de Ste. Marie, within the county of Michilimackinac.

Notice.—The inhabitants of the village of Pauwayteeg enter their claim with the register of the land office at Detroit to the following described lot, as common, to wit: bounded in front by the river Ste. Marie, in rear by lots claimed by John Johnston, Jeanette Cadotte, Lymon M. and Freeman A. Warren, and John Drew, on the east side by a part of the lot claimed by said Johnston, and on the west side by the lot claimed by Charles O. Ermatinger; said common being five hundred and seventy-five feet long upon the river, and one hundred and twenty feet in depth.

Be it remembered that on the —— day of July, 1823, came before me, the undersigned, John Johnston, esq., who, being duly sworn, says that the tract of land marked on the map hereunto annexed "old common" was a common in the year 1791, and used by the inhabitants of this place as such, and has continued to be so used to the present day by them; that said common extends upon the border of the river about 575 feet, and runs back from the river about 120 feet; that it is bounded on the west by the lot formerly occupied by Jean B. Nolin, on the east or lower side by a part of said deponent's lot, and in rear by the residue of said lot, and those now occupied by Madam J. Cadotte, J. Bt. Dubois, and the lot formerly occupied by Jean Bt. Cadotte, sr.

JOHN JOHNSTON.

Taken and subscribed before me.

J. D. DOTY, Judge.

All the witnesses to the claims at Pauwayteeg stated to me that the tract has always been a common. A part of it was formerly occupied by the French troops, and the residue by Jesuits; their buildings, chapel, &c., I am informed by some of the oldest men here, were upon it; and since it was abandoned by them has remained a common.

J. D. DOTY.

Detroit, October 20, 1823.

A majority of the commissioners, not conceiving this claim on the part of the inhabitants of the village of Pauwayteeg to come strictly within their powers of decision, decline to act upon it, but recommend it to the revising power for confirmation.

Notice.—Charles Oaks Ermatinger enters his claim with the register of the land office at Detroit, to be laid before the commissioners under the act of Congress, to a certain tract situated immediately below the Sault de Ste. Marie, at the village of Pauwayteeg; bounded on the westwardly side by the Indian encamping grounds, eastwardly by the lot formerly occupied by the late Jeane Bt. Cadotte, and in front by the river Ste. Marie, and described as follows by Aaron Greely, surveyor of Michigan Territory, in his certificate of survey dated September 6, 1810, to wit: "a tract of land situated at the Sault of the Ste. Marie, claimed by John Bt. Nolin, it being seven Gunter's chains and twenty-eight links in front, by two hundred and fifty Gunter's chains in depth, and containing one hundred and ninety-two acres."

Papers filed in support of the preceding claim.

(A.) The copy of a deed of conveyance from the General Fur Company to Mr. Simon McTavish, for Jean Bt. Nolin, in which their previous purchase of a Mr. Barthe is mentioned. (B.) The copy of a deed from certain Indian chiefs at the Sault to Jean Bt. Nolin of said tract. This deed will be found upon record at Detroit, in "Records of Wayne County, No. 1, page 143." This record is in the hands of the register of probate. (C.) Aaron Greely's certificate of survey of the lot, dated September 6, 1810. (D.) The copy of an affidavit made by Colonel McKay and Doctor D. Mitchell, at Drummond's Island. The original has been mislaid or lost. (E.) A deed of bargain and sale of the tract and premises from Jean Bt. Nolin to C. O. Ermatinger. (F.) The affidavits of Joseph Piquette, William Harris, and Colonel John Johnston, taken before J. D. Doty.

To the commissioners:

This is considered by the settlers one of the oldest and best claims in the settlement. It is certain that it was occupied and cultivated many years before the year 1788. Although none but the last conveyance appear to be in form, yet I suppose, from conversations with the oldest inhabitants, there is no doubt of its having been regularly sold for a valuable consideration, so as, in the opinion of the parties, completely to invest in the present claimant the title or right to the possession. The situation has always been a very valuable one, and for a long time the most eligible of any in the place. It lies very near the site of the old French fort and the Jesuits' houses. Mr. Nolan was, for a long time, the principal agent of the Fur Company. He purchased it at a very high price, if it was not a very considerable establishment. The present claimant paid two thousand two hundred dollars for it. The buildings, which were standing upon the lot when taken possession of last year by the United States troops, have, under an order of the Secretary of War, and without the application or knowledge of Mr. Ermatinger, been appraised at one thousand dollars, and the proper officer directed to pay the same to him. It is presumed a similar appraisement will be made of the value of the land so soon as it shall be determined by the commissioners that the title is in Mr. Ermatinger.

I am instructed that the order of the Secretary of War to the commanding officer who took possession of this site for the fort was express that he was in all cases to respect private rights and claims. I know it to have been the opinion of that officer (Colonel Brady) that there were no rights or claims of citizens on the river St. Marie which would be confirmed by government. He therefore felt himself at liberty to locate where he pleased, and accordingly selected this lot, and removed the family then in possession of the premises entirely away from them, so that they were left without a house to shelter them, although the title of the present claimant was repeatedly stated to Colonel Brady by Mr. Ermatinger and by myself, as well as others, and the papers hereunto attached exhibited to him. Nevertheless, he stated that he considered himself justified, under the order of the Department of War, and that if Mr. Ermatinger had a claim he would be remunerated for it. Mr. Ermatinger's right to the buildings appears to be acknowledged by the government. I do not see, therefore, that anything which has been done by the military authority can injure this claim.

Be it remembered that on the 7th day of July, 1823, personally came before me, the undersigned judge, at the village of Pauwayteeg, at the Sault de Ste. Nolin, the lot and establishment thereon erected, consisting of several buildings, now claimed by Charles O. Ermatinger, esq., and of which Colonel Brady, commanding the United States troops, has taken possession; and that the said J. B. Nolin, during the said year 1788, took possession of the said lot of land and the establishment, and continued to occupy, possess, and improve the same, from the said year to the year one thousand eight hundred and nineteen; and that during the time that the said Nolin was in possession of said premises this deponent knows that said Nolin greatly improved the same, by erecting thereon a large dwelling-house and several extensive out-houses. That about nine years since this deponent was passing the Sault, and he then saw Mr. Nolin in the possession of the said premises, improving and cultivating the same. And further he saith not.

On the same day came before me Colonel John Johnston, who, being duly sworn, says that in the year one thousand seven hundred and ninety-one, he passed the Sault Ste. Marie on his way into the Indian country, and in one thousand seven hundred and ninety-three he became resident at the said Sault; that in the year 1791 Jean Bt. Nolin was in the possession and improvement of the premises situated immediately below the Sault, described in the annexed notice, now in the possession of the United States troops; that this deponent has continued to reside at the said Sault since the said year 1793; and this deponent well knows that the said Nolin, from the said year to the summer of the year 1819, continued in constant possession of the said tract and premises, and to cultivate and improve the same, undisturbed, as his own property; and further, that he understood the said Nolin was well affected towards the American government, and that he dined with the officers of the American army during the war, and they otherwise associated with said Nolin; that since 1819 Mr. C. O. Ermatinger has been occupying and cultivating said lot until dispossessed by the United States troops last session.

DETROIT, October 20, 1823.

The claim of C. O. Ermatinger to a tract of land lying at the Sault de Ste. Marie, in the county of Mackinac and Territory of Michigan, being under consideration before the commissioners at Detroit, Solomon Sibley, attorney for the United States of Michigan Territory, appeared before the said commissioners on behalf of the said United States, and gave them to understand and be informed that the said United States government are now in the actual possession of the land claimed, occupying the same as a military post or garrison, under a reservation of said land made by competent authority; whereupon the said attorney did and does, on behalf of said United States, enter a caveat, and make protest against the authority of said commissioners to sustain said claim, or otherwise to act thereon in prejudice of the rights and interest of the said United States, under the reservation made of said land as aforesaid.

SOLOMON SIBLEY,
For the United States Territory of Michigan.

It appears from the records of the proceedings of the commissioners under former laws of Congress that a notice of this claim (of C. O. Ermatinger) was duly entered with the register of the land office at Detroit, December 30, 1808, and testimony received, but no decision made thereon; whereupon the commissioners, on consideration of the testimony adduced and the facts above recited, do confirm to the said C. O. Ermatinger eighty arpents in depth, upon the extent in front set forth in the preceding notice of claim.

NOTICE.—John Johnston enters his claim with the register of the land office at the city of Detroit, to be laid before the commissioners under the act of Congress, to a certain tract of land situated at Pauwayteeg village, below the Sault Ste. Marie; bounded in front by the Old Common and the river Ste. Marie, on the westwardly side by a lot occupied by Madame Cadotte, eastwardly by a lot claimed by James D. Doty, and in rear by vacant lands, being four English acres in front by eighty in depth.

In support of this claim, the affidavits of Joseph Piquette, George Yarns, and Michael Cadotte, (the little,) are hereunto annexed and filed.

Be it remembered that on this seventh day of July, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-three, personally came before me, the undersigned, James D. Doty, judge, Joseph Piquette, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he is an inhabitant of the Sault Ste. Marie, where he has resided from infancy, and has a clear recollection of the time when John Johnston first settled upon the lands upon which he now resides at the Sault Ste. Marie; that the said John Johnston first occupied his lands in the year 1793; and that he has ever since been in the possession of said land; that about the same time he, the said John Johnston, commenced cultivating and improving his ground, and to erect buildings thereon. And further this deponent saith not.

JOSEPH PIQUETTE.

J. D. DOTY, Judge.

On the 8th day of July, 1823, came before me, the undersigned judge, at Pauwayteeg, George Yarns, who, being duly sworn, saith that he was at the Sault in the several years mentioned in his affidavit this day made, in relation to the possession of Jean Baptiste Cadotte, sr., and that each of these times he saw John Johnston in possession of the farm mentioned in the annexed notice, cultivating and improving the same; that he wintered, during the winter of 1809, with the said Johnston, when said Johnston was in occupation of said lot, and saw him frequently, before and afterwards, improving the same.

GEORGE YARNS.

J. D. DOTY, Judge.

On the same day of July also came before me Michael Cadotte, who, being duly sworn, says that he, of his own knowledge, knows that Mr. John Johnston has occupied, without interruption, the farm mentioned in the preceding notice, as therein described, from the year 1793 to the present time, during the whole of which time he has himself resided at the Sault; that said Johnston has made very extensive improvements, of buildings, &c., and has about forty acres under fence and cultivation; that during the whole of the time said Johnston has had peaceable and quiet possession of said premises.

DETROIT, October 20, 1823.

It appears that a notice of this claim was filed with the register of the land office at Detroit December 24, 1805, and testimony adduced in support thereof, and not fully acted upon. Whereupon the commissioners decide that the said Johnston be confirmed in eighty arpents in depth upon the extent of front claimed in his notice.

NOTICE.—Jean Baptiste Nolin enters his claim with the register of the land office at Detroit, to be laid before the commissioners under the act of Congress, to a certain tract of land situated at the head of the Sault Ste. Marie; bounded in front by the river Ste. Marie, on the north side by the line of the projected canal, on the south by vacant lands, and in rear by the lot now occupied by E. B. Allen, being about six acres in front, and the same in the rear, commencing with the line of said canal, more or less; or to such other quantity as the commissioners may determine him entitled to on the testimony herewith submitted.

I have examined this tract, and find upon the front of it the foundation and remains of a very large building, and the timber around it appears to have been cleared away at some early period.

J. D. DOTY.

On July 7, 1823, came before me, the undersigned judge, Joseph Piquette, who, being duly sworn, saith that about the year 1792 or 1793 Jean Bpt. Nolin was in possession of the tract of land situated at the head of the rapids of the Ste. Marie, and that he had a large storehouse erected thereon, where he transacted business; and, as well as he remembers, said Nolin continued in the possession of the same six or seven years thereafter.

JOSEPH PIQUETTE.

J. D. DOTY, Judge.

On the same day came before the said judge Colonel J. Johnston, who, being duly sworn, says that, according to the best of his knowledge and belief, Jean Baptiste Nolin built his storehouse at the head of the portage mentioned in the preceding deposition, and that he continued in constant possession of the same, trading there for seven years afterwards.

JOHN JOHNSTON.

J. D. DOTY, Judge.

On July 19, 1823, came before me William Morrison, who, being duly sworn, says that he recollects distinctly, the first year he passed the Sault, which was in 1802, of seeing Jean Baptiste Nolin in possession of the tract described in the annexed notice; that Mr. Nolin had a very large storehouse erected on it; and this deponent recollects well of taking goods out of the same, and of transacting business there with Mr. Nolin; that the foundation of the store is yet remaining on said lot. Said Nolin continued to reside at the Sault until the year 1819 or 1820, since which time he has been chiefly at Red river.

DETROIT, October 21, 1823.

Upon examination of the testimony adduced in support of this claim of Jean Baptiste Nolin, the commissioners do not deem themselves authorized to consider it as coming within the provisions of the law, and it is therefore not confirmed.

NOTICE.—The legal heirs of John Sayre enter their claim with the register of the land office to the following tract of land: bounded in front by the river, on the east side by the Indian encamping ground, and on the west by a lot formerly occupied by one Dufour, being three acres in front by eighty in depth.

Be it remembered that on the 9th day of July, 1823, personally came before me, the undersigned judge, John Johnston, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that in the year 1791 the late John Sayre, the father of the present claimants, was in the possession of the lot of land at the Sault described in the annexed notice; that said Sayre had then erected on said lot a dwelling-house, a very large storehouse, stores, out-houses, &c., and had a very extensive and beautiful garden on the same. This deponent occupied said premises himself during the winter 1793; that said Sayre continued in the possession of said premises, either by himself or others for him, until about the year 1797; that the deponent was well acquainted with the boundaries of the said lot, and the foundation of the houses and the stumps of the pickets may yet be seen; and this deponent thinks the lot was at least three full acres in front upon the river.

JOHN JOHNSTON.

Taken and subscribed before me.

J. D. DOTY, Judge.

On the 8th day of July, 1823, came before me, the undersigned judge, Michael Cadotte, (the little,) who, being duly sworn, saith that in the year 1790 John Sayre was in possession of the lot and premises mentioned in the annexed notice, and built many houses, and cultivated a very beautiful garden in the rear of the buildings, larger than any other at the place.

That said Sayre himself occupied the premises until the year 1793, when he went into the Indian country to trade, and left the premises in possession of his clerk and agent, whose name was Michael Augie, who took care of it for Mr. Sayre for about two years; that Mr. Sayre then placed a Mr. John Reed in possession of the lot, who continued to occupy it until 1797.

That said Augie and Reed both cultivated and improved the said premises for Mr. Sayre, which was at that time the most eligible situation in the country; that, to the best of his knowledge, said Sayre died (according to his information) five years since, at Montreal; that after Mr. Reed left the country, in 1797, and while Mr. Sayre was in the Indian country, the Indians destroyed his buildings on said lot, so that, on Mr. Sayre's return, it was of so little value, or the expenses of repairing it would be so great, that he engaged in the service of the Northwest Company, and went to Montreal to reside.

J. D. DOTY, Judge.

On the same day came before me Joseph Cadotte, who, being duly sworn, says that the late John Sayre, in 1792, purchased of one Parenteau a house and garden situated above said Sayre's first enclosure; that the garden extended a little above the house now occupied by Antoine Lalonet, and included one-half of the lot now claimed by said Lalonet; that sometime after said Sayre went into the Indian country Parenteau again sold his lot to one Dufour, although he had previously sold and given possession of it to Mr. Sayre; and the deposition next preceding this, made by Michael Cadotte, being read to this deponent, he assents to all of the facts therein stated, and now deposes to them, of his own knowledge.

Michael Cadotte being interrogated as to the facts above stated, testified to the truth of the same on oath, before me, on the same day.

J. D. DOTY, Judge.

DETROIT, October 21, 1823.

The commissioners, upon examination of the testimony adduced in support of this claim of the heirs of John Sayre, do not deem themselves authorized to consider it as coming within the provisions of the law, and it is therefore not confirmed.

NOTICE.—Lyman M. Warren and Truman A. Warren enter their claim with the register of the land office at Detroit, to be laid before the commissioners, to a certain lot or tract of land in the village of Pauwayteeg, bounded as follows, to wit: in front by the river St. Mary, on the east side by a lot formerly occupied by John Bt. Dubois, on the west by the lot formerly occupied by Charles O. Ermatinger, and in rear by vacant lands; the same being fifteen rods in width, more or less, and eight acres in depth.

NOTE.—Forty or fifty feet of the west side of this lot has been taken by the military, this year, and picketted in. Jean Bt. Cadotte, sr., was the original claimant. He possessed and cultivated the lot, and had many large buildings upon it, the foundation only of which now remains; he was upon it as early as 1760; he occupied it until May 24, 1796, as his own, and then gave it to his two sons, Michael and Jean Baptiste, jr., although he continued there with his family sometime after that day, about 1806. From 1796 the property was considered by all the parties to be in the daughter of Michael, by the gift of both brothers, until the marriage with St. Germain, when, as all of the parties appear to have understood it, and do still, it became St. Germain's, and they consented to his disposing of it. The sale of it to Warrens is confirmed by a deed executed by Michael C. to them. So that, if the gift to St. Germain's wife is not good, Michael had the entire disposal of it as the surviving joint tenant, I should suppose.

They all appear to agree now that the title is in the present claimants. Last year, when I visited the Sault, there was a dwelling-house standing upon the lot.

NOTE BY THE COMMISSIONERS.—The foregoing exposition is in the handwriting of Judge Doty, but is not signed by him.

Be it remembered that on the 8th day of July, 1823, personally came before the undersigned judge Joseph Piquette, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he has resided at the Sault de Ste. Marie since the year 1788, and that he was well acquainted with Jean Bt. Cadotte, sr., in his lifetime; that in the said year 1788 the said Cadotte, then an Indian trader at the said Sault, was in the possession and improvement of a farm situated on the south side of the river Ste. Marie, described in the annexed notice; that it was about fifteen rods in width, and extended back into the woods.

That the said Cadotte had about sixteen acres of said farm under cultivation and improvement, and a large dwelling-house and many extensive out-houses erected thereon; and was in occupation of the same, and cultivating it as formerly, when the posts in the Northwestern Territory were surrendered in the year 1796, and until the time of his death, in 1803, or thereabouts.

That, before and since his death, Michael Cadotte (whom this deponent always heard the said John Bt. acknowledge as his son) has claimed this lot as a gift from his father, who divided his land between his children before his death.

JOSEPH PIQUETTE.

J. D. DOTY, Judge.

Personally came before me, the undersigned judge, on the same day, George Yarns, who, being duly sworn, saith that in the year 1794 he passed the Sault, on his way into the interior of the Indian country, where he saw John Bt. Cadotte, sr., in the possession of the lot described in the annexed notice, and said Cadotte had a large trading establishment on the same; that in the year 1796, at the time and after the surrender of the posts to the Americans by the English, said Cadotte was in the possession and improvement of the said premises; that in 1801 this deponent passed the Sault again, and the said Cadotte was then in the possession of said lot; that in 1812 he was again at the Sault, when the said lot was fenced in and cultivated.

GEORGE YARNS.

J. D. DOTY, Judge.

On July 9, 1823, came before me, the undersigned judge, at the village of Pauwayteeg, John Johnston, esq., who, being duly sworn, saith that in the year 1791 Jean Bt. Cadotte, sr., was in the possession, occupancy, and improvement of the lot hereinbefore mentioned, and continued to occupy it until the time of his death; that said Cadotte was the first settler at this post after the occupation of it by the French troops, some twenty or thirty years before the said year 1791; that said Cadotte always acknowledged Michael Cadotte as his son; and this deponent always understood that the father and mother of said Michael were legally married, according to the forms of the Roman church, in Montreal.

J. D. DOTY, Judge.

On July 14, 1823, came before me, the undersigned judge, Michael Cadotte, who, being duly sworn, says that he is the son of Jean Baptiste Cadotte, sr., mentioned in the preceding claim; that his father took possession of the tract described in the annexed notice during the time the post at the Sault was occupied by the French troops; that he continued to possess and cultivate said lot until May 24, 1796, the day when the annexed deed, will, or conveyance was executed; that this deponent with his brother, Jean Bt. Cadotte, jr., then received the said lot from their father as a gift and for their services to him, and from the said May 24, 1796, occupied and cultivated the same, jointly with his brother, until the latter part of the same year, when they both gave the said lot and premises to the daughter of this deponent, who, ten or twelve years afterwards, married Leon L. St. Germain, the person mentioned in the annexed deed to L. M. and T. A. Warren, and they vested in him the entire fee of the same; that, notwithstanding the said gift, this deponent and his brother continued to possess and cultivate said lot until about the year 1806, when they surrendered the same to the said St. Germain, and they have never made claim to the same since; that said St. Germain continued to possess and cultivate said lot until he sold the same to L. M. and T. A. Warren, the present claimants, without having abandoned the same at any time during that period; since which time the said Warrens have been in the possession of the same; that the brother of this deponent, before mentioned, died about the year 1818; that this deponent has no interest in this claim, nor does he consider that he has had any title to the same since the said gift to the wife of St. Germain.

On July 18, 1823, came before me, the undersigned judge, at Mackinac, John Holliday, who, being duly sworn, says that he has passed the Sault Ste. Marie every season since the year 1802, and from that year to the year 1816 he has seen the tract of land mentioned in the annexed notice enclosed and under cultivation and improvement, during which time Michael Cadotte, or some one claiming for or under him, has been in the possession of said premises; that the remains of old Mr. Cadotte's buildings, the foundations, pickets, &c., may yet be seen on the lot.

DETROIT, October 21, 1823.

The claim of Lymon M. Warren and Truman A. Warren to a tract of land at the head of Ste. Marie, in the county of Michilimackinac, in the Territory of Michigan, being under consideration before the United States commissioners, &c., Solomon Sibley, attorney for said United States, Territory of Michigan, being present, gave said commissioners to understand and be informed that the land claimed by said Warren is part and parcel of the land occupied and used by the United States as a garrison and military works at said Sault of Ste. Marie, under a reservation made thereof by competent authority, and therefore ought not to be adjudicated upon by said commissioners under the claim of said Warrens. Whereupon the said attorney for the United States makes opposition to, and enters his caveat against, the claim of said Warrens, and against any act of said commissioners therein that may in anywise, directly or indirectly, affect or prejudice the rights and interests of said United States in and to the land claimed and reserved by their authority for military purposes, as above suggested.

SOLOMON SIBLEY,
Attorney for the United States, Territory of Michigan.

Whereupon the commissioners do decide that the above-named Lymon M. Warren and Truman A. Warren be confirmed in a tract of land of the width set forth in their notice of claim, and extending eighty arpents in depth, provided that nothing in this decision contained be so construed as to interfere with the claim for common of the village of Pauwayteeg, if Congress should think proper to confirm the same for common; and, in the event of the confirmation by Congress of said claim for common, then the said tract, claimed by the aforesaid L. M. and T. A. Warren, to be considered as fronting upon and commencing at the rear line of said common, (if it should be found that such common intervene between said tract and the river,) and running thence to a point which shall be eighty arpents from the border of said river.

NOTICE.—John Drew enters his claim with the register of the land office at Detroit, to be laid before the commissioners, to a certain tract of land situated at Pauwayteeg village; bounded in front by the old common, on the east side by a lot claimed by Janette Cadotte, and on the west side by a lot claimed by Lymon M. and Truman A. Warren; the said lot being eighty feet in width by eighty acres in depth.

DETROIT, October 21, 1823.

The commissioners decide that John Drew be confirmed in a tract bounded as follows: beginning at the westwardly end or side of the house of Madame Cadotte, and extending thence westwardly, with the rear line of the old common, to the boundary line of the tract confirmed to L. M. and T. A. Warren, and extending in depth, with lines of said Cadotte and Warrens, to a point which shall be eighty arpents from the border of the river Ste. Marie.

NOTICE.—Madame Janette Cadotte enters her claim with the register of the land office at Detroit, to be laid before the commissioners under the act of Congress, to a certain lot or tract of land situated in Pauwayteeg village; bounded in front by the old common, on the east by the homestead of Mr. John Johnston, and on the west side by the lot formerly occupied by Jean Baptiste Dubois; the same being seventy feet wide and eighty acres in depth.

The affidavits of Joseph Cadot, of Joseph Piquette, and John Johnston are filed in support of the claim.

NOTE.—The west end of Mrs. Cadotte's house (which appears to be a very old one) stands on the west line. The witnesses were very clear in their testimony as to the front being seventy feet wide. I state this to the commissioners because this west line will probably be contested.

The foregoing note is in the handwriting of Judge J. D. Doty, though not signed by him, say the land board.

Be it remembered that on July 8, 1823, came before me, at Pauwayteeg, Joseph Cadotte, who is a brother-in-law of the claimant, who, being duly sworn, says that Madame Janette Cadotte has resided quietly and peaceably upon the lot mentioned in the annexed notice since the year 1807, and has never at any time removed from the same; that she has, during this time, cultivated and improved the front of said lot, and has a considerable portion of it fenced in; that she has at all times, to the best of the knowledge of this deponent, continued to submit to the authority of the United States.

The commissioners decided that Madame Janette Cadotte be confirmed in a tract of land described as follows: beginning at the west or upper end or side of the house occupied by her, and running thence eastwardly, with the rear line of the said common, seventy feet, to the boundary line of a tract confirmed to John Johnston, and extending in depth eighty arpents, computed from the margin of the river.

NOTICE.—James Duane Doty enters his claim with the register of the land office at Detroit, to be laid before the commissioners under the act of Congress, to a tract of land situated below the Sault de Ste. Marie, bounded in front by the river, on the east side by a public highway, and on the west side by the homestead of John Johnston, esq., and in the rear by vacant lands; said tract being six English acres in front and eighty in depth.

NOTE.—This tract was owned and cultivated by Jean Bpt. Nolin from the year 1810 to the year 1819, when it was sold by him to Mr. C. O. Ermatinger.—(See the deed between these parties annexed to the claim of Charles O. Ermatinger, No. 1.) Mr. Ermatinger owned and cultivated it until sold to the claimant.—(See affidavits and deed annexed hereto.) This note the commissioners, as explanation thereof, state to be in the handwriting of Judge J. D. Doty, although his name is not annexed thereto.

Be it remembered that on the 7th day of July, 1823, personally came before me, the undersigned justice of the peace, Charles O. Ermatinger, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that about the year 1810 Mr. Jean Bpt. Nolin was in possession, occupancy, and improvement of the tract of land specified in the annexed notice, now claimed by James D. Doty, and that he had sowed and raised considerable grain on the said lot; that said Nolin continued to cultivate the same until he sold his right and title thereto to this deponent in the year 1819, when said deponent took possession thereof, and of which he received a deed from said Nolin bearing date August 14, 1821; that this deponent continued to possess and cultivate said tract from the said year 1819 until he sold his title and interest in and to the same to said Doty. And further, he saith that during the time said Nolin was in possession of said lot as aforesaid, he was a quiet and peaceable citizen of the United States, to the best of the knowledge and belief of this deponent.

DETROIT, October 22, 1823.

A majority of the commissioners confirm to the claimant, J. D. Doty, a tract of land, to be bounded as follows: beginning at the point where the easterly or lower line of the claim of John Johnston to the tract where he now resides intersects the river Ste. Marie, and running thence eastwardly, with the river, six English acres, provided the same does not conflict with the claim of John Johnston below the tract hereby granted, and extending on said front eighty arpents in rear.

NOTICE.—John Johnston enters his claim with the register of the land office at Detroit, to be laid before the commissioners under the act of Congress, to a certain tract of land situated at Pauwayteeg village, below the Sault de Ste. Marie, bounded in front by the river Ste. Marie, on the east side by the woods, on the west side by a lot claimed by James D. Doty, and in the rear by vacant lands; being four English acres in front upon the river by eighty acres in depth.

In support of this claim, the affidavits of Joseph Cadotte and Joseph Piquette.

Be it remembered that on the 8th day of July, 1823, came before me, the undersigned judge, Joseph Cadotte, who, having been duly sworn, saith that in the spring of the year 1809 he assisted Louis Nolin to clear the tract of land mentioned in the annexed notice, four English acres in width, (No. on the map 10,) now claimed by John Johnston; that he made a garden and built a house; that said Nolin sold said tract and his improvements to John Johnston, as said Nolin told this deponent in the year 1811, and at that time gave possession of it to said Johnston; that said Johnston has been in the occupancy and cultivation of said lot and premises ever since the said year of 1811 to the present time, uninterrupted.

DETROIT, October 22, 1823.

At the sitting of this day the preceding claim of John Johnston was confirmed agreeably to the bounds set forth in his notice of claim, substituting the word arpent for acre in relation to the depth of the tract.

DETROIT, October 22, 1823.

Upon examination of the testimony adduced in support of the following claim of the heirs of Francis Nolin, a majority of the commissioners do confirm so much of the tract claimed to the heirs of the said François as is comprehended within the following bounds, viz: commencing at a point upon the river Ste. Marie, where the upper line of the enclosure of said François would intersect the same; thence down the river to a point where the lower line of said enclosure would intersect the same, and preserving the same front, extending in the rear between parallel lines to be run from the said points, eighty arpents.

NOTICE.—The legal heirs of François Nolin enter their claim with the register of the land office at Detroit, to be laid before the commissioners under the act of Congress, to a tract of land situated below the Sault de Ste. Marie, bounded in front by the river, and upon each side by vacant lands, the same being four acres in front by eighty acres in depth, more or less.

Be it remembered that on the 8th day of July, 1823, came before me Joseph Cadotte, who, being duly sworn, says that the tract of land described in the preceding notice, claimed by the legal heirs of François Nolin, was taken possession of by said Nolin in the year 1811, and he then commenced the cultivation and improvement of about two acres in front of said tract, intending, as he declared, to extend it afterwards to four acres; that said Nolin continued to cultivate and possess the said lot until the year 1814, when he left the Sault for the Indian country, where he died, as this deponent has been informed, by starvation; that said Nolin had a fine and extensive garden on the front of said tract, and a considerable field under fence.

DETROIT, October 22, 1823.

Upon examination of the preceding claim, it appears to be embraced in that already confirmed to John Drew.

The undersigned, commissioners appointed under the act of Congress approved the 21st day of February, 1823, entitled "An act to revive and continue in force certain acts for the adjustment of land claims in the Territory of Michigan," do certify that they have examined the foregoing transcript from their proceedings relative to claims at the Sault de Ste. Marie, and that the same is, in substance, a true and correct report thereof.

In testimony whereof, we have hereto affixed our signatures.

WM. WOODBRIDGE,
JOHN BIDDLE,
Land Commissioners.

I certify that the foregoing is a correct copy of the proceedings and decisions of a majority of the board of commissioners upon the claims referred to, but with whose decisions, unfortunately, I cannot concur, as will appear by the protest annexed.

J. KEARSLEY, one of the Commissioners, &c.

The commissioners of the land board are unanimously of the opinion that, as they are acting under the limitations of an act of Congress, they cannot withhold confirmation to claims upon the grounds taken by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, inasmuch as the facts alleged in the remonstrance of the officers at the Sault de Ste. Marie are not presented in such legal form as to enable this board to take notice of them in their decisions. One of the commissioners, it is true, has differed in opinion from the majority of the board, but his opinion was expressed prior to the receipt of the communication of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and upon other grounds than those taken by him. As an expression, however, of their high consideration and respect for the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and the military gentlemen stationed at the Sault, and also in compliance with what may be considered their duty, this board have entered copies of the whole matter upon their journal of proceedings, and have subjoined hereto the originals transmitted by Mr. Graham.

PROTEST.

The undersigned, one of the commissioners for ascertaining and deciding upon claims to lands at the Sault de Ste. Marie and other places within the land district of Detroit, feels it a duty incumbent on him to protest against the confirmation adjudged by a majority of this board of title to all the land claimed by individuals situated at the said Sault, for the following and other reasons:

1st. The act of Congress of February 21, 1823, requires that the claimant should have submitted to the authority of the United States. This has not been positively shown in any case except in that of Madame Janette Cadotte. And it is a matter of notoriety that all or most of the inhabitants, in 1812, 1813, &c., of that district of country, were avowedly subjects of the kingdom of Great Britain, and most probably did bear arms against the United States.

2d. All acts of Congress giving donations of lands in this and other remote territories or settlements, to the early and first adventurers to such territories, contemplate, so far as I have been enabled to observe, a permanent residence for agricultural purposes. No such residence for such an object appears in the cases of the present claims. The original occupants were all, and still remain, British subjects, engaged in the northwest fur trade, and most of them about or soon after 1802, when our revenue laws came into operation in that district of country, removed to the British side of the strait, and there erected their buildings, to prosecute their trade and avoid our duties. This is emphatically the case as respects Nolin, Ermatinger, &c.

3d. A large proportion of the present claimants are adventurers of the last year, who have purchased claims on speculation, from their anticipated increase in value on account of the military post recently established there, and not with a view, as I believe, to agricultural objects, but to annoy the military, much to the injury of the troops, by furnishing the means of intoxication to the soldiery of the post; and it will be observed that private claims extend on either side to the very pickets of the post, and even include the ground within those pickets. Individuals of this class might without difficulty be named, but the invidious task is deemed unnecessary to the present object.

4th. It is a matter of fact that, although now, under the law of 1823, no less than sixteen claims are presented to this board, and testimony adduced in support of the same, yet of this number no more than two were presented, or pretended to, before any former board of commissioners; neither were these confirmed, nor was any single claim passed upon affirmatively, by any former board, although Congress has, by various laws from 1805 to 1823, given powers to commissioners therein appointed to hear and decide upon private claims to lands within the Territory. It is now only matter of surprise to every disinterested traveller who has visited the Sault de Ste. Marie no longer than three years since, when he could not discover a habitation except Mr. Johnston's, nor the evidence of a resident save that gentleman and family, how there could have been, so early as 1812, inhabitants, estimated by the claims now adduced, sufficient for the defence of that frontier. Of the two, Johnston and Nolin, who preferred their claims to a former board, the former, as it is said, commanded and led in person a company raised at the Sault in the descent upon Michilimackinac in 1812; and Mr. Nolin and sons were, as I am advised, of Captain Johnston's company. The original claimant, Mr. Nolin, sold to Mr. Ermatinger, and has removed to the colony of the late Earl of Selkirk, at Pembina, on the Red river. Mr. Ermatinger resides on the British side of the Sault, or perhaps at Drummond's Island, and, as I am informed, does not contemplate residing on his claim at the Sault, and looks for nothing beyond that compensation which the importance of the military site may induce him to demand from a government not his own.

That the matters alleged in the foregoing are susceptible of proof I have no doubt; and why they did not appear in such authentic shape as would enable the commissioners of this land board to spread them upon their proceedings is to me satisfactorily shown; and should Congress postpone their concurrence in the confirmations to lands at the Sault de Ste. Marie, and authorize the appointment of an agent to go there for the purpose of investigating strictly (under the law of 1823) the merits of these claims, I have little doubt that the allegation of General Brady, made in 1822 upon the spot, that he did not believe there was one good or valid claim at the Sault de Ste. Marie, will be found true.

DETROIT, October 22, 1823.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, October 9, 1823.

GENTLEMEN: I enclose copies of several papers relative to the claims of certain individuals for lands lying at the Falls of St. Mary's, in the Michigan Territory, which have been referred to this office by the Secretary of War, and are forwarded for your information, and with a request that these claims may be strictly investigated. It does not appear from the records of this office that any claim founded on a French or British grant has been filed by either of the claimants mentioned in these communications. Under the fifth section of the act of the last session of Congress you may have cognizance of these claims, with power to confirm them on account of occupancy; but, if the facts stated by the officers be correct, the claimants could not maintain their claim under that section of the act.

You will take care to confirm no claim to lands on account of occupancy which may interfere with the lands reserved by the United States for military and other purposes; and as the cession of the lands at the Falls of St. Mary's was obtained, by the treaty of 1820, with a view to the military occupation of the position, it would be advisable to make a special report on all the private claims within that cession which you might deem entitled to confirmation.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

GEORGE GRAHAM.

The COMMISSIONERS for the settlement of claims to land in the Michigan Territory.

SAULT STE. MARIE, August 8, 1823.

We, the undersigned, officers of the United States army, serving at the post at the Sault de Ste Marie, request once more permission to address the honorable the Secretary of War, and state to him some facts within our information on the subject of claims that citizens resident here and elsewhere have made to land within the limits of the four miles now belonging to government. The original occupants of these claims have, with a few exceptions only, removed from the United States, and sold their claims to others, who are now urging their rights to the land; and even these former possessors of the soil, without an exception, were active, during the last war, on the part of the English, and bore arms against the Americans.

We, therefore, are of opinion that they are not entitled to the land they claim by the fifth section of the law passed last session of Congress on the subject of land claims within the county of Mackinac, because the claimants have not one them submitted to the laws of the country, and the most of them have left the United States since the year 1812.

But as we are fearful a correct and impartial representation of these claims will never be made to the commissioners by those whose proper business it is to do it, we conceive it to be our duty to make known, as far as is in our power, the pretensions these persons have to the land they are claiming; and, to explain more clearly, we enclose herewith a draught of the several claims, together with the quantity each one demands.

In the first place, the ground on which our cantonment stands (No. 9) was occupied by Mr. Nolin, a warm and zealous friend of the English in the late war, who went with their troops as far as the island of St. Joseph's, on their way to Mackinac; but was compelled, by ill health, to return, though he had two sons who were at the capture of the latter place; since which Mr. Nolin has sold this claim to a British subject, and then removed into Canada, where he has been living from the year 1816.

Another of these claims, (No. 4,) on which are the gardens for the troops and ourselves, was purchased by a subject of Great Britain from this Mr. Nolin, and been sold by him, we are informed, to the Indian agent at this place, and Judge Doty, a short time since. As this claim is now used for public purposes, (as gardens,) we think the third section of the law before alluded to is so explicit that it will not be granted if the fact of its being so used is known, but we are doubtful if it would be known except through us.

The next claim (No. 5) is now in possession of Mr. Johnston; and he, like all other of these claimants, bore arms, with two of his sons, against the United States, during the last war, though since that time he has resided here, and submitted to our laws.

One other claim, (No. 10,) adjoining our cantonment, is said to be the property of the half-breed children of a Mr. Sarpes, deceased, who did not himself reside, nor have any of his children resided, we believe, within the limits of the United States since the year 1812. This land is now claimed, we are informed, by the Indian agent at this place, and a citizen by the name of Allen, and includes the site reserved by the government, in their instructions to Colonel Brady, for the erection of a permanent military work.

The next claim in order (No. 11) was purchased but a short time since by several citizens from a Canadian, who held his title from one who was equally active with others during the late war against the Americans; and this claim includes land now used for public purposes, and on which there is a saw-mill lately erected by the tooops.

In support of all these assertions we have now nothing else to offer but our opinion; but if measures can be taken to have a person sent here qualified to take a deposition, we pledge ourselves to prove what we have asserted by the oaths of several who now are, or have been, residents of this place.

We would wish further to state, besides the land on which are our gardens, the cantonment, and the saw-mill, that the ground on either side and in rear of our pickets is claimed; but we think it prudent that it should be retained for our own security, in case it should ever be necessary to defend ourselves from an attack.

If these claims are granted, there will be no end to impositions on government, not only for the price that will be demanded for the land on which we are now located, but for any other that it may be thought necessary to purchase; and in this cold and inclement country, if the government has to purchase wood, it will cost more in one year than the value of the land it grows on.

All this we most respectfully submit to the honorable the Secretary of War, in order that when a fair statement of the justice of these claims and the propriety of allowing them is made to him, it will then be in his power to prevent grants for land to which the claimants have no just title, and if granted to them will be of such serious injury to the public.

In addition to the foregoing remarks, we beg leave further to state, as an apology for our not giving more positive proof, that the persons who are competent witnesses to establish our assertions are unwilling to come forward and give their evidence unless compelled to do so, as they are averse to making themselves odious to so many claimants unless legally required to testify under oath.

SAULT DE STE. MARIE, July 29, 1823.

The officers stationed at the post of the Sault de Ste. Marie unanimously beg leave to represent to the honorable the Secretary of War the evils and inconvenience resulting to the service from the number of citizens settled in the immediate vicinity of this cantonment.

When the detachment arrived here in the month of July last the number of persons resident at the place was three, exclusive of the former occupants of the land; and now, within the space of one year, there can be ten counted whose only apparent means of livelihood consists in the trade they improperly carry on with the soldiers of the garrison and Indians.

These citizens have been repeatedly told by us of the impropriety of furnishing the soldiers with liquor; but, contrary to our wishes, and in defiance of our orders, they still continue daily to supply it to them, and take in return the clothing of the soldier, or whatever else his intemperance may induce him to barter for the means of intoxication; and it is unnecessary for us to remind the honorable the Secretary of War of the evil consequences arising when men have an unrestrained indulgence in the use of ardent spirits.

This state of things we could submit to with the more patience if there was a prospect of its changing; but, on the contrary, each day increases the number of these houses, and adds to the facility which our men already possess of getting intoxicated.

We therefore request of the Secretary of War that measures may be taken to prevent a traffic so injurious to the service within the limits of the public land; and, as all those persons have settled on it without the least pretension to a title, that they may be ordered off, as it is, we believe, the most effectual means of getting rid of a practice so hurtful to the soldier and troublesome and annoying to us.

We would not thus intrude ourselves on the attention of the Secretary of War if there was a remedy for the evil in our power; but we know of none other, unless recourse be had to a court of justice, the distance of which from us, together with the expense and trouble that a legal process necessarily involves, renders all redress in that way impracticable.

They further depose that farm lots, numbered on said plat 19 and 28, were occupied and cultivated before and on the 1st day of July, 1812, by Euphrosine

Upon consideration of the preceding claims the commissioners decide that the same be confirmed, reference being had for their extent and situation to the testimony and plat presented to a former board, provided that the present claims do not conflict with any confirmations heretofore made, and that the tracts claimed do not in any case contain more than six hundred and forty acres, or extend more than eighty arpents from front to rear.

Claim of the legal heirs of Claude Gagnier.

NOTICE.—The legal heirs of Claude Gagnier enter their claim with the register of the land office at Detroit to a tract of land situated at Prairie du Chien, bounded in front by the rear of a farm lot, No. 13 on the plat of the commissioners, being six acres in front by eighty in depth. This lot is situated in a valley formed by the bluffs or hills; none of it is upon the prairie. Some of these hills are entirely bleak, and can never be cultivated. Upon others there are few scattering trees. It is a very broken tract of land.

On the 2d day of September, 1823, came before the undersigned judge, at Prairie du Chien, Michael Brisbois and Pierre La Riviere, who, being duly sworn, say that the late Claude Gagnier was in the possession and cultivation of the tract described in the annexed notice before and during the year 1796, and until the time of his death in 1803; and that since the year 1803 his heirs have possessed and cultivated the same, and have at all times submitted to the authority of the United States. They occupied said tract on the 1st day of July, 1812. Upon examination of the preceding claim, it appears to be embraced in the decisions of a former board.

DETROIT, September 30, 1823.

NOTICE.—I, Gabriel Chene, hereby enter my claim to a donation of land in rear of a piece of land owned by me, situated on the river Detroit, containing one arpent in front by forty in depth, more or less, bounded on the north by lands heretofore sold by Cicile Boyer to the claimant, and on the south by lands claimed by Louis Chapaton.

GABRIEL CHENE.

Gabriel Chene, in support of his claim to a donation of land in rear of a tract owned by him on the river Detroit, produces a patent from the President of the United States to the widow and heirs of Antoine Boyer, deceased, granting to them a tract of land situated on the Detroit river, containing 136.59 acres, bounded and described as follows: beginning at a post standing on the border of the river Detroit, between this tract and a tract confirmed to Louis Chapaton; thence north 29° west, 116 chains, to a post; thence north 61° east, 12 chains 2 links, to a post standing on the west line of a tract confirmed to Francis Paul Malcher; thence south 29° east, 111 chains 14 links, to a post standing on the border of Detroit river; thence, along the border of said river, south 29° west, 12 chains 97 links, to the place of beginning; also a deed from Cicile Boyer, widow of Antoine Boyer, deceased, and John M. Boyer, son and heir-at-law of said Antoine Boyer, deceased, conveying to said Gabriel Chene all their right and title to a tract of land described as follows: bounded in front by the river Detroit; on the north by lands sold by them to said Chene; on the south by lands claimed by Louis Chapaton; and in rear by unconceded lands, being one arpent in front by eighty in depth, including the back concession. The claimant heretofore purchased the remainder of the tract described in the patent above recited, and has obtained the back concession.

DETROIT, November 1, 1823.

In the preceding case it appears the back concession claimed has been confirmed by a previous board.

To the commissioners for investigating and deciding upon claims for lands within the district of Detroit:

NOTICE.—You will please to take notice that we claim as a donation, the right and second concession, so called, of so much land in the rear of and adjoining to the tract heretofore confirmed to us by the patent of the President of the United States of the date of July 3, 1812, bounded on one side by land adjoining to a tract confirmed to Jean Baptiste La Pierre, and on the other by a tract confirmed to John Little, so that our said tract may extend to the depth, in the whole, of eighty arpents; this entry being a renewal of the entry heretofore made by us for the same object.

On examination of the preceding claim, it appears to be embraced in the decisions of a former board.

DETROIT, September 30, 1823.

NOTICE.—I, William Brown, hereby give notice of my claim to a donation of land in rear of a farm owned by me, situate on Detroit river, containing one hundred and eighteen acres, being part of a tract of land situated on the river Rouge, confirmed to Alexis Descountis Labadie, bounded in front by the river Detroit, on the west by the river Au Vase, and on the east by lands claimed by the late François Chabert.

WILLIAM BROWN.

William Brown makes claim before the commissioners to a donation of land adjoining a tract belonging to him on the Detroit river, and produces the following document: a deed from Louis Leduc conveying to said Brown a tract of land described as follows: that certain tract of land containing 248.08 acres, it being part of a tract of land situate on the river Rouge, confirmed, by virtue of an act of Congress entitled "An act regulating the grants of land in the Territory of Michigan," to Alexis Descountis Labadie, and granted to him, the said Labadie, by patent, May 12, 1812, reference being had thereto. The above-bargained premises are bounded and described as follows: beginning at a post standing on the south border of the river Rouge, between this tract and a tract confirmed to Louis Leduc; thence south twenty-nine degrees west, one hundred and seventy-two chains twenty-five links, to a small white oak; thence south sixty-one degrees east, nine chains, to a post; thence south fifty-two and one-fourth degrees east, nine chains, to the river Au Vase; thence, along said river, down stream, south thirty-eight degrees west, fifteen chains; thence south eight and a half degrees east, five chains eighty-six links; thence south twenty-three degrees east, three chains fifty links; thence south seventeen degrees west, seven chains sixty-four links, to the mouth of the river Au Vase and border of Detroit river; thence, along the border of said river, up stream, north thirty-one degrees east, twelve chains and twenty-seven links; thence north seventy-four degrees east, fourteen chains four links; thence east, nine chains thirty-nine links; thence north seventeen and a half degrees east, three chains ninety-six links; thence north fifty-eight degrees east, seventeen chains sixty-two links, to a post standing on the border of Detroit river, between this tract and a tract claimed by the late Francis Chabert; thence north fifty-two degrees fifteen minutes west, thirty-nine chains, to a post; thence north twenty-nine degrees east, one hundred and fifty chains forty-two links, to a post; thence north sixty-one degrees west, eight chains seventy-three links, to the place of beginning. The claimant also produces a patent from the President of the United States to Alexis Descountis Labadie, granting to him a tract of land containing 360.5 acres, and described as follows: beginning at a post standing on the south border of the river Rouge, between this tract and a tract confirmed to Louis Leduc; thence south twenty-nine degrees west, two hundred and thirty-six chains forty-one links, to a post standing on the line of St. Cosme; thence, on said line, south seventy-five degrees east, seventeen chains sixty-nine links, to a post standing on the border of Detroit river; thence, along the border of said river, up stream, north forty-five degrees east, fourteen chains thirty-eight links; thence north thirty-one degrees east, twenty-eight chains seventy-nine links; thence north seventy-four degrees east, fourteen chains four links; thence east, nine chains thirty-nine links; thence north seventeen degrees thirty minutes east, three chains ninety-six links; thence north fifty-eight degrees east, seventeen chains sixty-two links, to a post standing between this tract and a tract claimed by Francis Chabert; thence north fifty-two degrees fifteen minutes west, thirty-nine chains, to a post; thence north twenty-nine degrees east, one hundred and sixty chains forty-two links, to a post; thence north fifty-one degrees west, eight chains seventy-three links, to the place of beginning.

DETROIT, November 1, 1823.

Confirmed in 360.5 acres, or in such other quantity as shall be equal to the contents of the original tract, as the same was confirmed and patented to Alexis Descountis Labadie, and to be located on that part of the lands assigned for the satisfaction of the private land claims which were claimed by Thomas Smith, so as that the said 360.5 acres be so located as that the lines thereof do not conflict with the lines of any tract or tracts of land which may have been confirmed heretofore, or by the present board, to said Thomas Smith, or to any other person; the said William Brown to hold the same in trust for himself and for the heirs or other assigns of said Alexis D. Labadie, according to their respective interests therein.

DETROIT, July 29, 1823.

GENTLEMEN: Independent of my notice of August 28, 1821, which I filed with the former commissioners in conformity to the then existing laws of Congress, as the proprietor of Hog island, being claim No. 256, to which I beg leave to refer, claiming the whole of said island, and the second concession thereof, in conformity to the acts of Congress then in such cases made and provided, I now take the liberty, in conformity with another act of Congress, approved on the 21st of February last, to renew my notice of said claim, and to state upon what grounds I, in justice and equity, expect, in consequence of former and present notice, to have the whole of said island confirmed to me, my heirs and assigns, by this honorable board, as well as its appendages, being Lestelle au Sable et le batture qui va a Isle au Jonc, en approchant la dit Isle au Cochon; that is to say, as well as Sandy Isle and the sand-bar leading to and comprehending Rush Isle, near Hog island aforesaid; the whole of which appearing above water being considerably less than an acre in extent, lying and being about two thousand two hundred feet from Hog island aforesaid, as being appendages to the latter, and to which I am entitled, as the second concession to the same, viz: 1st. The old commissioners of the land office at Detroit confirm this claim to the heirs of Wm Macomb, deceased, their heirs and assigns, provided it did not exceed six hundred and forty acres of land, for which quantity your applicant, as assignee of said heirs, holds the President's patent. 2d. On actual survey, which your applicant has lately caused to be made of Hog island aforesaid, by J. Mullett, surveyor general of Michigan, he finds that the said island does not contain the six hundred and forty acres as patented, but, on the contrary, there is a considerable deficiency; therefore, should Sandy Isle, the said bar, and Rush Isle aforesaid, which I heretofore claimed and now claim, be added to Hog island, as appendages thereto, the whole would not complete the quantity patented. 3d. Your applicant, independent of the full quantity of six hundred and forty acres to which he is entitled as aforesaid, claims the second concession to the same as a donation, in conformity to the several acts of Congress above referred to. Hog island, bordering on the river Detroit, fronting to the south by the line dividing the British dominions in Upper Canada and this Territory, and in rear, towards the north, like the other farms on the Detroit river, eighty acres in depth, as a second concession, would certainly comprehend Sandy island, the said sand-bar, and Rush Isle aforesaid, and entitle him, by reason of lands in said river, and adjacent prior claims, to the residue from the United States lands unsold in the vicinity adjacent to and back of Hog island, so confirmed to him as aforesaid.

Your claimant therefore humbly prays this honorable board to grant him your subpœna, directed to J. Mullett, to testify in the premises aforesaid, and to cause justice and right to be administered to your claimant; and, as in duty bound, he will ever pray.

B. CAMPAU.

Hons. Wm. Woodbridge, Jonathan Kearsley, and John Biddle,
Commissioners for ascertaining and deciding on claims to land in the district of Detroit and Territory of Michigan.

Detroit, August 28, 1821.

Gentlemen: The undersigned, Barnaby Campau, a citizen of the United States of America, proprietor of No. 256, as assignee of David B. Macomb, one of the heirs of William Macomb, late of Detroit, deceased, to whom this tract of land, being Hog island, situate on the river Detroit, in the United States district of Detroit, was, by order and under the decree of Charles Larned, esq., register of the district of Erie, Huron, and Detroit, and by Lewis Cass, John R. Williams, and P. Lecuyer, esq., a committee appointed by said register, among other tracts, assigned to the said David B. Macomb, his heirs and assigns, January 7, 1817, as may be more fully seen, reference being had to said decree and partition, as recorded by Charles Larned in the records of said district, volume 3, pages 401 to 407; which said island was, by the said David B. Macomb, in consideration of the sum of $5,000, sold to the said Barnaby, his heirs and assigns, by deed dated March 3, 1817, as recorded by said Charles Larned, in said volume 3, page 454 and 455, as may more fully appear, reference being had to the original deed aforesaid, and the record thereof last above mentioned; the said Barnaby Campau claims the second concession of said six hundred and forty acres, in conformity to the act of Congress in such case made and provided. The said Barnaby Campau hereby also claims the whole of said Hog island by virtue of the treaty of amity, commerce, and navigation between his Britannic Majesty and the government of the United States, dated at London, November 19, 1794, where all the property, both real and personal, of the inhabitants of the now Territory of Michigan, as therein guaranteed to them, reference being hereby made to said treaty, which the said Barnaby nor his attorney cannot now have a sight of, but is claimed from memory; and reference is hereby further made to the records of the former United States commissioners for the district of Detroit, having been entered with them, December 2, 1805, as the third claim, volume 3, pages 354 and 355. The said Barnaby Campau also claims the aforesaid island by another deed from the said David B. Macomb, dated March 4, 1817, herewith, and by virtue of an order of his Britannic Majesty in council, dated at St. James, May 4, 1768, transmitted to the Hon. Thomas Gage, major general and commander-in-chief of all his said Majesty's forces then in North America, ordering him to put Lieut. George McDougall, late of the 60th or royal American regiment of foot, in possession of Hog island, which he, in consequence, purchased by deed from the Indians, executed in presence of George Turnbull, captain 2d battalion, 60th regiment, Commandant Daniel McAlpine, lieutenant 60th regiment, and James Amie, ensign 60th regiment, and assigned by the heirs of the said George McDougall to said William Macomb, his heirs and assigns, as recorded by the former commissioners in book A, folio 309 to 319.

I have the honor to be, with the greatest respect,

B. CAMPAU.

Hons. William Woodbridge, Jonathan Kearsley, and Henry B. Brevoort, Commissioners for settling the private land claims within the Territory of Michigan.

Detroit, November 1, 1823.

On examination of the preceding claim of B. Campau, the commissioners decide as follows: that in consideration of the fact, which is made to appear, that the survey of the original grant to the claimant did not, through mistake, contain 640 acres; that the claimant has an equitable right to the benefit of the law granting additional donation or back concession on the Detroit river; that the whole of the island called Hog island was originally entered upon strong grounds of claim; and believing that said Hog island does not contain more than, or very little beyond, 640 acres, the commissioners recommend that said island be confirmed entire to said B. Campau.

Detroit, August 20, 1823.

Please take notice that I claim, under the act of Congress granting lands to actual settlers, a tract of land lying on the west side of Grosse Isle, in the river Detroit, bounded as follows, to wit: beginning at the southwest angle of the tract of unconfirmed land on said island, and running thence east, on the north line of section No. 7, to a tract confirmed to Mr. Macomb; thence north, on the west line of said tract, so far as that a line drawn west to the river, running parallel with the north line of section No. 7, will include one section, or 640 acres of land, which I claim by virtue of the occupation and long-continued possession of my late father, whose sole heir I am, whose occupation commenced and continued from the year 1787 to the time of his decease, in the year 1794; and that the reason why I have not made application, or filed my claim before, is, that I lived at a distance from the place, and had been informed that the whole island had been confirmed to other persons.

JOSEPH MUNGER.

Hons. Wm. Woodbridge, Jonathan Kearsley, and John Biddle,
Commissioners of the Land Board.

Detroit, November 1, 1823.

On examination of the preceding claim, the commissioners decide that the claim be not confirmed, there appearing no unconfirmed land where the claim is located.

Detroit, August 20, 1823.

Please take notice, I claim, under the act of Congress granting lands to actual settlers, a tract of land lying on Frenchman's creek, on the south end of Grosse island, in the river Detroit, bounded on the north by the tract confirmed to Mr. Macomb, and on the west by the river Detroit, extending east along the line of Macomb's tract, so far as that a line drawn south to the end of the island will include (on the west side) one section of 640 acres of land, which I claim by virtue of the possession and long-continued occupation of my late father, whose heir I am, whose occupation commenced in the year 1791, and continued until the year 1795; and that the reason why I have not made application before is, I was ignorant of the provision made by law on this subject.

ISAAC TERRISS.

Hons. William Woodbridge, John Biddle, Jonathan Kearsley,
Commissioners of the Land Board.

Detroit, November 1, 1823.

Upon consideration of the preceding claim, the commissioners decide that the same be not confirmed, there appearing no unconfirmed land where the claim is located.

Detroit, October 28, 1823.

Pierre Bonhomme, who has heretofore given testimony in relation to a claim of Jean B. Racine, now adds that he has heard Louis or Alexander Bouvier say that he had conveyed to the said Racine his rights to the tract of land in question; and also that the only child and heir of said Racine was an infant at the time of her father's death, which may account for no notice having been heretofore given of this claim. This deponent also states that the tract claimed by the heirs of the said Racine was bounded on all sides (except in front) by public lands.

PIERRE BONHOMME.

Detroit, October 27, 1823.

Pierre Bonhomme states as follows: That Jean B. Racine, about the year 1801 or 1802, occupied a tract or piece of land situate on the Black river, or river Delude of the river St. Clair; that the said tract had been previously occupied by Alexis Bouvier, previous to the period when the Americans took possession of the country; that said Bonhomme has good reason to believe that Jean B. Racine acquired all the right which the said Bouvier had to the said tract; that the said J. B. Racine continued to occupy the said tract until the spring of 1811 or 1812, when he was killed by the Indians; that the said J. B. Racine had at least six acres under cultivation in front on said river; that this deponent knows, of his own proper knowledge, Marie Germaine, late Racine, is the only child and heir of the said J. B. Racine.

GEORGE McDOUGALL, J. P. C. W. T. M.

Detroit, November 1, 1823.

In the preceding case the commissioners decide that a want of notice being filed in due time takes from them the power of absolute confirmation; but, as the claim appears to be in every other respect legal, they recommend for confirmation the tract claimed, containing six arpents by eighty; or, in the event of the land claimed being sold, that the claimant be allowed to locate the same number of acres in the vicinity; the claimant being, at the time the notice was required to be filed, an unprotected orphan.

Detroit, June 26, 1821.

Notice is hereby given that I, Henry Connor, of the district of Detroit, make claim to a tract of land containing 640 acres, situate, lying, and being in the county of Wayne and Territory of Michigan, and within the land district of Detroit, and bounded as follows: on the northeast side by Joseph Tremble's land, on the southeast by land owned and claimed by Asquire Aldrich, and on the other side by the United States land; said tract of land being on the northeast side of Tremble's creek, and is known by the name of Baker's improvement. The said Henry Connor sets up claim and makes title to the above tract of land as assignee of Jacob Baker and Mary Flinn, late Mary Myers, the only children and heirs-at-law of Baker, their late father, now dead, who, whilst living, did claim said land to be granted and confirmed in him and his heirs and assigns, by virtue of occupancy, possession, and improvement by the deceased, had and made thereof prior to the year 1796, and continued thereafter: Wherefore, he prays he may be confirmed in and to said land as above described.

With respect, I am yours,

HENRY CONNOR.

TERRITORY OF MICHIGAN, County of Wayne, ss:

Be it remembered that on this 2d day of September, in the year 1823, personally appears before me, the undersigned, a justice of the peace duly commissioned and sworn in and for the county aforesaid, Gaget Marsac and Louis Grifford, both of the county aforesaid, who, being each severally and duly sworn, severally and each for himself, depose and say that they distinctly remember that long before Governor Wayne came into Michigan, and, as they each think, about six or seven years before that time, one John Baker was in the possession, use, and occupancy of a certain tract of land lying in the county of Wayne, on Tremble's creek, bounded on the northeast side by Joseph Tremble's land, on the southeast side by land occupied and claimed by Asquire Aldrich, and on the rear by the United States lands; said lands lying on the northeast side of Tremble's creek, and being known by the name of Baker's improvement; that the said Baker, prior to the time aforesaid, had built a house on said tract of land, had enclosed and fenced about twenty acres of land, and cleared and cultivated about ten acres; had built a house and small outhouses thereon, and planted an orchard, and continued to reside thereon until about a year before the time when General Wayne came to this country, when he was induced to move from it by fear of the Indians, who threatened him; but that he, the said Baker, continued to keep up the fences and to collect the fruit of the orchard till the time of his death, which happened in the year 1808 or 1809; that at his death he left two children, a son and a daughter, the son named Jacob Baker, the daughter named Mary Baker; that the said Mary afterwards married one Myers, and subsequently married a second husband, named John Flinn; that they, the deponents, each have resided in the neighborhood of the said tract from their infancy, and that they neither have known any person to have claim, possession, or occupancy of said tract of land, except the said children of the said John Baker, until the fall of the year 1822, when they understood one Joseph Cicord entered into and still resides on the said tract of land as a tenant of Henry Connor. And further the said deponents say not.

DETROIT, September 29, 1821.

GENTLEMEN: I have the honor of enclosing herewith, for your inspection, a deed from Jean B. Cicot, sen., to me, my heirs and assigns, for three hundred acres of land, being the same land or lot numbered by the former commissioners as No. 694, entered by the said Cicot with said commissioners October 31, 1805, situate on the south side of the river Raisin, in the now county of Monroe, bounded in front by said river, in rear by the United States lands, on the west by lot No. 208, (which has since been confirmed to Richard Patterson, his heirs and assigns,) and on the east by lands claimed by Jaques Godfroy, the natural son of Jaques Godfroy, deceased. The proofs taken by the former commissioners will show that the tract now claimed ought to have been confirmed to the said J. B. Cicot, and his said deed to me will, I trust, entitle me to a confirmation, to me, my heirs and assigns, as the assignee of the said J. B. Cicot, and a final certificate issued accordingly. I am now so feeble that I can scarcely hold my pen, but I trust that the commissioners will take pleasure in still doing me justice as to my claim, entered heretofore by me in due season, to the second concession of the southwest half of lot No. 120, being two arpents in front by eighty in depth from the Detroit river, the front of which was heretofore confirmed to Jean B. Allaire dit La Pierre by the former commissioners, but which was by the supreme court of the Territory decreed to belong to me. As the fact is in the personal knowledge of the Hon. William Woodbridge, I presume it may not be necessary to trouble you on the subject. And that the northeast half of the other two arpents in front, by eighty in depth from the Detroit river, will be confirmed to the heirs of the said Jean B. Allaire dit La Pierre, deceased. Should a certified copy of the said decree be thought, nevertheless, necessary, I can obtain it, although I can little afford the expense of paying for a transcript of said decree.

Very respectfully, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

GEORGE McDOUGALL.

Hon. COMMISSIONERS of the United States Land Office for the district of Detroit.

This indenture, made this 25th of June, in the year of our Lord 1821, between Jean B. Cicot, alias Baptist Cicot, of the county of Wayne and Territory of Michigan, of the one part, and George McDougall, of the city of Detroit and Territory of Michigan aforesaid, of the other part. Whereas the said Jean B. Cicot did, by a certain indenture of mortgage dated on the 17th day of March, A. D. 1797, for the consideration of one hundred and twenty-one dollars and fifty cents, lawful money of the United States, grant, bargain, sell, alien, release, and confirm unto the said George McDougall, and to his heirs and assigns forever, all that certain lot or tract of land containing 300 acres, situated on the south bank of river Raisin, being three acres in front by one hundred in depth; bounded in front by said river Raisin, in rear by unconceded lands, on the west by a lot or tract of land purchased by John Askin, jr., from Baptist Drouillard, per deed dated at the river Raisin December 18, 1794, who received the said lot or tract last mentioned in the exchange from Baptist Cicot, and on the east by lands granted by the chiefs of the Pottawatomie nation to Jaques Godfroy, the natural son of Jaques Godfroy, senior, late of the said county of Wayne, deceased; together with all and singular the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging; to have and to hold the said above-granted and bargained premises, with the appurtenances, unto the said George McDougall, his heirs and assigns, to the only proper use and behoof of the said George McDougall, his heirs and assigns forever; provided, nevertheless, and the said indenture of mortgage was thereby declared to be on condition, that if the said Jean B. Cicot, his heirs, executors, and administrators, did and should well and truly pay, or cause to be paid, to the said George McDougall, his executors, administrators, or assigns, the just and full sum of one hundred and twenty-one dollars and fifty cents, lawful money aforesaid, with lawful interest for the same, on or before the 1st day of May, in the year of our Lord 1797, according to the condition of a certain bond or writing obligatory, bearing even date with the said indenture of mortgage, that then, and in such case, the said indenture of mortgage and the said writing obligatory should be void and of no effect, or otherwise to be and remain in full force and virtue: and whereas the said Jean B. Cicot did not pay the said George McDougall the said sum of money, with interest, at the time limited for the payment, or at any time since, now, therefore, this indenture witnesseth: That the said Jean B. Cicot, for and in consideration of the money and interest now due by him, the said George McDougall, amounting to the sum of one hundred and twenty-seven dollars and ten cents, as above mentioned, and for and in consideration of the further sum of one dollar to him in hand paid by the said George McDougall, the receipt whereof he doth hereby acknowledge, and thereof and therefrom, and of every part and parcel thereof, doth acquit, release, exonerate, and discharge the said George McDougall, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, and every of them, and by these presents hath granted, bargained, aliened, sold, assigned, and confirmed, and by these presents doth grant, bargain, alien, sell, assign, and confirm unto the said George McDougall, in his actual possession now being, and to his heirs and assigns forever, all that said lot or tract of land above mentioned and described, together with the hereditaments and appurtenances, as the same was conveyed to him by the said indenture of mortgage, and is now better known as lot No. 694, entered by said Jean B. Cicot with the commissioners of the United States land office at Detroit, on October 31, 1805, and is bounded on the west by lot No. 208, which has since been confirmed to Richard Patterson, his heirs and assigns, by the patent of the President of the United States of America, as assignee of the said John Askin, jr., and on the east by lands claimed by Gabriel Godfroy, and entered by him with the said commissioners of the United States land office for the district of Detroit, on the same 31st October, 1805; that the said Jean B. Cicot entered this lot as aforesaid, as his twenty-fourth claim, for the said Jaques Godfroy before mentioned, the natural son of Jaques Godfroy, the father of said Gabriel Godfroy, as may be more fully seen, reference being had to the said Gabriel Godfroy's entry, recorded by the register of the land office, vol. 3, page 299, of the proceedings of the United States commissioners for said land office at Detroit; to have and to hold the said lot No. 694, or tract of land, and all and singular other the premises hereinbefore mentioned, with the appurtenances, unto the said George McDougall, his heirs and assigns, to his and their only proper use and behoof. And the said Jean B. Cicot doth hereby authorize and empower the said George McDougall to apply to the present commissioners of the United States land office at Detroit, and obtain a confirmation from them of said lot No. 694, to him, the said George McDougall, his heirs and assigns, as assignees of the said Jean B. Cicot, in conformity to the diffierent acts of Congress in this behalf made and provided. And the said Jean B. Cicot doth hereby, for himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, covenant, promise, and agree, to and with the said George McDougall, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, in manner and form following, that is to say: that the said George McDougall, his heirs and assigns, shall and may peaceably and quietly have, hold, and enjoy the said lands, tenements, hereditaments, and premises, before described as lot No. 694, and every part and parcel thereof, without let, suit, trouble, eviction, or disturbance of the said J. B. Cicot, his heirs or assigns, or of or by any other person or persons claiming, or to claim, from, by, or under, in trust for him, them, or any of them; and that the said J. B. Cicot, his heirs and assigns, all and singular the aforesaid lot No. 694, and premises, every part and parcel thereof, unto the said George McDougall, his heirs and assigns, against him, the said Jean B. Cicot, his heirs and assigns, shall and will warrant and forever defend by these presents.

[N. B.—The words "George McDougall" in the last page being first erased and the words "Jean B. Cicot" interlined above the same before the execution of these presents.]

In witness whereof, the said parties to these presents have hereunto set their hands and seals the day and year first above written. [N. B.—The words "amounting to the sum of one hundred and twenty-seven dollars and ten cents" being also first interlined in the eleventh line of the second page hereof before execution.]

In presence de—
PETER AUDRAIN, Proth.

The matter of the above claim being before the commissioner, it appears the proceedings following were had in them before former commissioners, to wit:

John B. Cicot, No. 694.—On Wednesday, July 18, 1810, the board met at nine in the forenoon, pursuant to adjournment. The board took into consideration the claim of Jean B. Cicot to a tract of land situated on the south side of the river Raisin, which was entered with the former commissioners of the land office at Detroit, in vol. 3, page 98, under date of November 14, 1805. This claim contains 300 acres, it being three acres in front by 100 in depth; bounded in front by river Raisin, in rear by unconceded lands, on one side by lands of Gabriel Godfroy, and on the other side by lands of John Askins, jr. Whereupon Isreal Ruland was brought forward as a witness in behalf of the claimant, who, being duly sworn, deposed and said that previous to July 1, 1796, the claimant was in possession of the premises, which he then caused to be cultivated, and has continued to do so ever since. The deponent further says that he was the agent of the claimant for several years, and kept people working on the premises. There are four acres under cultivation, and fences thereon erected and standing. "Postponed." Whereupon a full examination being had in the premises, and it being satisfactorily shown that the assignee of said claimant, George McDougall, was, by said claimant, duly authorized to obtain a confirmation of the said claim for his own benefit; and the decisions of the present commissioners being required in the case, they do decide that the said claim is well supported, and ought to have been confirmed to the said George; but it further appearing that the whole of the said tract was comprehended within the lines of the tract confirmed and patented to Gabriel Godfroy, although the said Gabriel did not comprehend the same in his original entry of claim, owing, most probably, to the circumstance that the claim of the said George was postponed by the then board of commissioners, and consequently that the then surveyor of private claims was not authorized to survey any part of said land for the said George, the commissioners do not consider themselves competent to confirm the same to said George, but respectfully recommend the case of said George for the favorable notice of Congress; and that the said George may be permitted to locate his aforesaid claim of 300 acres of land upon fractional section No. 30, in township No. 6 south, of range No. 10 east, of the public lands offered for sale at Detroit, and remaining unsold, or elsewhere in the vicinity; provided that the said fractional section shall have been sold at the time said George shall be allowed to make his location.

DETROIT, September 30, 1823.

I, William Brooks, in behalf of Edward Brooks, hereby give notice to the commissioners for ascertaining and deciding upon land claims of his claim to a back concession or donation of land, or an equivalent thereto, in rear of a farm owned by him, situate on the Detroit river, containing three arpents in front by forty in depth.

WILLIAM BROOKS.

DETROIT, November 1, 1823.

I, William Brooks, of the county of Wayne and Territory of Michigan, testify as follows: That the deponent knows, from the general notoriety of the fact, that, at the time prescribed by law for entering claims to back concessions or donations of land in rear of the farms on the Detroit river, the farm mentioned in the preceding notice was owned by absent and minor heirs, and that, consequently, no notice of this claim was filed with the commissioners; that, in consequence of this circumstance, together with the circumstance of a bend in the river not leaving sufficient lands immediately contiguous to give each farm a quantity equal to their respective fronts, the land in rear of the farm referred to in the notice prefixed was confirmed and patented to an adjoining claimant; the words "that" and "the" being interlined in the third line, and the words "was owned by" in the sixth, previous to signing.

WILLIAM BROOKS.

Signed and affirmed to before me November 1, 1823.

JOHN BIDDLE, one of the Commissioners.

In support of the preceding claim of Edward Brooks the following papers are produced, namely: a deed from Lewis Cass, attorney for J. Cross and Harriet Cross, his wife, conveying to said Edward an undivided moiety of a certain tract of land confirmed to Julien Hamtramck and Harriet Hamtramck, by the patent of the President of the United States, dated April 20, 1811, containing 72.79 acres, situate on Detroit river, and bounded and described as follows: beginning at a post standing on a border of Detroit river, between this tract and a tract confirmed to the widow and heirs of A. Morace; thence N. 31° W., 116 chains, to a post; thence N. 50° E., 6 chains 30 links, to a post; thence S. 31° E., 115 chains 67 links, to a post standing on the border of the river Detroit, between this tract and a tract confirmed to Jean B. Chapaton; thence, along the border of said river, S. 56° W., 6 chains 31 links, to the place of beginning; also a deed from Edward Roberts, attorney of Harriet Lain and Julia Ann Lain, conveying to said Edward Brooks an undivided moiety of the before-described premises.

DETROIT, November 1, 1823.

The commissioners, in considering of the foregoing claim of Edward Brooks, do decide that notice thereof was duly filed under the act of March 3, 1817; the board are therefore of opinion that confirmation ought, in justice and equity, to be adjudged to the said Edward Brooks; but they find that all the lands adjoining to the front or farm claimed by him, in virtue of the patent and title above noticed, is already confirmed to other claimants; they therefore do not feel authorized to confirm the same absolutely, but respectfully recommend to Congress a confirmation of the said claim; and that the said Edward Brooks be allowed to locate 72.97 acres of land, being a quantity equal to that contained in his front, on that part of fractional section No. 28, in township No. 1 south, of range No. 12 east, of the public land in the district of Detroit, reserved from public sale for the satisfaction of private claims, which may be nearest his said front, and adjoining to the private claims heretofore confirmed.

NOTICE.—Louis Brakeman enters his claim for confirmation before the commissioners appointed for that purposes for the Territory of Michigan, to the following tract of land, lying and being in the county of St. Clair, situate and lying at the head of Harson island, in the river St. Clair, bounded as follows, namely: beginning at the upper end of said island, running down stream to the north branch of said river, to a small branch of said north channel, which runs across said island, and intersects the middle channel of said river; thence across said island, by said small branch, to the middle channel of said river; from thence northwardly up said middle channel to the place of beginning, containing 150 acres; which tract he prays may be confirmed to him.

Said farm lies on the head of Harson's island, and contains about 100 acres of land, which has been occupied by this deponent and father, for hay and pasturage, previous to Sergeant Jack's occupying it; said Sergeant lived in a cabin on said farm, something similar to the natives. DETROIT, November 1, 1823.

Upon examination of the preceding claim of Louis J. Brakeman the commissioners decide that, it appearing to be included in a notice of claim heretofore filed according to law, the same be confirmed to the claimant, provided that the tract shall not contain more than the quantity claimed, and that the lines be so run as not to interfere with any confirmations heretofore made. The said Brakeman produces evidence satisfactory to the commissioners of his having derived title by successive conveyances from the heirs of William Harson, in whose name the original notice of claim was given.

FRENCHTOWN, February 13, 1823.

I, Jean Bpt. Bernard, farmer, formerly inhabitant of the river Raisin, district of Erie, in the Territory of Michigan, now residing at Amersburg, in the British province of Upper Canada, do solemnly attest and declare that I did reside and did work, in the years 1794 and 1795, with Joseph Lenfant, farmer, now deceased, on a certain tract of land situated north of Sandy creek, in the said Territory. I further attest and declare that it is within my perfect knowledge that said tract of land was afterwards occupied and possessed by Guy Joachim, Giroux, and Martin Nadaux, the now present possessor.

MONROE, October 13, 1823.

I, John Anderson, merchant, of Frenchtown, in the county of Monroe, in the Territory of Michigan, do solemnly attest and declare that in the year 1807 or 1808 Christopher Tuttle was appointed by the late Peter Audrain, register of the land office at Detroit, to receive entries to land, and grant certificates to them to remain on said land until called for by government.

JOHN ANDERSON.

TERRITORY OF MICHIGAN, County of Monroe, ss:

Before me, the subscriber, one of the justices of the peace within and for the county of Monroe aforesaid, personally appeared John Anderson, esq., of the town of Frenchtown, and solemnly swears that the above declaration contains the truth, and to be his voluntary act and deed.

In witness whereof, I have set my hand and seal this 13th day of October, A. D. 1823, and the forty-eighth year of the independence of the United States of America.

PETER P. FERRY, Justice of the Peace.

In the preceding case of Martin Nadaux, the commissioners are of opinion that there are reasonable grounds for the conclusion that the tract here claimed was continually occupied and cultivated by Joseph Lenfant, and by the other named intermediate occupants, until 1807 or 1808, when present claimant, Martin Nadaux, took possession by virtue of transfer from the administration of said Joseph Lenfant, and that said Nadaux has remained in possession since that time, and now occupies the same. The board do therefore recommend the said tract for confirmation, provided that the same shall not contain more than 160 acres, and shall not exceed four French arpents in front upon Sandy creek, and not to extend in depth beyond the river Aux Roches or Rocky river; and provided, also, that the lines of said tract shall be so run as to include the present improvements, and shall not interfere with the lines of any tract of land heretofore, or by this board, confirmed, or recommended for confirmation.

In explanation of the preceding report, the commissioners beg leave to observe that, under a strict construction of the laws of Congress by which they were empowered to adjust the private claims to lands in this Territory, they would have been justified in refusing to receive or act upon the foregoing claims, because they were not filed with the register in due time. This board, however, aware of the characteristic negligence of the French population, and their ignorance of all legal matters, and especially of the liberal enactments of Congress relative to their land claims, were willing to receive, even at this late day, their claims, and to hear the testimony adduced in support of them. Under these circumstances, this board did not believe that they had authority unconditionally to confirm; but where claims appeared well substantiated, and rested upon strong equitable grounds, the commissioners have recommended them to Congress for confirmation.

No. 232.—Claim of the heirs of John Askin, esq., deceased.

The consideration of the board being called to the claim of John Askin, esq., No. 232, preferred before a former board on November 19, 1806, and again taken into consideration by the board on July 12, 1808, in volume 5, page 2, of their proceedings, and then postponed, but again further considered on December 11, 1809, in volume 7, page 103, and then finally not acted upon affirmatively, on the grounds that the commissioners believed the land claimed not to be within the land district of Detroit, and consequently not within their power for confirmation: thereupon the present board having considered the said claim, with all the circumstances attending the same, are of opinion that they have not power to confirm the claim, because they are advised that the said lands are included within a reservation made to the Ottawas or other Indian tribes, subsequent, however, to the original entry by said Askin of this claim. The board do therefore recommend this matter to the favorable notice of Congress.

The commissioners appointed under the act of Congress approved February 21, 1823, entitled "An act to revive and continue in force certain acts for the adjustment of land claims in the Territory of Michigan," do certify that they have compared the foregoing supplementary report with their original journal of proceedings upon these claims, and that this transcript is a true and correct copy thereof.

In testimony whereof, we have subscribed our signatures.

[The following reports were published, in addition, at the request of the land office.]

Report concerning the land titles at Green Bay, in the county of Brown, Territory of Michigan.

Except that this French settlement is older than that at the Prairie des Chiens, the claims of its present inhabitants rest upon the same basis.

As the same general observations will apply to each class of cases indiscriminately, the commissioners beg leave to refer to the views they have submitted in their report relative to the Prairie des Chiens titles.

Pere Allowez, an enterprising Catholic missionary, became located at Green Bay, superintending a religious establishment there in 1668; and from that period the settlement at "La Baye" does not seem to have been discontinued while the French remained masters in Canada. The Chevalier de Tonti, having under his command a military force, was stationed there in the winter of 1680. The Lieutenant de Luth, a few years afterwards, held military occupancy of the post under the superintendency of the commandant of Michilimackinac, of which it was a dependency.

During the whole period alluded to, the Fox Indians (by Charlevoix called the Outgamies) seem to have been deemed the proprietors of the country comprehending this settlement. (The Winnebagoes may rather be considered sojourners, their establishment there being of recent origin, than proprietors of the soil.) These (the Fox Indians) were attacked and signally defeated by the French troops under Captain Morand, with the aid of their allies, the Chippewas, in the winter of 1706, at a place called "La Butte des Morts." A great proportion of them were destroyed in this engagement, and many driven from the country. Upon this historical fact is probably founded the frequent assertion that the country of Green Bay accrued to the French by conquest.

It has been asserted, however, with more positiveness, that the French missionary, Pere Roquette, very many years ago, obtained the possession of several leagues square of this country, comprehending the fort and the whole French settlement. This fact it would have been desirable more fully to establish; but having had access to but few books which treat of the early history of this country, no further light could be obtained on the point, except the above insulated assertion.

But, however this fact may be, "La Baye" was continually occupied as a military post and a missionary establishment until the Canadas were by treaty surrendered to the British. It seems a fact equally well established that the latter continued for sometime after their acquisition of the country to keep a military force at Green Bay as a dependency of their more important one at Michilimackinac.

The same evidence which tends to establish the fact of the purchase by Lieut. Gov. Patrick Sinclair, by a treaty holden in 1781 at Michilimackinac, of the country at Prairie des Chiens, establishes also the further one of the purchase of the country of Green Bay.

The antiquity of this settlement being, in the view of the commissioners, sufficiently established, and they being also satisfied (especially when the subject is considered in connexion with the references and the matter contained in their report concerning the land titles of Prairie des Chiens) that the Indian title must be considered to have been extinguished, little further, on the part of the commissioners, seems requisite to elucidate the governing principles of their discussions; a repetition here of the matter of their report of the Prairie des Chiens claims can hardly be esteemed necessary.

It will be perceived that a few claims have been confirmed at a place called the Kakalin. Those claims are considered to have been comprehended within the settlement of Green Bay.—(See Schoolcraft, 368.) Those at the portage between the Wisconsin and Fox rivers have not been considered as comprehended within the limits either of the Green Bay or Prairie des Chiens settlements.

All which is respectfully submitted.

Secretary of Michigan,
HENRY B. BREVOORT,
Reg. of the Land Office, Detroit,

Be it remembered that on this day personally appeared before me, Isaac Lee, a justice of the peace in and for said county, and agent duly appointed to ascertain the title to lands at Green Bay and Prairie du Chien, Dennis Courtois, of said county, who, after being sworn according to law, deposeth and saith that he is fifty-two years old; that he has been a resident of Prairie du Chien twenty-nine years; that, according to the best information he has been able to obtain from the tradition of the inhabitants at Prairie du Chien, the old French fort was burned during the second year of the revolutionary war; that he has no knowledge of any building or fence being erected on the same ground since that time, but that the land between the said fort and the hills or bluffs was occupied before and since the time that deponent arrived in this country; that Prairie du Chien has been formerly occupied much in the manner of an Indian village, the lands being alternately in common, and improved in detached parts as each should please, and this by the common consent of the villagers since deponent's arrival in the country; that he (deponent) has been uniformly told by the old French inhabitants of the prairie that it was bought and paid for by the French many years ago; that he has never heard any Indian make claim to said lands.

Deponent was informed on his first arrival at this place that it derived its name from a large family called Les Chiens who formerly resided here; that the same family, or the descendants, were here at the time of deponent's arrival, and were called Les Chiens.

J. M. MOORE.

Report concerning the land titles at Prairie des Chiens, in the county of Crawford, and Territory of Michigan.

Few difficulties have been met with by the commissioners in their investigation of these titles; they are not individually intricate. The determination of a few principles of general applicability has furnished a rule by which they have all been decided, for they rest upon long-continued possession.

Notwithstanding the high antiquity which may be claimed for the settlement of Prairie des Chiens, and the very considerable numbers of which it has so long consisted, no one perfect title, founded upon French or British grant, legally authenticated, has been successfully made out; comparatively but few deeds of any sort have been exhibited to us. To an American, unacquainted with the astonishing carelessness of the Canadians in respect to whatsoever concerns their land titles, this fact must seem unaccountable. It nevertheless accords with whatever is known in this regard of the French population throughout this country.

It became manifest, therefore, immediately after the commissioners were possessed of the report of the agent, that whatever claim the people of Prairie des Chiens might have for a confirmation of their land titles must be founded upon proof of continued possession since 1796; a basis sufficiently broad to have comprehended perhaps all their claims, but for the changes which have occurred within a few years among them, and the interruptions and occasional evictions from their possessions, consequent upon the establishment there, since the late war, of bodies of American troops.

Such interruptions and evictions, though frequent since the period last alluded to, seem never, among the French population, to have excited a spirit of resistance, but to have been submitted to in silence. Since their ancestors were cut off by the treaty which gave the Canadas to the English from all intercourse with their parent country, the people, both of Green Bay and Prairie des Chiens, have been left, until within a few years, quite isolated, almost without any government but their own. And although the present population of these settlements are natives of the countries which they inhabit, and consequently are by birth citizens of the United States, yet, until within a few years, they have had, apparently, as little political connexion with its government as their ancestors had with that of the British. Ignorance of their civil rights, carelessness of their land titles, docility, habitual hospitality, cheerful submission to the requisitions of any government which may be set over them, are their universal characteristics. With those who know them, their quiet surrender of their fields and houses upon the demand of those who come ostensibly clothed with authority, would constitute no evidence of the illegality of their titles, or of the weakness of their claims.

A few additional remarks, in conclusion, might seem sufficient to satisfy the requisition of the law, and to explain adequately the grounds of the decisions the commissioners have made. A circumstance has occurred, however, which seems to call for a more detailed exposition of their views. After the agent had returned from Green Bay and Prairie des Chiens, and when it seemed too late to obtain rebutting or further testimony, a caveat was filed with the commissioners, at the instance of the superintendent of Indian trade, by John W. Johnson, esq., Indian factor, against the claim to village lot No. 14, preferred by the American Fur Company. The principles upon which that caveat is founded, and by which it is endeavored to be supported, apply with equal force to all the other land claims at Prairie des Chiens. The objections against the claim, and the documents adduced in its support, consist in this: that the settlement at Prairie des Chiens is of recent origin; that its residents have intruded upon the public lands in violation of the laws of the United States, and that, in truth, the Indian title to the country in question has not been extinguished, objections which, if sustained in one case, must conclude all cases there. Upon a critical examination of this matter, so unexpectedly and so recently presented to them, the commissioners have not been able to discover anything in the protest of the United States Indian factor, in the documents he has adduced, or in his own fair and candid statement, which could sanction a doubt as to the propriety of confirming the claim set up by the American Fur Company.

It appears to have been in the spring of 1673 that Pierre Marquette and Mons. Joliet took their departure from the French establishment at Green Bay, on a voyage of discovery up the Fox river, and down the Wisconsin, to the Mississippi. This channel of communication between the great lakes and the Mississippi, from about that period, had attracted a considerable portion of public attention. The French voyagers continued afterwards generally to take that route; their Indian traders most usually did; and it is the same channel through which Carver also penetrated into the Mississippi country in 1766.

Although the commissioners have not, on this head, been able, in so short a time, to procure that ample and certain information which is desirable, yet it is believed that not very many years after its first discovery in 1673 by the French a permanent establishment was made by them at the Prairie des Chiens. Vestiges of an old and a strong French fort are still discernible there, although it is stated to have been destroyed so early as in the first years of the revolutionary war.

When, in 1805, the late General Pike was on his voyage up the Mississippi, he computed the fixed white population of the place, in the absence of the traders and those connected with them, at 370; and the total number at from 500 to 600. Mr. Schoolcraft, in 1820, estimates the population of the place at 500. No evidence can be obtained from the traditionary history of the country that, at any one period, that settlement has received, by emigration, any sudden and large augmentation in the number of its inhabitants. It has never been characteristic of the French Canadian settlements to increase rapidly; and it is considered a fair inference, from all that can be learned on the subject, that for a long and indefinite time, its numbers have been considerable, and increasing only at a tardy pace. This consideration is supposed to be eminently corroborative of the position the commissioners have assumed, of the antiquity of this settlement.

With what propriety the inhabitants of Prairie des Chiens, who were born there and whose ancestors have for more than a century resided there, may be said to have "taken possession of the public lands in violation of the laws;" how they may be said to be "intruders" who, and whose ancestors through so many political changes, have, with the assent, express or implied, of each successive sovereignty, continued to inhabit the country which gave them birth, it is hard to imagine.

It has been urged against them that their only right in the soil which they occupy consists in the permission accorded them by the Indians to remain there. Surrounded, as that settlement always has been, by numerous hordes of ferocious savages, quite well disposed at all times to cause their power to be felt, it may, perhaps, be emphatically said (especially since the power of the French government here was overthrown) that its inhabitants have occupied their lands "by permission of the Indians." Left with none to defend them, they must have accommodated themselves to their humors; it has from necessity resulted that they have been compelled to submit to their commands, and, however reluctantly, to subserve, perhaps often, their vindictive views. But it is not considered that anything in their history, in such respects, detracts from the force of their present claims.

The commissioners have not had access to any public archives by which to ascertain, with positive certainty, whether either the French or English government ever effected a formal extinguishment of Indian title at the mouth of the Wisconsin; yet the same observation, with the same truth, may be made in relation to the land now covered by the city of Detroit. It is believed that the French government, particularly, was not accustomed to hold formal treaties for such purposes with the Indians. And when lands have been anciently procured from them, either in virtue of the assumed right of conquest or by purchase, evidence of such acquisition is rather to be sought for in the traditionary history of the country, or in the casual and scanty relations of travellers, than among collections of State papers. Tradition does recognize the fact of the extinguishment of the Indian title at Prairie des Chiens by the old French government before its surrender to the English. And by the same species of testimony, more positive because more recent, it is established also that, in the year 1781, Patrick Sinclair, lieutenant governor of the province of Upper Canada, while the English government obtained over this country, made a formal purchase from the Indians of the lands comprehending the settlement of Prairie des Chiens.

In Pike's Journal allusion is made to the last-mentioned purchase.—(Pike's Journal, appendix to part 1, page 47.) The agent also took down some testimony concerning the same facts, which may be found in the subjoined abstracts.

Whatever purchases may thus have been made by the French or British authorities have since been sanctioned by the treaty of St. Louis, holden June 3, 1816; and by another treaty, (see acts of 2d session of the 14th Congress, pp. 307—309,) concluded also at St. Louis on the 24th of August of the same year. It is provided (Art. 2) that the United States relinquish to the tribes with whom that treaty was holden a certain tract of country lying north of a west line from the south bend of Lake Michigan, "excepting out of said relinquishment a tract of three leagues square at the mouth of the Wisconsin, including both banks," &c.; thus giving additional sanction to the allegation of a previous acquisition of the country comprehending the Prairie des Chiens settlement. For it will not escape observation, upon a reference to the treaty of November 3, 1804, (U. S. Laws, vol. 1, p. 428,) that the last-mentioned treaty does not contain a cession of the tract thus excepted by the United States from their relinquishment. The real object of the clause alluded in the treaty of the 3d November, it is apprehended, was to enable the United States, in its election, to erect a fort on the west bank of the Mississippi, where the Indian title had not yet been extinguished, and where a more eligible site, it was supposed, could be selected.

If further evidence were necessary on this head, it might be found perhaps in the provisions of the fourth article of the treaty of Greenville. The settlement of Prairie des Chiens lies "east of the Mississippi;" it is "west" from Detroit. It was certainly "in the possession of the French people," who, or whose children, still inhabit it. It is believed to be comprehended within both the words and the spirit of the provisions of the third and fourth articles of that treaty.

After all, it is not deemed important (except so far as it may seem to strengthen the equity of the claimants) to establish the proposition of an early extinguishment of the Indian title. There can be no doubt but that the Indian title is now extinguished. It would be hardly admissible to suppose that the American government have been themselves guilty of an act of oppressive usurpation and violence; and yet it cannot otherwise be if the Indian title be not extinguished—for they have erected forts and established garrisons there. It would equally violate every principle of decorum for the commissioners to suppose that they had no power, and that the people of Prairie des Chiens had no right in relation to this matter, when the law of May 11, 1820, under which they act, expressly extends to that people all the benefits and all the rights which, in virtue of former acts of Congress, the people residing within the Detroit land district heretofore possessed in relation to their land titles; and also imperatively requires of the commissioners that they give effect to that act.

The act of March 3, 1807, vested in those for whose benefit it was passed a right to be confirmed in their claims upon the exhibition of proof of continued possession from July 1, 1796, to March 3, 1807, inclusive. The extension to the people of Green Bay and Prairie des Chiens of the provisions of that act, it is presumed, conferred upon them, upon the exhibition of like proof, a like right. Proof of this tenor has been adduced by John Jacob Astor, Ramsay Crooks, and Robert Stewart, co-partners under the firm of "The American Fur Company," (formerly styled "The Southwest Company,") as well as by others whose claims they have confirmed; and the commissioners have not felt themselves justified in adopting any course of reasoning which would frustrate the object of that law from which they derive all the power they have possessed.

A majority of the commissioners have felt obliged, nevertheless, to withhold from many of the claims the sanction of their confirmation; not because those claims were less equitable, but because the proof adduced of occupancy, possession, and improvement did not reach far enough back; they considered that the possession, &c., contemplated by the law was an individual and exclusive possession from July, 1796, to March, 1807. The fact in relation to the claims not confirmed seems to have been that the lands so claimed had been immemorially occupied by the villagers in common, or as a common; and that they had not been individually and exclusively appropriated until after July, 1796.

As no dissent on the part of the villagers was at any time expressed, or rather as none was proved or attempted to be proved, one of the commissioners was willing to deduce from circumstances appearing a presumption of assent, equivalent to a formal conveyance. Upon such hypothesis the present claimants, combining their own exclusive possession with the antecedent occupancy of the villagers in common, "under whom" they might be considered to claim, would be respectively entitled, under the law, to confirmations; but a majority of the commissioners, believing that such construction was at least obnoxious to much doubt, felt obliged reluctantly to reject it, and, without further difference of opinion, they all resolved to present with these cases to the revising power their respectful and most earnest petition in behalf of the unsuccessful claimants, that their claims may be confirmed. Although some of these claimants have been in the exclusive occupancy of their possessions but for a very short space of time, yet their claims are considered not the less meritorious; for those who have thus remained in possession for the shortest period would seem to have been removed from their former and older possessions, because those possessions were deemed necessary for the convenience of the troops by whose permission they have located themselves on the tracts now claimed.

Few cases have occurred at Prairie des Chiens in which different claimants have applied for the same tract. In regard to other districts of country, much perplexity has been experienced in the selection, among many, of that claimant in whose favor the title of right should be confirmed. The commissioners have uniformly acted upon the principle that their power was intended to be exercised only as between the government and claimants, and not as between several conflicting claimants. Doubts having been expressed, however, by members of the Supreme Court, as to the power of that tribunal to interfere after the emanation of patents, the commissioners have become sensible that, without intending it, they might effect injustice by confirming the title in one whose claim, when exhibited before a court having chancery powers, might prove to be much less meritorious than the conflicting claim of some other person. It is most manifest, nevertheless, that a board of commissioners constituted as this board is are not competent to the undertaking of deciding, in the last resort, between contending individuals. Their proceedings are, of necessity, summary. They cannot administer suppletory oaths to the contending parties, and they have no control over their consciences. Their forms of proceeding are utterly unlike those which obtain in regularly constituted courts: forms which, however slow and troublesome in their operations, are yet the surest guarantee of justice.

They therefore respectfully submit to the revising power, in order to obviate all doubt, the propriety of causing to be inserted in the patents which may issue clauses saving by express words the rights of all individual claimants; such saving clauses will be in conformity with every decision which has been made.

It only remains for the commissioners further to remark that, in making abstracts from the testimony adduced, they have felt disposed, in order that their report may be less encumbered with useless matter, to exclude as well copies of all deeds of individuals in cases where they have been satisfied that bona fide transfers have been intended, as also irrelevant matter contained in depositions taken.

All which is respectfully submitted.

Extract from the letter of instructions to the agent appointed to receive claims and take evidence concerning land claims at Green Bay and Prairie des Chiens.

TERRITORY OF MICHIGAN, Land District of Detroit, August 8, 1821.

SIR: You are hereby notified of your appointment, (with the approbation of the Secretary of the Treasury,) and in conformity with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to revive the powers of the commissioners for ascertaining and deciding on claims to land in the district of Detroit, and for settling the claims to land at Green Bay and Prairie des Chiens, in the Territory of Michigan," passed May 11, 1820, as agent for the purpose of ascertaining the titles and claims to land at the settlements of Green Bay and Prairie des Chiens.

The Secretary of the Treasury has given general directions that you proceed with as little delay as possible, taking the various laws which relate to your duties as your guide in the execution of the trust reposed.

The evidence of titles and claims which it is presumed you will receive are such as are founded upon legal grant made or authorized prior to the treaty of Paris (February 10, 1763,) by the French government, or subsequent to that period, and prior to the treaty of peace between the United States and Great Britain, (September 3, 1783,) or such as may be deducible from some act of Congress.

The whole system heretofore applicable to the land district of Detroit is presumed to have been reinstated in its full extent, except so far as controlled by the late law, and made specially applicable to the settlements of Green Bay and Prairie des Chiens. You will therefore not fail to notice that occupancy and possession of tracts within either of those settlements, between July 1, 1796, and March 3, 1807, by the present claimants, or those under whom they may successively make claim, are, by the act of March 3, 1807, recognized as conferring just claims for confirmation. And you will also see, by reference to the fourth section of the act of April 25, 1808, that so much of the act of March 3, 1807, as limited the claim to one tract is repealed.

These references are given you that your records may not be needlessly burdened. It is nevertheless believed that you cannot of right refuse to receive and record any evidence of title, of whatsoever nature, that may be offered; for the law clearly contemplates that the power of rejecting as well as of confirming all claims resides, in the first instance, in the commissioners, and not in the agent.

It is presumed to be the intention of the law that all the evidence of title and claims shall be recorded in the English language; yet it is recommended, in all cases of doubtful or technical expressions, that you preserve the original expressions used; also, in all cases where it is desired by the claimants, that you record also true copies of entire documents in their original language. After being recorded with every proof of authentication which is offered, it is considered that the claimants will be entitled to receive again of you their deeds or other documents. The originals, it is believed, are not required to be brought here, unless by the consent and desire of the claimants.

A doubt occurs how far it may be competent for you, as agent, to administer oaths; that power is not expressly given you by the law; it is there given only to those who have the right to examine and decide. Such implied powers can only be supposed to have been given you as are really necessary to enable you conveniently to receive the notices and record the evidences of the titles and claims adduced. The commissioners do not deem it necessary, at this time, to express an opinion on that point, as they are advised that you will receive commissions as justice of the peace for each of the two counties of Crawford and Brown before your departure, in virtue of which, under the territorial laws, you will be qualified to administer all necessary oaths and take all proper affidavits.

As it is feared (from the characteristic want of caution of the Canadian French as it regards the presentation of their title deeds) that most of their claims will be attempted to be supported by proving continued possession, (this proof will, of course, consist principally of affidavits to be taken at the time of preferring their claims,) it is specially recommended to you that you attend, whenever practicable, personally, to the taking of such affidavits; that you have special regard to the prevention of all attempts at deception; and that you certify them in both your capacities of agent and justice of the peace. This form of authentication must remove all doubt as to your competency to administer oaths, and will be particularly convenient also, as it will enable you to draw the affidavits in the English language.

It is not practicable for the commissioners to prescribe the period of time which, by your notices, you will assign at Green Bay and Prairie des Chiens, respectively, for receiving the evidences of claims and titles. The law requires reasonable notice; what may be deemed reasonable notice must depend upon the number of claimants and the remoteness of their relative situations. You must judge of it.

Though the settlement of Green Bay is spoken of by Charlevoix as early as 1720, yet it is believed the whole number of claimants there cannot exceed one hundred and fifty. The settlement of Prairie des Chiens is supposed to have been some thirty years later, though the number of claimants is believed to be considerably greater; but, in respect to both, it is said the settlements are quite compact. All the traditionary or other information which can be procured by you concerning the origin and history of these settlements would be very desirable, and may be of much use in the ultimate investigation of their land claims.

It is expected that from the time of your arrival at Green Bay, and entering upon the duties devolving upon you, you will keep accurate minutes of all your official proceedings.

I, Isaac Lee, of the said Territory, having been appointed agent for the purpose of ascertaining the titles and claims to land at the settlements of Green Bay and Prairie des Chiens, do solemnly swear that I will faithfully and impartially discharge the duties imposed upon me by the act entitled "An act to revive the powers of the commissioners for ascertaining and deciding on claims to land in the district of Detroit, and for settling the claims to land at Green Bay and Prairie des Chiens, in the Territory of Michigan," according to the best of my ability and understanding. Extract from official report of agent.

GENTLEMEN: On my arrival at Green Bay, on the 24th of August, A. D. 1820, I found that the principal land claimants were absent. I gave personal notice at every house of my arrival and business, and embraced the first opportunity of a passage to Prairie des Chiens, stating to the inhabitants of Green Bay that I should return and attend to their land claims in October.

On my arrival at Prairie des Chiens, October 2, I gave personal notice at each house of my arrival and business there, and immediately commenced to take testimony, which I completed, and took my departure for Green Bay October 24, at which place I arrived November 16, and found myself obliged to remain there during the winter season. The principal part of my report is contained in the records already before you. As to the traditionary account of the first settlement of that country, and the purchase of the lands from the natives, I refer you to the depositions before you, and a letter from Matthew Irwin, esq., factor at Green Bay, to Governor Cass. I was requested by the inhabitants of both Green Bay and Prairie des Chiens to represent to you the situation of those whose claims would not come within the present law, with a request that you would officially represent to the general government their situation, and endeavor to procure the passage of a law more favorable than the existing law, as they find it difficult to prove a continual occupation for twenty-five years. The records before you contain an account of every kind of claim that came to my knowledge in the country.

With respect, yours, &c.,

ISAAC LEE, Agent.

Extinguishment of Indian title.

TERRITORY OF MICHIGAN, County of Crawford, ss:

Be it remembered that on this day personally appeared before me, Isaac Lee, a justice of the peace in and for said county, and agent duly appointed to ascertain the title to lands at Green Bay and Prairie des Chiens, Dennis Courtois, of said county, who, after being sworn according to law, deposeth and saith that he is fifty-two years old; that he has been a resident of Prairie des Chiens twenty-nine years; that, according to the best information he has been able to obtain from the tradition of the inhabitants at Prairie des Chiens, the old French fort was burned during the second year of the revolutionary war; that he has no knowledge of any building or fence being erected on the same ground since that time, but that the land between the said fort and the hills or bluffs was occupied before and since the time that deponent arrived in this country; that Prairie des Chiens has been formerly occupied much in the manner of an Indian village, the lands being alternately in common, and improved in detached parts as each should please, and this by the common consent of the villagers, since deponent's arrival in the country; that he (deponent) has been uniformly told by the old French inhabitants of the prairie that it was bought and paid for by the French many years ago; that he has never heard any Indian make claim to said lands.

about eighteen years ago the French people became somewhat apprehensive as to their title, which fact being made known to the Indians, one of the first chiefs of the Fox nation, named Nanpouis, ratified at Cahokia, near St. Louis, an ancient sale of said prairie to the French; that in the year seventeen hundred and eighty-one Governor Sinclair bought the island of Michilimackinac, Green Bay, and Prairie du Chien; that this deponent saw the papers relating to said purchase executed and folded up, to be sent to Montreal or Quebec; deponent was informed on his first arrival at this place that it derived its name from a large family called Des Chiens, who formerly resided here; that the same family or their descendants were here at the time of deponent's arrival, and were called "Des Chiens."

Claim for village common.

TERRITORY OF MICHIGAN, to wit:

I, Isaac Lee, agent appointed to receive claims to land at the settlements of Green Bay and Prairie des Chiens, and to take down and receive testimony concerning them, do certify that the whole extent of the prairie on which is situated the village of Prairie des Chiens, excepting so much of it as is fenced and in the exclusive possession of individuals, is claimed by the villagers and inhabitants of that settlement as a common appurtenant to the village, and that many objections were urged against some of the claims preferred, lest they should ultimately be found to encroach upon that common. I further certify that no testimony was tendered to me to establish the said claim, as all the inhabitants residing there felt equal interest in establishing the claim, and might not, therefore, be considered competent witnesses; but that, as an individual, and in my official capacity, I made diligent inquiry in relation to this matter, especially among the oldest and most intelligent of the inhabitants, the result of which was the most entire conviction in my own mind that, in truth, from the earliest periods in the history of this settlement, all that part of the said prairie not enclosed and in the exclusive occupancy of individuals was, and continually has been, and is used as a common appurtenant to said village and settlement, in which all the inhabitants are acknowledged to have an equal interest. I further certify, that among the most aged of the inhabitants of the prairie none could be found who could recollect, or who had any knowledge of the first establishment of the French there, nor could any satisfactory account be obtained by any traditions among them touching this point. The remains of what is commonly called the old French fort are yet very distinguishable. Though capacious and apparently strong, it was probably calculated for defence against musketry and small arms only. None can recollect the time of the erection of this fort; it was far beyond the memory of the oldest; nor can the time of its erection be determined by any evidence to be obtained. Some difference of opinion seems to exist there as to the question whether it was originally built by the French or by the Spanish government. It is evidently very ancient.

ISAAC LEE, Agent.

CAHOKIA, August 28, 1820.

SIR: As administrator of all the rights, and credits, and effects of the late John Campbell, of Prairie des Chiens, I take the liberty to claim for his estate the following lands, viz: a tract of land, nine arpents in front, beginning on the Mississippi and running back on the hill the designated length, at the place called Coulée's de Campbell, near the village of Prairie des Chiens, of which be pleased to take notice.

JARROT.

To the agent of the United States for receiving claims to land at Green Bay and Prairie des Chien: Counter-claim in behalf of Nicholas Boilvin.

Personally came before the commissioners for adjusting titles to land, &c, John W. Johnson, who, being duly sworn, says that for five years last past, during the period of his residence at Prairie des Chiens, the tract of land entered by Nicholas Jarrot, for and in behalf of the heirs of John Campbell, has been claimed and possessed by Nicholas Boilvin; that he has known persons wishing to cut hay on said land obtain permission from said Boilvin; that he considered him alone as authorized to grant permission, and has himself obtained permission to cut hay thereon for public purposes; that he has understood from general report, and from some persons who attended the sale, that the improvement right on said tract of land was sold at public auction by Nicholas Jarrot, administrator on the estate of John Campbell, declaring at the same time that he could not sell the land, as it belonged to the United States; and that at said public sale Nicholas Boilvin purchased the same; that he has seen a paper written in French, and read to him by Mr. Boilvin, purporting to be a transfer from said Jarrot to said Boilvin, at what is generally called Campbell's coulée; that he does not know what was the extent of said Campbell's claim. Deponent further states that at the time Mr. Lee, the agent sent to Prairie des Chiens, was there, Mr. Nicholas Boilvin was not there, but wrote a letter to the deponent requesting him to attend to the entry of his claim for said Campbell's coulée, and all other lands to which he might have claim. Witness states that the declaration of Mr. Jarrot, that he did not sell the said land, as it belonged to the United States, he understood to be only an expression of unwillingness to guarantee any land for which the heirs of Campbell had never acquired a legal title, or any confirmation from the government of the United States. Witness further states that such has been the remote situation of the old inhabitants of Prairie des Chiens from the government of the United States that they have no distinct and perfect ideas of their rights and privileges as American citizens.

JNO. W. JOHNSON.

This claim was by the survey only extended back twenty arpents, on account of the land in the rear being occupied for military purposes.

Johnson, United States factor, should refuse to leave the said house, after giving him fifteen days' notice, from the thirty-

Deposition of John W. Johnson, esq., United States factor, at Prairie des Chiens.

I, John W. Johnson, United States factor, of lawful age, do testify and say that on the twenty-sixth day of May, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixteen, I arrived at Prairie des Chiens, in the Territory of Michigan, and, on the twenty-seventh of said month, entered into an agreement with François Bouthellier, agent for the Southwest Fur Company, to rent the buildings belonging to said company at said Prairie des Chiens. On the twenty-first day of June following, Brigadier General Thomas A. Smith called on me shortly after the departure of said Bouthellier, and informed me that I would no longer pay rent, as he felt himself warranted in taking possession of said buildings for the United States. I accordingly, from that time, stopped paying rent, and have occupied, and still continue to occupy, said premises as public property. I have also erected additional buildings, and made various improvements on them, at the expense of the United States, and under the sanction of the superintendent of the Indian trade.

JOHN W. JOHNSON, United States Factor.

Sworn and subscribed before me this twenty-first day of October, one thousand eight hundred and twenty.

ISAAC LEE, J. P. C. C., and Agent.

Extract from a letter from T. A. Smith to Mr. Calhoun.

"FRANKLIN, M. T., September 2, 1819.

"SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the twenty-first of July, and the several enclosures. The buildings at Prairie des Chiens, for which a man by the name of Astor claims rent, was occupied by the factor, in conformity with my instructions while in command of the ninth military department. These instructions were given after my having ascertained from the intruders at that place that the only claim they had to the soil was the permission of the Indians to reside there for the purposes of trade. These persons having, in violation of the laws, taken possession of public lands, were subject to fine and imprisonment. I would have destroyed the settlement, and delivered the male part of the inhabitants to the civil authority to be prosecuted for the intrusion, but for the impression that they could be made useful in provisioning a post so remote. The officer left in command was authorized to carry this view of the subject into effect whenever he should deem it expedient."

INDIAN OFFICE, Georgetown, February 27, 1823.

SIR: Mr. John W. Johnson, the late factor at Prairie du Chien, has informed me that when he established the factory at that place he rented from one of the settlers a house for the accommodation of the factory until he could put up buildings for the purpose; that in the meantime General Smith having taken the command at that place, considering himself authorized by his instructions to dispossess some of the settlers, and, among others, the person from whom he rented, and put him in possession of the property as public property, with directions not to pay rent. In consequence of this, Mr. Johnson proceeded to put up buildings for the factory, which, it appears from the last returns, are estimated at upwards of six thousand dollars. In 1820 the American Fur Company (Mr. Astor) presented a claim to the commissioners sitting at Detroit for this property.

The commissioners made a partial decision, referring the final decision to the government. On this decision the American Fur Company brought suit against Mr. Johnson for all the back rents, amounting to several thousand dollars. The court at Detroit has continued the suit until a final decision on the claim is made by competent authority.

Observing that an act has lately passed for the adjustment of the land claims in the Territory of Michigan, I have deemed it proper to make this communication, in order that you may give such instructions to the persons authorized to carry the law into effect as you may think necessary to protect the interest of the United States in this property.

I am not advised of the nature of the decision of the commissioners at Detroit on this particular claim. I called at the land office, but was informed that the report of the commissioners had been sent to the Senate. It is presumed that the property will be protected by the provision in the third section of the late act.

With very great respect, your most obedient servant,

Hon. WM. H. CRAWFORD, Secretary of the Treasury.

20TH CONGRESS.] No. 599. [1ST SESSION.

LAND CLAIM IN FLORIDA, KNOWN AS "FORBES' PURCHASE."

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 3, 1828.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The memorial of Robert Mitchel, on behalf of himself and others, respectfully showeth: That your memorialists are proprietors of a large tract of land in Florida, commonly known by the name of "Forbes' Purchase," the titles to which were originally made to the said Forbes & Co. by the aboriginal Indians, with the consent and concurrence of the Spanish government.

That the nature of the said titles is shown in the printed exposition thereof, which your memorialists ask leave to annex hereto, and that it may be considered as an exhibit herewith.

That the original title deeds of the said lands have been submitted by your memorialists, according to law, to the investigation of the land commissioners appointed for this purpose by act of Congress. They have been by the said commissioners examined, and their regularity and genuineness by them admitted; and the said commissioners referred to Congress the question whether the said titles ought or ought not to be considered valid as against the United States.

That the said question of validity has for a long time laid over undetermined; and that the delay thereof has occasioned to your memorialists serious injury, and to some of them absolute distress, whilst the lands themselves, being on the coast of the Gulf of Mexico, a frontier situation, and requiring population, lay uncultivated, uninhabited, and useless to the proprietors, to the Territory of Florida, and to the United States.

Your memorialists therefore pray that the said titles may be taken into consideration, and that Congress may grant to them such relief as in its wisdom may be thought fit.

And your memorialists will ever pray.

ROBERT MITCHEL,
On behalf of himself and the other proprietors,
By his agent, PETER MITCHEL.

DECEMBER 31, 1827.

EXPOSITION OF THE TITLES TO THE LANDS IN FLORIDA, COMMONLY KNOWN BY THE NAME OF FORBES' PURCHASE.

The tract of land near Tallahassee, in Florida, commonly known by the name of Forbes' Purchase, was conveyed to the mercantile house of which Mr. Forbes was principal partner,* by concurrent deeds of the aboriginal Indians and Spanish government; and the nature of these titles having become a subject of public inquiry, the proprietors adopt this mode of exhibiting them.

The conveyance of this property having resulted from relations subsisting between the three parties to the deeds for a period of twenty-seven years, commencing in 1784, the records of the transactions incident to these relations have so accumulated in the Spanish archives, that in an exposition of this sort an abbreviation and abridgment of exhibits are rendered necessarily unavoidable.

To begin with the deeds of conveyance: This property was conveyed to the house of Forbes in two separate cessions: the one concluded in 1806 and the other in 1811. The cession of 1806 comprehended the greatest portion of this body of land, extending from the river Apalachicola to Wakulla, and the title deeds and formalities attending this cession are shown in the annexed documentary evidence, from No. 1 to 10.

The second cession of 1811 embraced two tracts of land: the one on the east and the other to the west of the main body, ceded in 1806, and extended the boundary line from St. Vincent's island on the west, to the natural bridge of the river St. Mark's on the east, by which this tract assumed its present form and dimensions; and the formalities of this cession are presented for inspection in the annexed evidence, from No. 11 to 15.

Such were the deeds by which, in two cessions, the lands of Forbes' Purchase became vested in that house by the concurrent acts of the Seminoles and Lower Creek Indians and the Spanish government; but the tenure was, nevertheless, subject to a condition imposed by the latter, (2 and 13,) "that the lands should not be disposed of by Forbes & Co. without the knowledge and consent of the Spanish government."

This injunction, however, was removed by the captain general of Cuba, (Cienfuegos,) who, on the petition of John Forbes, (16) and after consulting and obtaining the opinion of the assessor general, (Leonarde de Monte,) (17) decreed that the lands might be sold to Colin Mitchel (18) without condition.

The lands in question, of Forbes' Purchase, were accordingly conveyed to Colin Mitchel, and have, through his medium, the greater part of them, descended into the possession of various persons in the United States, the present proprietors.

Such is the statement of the recorded transactions attending the conveyance of this property from its original proprietors, the Indians; and it is hoped that this attempt at abridgment may have rendered no part of them obscure. The originals of the exhibits referred to have undergone the scrutiny of the land commissioners of the United States, and their genuineness is by them unimpeached. They show a plain transaction between three parties—the Indians, the Spanish government, and Forbes & Co., and which the proprietors of this property are well persuaded would, on ordinary occasions, require no further proof of its validity than the evidence here furnished of the mutual consent of the parties themselves, and the many years of deliberation by which that consent was accompanied. The proprietors, however, feel it due to themselves, without comment, to spread further evidence of the situation and rights of the respective parties to this transaction, under a hope that its legality, its equity, and justice may be fully understood.

The right of the Seminole Indians to sell the lands in question to Forbes & Co. is believed to have been completely sustained by their aboriginal tenure of possession, and by the confirmation of that tenure by the formal acts of the Spanish and British governments, who alternately claimed dominion over them. Spain, in her treaty with these Indians, (19) made at Pensacola June 1, 1784, pledged herself to them to be "security and guarantee in their possession" of their lands. And in her treaty again made at New Orleans in 1792 (20) the same pledge is repeated, that she "guarantees all the lands which belonged to them and were in their possession in 1784." And again, in 1765, the boundaries of these possessions requiring to be defined, Great Britain, the then sovereign of Florida, in a treaty held with them at Pensacola, and again at Picolata, in East Florida, (21) defined the boundary lines between them and the government lands. And the boundaries thus defined, and the Indian right of property adverted to, have been uniformly and distinctly and repeatedly recognized by the Spanish government, by reports of the surveyor general up to November, 1817, and a mass of correspondence between him and the intendants of Florida and Cuba.

But it was not by treaty alone that the Indians were secured in their property in their lands; the Spanish laws abounded in provisions for this purpose, and by referring to the brief extracts and references in No. 22 it will be seen that not only a design of protection in their lands, but also a spirit of paternal regard pervaded them. A practical evidence of this protection occurred in the cases of Mary Weaver and others, in which Indian lands, under the auspices of Governor Massot, were granted away without their consent; when the intendant of Cuba, Ramirez, on learning the facts, on November 17, 1817, annulled the whole proceedings. And it may also be added, that if, contrary to the tenor and spirit of these laws and treaties securing to the Indians their property in their lands, Spain had had the inclination to make encroachments on them, the great inferiority of her physical force in Florida was a powerful dissuasive from such an attempt.

The practice of selling their lands, the Indians to the whites, has not only been recognized by the Spanish government, but also by that of the United States and England. The cases are before us of Joseph Gillaird, William Miller, and A. Fulton, which were confirmed by Congress; and the land commissioners of the United States in reporting on this practice, in reference to the Opelousas claims, (21) state distinctly that "the right of the Indians to sell their lands was always admitted by the Spanish government." Indeed, the instances are so numerous of the Indians selling lands in payment of their debts, under the direct sanction of these governments, and the policy itself is so just and equitable, that it seems scarcely possible to oppose to its existence or practice a plausible doubt or objection.

With regard to the part taken by the governors of Florida, Louisiana, and Havana, in this affair of Forbes' Purchase, in consenting to and confirming the sale, it was in conformity with the legitimate and general practice of the intendancy to confirm sales made by Indians of their own lands "It is only a form, (say the land commissioners who investigated this subject in Louisana,) as the governor in all cases approved, and never refused." And in the case before us, the voluntary offers on the part of the Indians, their own declaration of their acts and of their motives, the property sold and the consideration received, showed a transaction against which the governors could have had no motive for interposing an objection. It was conducted by all the parties with great publicity and notoriety, and accompanied with the consent of the intendancies of Louisiana and Cuba, and with the privity also, if not the concurrence, of the government of the United States, as is shown in the annexed correspondence between Mr. Forbes and General Dearborn, (24) then Secretary of War; also with the intendancy of Louisiana. And for a period of seventeen years antecedently to the cession of Florida to the United States the prescriptive rights of ownership and possession of the lands thus purchased stood utterly unimpeached and unassailed.

Lest, however, a doubt should remain as to the actual ownership of the Indians in the property conveyed, and that it might be supposed that the Spanish government had a beneficial interest in it, or that in any point of view these lands could have been considered as government property, we will advert very briefly to the heavy claims of Forbes & Co. upon that government, and to its constitutional law, to show that in such a point of view the governors, in sanctioning this purchase, did not transcend, but that they acted within the scope of the powers, and in conformity with the duties imposed on them by royal authority, and that the validity of this purchase is, on this ground, unassailable.

The constant practice of the intendancy of Louisiana (of which West Florida was a branch) of disposing of public lands for settlements, and as a remuneration for public services, can scarcely require to be proved here. It is admitted and shown by all the boards of land commissioners that have been charged with the investigation of this subject; but the royal authority from whence this practice is derived having been less generally promulgated, we will, as a familiar introduction to it, quote the proclamation of 1799, of Governor Morales.(25)

He declares that the intendancy, of which he is the head, was, by royal order, and to the exclusion of all other authority, vested with the privilege of distributing and granting every description of lands belonging to the crown. He proclaims further that, "in the discharge of this important trust, he will follow not only the laws, but local circumstances; and as far as he can, without injury to the King, he will contribute to the encouragement and welfare of the inhabitants; and that to assist him in his duty, he has examined, with the greatest attention, the regulations of his predecessor." But to proceed from the practice of Morales to the laws themselves,(26) it will be seen that in 1754, by royal ordinances, the exclusive power of granting, selling, and compromising for public lands, was absolutely deputed from the King; and for the declared object of "sparing his subjects the expense and inconvenience of applying for lands to his royal person," this power was committed to delegates, to be appointed by the viceroys and presidents of audience, which delegates had the power of sub-delegation; and in the hands of these delegates and sub-delegates the power has been vested and by them exercised ever since.

That the power exercised by Governor Folch over these lands in Middle Florida was within his appropriate jurisdiction is shown by the fact that this portion of country was, by royal order of August 14, 1778,(27) confirmed to be appended to the intendancy of Louisiana, of which West Florida was a portion, and the governor of Pensacola the sub-delegate; and so it continued until the cession, of 1803, of Louisiana to the United States, after which West Florida was assigned to the intendancy of Cuba.

The claims to which we have adverted, of Forbes & Co. on the Spanish government, arose from a connexion subsisting between them, the object of which was, on the part of Forbes & Co., to benefit themselves by the Indian trade; and on the part of the government, to secure the attachment of the Indians. This connexion began in 1784, after the retrocession of Florida from England to Spain, and continued for a period of upwards of twenty years. In the course of this connexion, and on various occasions, the government granted to Forbes & Co. exclusive privileges of importing goods free of duty, and of trading with the Indians on specified conditions and under restrictions, of which a material one was a tariff of prices to be charged the Indians by Forbes & Co.

The multiplied transactions of such a connexion for so long a period, the representations and answers, orders and official correspondence, have so swelled the archives of Pensacola, New Orleans, and Havana, that a distinct and intelligible abstract showing its merits would be difficult to be made, were it not for the prominent feature of this connexion, that in the course of its existence two events, unforeseen by either party, occurred: first, the war between France and England, which tended much to increase the expenses and losses of Forbes & Co. in the importation of their goods; and, secondly, the activity and rivalship of the adjoining American traders, which diminished the contemplated opportunities of Forbes & Co. of sale. The unforeseen losses sustained by these events constituted the chief basis of the claim (exclusive of the Indian depredations) of this house on the Spanish government; and for a just estimation of its nature and extent, and of the obligation of that government to make indemnity, we submit the high authority of its own constituted officers in the annexed communication of the intendancy of Louisiana for the use of the cabinet of Madrid. (28)

Here the obligation of Spain to Forbes & Co. is acknowledged to exist, and to a large amount, and distinct suggestions are made as to the mode of indemnifying them.

Situated, then, as Forbes & Co. were at the time of this purchase of land, they were creditors to the Spanish government not only to an enormous amount on its treasury, but they had high and acknowledged claims on its gratitude. They had claims, besides, on the Seminole Indians for $86,000, and on the Choctaws and Chickasaws to a large amount. Amongst this host of debtors to Forbes & Co. the Seminoles alone stepped forward to discharge the amount due by them; and if a payment thus made by them of the lands in question—their own acknowledged property—could also be considered as a payment made by the crown of Spain, as would follow from the supposition assumed, then, and admitting it to its fullest extent, we think it is clearly shown by the evidence adduced that the Spanish government has received an equivalent far exceeding the object conveyed, and that on this ground neither the equity, justice, nor legality of this conveyance of land can be assailed. The supposition, however, that the Spanish governors, whilst performing an habitual duty in confirming this Indian sale, were bartering for the King, bears with it such a manifest impugnment of national dignity and national magnanimity that few, we should suppose, could be inclined to entertain it.

Our object, however, precludes disquisition; it is to show, in a form as condensed as possible, the true nature of the titles to the lands in question; and the exhibits we have spread open from the mass before us we trust are sufficient for this purpose, and that they afford ample justification for a concluding remark, that the Forbes purchase was made, not with a view to speculation, but as a resort to obtain payment of a heavy claim against the Indians; it was made for a large, valuable, and equitable consideration; it was conducted with frankness, deliberation, and publicity; the parties were competent, and the government consummated it with a "complete ultimate" title; and we are aware of no characteristic of an upright and bona fide contract that is deficient in this one, which we have attempted to expose.

PETITION.

To his excellency the governor general:

James Innerarity, inhabitant of this place, and empowered by the house of Panton, Leslie & Co., established in it, with the respect due to your excellency, appeareth and showeth that, in consequence of offers made at a general meeting of the Indians in the month of June last, by various chiefs of the Seminole tribe, to Mr. John Forbes, principal partner and director of the house, to cede to it a portion of the lands occupied by the said Indians in the districts of Apalachie and Apalachicola in payment of the debts which they have contracted and the robberies they have committed on the stores of the houses established in the vicinity of St. Mark's, your petitioner has the intention of directing an agent of said house to visit the said tribe and procure to be verified the cession of a portion of lands which shall be equivalent to the aforesaid effect.

If that object shall be accomplished, the result will be beneficial to the house by the retrieving of the debts which, for so long a time, have been due to it by these Indians, as also to the colony in general, by placing in the hands of industrious people, whose interest it will be to render it valuable, a district of land capable of supplying with provisions all the troops of his Majesty in the province, for whose daily subsistence, as well as that of the inhabitants of Pensacola and Mobile, there is a necessity of having recourse to the territories of the United States, from the want of cultivable lands in the colony, as almost all the good lands belong to the Indians: Therefore, petitioner submissively beseeches your excellency to take into your consideration that which he has exposed; and if you find it good, that you will grant him permission to establish a talk upon this business with the Indians, and, upon a cession being effected, that there may be confirmed and secured to the house the possession of the lands ceded, that it may dispose of them according to its pleasure; which is the favor which the petitioner hopes to receive from the known justice of your excellency.

JAMES INNERARITY.

DEED OF CESSION.

Be it known to every one by this writing that we, the undersigned chiefs of the Seminole tribe assembled together, having maturely weighed the enormous debts which we owe to the house of Panton, Leslie & Co., residing lately in Apalachie, for goods and merchandise supplied and sold to us, ourselves, and to our people; and being likewise responsible for the robberies and depredations which, on two occasions, we have perpetrated on the stores of the aforesaid house in Apalachie, headed by William Augustus Bowles, having committed the first of said robberies in the month of January, 1792, and the second in May, 1800; and having no means from which we can satisfy the said debts which we owe and injuries which we have done to the said house, from which serious detriments have resulted; and neither ourselves nor our people having property or money to pay or indemnify the said house, except by ceding to the said Panton, Leslie & Co. a portion of the lands which we occupy, we have determined, and by these presents we determine, to make a donation, to sell and to cede, to the said Panton, Leslie & Co., by way of compensation and indemnity for the said injuries and debts which we owe, a district of land which we hold as actual owners and proprietors, and which is contained within the following limits: [the limits here specified are omitted because the line designated is circumscribed and included within the line run in virtue of the subsequent deed (No. 11) of cession of April, 1810;] and by this deed of writing we cede, concede, give, sell, and transfer, to the said Panton, Leslie & Co., their heirs, executors, assigns, and administrators, in our own names and in those of all our people, the said district of land contained within the described limits, to be for them, their heirs, executors, consigns, and administrators, to hold and possess in full right and entire property; and we, the undersigned chiefs, in our own names and in those of our people of the said Seminole nation, in our names and those of our heirs and descendants, renounce and abandon all and whatever right we have hitherto had or possessed in the said district of land to the said Panton, Leslie & Co., their heirs, executors, consigns, and administrators; and we will defend and maintain to the said Panton, Leslie & Co., their heirs, administrators, and consigns, the full and complete dominion and possession of the said district of lands contained within the said limits, in the reality by us ceded, given, granted, sold, and transferred, against all and whatever person or persons, from henceforth and forever.

In faith of which, we sign this deed, in the village of Cheskatalafa, this twenty-fifth day of May, in the year eighteen hundred and four.

VERIFICATION.

I, Don Vicente Folch, colonel of the royal army, political and military governor of West Florida, sub-delegate judge of the general superintendency, &c., &c., &c., do hereby certify that the foregoing chiefs of the Seminole nation appeared before me on the 20th June of the current year, and, having given the hand in proof of friendship, amongst other things, said to me that one of the motives which caused their journey to this place was to declare to me that having ceded to the house of Panton, Leslie & Co., in consequence of great debts which they had contracted in their store lately established at Apalachie, and the robberies which they had there committed, a tract of land whose limits were designated in the preceding deed of cession and sale; that having done so with the full knowledge of their nation, and in the name of it having ratified it, they declare the same to me.

In faith of which, I subscribe these presents, and place the seal of my arms, in Pensacola, this 22d June, 1804.

CONFIRMATION.

This deed commences by a recitation of the preceding deed and verification, (3 and 4,) and proceeds: "And whereas James Innerarity, one of the partners of the said house of Panton, Leslie & Co., residing generally in Pensacola, has come, in virtue of the foregoing cession and grant, personally to this place, in the name of and representing the said house, to take possession of the said lands; and, in order to do so with the more notoriety and solemnity, and that the said concession may be the more completely confirmed, and finally relieved from all altercation or dispute, and the chiefs of the Indians of the Lower Creeks and Seminole nations having convened together to meet him on the said subject, be it now known to all whom it may concern that we, the undersigned chiefs and headmen of the Lower Creek and Seminole nations, finding ourselves united in junta in this place, have unanimously agreed, and by this writing solemnly confirm, in every manner and sense, and in all its parts, the aforesaid donation and cession of the aforerecited extension of lands, with this only exception. [Here follows an unimportant alteration in the boundary line.] And that the said donation and cession by us made to the said Panton, Leslie & Co. may be and remain valid, henceforth and forever, we have this day, on executing this deed, solemnly ceded and granted possession of it to their partner, James Innerarity, deputed for this purpose; and we promise and obligate ourselves and our descendants to maintain and defend to them, in full and quiet possession, the said described lands, against all persons whatsoever, hereafter and forever.

VERIFICATION.

I, Don Vicente Folch, governor, &c., &c., &c., hereby certify that at a large assembly of the principal chiefs of the Talapuses and Seminole nations of Indians in this palce the 3d December of the current year, King Manso or Hopoethle Mico, being chief orator, declared to me, "That, with the general consent of their nations, they had confirmed the cession of lands made in the month of May last to the house of Panton, Leslie & Co., &c., and that they had done it in payment of the robberies committed by them, and the debts they had contracted at the store of St. Mark's of Apalachie, and that they had put in possession of the land James Innerarity, in the name of the said house of Panton, Leslie & Co., to whom they had sold it forever," &c., &c.

EXHIBIT No. 7.

This deed commences by a recitation of the deed of cession of 25th May, (Exhibit No. 3,) and of the confirmation of 22d August, (Exhibit No. 5,) and of the meeting of 3d December, certified in Exhibit No. 6, and proceeds thus: "And whereas it resulted that a certain number of chiefs should go with the said James Innerarity, or his agent, the better to identify and mark the boundary lines of said cession, that they may be seen by and known to every one, be it known that we, the undersigned kings, chiefs, and warriors, named by the aforesaid nations, have, at the citation of the said James Innerarity, accompanied him in the said lines, and that we have recognized and certified them well, and we have marked them in a manner so visible that they can be easily recognized by every one, and they are as follows: [here follows a designation of the lines.] And the said lines are very distinct, the trees being all marked; and the lines marked and here described we declare, in the names of our nations, to be the true boundaries of the lands ceded in the said deeds to Panton, Leslie & Co., and consequently the limit between our nations and the white people of that part, and, as such, we order that it shall be known and respected by our people henceforth, forever.

2d. The acknowledgment of Copixtsi Mico, Chocolaky Tastanake, first warrior, Catcha Tastonague, and Taskiniha, all of Micasuky, that "although we have not been present at the marking of this limit we know it, and consent to its justice, and that it is well done, and so we sign this deed in presence of the commandant of this fort."

3d. The certificate of the commandant, Ignacio Balderas, to the acknowledgment and signatures of these four chiefs, August 2, 1806.

EXHIBIT No. 8.

It is not thought material to set out the petition of Mr. Forbes, although its place is preserved in the documentary evidence, its substance being in continuation of that of the petition of Mr. Innerarity, (1,) setting forth that the whole proceedings have been regular, and praying for a confirmation of them.

EXHIBIT No. 9.

The decree of confirmation recites that Panton, Leslie & Co. were established with royal approbation, since 1785, to trade with the Indians; that it was one of the terms and conditions of the establishment that "the government should facilitate, as much as it possibly could, the recovery of the debts pending between the Indians and said house, which, it recites, is also proven by the original letters presented to me by the said James Innerarity, written by the Brigadier Don Manuel Gayaso de Lemos and the Marquis de Casa Calvo, governors general that were of the ceded province of Louisiana, (Nos. 1 and 3 of these pieces,) and from which it is to be gathered that their excellencies were willing and gave their consent to the purchase of any lands that the said house might make of the said Indians, with the intent of receiving its outstanding debts and losses occasioned by the robberies committed by the adventurer, W. Bowles." And it recites generally the deeds of cession by the Indians, and proceeds: "Therefore, making use of the powers which the King our lord, whom God preserve, has conferred on me in his royal name, I confirm and ratify to the said house of Panton, Leslie & Co. the cession of the said lands by the Seminole nation of Indians, in the form and with the boundaries explained and manifested in the diagram attached to the original deed and copy of this title, which will remain recorded in the office of the secretary of government of this province; and, consequently, I declare and impart entire and direct dominion to the said house of Panton, Leslie & Co. of the land mentioned, so that the said house may, as its property, enjoy, possess, sell, and alienate it, agreeably to the terms expressed in my decree of January 7, 1804, antecedently inserted; and I empower it to take possession, and will defend and maintain it therein, without prejudice to a third party.

"In witness whereof, I order the present to be delivered, signed by my hand, sealed with my arms, and countersigned by the underwritten secretary of government.

EXHIBIT No. 10.

This record is twenty-four pages of details and exhibits of debts due by the Indians, and losses for which they were responsible to Panton, Leslie & Co., amounting to $66,533 05, and it is omitted here owing to its length.

EXHIBIT No. 11.

This second deed of cession was agreed to at Cuskataloofa, on the Chatahoochie, in April, 1810, and concluded at Pensacola January 22, 1811, by Tuskanucky Hopax, Coweta Mico, Coweta Tuskama, Hothlepoi Mico, Taha Hadjo, Mico Nuppa, Tuskanucky Chahuckany, Ufala Mico, Hopoi Mico, Tohalla Emathla, Efa Mico, and Toothla Tuskanuky, who were deputed for this purpose.

This deed recounts the names of the chiefs at the meeting of April, 1810, and the agreement then made. It completes that agreement by ceding, giving, granting, selling, and transferring to Forbes & Co., for the consideration of $19,387 04½, due by them, the tract of land occupied by them, whose boundaries are described, and appoints a commission to accompany the surveyor of Forbes & Co., to mark the trees and place such stakes as they may deem necessary.

This deed is accompanied with the verification of Governor Folch, (Exhibit 12.) And connected with it, also, is the deed dated at St. Mark's, May 25, 1811, which acknowledges the marks of the boundary lines; it is executed before Daniel Blue, William Hambly, and Edmund Doyle, and describes the marks in detail. This description is so minute and diffuse as to preclude it from insertion here. To describe it generally from these details, the boundary line runs from the west end of St. Vincent's island, by Lake Wumico and Apalachicola, to Sweet Water creek, up said creek, and striking northeast to the old line, following the same across the Oclockny, and striking off to the river St. Mark's, to an oak marked with a cross, on the west bank of said river a little above the place where it flows under ground, and following the line through the woods immediately to where the said river begins to emerge again, and thence down the middle of said river to the sea. The map of these lands, made by McKinnon, describes this boundary pretty accurately.

This last deed at St. Mark's is accompanied with the certificate of Don Marcos Devillers, the then commandant, that the chiefs who signed it acknowledged it in his presence. This certificate is countersigned by José Urcullo and Lorenzo Vitrian.

And Don Vicente Sebastian certifies in the same manner and to the same effect.

EXHIBIT No. 12.

Governor Folch certifies that in a full assembly of chiefs of the Lower Creek and Seminole nations, held in the government this day, the undersigned chiefs declared, by the medium of their interpreters, James Durosseau, resident in the nation, Thomas Miller, on the part of the chiefs, and Manuel Gonzales, of this place, that they had ceded, in the name and with the consent of their nations, to the house of John Forbes & Co., in payment of the debts due to said house by the Indian dealers of the several towns of the aforesaid Lower Creeks on the river Chattahoochie, the piece of land of which the limits are specified in the act of cession, which act and limits were read to them and translated in my presence by the said interpreters; and they, agreeing to the propriety of the same, signed, of their own accord, the foregoing instrument.

In witness whereof, I give the present, signed by my hand, sealed with my arms, and countersigned by the underwritten secretary of this government.

EXHIBIT No. 13.

This petition is dated June 7, 1811, and it is thought unnecessary to set it forth, as it is of the same tenor with the petition (Exhibit 8) in the case of the first cession. But when it was acceded to, (June 8, 1811,) a similar condition was attached as to the first petition, viz: "that John Forbes & Co. do not dispose of nor alienate the land in question without the express consent of this government, and for which a title was granted December 3, 1806."

EXHIBIT No. 14.

This record is an act of confirmation of Governor Folch of this last described cession of land. It recites the previous acts of the Indians, &c., (Exhibit 11,) and concludes thus: "Wherefore, making use of the faculties conferred on me by our lord the King, and in his royal name, I confirm and ratify to the said John Forbes & Co. the cession of two pieces of land, above designated, made by the nation of Seminole Indians and Lower Creeks, represented by their principal chiefs, leaders, and headmen, amply empowered. And I give them power to enter into possession of the said land according to the directions, dimensions, and distances contained in the diagram and certificate of survey, the original documents of which, with a copy of said plat, shall remain in the office of the secretary of this government, the said surveyor recording not only this title, but that also delivered in the year 1806, from the same motives, and that of the island ceded to John Forbes individually, in order that the archives may contain everything concerning these cessions, and the motives from whence they originate. And I declare and impart to the said house of John Forbes & Co. entire and direct property, that as such they may the said land enjoy, possess, cultivate, sell or alienate on the conditions expressed in my decree inserted in this title. In witness, &c., &c.

EXHIBIT No. 15.

This record being altogether matter of detail, showing the items of the debt due by the Indians to Forbes & Co., amounting to $19,387 04½, which formed the consideration of this second cession, it is deemed unnecessary to set it out.

EXHIBIT No. 16.

The petition of John Forbes is dated in Havana, October 9, 1817, and is addressed to the captain general (Cienfuegos) of the Island of Cuba. It sets forth that the house of Forbes & Co. is possessed in full property of the lands which were occupied by, and which belonged to, the Seminole Indians, situated in the districts of Apalachie and Apalachicola, and the manner in which said house came into the possession of the same. "That being determined to alienate the greater part of the same in favor of Don Colin

Mitchel, he solicits your excellency, as captain general of the two Floridas, and intrusted with the high powers of your station, to permit him to alienate the said lands upon the terms he has agreed upon with the said Colin Mitchel, and that he may agree upon hereafter with other persons.

THE ASSESSOR GENERAL'S OPINION.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: The lands which were occupied by the Indians of the Seminole tribe, lying in the districts of Apalachie and Apalachicola, and the island belonging to the Lower Creeks and Seminoles, together with two pieces of neighboring land, having been transmitted as they actually and lawfully are in full property with a conditional title to the house of John Forbes & Co., established in the Floridas by royal permission, for which acquisition, competent permission was given by Don Vicente Folch, who was then political and military governor of West Florida, and who delivered, subsequently, titles of confirmation in favor of the purchasers, there is no obstacle to your excellency's making use of the powers intrusted to you, and permitting the alienations proposed, among which is designated Don Colin Mitchel, merchant of this city, a person uniting all the qualifications necessary for obtaining them.

"ARTICLE 4. The Spanish nation declares and recognizes that all the lands east of the said division line in article two belong legitimately and indisputably to the Chickasaw and Choctaw nations, offering to sustain them in them with all its power."

EXHIBIT No. 24.

Pending the treaty between the United States and the Choctaw Indians, a correspondence took place between Forbes & Co. and the Secretary of War, the object of which, on the part of the United States, was, through Forbes & Co., to facilitate the negotiation then pending, and on the part of Forbes & Co., to receive payment for their claims against the Choctaws through these negotiations. The correspondence is generally irrelevant to our present exposition, and the following extracts only are therefore set out:

Extract of a letter from John Forbes to the Hon. H. Dearborn, dated Pensacola, September 5, 1806.

"But it is not alone the Choctaw treaty that gives rise to my fears, (for which I hope there is no foundation;) after a most expensive, troublesome, and disagreeable application to the Creek nation, a promise was obtained from them in 1803 that they would pay their debts so soon as they sold their Okmulgee lands; to this promise the agent, Colonel Hawkins, was privy, and I may say a party, as it was at his suggestion that the demand was urged and pressed upon them in that form, as being connected with the favorite wish of your government. The land has at length been sold, but our debts have been left out of the calculation. When the Indians met to ratify this treaty, in May last, one of my partners attended to claim the fulfilment of their promise; but after much shuffling they rejected my claim on the ground alluded to in the enclosed letter from Colonel Hawkins. The fact is shortly this: finding the Upper and Lower Creeks unwilling to admit as a part of my claims on them the robberies committed by Bowles and Seminoles on our stores, and being duly authorized by the Spanish government, I treated for and obtained from the Seminoles, as an indemnification, a tract of land laying within the Spanish limits, for the cession of which, according to the Indian laws, they were fully competent, by which means my general claims against the nation were reduced within $40,000. This bargain, I do assert, was as fair a purchase as ever was made from the red men since the treaty of William Penn, and has been formally ratified in presence of the King of Spain's representative by all the chief men of the Seminoles, &c. Had we been so base as to allow cupidity to influence us in our operations, the rejection of our remaining claims would have been a just punishment on us; but so far from this being the case, my agent and partner was instructed, and accordingly offered to give up the lands to the nation, on their agreeing to admit and pay our claim as originally presented to them; this they refused in a very unexpected and, I may say, unprincipled manner."

General Dearborn to John Forbes in reply.

"WAR DEPARTMENT, November 12, 1806.

"SIR: Your letter of 5th September has been duly received and considered. In answer, I can only remark, that the Creeks absolutely refused to accede to my request, to have provision made in the convention for the balance due from them to your house; and observed that a great part of your debt had been paid by lands sold to your house in Florida, and that they should take proper measures for paying the balance.

"The Chickasaws will, I presume, pay their debts as soon as the appropriation is made by Congress."

That the intendancy of Louisiana was privy and consented to this negotiation of Forbes with the Indians is proved by the direct correspondence between them. The acknowledged debts due to Forbes were from the various tribes of Chickasaws, Choctaws, Creeks, and Seminoles, part of whom were within the sovereign jurisdiction of the United States and part within that of Spain; and in negotiating for lands in payment of that portion of their debts within the Spanish jurisdiction, there were no obstacles to encounter except such as were connected with the disposition of the Indians themselves. The reverse, however, was the case within the jurisdiction of the United States, where such negotiations were inhibited by law and by treaty. And the only difficulty to be encountered by Forbes, in negotiating for Indian lands for the recovery of his claims, was that of purchasing from them lands lying within these limits. He accordingly consulted the intendancy of Louisiana about this difficulty, with a view to obtain its influence, if possible, to have it removed.

The Intendant writes him this in reply.

"NEW ORLEANS, February 21, 1799.

"SIR: I have received your letter of the 16th, in which you represent the great losses your house has sustained and the quantity of credits it has pending in the Talapuche nation, as also the small hopes you have of recovering them without resorting to extraordinary means, of which the most probable seems to be the purchase of lands of said Indians situated within the limits of the United States. This being an operation of moment and of political importance, you wish to be informed by me if I have influence in the views of that government." "I cannot object to whatever purchase your house, or the agents in its behalf, may make in the Talapuche nation to the north of the limits between his Catholic Majesty and the United States, considering, as I do, this to be the only means of recovering considerable funds which would be otherwise lost. When you have formed this purchase, you can inform me of the locality of the land and its extent; and be assured, sir, it will afford me much satisfaction to contribute whatever may be interesting to your house.

"MANUEL GAYOSO DE LEMOS.

"Mr. JOHN FORBES."

This correspondence about payment from the Indians within the limits of the United States was subsequently continued with the cabinet at Washington. And when the Apalachicola negotiation was begun, Mr. Forbes informed the intendancy of it, and the reply of that department is this:

"NEW ORLEANS, February 4, 1801.

"SIR: I have received your esteemed favor of 19th ultimo, and I learn by it that the Seminole tribes have just decided to offer to your house lands on the river Apalachicola, as what they formerly offered is not convenient, which I hope will result well. [The letter is continued and concluded in other subjects.]

Extract from the proclamation of Governor Morales, dated New Orleans, July 17, 1799.

The King, whom God preserve, having deigned to declare and order, by his royal order made at San Lorenzo, October 22, 1798, that the intendancy of these provinces, to the exclusion of all other authorities, shall be vested with the privilege of distributing and granting every kind of land belonging to the crown, which privilege was, by his order of August 24, 1770, vested in the civil and military government, and desiring to fulfil this important charge, not only according to the article 81 of the ordonnance of the intendants of New Spain, the royal instruction of 1754 cited in the said article, and the laws relating thereto; but also with regard to local circumstances, and as far as he can, without injury to the rights of the King, he will contribute towards the encouragement and welfare of the inhabitants, or those who may establish themselves in his possessions; having examined with the greatest attention the rules made by his excellency the Count d'O'Reylly, February 18, 1790, those that were promulgated by Governor Manuel Gayaso de Lemos January 1, 1798, and the advice given me in this regard by Don Manuel Serrano, assessor of the intendancy, and others acquainted in this vicinity. In order that those who desire to obtain lands may know how they ought to solicit them, and the conditions upon which they will be granted or sold to them; that those who possess them without the necessary titles may know the steps they ought to take to come to an arrangement; that the commandants and sub-delegates of intendancy may be informed of what they ought to do, the surveyors and clerks of the revenue, &c. Under the reserve of augmenting, changing, or revoking whatever time and circumstances may show to be more proper to conduct to the end to which the beneficent intentions of his Majesty are directed, I have resolved that the rules explained in the following articles be observed. [Here follows thirty-eight articles.]

Spanish laws in relation to granting lands.—Royal ordinance of October 15, 1774.

I, THE KING, ETC.

Experience having proved the inconveniences that arise to my subjects of the kingdoms of the Indies from the decree issued by royal order of November 24, 1735, that those who would enter upon the royal possessions of those dominions should necessarily apply to my royal person to obtain their confirmation within the time assigned, under the penalty of losing them in case of their failure to do so; and many persons having failed to avail themselves of this benefit, from their inability to sustain the expense of an application to this court, to obtain the confirmation of what they compromised for or purchased, it being of small amount, or some few caballerias, (lots,) and those who may apply from their purchases being of greater value, are at great expense on account of the testimony they must present, the transmission of money, the appointment of agents, and other necessary expenses that usually exceed the principal sum paid for the composition or purchase of these royal lands before the sub-delegates; and, as a consequence of this, much land is left uncultivated, which might support the provinces in which they are, by being cultivated and in grazing cattle, and it is another result that persons occupy lands illegally, through defect of title, without properly cultivating them, for fear of being denounced and prosecuted for it, and my royal treasury also suffering both in the amount of sales of these lands and in the consequent neglect of agriculture and tending of cattle; I have therefore resolved that in the grants, sales, and compromises of royal cultivated and uncultivated lands now made, or which shall hereafter be made, the provisions of this regulation shall be faithfully observed and executed.

1st. That from the date of this my royal order the power of appointing sub-delegate judges to sell and compromise for the lands and uncultivated parts of the said dominions shall belong thereafter, exclusively, to the viceroys and presidents of my royal audiences of those kingdoms who shall send them their appointment or commission, with an authentic copy of this regulation. These and those whom the said viceroys and presidents shall hereafter appoint may sub-delegate their commissions to others for the distant parts and provinces of their stations, as was previously done by virtue of this law. My council of the Indies and its ministers are excluded from the superintendence and management of this branch of the royal treasury, (hacienda.)

2d. The judges and officers to whom jurisdiction for the sale and composition for the lands may be sub-delegated shall proceed with mildness, gentleness, and moderation, with verbal and not judicial proceedings, in the case of those lands which the Indians shall have possessed, and of others when required, especially for their labor, tillage, and tending of cattle. Nor shall severe strictness be used towards those already in possession of Spaniards or persons of other nations, and in regard to all the requirements of laws XIV, XV, XVII, XVIII, and XIX, title XII, book IV, of the Recopilation of the Indies shall be observed.

Of the laws here referred to, No. XVII being already cited in our Exhibit No. 22, the following captions of the remainder are quoted to show their subject-matter:

Law XIV. Possessors of lands, grounds, chacras, and caballerias, under legal titles, shall be maintained therein, and the rest returned to the King.

Law XV. Lands to be admitted to composition.

Law XVIII. Lands to be left to the Indians.

Law XIX. No composition of lands shall be allowed where they have not been held ten years.

The following royal ordinance is quoted to show the continuity of the land laws from 1754 to 1818:

ROYAL ORDINANCE OF FERDINAND VII.

I, the King, etc., influenced by the paternal love which all my subjects, even the most distant, merit of me, and by that sincere desire which I have felt, ever since my elevation to the throne, to render uniform the government of the vast empires that God has intrusted to me, and to place my extensive dominions of the two Americas in proper order and defence and to render them prosperous, have resolved, from the best information and mature reflection, to establish in the kingdom of New Spain intendants of army and province, that, being provided with competent authority and salaries, they may govern the towns and inhabitants in peace and with justice as to what is confided to them by these regulations, may preserve the police, and secure the lawful claims of my royal treasury with the integrity, zeal, and vigilance prescribed by the wise laws of the Indies, and the two royal ordinances published by my august father and lord, Don Philip V, and my beloved brother, Don Ferdinand VI, on July 4, 1718, and October 13, 1749, whose wise and just laws I wish to be faithfully observed by the intendants of said kingdom, with the extensions and restrictions to be expressed in this ordinance and regulation.

Notwithstanding that, according to the decree of the King of 3d November last, in which he granted to your lordship the government and captain-generalship of St. Augustine and province of Florida, the title for the same was issued from the chamber of the Indies agreeable to those of the governors, your predecessors, and as directed by the law 1, book 5, chap. 2 of the Recopilation, with the quality of the said captain-general, his Majesty commands me to inform and advise your lordship that the Conde de Galvy is head of both Floridas, east and west, as separate captain-general of these, together with the province of Louisiana.

The INTENDANT of Louisiana.

EXHIBIT No. 28.

This letter is from the Marquis of Casa Calvo, governor of Louisiana, to the intendant of Cuba, Don Mariano Louis de Urguis; it is dated New Orleans, October 8, 1800, and as it occupies twenty-seven pages of closely written foolscap paper, the following extracts only are deemed of sufficient interest to be exhibited:

"MOST EXCELLENT SIR: The first point of the order resolves itself into the question, whether the house of Panton is entitled to an indemnity? What I have already said is a proof that the house of Panton is entitled to an indemnity; so thought my predecessors, and I am of the same opinion. Since the beginning of 1789 they remained solely charged with the general trade of the Tallapuses, Alabama, Choctaw, Chickasaw, and Cherokees, and thus were removed in a great measure the obstacles and embarrassments which occurred at every step to secure the Indian commerce; and we cannot calculate the precarious and the provisional dispositions which they had taken since 1784 to content them and to consolidate a durable peace with them. Already the Marshal Baron de Carondelet, in his representation to this department, July 1, 1798, (No. 78,) includes a memorial of William Panton, making palpable the necessity of a quick decision, with the assurance that upon that depended the peace of these dominions of the King, determining the indemnity that ought to be made to enable the house to continue its commerce with the same fidelity and the constant success which it had the twelve years since its establishment to that time, or well admitting the proposition made by the same house, which is in his former representation, (No. 41,) July 27, 1794, directed to the minister, in which is a statement to his Majesty of the effects of the house in pursuing its trade for two or three years, and showing (in the case cited) the shield from its total ruin, and showing the equity of its good services. Both representations throw as much light as is necessary, and manifest, with the greatest evidence, how unjust it was to adopt one of the propositions to indemnify them. The governor and intendant, confiding in the generosity and justice of the nation, estimating the importance of these subjects, and inspired with conceptions advantageous and rational, they continued to excite Panton to follow his commerce with the Indian nations, notwithstanding the losses which he had suffered, and notwithstanding the inevitable ones which they foresaw. In truth, it is not to be supposed that the individuals of the house, after a continual experience of many years, well instructed as they were in the management of their commerce with the Indian nations, foreseeing the ruin which threatened them if they persisted in it, that they should have blindly followed it.

"The losses are immense which the house has already suffered, by the vessels which the French and English have taken already, by the excessive premiums of insurance they have been forced to pay, from the irregular situation in which its commerce is placed; they cannot raise the price of the goods which they sell to the Indians, nor diminish the price of skins; and to this is to be added the losses in its remittances and the depredations of Bowles, which are notorious, and it is no exaggeration to say they amount to $400,000, more or less.

"The second point which his Majesty wishes to know is, what can be the indemnity which he has to give to the house of Panton, supposing that it is never permitted that any but a Spanish vessel shall enter our ports? This is a more delicate disquisition, especially when his Majesty has not determined on the proposition made by Baron Carondelet in the aforesaid representation (No. 41) about the two things to be done for the house of Panton, to attract entirely the nations, explaining the advantages which ought to result, and showing the immense urgency with which Spain should frustrate the ambitious designs of these dangerous neighbors.

"Just, nevertheless, is the necessity of choosing a medium to preserve that commerce, since, if it be lost a moment, the friendship of the exasperated Indians will place itself in the hands of the Americans, and if the occasion presents itself the Tallapuses will call upon the English to the coast of Apalachie.

"The third proposition for their indemnity seems to reduce itself to this, that it permits the house of Panton, Leslie & Co. to introduce into the ports of Havana and Campeachy, during the war and two years afterwards, common bale goods, provisions, and implements of agriculture and engines; exporting, in return, products of these countries to Providence, or any of the ports of the United States.

"The fourth proposition to indemnify Panton is a privilege, in the first place, to introduce from the coast of Africa into this river four thousand negro slaves, free of duty, as also the exportation of the product of the same slaves; and they having the exclusive privilege for six years, to count from the time of the first importation, which never could take place until a general peace. This project is supposed to compensate their losses, with a grant besides of twenty leagues (sixty miles) square of river lands on the west bank of the Mississippi, in one, two, or three divisions, without incommoding those who are already established, the government always taking care to watch its conduct, and obliging it to dispose of and establish the said lands according to the prescriptions of his Majesty on that subject.

"These are the four propositions which present themselves for indemnifying Panton for his losses, and preserving the Indian trade which is so interesting for maintaining the preponderance recommended, and rendered expedient by so many reasons. It does appear to me that of all these the least burdensome and most proper is the second, viz: to grant to the house a loan for six years, without interest, of $400,000 to pursue its commerce, assuring it that in cases of necessity the prices of goods to the Indians may be moderated, in order to rival the trade of Congress and its agents, his Majesty keeping in view their losses by indemnifying generously, (bien intendido,) under the rules and precautions which they explain in the memorial included in the cited representation, (No. 41,) taking from them securities which shall appear most corresponding and suitable to the house, under its proper responsibility that it shall not swell the losses under the pretext of rivalling the dispositions of Congress. It seems to me that his Majesty could facilitate this sum at the end of two years for the moiety.

"What consequences might follow the withholding the succor to Panton, and leaving the house to its own speculations, is the third question which it is my duty to satisfy.

"When I come to speak of this, information is necessarily diffuse, answers abundant, and easy of solution—if nothing prevents it, the entire ruin of the house. Yes, excellent sir, the indubitable effect will be the total ruin of the house, if it is always to be denied assistance or compensation in some of the four ways already proposed; it will have no choice but to abandon its commerce with the sad remains of destroyed fortunes, when all or most of its creditors will be injured the moment this notice is divulged; the Indians, and the greater part of the white and colored people, who know no law but that of necessity, nor other enemies than the most free, (mas franco,) will profit themselves of this situation of the house to mock the partners of it, vaunt themselves on what is owing, and lend themselves to the Americans; they will sacrifice for less than half their value the houses and stores which are only fit for the Indian trade and these dominions of his Majesty; in the act they will begin to experience the terrible consequences of robberies, assassinations, and depredations of these barbarians, instigated by our neighbors and by the same dealers, whilst, at the same time, Bowles and his despicable associates, availing themselves of so favorable a conjuncture, will not only effect their designs, but extend them to a greater distance.

"Such might be the effect, without exaggeration, of abandoning the house of Panton; already the partners have determined to desist and to resign themselves to the sacrifices which they clearly see, if in the approaching year his Majesty does not deign to adopt some of the propositions which have been made, or some other equivalent that may suggest itself.

"The actual credits of the house amount to $120,000, more or less; in time of peace they amounted, as I have shown, to $180,000; their dwelling-houses, buildings, and utensils for the trade, to the sum of $40,000, a little more or less; these sums form a capital amounting to $220,000; the debts of the Indians and traders they seldom diminish, and if this succeeds the other increases in proportion.

"To this capital, dead to the company, I ought to add the work of sixty laborers, negroes, and hired people to shake, supply, and press the skins; to this is to be added the value of two ships of 220 and 250 tons each, for the houses of Pensacola and Mobile, and a brig of 120 for St. Augustine, with three smaller vessels of 50 and 90, absolutely necessary for the trade and communication between the said factories, which ought always to exist, in their respective stores, and those which are going and returning from Europe, whose import may be estimated, without exaggeration, at $150,000, which forms, in all, $370,000. To this exorbitant sum there are to be added other annual and irremediable losses, but necessary to preserve the friendship of the Indians; one of them is that which they spend in free and open table which they keep (a thing indispensably and absolutely necessary) for the chiefs and traders, and factors employed in the commerce; and, treating the other Indians besides, who go and come, &c., we have already $388,000, a sum capable of imposing silence in those who, without foundation, place and attribute profits and benefits of this commerce.

"From all this exposition you will infer how few, if there is one, in the province who would risk his property in a trade which has caused the ruin of various living and irrefragable witnesses of this.

"I am unable, from what I have read, seen, and observed, to extend my ideas further; in order to complete, if possible, a deliberate and dispassionate report, I have endeavored to fulfil the confidence with which you have honored me, without any other desire than the service of his Majesty, promoting his royal interests, and those of his dear subjects according to the duty of those who are under his sovereign protection, those who contribute and conspire to the accomplishment of his beneficent intentions; with these views I have accomplished the duty of a faithful subject of his Majesty. I have demonstrated that the house of Panton is entitled to an indemnity; bringing to mind the different instances which, in various times, the said house has directed to his Majesty and the government a solicitude of a just compensation for its constant services, and for its notorious losses. I have examined, discussed, and observed the convenience or injury which seemed to have the power of resulting according to the spirit of the royal order, inclining my ideas in favor of the second proposition, which I meet (encuentro) as most conforming and analogous to the best service of his Majesty, and the defence and quietude of these provinces. I have touched the effects that may result from not giving succor to that house. I have proved the impossibility of accomplishing this without adopting the means proposed by the Baron de Carondelet in the cited representation, (No. 41,) that which, nevertheless, has in its principles great inconveniences. And I have explained in a separate communication the will with which we can draw to us the esteem of the Indians with the object which his Majesty indicates.

"God preserve you many years.

ON APPOINTMENT OF A SURVEYOR FOR THE VIRGINIA MILITARY DISTRICT IN OHIO.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 4, 1828.

Mr. VINTON, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the resolution directing them to inquire into the expediency of appointing a surveyor for the Virginia military district, within the State of Ohio, reported:

That the Commonwealth of Virginia, during the war of the Revolution, promised certain bounties in land to her troops, on the continental establishment, for the satisfaction of which a district of country was set apart within the limits of the now State of Kentucky.

Afterwards, by an act of assembly of that State, passed in October, 1783, a board of officers therein named, or any five of them, were authorized to appoint a principal surveyor, whose duty it was, by himself, or his deputies, to make surveys for all warrants that should be issued; to keep a record or book of entries of such surveys; and upon his certificate the titles were perfected by the emanation of patents.

The board of officers for the continental establishment appointed Colonel Richard C. Anderson their principal surveyor, who established his office in Kentucky, where it remained during his life; subsequently, upon the cession to the United States by the State of Virginia of the country northwest of the river Ohio, the district of country lying between the Little Miami and the Scioto rivers, in the now State of Ohio, was reserved to make up any deficiency that might be found to exist in the quantity of land theretofore reserved for bounties in the State of Kentucky. Shortly afterwards a deficiency was admitted by the United States to exist. From that time locations of warrants were made, indiscriminately, in Kentucky and Ohio; but all surveys were returned to the office in Kentucky, and entries or records of them there made and kept, thus transferring to Kentucky the original evidence of title to a large district of country in Ohio, two hundred miles from the office. Things stood in this situation until the year A. D. 1826, when Colonel Anderson died. The committee are informed that all the individuals composing the above-mentioned board are also deceased, who might, if living, fill the vacancy. They are also informed that at the time of the death of Colonel Anderson many warrants had been issued that remained unlocated, or, in other words, for which no survey had been made; that in many cases where surveys had been made the certificate of Colonel Anderson, upon which a patent issued from the General Land Office, had not been obtained; and that since his death, a large number of warrants have been issued that have not been, and cannot be, located until a surveyor is appointed. The right to make locations in Kentucky has ceased to exist many years since; so that all future entries must of necessity be made in Ohio.

From the foregoing statement of facts the committee are of opinion that in all cases of lands in Ohio, where the evidences of title in the surveyor's office exist in such form that the originals can be transferred to Ohio, such transfer ought to be made; and in those cases where they are so interwoven with evidences of title to lands in Kentucky as not to admit of separation, duly authenticated transcripts ought to be transmitted. The reasons for such a transfer are, in the opinion of the committee, too obvious to require to be set forth. It is also equally obvious that the means necessary for perfecting their titles ought to be provided for those who hold imperfect evidences of their rights. This is to be effected by the appointment of a surveyor.

It will be seen also that those whose titles have been carried into grant are likewise deeply interested, when it is considered that the titles to a large and valuable district of country in Ohio are without the jurisdiction of the State, and in the hands of individuals, who are under no official responsibility whatever for their safety. The committee therefore report a bill to embrace the above-mentioned objects.

20TH CONGRESS.] No 601. [1ST SESSION.

LAND CLAIM AT VINCENNES, INDIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 4, 1828.

Mr. SHEPPERD, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and documents of Mary Loveless and Mary Ann Bond, reported:

This case was submitted the last year to the same committee, who then made a report, which was in these words:

"The petitioners state that they are the daughters and heirs of Hugh Smith; that their father resided at Vincennes, Indiana, as the head of a family; that he served as a soldier under General George Rogers Clark, and died at that place in the year 1779, leaving a widow and two children, the petitioners. They say that, by a law of Virginia, they are entitled to four hundred acres of land, which they nor their father have ever received; and that their claim is barred by lapse of time; that, by the neglect or omission of their agent at Vincennes, their claim was not presented to the board of commissioners. Wherefore they pray that a law should be passed for their benefit.

"It is proven that said Smith resided at Vincennes, as the head of a family, during the revolutionary war, and that he died at that place sometime previous to the peace of 1783, leaving a widow and two daughters, the present petitioners. The affidavit of Mary Ann Loveless is exhibited, who swears that she never parted with her claim for said land, and that she believes her sister has not done so. There is no proof that Smith marched as a soldier under General Clark when the posts of Kaskaskia and St. Vincennes were reduced; nor is there any proof that the heirs attempted to present their claim before any board of commissioners, or other tribunal, for confirmation; or that they appointed an agent to do it.

"By a resolution of Congress of August 29, 1788, it was declared that four hundred acres of land should be reserved for, and given to, every head of a family who, professing himself to be a citizen of the United States, should have settled at Post St. Vincent's on or before the year 1783. The same is provided for in the act of March 3, 1791.—(See Land Laws, page 232.) The time for presenting those claims was prolonged by several acts. Finally, by an act of April 30, 1810, time was given until the 1st of November of that year to all who were entitled to a donation of land in the district of Vincennes by any former resolution or act of Congress, and who were minors, or who did not reside within the Indiana district during the time allowed by law for registering claims at Vincennes and Kaskaskia. But by that act those who neglected to present their claims are declared to be forever barred.—(See same laws, pages 243-'4.) There is no proof to show that Smith settled at Vincennes as a citizen of the United States, or that the petitioners, at the time named in said act, did not reside within the Indiana district; and it is evident from their own declarations that they were not minors. The committee are therefore of opinion that, on the proof now exhibited, they ought not to be relieved."

Since the above report was made the affidavits of two individuals have been laid before the committee, by which it is proved that the petitioners, who were small children at the date of their father's death, shortly after that period removed with their mother from Vincennes, and that they have never been in what is now the State of Indiana or in Illinois since. The proof is not positive that their father, Hugh Smith, settled at Vincennes as a citizen of the United States; but from the period at which he did reside there, and the declarations of the family after his death, which happened, as is proven by the witnesses, sometime before the peace of 1783, the committee are of opinion that the prayer of the petitioners ought to be granted, and have therefore reported a bill in their favor.

20TH CONGRESS.] No. 602. [1ST SESSION.

LAND CLAIMS IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 4, 1828.

To the honorable Senate and the honorable House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the underwritten inhabitants of the State of Missouri humbly showeth: That after a large number of claims which had originated under the French and Spanish governments, in the former province of Louisiana, had been confirmed by the board of commissioners sitting at St. Louis under the authority of an act of Congress; after another class of claims, reported by the recorder of land titles under the authority of an act of Congress approved April 12, 1814, had been confirmed by another act, a large balance of claims remained unconfirmed, which were reported, with the opinions of the commissioners on the same. Ever since that time, until the passage of the act of May 26, 1824, no means had been provided to enable the land claimants to try the validity of their claims before a competent tribunal to decide finally on the same. In the meantime many parts of the State remained intersected by large tracts of the best land, whose title or right was uncertain, and could not be disposed of safely by the persons claiming them, nor by the United States. These left large interstices of wilderness, which prevented settlements from being connected, roads from being opened, mills from being erected, &c., whilst it left the means to the Indians to commit depredations, particularly in the event of a war.

Your memorialists had confidently expected that so soon as the part of the country they inhabit became a State, the senators and representatives from Missouri would be willing and able to satisfy Congress that your memorialists labored under a great evil, and nothing could relieve them from it but the passage of an act enabling the land claimants to try the validity of their claims by due process of law. But in this they have been long disappointed. At length the evil became so intolerable, and the remedy so unaccountably procrastinated, that the general assembly thought it absolutely necessary to take the subject under their consideration, and passed a resolution December 3, 1822, from which the following is an extract: "The unconfirmed claims in this State, and a want of a definite tribunal where rights of this kind may be contested and settled, are subjects of much anxiety and solicitude amongst us. We wish this difficulty obviated, and competent tribunals constituted to decide definitively these unsettled claims, so that the lands belonging to the United States and those belonging to individuals may be known and set apart; that every inducement may be offered, and every obstacle removed, as far as practicable, to emigrants who may be disposed to locate themselves amongst us," &c. This resolution was presented to the Senate by one of the senators from Missouri; it was referred to a committee of which the same senator was chairman. It is proper to observe that there was at that time a bill on the files of the Senate embracing precisely the demand, and all the views of the memorial or resolution. Instead of the committee taking any notice of that bill in their report to the Senate, they reported a new one, embracing principles in direct opposition to the demand of the resolution, although the report was made by reference to the same resolution. This bill provided that the land claims should be referred once more to the recorder of land titles, which, if it had passed, would have been a third reference of the same subject to authorities incompetent to decide, but made competent only to report opinions to Congress. It does not appear that this bill progressed further.

After much delay, Congress has at last passed the act long wished for by the general assembly of Missouri and by your memorialists, entitled "An act enabling the claimants to land within the limits of the State of Missouri and Territory of Arkansas to institute proceedings to try the validity of their claims," approved May 26, 1824. Long before that time many land claimants and their agents had repeatedly made loud complaints in the State of Missouri and at Washington, on the score of the hardships they experienced in consequence of the long protraction of the decision of their claims, in consequence of the official opinions which the land commissioners have reported against the legality of almost all those claims, and also in consequence of the hard reflections which many had made against the same claims. There was every reason to expect, from these circumstances, that the land claimants would seize promptly the opportunity which that act afforded them to bring their claims into court, establish their fairness and legality, and put their detractors to shame. But so far from this, they have evidently shunned the court; but three or four suits out of several hundred claims have been instituted in the district court of the United States sitting at St. Louis, for the first eighteen months out of two years allowed to the claimants to commence their actions; it is only at the last term, within two years, that they have brought a considerable number of suits, yet almost all those land claimants reside in or near St. Louis. These claims amount to about one million of arpents of choice land.

The repugnance of the land claimants to bring their claims before the court has been still more strongly manifested at St. Genevieve, where the court sits also for the convenience of the land claimants. Very few suits have been instituted at that place. The heirs and representatives of François Vallée, the original claimant of Mine a la Motte, and a large tract of land circumjacent to the said mine, have, so far, shunned the opportunity afforded at their doors of a trial at law. They have preferred to present their claim to Congress during the last session, and prayed for confirmation by a special act. Your memorialists are informed that a bill was passed in favor of their claim in the House of Representatives, and was rejected in the Senate. They also are informed that a petition has been lately circulated among the land claimants in and about St. Louis, stating that the powers of the former land commissioners were too limited, in consequence of which they could not obtain full justice from their board, and praying the President of the United States to suggest to Congress the hardships to which they (the land claimants) are subject in establishing their claims in a court of law, and to recommend the reference of the same to some special commission, which is the most irrefragable proof that they have no confidence in the legality of their claims, and dread nothing so much as a trial in the due course of law. Any tribunal that might be substituted to a court of law would be made competent only to recommend their claims for confirmation, but could not be made constitutionally competent to make final decisions against any of those claims.

Your memorialists beg leave to remark that the land commissioners had a sufficient latitude of power to form and report opinions on the respective claims agreeably to the laws under which they originated. Of course, there is no lack of justice on that score; those opinions may be erroneous; they may be just; at any rate, they are official, and clearly intended to inform the conscience of the members of Congress. They would be of no use whatever, if they were not operating as an inducement to Congress to refer to a court of laws all claims against which the opinions of the commissioners stand.

Your memorialists beg leave to suggest further, that, as citizens of the United States, they have a general interest that the rights of the Union to the public land be guarded in the safest manner. They have a still greater interest as citizens of Missouri that that right be not surrendered or relaxed, as it would be more beneficial to themselves, and to the other inhabitants of Missouri generally; that if the lands claimed are, of right, public property, they should remain so; for in that case they would be offered for sale without any reserve or encumbrance. There would be, also, a fair competition for purchasers, and the evils arising from a great disparity of wealth among citizens would likewise be avoided. There are many persons, in various parts of this State, who have settled themselves, though ignorantly, within the bounds of some of the tracts covered with claims. They have made their settlements in due time to be entitled to the right of pre-emption, in case these claims should be adjudicated against; the act enabling the land claimants to institute proceedings to try the validity of their claims provides that any claimant who shall petition the court under that act shall serve a copy of such petition, with a citation, to any adverse possessor or claimant. Of course, the means of making a defence are secured to adverse claimants under settlement rights, or any other interfering rights. If such defendant can make out that any French or Spanish claim is illegal, and, of course, that the land claimed is public property, the contingency on which the right of pre-emption depends remains unimpaired.

It is obvious that the right of adverse claimants to make a defence in a court of law is all-important; that the person to whom it is secured could not be deprived of it by a subsequent legislative provision without receiving an irreparable injury. Yet this would certainly be the case if Congress should confirm any of these claims, for the proceedings before that body would be extra-judiciary and ex parte; no opportunity would be left to adverse claimants to make a defence; and any confirmation, by way of enlargement or departure from the French or Spanish laws, under which they respectively originated, no matter how small, would be nothing else but a donation in disguise.

It is to be observed that any legislation of a dubious character, or producing such effects as not to be fully seen or apprehended by the people in general, is uncongenial with the genuine spirit of a representative legislature, and virtually destructive of the responsibility of representatives to their constituents.

The exertions which the heirs and representatives of François Vallée have made to obtain the confirmation, by Congress, of the large and valuable tract of land before alluded to, and the repugnance which the land claimants have generally evinced against going into a court of law for the trial of their claims, ought to raise suspicions against the fairness or legality of the same, and be a very strong reason to induce Congress to be more guarded than ever against introducing any change in the present legislation on that subject.

Your memorialists believe that all the French or Spanish claims, even those that had the most remote equity, have been confirmed. They will, however, abstain to prejudicate the unconfirmed claims. They beg leave only to submit that, as the law now enables the claimants to have the merit of their claims tried before a safe tribunal, constitutionally competent to do them justice, they ought to be left there, and Congress ought not to take any further notice of them.

Unfortunately, two years more have been allowed by an act entitled "An act for the relief of Phineas Underwood, and for other purposes," approved May 22, 1826, to the claimants to bring in their claims before the court. The two years allowed by the first act were, in the opinion of your memorialists, amply sufficient. This extension of times operate injuriously to the people of this State, under various respects: First, it gives an opportunity to the land claimants to delay the institution of suits, and, of course, pro-crastinates the decisions on which the sales and settlement of large tracts of wild land depends. Second, it gives them a new opportunity, through their watchful and persevering agent at Washington, to pursue the same course that the heirs of François Vallée did last year, and obtain, if possible, the confirmation of their claims at some unguarded time which might happen towards the end of the session.

LAND CLAIM IN MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 4, 1828.

Mr. MOORE, of Alabama, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and documents of J. F Carmichael, of Wilkinson county, Mississippi, reported:

That the petitioner claims title to two tracts of land situated partly in the States of Louisiana and Mississippi, divided by the line of demarcation, by virtue of complete Spanish grants in favor of Claudio Bougard; that having presented them to the board of commissioners west of Pearl river for confirmation, they were rejected upon the ground alone of want of jurisdiction, presuming that all of said land was below the line of demarcation; wherefore he now asks their confirmation by Congress.

The committee think it due to the petitioner that his title papers should be fairly examined and reported upon by some tribunal similar in its character to that originally appointed for that purpose, and therefore report a resolution for his benefit.

20TH CONGRESS.] No. 604. [1ST SESSION.

APPLICATION OF LOUISIANA FOR THE FINAL ADJUSTMENT OF LAND CLAIMS AND TITLES IN THAT STATE, INCLUDING THE DE BASTROP AND MAISON ROUGE GRANTS, AND FOR GRANTS TO THE STATE FOR CERTAIN PURPOSES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 7, 1828.

To the honorable the members of the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the senate and house of representatives of the State of Louisiana, in general assembly convened, with respect represents: That before the admission of the State of Louisiana into the Union the representatives of the people of the Territory of Orleans, in convention assembled, relinquished to the United States, in the name of said people, all rights or title to the waste or unappropriated lands lying within the limits of the said Territory. Without contesting the validity of that act of the convention, your memorialists are satisfied that under the stipulations of the treaty between France and the United States, by which Louisiana was ceded to them, the sovereignty over those lands could not have been and was not vested in the general government for a longer time than was necessary to effect the sale of such part of them as could be sold. Fifteen years have since elapsed, and more than one-half of those lands have not been surveyed.

Owing to the peculiar situation of Louisiana, this delay of bringing into market the lands that might have been disposed of has subjected its inhabitants to great losses and inconveniences. In order to protect their own plantations from inundation, they have had to raise and keep in repair embankments in front of the public lands that lie on the margins of water-courses. To procure the necessary intercourse between the different parts of the State, and to communicate with their home markets, they have been obliged to build bridges and open public roads on those lands, and more than one-half of the whole male population of Louisiana, from sixteen to forty-five years, have for the last ten years and at this time do work at least five days in the year to the making and repairing of those roads, bridges, and embankments on the public lands alone. Emigration, which, by increasing our numbers, would have diminished that vexatious tax, has been checked by the course of policy which the general government has pursued; and those whom necessity has compelled to settle on the public lands hold under too frail a tenure to consider themselves as permanent residents, or to lend a willing hand to the erection of public works.

Congress, by granting, time after time, rights of pre-emption to bona fide persons settled on the public lands, have raised in those who now stand in that situation expectations which they will find it their interest to realize. The settlers of Louisiana at this time have stronger claims to that favor than any of those on whom it has been bestowed by former laws; most of them have been driven from the settlements they had made in the Territory of Arkansas, and to which they expected to obtain titles, in compliance with the treaties by which the lands they occupied were given to various tribes of Indians.

Your honorable bodies, on account of the losses and hardships these settlers have sustained, might perhaps deem it just to diminish the price of the lands, or to grant a delay for the payment of it. The difficulty experienced in selling the lands that have been brought into market shows, perhaps, sufficiently that the present prices are too high.

A large extent of country within the limits of our State is covered by inchoate Spanish titles. The grants to Bastrop and to Maison Rouge, all those issued within the jurisdiction of Nacogdoches for lands situated between the Rio Hondo and the Sabine, and all others in the same situation west of the Mississippi, ought to be finally adjusted, or at least placed in a situation in which their validity might be adjudicated upon by courts of justice.

In the other States where public lands have been sold, your honorable bodies have given to them the proceeds of one section in every township for the advancement of public education, besides other grants they have made to literary institutions. Public lands have been sold in Louisiana, and this State has not, so far, participated in that liberality.

Your honorable bodies must be convinced, by the information they have at various times received from their registers and surveyors, that the proceeds of the lands which remain unsurveyed in this State will never pay the expenses of the survey. The salable lands lie almost exclusively on the margins of water-courses. The high lands between those water-courses are, with a few exceptions, equally unfit for cultivation and for grazing. Using the base lines already run in every part of the State, and the partial surveys that have been made, your memorialists are of opinion that lines of demarcation might easily be drawn between the lands that are salable and those that are not. This might be done by the United States surveyors, under the inspection of commissioners appointed for that purpose by the general government; and those lines once ascertained, a proper sense of the justice of your honorable bodies induces your memorialists to believe that you would without hesitation relinquish in favor of the State of Louisiana so much of those lands as would be unfit for the use to which alone they had been placed in the hands of your predecessors.

Our increasing prosperity, the distance between our different settlements, caused by the uncultivated lands that separate them, and the difficulties experienced in the navigation of all our rivers except the Mississippi, require many works of internal improvement to be made. The State of Louisiana, not the last in war, will not be the last in peace to raise those monuments of public utility. But, to be enabled to do so, we must be the masters of the soil through which our roads and canals are to pass.

The premises considered, your memorialists would recommend that rights of pre-emption may be given to actual settlers.

That the present price of public lands may be reduced, or a delay given for the payment of it.

That the Spanish grants above referred to may finally be adjusted or referred to courts of justice.

That out of the public lands that have or may hereafter be sold within our limits the proceeds of one section for every township may be given to the State of Louisiana for the promotion of public education, and that grants similar to those made in other States may be made to literary institutions.

That commissioners may be appointed who, with the United States surveyors, shall be instructed to ascertain the lines of demarcation between the lands that are salable and those that are not, within our limits.

That when this is ascertained the lands adjudged to be unsalable may be given to the State of Louisiana on its paying to the United States the actual expenses incurred in ascertaining and running those lines.

That the remaining lands may be brought into market as soon as practicable, and, if not sold when offered, that they may be entered at the different land offices on payment of such reduced prices as will insure a speedy disposal of them.

All of which is respectfully submitted by your memorialists.

OPERATIONS OF THE PUBLIC LEAD MINES AND THEIR CONDITION IN 1827.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 7, 1828.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, January 4, 1828.

SIR: In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 2d instant, I have the honor of presenting the enclosed report, which contains all the information received by this department on the subject of the lead mines which has not been heretofore communicated.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

JAMES BARBOUR.

Hon. ANDREW STEVENSON, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT, Washington, January 4, 1828.

SIR: In answer to the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 2d instant, which has been referred to this department, I have the honor to transmit to you herewith a copy of a report from the superintendent of the United States lead mines (Lieutenant M. Thomas) of the 30th of September last, containing all the information on the subject of the lead mines which has been received by this department and which has not been heretofore communicated.

I have the the honor to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

G. BOMFORD, Brevet Colonel on Ordnance Service.

Hon. JAMES BARBOUR, Secretary of War.

ST. LOUIS, Missouri, September 30, 1827.

SIR: At this period, which closes the official year, it may be proper to accompany the quarterly returns now due with some general remarks as to the present condition and future prospects of the public lead mines.

During the past year it will be observed from the returns that the products of the mines under lease in Missouri have not increased. This is accounted for by the superior richness and extent of the mines on the upper Mississippi, which has attracted many of the regular miners from Missouri, and prevents, in a great measure, any increase of their number from emigrations—all being alike drawn to the upper mines, where a more profitable return for the labor of the miner is to be found. Very few late discoveries have, therefore, been made in Missouri, and the upper leads or floats of ore having generally been dug out at the old mines, they have been required to sink deeper in order to obtain the mineral, and consequently more labor has been requisite to obtain the same quantity of lead than heretofore. In the course of these operations the existence of veins of ore in the strata of rock below the usual depth of mining in Missouri is fully proven in several instances, and there is now no doubt that this is the case generally. Another reason why the product of the public mines in Missouri has not increased is the difficulty of preventing unauthorized mining at the public mines, whether leased or not. They are so interspersed with private property as almost to render it impracticable to detect an offender under the present system of leasing small quantities.

The amount of rent obtained from the Missouri mines (91,038 pounds) is, however, considerably more than sufficient to defray the whole expense attending the superintendence and management of all the public lead mines, which leaves the large amount obtained on the upper Mississippi (518,218 pounds) clear revenue. The tabular statements will show a very great increase in the product of the mines on the upper Mississippi during the present year, and it is still progressing.

The average number of miners at the upper mines—

During the year 1825 was	100
During the year 1826 was	400
During the year 1827 was	1,600

The amount of mineral obtained—

In 1825 was	1,278,528 pounds.
In 1826 was	1,848,164 pounds.
In 1827 was	11,248,366 pounds.

The amount of lead made—

In 1825 was	864,530 pounds.
In 1826 was	958,842 pounds.
In 1827 was	5,182,180 pounds.

Leaving on hand at this date mineral and ashes (or fine mineral) sufficient to make 2,116,000 pounds of lead more.

The value of the lead made in 1827, as above stated, is $220,242 64, exclusive of the amount which will be obtained from the ore, &c., now unsmelted, which is $85,493, making a total of $305,735 64, one-tenth of which is paid as a rent to the United States. And there is no part of the public revenue, it is believed, more cheerfully paid or more easily collected; for individuals are amassing fortunes at the mines, and do not consider it a hardship to pay for the privilege. The government is also benefited by a more extensive sale of the public lands now in the market, as very many of the miners and laborers are farmers from the States of Illinois and Missouri who resort to the mines as a certain source from whence to obtain money, much of which is expended in the purchase of land; in addition to which the market for produce is very good at the mines, and large shipments take place from the towns on the upper Mississippi. St. Louis also enjoys a profitable trade in merchandise, transportation, &c., &c., from the increased business at the upper mines. From an examination of the mineral region on the east bank of the upper Mississippi, I am fully convinced of the richness of it. It extends at least one hundred miles from south to north, and from thirty to fifty east and west. Much of the soil is very fertile, some parts of it exceedingly rich; it lies high, is well watered, containing fine springs, but is not well timbered in general; there are districts of it, however, covered with groves of thriving timber well adapted to smelting the ore; and the mines are of easy access to the Mississippi, where fuel is abundant.

I am anxious to introduce the European method of smelting lead ore, which I requested permission to do in my last annual report. The saving in fuel, and superior product, would very shortly repay the expense of erecting and placing the furnace in operation.

In my last annual report I drew the attention of the department to the clearing out of a boat channel in the rapids of the upper Mississippi. There has recently been adopted a method of navigating the river, including the rapids, by steamboats of light draught, with powerful engines, and towing two keel boats, each of forty tons, which will no doubt fully succeed, if the rapids are improved as suggested, and the intercourse with the mines and military posts on the upper Mississippi will be much facilitated. The importance of a safe and rapid communication with the military posts is sufficiently evident. Had the recent attack of the Indians upon the boats transporting provisions to Fort Snelling taken place whilst on their way up the river, they would have inevitably fallen into the hands of the Indians, and a general massacre taken place. I would, therefore, respectfully urge an examination to be made of these rapids at the proper time, with a view to improving the channel.

The subject of running the north boundary line of the State of Illinois has heretofore been brought to view in my reports. The upper mines are in the vicinity of that boundary; whether in the State or not is at present uncertain. It is a matter of importance to ascertain the fact, which, it appears, has been taken for granted, as a county has been organized at the mines by the State of Illinois. Connected with this subject is the boundary between the lands of the Chippewa, Ottawa, and Pottawatomie Indians, and those of the Winnebagoes. This boundary, as defined by the ninth article of the treaty of Prairie des Chiens, (of August, 1825,) will be found very difficult to ascertain; and should further negotiations take place with the Winnebagoes, it would be well to have the boundary altered, as "the small streams emptying into the Mississippi," the heads of which are partly the boundary in question, interlock with the tributaries of Rock river, which has its course in the Winnebago country. Another cause for desiring a change of the boundary in question is, that near the Winnebago village mentioned in the ninth article of the treaty of August, 1825, there is a ford in Rock river at which the road from Peoria, principally travelled by emigrants from below, crosses that stream. At this village is a small predatory band of Indians, said to consist partly of Winnebagoes and partly of outlaws from other tribes, who are exceedingly troublesome to travellers; and it would conduce much to the peace and safety of the miners and travellers were the point of beginning the boundary removed from the village to a point higher up Rock river. The east boundary, as provided for in the ninth article of the treaty of 1825, before referred to, will be found difficult to ascertain, and, if run as now required, will, from its extreme sinuosity, be a constant source of dispute between the miners and Indians. Boundaries with the Indians should be plain and not liable to be misunderstood; those in countries where agriculture is the principal object of the inhabitants are of much less importance; for here a very small quantity of land may contain great wealth, of easy access, and consequently presenting strong temptations to the stronger to infringe upon the rights of the weaker party, for the slightest pretext whatever. I am not fully acquainted with the locality of the country in which Rock river has its source; but as the portage between the Fox river of Green Bay and the Wisconsin is a point of importance, it would seem that from them to Rock river, at some well-known point above the Winnebago village, so often referred to, and with that river to its mouth, would be a preferable boundary to the present one.

These suggestions may not come within my proper sphere of duty, but it will be kept in view that the increase of population at the mines has been beyond expectation, and there is no doubt of a still greater increase. It is therefore desirable, as far as possible, to obviate all chance of difficulties hereafter, both to enlarge the space for the operations of the miners and to define it more distinctly than at present.

The district in which the mines at present wrought are located belongs to the Chippewa, Ottowa, and Pottawatomie Indians, with the exception of the reservations provided for in the second article of the treaty of 1816. These reservations are about one twenty-fifth part of the district as defined by the treaty of 1825. The reservations being for mining purposes, they are necessarily made in detached parcels. This presents a difficulty as respects the jurisdiction of Illinois or Michigan. The intermediate land between the reservations is still the property of the Indians; a purchase of which would seem to be the only way of removing the embarrassments produced by this state of things. It is not a game country, and the Indians to whom it belongs, in part, do not frequent it; and it is believed that their right to it could now be purchased on as good if not on better terms than at any future period.

There has been much misapprehension, and consequent misrepresentation, as respects the location of the reservations provided for in the treaty of 1816. The language of the proviso in the second article is clear and explicit, viz: "Provided, That such other tracts shall not, in the whole, exceed the quantity that would be contained in five leagues square," and admits of but one construction. It should be borne in mind that it was a cession to the Ottowas, Chippewas, and Pottawatomies, of land which the United States had purchased from the Sac and Fox Indians, and that the United States had a perfect right to define the terms on which the cession should be made. The recollection of this fact will doubtless relieve the morbid sensibility of those persons who have lamented the supposed imposition upon the Indians from the government's locating the reservations for mining purposes in detached parcels, and upon the richest spots. As the leasing of the public lead mines is considered never to have been the permanent policy of the goverment, and as the prevention of a monopoly of the mines by capitalists or others was a principal object when reserving them from sale, I would suggest that the attainment of it is now within the reach of the government. The discovery of such rich and extensive mines on the upper Mississippi admits of a commencement of the sale of the public mines in Missouri; for if those mines are now brought into market, and those on the Mississippi reserved for some years longer, they will naturally fall into the hands of many persons, and no monopoly can be effected. The mineral lands in Missouri are all surveyed, and can be brought into market at any time by advertising those which have not before been in market. After the public sales, the land remaining unsold might then be disposed of as other lands are. Those which are leased should be sold subject to the lease. But whether the mineral lands are sold or not, it is requisite that some further provision should be made to prevent trespassing upon them, which is daily lessening their value. The laws on the subject may now be sufficient for the public lands generally, but it is thought some better provision could be made for the protection of the mineral lands. It is not to be expected that all the mineral lands would meet with purchasers immediately, and until they do they should be protected from trespassers. The whole district is a mineral one, and the restrictions upon the completion of titles of various kinds, merely because the land contains mineral, should be removed. These restrictions appear to have been imposed from the supposition that but a limited number of mines were in the country, and that the claimants under Spanish and French grants, &c., would seek to monopolize the mines. This, with some exceptions, has not been the case. The object of most of the inhabitants was to secure the best land for cultivation, as during the period the country belonged to Spain no restrictions as to mining on the King's domain existed. The several acts of Congress upon the subject prevent the completion of titles when the land contains lead ore; and the laws of Missouri do not afford protection against trespassers upon land held under incipient titles. The United States permit the claimant to occupy the land, and consequently do not interfere when trespassing takes place; the claimant being debarred the right to recover damages, has the mortification to behold the property to which he has an equitable and just title daily depredated upon by persons who have not, nor do not pretend to have, the shadow of a claim to it. This state of things is detrimental in many respects; at many of the mines the loss is considerable, and the trespassers keep forcible possession. It may readily be supposed that a population of the worst kind will naturally be drawn to the mines thus situated, which, by a character for violence, is calculated to check the emigration to the mine country of the better and more useful sort.

The subject of making a road from Potosi to the river Mississippi, a distance of only thirty miles, has been brought to view in my reports for two years past. The amount of one or two years' rent of the mines in Missouri will be amply sufficient for the effectuation of this object; and I would earnestly repeat the recommendation. It will no doubt enhance the value of the public lands far more than the cost of the operation, and might be embraced in the same act which provides for the examination of the rapids of the Mississippi, should that proposition meet with a favorable reception.

I remain, sir, respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. THOMAS, Lieut. U. S. A., Supt. U. S. Lead Mines.

LAND CLAIM IN EAST FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 8, 1828.

Mr. SHEPPERD, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Dr. John Love, reported:

The petitioner represents himself as entitled to a tract of three hundred acres of land situate in East Florida, and for which he alleges he obtained a grant derived from the British government shortly after the year 1774, at which time he states that he came to Florida as one of the suits of the governor sent over to that province. That upon its evacuation by the British he was unable to make sale of his land, and that he preferred removing to the United States rather than returning to England, and consequently was deprived of that compensation offered by the British government to the subjects or inhabitants of East Florida affected by the transfer of that Territory. Without waiting to inquire into the character of the claim presented by the petitioner's own case, your committee feel compelled to recommend its rejection from the absence of all sort of proof to sustain the allegations of the petitioner, for neither a grant nor the evidence of its ever having existed has been offered to their consideration. They therefore recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted.

INVALIDITY OF SECOND WARRANT FOR LAND, THE FIRST HAVING BEEN SOLD, LOCATED, AND PATENTED.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 8, 1828.

Mr. EARLL, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, who were instructed by a resolution of this House "to inquire into the expediency and justice of allowing Minor Thomas, of Indiana, to locate four hundred and eighty acres of land in the State of Indiana, under a military land warrant issued to Lieutenant Abraham Cutler July 17, 1820, by Josiah Meigs, Commissioner of the General Land Office, and assigned to said Thomas by said Cutler, the said warrant being a second one issued for the same land, and the said Thomas having been induced to pay for the land, and received an assignment of the warrant, by the representations of the proper officers that the land could be located under the warrant," reported:

That from the documents referred to said committee by said resolution the following facts appear: That on July 17, 1820, a certificate or land warrant was issued by Josiah Meigs, then Commissioner of the General Land Office, as follows: "I certify that satisfactory proof has been exhibited in this office that a warrant, No. 93, issued in favor of Abraham Cutler, late a second lieutenant in the corps of Canadian volunteers, for 480 acres of land, and that the said warrant is illegally withheld from him by his agent: Therefore he may, on presentation of this certificate to a register of a land office, locate his claim upon lands in the State of Indiana according to law." "To the registers at Vincennes, Jeffersonville, Cincinnati, Terre Haute, and Brookville."

It further appears that on July 16, 1825, the said certificate was assigned by the said Abraham Cutler to the said Minor Thomas for the consideration of six hundred dollars. It further appears, by the affidavit of the said Minor Thomas, and by the affidavit of one William W. Thomas, that in April or May, 1825, said Minor Thomas applied to Robert Hanna, junior, the register of public lands at Brookville, to ascertain whether said certificate was authentic, and whether the land specified in said certificate could be located by said Thomas if he should purchase said certificate of said Cutler; and that the said Hanna stated to said Minor Thomas that the land could be obtained on the certificate; and that the information so obtained induced said Thomas to purchase said certificate of said Cutler. It also appears, from an endorsement on the back of said certificate, that said Minor Thomas did, on November 23, 1825, at the land office in Indianapolis, in Indiana, locate on lands in pursuance of said warrant, and that the land located by said Thomas was refused a patent at the General Land Office, because the assignees of Abraham Cutler had previously obtained a patent for the amount of land therein named. And it further appears, from a letter written by the Commissioner of the General Land Office to Robert Hanna, junior, register at Indianapolis, Indiana, dated December 19, 1825, that "the original warrant granted to Cutler, with the following chain of title, viz: 1st, a deed from Abraham Cutler, dated October 9, 1817, conveying to James Hair, of Columbiana county, Ohio, in consideration of $4,800, warrant No. 93, for 480 acres; 2d, a power of attorney from Cutler to Hair, authorizing him to locate the land, dated October 9, 1817; 3d, a deed from James Hair to Abraham McColloch, of Ohio county, Virginia, dated June 29, 1818; 4th, a deed from Abraham McColloch to his two sons, Ebenezer McColloch and Abraham McColloch, dated May 22, 1821; and 5th, a power of attorney from Abraham McColloch, junior, authorizing Ebenezer McColloch to locate the warrant, was forwarded to his office from the land office at Terre Haute, for the purpose of procuring a patent in favor of Abraham McColloch, junior, and Ebenezer McColloch, as assignees of Cutler; and that a patent was issued on October 6, 1823, in their favor, and sent to the register at Terre Haute."

From which facts it appears to the committee that, instead of the first land warrant being withheld illegally from Cutler by his agent, as he represented on July 17, 1820, when he obtained the second warrant from the General Land Office, he had, nearly three years before that time, assigned the same for a valuable consideration. Your committee are of opinion that the said Minor Thomas, the assignee from Cutler of the second land warrant, is not entitled to relief; and they are also of opinion that he ought to have leave to withdraw his papers.

APPLICATION OF ILLINOIS FOR REDUCTION AND GRADUATION OF THE PRICE OF THE PUBLIC LANDS, AND CESSION OF THE REFUSE LANDS TO THE STATES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 9, 1828.

PREAMBLE AND RESOLUTION of the legislature of Illinois, instructing their senators, and requesting their representative, to support and advocate the passage of the bill to graduate and reduce the price of public lands, and to cede the refuse lands to the States in which they lie, &c.

Whereas it is understood that a bill has been introduced into the Congress of the United States by Thomas H. Benton, of Missouri, for an act to reduce and graduate the price of the public lands, and to cede the refuse to the States in which they lie; and whereas it is the opinion of this general assembly that any law the object of which is to facilitate to the citizens of the new States of the west the means of acquiring homes and freeholds, or to render the terms of the sale of the public lands more equitable by making their price bear some just proportion to their value, would be of great and general benefit to the citizens of such States, and to the whole Union: Therefore—

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives of the State of Illinois, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representative requested, to support and advocate the passage of the bill above referred to, and any other bill or law contemplating a reduction or graduation of the price of public lands.

J. McLEAN, Speaker of the House of Representatives.
WILLIAM KINNEY, Speaker of the Senate.

I, George Forquer, secretary of state of Illinois, do hereby certify that the above is a true copy of the original enrolled resolution.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said State, at Vandalia, this 17th day of January, 1827.

PROVISION FOR THE TRIAL AND DECISION OF CLAIMS TO LAND IN THE SEVERAL STATES AND TERRITORIES, DERIVED OTHERWISE THAN FROM THE UNITED STATES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 9, 1828.

Mr. BERRIEN, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the resolution of the Senate instructing them to inquire into the expediency of providing by law for the trial and decision of claims to lands derived, or alleged to be derived, otherwise than from the United States, in the several States or Territories thereof, reported:

That the subject which they have been thus directed to present to the consideration of the Senate has appeared to them, in the course of their inquiries, to be one of much importance to the government and at the same time deeply interesting to many of its citizens That the prompt decision of the claims referred to is essential to the speedy settlement of an interesting portion of the Union; an object, of which the importance is enhanced by the peculiar adaptation of its soil and climate to the growth of certain valuable products, the home cultivation of which is becoming a matter of increasing necessity; and by its locality, constituting, as it does, a considerable part of the exterior line of the American empire. That this subject is connected with the consideration of the protective duty of the government to its citizens who are interested in its decision, and involves, moreover, a question of the public faith, as that has been pledged in the various compacts by which these portions of the territory of the Union have been acquired. Finally, that individuals having just claims to lands within the limits referred to, if any such exist, of which the committee do not permit themselves to doubt, have a deep and pressing interest in the prompt decision of those claims, in which, from their peculiar character, delay of justice is to them most emphatically a denial of it.

Claims to lands by individuals, derived otherwise than from the United States, and of which notice has been given to this government by presenting them before some one of the various tribunals of inquest or of judgment, which have at different times been constituted by acts of Congress, are to be found in the State of Missouri and Territory of Arkansas, in the States of Louisiana, Illinois, Mississippi, and Alabama, and in the Territories of Florida and Michigan.

Treaties with foreign nations under which the territory including these lands has been acquired, or which may be supposed to affect them, are those of 1783 and 1794 with Great Britain; of 1795 with Spain; of 1803 with France; and, finally, that of 1819 with Spain.

In these instruments, especially in the last, besides the ordinary provision for the protection of the property of the inhabitants of the ceded territory, there is an express stipulation for ratifying and confirming existing grants, to the same extent in which they would have been valid if the territories had remained under the dominion of the former sovereign, and for allowing to claimants, under grants which are conditional, time for fulfilling the conditions on which they were to become perfect.

In the performance of these and similar stipulations, or in the discharge of the general obligation of protection which every government owes to the rights of its own citizens, or of others having just claims upon it, Congress has, from time to time, provided for the audit and decision of the claims of individuals to proportions of its domain thus acquired. The tribunals constituted for this purpose have been of various character; being sometimes authorized merely to examine and report; at others invested with the power of final decision. In general, full power to decide finally has been limited to cases where the amount claimed was comparatively small; while in those of greater magnitude the authority given has been merely to examine and report, subject to a final decision, in each case by Congress, or in contemplation of revision by some special tribunal to be constituted by the national legislature, with a full view of the matters to be subjected to its determination. Acts of confirmation have in some instances been passed, and the claimants have been admitted to the enjoyment of their rights; but a vast mass of cases which have undergone examination before these commissions remain unacted upon by Congress. To this class of claimants, therefore, the avenue to the further prosecution of their claims is closed, while the United States has so far respected their pretensions as to abstain from bringing into the market the lands covered by these claims; thus withholding equally from the community and the individual the enjoyment of their respective rights, while in many instances time is thus afforded to intrusive individuals, without color of title, by a long continued possession, to acquire the means if not of defeating at least of embarrassing, by future vexatious litigation, the fair claimant whose title shall be hereafter affirmed in such mode as Congress shall prescribe.

In some instances Congress has authorized a resort, under certain circumstances, to the ordinary judicial tribunals; but whether from the technical strictness which characterizes the proceedings of these tribunals, or from whatever other cause, this mode of adjustment has not been found satisfactory to those entitled to its benefits, and in the result has not contributed to the settlement of these claims.

That a paternal regard to the rights of its own citizens, a just fulfilment of its obligations to others who, although not standing in this relation to the government of the United States, are, nevertheless, objects of its protection by force of treaty stipulations; that these considerations, combining with those which belong to the peculiar interests of the United States, consisting in the advantageous sale of the national domain, and in the speedy settlement of a portion of its territory, for the double purpose of culture and of strengthening its exterior boundary, unite to recommend the adoption of some mode for the prompt adjustment of the claims of individuals, derived otherwise than from the government of the United States, to lands within its limits, is a proposition which, in the view of the committee, is too clear to require an argument in its support. What they propose is merely to state some few additional considerations, and then to suggest that mode of adjustment which will, in their view, most effectually subserve the purposes of justice both to the government and to the individual claimant.

The committee have not hesitated to avail themselves of such information as they could derive from the representatives of those States and Territories within which the lands claimed are situated. They have particularly availed themselves of the communications of the delegate from Florida, whose active and laborious discharge of the duties of a land commissioner, and continued residence in that Territory, have given him peculiar facilities for acquiring information on this subject, of which his intelligence has qualified him to profit, while his character affords a guarantee for the accuracy with which it is communicated. Through him they have received the suggestions of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, whose communication is herewith submitted.

The committee are induced to believe that a quantity which may be stated to amount to twelve millions of acres of land, and which belong to the United States, unless the claims preferred to them by individuals can be substantiated, are kept in a condition in which they are wholly useless to the public, in consequence of the existence and of the non-adjustment of those claims. They believe that many of them will not bear the scrutiny of an intelligent and properly constituted tribunal, while some, it is not to be doubted, are superior to any just exception, and a numerous class may be entitled to the equitable indulgence of government. Meanwhile, in the absence of such a tribunal, or of their determination by Congress, the rights of all are kept in suspense, the government is deprived of its revenue, these States and Territories of their culture, population, and consequent political rights, and individuals who have claims which are entitled to allowance, are wearing out their lives in unavailing efforts to be admitted to the enjoyment of their just rights. The government has an existence which is undefined, and which we may be permitted to hope will be indefinitely prolonged. As compared with these claimants it is immortal; their existence is but a span. Many of them have passed the best years of their lives; some of them under the rigors of poverty, which would be removed or mitigated, and in some instances would be changed into affluence, if they could obtain from the government an allowance of their rightful claims. Such a state of things is revolting to the principles on which a just government should be, and on which this government is administered.

It is a minor, but nevertheless an interesting, consideration that while this vast domain is thus useless to the public, as well as to the individual and rightful claimants of portions of it, it is constantly sustaining deterioration from the trespasses of intrusive occupants. The live-oak timber, so valuable for naval purposes, is not now to be found in any considerable quantity elsewhere than in the Territory of Florida; it abounds in a great part of those lands where the claim of the government is met by those of individuals, and is rapidly disappearing by the agency of trespassers, who find impunity in the unwillingness of the local judicial tribunals thus collaterally to decide between these conflicting claims.

If the view which the committee have taken of this subject be correct, the continuance of that state of things which has been thus briefly sketched ought not, it is believed, to be permitted. It remains only to consider the remedy.

In a general view of the subject two modes are suggested:

1st. A sale by the United States, subject to the encumbrance of individual claims, leaving the claimants to litigate their title with the purchasers from the government.

2d The establishment of a competent tribunal for the trial and decision of individual claims.

It is believed to be unnecessary to examine the question of the competency of Congress to accomplish this object.

The first mode seems liable, among others, to the following objections:

The sale of a pretended title, which would be criminal in an individual, cannot be consistent with the dignity of a government. In many instances it is not to be doubted that the claims of individuals to these lands are just, and in every such instance it is equally certain that a sale by the United States would convey to the purchaser nothing more than a pretended title to the subject of his purchase. Such a measure would be inconsistent with the faith of this government, as that is pledged in the treaties under which these portions of its Territory were acquired, since it would embarrass the claimants in the assertion of their rights, by multiplying the number of those who would have direct interest in defeating them, by adding to the labor and expense of prosecuting them; it would increase litigation, overwhelming the local judicial tribunals with innumerable law suits, to the injury of suitors, and all concerned in the administration of public justice, and would amount to an instant and absolute denial of right to many of those claimants who would be unable to encounter the increased labor and expense of prosecuting their claims against multiplied adversaries. It would sacrifice the revenue of the United States. The land sales of the government have heretofore commanded purchasers, because of the certainty of the title which they conveyed. The purchaser of a law suit would make a liberal estimate of the cost and hazard to which he would subject himself. The diminution in value would extend to the whole of the lands claimed, even to those to which the title of the United States or its vendor should be ultimately sustained; and if it is thought that loss from this source might be compensated by the receipts on the residue, it is scarcely a subject for inquiry whether the government would consent to profit by a sale of that to which it had no title, to the injury of its citizens, or of others having just claims to its protection. Other considerations, in opposition to a sale under the circumstances in which these lands are placed, will suggest themselves to the Senate. The committee content themselves, in this brief view of the subject, with the statement of those which have been enumerated.

It only remains to state that, in the opinion of the committee, a special tribunal for the audit and decision of claims of the character referred to in the resolution, liberally compensated and judiciously selected, so as to insure the requisite integrity, talents, and industry, for the faithful, intelligent, and prompt discharge of its duties, holding its sessions in the city of Washington, where access can be had to the public records, and where competent agents can be most easily obtained to represent the rights of the respective claimants, and limited to a short yet sufficient period for the termination of its labors, will most effectually advance the purposes of justice, and will best promote the interests of the public, while it will effectually protect the just rights of the claimants.

The committee accordingly report a bill.

PROPOSITION TO INCREASE THE PAY FOR SURVEYING SWAMP LANDS

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 10, 1828.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 7, 1828.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 4th instant, I have to state that, understanding there was a very valuable body of land lying along the margin of Lake Washington, (a large lake in the Mississippi swamp,) and free from inundation for nearly a mile back from the lake, instructions were given to Mr. Davis, in January, 1826, (see No. 1,) to extend his meridian and parallel lines to that lake, and to have the lands fronting on it surveyed, agreeably to the provisions of the act passed May 24, 1824; in pursuance of which instructions he entered into contract with Mr. Babbitt to survey the lands in the neighborhood of that lake, which contract never has been completed, as appears from the enclosed copy of a letter addressed by Mr. Davis to you, and forwarded to this office, (No. 2;) and also from the extract of a letter from Mr. Davis to this office, (marked No. 3,) dated June 29, 1827. Mr. Babbit is since dead. In consequence of a recommendation from this office, a bill was reported to the House, authorizing an increase of the price for surveying this description of lands, but was not acted upon.

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant, GEORGE GRAHAM.

Hon. WM. HAILE, House of Representatives.

No. 1.

Extract of a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office to G. Davis, dated January, 21, 1826.

"I am pleased to find that you are getting offers for surveying the lands in the Choctaw district for $3 50 per mile, which I think they can generally be surveyed for. I had, previous to your communication, heard of the lake between the Yazoo and the Mississippi rivers, and that the lands adjacent were free from inundation, and of good quality. It is desirable that these lands should be surveyed; and if you have not reached this body of land in your regular surveying, you may extend your meridianal and parallel lines, to enable you to connect them with the surveying executed.

"It will probably be advisable to survey the lots adjacent to the lake, agreeably to the provisions of the act of May 24, 1824.

"P. S.—I do not feel authorized to give instructions for surveying the lands, under the act of May 24, 1824, different from those heretofore given."

No. 2.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, Washington, Miss., January 31, 1827.

The enclosed correspondence, on the subject of obtaining papers from the office of the registers at Washita and Opelousas, is sent to Mr. Haile, as an act of justice to those concerned, in consequence of my having, in my communication of the 12th instant, given it as my opinion that I had no other way of obtaining them than by paying the fees affixed to the duties of issuing them by law. The perusal of them is well worthy the attention of such of our law-makers as are disposed to cast censure, or to countenance censure cast, upon executive officers of the government for the non-execution of laws which carry the most conclusive evidence upon the face of them that they never were intended to be executed. Let any candid man look at the act of May 24, 1824, and compare it with the Treasury construction of the law, and with my letters to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and to Mr. Cook, of the House of Representatives, upon that subject, and if he does not agree with me that the same law ought to have raised the price of surveying to seven or eight dollars per mile, and to have allowed this office one extra clerk for every deputy employed in its execution, I shall conclude, and shall be able to demonstrate, that he is incapable of understanding the subject. I have understood that two surveyors who had taken contracts for surveying, to be executed upon that plan, in the vicinity of Lake Washington, in the Choctaw district, have abandoned them to avoid ruin.

All surveying executed under the authority of the government ought to be liberally paid for by the government; and in cases where the claimants are now required to pay, they should make the payments to the land offices on receiving their patents.

If Mr. Haile will have the goodness to leave the enclosed papers at the General Land Office, it will probably be the only favor that I shall ever ask of him.

G. DAVIS.

Hon. WM. HAILE, House of Representatives.

The enclosed papers are numbered from 1 to 4.

NOTE.—One of the clerks in this office has just now completed the examination of a small fractional township, recently surveyed, according to the act of May 24, 1824, consisting of not more than what is equal to ten complete square sections, the tabling of which, with the assistance of the deputy surveyor himself, has occupied two entire days of close application; and the front on the river, consisting of only six sections and about a half, has filled nineteen pages of foolscap paper. It will occupy the same clerk, who is a very expert calculator, two days more, or perhaps three, to complete the calculation of areas and the subdivisions of the fractional square sections; and four days afterwards to make thence neat maps and descriptions of this small fraction, but little more than quarter of a township. Let this be taken as a sample of the work required to be done in a given time in the two States of Louisiana and Mississippi.

No. 3.

Extract of a letter from G. Davis, esq., to G. Graham, esq., Commissioner, &c., dated June 29, 1827.

"I will take this occasion to report to you, formally and officially, as I have several times done incidentally heretofore, that the law of May 24, 1824, cannot be executed in conformity with your instructions on the subject—the execution of a surveying contract being a very different business from that of entering into one through a mistake, produced by a want of experience. The experiment being now made, to the ruin of those who have embarked in the business, no further contracts are or can be expected, nor could they be executed if obtained."

RESERVED LANDS FOR SEATS OF JUSTICE AND EXCHANGE OF SCHOOL LANDS IN FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 11, 1828.

Mr. W. R. DAVIS, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom were referred the communication of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, on the subject of the reserves for the seat of government in the Territory of Florida, and the petition of the people of Jackson county, in the said Territory, praying that a quarter of the sixteenth section reserved for the use of schools might be granted to them in lieu of the one to which they are entitled by law, reported:

The committee refer to the following statement (marked A) from the Commissioner of the General Land Office:

George Walton, as acting governor of Florida, by virtue of an act passed on May 24, 1824, selected the three following quarter sections of land adjoining that selected for the seat of government, viz: northeast quarter of section 36, township 1, range 1, north and west; southwest quarter of section 31, township 1, range 1, north and east; and the northeast quarter of section 1, township 1, range 1, south and west, and advised this office of the same on February 16, 1825; at which time no surveys had been received of those lands, and no entry or approval of those selections was made on the books of this office. The surveys were subsequently received, and the lands proclaimed for sale in the month of May, 1825. On March 16, 1825, a letter was addressed to the register and receiver from this office, instructing them "to reserve from sale a section of land adjacent to the lands which have been selected by the lieutenant governor of Florida for the seat of government—the reserve to be made in quarter sections contiguous to the above-mentioned lands." "You will avoid making the above reservation in any township which may be selected for General Lafayette, should such selection be made adjacent to the seat of government."

Previous to the public sale in May, 1825, the selection of a township was made by the President for General Lafayette, which adjoined the town of Tallahassee, and included the southwest quarter of section 31, township 1, range 1, north and east, and a patent issued to him on July 4, 1825, for the whole township.

The letter from the register and receiver, dated May 16, 1827, will show that the reservation of the southwest quarter of section 31, township 1, range 1, north and east, was withdrawn by the consent of the lieutenant governor, and the diagram accompanying it exhibits the present state of the reservations.

There is a mistake in this letter from the register and receiver in designating the northwest quarter of section 36, township 1, range 1, west and north, as one of the original sections reserved by Mr. Walton.

GEO. GRAHAM.

It appears from the above statement that one of the quarter sections directed to be located by the acting governor was within the township subsequently selected for General Lafayette, and the local authorities in Florida, not being willing to interfere in any manner with the munificent grant of Congress to that illustrious patriot, consented to withdraw their claim to that reserve which, being previously appropriated, might have been held by them. In the selections afterwards made for the same object one of them included the quarter section on which Governor Duval settled in 1824, and to which it was adjudged he had a right of pre-emption by the judge of the district, under an act of Congress passed in 1826, giving the right of preference in the purchase of lands to settlers prior to January 1, 1825. Whether this decision was correct or not the committee do not deem it their province to inquire. To obviate any difficulty, however, the committee have received satisfactory information that Governor Duval offered to the legislative council the quarter section in question, after it was adjudged to him, upon their paying for the improvements actually made by him.

The Territory of Florida will have, by the bill now reported, the quantity usually granted in other places for this object, with the exception of this quarter, which they can acquire upon such just and reasonable terms that, if they do not accept them, the committee conceive no further grant ought to be made by the United States. They do not doubt, however, that this claim will be arranged between the governor and the Territory, in a way satisfactory to both, without any legislation on the subject.

Upon the subject of the third section of the bill the committee refer to the petition marked B, and made a part of this report.

B.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your petitioners having encountered insuperable difficulties in the location of the seat of justice in Jackson county, in the western district of the Territory of Florida, whereby the greatest inconvenience has arisen, and still exists, would pray your honorable bodies to pass a law authorizing them to locate their county site upon the sixteenth section, township five, range eleven, north and west; and in support of this memorial would respectfully offer the following reasons:

That the said sixteenth section is the only place suitable for said location, on account of water, prospects of health, and general convenience, which is any way central to the population of said county; that other situations, which would be suitable, are so remote from the centre that the inhabitants cannot agree to a location upon any of them, and that every effort which has been made for two years past to effect a location has failed; that a location upon the aforesaid sixteenth section will meet with the approbation of a large majority of the citizens of the said Jackson county, and will effectually reconcile the jarring opinions and conflicting interests; that two successive applications have been made to the legislative council, which have proved abortive. That the two last sessions of the superior and county courts of said county have been held on said sixteenth section by universal consent, and to the general satisfaction of the citizens; that there is already a village on said sixteenth section, consisting of four stores, the offices of legal and medical men, clerks, sheriff, and marshal, and several private dwelling-houses; that it will greatly enhance the value of the school lands, and produce a larger fund than by any other application of said lands.

And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

The laws of the United States give to each county in the Territory the right of pre-emption to a quarter section of land; the reasons for a change are fully set forth in the foregoing representation.

The county will be enabled to select the quarter they desire by a transfer of the same quantity for the same use for which that was reserved, whilst the interests of the inhabitants are carefully protected. It is a question in which the United States have no direct interest. No land is asked for or granted. A commutation, which can only be effected by our law, is afforded for the convenience, and at the application, of a large number of inhabitants.

The sixteenth section of each township, it may be necessary to remark, is reserved for the use of schools; one quarter of this is to be exchanged for another quarter to which the county is entitled; and the committee do not doubt that the remaining three quarters, by the location of the county seat, would be more valuable than the whole, even if another was not transferred for the same object.

All which is submitted.

LAND CLAIM IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 11, 1828.

Mr. ARMSTRONG, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of James Winter, of the State of Louisiana, reported:

The petitioner states that in the year 1808 he emigrated from the State of South Carolina to the district of country now comprising the parish of East Feliciana, included in the Louisiana purchase, but over which, at that time, the Spanish government exercised exclusive jurisdiction; that on November 24, 1808, he purchased of John Lynd, of New Orleans, a tract of land containing one thousand acres, in the parish aforesaid, for which he paid the sum of three thousand dollars; that the tract of land so purchased was part of a large grant made by the Spanish government, commonly called a big survey, which has not been confirmed by the United States; that he purchased the same, not knowing the United States or any other government set up any claim to it; that after the United States asserted their claim to jurisdiction over that country, he became alarmed for his title, and as soon as a land office was opened east of the island of Orleans, in order to secure his improvement he entered it as a settlement claim, which has been confirmed, for six hundred and forty acres, leaving a deficiency of three hundred and sixty acres from the purchase from Lynd, to which he prays Congress to confirm his title. No title papers are produced, except a copy of a deed from Lynd. The committee cannot perceive any claim the petitioner has on the United States for confirmation of his title to the three hundred and sixty acres of land, and therefore recommend that the prayer of the petitioner be rejected.

CORRECTION OF AN ERROR IN BIDDING FOR LAND AT A PUBLIC SALE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 14, 1828.

Mr. ISACKS, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Benjamin Freeland, of Indiana, reported:

That the petitioner represents that in 1820 he attended a public land sale held at Terre Haute, in that State, for the purpose of buying three quarters of section No. 5, in township No. 11, range No. 2 west of the second principal basis meridian; that while the sales were going on he was accidentally absent a few moments from the crier's table; when he returned he was informed that the land he wished to buy was then offering for sale; he therefore bid for and purchased three quarter sections, to wit: the northeast, northwest, and southwest quarters of section No. 5, in township No. 11, but in range No. 1 west; by which mistake of the range the lands purchased were six miles east from those selected by him and intended to be bought, and in a district of country altogether uninhabitable, on account of cliffs or ravines running through it in every direction; that in a short time after he had bid off the land, and before any other lands were bid for, he discovered his mistake, and applied to the register and receiver to have it corrected, who admitted the mistake, but, as the purchase money had been paid, doubted whether they could legally make the correction; that the said northwest quarter was purchased for and in the name of his father-in-law, Thomas Jenkins, who being dissatisfied with it, the petitioner refunded the money to him, and sustains the loss himself. He asks to be allowed to relinquish, and enter the same quantity of land elsewhere.

The deposition of Jesse Evans proves that he attended the same sale with Freeland; that they showed to each other the numbers of the lands they intended to bid for; that Freeland's numbers were in range two west; that he had no numbers in range one west, as he saw or believes; that when the sale was going on he was much surprised to see Freeland bidding for land in range one, and, as soon as an opportunity offered, he inquired of him into the cause, and was satisfied that he (Freeland) had been mistaken, owing to the same numbers of section and township being called for in range one that he intended to buy out in range two; that, from all the circumstances, he has no doubt that Freeland was mistaken in his purchase. The respectability and good character of Evans is certified by John R. Potter, presiding judge of the first judicial circuit in Indiana. The register and receiver of that office certify that, at the time of the sale, Freeland stated he had committed an error in buying three quarter sections, having mistook the range in which he intended to purchase; that it was then their impression that he had made a mistake, but as the land was paid for, and receipts given, they concluded that they had no authority to alter the entries.

The committee are of opinion that the facts showing an error to have been committed by the petitioner are sufficiently proven; and they can well suppose that he might the more readily have been misled on account of the numbers of the section and township corresponding with those in which he intended to purchase, without adverting to the number of the range in which they actually were. And although the rule requiring the buyer to take care may properly be applied to the purchasers of public land, yet this case, under its circumstances, is deemed a fit exception from the operations of that rule, especially as the error was made known at the time of the sale.

The acts of March 3, 1819, and of May 24, 1824, providing for the correction of errors in making entries of public land at the land offices, relate only to private sales, and will not apply to the case of this petitioner, whose purchase was at public sale; neither will his case fall within the provisions of the bill of this session for the refunding of money forfeited to the United States by the purchasers of public lands, by the issuance of certificates, because no forfeiture appears to have taken place. And, thinking this a proper case for special relief, they report a bill.

REASONS FOR GRADUATING THE PRICE OF PUBLIC LANDS IN FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 14, 1828.

WASHINGTON, January 12, 1828.

SIR: The subject of the graduation of the prices of the public lands having been introduced and supported by you with so much zeal and ability, I am induced to believe that any local information in aid of such a system cannot be unacceptable to you. I have witnessed your exertions with much solicitude, and with a strong hope that a measure recommended by so many considerations of justice and national policy would be adopted. Under a conviction that the causes which induce us, in Florida, to desire a change in the manner of disposing of public lands were more numerous and powerful than in any other section of the United States, I introduced at the first session of the late Congress the subject, with a hope that, whatever might be the fate of your general bill, some local legislation might be resorted to for an object so important to us. I am induced to make this communication, at the present moment, from having learned that all the petitions, resolutions, and representations from the States and Territories interested had been ordered to be printed in the Senate. I wish it distinctly understood that if there is not to be found among those documents any memorial from Florida, it is not because the local government or people there feel less interest on the subject. Whoever will devote to it a moderate share of attention must readily see that there is, in every section of the Union where there is a public domain, a considerable portion of territory which never can be sold at a dollar and a quarter per acre. At the first sales the best lands are brought into market, and those of inferior quality are purchased as real estate becomes enhanced in value from the advanced state of population and improvement. But after these causes have produced all their effects, there will still remain thousands of acres which never can be available to the government under the present system of disposing of the public domain. Although these lands might be desirable to a certain extent for agricultural purposes and for grazing, yet no one would feel warranted in paying for them the price fixed by the act of Congress. The result of this state of things is, that most of the land of that description becomes an unavailable fund to the government, and, in consequence of its remaining public, operates as an injury to the population of the country. Were its price graduated, and the land, from time to time, sold at its intrinsic value, a considerable portion of it would be entered and settled by a valuable description of inhabitants, who would employ it for the purposes of agriculture or grazing, if not for both. Under existing circumstances, no prudent man would become a squatter upon it for fear his improvements might induce some one to enter it over his head, and speculate upon his necessities. Individuals of a different character will, in many instances, become squatters upon these lands, and the government will thus far be the victim of numerous impositions. From this view of the case, although the present arrangement may favor this squatting, erratic race of settlers, yet it is injurious to the government and unfriendly to a dense population of such a description as gives any country wealth, strength, and efficiency.

The reasons which recommend the graduation of the prices of the public lands in Florida, I think, are particularly urgent and conclusive. I have visited a considerable portion of Middle Florida, and, as far as my own observations have extended, I can speak with some degree of confidence. The reasons in this case, I conceive, derive their force and effect from the fact that Florida, even where there are bodies of good land, is one of the most spotted countries in the world. Within almost any given limits you are presented with great varieties of both soil and timber, and frequently very sterile spots in close proximity with lands esteemed the most rich and productive. Sometimes upon the same quarter or eighth you will find one-fourth of good land, and the balance of very poor, or the reverse. In other cases, a quarter, eighth, or half section, would be entirely or partially cut, or covered, by swamps, ponds, or lakes. In such cases the surveyors have not made fractions, (unless the lake has proved to be much beyond the common size,) and so disposed of it at the sales; but if you desire part of an eighth, quarter, half, or whole section, which is cut up by ponds, swamps, or lakes, you are compelled to purchase the whole, and that at a dollar and a quarter per acre. This would not be done unless the case was an urgent one and the land calculated to answer an important purpose. Were the prices graduated as proposed, a purchaser might, in many instances, be warranted in paying for the whole eighth, quarter, half, or whole section, where he secured a small portion of good land. This is the only mode of bringing such lands into market, unless the government would, in the cases above stated, make fractions of the desirable spots of good land, and permit purchasers to pay for only so many acres as they may want, excluding swamps, sterile acres, lakes, and ponds. To this I presume they would never consent. The plan you propose is much more desirable, and should, I think, be adopted. By that plan the government would obtain equally as good a price for the lands sold, and would sell many that must, under the present system, always remain unproductive property. By graduating the prices you not only bring into market many lands which would otherwise be always excluded, but they are brought in at such periods as they may be in demand, and thus augment the means of securing a dense population.

Without a personal observation of the peculiar character of the region which stretches along our southern seaboard, and for at least a hundred miles in the interior, it is impossible to form any just idea of its intrinsic value. The gentlemen who represent those portions of the southern States I can safely appeal to for the correctness of what I state. Those from the northern and western parts of the Union, where the lands are clothed with a growth of oak and hickory, or beach, with an occasional tract of pines or firs, or of rocky or gravelly soil, can have no conception of the continuous bodies of land covered with no other growth than pine, of a sterile district, unfitted for any species of agriculture, and not even capable of being benefited by manure, excepting where the incumbent bed of sand rests upon a base of clay. There are thousands of acres, perhaps millions, throughout the most populous of the southern States, of this kind of land, which would not bring the government's minimum price, and there is no prospect of their increasing in value for ages. Yet there are spots, even in these sterile regions, which are of a better quality, but they are like the oases of an African desert. I do not speak of the lands on the margin of the large streams, but of the extensive tracts that lie between them, where nothing can be produced for export but lumber, turpentine, and tar, and which at the present time offer but a poor compensation for the labor employed on them. Now, I will ask, what is the value of such lands in a state of nature? Literally nothing. They are, it is true, owned; but what would they bring in market? Their only value must depend upon this. There is nothing so disheartening to the farmer as the cultivation of an ungrateful soil, which will yield no return, and notwithstanding all the efforts to improve it by manure, it continues as meagre as ever. Yet such is the love of ownership, the idea of having a few acres which we can call our own, that even such lands would be improved if the fee simple were within the reach of the poor man, not for a dollar an acre, the nominal value of such lands in the populous parts of the southern States, but a few cents, their real value. On any thousand or two thousand acres a small spot of better land might be found, where he could make his patch of Indian corn, his potatoes, his vegetables, plant his peach trees, feed his cows, and erect his humble tenement of logs, without fear of being turned off when his little improvements became of sufficient value to tempt cupidity. This kind of population is extremely numerous in the southern States. They have no slaves to aid them in their labor; they have no means of purchasing; and the system of tenantry used in the northern States is scarcely known. This is the class of poor but industrious people who labor the earth with their own hands, and whose wives manufacture their own cotton clothing, and who go to seek better fortunes in Florida and Alabama, and become squatters on the public lands. A cart, a horse, and a few cows are frequently the only property they bring with them; they sit down on the public lands, and make small improvements to furnish them the means of temporary subsistence. But how different would be the feelings of these people if they could become owners! A piece of land which would be passed by with contempt by the man who had one or two hundred dollars to spare would be viewed with delight by one of these poor settlers if he could call it his own. There is a vast number of such families throughout the southern country. Those who know these States as slave-holding States little know how large a proportion of the population have no slaves. It is to these the graduation of the price of lands will confer a benefit. The lands which require to be thus graduated cannot be any object to the speculator. I appeal to the experience of the southern gentlemen whether there is any instance of speculating in poor pine barrens. In the State of Alabama and in Louisiana they have remained for years unsold; no lands, in fact, have sold which are not intrinsically valuable; that is, which are not adapted to the common staples of the country.

The only value, I repeat, of such lands arises from the improvements which may be put on them, and as an antecedent to this, ownership must be placed within the reach of the poor man. The rich never speculate in lands of this description; the best, the most fertile lands, or peculiar spots and favorable situations, are the objects of this speculation.

An act of Congress passed some years ago, authorizing the register and receiver to give leases of lands which had remained unsold for a certain number of years, or until the lands were called for by some one desirous of purchasing from the government. But what would be the effect of such a law? The moment the poor settler had exhausted all his means, and labored for several years in erecting his buildings, manuring his ground, planting his peach orchard, and thus made the spot, from being of no value, worth three or four hundred dollars, a purchaser offers who is willing to give the government price for an eighth, including the improvements, or at least compel the settler to pay him hush money, as it is there denominated.

There never was a more mistaken policy. As the owner of the spot, he would have been a useful member of society; for the self-estimation produced by the idea of ownership, and the stake which his little profits gave him in society, are a guarantee for the correctness of his deportment. He had risen in the scale of usefulness; but when turned adrift, or exposed to rapacity, it is no wonder that his feelings are soured, and that he becomes idle and restless.

Let it be remembered that it is neither the speculator nor the great planter that is to be benefited, but the poor farmer, who labors with his own hands; and it is the country at large which will feel the advantage of easing the condition of its citizens, converting indigent squatters into profitable producers and also consumers of the produce of others; whereas, but for the mildness of the southern country, and the facilities of procuring the bare necessaries of life, they would be condemned to the greatest wretchedness. One misfortune of the immense space for which Congress has to legislate is that that legislation is, in some instances, not sufficiently varied to suit the peculiarities of its different parts. What may be very suitable in some part of it may be very little suited to another.

The advantage of a uniform system of legislation is certainly great, but yet, if, without creating too great a diversity, that legislation could be modified or varied to suit particular situations, it would be greatly to be desired. I am not prepared to say whether the graduation of the price of public lands would be an improvement in the general system. The situation of the western States and Territories, where there are public lands, may perhaps render it necessary to pursue a different course; perhaps the graduation may give rise to speculation, which, instead of benefiting the poor settler, might injure him, and ultimately retard the population. But I know that this could not take place in Florida, and that its only effect would be to enable the poor settler to procure land which he could not otherwise obtain, and which, at the same time, would be a national benefit, by causing those lands to be improved which would otherwise remain useless. The class of people I have been describing deserve the encouragement of Congress, and to many farmers of respectable information, with whom I have conversed, they were scarcely known to exist. Taking their ideas of the southern population from the wealthy planters on the coast and on the margins of the rivers, they hardly seem to know that there is a valuable population of whites in the southern States who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow, although, unhappily, they are too apt to wither and decay in the proximity to the more wealthy planter.

Florida may be truly called the poor man's country. The wealthy southern planter may find lands on better terms in Alabama, Arkansas, or Louisiana for the cultivation of cotton or sugar, and certainly in larger bodies; for the proportion of good land in Florida, it must be admitted, is exceedingly small. The proportion of poor land is greater than in any of the southern States; but it has great advantages in point of climate. The winters being so much milder, cattle, the great resource of the poor man, are more easily subsisted in winter. He feels the severity of the cold less himself, and in addition to the sweet potato, which succeeds as well in the sandy soils of Florida as in Georgia, he has the sugar cane, which contributes greatly to his domestic comforts. This is, besides, the climate of the vine, the olive, the fig, and the orange, and the best adapted to the silk worm. It is true that new modes of culture, like new branches of manufacture, are introduced slowly; they require a change in the habits of the people, and an apprenticeship. But one thing is very certain, that no one will plant a tree if he has no certainty that he or his children will eat of its fruit or sit in its shade. Let the poor farmer call this spot his own, and he will embellish and improve it. He will view with delight the growth of every useful or ornamantel plant, and although it may afford no immediate reward to his labor, he will be pleased with the future expectation. Florida has an advantage over the greater part of the southern pine barrens in being finely watered and uniformly healthy. It is also more spotted, to use the common phrase of the country; a thousand spots may be found scattered over a surface containing from one acre to fifty of good second, and even first rate land, which offer no inducement to a planter, and will not, therefore, be purchased from the government; but it would suit the poor man, who is satisfied with ten or twenty acres for his plow, when he has the surrounding grassy waste of pine barren for his cows and hogs. A fine spring or a clear rivulet would entice him to settle in the midst of that waste, where he could manure or cow-pen a few sandy acres to raise his patch of corn, potatoes, rice, cotton, or cane. The difference between the pine lands and what is called the oak and hickory lands is so distinctly marked that the quality and value is ascertained at once by this designation, although there is a difference in the quality of the pine from hopeless barrenness to the better kind, which may be improved by manure. I will venture to say that lands of this quality will rarely if ever sell at the government price. It will be a long time before the inferior kind of oak and hickory land will bring the government price, especially when in small bodies. The small quantity of good land in Florida which is salable is at this time nearly all taken up by Spanish grants, pre-emptions, and sales. Many of those who had pre-emptions were unable to raise the money to purchase the land; for one or two hundred dollars in cash is a sum not within the reach of every poor settler. They, however, secured the value of their labor by selling to others who had the means of purchasing, and who had not exhausted their funds in making a settlement. These settlers, having thus given up their lands, have been compelled to become squatters again.

In the management of the public lands the two principal objects are, first, to raise money for the public treasury, and, secondly, to increase the population and resources of the nation. The tracts of pine land, and the occasional spots through them of land capable of tillage, at the present prices, will not afford a revenue to the government for ages, for there is no prospect of their selling unless their value be enhanced by improvements. I appeal to the northern members, whether the pine lands in the districts they represent have anything more than a nominal value, and whether that value is not less than the minimum price. I need not say that in new countries just settling the price of lands, of whatever quality, bears no comparison to those of older settlements and populous neighborhoods. By graduating the public lands in Florida the government will lose nothing; for if they were offered for sale over and over again for twenty years, they would find no bidders at one dollar and twenty-five cents. But something might be obtained for the treasury if they were estimated at their real value and placed within the reach of poor settlers. I do not ask that these lands should be given to settlers, in order to promote settlements and population, because this would be changing the policy of the government in relation to the public lands; yet if this were done, the treasury would ultimately be benefited by the increase in the amount of duties on foreign merchandise, by increasing the means of the people to procure them.

If any property in the public lands can be considered with an eye to the revenue to be derived from them, the policy of graduating the price ought to prevail. But this ought not to be the sole consideration. The increase of population, the improvement in the condition of its citizens, the strengthening of weak and vulnerable points, as well as the creation of new staples, and the new marts for commerce, are objects of infinitely greater importance. And in relation to Florida the policy will not be new. It will be following up what has been pursued by every former government, especially that of Great Britain, as appears by the proclamations of her governors; and the same policy was pursued by Spain. In the pre-emption law, which has had a most happy effect on the prosperity of the Territory, and without which it would have been the scene of a barbarous speculation on the labor and the necessities of the humble and industrious settler, instead of exhibiting its happy prospects and flourishing condition—in this pre-emption law the policy which I advocate, of encouraging a population in those exposed borders of the Union, has been completely acknowledged. The policy of encouraging the production of those staples adapted to the soil and climate of Florida is one which has never been lost sight of by the former governments; and in this age of legislative restrictions on commerce, in order to foster the internal trade of each country by producing and procuring from different parts of it those articles of human production which can at present only be obtained from abroad, the policy becomes more imperative. Florida, in a few years, might be made to produce many of the fruits of the Mediterranean or the West Indies, besides supplying articles, such as indigo, cochineal, &c., which are necessary to our manufactures. Nearly one-half of the peninsula of Florida is adapted to the growth of the lime, the pine apple, the cocoa, the date, and even the coffee plant. There is scarcely any part of the Territory that is not capable of producing the orange, lemon, citron, olive, the almond, and the fig. The cultivation of a tree, or a few trees, which in bearing would suffice to maintain a family, is a very different thing from the cultivation of a field in annual crops. There is scarcely any soil so poor that it cannot, without much labor, be permanently improved, so as to produce a fruit tree of the most luxuriant growth. I have seen this on the island of Santa Rosa, opposite Pensacola, which is nothing but a bank of sand, a pure silex washed up from the sea. The delightful groves around the palace of St. Ildefonso, in Spain, are formed of trees planted in holes cut out of the solid rock, and filled with earth brought from a distance. Mr. Jefferson, in his interesting letter on the subject of the olive, which he thinks affords sustenance to a greater number of persons than can be afforded by any given space of ground occupied by any other production, declares that a few olive trees are sufficient to support a village. But those things must have a beginning; that beginning will be long retarded, unless there is some encouragement from the government. The conviction of the necessity of affording this encouragement has always been felt by Congress, and by every enlightened citizen. Some eight or ten years since, several townships of very valuable land in Alabama were given, on most advantageous terms, to some foreigners, to enable them to introduce the olive and the grape. But the soil and climate which they selected were not adapted to the purpose; the soil was too good not to be employed in the cultivation of those staples which yield an immediate return; and as to the climate, it was too far north for the purpose for which the grant was ostensibly obtained. In Florida the soil, in general, is too poor for crops, but good enough to produce fruit trees, and the climate is such as could be wished. But we do not ask a grant which might open a door for speculation, in which a few individuals might be benefited, under the pretext of doing good to others and to the country; we only ask that the pine lands of Florida be placed within the reach of the poor man by being disposed of at the proper value. How many spots have I seen, in passing through the Territory, in various directions, from Pensacola to Tallahassee, and from that place to St. Augustine, on the margin of a lake or the border of a stream, where a poor man might make a comfortable home, which he would delight to embellish, by planting trees, if he could call it his own, and of so small an extent, perhaps but a few acres, as to form no temptation to the speculator, and of no value to the smallest planter! Whatever reluctance there might be in changing the general policy as to other portions of the public domain, I feel convinced that if I could take any member of Congress over the country which I have traversed, and thus enable him to form a correct idea of its peculiar features, he would be satisfied that the general policy, if it be wise as to other parts of the Union, ought to be modified as to Florida. In the value of oak and hickory lands, in the quality, there are almost imperceptible gradations, and some it is difficult to discriminate; but the quality of the pine lands is so peculiar, so distinct, and different, that there is as much ease as in distinguishing the land from the water. They are, in general, totally unfitted for planting or for agriculture, excepting on the smallest scale, by the use of the pasture which they afford, and by the aid of manure. Surely it would redound to the honor of a country—it would be praiseworthy in the highest degree, to be able, by wise legislation, to make that worth something to the treasury which would otherwise produce nothing; to create a cheerful and pleasant inhabited spot which would otherwise remain a desert. It was justly observed by Swift that he who can cause an ear of wheat to grow where none grew before is a greater benefactor than the astronomer who discovers a new star.

The returns of the commissioners for settling land claims will show what proportion is covered by valid grants. The sales of the land office will exhibit the result of the sales, and the surveys will show what proportion of the lands of the Territory are pine lands. Nearly the whole of that extensive tract west of the Choctawhatchy river is of this description, with the exception of the small strip along the Chipola river. The vast space west of the Apalachicola river is of the same character, and to the eastward of that river this general description will nearly apply. It is true that the fertile districts of Tallahassee, Alachua, and the hammocks on the Atlantic coast, form exceptions; but the pine lands of the character I have referred to constitute by far the greatest portion of the Territory, and, if inhabited at all, they must be inhabited by poor farmers. But unless these lands be placed within the reach of this description of people by the reduction of price, they will be only squatters. By merely encamping on the public lands they will constitute a population of little value, contracting unsettled and erratic habits, instead of being permanently fixed, as they could be by becoming owners of the selected spots, where they could plant trees and erect their dwellings without fearing that they were laboring for others. In the course of time Florida will be the great magazine of the Union for naval stores; her pines may become a source of wealth, and, perhaps, at some future day, her timber may find a market. An active trade along the immense extent of coast which it presents will lessen the dangers of piracy, which will always prevail while so great a proportion of it is unfrequented. The coasting trade and the fisheries are the best nurseries of seamen. The fisheries of Florida have entirely escaped the attention of the nation; few are aware of their extent and importance, and of the extent to which they are susceptible of being carried. I have sometimes thought it would be an advantage to our trade if, by some revolution of nature, the peninsula of Florida were swept away; but when I reflected on the value of its fisheries, in addition to its tropical climate, that wish was immediately recalled. Intending to bring the subject of the fisheries before Congress, I shall not enlarge upon it at present; but I will observe that the advantages of a population in the Territory, in connexion with this subject, must be self-evident.

I have long been confirmed in the opinion that in the event of a future war with any maritime power the Gulf of Mexico will become the theatre of the contest; for the country bordered by its coasts is, from the nature of its population, decidedly the weakest portion of the Union, while there is wafted through it to the ocean, already, a half of the products of the United States. Towards the close of the last war the cabinet of England discovered its error in employing uselessly its forces to the north, and in occupying St. Mary's in the east, and the Mississippi in the west, evincing a design which, had it proved successful, and the war had been protracted, would have produced a state of things which the patriot mind dislikes to dwell on. If, then, I am correct in these surmises, ought we not to be prepared for any contest by the adoption of every means of defence within the limits of our power? Amongst these, the encouragement of a hardy and numerous population, by disposing of the public lands in the manner proposed, will unquestionably operate beneficially. The peninsula of Florida, lying as it does, is an eminent point of defence; but if left unpopulated, it might, by an enemy, be converted into a position of active offensive operations, not only in embarrassing our commerce, but in facilitating the more formidable movements of invasion. In point of national economy, too, it will easily be seen, that in time of war, if it should be necessary to call the militia to the defence of this frontier, it would be far preferable to employ them on the spot, rather than encounter the expense and delay necessarily attendant on marching a force from a more distant quarter.

I fear I have trespassed on your patience; but I trust that the high objects of national defence, and of improving the condition of a great portion of our community, involved in this communication, will plead my excuse for its prolixity. I ask leave to conclude it by making an extract on this subject, from an intelligent and highly interesting message to the legislative council of Florida, now in session, by the acting governor, Wm. M. McCarty.

"No general plan of graduating the price of public lands, according to their relative value, has yet been adopted by Congress. A special law for this purpose might probably be obtained for Florida, on account of her exposed situation, and the consequent necessity of having settlements upon that wide belt of poor country which fringes both the shores of the Atlantic and of the Gulf, and which never will be inhabited at the present minimum price of public land. But if brought into market upon fair terms, these lands would yield a revenue to the government, and they would soon be settled and converted by the purchasers into sheep-walks and ranges for stock of every description. Should you deem this a subject worthy of your attention, you should present to Congress an enlarged and comprehensive view of its advantages."

I have the honor to be, with much respect, sir, your obedient servant,

JOS. M. WHITE.

Hon. THOMAS H. BENTON, of the Senate.

20TH CONGRESS.] No. 615. [1ST SESSION.

LIST OF OFFICERS AND SOLDIERS OF THE REVOLUTIONARY ARMY ENTITLED TO BOUNTY LAND WHO HAVE NOT RECEIVED IT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 15, 1828.

Mr. VAN BUREN, from the Judiciary Committee, upon the subject of the list of the names of such officers and soldiers of the revolutionary army as acquired a right to lands from the United States and who have not yet applied, reported:
