NOTES.

(1) This is the gross amount of acres and purchase money, including the special sales prior to the opening of the land offices, and, of course, all the lands as they were sold from year to year, without regard to their subsequent reversion to the United States, or their subsequent relinquishment by purchasers under the relief laws commencing in the year 1821.

(2) This is the nett amount of sales and amount paid by purchasers, after deducting all reversions and relinquishments of lands sold under the credit system, ending June 30, 1820.

(3) This is the amount paid into the Treasury in 1820, for the sales of land under the credit and cash systems.

(4) These aggregates include the special sales made prior to the organization of the land districts—(See Table A;) also the amount of forfeited land stock, Mississippi stock, and military land scrip, received in payment for the public lands—(See Table B.)

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, October 19, 1835.

[In making estimates or comparisons between the sums receivable, and the quantities of lands sold at different times, it is important to remember that the minimum price per acre was $2 before 1820, and since only $1 25. Besides the above sales by the United States, they have made donations of lands, most of which have come into the market during the last forty-six years, of over 16,000,000 of acres,—see Table C annexed.]

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1339. [1ST SESSION.

OPERATIONS OF THE GENERAL LAND OFFICE AND THE SEVERAL LAND OFFICES DURING 1834, AND FIRST, SECOND, AND THIRD QUARTERS OF 1835.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 8, 1835.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 8, 1835.

SIR: I have the honor herewith to transmit to the House of Representatives, the Annual Report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, referred to in the report from this Department on the finances.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. J. K. POLK, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 5, 1835.

SIR: I have the honor herewith to transmit statements exhibiting the operations of the several land offices during the year 1834, and the first, second and third quarters of the year 1835, indicating the quantity of land sold; the amount of cash and scrip received in payment therefor; the amount of incidental expenses; and the amount of moneys paid into the Treasury, by the Receivers of public money during the said periods—tables marked A and B.

There are also herewith transmitted copies of the estimates of appropriations required by this branch of the public service during the ensuing year, viz.:

For the General Land Office—paper marked C.

For the offices of surveyors general—paper marked D.

For surveying the public lands—paper marked E.

In estimating the expenses of the General Land Office, proper, upon the present establishment, the Commissioner must be ruled by the organization contemplated and provided for by the act of the 25th of April, 1812, and of the 2d of March, 1827; a scheme devised in inexperience, and obviously incompetent to the despatch of the increasing business, apart from the accumulated load of arrears, and incapable of discharging all the obligations which good faith and good policy impose upon the Government, in the operation of its land system.

For some years past, Congress has partially complied with the urgent requests of the office for more clerical aid, and by temporary appropriations for extra clerk hire, for writing of patents, &c., has afforded sensible relief; but considering, as I do, that the continuation of such temporary appropriations for the ensuing year, even to a much greater amount, would form but an imperfect and exceptionable substitute for the organic system upon which this branch of the public service ought to be established, in order to secure the correctness, economy, and expedition in the administration of its concerns, demanded by exigencies derived from the past, and becoming more pressing with the augmenting sales, and the increasing perplexity in which time involves the private land claims of thirty years' standing, from which the attention of the Commissioner has unavoidably been too much diverted, I respectfully invite your attention to the expediency of a reform.

The estimate for additional clerks now offered is indispensable, so long as the Legislature may choose to adhere to the measure of regular force prescribed by the 8th section of the act of the 2d of March, 1827; but I cannot refrain from indulging a strong hope that Congress, perceiving the insufficiency of such temporary expedients, will substitute, in the course of the coming session, a scheme better suited to the weight of the circumstances that press upon and overburden the office; and I very respectfully suggest, that the attention of Congress be requested to measures that may place this institution in the condition of efficiency required by the public interests, as well as by justice to a great portion of the population of our country, whose interests are intimately connected with the prompt and correct execution of the duties imposed by law upon the General Land Office. I beg leave, moreover, to observe, that the impolicy of extra appropriations for specific services in the office, is found in the fact, that it has been impracticable, from the nature of the duties, to restrict the labors of the clerks employed under such appropriations to the specific heads of service for which such appropriations were made. The circumstances attending the business have been such as always to demand the application of the auxiliary force according to the pressure of duties, and in view of their comparative importance.

In the representations made by my predecessor in 1833–'4, to the Secretary of the Treasury and to Congress, I have not discovered the least exaggeration of the difficulties under which the General Land Office had labored and continued to struggle, for want of timely adaptation of plan and means to the current business, and to the arrears postponed by the causes he described, which remain in abeyance, while the progress of time adds to the difficulty of disentangling the most complicated from their embarrassment. This posture of affairs appears to call urgently upon the legislature to revise the laws fixing the organic principles by which the General Land Office has now to be governed, and enact provisions whereby a more perfect supervision of labor and duty can be practised; responsibility made more sensible in the various branches of this service, and the Commissioner, in a measure, relieved of details that divert his attention from more important affairs, but which cannot be neglected, as they occur, without occasioning delays, and perhaps confusion in the several bureaus, where justice and expediency would recommend that the relative compensation of the principals should bear a proportion to the responsibility incurred, and the abilities, attention, and industry required.

The annual cost of an improved system, equal to the new business constantly occurring, and to bringing up what remains behind in a reasonable time, would probably be greater during a few years than the sum now estimated for the next; yet in the ultimate result of the experiment, there would be a saving in this respect, it is thought, of several times the difference; a difference of small comparative moment in calculating the value of reform.

In reference to the estimates for additional clerk hire in the offices of the surveyors general, I have to make the following remarks: The embarrassments which have existed in those offices have heretofore been fully communicated to Congress, in a report dated the 21st of January, 1833, under a resolution of the Senate (printed as Senate document No. 50, of the second session of the twenty-second Congress), in consequence whereof partial appropriations have heretofore been made to enable those officers to bring up the arrears of work in their respective offices. One principal object of these appropriations (as submitted in former estimates), is the transcribing of the field notes of surveys, with the view of having copies of them filed and preserved at the seat of government. Lest this object should not be fully understood, I would briefly remark, that "the field notes," so called, are technically the surveys.

The laws in relation to surveying the public lands, by a singular oversight, do not require that copies of the field notes should be multiplied; on the contrary, the existing provisions of law require the surveyors general to furnish with the township plats, instead of copies of the field notes of survey, a document which is called "a description" of the township; indicating the quality of the lands on the sectional lines and between the corner posts, and referring to the character of the corner posts or bearing trees; such descriptions, however, answer not the same purpose as the field notes, and no protractions can be made from them. The original field notes are filed in the offices of the surveyors general; no copies of them are extant by law, and if such originals should be lost or destroyed by the burning down of the surveyors' offices, or otherwise, there would be no record of them in existence, and the loss would be irremediable, unless by re-surveys of the lands, requiring the expenditure of immense sums of money.

The fact that the office of surveyor general for Alabama was destroyed by fire, many years ago, and with it all the original field books of surveys, of which no transcripts were ordered to be preserved by law, is one of the strongest inducements that could present itself in favor of the additional appropriation for clerk hire in the surveyors' offices, now submitted, with a view to effect that object.

This office was enabled to supply, to a considerable extent, the loss occasioned by the destruction of the surveyor's office in Alabama, because the surveyor general, in departing from the custom, had returned the field notes.

The labors in the surveyors' offices have been greatly increased by the operation of the act of 5th April, 1832, entitled "An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands," by reason of the new and minute subdivisions of fractional sections necessary to be exhibited on the township plats. Previous thereto the smallest legal subdivision was the eighty-acre tract (half quarter section), made such by a line running north and south. The act referred to confers the additional privilege of locating quarter quarters of sections, the divisional line running east and west, restricting the privilege of making those small entries to two quarter quarter sections to any one purchaser, and to those purchasers only who enter them for cultivation, or for the use of their improvements. To make this law available, it was found necessary to require the surveyors general not only to exhibit on all future townships surveys protracted by them respectively, the minute subdivisions of fractional sections into forty acre lots, as nearly as practicable (under regulations prescribed by the department in pursuance of the law), but also to make new protractions and calculations of the vast number of fractional sections in market, and remaining unsold, at the passage of the act; and to make returns to this office as well as to the district land offices. The maps and diagrams so required have to be prepared in triplicate. The magnitude of this work, and the pressing demands made by purchasers for the receipt of those returns of subdivisions at the several land offices have, as may be inferred (in the midst of the increasing demand for new lands to be brought into market), greatly encroached on the time which otherwise would have been devoted to the bringing up of the old arrears, and transcribing the field notes. Hence it has been frequently found necessary to apply the whole force in the surveyors' offices to the current business as the exigencies of the public services have from time to time imperatively demanded, to the delay of those special objects for which the additional appropriations were required.

The propriety of making an allowance to the surveyors general for office rent and fuel, is respectfully submitted. The want of ample accommodations for the clerks allowed them by law, of necessity tends to retard the progress of those important objects for which the appropriations of clerk hire have been made. The officer is now personally charged with all expenses of house rent and fuel for his clerks in the public service, and his emoluments not increasing by commissions and fees, (as those of the Registers and Receivers in a given proportion to the amount of their business,) it is certainly an evil that the appropriation of increased force, in aid of the public service, has the direct effect to diminish his own emoluments, by the expenses attending the accommodations he has to provide for his clerks. In view of all these circumstances, I beg leave to present the estimate of appropriation for two thousand one hundred dollars for office rent and fuel of the surveyors' offices.

To show the progress of the public surveys, and the fields of operation that may be expected to be occupied by the surveyors during the ensuing year, I have deemed it proper to submit herewith such reports of the surveyors general, together with their respective estimates, as this office is at present enabled to furnish. Document marked F.

In Ohio.—The whole of the lands in this State which have been ceded to the United States have been surveyed, and, with the exception of some small former Indian reservations, have been offered at public sale.

In Indiana.—In this State all the lands which have been ceded have been surveyed; but about ninety townships and fractional townships have not been proclaimed for sale. They will, however, be brought into market early next season.

In the Peninsula of Michigan.—In this part of the Territory nearly all the ceded lands have been surveyed and brought into market. The unsurveyed portion is principally situated in the neighborhood of Saginaw bay, and should the interests of the public and of the settlers render it expedient, a portion thereof will be surveyed and placed in market before the close of 1836.

In Michigan west of Lake Michigan.—In this section of the Territory, the whole of the lands within the Wisconsin land district have been surveyed, and in addition to the surveys within the Green Bay district, which have been proclaimed for sale, the office is advised of the survey of about sixty-five townships and fractional townships in that district, which have not yet been proclaimed, but which can be brought into market early in the next year, if required.

The united nation of the Chippewa, Ottawa, and Pottawatamie Indians, having, by the treaty of 1833 and 1834, ceded to the United States the lands in Illinois and Michigan, west of and between the lake and the lands previously ceded by the Winnebago and other Indians, the surveyor general was instructed, in August last, to have that portion of the cession situate in Michigan, run off into townships, and since that time he has been instructed to have those townships subdivided. The survey of this cession, and of some of the adjoining townships in the previous cessions, will not only complete the surveys in this district, but of all the lands between Lake Michigan and the Mississippi which have been ceded to the government.

In Illinois.—In this State the office is advised of the survey of ninety-eight townships and fractional townships, embracing the whole of the Pottawatamie cession of October 20, 1832, and such portions of the adjacent cessions as had not been surveyed—thus completing the surveys in the Danville district, and in the southern part of the Chicago district. The whole of these surveys can be brought into market during the next spring.

In the northwestern land district, the surveyor general has contracted for the survey of all the lands north of the old Indian boundary, and west of the extension of the third principal meridian, into townships, and for the subdivision of a portion of those townships into sections; and, although the office is not advised of the number of townships which will be prepared for market in that part of the district during the next year, yet it may be safely calculated that sufficient progress will have been made to admit of one or more public sales. Instructions were given to the surveyor general, in August last, to have that portion of the lands ceded by the treaty of 1833 and 1834, with the Chippewa, Ottawa, and Pottawatamie Indians, which is situate in Illinois, run off into townships; and he has been since directed to subdivide those townships into sections, preparatory to their being brought into market.

An appropriation of $500 having been made at the last session of Congress, for surveying the confirmed lots at Peoria, the necessary instructions were given to the surveyor general to carry the act into effect.

In Missouri.—In the northern part of this State, the office is advised that the surveyor general has contracted for the survey of the exterior lines of about one hundred and thirty-eight townships, and for the subdivision of thirty of those townships. The surveyor general has also informed the office of his having contracted for running the exterior lines of about one hundred and eighty-nine townships, principally upon the waters of the Osage and Grand rivers, and adjoining the surveys already made.

An appropriation of $20,000 having been made in 1834, for surveys in the southwest part of the State, the surveyor general has been engaged in executing surveys in that section of the State, and the whole of the amount appropriated for that object has been remitted to him for their payment; but, as yet, it is not in the power of this office to say what number of townships have been surveyed, or state the precise time when they can be brought into market, although it is confidently expected that the wishes of the settlers will be complied with, by proclaiming some of those lands during the next season.

In the State of Louisiana.—The information derived from the surveyor general enables me to say, that by the middle of March next there will be about two hundred and forty-eight townships and fractional townships surveyed and returned, which have not been proclaimed for sale. Some of these townships would have been offered during the present year, if the land offices had not been again opened, by the act of the 6th of February last, for the investigation and decision of the private claims to land in that State, and the consequent apprehension that difficulties might arise from offering those lands for sale during the period in which individuals are allowed to bring forward their claims. If, however, the office can satisfactorily ascertain that any portion of those lands can be offered, without the risk of interfering with such alleged claims, such lands will be brought into market during the next year.

In Mississippi.—The office of the surveyor for the public lands in this State having necessarily been closed since the termination of the last session of Congress, no surveys are known to have been made during the present season. It is estimated, however, that only about forty townships are now required to be surveyed, to complete the survey of the lands ceded by the Choctaw treaty of 1830.

From the representations which have been made to this office, it is greatly to be apprehended that such numerous errors have been committed, many years ago, in locating and surveying the confirmed private claims in that part of the Augusta district, south of thirty-first degree of latitude, as to render it indispensably necessary that the subject should be examined by the land officers and the surveyor general, in order that the nature and extent of those errors might be correctly ascertained, and instructions had been given to them in relation thereto, when the closing of the surveyor's office prevented any progress being made in such examination. Whenever the office is filled, the surveyor general will be required to go on with the examination.

In that part of the State included in the limits of the Chickasaw cession of 1832, and where the operations are carried on under the directions of a surveyor general specially provided for by the treaty, it is believed that almost the whole of the operations in the field will be completed during the present season, with the exception of some townships in the Mississippi swamp, and of such of the lands bordering on the line between that cession and the Choctaw cession of 1830, as could not be surveyed in consequence of that line not being run and marked; but as the surveyor general has been advised of the course of the line, and directed to have it surveyed, it may be expected that the whole surveys will be completed during the next year.

In Alabama.—In this State all the ceded lands, with the exception of some townships south of the thirty-first degree, and of some bordering upon the undecided boundary of this State and the State of Georgia, have been surveyed.

Owing to the complaints which have been made respecting the surveys of the lots in the city of Mobile, and of the claims adjacent thereto, and in consequence of the great value of the property in question, it was thought advisable that the surveyor general should personally examine the subject, and have the surveys corrected under his own immediate superintendence; and he therefore devoted a part of the last winter and spring to the accomplishment of that duty, which, it is hoped, has now been correctly and satisfactorily performed.

In Florida.—The surveys of the public lands in West Florida having been almost entirely completed, the attention of the surveyor general for the last year has been principally directed to the extension of those in the peninsula and along the Atlantic border of East Florida; but in consequence of the nature of the country on each side of the tract formerly reserved for the Seminole Indians, but which was ceded to the United States by the treaty of May 9th, 1832, it has been thought advisable to suspend the extension of the surveys in that section of the country until the Indians shall be removed under the provisions of the treaty. This suspension will not, however, cause any inconvenience to the public, as it will enable the surveyor general to prepare for market those surveys which have already been made, and which the reported sickness of his clerks and want of aid in his office have heretofore prevented him from doing.

During the last season a survey of the confirmed claims and of the public property in the city of St. Augustine was made, under the provisions of the act of June 28th, 1832.

In Arkansas.—By information received from the surveyor general, it appears that about eighty-five townships and fractional townships have been surveyed, of which the plats have not been received at this office, and that about sixty-four townships and fractional townships were under contract for subdivision into sections; some of these lands will be offered for sale during the next year.

Not only as showing the nature of the work contemplated to be performed during the next season, in the different districts, and for which appropriations are now asked, but also the manner in which it has been found absolutely necessary to apply the appropriations heretofore made for extra aid in the offices of the surveyor general, I beg leave to refer to the accompanying reports from those offices.

The paper G, herewith transmitted, is a statement showing the amount of forfeited land stock issued and surrendered at the United States land offices to September 30th, 1835; also, the amount of military land scrip surrendered to the same period.

The paper H is an exhibit of the periods to which the monthly accounts of the register and receivers of the public land offices have been rendered, and showing the balance of cash in the receivers' hands, at the date of the last monthly accounts current, and the period to which the receivers' quarterly accounts have been rendered.

The act of Congress of the 3d of March last, 2d section, appropriates an additional quantity of land for the satisfaction of warrants granted by the State of Virginia to the officers, soldiers, sailors, and marines of her State and continental establishments, during the revolutionary war, to the amount of six hundred and fifty thousand acres; and provided, that, if on September 1st, 1835, the amount of warrants filed should exceed the amount of land so appropriated, the commissioner should apportion the said six hundred and fifty thousand acres of land among the warrants "which may be then on the file in full satisfaction thereof."

The amount of warrants filed, on the 1st of September last, so far exceed the quantity of land appropriated by the law as to require the deduction of ten per cent. from the nominal amount of each warrant; the scrip has been ordered to be prepared accordingly, and considerable progress has been made in the issue.

I have the honor to be, sir, with great respect, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Reports and estimates from the surveyors general for the year 1835.

SURVEYOR GENERAL'S OFFICE, Cincinnati, September 21, 1835.

SIR: In compliance with the request of the acting Commissioner of the General Land Office, by his letter of the 6th ultimo, I submit for your consideration the following views, in relation to the surveying operations which the public interests seem to require to be performed in this surveying department during the ensuing year, with the necessary estimate therefor.

In Ohio, it will be remembered, the survey of all the public lands is completed. I would, however, call your attention to the expediency of subdividing the "two mile blocks," as they are called, in certain townships in the northern part of the Cincinnati land district. The survey of these tracts has been repeatedly called for, and much inconvenience appears to have been suffered by purchasers of those lands for want of it. The enclosed plat (marked A) shows the townships alluded to, shaded red; and referring you to the letter on this subject, from my predecessor to the Commissioner, dated November 29, 1834, a copy of which is also enclosed, (marked B,) I respectfully recommend it to your attention.

In Indiana, you are aware, the survey of all the public lands is completed. I am informed that some portion of the reservations, held by the Miami nation of Indians, were purchased by treaty last year. But it is understood that, owing to some objectionable feature of the treaty, the President did not submit it to the Senate, and the treaty not being ratified, no survey of the lands ceded can be made.

In Michigan peninsula, there remains unsurveyed only a small portion of the lands to which the Indian title has been extinguished, and is embraced in the cession by the treaty of Saginaw, of September 24, 1819, and situated principally north of the townships numbered seventeen, north; and bounded, on the east, by Saginaw bay; on the north, by Thunder Bay river; and on the west, by the western boundary of the cession, which has not yet been surveyed. This tract is estimated to contain about eighty townships, or one million eight hundred and forty-three thousand acres, and is shown, on the accompanying diagram, (marked C,) by a red shaded boundary. Very little is known of the character of this tract of land. But it is highly probable that a fair proportion of it is suitable for cultivation; and being eligibly situated, along the margin of an extensive bay of Lake Huron, it would doubtless subserve the public interest to have the settlements extended into that part of the peninsula. I respectfully recommend, therefore, that the surveyor general be authorized to survey the western boundary of the cession, and to extend the exterior township lines throughout the remainder of the tract. Such portion of it as might be found suitable for settlement and cultivation, might then be subdivided into sections, and offered for sale.

In the Northwest (or Wisconsin) Territory, there remains to be surveyed only the tract ceded to the United States, by the united nation of Chippewa, Ottawas, and Pottawatamie Indians, by treaty of Chicago, of September 26, 1833, embraced in the Green Bay land district, and shaded red on the accompanying map (marked D). Two experienced deputy surveyors have been sent out to extend the exterior township lines through this tract, preparatory to the subdivision into sections, whenever orders for that purpose shall be received. The tract contains about one hundred and fifteen townships, or two millions six hundred and forty-nine thousand acres. This is represented as a fine body of land, and is rapidly settling by emigrants from the adjoining States. It would doubtless conduce to the public interest, as well as promote the settlement of a valuable portion of the public domain, if the subdivision of the townships into sections should be authorized so soon as the exterior lines thereof shall have been run out.

With these views, I submit the following estimate of funds that are considered requisite for the surveying operations in the department for the ensuing year:

For surveys in Ohio	$650
For surveys in Michigan Territory (peninsula)	15,000
For surveys in Northwest (or Wisconsin) Territory	26,000
For office rent	175
Fuel for three fires	75
Stationery	500
Postage on letters and packets	600
	$43,000

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

ROBERT T. LYTLE.

Hon ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

B.

SURVEYOR GENERAL'S OFFICE, Cincinnati, November 29, 1835.

SIR: In the upper part of Cincinnati land district, there are seven townships in which the "two-mile blocks" have never been subdivided into sections. These townships were surveyed, some thirty years since, by running lines each way through them, at the distance of two miles apart, dividing each township into nine squares of four sections each, in which state they have remained until now. Why they have not been further subdivided, as all the other townships in the district were, does not now appear, and there seems no good reason why they should not yet be surveyed at the expense of government.

Much of the lands lying in the townships referred to, have been sold, and, on account of the surveys thereof not being completed, difficulties have arisen, and are likely still more to arise, between purchasers, in establishing their boundaries. Applications have frequently been made to this office to have these "blocks" subdivided; and there is now before me a communication from the county surveyor of Darke county, just received, urging very earnestly the subdivision thereof.

I refer this subject to you for your consideration, and respectfully suggest the propriety of authorizing the surveyor general to cause a survey to be made of the two mile blocks in question.

The following are the townships referred to:

Township No. 19, in range No. 1, west	1st mer.
Township No. 12, in range No. 1, east	"
Township No. 14, in range No. 1, east	"
Township No. 15, in range No. 1, east and west	"
Township No. 13, in range No. 2, east	"
Township No. 10, in range No. 3, east	"
Township No. 8, in range No. 4, east	"

Situate in the Cincinnati land district.

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

M. T. WILLIAMS.

SURVEYOR GENERAL'S OFFICE, Cincinnati, September 21, 1835.

SIR: The letter of the acting Commissioner of the General Land Office, of the 6th ult., calls for a separate estimate of the expenses of this office for the next year, with a statement of the nature of the work to be performed in the office during that period; and the nature and extent of the work performed under the last year's appropriation for extra clerk-hire.

Under date of the 30th December last, in reply to a similar call, my predecessor made a report to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, respecting the manner in which the appropriation for extra clerk hire had been applied by him, a copy of which report (marked A) accompanies this. The views taken of the subject by Mr. Williams, I concur in. The necessity of adopting the course pursued by him, and the reasons which influenced him thereto, are clearly stated. The necessity which then existed, for applying the extra appropriation for clerk-hire, in the execution of the current duties of the office, has continued to exist up to the present time.

At the date of the communication above referred to, a large proportion of the surveys then under contract, remained to be returned to this office. These have since been nearly all received, together with a portion of work subsequently put under contract. In these surveys a great amount of meanders of navigable streams and lakes exist; to plat which, and to make the calculations of the contents of the minute subdivision into which fractional sections are now made, is of itself a heavy job. Besides this, we have to make triplicate plats and triplicate descriptive notes of every township and fractional township surveyed. These, with the subdivision into forty-acre lots, of the unsold, forfeited and reverted fractional sections, in the several land districts, not previously completed, and the various incidental duties of the office, together with those arising under calls from the general and district land offices, have constituted the current business of the office.

To have applied the additional allowance for clerk-hire to bringing up the old arrears, and in transcribing the field notes for preservation at the seat of government, would have compelled us to lay over a large amount of those current duties, which would have been highly detrimental to the public interests, embarrassing to the operations of the land offices, and would have retarded the sales of the public lands, so much called for.

I have, therefore, thought it best to pursue the course adopted by my predecessor, and have continued to employ on the current duties of the office our whole force. In doing this, I have felt myself justified in what appeared to be the necessity of the case; as well as by the example of my predecessor, to which no exception appears to have been taken.

The "benefits which have resulted from the appropriation of the last year for extra clerk-hire," are, I trust, sufficiently set forth in the foregoing statement, and need not be more particularly pointed out.

So soon as the plats and descriptive notes of this season's surveys can be completed, which it is hoped will be within the next quarter, it is proposed to take up the old arrears of work, and the transcribing the field notes for preservation at the seat of government. And as the surveying operations in this district in the ensuing year will probably be limited, it is expected that the whole of the additional, and perhaps part of the regular allowance for clerk-hire, can be applied to those objects. The nature and amount of those arrears are set forth in detail, in the report of the surveyor general, of the 8th of October, 1831, to which I beg leave to refer you. To that amount, however, are to be added, all the surveys made since that time, and the preparing connected maps, which, from the pressure of business of more immediate importance, has necessarily been, for several years past, laid over.

The accuracy and neatness requisite in the drawing and copying our plats, and in the recording of them in the books of the office, call for skilful and experimental draughtsmen. The recording, also, of the field notes, particularly the old surveys in Ohio and part of Indiana, require not only mechanical neatness, but an accurate knowledge of the science of surveying, in its application to the public surveys; as a considerable portion of those old field notes will need a skilful arrangement before recording. The order of talent requisite in the performance of these several duties, should be secured by an adequate compensation therefor. But from the permanent rise in the price of provisions, house rent, and cost of living in the city, I am persuaded that the allowance now made to the clerks in this office is not a fair compensation for their labor, and is not equal to that paid to clerks of the same and even inferior grades, in many of the mercantile houses, offices, and institutions in this city.

With the foregoing statement and views, I submit the following estimate for the ensuing year:

For salary of the surveyor general	$2,000
For salary of three regular clerks	2,300
For salary of five additional clerks, until the old arrears of work are brought up, and the field notes transcribed for preservation at the seat of government	4,000
	$8,300

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

ROBERT T. LYTLE.

Hon. ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner of the General Land Office, Washington.

A.

SURVEYOR GENERAL'S OFFICE, Cincinnati, December 30, 1834.

SIR: Since the receipt of your letter of the 31st of October, referring to the appropriation of $3,500, for additional clerk-hire for this office, and directing the said appropriation to be exclusively applied to the bringing up of the old arrears, left by my predecessors, I have fully considered the subject, and have arrived at the conclusion that it will be very difficult to carry your instructions into practice, without an injury to the public service.

In the first place, it will be difficult to make an entirely distinct application of the labor of a portion of the clerks to the old arrears, in such manner as to be enabled, satisfactorily, to render separate quarterly accounts. It will be found, in practice, to advance the business convenience of the office, to be allowed, occasionally, to devote the labor of the clerks appropriated to one branch of the business, to duties in another branch. And, in the second place, it is found, by the experience of the past three years, to be entirely impracticable, with the assistance of only three clerks, employed under the regular appropriation of $2,100, to execute all the current duties of the office, and the business incident to the new surveys of the public lands, which have been ordered within that time, the field work of which is now mostly executed. And it is but justice to the public service to say, that, if the surveyor general is restricted to only three clerks, in the execution of these duties, the sales of a large portion of the public lands expected by the government and the public to be held in the course of the ensuing year, must inevitably be delayed.

Since my report of the 8th October, 1831, showing the state of the records of the business of the office at that date, the amount of the public lands this office has been directed to survey and prepare for sale has been constantly and rapidly increasing, and is now near three-fold what it has been at any one time within the ten years immediately preceding the year 1832; and has greatly exceeded the amount of any former period since the establishment of the office, as the records and files of your department will show. In addition to this increase of current business, the duties imposed by the provisions of the act of the 5th of April, 1832, have occupied the time of labor of one of the best clerks in the office, from September, 1832, to the present time, in making the subdivisions of fractional sections on the records and original plats, and in preparing duplicate copies thereof for the general and district land offices, and this duty is not yet fully completed. If then, the usual appropriation, under which three clerks were employed, was insufficient to enable the surveyor general to keep up the business of the office, during the ten years preceding 1832, it will not be expected that the same number of clerks will be sufficient now, and for a year or two to come.

Under these circumstances, I respectfully suggest for your consideration the expediency of so modifying your instructions as to allow the entire appropriation for clerk-hire to be employed, so far as may be necessary, to prepare for sales the lands embraced in the late and existing contracts for surveys, and the remainder in bringing up the old arrears.

When your letter of instructions on this subject was received, the clerks then in the service of the office were employed in duties looking to the approaching sales of public lands. One half of the quarter having expired, I deemed it inexpedient to make a change until the next quarter.

The work of transcribing the field notes has not been commenced, but can be in the ensuing quarter. It is respectfully suggested that this work should progress in numerical order, in preference to the order of the date of surveys.

I shall hope to hear from you, at your earliest convenience, touching the foregoing suggestions.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. T. WILLIAMS.

SURVEYOR GENERAL'S OFFICE, Tallahassee, September 14, 1835.

SIR: In compliance with your letter of the 6th ultimo, I have the honor to inform you, that I deem it necessary for the reasons heretofore detailed in my letter of the 23d of April, and explained by diagram forwarded July 22d, to suspend the surveys south of the second parallel in the eastern land district, until the fall of 1836, as indicated in my letter of information, of the 29th ult., and to confine the surveys to a limited scale for all those reasons, of which the following constituted a summary. First, the necessity for the removal of the Indians, to enable the surveys to progress, with a necessary regard to order and correctness.

Second, the quantity of work on hand, and yet to receive, in the office, which has been greatly retarded in its preparation, from the sickness of my clerks (still continuing,) so much indeed as almost to have suspended the mechanical operations of the office for nearly three months in the present year.

I therefore propose limiting the surveys, during the next season, as follows, viz:

	Acres.	Miles.
Eleven land claims in the eastern district, decreed by the Supreme Court, at their January term, 1835, containing	199,760	330
One in the western district, decreed January term, 1835, to Colin Mitchell and others, supposed to contain	2,000,000	550
About fifty-three townships (some fractional) situated south of the principal base line in both districts, between ranges Nos. 8 and 17, as per diagram accompanying, supposed to contain	1,368,000	3,240
	3,567,760	4,120

For the survey of which, the sum of sixteen thousand four hundred and eighty dollars is requested to be appropriated by the ensuing Congress.

Respectfully, ROBERT BUTLER, Surveyor General.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, Tallahassee, September 14, 1835.

SIR: The following estimate for the surveyor general's office at Tallahassee, for the year 1836, is respectfully submitted, viz:

Salary of surveyor general	$2,000
Three clerks each, one thousand dollars	3,000
Contingent expenses for stationery, &c.	300
For copying field notes, for the office of Commissioner General Land Office at Washington city, beyond the amount appropriated in 1834 and 1835	1,000
	$6,300

GENERAL REMARK.—On the subject of the appropriation of one thousand five hundred dollars, in 1834, and five hundred dollars, in 1835, it becomes necessary to remark that they remain untouched, up to the present period, arising from the fact that no instructions were furnished this office, until the month of June last (under date 20th May at Washington;) and owing to the sickness prevalent since, I have been only enabled to make one contract on that subject, of this day's date, (a copy of which is enclosed,) but anticipate to be enabled to have the whole sum, together with the additional estimate, contracted for in this and the succeeding year.

Respectfully,

JOHN M. MOORE, Esq., Acting Commissioner. ROBERT BUTLER, Surveyor General.

This agreement, entered into between Robert Butler, surveyor general, in behalf of the United States, of the one part, and Paul M'Cormick, deputy surveyor, of the other part, both of the Territory of Florida, witnesseth, that for and in consideration of the sum of two dollars each, (to be paid quarterly by the said Butler,) the aforesaid Paul M'Cormick agrees to make fair and literal transcripts of all such field books of the surveyed townships of the public lands, &c., as may be furnished him from the surveyor's office, from time to time, in the form prescribed, and certify at the end of each respectively, as required in the oath hereto appended.

In testimony whereof, we hereby bind ourselves. Done at Tallahassee, Florida, this 14th day of September, 1835.

ROBERT BUTLER, Surveyor General.
PAUL M'CORMICK, Deputy Surveyor.

Personally appeared before me, John Rea, a justice of the peace for the county of Leon and Territory of Florida, Paul M'Cormick, a deputy surveyor, who made oath according to law, that he will, in conformity with the foregoing agreement, make out fair and literal transcripts of all the field books of the surveyed townships of public lands which shall be furnished him from the surveyor's office, from time to time, and certify at the end of each respectively that "the foregoing is a literal transcript from the original," and thereto sign his name, in conformity with the provisions of this obligation.

PAUL M'CORMICK, Deputy Surveyor.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 14th day of September, 1835.

JOHN REA, Justice of the Peace.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, Little Rock, Sept. 30, 1835.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of the acting Commissioner's letter of the 6th ult.

The following is a copy of the estimate of the expenses of this office, for the ensuing year, this day transmitted to the Register of the United States Treasury, viz.:

For surveying public lands	$25,000
" salary of surveyor general	1,500
" salary of regular clerks	1,800
" salary of extra clerks	1,000
" postage	125
" stationery	100
" office furniture and printing	75

In a very short time, I shall be enabled to designate and transmit to your department a statement showing the particular sections of country which the public interest, as well as the interest of the people of Arkansas, requires should be surveyed at an early period. A communication on this subject would have been made at an earlier date, had it not been for ill health, which has been my constant companion for the last six or eight months. In answer to that part of the acting Commissioner's letter, requiring a statement showing the manner in which the last year's appropriation for extra clerk-hire has been applied, I have to state that the first expenditures under the appropriation for extra clerk-hire for the years 1834 and 1835, were not commenced until the second quarter of the present year. Two clerks were then employed, whose duties have been exclusively copying notes of surveys for transmission to the General Land Office.

The surveyor general would have employed clerks on this appropriation at an earlier period, but waited for instructions from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, to be informed of the particular duties to be performed by clerks employed under that appropriation.

Both the clerks employed as aforesaid have had considerable sickness during the summer, and one of them for upward of three months (from ill health) was unable to attend to business. Notwithstanding so much sickness, the notes of the surveys of 1,500 miles have been copied, and when indexed and compared with the original, will be in readiness for your department. I have no hesitation in giving it as my decided opinion, that the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office should be furnished with a certified copy of all surveys in which the general government is interested, from every surveyor general's office in the United States, and that this work ought to have been commenced years ago. I am further of opinion, that fire-proof offices should be constructed for every surveyor's office belonging to our government. The labor and expense of copying the notes of all the surveys in the Territory will prove no inconsiderable matter, but the accomplishment of the object is of so much importance to the government, that the labor and expense necessary thereto ought not to be taken into consideration. I therefore recommend in the most earnest manner a continuation of the appropriation for that object. The regular clerks of the office have been engaged in bringing up arrears of plats, preparing plats for the land offices, and other duties incident to the surveying department. To prepare plats for the land offices is the principal duty of the mathematician and draughtsman, and the increasing operations in the field will give constant employment to the number of regular clerks allowed this office.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant, J. S. CONWAY.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, Little Rock, October 23, 1835.

SIR: Herewith you will receive a sketch map of Arkansas, on which the exterior lines of townships that have been surveyed are marked with black lines. The townships that have been subdivided are designated by the letter "S." The exterior lines of townships now under contract are drawn with red lines. The townships now under contract for subdivision are designated by the letter "C."

As a latitude was given to some of the deputy surveyors to select such townships for subdivision as would most promote the public interest, the return of their notes may show the sketch to be slightly incorrect in that particular.

The country which I would recommend to be surveyed, is represented on the sketch in green and red; that portion colored green is estimated at 60 townships, and at $4 per mile; that colored red is estimated at 49 townships, and at $3 per mile. The following is an estimate of the expense of surveying the country represented on the sketch as described, viz:

234 miles exteriors, at $4 per mile	$936 00
3,600 miles subdivision, do. do	14,400 00
100 miles meanders, do. do	400 00
Total at $4 per mile	$15,736 00
534 miles exteriors, at $3 per mile	$1,602 00
2,940 miles subdivision do. do	8,820 00
Total at $3 per mile	$10,422 00
Making a sum total of	$26,158 00
Estimate, as per letter 30th ultimo	25,000 00
Excess	$1,158 00

This estimate and designation of country is predicated on information obtained from members of the Territorial legislature, other individuals from various sections of the country, and of my personal observation. Subsequent inquiry may render it proper to substitute a small portion of country, not enumerated, for that which is. The information, however, is believed to be substantially correct, and given with a view to promote the public interest.

The accompanying map is incomplete, further than to exhibit the progress of the public surveys.

I am, sir, respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. S. CONWAY.

E. A. BROWN, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office, Washington City.

SURVEYOR GENERAL'S OFFICE, Donaldsonville, September 30, 1835.

SIR: In compliance with the letter from your office of the 6th ultimo, I have the honor to enclose a copy of the estimate transmitted to the Register of the Treasury, and to inform you that the appropriation for extra clerk-hire, for last year, has been applied in aid of the regular clerks in bringing up the following arrears, to wit:

In district north of Red river.—Twelve townships have been calculated; of which ten have been protracted, and the maps and descriptive notes made out in triplicate, and the field notes recorded; also one township map subdivided, calculated, made out in triplicate and recorded.

In the southwestern district.—Forty townships have been protracted and calculated, and the maps and descriptive notes, and separate plats, and certificates made out in triplicate, and all the field notes; and also, eight of the maps recorded, and the field notes of seven townships copied for the General Land Office; also, six township maps subdivided, calculated and made out, triplicate.

In the southeastern district.—Five townships have been protracted, calculated, and the maps, descriptive notes, and separate plats, and certificates made out in triplicate, and the township maps recorded.

In the St. Helena district.—Two township maps have been protracted, but for want of evidences of confirmation (this office not being provided with the record of confirmed claims) they, together with 406 separate plats already made out in triplicate, remain unapproved and unrecorded.

Two difficulties occurred to prevent my attempting to bring up the arrears in regular order as to time; one was the want of complete copies of all the confirmations by which the accuracy of the locations of the private claims might be tested, prior to the record thereof being made complete; the other was the necessity of expediting the return of particular townships, to give claimants, under the pre-emption law of 1834, an opportunity of securing their lands.

The first of these difficulties can only be obviated by adopting some means of procuring from the registers of the St. Helena, the southwestern, and district north of Red river, complete copies of all the confirmations and reports of claims which should have been forwarded to this office by the several boards of commissioners. If the printed documents called for by the Senate do not furnish them, it would be necessary to employ clerks to make them out, and in that event, there should be compensation for two extra clerks for one year added to my estimate for 1836, say $1,600.

It is to be regretted that in the organization of this office, the compensation for regular clerks was not in proportion to the current business of so extensive and important a district, where the vast number of private claims, and traversed streams, render the protraction and calculation so intricate and tedious, and where it would have contributed so much to the improvement of the country and the account of sales of the public land.

The estimate for the district north of Red river is intended to be applied to the survey of the land bordering on Red river, immediately below the Arkansas line, and the country between the Ouachita and Black river and the Mississippi. A large portion of it was formerly subject to inundation, but since the construction of partial levees on the margin of the Mississippi river, the value of the land has been greatly enhanced, and it attracts general interest.

In the southwestern district, it is deemed desirable to have the country bordering on the Sabine river surveyed.

The estimate for the surveying of private claims, and resurveying in that district, is intended for the correction and closing of the Rapides and Attakapas districts, which have been under contract for many years, in which the surveyors were permitted to return separate tracts without connection to the township lines, and which can only be closed now by a resurvey of at least part of those tracts.

The resurvey contemplated in the southeastern district, is deemed indispensably necessary on account of the numerous errors and the confused condition of the notes of the former surveys.

I have no doubt but a similar course will be found necessary in the St. Helena district, but the extent of the errors in that district cannot be ascertained without a copy of the confirmations and orders of survey.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

H. T. WILLIAMS, Surveyor General, Louisiana.

ETHAN A. BROWN, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office.

SURVEYOR GENERAL'S OFFICE, Donaldsonville, September 30, 1835.

SIR: In compliance with your letter of the 4th instant, I have the honor to submit the following estimate of expenses of surveying, which the public interest requires in this State, during the year 1836, to wit:

Surveying 4,200 miles of public land in the district north of Red river, La. at $4 per mile	$16,800
Surveying 1,200 miles of public land in the southwestern district, at $4 per mile	4,800
Surveying and resurvey of incomplete townships, including public lands and private claims in said district, at $4 per mile, believed to be about 1,000 miles	4,000
Surveying of public lands near Lake Pontchartrain, and east of the city of New-Orleans, southeastern district, 1,250 miles, at $4 per mile	5,000
Resurvey of private claims and public lands in West Baton Rouge, the surveys of which are incorrect, southeastern district, 500 miles, at $4	2,000
Surveying public lands in the district east of the island of New Orleans, 600 miles, at $4 per mile	2,400
If the treaty with the Caddo Indians should be concluded and ratified, there should be added to the above, for surveying 2,250 miles, at $4 per mile	9,000
Salary of surveyor general	2,000
" clerks allowed by law	1,500
Postage on letters and packages	150
Stationery, &c	200
Office rent and fuel	220
	$39,070

In addition to the above, it is deemed essential to the public interest, that this office should have one more draughtsman and two clerks, to aid in the performance of the ordinary business of the office, and gradually bring up arrears, at an aggregate compensation of $2,800.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. T. WILLIAMS, Surveyor General, Louisiana.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, Florence, Ala., September 15, 1835.

SIR: The indisposition of my family, and the unhealthiness of the season, for the last six weeks, have delayed the acknowledgment of the receipt of your letter of the 6th August, calling on this office for the estimates for the year 1836.

I beg leave to make the following report:

Nearly all the public lands to which the Indian title has been extinguished, have been surveyed as far as it is practicable. There yet remain some surveys of the public lands and private claims in the St. Stephen's land district, which it is presumed will be surveyed during the ensuing winter. Two thousand five hundred dollars will cover the expenses.

Should the government succeed in obtaining the lands of the Cherokee tribe, lying within the limits of the State, and order them surveyed during the next year, an amount of twenty thousand dollars will be required for that purpose, as it is estimated that there are about seventy townships in its limits.

Should the line between Georgia and Alabama be permanently established during the next year, the sum of one thousand dollars will be required for the completion and connection of the public surveys with that line.

The expenses of this office will require:

For salary of surveyor general	$2,000
Clerk and draughtsman, $1,000 each	2,000
Contingent expenses of office, including books for copying original field notes	300
	$4,300

Congress appropriated, at the session before last, twenty-five hundred dollars, and at the last session one thousand dollars more, making thirty-five hundred dollars, "for additional clerk-hire," in order to bring up the arrears, and transcribing the field notes of said office, for the purpose of having them preserved at the seat of government.

Of this sum, fourteen hundred and five dollars and fifty-six cents will have been expended at the close of this quarter. The field notes have all been copied for the General Land Office, and are now being examined, and will be transmitted to the General Land Office during the present autumn. When done, the force will be immediately applied to copying the originals into strong bound books, for preservation in this office.

The fund remaining will be more than sufficient for their completion. The ordinary appropriation for clerk-hire will be sufficient for all the purposes necessary to the prompt and faithful discharge of the duties of this office.

Recapitulation.

Survey of public lands and private claims in St. Stephens land district	$2,500
Survey of Cherokee lands, if acquired	20,000
Survey of Creek lands on Georgia line	1,000
Salary of surveyor general	2,000
Salary of clerk and draughtsman	2,000
Contingent expenses of office	300
	$27,800

All of which is respectfully submitted.

I have the honor to be, with great respect,

JAS. H. WEAKLY.

Hon. ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, General Land Office, December 5, 1835.

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1340. [1ST SESSION.

FINAL REPORTS OF THE BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS ON PRIVATE LAND CLAIMS IN MISSOURI, UNDER THE ACT OF JULY 9, 1832.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE DECEMBER 15, 1835.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 10, 1835.

SIR: I have the honor to submit, herewith, for the consideration of the Senate, two bound volumes, containing the final reports of the Boards of Commissioners at St. Louis, under the act of July 9, 1832, entitled, "An act for the final adjustment of private land claims in Missouri," and of the act supplementary thereto, upon the claims to land in that State. One of the volumes contains their reports upon claims Nos. 256 to 345, inclusive, in the first class, and the other contains their reports upon claims Nos. 1 to 152, inclusive, except No. 20, which is stated to have been withdrawn by them, in the second class.

[For the report upon land claims, Nos. 1 to 142, see vol. 6, No. 1,173, February 5, 1834.
For report upon said claims, from Nos. 143 to 255 inclusive, see vol. 7, No. 1,336, March 3, 1835.]

As the voluminous character of these reports would prevent this office from making duplicate copies thereof for the two Houses of Congress, within a reasonable time, the original reports are now transmitted to the Senate, with a request that they may be placed in the possession of the House of Representatives, whenever the Senate shall have acted upon the subject.

It being very important that this office should be in possession of the originals of all the reports upon private land claims, I have to request that those now transmitted may be returned after the final action of Congress thereon.

With great respect, I have the honor to be, &c.

ETHAN A. BROWN.

The PRESIDENT of the Senate of the United States.

OFFICE OF THE RECORDER OF LAND TITLES, St. Louis, Missouri, September 30, 1835.

TO HON. ETHAN ALLEN BROWN, Commissioner of the General Land Office:

SIR: The recorder and commissioners appointed under the act of Congress entitled "An act for the final adjustment of private land claims in Missouri," approved July 9, 1832, and the act supplementary thereto, approved March 2, 1833, beg leave to lay before you the result of their proceedings since the last report.

In prosecuting the examination of the claims, the commissioners have endeavored to confine themselves strictly to the duties prescribed by the laws under which they acted, which require of them "to examine all the unconfirmed claims to land in that State (Missouri), heretofore filed in the office of the said recorder, according to law, founded upon any incomplete grant, concession, warrant, or order of survey, issued by the authority of France or Spain, prior to the tenth day of March, one thousand eight hundred and four; and to class the same so as to show, first, what claims, in their opinion, would in fact have been confirmed, according to the laws, usages, and customs of the Spanish government, and the practice of the Spanish authorities under them, at New Orleans, if the government under which said claims originated and continued in Missouri; and, secondly, what claims in their opinion are destitute of merit, in law or equity, under such laws, usages, customs, and practice of the Spanish authorities aforesaid."

By an examination of the documentary evidence submitted with this and the former reports of the board, it may be readily seen that the practice under the French and Spanish authorities, with the usages and customs from the first settlement of Louisiana to the time of its delivery to the authorities of the United States, has uniformly been, for those persons having the civil and military government of the provinces, commonly called lieutenant governors, sub-delegates, &c., to grant lands to the inhabitants, and to emigrants to the country, accompanied by an order of survey directed to the surveyor general; and if the duties of that officer did not permit to execute the survey with promptness, the grantee was permitted to take possession of the land as property vested, until such a time as a survey could be had. These concessions and orders of survey were made by the officers from a personal knowledge of the qualifications of the petitioners, or upon letters or certificates of the commandants of the posts within whose districts the applicants lived, and the land was situated. To perfect those incomplete titles, it was necessary for the parties interested to forward their concessions, together with plats and certificates of survey, to the governor or intendant general at New Orleans, who alone was competent to give the titles in form. The difficulty and expense of procuring a survey; the great distance from Upper Louisiana to New Orleans, together with the large amount which it cost to get a title completed; the scarcity of money among the settlers at that early day; and, last though not least, the indulgence uniformly extended to the inhabitants of the provinces by the French and Spanish governments; all, combined, have, in the opinion of the board, rendered the grantees, generally, too supine to take the necessary steps to procure perfect titles.

The confidence and security which the ancient inhabitants of Upper Louisiana had in those incomplete titles, is strongly evidenced by the fact of so few being perfected, even among those who had been in possession under their grants from twenty to forty years previous to the change of government; indeed the whole correspondence held between the governor or intendant general and the lieutenant governors of Upper Louisiana, which has come to the knowledge of the board, shows conclusively that it was assigned to the latter, as sub-delegates, to make the grants, and to the former to perfect the titles. This question has, however, been fully settled by the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Chouteau et al. vs. the United States; where the court declare the lieutenant governors to be, by virtue of their office, sub-delegates, with power to make grants. It is, perhaps, unnecessary to carry the argument further than it has been done, to sustain the principles which the board laid down as a ground of their report in 1833, to which you are again most respectfully referred, the same having governed in the decisions made on the claims which accompany the present; and it is no small degree of gratification to the members of the board, to find those principles sustained in their most important points, by the supreme judicial authority of the nation, so far as they have been called upon to decide; and it is confidently believed that the remaining points, of minor consideration, will be equally sustained by the same enlightened tribunal, whenever brought before them. In the case above cited, the court goes on to say, that "orders of survey made by the lieutenant governors of Upper Louisiana, are the foundation of title, and are capable of being perfected into complete titles; that they are property capable of being alienated, of being subject to debts; and is, as such, to be held as sacred and inviolate as other property." And, in the case of Charles D. Delassus, the court hold this language, in adverting to the treaty of cession: "The right of property then is protected and secured by the treaty, and no principle is better settled in this country, than that an inchoate title to land is property; independent of treaty stipulations, this right would be held sacred. The sovereign who acquires an inhabited territory acquires full dominion over it; but this dominion is never supposed to divest the vested right of individuals to property. The language of the treaty ceding Louisiana excludes every idea of interfering with private property, of transferring lands which have been severed from the royal domain. The people change their sovereign; their rights to property remain unaffected by the change."

The great difficulty the land claimants had to contend with, was the imputation of fraud cast upon their claims; the instructions of Mr. Gallatin, (the then Secretary of the Treasury,) of the 8th September, 1806, appear to have been founded upon a charge of that nature, and show the imperfect knowledge had at that early day, of the customs and regulations which governed in granting lands in the Spanish provinces. By those instructions, the whole burden of proof was thrown upon the claimant, and a failure in any one point decided the claim to be surreptitious. It was required of the claimant, by the former board, to give evidence of the verity of his papers; this was in many instances impracticable, from the absence of the officer, and the circumstance of no regular records having been kept. And it was further required to show the legal authority of the officer making the grant; this in no instance could be done, as the law of the country was the will of the sovereign, known only through the acts of the officer who represented him. No parol testimony was admitted to establish this fact, nor were there any written laws to be found; and the few letters of instructions which have since been filed in relation to the establishments in Upper Louisiana, were either rejected by or withheld from, the former board. Since the organization of the present board, its members have assiduously sought for the evidence to sustain the general charge of fraud, which has been made here and elsewhere, against the land claims. Their efforts in that respect have, for the most part, been unavailing; but it is believed they have, in some instances, saved the government from imposition; and it is their conviction that there are but few, if any, of the claims which have been placed in the first class, that would not stand the most rigid scrutiny of a court of justice, and will be found nothing more than what is strictly due to the claimants from the justice of Congress, and the plighted faith of the nation, given in a solemn treaty.

The policy of Spain with regard to her colonies in this country, was evidently of a most liberal and munificent character, and such as has ever characterized the policy of all other European nations towards their American colonies; none looked to their lands as a source of revenue, but distributed them liberally to the settlers; and he who encountered the losses, privations, and dangers, incident to making new establishments in the wilderness provinces in the New World, was considered as one possessing the strongest claims on the bounty of the government; it being a matter of much importance to the former governments of this country to strengthen, by a numerous population, their distant posts on the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, and give to them that permanency of character which would enable them to prevent the inroads of their British neighbors on the north, and hold in check the numerous bands of savages that molested them on every side.

The small number of the first emigrants to Upper Louisiana, and the warlike character of the surrounding tribes of Indians, compelled the pioneer settlers to establish themselves in villages, and to cultivate but small tracts in their immediate vicinity. Anticipating, at some future day, that their numbers would be sufficient to justify them in extending their settlements, they applied to the authorities and obtained grants for more remote tracts, which they looked upon as the future homes of their families, and some remuneration for the many dangers and privations encountered by them in making their first establishments in the country.

The present report includes ninety claims, which are placed in the first class, numbered from 256 to 345, inclusive, and are respectfully recommended for confirmation; and 152 claims which they have placed in the second class, numbered from 1 to 152, inclusive, not considering them possessed of sufficient merit to justify a report in their favor. The translations of the concessions and other documents appertaining to each class of claims, accompany this report, and are numbered to suit the particular transcripts to which they belong.

Previous to deciding upon the large claim of the heirs and legal representatives of Jacques Clamorgan, which is placed in the second class, No. 152, the board had recourse to all the documents in the different offices connected with the land department, having any connection with this claim, and find it to contain an area of about 80,000 acres, as exhibited by the accompanying plat marked A, within the bounds of which, or interfering with its lines, as designated on the plat, Zenon Trudeau, as lieutenant governor and sub-delegate, granted prior to the 3d day of March, 1797, (the date of the concession by him to Clamorgan,) fifteen hundred and twenty-four arpens, to seven different persons; and, subsequently, to eleven other individuals, twelve thousand and sixty-six arpens. Charles D. Delassus, during the term of his administration, viz. from August, 1799, to the 10th of March, 1804, granted to thirty-nine individuals, twenty-one thousand nine hundred and seventy-eight arpens; all of which have been confirmed by the former board of commissioners and recorder of land titles, with the addition of twenty-three thousand nine hundred and eighty acres, granted to fifty-six claimants, under the 2d section of the act of Congress of 1805, making the aggregate amount of about seventy-six thousand six hundred acres, confirmed by the government of the United States, within, or interfering with the claim now set up by the representatives of Clamorgan, as will be seen by reference to list marked B, obtained from the surveyor general's office at St. Louis, where the names and number of original claimants are set forth; and for the amount of lands entered, within the bounds of this claim, reference is made to list C, obtained from the register of the land office at St. Louis; and it is believed the present board have recommended other claims to the favorable consideration of Congress, which are located within the lines of this tract.

The great importance of this claim has induced the commissioners to make a careful examination of every fact in connection with it. The grants made by Trudeau prior and subsequent to the date of this to Clamorgan, the great number made by his successor Delassus, and the circumstance of the surveyor general having had no notice of the grant made to Clamorgan, as evidenced by his making, or causing to be made, surveys of nearly all the tracts granted, interfering with his claim, would seem to show that this grant to Clamorgan was not regarded by the officers of the Spanish government, or was abandoned by the claimant himself, soon after it was obtained.

The board take occasion to say that the concession, and the accompanying documents, which have been presented to them, give no evidence of being surreptitious, and they feel fully convinced that it was the intention of the government of the country to make the claimant compensation for his expenditures in maintaining a military force to protect the trade on the Missouri; but it is evident, from the subsequent acts of the same officer who made the grant, and his successor, that there must have been some further procedure in relation to the claim, which has not been brought to light before any of the tribunals of this government appointed for the adjustment of land titles; and it is further evidenced by the acts of the surveyor general of Upper Louisiana, (an officer known to be punctilious in the discharge of his duty,) that he never could have been notified by Clamorgan of his grant, or the surveys under his jurisdiction, subsequent to the date of this grant, would not have been permitted, and the lieutenant governor would have been notified by the surveyor of the interference of Clamorgan's grant with the seven claims previously granted and surveyed. These circumstances induce the board to believe that the claimant abandoned his claim, with the knowledge of the officers, to seek remuneration otherwise, or has been guilty of a neglect of his privileges under the grant, which would amount to a forfeiture. The board, therefore, could not recommend this claim for confirmation, believing that, had the government of Spain been continued over this country to this day, the tract, as designated, would not be confirmed to the claimants; but it is more than probable that, if the remuneration had not been made, which seems was intended by this grant, a location might be permitted in some part of the domain where it would not be prejudicial to others.

The board regrets to say, they have not been able to complete the investigation of all the claims in Missouri that the laws, under which they acted, made it their duty to examine. The prevalence of the cholera, and resignation of Mr. Updike, prevented a report being made the first year; and, subsequently, the resignation of Messrs. Linn and Harrison, and other unavoidable interruptions of the proceedings, left long intervals in which the board was not full; and being under the belief that it required the attendance of all its members to make decisions, little else was done in those intervals than to take testimony and prepare the transcripts from the old records.

There yet remains to be acted on about seven hundred claims within the State of Missouri, and it is respectfully but earnestly recommended to Congress to continue the investigations until the business is finally completed. This, we think, is due to the interests of both the state and general governments, as well as to that of the individuals immediately concerned. It should not be concealed, that the recent decisions of the Supreme Court have created much uneasiness among persons holding title to lands, under the United States, which are claimed by concessions and orders of survey under the French and Spanish governments. If we understand the decisions of the court correctly, the treaty of cession protects those claims as private property, and the United States are bound to perfect the incomplete grants made by the former governments. This being the case, we conceive it to present a subject of great and important consideration, calling for the early action of Congress. Appeals to the judiciary, by claimants, to establish their rights vested under a former government, and guaranteed by treaty, will seldom be forced upon them by the government of the United States, and certainly never, when Congress is properly informed on the subject.

The plan adopted by the board in making up the transcripts of the claims, exhibits, at one view, the whole subject, and will enable Congress to dispose of them according to their respective merits.

It is a work of much time and labor to trace the claims through the old records, which are voluminous and defective in their arrangement; but it is thought by the board, that all the claims within the State of Missouri which have been recorded and not reported on, might be fully examined and classed in two years after the reorganization of the board, provided Congress should pass an act to that effect.

No. 256.—William McHugh, sr., claiming 640 acres.

No.	Name of original claimant	Acres.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
256	William McHugh, sr.	640	Settlement right.		1,320 arpens by John Harvey, D. S., 14th February, 1806; certified by A. Soulard, surveyor general, 21st February, 1806; Ramsay's creek, 45 miles N. W. of St. Charles.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

St. Louis, December 15, 1813.—James Morrison, assignee of William McHugh, sr., claiming 800 arpens of land on Bryan's, otherwise called Lost creek, county of St. Charles.

Frederick Dickson, duly sworn, says that witness saw claimant, McHugh, sr., inhabiting this tract of land in 1802, at which time he had corn for his use. In the following year, 1803, said McHugh, sr., raised good crops of corn, wheat, &c., and still inhabited the premises, and moved off to avoid the Indians, who made an inroad into the settlements in the fall of 1803. To the best of witness's recollection McHugh, sr., had a wife and eight children living with him in 1803. McHugh died two years, or about that time, having remained in the settlement until his death with his family, or that part thereof as escaped the scalping-knife, several of them having been killed by the Indians. (See Bates's minutes, page 78.)

(The following ought to have been entered first:)

August 7, 1807.—The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: the Hon. John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates.

James Morrison, assignee of William McHugh and wife, claiming 1,320 arpens of land, under the second section of the act of Congress of March 2, 1805, produces a deed from said McHugh and wife, dated April 23, 1803, and a plat and certificate of survey, dated February 14, 1806, and certified February 21, same year.

Jonathan Bryant, being duly sworn, says that he knows the above claim, and that William McHugh settled on it in 1801, and lived in a camp until some time in July of the same year; planted about two acres of corn and tended it; and that he and the greatest part of his family was taken sick and moved away; and that he had a wife and nine children at that time.

William Ewing, duly sworn, says that the said McHugh had some of his cattle killed by the Indians, and the witness says he saw the Indians carrying away some beef that they had killed, at the same time, and that he was living in the house with said McHugh, and that he was alarmed, and believed that the said McHugh and the rest of his family were also; that in consequence they all moved off, and that they were ten or twelve miles beyond any other settlement, and that the said McHugh had three children killed by the Indians at the place of his last removal, about the year 1804. Laid over for decision. (See book No. 3, page 54.)

December 2, 1809.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

James Morrison, assignee of William McHugh, claiming 1,320 arpens of land. (See book No. 3, page 54.) It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 4, page 218.)

July 6, 1833.—L. F. Linn, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

William McHugh, sr., alias McGue, claiming 640 acres, joining the tract of William Ramsay, sr., on Ramsay's lick.

Ira Cottle, being duly sworn, says that he well knew McHugh; that he had a considerable large family; that he had a house and a truck-patch on said piece of land, adjoining Ramsay's lick; that McHugh was on said piece of land in 1803, and that his children were killed on said place, by the Indians, in 1804. (See No. 6, page 215.)

February 15, 1834.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Produces a survey of 1,320 arpens, executed by John Harvey, D. S., dated February 14, 1806, and certified by Antoine Soulard on February 21, 1806.

Nathaniel Simonds, being duly sworn, says that he is fifty-eight years of age; that he became acquainted with the original claimant, McHugh, in the spring of the year 1802, and knows the tract claimed; that in May or June of the year 1803, he was on said tract, and saw corn, potatoes, cabbages, and such vegetables as was usual at that time to plant, growing on said place. He does not now recollect how much was then in cultivation, but supposes there were some four, five, or six acres, which were enclosed by a fence. There was a cabin and smoke-house on the place at the time above mentioned. He further says, that McHugh had at that time eight or ten children; that this settlement was about fifteen miles from the main settlement; that the neighboring Indians were considered hostile; that there had been Indian signs seen near McHugh's; a cow beast had been killed, as supposed by them, and this deponent had gone there to aid McHugh to collect his stock and remove his family to the main settlement, which they did immediately; that in September, 1804, the Indians killed three of the sons of said McHugh; that said McHugh continued to reside in the country until his death, which took place about the year 1809 or 1810. (See book No. 6, page 499.)

October 8, 1834.—The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. S. Mayfield, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

In the case of William McHugh, alias McGue, claiming 640 acres of land. (See book No. 6, page 215.)

The testimony here below was taken by G. A. Harrison, late commissioner, under a resolution of the board, passed May 13, 1833.

Clarksville, May 24, 1833.—James Burnes, being duly sworn, upon his oath says, that at least two years before a change of government, and at the same time that William Ramsay came to that place, said McHugh cultivated a place on McHugh's creek; that after Ramsay was driven off by the Indians, about 1804, said McHugh was put in possession of said Ramsay's land, by Ramsay, as he supposes; that said McHugh had at that time a wife and nine children.

Joseph McCoy, being duly sworn, upon his oath says, that having heard the above testimony of James Burnes, the same is in all things substantially true, as he believes and recollects. (See book No. 7, page 20.)

June 8, 1835.—The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

William McHugh, sr., claiming 640 acres of land. (See book No. 6, page 215; No. 7, page 20.)

The board are of opinion that 640 acres of land ought to be granted to the said William McHugh, sr., or to his legal representatives, according to possession. (See book No. 7, page 168.)

JAMES H. RELFE,
F. R. CONWAY.

I have examined the transcript of the above claim, and concur in the decision.

No. 257.—William Ramsay, sr., claiming 748 arpens 8 perches.

No.	Name of original claimant.	Arpens.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
257	William Ramsay, sr.	748 8 pr.	Settlement right.		John McKinney, D. S. 20th February, 1806; received for record by A. Soulard, surveyor general, February, 1806.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

December 5, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

William Ramsay, claiming 748 arpens 68 (8) perches of land, district of St. Charles. Produces record of a plat of survey, dated February 20, 1806, certified February, 1806.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See No. 5, page 485.)

March 26, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

William Ramsay, sr., claiming 748 arpens 8 perches of land, situate on Ramsay's creek. (See record-book B, page 239; minutes, No. 5, page 485.)

The following testimony was taken in Clarksville, on May 24, 1833, by A. G. Harrison, then one of the commissioners:

Ralph H. Flaugherty, duly sworn, says, that before the change of government took place, William Ramsay was living on a tract of land on a creek called Ramsay's creek, named after the claimant; that said Ramsay's family, while living there, having been taken sick, he left there and came down to witness's father's house, where he stayed some time. Witness says he does not recollect certainly the precise time that Ramsay was in possession of said land, but is sure it was before the change of government took place. At the time that Ramsay was in possession of said land, he, the said Ramsay, had a wife and five children.

James Burnes, being duly sworn, upon his oath says, that at least two years before the change of the Spanish to the American government, he knew the said William Ramsay cultivated a farm on what is now called Bryan's creek; that on said creek there is a spring called Ramsay's lick, which is on the above tract of land; that said Ramsay had houses, stables, and a field of at least twenty acres; was in the habit of selling corn to the neighborhood. That one Bryan also lived on said creek, near the above, from whom said creek took its name; that said creek is frequently mistaken for another creek higher up, called Ramsay's creek, where said Ramsay made a hunting-camp, and split some rails; that at the time of the possession aforesaid, said Ramsay had a wife and several children; that said land is about ten or eleven miles below Clarksville, and about two miles and a half above where said Bryan's creek empties into King's lake; that witness has frequently been at Ramsay's house, and would be able now to identify the place.

Joseph McCoy, being duly sworn, upon his oath says, that before the change of the Spanish government he was quite a youth, and lived near where Troy now stands, about sixteen or seventeen miles from the land above described; that he does not recollect ever to have been at Ramsay's before the change of government, but often heard it said that the said Ramsay lived at a place on the creek now called Bryan's creek, near a Mr. Bryan, who gave name thereto; that he has since frequently seen the improvements of said Ramsay. He further says that he has frequently heard many persons call said creek Ramsay's creek, through mistake, as he supposes, from the circumstance of Ramsay's lick being thereon; that Ramsay's creek is higher up, where he understands Ramsay made a hunting-camp, and split some rails; that Bryan's creek is even yet frequently mistaken for Ramsay's creek; that he has often been called on to know if he could show certain lands on Ramsay's creek, (so expressed by the inquirer;) that in course of conversation he would ascertain it was on Bryan's creek, (now so called,) and that he knew the places well. That Bryan's creek was by them called Ramsay's creek, but he always called another creek higher up Ramsay's creek.

Jonathan Bryant, being duly sworn, says that, in 1801, at what is called Ramsay's lick, on Bryan's creek, William Ramsay, sr., settled and cultivated a tract of land, made some improvements, as building cabins, clearing ground, &c., and left there in company with witness on account of sickness, in 1801, and left a man by the name of McHugh to take care of the place.

Joshua Stogsdill, being duly sworn, says that William Ramsay, sr., lived on and cultivated a place on Bryan's creek, in 1801 or 1802; that witness lived with said Ramsay on said place about eight weeks, at the time said Ramsay's family was sick, and left there a few days before the death of his wife; that said Ramsay had about fifteen or twenty acres of corn, stables, and other buildings on said place. (See book No. 7, page 105.)

The following testimony was taken and entered on the minutes, on the 6th of July, 1833, but was not then transcribed, the agent for claimant having entered this claim, by mistake, for 1,100 arpens, which quantity was not found of record:

July 6, 1833.—L. F. Linn, commissioner, appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

William Ramsay, sr., by his legal representatives, claiming 1,100 (748 8 perches) arpens of land, situated on Ramsay's lick.

Ira Cottle, being duly sworn, says that he knew William Ramsay, sr., in 1802; that he then was cultivating land on Bryan's creek, at the saline, since called after him, Ramsay's lick; that said Ramsay cultivated on a grand scale, had a considerable stock, had quite a large farm, and was strong handed; that he understood, and believes, that, about the year 1804, he is not now certain of the year, there were several families killed in Mr. Ramsay's neighborhood; that McHugh's family were killed, and this was the cause of Ramsay's leaving said place. (See book No. 6, page 214.)

June 8, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

William Ramsey, sr., claiming 748 arpens and 8 perches of land. (See book No. 6, page 214; No. 7, 105.)

The board are of opinion that 748 arpens and 8 perches of land ought to be granted to the said William Ramsey, sr., or to his legal representatives, according to the survey. (See book No. 7, page 169.)

No. 258.—Benjamin Gardiner, claiming 750 arpens.

No.	Name of original claimant.	Arpens.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
258	Benjamin Gardiner.	750	Settlement right.		Daniel Boon, D. S. 24th February, 1806. Received for record by Soulard, February 28, 1806. On the Missouri.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

November 19, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Benjamin Gardiner, heirs of, claiming 750 arpens of land, situate in Missouri, district of St. Charles, produces record of a plat of survey, dated 24th, and certified 28th February, 1806.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 5, page 426.)

January 27, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Benjamin Gardiner, by his heirs, claiming 750 arpens of land. (See record-book B, page 255; minutes, No. 5, page 426.)

Jonathan Bryan, being duly sworn, says that he is in the 76th year of his age; that he came to this country in the year 1800, in company with Benjamin Gardiner, in whose right the above tract is claimed; that he knows the tract claimed; that Gardiner built a cabin on the place in the latter part of the year 1801, and moved in it in that year; that in the year 1802 he raised a crop of corn on the place, he thinks about five acres. The said Gardiner had no wife; his sister lived with and kept house for him. Witness thinks he continued to occupy the place about one year; he was in the habit of hunting and trapping; that he made three trips of from four to six months each. He started on a fourth trip, and was taken sick and returned to the settlement, and died in the year 1805; that said Gardiner raised a crop of corn at Samuel Watkins's, in the year 1801, about five miles from the place claimed. (See book No. 7, page 94.)

March 9, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Benjamin Gardiner, claiming 750 arpens of land. (See No. 7, page 94.) Isaac Darst, being duly sworn, says that he is in the 46th year of his age; that he was well acquainted with Benjamin Gardiner, and knows the tract of land claimed; that Gardiner was neighbor to witness's father; that he settled the place claimed in the year 1802, and in that year, or in 1803, he, witness, saw corn growing on the said place; that Gardiner had at that time some eight or ten acres enclosed, and about half that quantity under cultivation in corn. Gardiner went out frequently on hunting expeditions. The last trip he made he was taken sick while out, was brought into the settlement, and died in a short time thereafter. Witness was present at his death. He was a single man, and appeared to be above the age of 21 years at the time he settled the place, and was well thought of by his neighbors. (See No. 7, page 101.)

March 27, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Benjamin Gardiner, claiming 750 arpens. The following testimony was taken in June, 1833, by A. G. Harrison, esq., then one of the commissioners:

Joshua Stogsdill, duly sworn, says that, in the year 1802 or 1803, he passed by a place in Darst's bottom, on the Missouri river, which place Benjamin Gardiner was then improving; that said Gardiner had on said place a cabin and several acres of cleared ground, and was living there at the time mentioned; that said Gardiner left there shortly afterward, and David Bryant succeeded him, in 1803, and cultivated and improved the same place.

John Manly, being duly sworn, says that witness came to the country in the spring of 1804, and that Benjamin Gardiner had settled the fall before in Darst's bottom, on the Missouri; that he had a small piece of cleared ground on said place and a cabin; that he resided there about two years, and that said Gardiner told witness that he had sold his claim on that place to David Bryant. (No. 7, page 109.)

May 7, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, James H. Relfe, commissioners.

In the case of Benjamin Gardiner, claiming 750 arpens of land. (See book No. 7, pages 93, 101, and 109.)

William Hays, being duly sworn, says he is near 54 years of age; that he knows of Benjamin Gardiner, the claimant, clearing several acres of land on the tract now claimed, in the year 1802, and in the same year said Gardiner had a potato patch, and planted and raised a crop of corn. Deponent thinks said Gardiner had in that year about seven acres under fence. This tract claimed is situated on the north side of the Missouri river, between the said river and the lands of Daniel M. Boon and of John Linsay. Witness further says, he does not know of said Gardiner cultivating said land for more than one year; he followed hunting, was a single man, and appeared at that time to be upward of twenty years of age. In the year 1801, claimant lived on the land of one Samuel Watkins, and there raised a crop of corn, his sister, a widow, living at that time with him. (See book No. 7, page 143.)

June 8, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

Benjamin Gardiner, claiming 750 arpens of land. (See book No. 7, pages 93, 101, 109, and 143.)

The board are of opinion that 750 arpens of land ought to be granted to the said Benjamin Gardiner, or to his legal representatives, according to possession. (See book No. 7, page 169.)

No. 259.—George Girty, claiming 640 acres.

No.	Name of original claimant.	Acres.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
259	George Girty.	640	Settlement right.		Near town of St. Charles.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO RECORDS AND MINUTES.

ST. LOUIS, December 31, 1813.—The legal representatives of George Girty, claiming 640 acres of land, county of St. Charles, near the town.

George K. Spencer, duly affirmed, says, that in 1799 he was at the house of Girty on this tract; he then inhabited the tract with his family at that time, and cultivated the same; continued to inhabit and cultivate until the year 1801, when he removed, after having, as witness believes, raised a crop on this tract. Almost every year to this time, this tract has been inhabited and cultivated by others. Witness believes that the representatives of Peché inhabited and cultivated this tract in 1803, and throughout that year, including December 20. (Bates's minutes, page 134.)

July 6, 1838.—L. F. Linn, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

George Girty, by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land near the village of St. Charles. (See Bates's minutes, page 134; Bates's decisions, page 37.)

Ira Cottle, duly sworn, says that he knew said Girty; he thinks it was about the year 1800; that said Girty then lived about half a mile from the village of St. Charles; that he had a house and lived there with his family, and had several children; that said Girty resided there some time. Deponent does not recollect how long, and then went on the Dardenne, where he died. (See book No. 6, p. 216.)

March 26, 1835.—F. R. Conway appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

George Girty, claiming 640 acres of land. (See book No. 6, page 216.)

The following testimony was taken by A. G. Harrison, esq., in May, 1833:

Ralph H. Flaugherty, duly sworn, says, that in the winters of 1799 and 1800, he saw George Girty in a habitation about a mile west of St. Charles; that, at that time, he had a house and a field of about five or six acres improved around the house; he had also fruit-trees planted on the place, and that he knew the said Girty to live there two or three years after the time he first saw him. He had been living there some time before witness saw him, judging from the appearance of the improvements; that said Girty, at the time witness first saw him, had a wife and five or six children, perhaps more.

Peter Teague, being duly sworn, says, that to the best of his knowledge, in the month of June, 1798, George Girty was living on a place about half a mile or three quarters of a mile northwest of St. Charles; that he had a small improvement on it with some fruit-trees, and that he lived there about three, four, or five years, cultivating the same, and had a wife and five children.

Noel John Prieur, being duly sworn, says that George Girty lived on, and cultivated a piece of land near a mile west of St. Charles; that said Girty had a field of about four acres, a house and an orchard on said place; that the time spoken of was before the change of government, and that he remained there three or four years; that he left said place, as witness now recollects, before the change of government, and moved on Dardenne, where he made an improvement; that said Girty told witness he had a concession for his place on Dardenne; that said place of Girty is in what are now the commons of St. Charles. (See book No. 7, page 107.)

June 8, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

George Girty, claiming 640 arpens of land. (See book No. 6, page 216; No. 7, page 107.)

The board are of opinion that 640 acres of land ought to be granted to the said George Girty, or to his legal representatives, according to possession; the same having been inhabited and cultivated before Delassus granted an increase to the common of St. Charles, which is now said to embrace this claim. (See book No. 7, page 170.)

260	John Rourke.	756	Settlement right		James Mackay, D. S, December 16, 1805. Received for record February, 1806, by A. Soulard, S. G.; on river Dardennes, St. Charles.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

December 9, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

John Rourke, claiming 756 arpens of land, situate on Dardenne, district of St. Charles; produces record of a plat of survey, dated 16th December, 1805, certified February, 1806.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 5, page 490.)

ST. LOUIS, December 29, 1813.—John Rourke, claiming 756 arpens of land, on Dardenne, in county of St. Charles.

William Dum, duly sworn, says that in June or July, 1802, saw this tract, and saw rails mauled and ground cleared. In 1803 saw corn growing, fences and cabin; did not at those times know that this was Rourke's claim; was afterward informed so. (See Bates's minutes, page 131.)

March 27, 1835.—F. R. Conway appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

John Rourke, by his legal representatives, claiming 756 arpens of land on river Dardenne. (See record-book D, page 256; commissioners' minutes, book No. 5, page 490; Bates's minutes, page 131.)

The following testimony was taken in May, 1822, by A. G. Harrison, esq., then one of the commissioners:

Ralph H. Flaugherty, being duly sworn, says that he knew John Rourke; that said Rourke lived on Dardenne, on a tract of land which he claimed, just below Arend Rutgers; that at the time witness saw him living there, he had a cabin, and a small field around it in cultivation; that to the best of witness's recollection, the time that Rourke lived there was about the last of the reign of the Spanish government, or shortly after. (No. 7, page 108.)

June 8, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

John Rourke, claiming 756 arpens of land. (See book No. 7, page 108.)

The board are of opinion that 640 acres of land ought to be granted to the said John Rourke, or to his legal representatives, to be taken within the original survey. (See book No. 7, page 170.)

No. 261.—Mordicai Bell, claiming 350 arpens.

To Don CHARLES DEHAULT DELASSUS, Lieutenant Governor and Commander-in-chief of Upper Louisiana, &c.:

Mordicai Bell, a Roman Catholic, has the honor to represent that, with the consent of your predecessor, he came over to this side, (of the Mississippi,) where he has selected a piece of land in his Majesty's domain, on the south side of the Missouri. This being considered, he supplicates you to have the goodness to grant him, at the same place, for the support of his family, the quantity of three hundred and fifty arpens of land in superficie. The petitioner having the means necessary to improve a farm, and having no other views but to live as a peaceable and submissive cultivator, hopes to obtain the favor he solicits.

Be it forwarded to the lieutenant governor, with the information that the statement hereabove is true, and that the petitioner deserves the favor which he solicits.

ST. ANDRE, January 21, 1800. SANTIAGO MACKAY.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, January 29, 1800.

In consequence of the information of the commandant of St. Andrew, Don Santiago Mackay, I do grant to the petitioner the tract of land of three hundred and fifty arpens in superficie, which he solicits, provided it is not prejudicial to any person; and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the interested in possession of the said quantity of land he asks for, in the place indicated; and this being executed, he shall make out a plat, delivering the same to the party, together with his certificate, in order to serve him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone belongs, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of land belonging to the royal domain.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

October 10, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Amos Stoddard, assignee of James Mackay, assignee of Mordicai Bell, claiming 350 arpens of land, situate near the town of St. Louis, district of St. Louis, produces a plat of survey, dated 21st January, 1806, certified 27th January, 1806. Conveyance from Bell to Mackay, dated 29th May, 1804; from Mackay to claimant, dated 26th September, 1805.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. (See No. 5, page 359.)

March 30, 1835.—F. R. Conway, Esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Mordicai Bell, by the legal representatives of Amos Stoddard, claiming 350 arpens of land, situate in the grand prairie, near St. Louis. (See record-book A, page 93; book D, page 361; and minute-book No. 5, page 359.)

Produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Carlos Dehault Delassus, dated January 29, 1800. Also, deed of conveyance from Mordicai Bell to James Mackay, and deed from said Mackay to Amos Stoddard.

M. P. Le Duc, being duly sworn, says that the signature to the concession is in the proper handwriting of Charles Dehault Delassus. Witness further says that, in the year 1804, he went, in company with Major Stoddard and several other gentlemen, to the place now claimed, and from that time the said place has always been called Stoddard's mound. (See book No. 7, page 110.)

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

November 23, 1811.—Board met. Present: J. B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Antoine Lamarche, claiming 750 arpens of land, situate on Lamarche's creek, district of St. Charles; produces record of a plat of survey, dated December 20, 1805, and certified February 27, 1806.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 5, page 444.)

March 31, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Antoine Lamarche, by his legal representatives, claiming 750 arpens of land on Lamarche's creek, in St. Charles county. (See record-book B, page 264; book No. 5, page 444.)

The following testimony was taken in May, 1833, by A. G. Harrison, then one of the commissioners:

Pierre Palardi, being duly sworn, says that he knew Antoine Lamarche; that said Lamarche lived on and cultivated a tract of land on Lamarche's run, four or five years, under the Spanish government; that at that time he had a wife and four children. The land spoken of is in St. Charles county.

Etienne Quenelle, being duly sworn, says that, having heard read the evidence of Pierre Palardi, as above, he knows the same facts, and makes the same his own.

Ralph H. Flaugherty, being duly sworn, says that he knew the said Lamarche; that he lived on a tract of land on a creek now called Lamarche's creek, under the Spanish government, as witness believes; that he had a house and a field on said land; that he had a wife and several children at that time. (See No. 7, page 111.)

June 8, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

Antoine Lamarche, claiming 750 arpens of land. (See book No. 7, page 111.)

The board are of opinion that 750 arpens of land ought to be granted to the said Antoine Lamarche, or to his legal representatives, according to the survey on record in book B, page 264. (See No. 7, page 171.)

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

November 20, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Samuel Holmes, claiming 840 arpens of land, situate in Peruque, district of St. Charles. Produces record of plat of survey, dated February 24, and certified February 28, 1806.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See No. 5, page 432.)

March 31, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Samuel Holmes, by his legal representatives, claiming 840 arpens of land on Peruque. (See minute-book, No. 5, p. 432; record-book B, page 252.)

The following testimony was taken in May, 1833, by A. G. Harrison, esq., then one of the commissioners:

Etienne Quenelle, being duly sworn, says that he knew Samuel Holmes lived on Peruque from his first recollection, and that he, witness, is forty-seven or forty-eight years old; that Holmes lived there a long time before the change of government; that he had a wife and children.

Joseph Chartran, being duly sworn, says that he knew said Holmes; that he lived on the north side of Peruque, under the Spanish government; that he had a wife and three children. He had an orchard on the place, and was well fixed.

Daniel Keathly, being duly sworn, says that, in the month of November, 1803, he met with Samuel Holmes, who was then a stranger to witness; that said Holmes requested witness to show him some land to settle on; that witness took him on Peruque, somewhere about half-way from the mouth to the head of it; that said Holmes commenced immediately to make improvements on the land which witness had showed to him; built a cabin on the same, and cultivated said land. (See book No. 7, page 112.)

June 8, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

Samuel Holmes, claiming 840 arpens of land. (See book No. 7, page 112.)

The board are of opinion that 640 acres of land ought to be granted to the said Samuel Holmes, or to his legal representatives, to be taken within the original survey. (See book No. 7, page 171.)

The surveyor of this jurisdiction, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put Messrs. Vincent Lafoix and Nicolas Plante in possession of the land they ask for in the foregoing petition; and afterward he shall make out a plat and certificate of his survey, and the whole shall be sent back to us to be forwarded to the commandant general of the province, for him to determine definitively upon the concession of the said land.

ZENON TRUDEAU.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, May 17, 1798.

I certify that, on the 15th of December of last year, (by virtue of the foregoing decree of the lieutenant governor of these settlements of Illinois, Don Zenon Trudeau,) I went on the land of Vincent Lafoix and Nicolas Plante, in order to survey the same, conformably to their demand of two hundred and twenty-four arpens in superficie, which measurement was taken in presence of the proprietors with the perch of Paris of eighteen feet in length, according to the custom adopted in this province of Louisiana, and without regard to the variation of the needle, which is 7° 30′ east, as evinced by the preceding figurative plat. The said land is situated at about nine miles west of the post of St. Genevieve, and bounded as follows: to the N. E. and N. W. by vacant lands of his Majesty's domain; to the S. W. by lands of Michael Placette; and to the S. E. by the banks of the river establishment. In testimony whereof, I do give these presents, together with the foregoing figurative plat, on which are indicated the dimensions and the natural and artificial limits which surround the same.

264	Vincent Lafoix and Nicolas Plante.	416	Concession, November 13, 1797, for 640 arpens.	Zenon Trudeau.	224 arpens, by A. Soulard, December 15, 1797. Certified by same May 17, 1798. On river establishment.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

April 3, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Vincent Lafoix and Nicolas Plante, by their legal representatives, claiming 640 arpens of land, situate on the waters of establishment. (See record-book C, page 72; Bates's decisions, page 65, wherein 224 arpens of said claim are confirmed.)

Produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Zenon Trudeau, dated November 13, 1797; also a plat and certificate of survey for 224 arpens. Said survey was made on December 15, 1797, and certified on May 17, 1798, by Antoine Soulard.

M. P. Le Duc, duly sworn, says that the signature to the concession is in the proper handwriting of Zenon Trudeau, then lieutenant governor, and that the signature to the plat and certificate of survey is in the proper handwriting of Antoine Soulard, surveyor general.

The following testimony was taken on May 4, 1833, in St. Genevieve county, by L. F. Linn, esq., then one of the commissioners:

John Baptiste Vallé, aged about 72 years, being first duly sworn, as the law directs, deposeth and saith, that he was well acquainted with the said Nicolas Laplante, alias Plante, and Vincent Lafoix, and that they and each of them at the date of the grant, were citizens and residents in the then province of Upper Louisiana, and that they continued to be citizens and residents till the time of their death; that he knows the grantees made sugar on the place at an early day.

J. B. VALLÉ.

April 4, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

John Stewart, claiming 640 acres of land, situate in the district of St. Genevieve. (See record-book C, page 510.)

The following testimony was taken by F. R. Conway, esq., at Potosi:

John McNeal deposeth and saith that, in the fall season of the year 1802, he stayed all night with John Stewart, and that said Stewart had raised his cabins some short time before; one was a very large cabin of good logs, much larger and higher than any built at that time, and the other a small cabin of the usual size, adjoining the large one; witness ate supper and breakfast with said Stewart. In the summer of 1803, witness passed a night, and ate supper and breakfast with the said Stewart, and then saw a field of good-looking corn growing near claimant's house, and witness told claimant that he had a large field of good corn; the said Stewart replied that it might not be as large as I thought, and asked me how much I supposed there was. I told him I supposed there was eight or ten acres. He said no, there is but six or seven acres in corn. Witness further says, that Moses Austin told him that the said John Stewart was entitled to land from the Spanish government, as one of said Austin's followers. Said Stewart's field was under good fence, and witness thinks, from the part he saw, that it was generally made of split rails. The said Stewart claims 640 acres of land, and witness never heard that he claimed any other land for his head or improvement right.

No. 266.—William Meek, claiming 500 arpens.

To Don CHARLES DEHAULT DELASSUS, Lieutenant-Colonel, attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, Commander-in-chief of Upper Louisiana, &c.

William Meek, a Roman Catholic, has the honor to represent that, with the permission of the government, he came over to this side, where he has selected a tract of land in the domain of his Majesty, for the purpose of making a plantation; therefore, he supplicates you to have the goodness to grant him, at the place he has selected, a tract of land corresponding to the number of his family, which is composed of himself, his wife, and six children. The petitioner, having sufficient means to improve a piece of land, and having no other views but to live as a peaceable and submissive cultivator of the soil, hopes to deserve the favor he solicits.

ST. ANDRE, June 4, 1803.

WILLIAM $\overset{\text{his}}{\underset{\text{mark.}}{\times}}$ MEEK,

Be it forwarded to the lieutenant governor, together with the information that the above statement is true, and that the petitioner is worthy to obtain the favor he solicits.

ST. ANDRE, June 4, 1803.

ST. YAGO MACKAY.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, June 8, 1803.

In consequence of the information given by Don Santiago Mackay, commandant of the post of St. André, by which the number (of persons) composing the family of the petitioner is proven, the surveyor, Don A. Soulard, shall put him in possession of five hundred arpens of land in superficie, in the place asked for, said quantity corresponding to the number of his family, conformably to the regulation made by the governor general of the province, and afterward the interested shall have to solicit the title of concession in form from the intendant general, to whom alone belongs, by royal order, the distributing and granting of all classes of lands in the royal domain.

April 1, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared pursuant to adjournment.

William Meek, by his legal representatives, claiming 500 arpens of land on the Missouri. (See record-book B, page 198.)

The following testimony was taken in June, 1833, by A. G. Harrison, then one of the commissioners:

John Manly, being duly sworn, says that he came with said Meek to this country; that said Meek settled on a place on the Missouri, about four miles above the mouth of Chorette; that witness, in the spring of 1804, assisted said Meek in clearing ground and putting in a crop on said place; that a short time after putting in the crop, said Meek took sick and died. 267	Jacob Wise.	37½	Settlement right.		John Stewart, D. S. February 26, 1806; received for record February 26, 1806. Mine à Breton.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

December 23, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Jacob Wise, claiming 37½ acres of land, situate adjoining Mine à Breton, district of St. Genevieve. Produces a plat of survey, dated February 26, and certified February 28, 1806. Produces also permission to settle, sworn to by Joseph Decelle, syndic.

The following testimony in this claim, taken from testimony perpetuated and attested by two of the commissioners, October 24, 1808:

Francis Thibault, sworn, says that Jacob Wise cultivated the land claimed, nine or ten years ago, and ever since; built a house the first year, and was rented to Mr. Decelle for two years; has not since been inhabited, but has always been used as a barn; claimant lived adjoining the tract with one Charles Bequette; claimant is a single man.

The board remark that no kind of testimony suggests or makes it appear that the land claimed includes a lead mine. It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted, claimant not having inhabited the same on December 20, 1803. (See book No. 5, page 535.)

April 7, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Jacob Wise, claiming 37½ acres of land, situate at Mine à Breton. (See record-book B, page 242; book No. 5, page 535.)

The following testimony was taken at Potosi, by F. R. Conway, esq., on the 8th day of May, 1834:

John McNeal, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that, in the years 1803 and 1804, Jacob Wise, then a laboring man, was a resident in this country, and had some acres of land in cultivation, with a comfortable cabin thereon, the whole enclosed with a good fence; that said Wise claimed the same as a donation from the Spanish government; and witness never heard of his claiming any other head right than the one above mentioned, which will fully appear from the records of surveys recorded in the year 1806, in St. Louis.

No. 268.—Zachariah Dowty, claiming 450 arpens.

No.	Name of original claimant.	Arpens.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
268	Zachariah Dowty.	450	Settlement right.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

October 6, 1808.—Board met. Present: the honorable Clement B. Penrose and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

In the claim of the heirs of Zachariah Dowty, and his wife, deceased, claiming 450 arpens of land on Hubble's creek, district of Cape Girardeau. (See page 54 of the reported testimony of the mission to the lower districts.)

It being asserted that the testimony heretofore taken was false, the board examined the following witnesses on the part of the United States:

Alexander Summers, sworn, says that Elizabeth Dowty, about the year 1800, built a camp on said tract, and that he, witness, ploughed a small piece of ground on the same for her, and sowed turnips. Says that he has seen the place every year since, and that nothing has been done on the same by her, her representatives, or any other person for her.

John Weaver, sworn, says that he has known the land claimed about seven years; that there never has been anything done on it by Elizabeth Dowty or her representatives since that time. (See book No. 3, page 281.)

November 26, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Zachariah Dowty, heirs of, claiming 450 arpens of land situate on the waters of Hubble's creek, district of Cape Girardeau, produces to the board an affidavit of permission to settle from Louis Lorimier, commandant, dated June 3, 1808. The following testimony in the foregoing claim, taken at Cape Girardeau, June 2, 1808, by Frederick Bates, commissioner, by authority from the board:

John Summers, sr., duly sworn, says that this land was improved and settled in 1800 or 1801, built a cabin, cleared, enclosed, and cultivated a small spot, cultivated and inhabited in the year 1803, and ever since; upward of twenty acres in cultivation, a peach orchard. Elizabeth Dowty died, and was buried on the premises. (See also No. 3, page 281.)

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See No. 5, page 12.)

April 8, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment. Zachariah Dowty, claiming 450 arpens of land, situate on Hubble's creek. (See record-book E, page 239; minutes No. 3, page 281; No. 5, page 12.)

The following testimony was taken in June, 1834, by James H. Relfe, commissioner:

Alexander Summers, being duly sworn, states that he was well acquainted with the widow and family of Zachariah Dowty, formerly of the district of Cape Girardeau, in the province of Upper Louisiana, now State of Missouri. He first became acquainted with them in the fore part of the year 1800 or 1801; they then resided on the waters of Hubble's creek, in said district, and inhabited and cultivated land on the same; they built a cabin in the same year, that is, in 1800 or 1801, which year this affiant is not positive. They continued to live on said place up to the death of the said widow.

Jane Logan, claiming 800 arpens of land. (See record-book F, page 13; Bates' decisions, page 99.)

The following testimony was taken in Cape Girardeau county, by J. H. Relfe, commissioner:

John Rodney, being sworn, states that he was well acquainted with Jenny or Jane Logan; he first became acquainted with her in 1802; she then lived in what was called the district of Cape Girardeau. She lived on Hubble's creek in said district, where she inhabited and cultivated a place. This was in the years 1802, '3, and '4, and she continued to live on the same for a number of years afterward. She had then children living with her at the time mentioned. There were also fruit-trees on said place, which is distant about nine miles south of the present town of Jackson.

Benjamin Tennel, claiming 800 arpens of land on Castor creek, Cape Girardeau. (See record-book F, page 135; Bates's decisions, page 104.)

The following testimony was taken in the county of Washington, by James H. Relfe, commissioner:

Samuel Campbell deposeth and saith, that he was at the residence of Benjamin Tennel, on the waters of the St. François river, in the then district of St. Genevieve, province of Upper Louisiana, now county of Madison, State of Missouri, in the fall of 1803; he found him residing in a comfortable cabin. In the course of the winter he cleared upward of ten acres of ground, and, in the spring of the year 1804, planted said ten acres of ground in corn. Deponent further says he has been acquainted with said plantation from the time it was taken possession of, in the year 1803, until the present time, and it has been regularly possessed and occupied by said Benjamin Tennel, and his legal representatives, ever since. Deponent further says he was present at New Bourbon when Benjamin Tennel obtained permission from the commandant to settle on the domain, and never knew Tennel to claim any other land in this country.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

June 25, 1806.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment. Present: the honorable Clement B. Penrose and James L. Donaldson, esquires.

James Hewitt, assignee of Antoine Dejarlais, who was assignee of Louis Aubuchon, claiming 800 arpens of land, situate at Belleview, district aforesaid, produces a concession from Charles D. Delassus to said Louis Aubuchon, dated January 10, 1800; a survey of said land dated 18th and certified 27th February, 1806; a deed of transfer by said Aubuchon to Antoine Dejarlais, dated November 22, 1804, and another deed of transfer from said Antoine Dejarlais to claimant, dated February 18, 1805.

William Reede, being duly sworn, says that in the spring of 1805, claimant came to his house; that he settled the said tract of land, built a house, raised a crop on the same that year, and has actually inhabited and cultivated it to this day; that he had then a wife, four children, and a slave.

The board reject this claim, and observe that claimant purchased said concession for $500, and has actually paid $410 of the same. (See book No. 1, page 360.)

August 28, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

James Hewitt, assignee of Antoine Dejarlais, assignee of Louis Aubuchon, claiming 800 arpens of land. (See book No. 1, page 360.) It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. (See No. 4, page 479.)

April 24, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, James H. Relfe, commissioners.

Louis Aubuchon, claiming 800 arpens of land, on waters of Big river, district of St. Genevieve. (See record-book C, page 195; minutes, book No. 1, page 360; No. 4, page 479.)

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, commissioner, on May 7, 1833:

John T. McNeal, of lawful age, being first duly sworn as the law directs, states that he well knows James Hewitt, and that he held his claim under some Frenchman, but the name he does not recollect; the above claim lies on the waters of Big river, Belleview, Washington county. Hewitt occupied the above land in the year 1804, in April, as well as this deponent recollects, and raised a crop of corn there on that year. Hewitt resided on said land until the year 1813 or 1814, when he died, and his family has continued to reside on said land ever since. Hewitt left a wife and several children.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

John Stewart, being first duly sworn in the above case, states that on February 18, in the year 1806, at the instance of James Hewitt, he surveyed a Spanish concession granted to Louis Aubuchon, for 800 arpens of land, lying in the Belleview settlement, now in Washington county. He states the above survey to be butted and bounded as follows, to wit: beginning at a white oak on a line of William Davis's grant, thence south 63 west, 40 acres, crossing Hazle creek to a branch of Big river to a Spanish oak; thence north 27 west, 20 acres, crossing Hazle creek to a Spanish oak; thence south 63 east, 40 acres, to a hickory; thence south 27 east, 20 acres, to the beginning, including his improvement; all which will fully appear by reference to the plat in the recorder's office, St. Louis. This deponent further states, that he was legally appointed and authorized to make the survey aforesaid, and when he made the same, James Hewitt was living on the land. The family of said Hewitt still live upon said tract of land. James Hewitt handed him the original concession to make the survey from, and this deponent returned the same with the plat of survey to the proper officer in accordance with his duty as surveyor. As to the concession being for 800 arpens, this deponent is not quite certain, but supposes so, inasmuch as he surveyed out, under the Aubuchon concession, 800 arpens. JOHN STEWART.

No. 273.—Silas Fletcher, claiming 300 arpens.

NAMES OF INDIVIDUALS WHO ARE TO SETTLE IN TYWAPITY BOTTOM, WITH THE PERMISSION OF THE COMMANDANT OF NEW MADRID.

Silas Fletcher, his wife, two boys, and two girls, 300 arpens.

Mr. Story shall survey the lands of each inhabitant named in the above list, conformably to the quantities therein expressed, in the places selected by them, provided it is five leagues below Cape Girardeau, and he shall leave as commons about a mile square, on a bayou emptying into the Mississippi.

Given at New Madrid, the 22d of May, 1801.

HENRY PEYROUX.

OFFICE OF THE RECORDER OF LAND TITLES, St. Louis, May 11, 1835.

I certify the above to be truly extracted and translated from a list of twenty-one individuals, on which list said Silas Fletcher is number 13, to be found in book E, page 271, of record in this office.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

November 19, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Silas Fletcher, claiming 300 arpens of land, situate in Tywapity, district of New-Madrid. Produces record of an order of survey from Henry Peroux, commandant, dated May 22, 1801.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. (See No. 5, page 425.)

April 24, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, James H. Relfe, commissioners.

The following testimony was taken before James H. Relfe, one of the commissioners:

Catharine Griffey, formerly Catharine Finley, states that her husband, Charles Finley, was in the military expedition to New Madrid, in the then province of Upper Louisiana, now State of Missouri, under the Spanish government; that some time previous to the year in which said expedition took place, she and her husband moved to and settled in the district of New Madrid, in said province. There was a contest between Peyroux, the commandant at New Madrid, and Lorimier, the commandant at Cape Girardeau, as to whose district they were in. In the year they moved to said province, one Fletcher, whose given name she understood was Silas, lived on what was called the Big lake, which runs near Matthews' prairie, in said province; he and his family lived there in a little cabin; she cannot recollect as to the balance of his improvement.

No. 274.—Malachi Jones, claiming 790 acres.

NEW MADRID, January 12, 1802.

On a list of families arrived at Tywapity for the purpose of settling themselves, said list presented to Mr. Henry Peyroux on the 12th of January, 1802, by Mr. Reason Bowie, the following is written: "Malachi Jones, his wife, and four negroes." And below is written: "Mr. ———, the syndic, is authorized by me to put the families here above named in possession of the lands lately abandoned at Tywapity, by several inhabitants of this district." HENRY PEYROUX.

NEW MADRID, July 10, 1804.

I, the undersigned, civil commandant of New Madrid for the United States, certify that the above extract is conformable to the original, deposited in the archives of this commandancy by Mr. Jesse Masters, on the 14th of last June, conformably to the proclamation of the first civil commandant of this Upper Louisiana. I have delivered the present certificate at the request of Mr. Edward Robertson.

November 20, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

John Nicholas Shrum, assignee of Malachi Jones, claiming 790 acres of land, situate at Tywapity, district of Cape Girardeau, produces record of a permission to settle from Henry Peyroux, commandant, dated January 12, 1802; record of a plat of survey, dated February 28, 1806, certified February 27, 1806; record of transfer from Jones to claimant, dated October 4, 1803.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See No. 5, page 437.)

April 27, 1835.—James H. Relfe, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Malachi Jones, by his legal representative, Nicholas Shrum, claiming 790 acres of land. (See record-book B, page 311; minutes, book No. 5, page 437.)

The following testimony was taken in June, 1833, by L. F. Linn, commissioner:

June 11, 1833.—George Hacker being sworn, says that, in the year 1802, he passed Nicholas Shrum's improvement on the Mississippi river, in the district of New Madrid. He became acquainted with the said Nicholas in the year 1804. This affiant has understood that the said Nicholas purchased his improvement from one Malachi Jones.

The following testimony was taken before James H. Relfe, commissioner, in Scott county:

Thomas Fletcher, being sworn, states that he came to the province of Upper Louisiana in the year 1803; in that year he passed up the Mississippi river, and recollects passing Shrum or Shum's point, on said river, about ten or twelve miles above the mouth of Ohio river, in said province; there was an improvement on the point, which he was told belonged to Nicholas Shum or Shrum; there was a cabin on said place, and some three or four acres cultivated in corn at the time, in 1803; the place is still called Shum's point. This affiant recollects seeing and conversing with the said Shum at the time mentioned, and hearing him brag of what a fine place his was at the said point.

THOMAS FLETCHER.

Bridget Lane states that she married and settled in the province of Upper Louisiana about three years before the Americans took possession of the country. She well recolleets Nicholas Shum or Shrum, a resident of said province. She knew him in early times in the country, the year she cannot recollect. He used to pass her house in going to his place on the Mississippi river, called Shum's or Shrum's point. The place is still called Shum's point.

John Baldwin, claiming 400 arpens of land, situate in the district of Cape Girardeau. (See list B, in record-book B, page 324; minute-book No. 5, page 391.)

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Cape Girardeau:

May 11, 1833.—James Wilborn, who is about fifty-three years old, has known the said John Baldwin between thirty-five and forty years ago. The said John Baldwin moved to the district of Cape Girardeau in the fall of 1803, and settled in Tywapity bottom. He knows that the said John cleared land in the fall of 1803, in said bottom, and set out a nursery of fruit-trees; he also lived on said land at the same time. The next season, 1804, he planted corn and raised a crop. The said John was a married man; had a wife and four children at the time he made the said improvement. The said John Baldwin has lived ever since, and now resides, in the district of Cape Girardeau.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

May 18, 1809.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, commissioners.

Charles Sexton, claiming 350 arpens, 95 perches of land, situate on White Waters, district of Cape Girardeau, produces to the board as a special permission to settle, list A, on which claimant is No. 48, for 300 arpens, a plat of survey dated December 3, 1805, certified to be received for record February 28, 1806, by Antoine Soulard, surveyor general.

The following testimony in the foregoing claim, taken at Cape Girardeau, June 4, 1808, by Frederick Bates, commissioner:

Daniel Brant, duly sworn, says, that claimant made a small improvement in the year 1803, but did not inhabit; this improvement being afterward taken by the survey of Ezekiel Able, the surveyor laid out a tract for claimant in the woods adjoining the lands of the said Ezekiel, which has never been improved. Laid over for decision. (See book No. 4, page 61.)

The following testimony was taken in October, 1833, before L. F. Linn, esq., then one of the commissioners:

Daniel Brant states that he was on the Indian expedition to New Madrid, in the province of Upper Louisiana, in 1802, which was performed by order of the Spanish authorities at Cape Girardeau. Amongst others who served a tour on said campaign, was Charles Sexton, who acted as drummer. He lived in Cape Girardeau district, and was absent from home about six weeks; the men were promised land by the Spanish general and commandant, for serving on said expedition.

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, commissioner, in October, 1833:

STATE OF MISSOURI, county of Cape Girardeau:

Daniel Brant, who is 59 years old, states that he moved to and settled in the district of Cape Girardeau, Upper Louisiana, in the year 1798; that he was and still is well acquainted with Hugh Criswell, of said district; that he knows of the said Hugh inhabiting and cultivating a place on the waters of Randall's creek, adjoining one Anthony Randall, in said district, in the year 1802. The said Criswell cultivated corn and other grain on said place, in said year 1802. The said Criswell had a cabin and about 7 acres of land cleared on said place, in said year 1802. He also had a family, consisting of a wife and three children. This affiant knows that the said Criswell continued to inhabit and cultivate said place for several years after the time mentioned above, but the precise number of years he cannot recollect. This affiant has frequently heard the Spanish commandant, Don Louis Lorimier, say that he wanted the people to settle close together, in order to protect themselves from the Indians; and if they could not get land enough where they lived, they should have it elsewhere.

No. 279.—Sophia Bolaye, claiming 150 arpens.

To Don ZENON TRUDEAU, Lieutenant Colonel of the stationary regiment of Louisiana, Lieutenant Governor and Commander-in-chief of the western part of Illinois:

SIR: Sophia Bolaye, residing in the village of Carondelet, has the honor to represent that she had begun to clear a piece of land, in order to build a house and make a plantation, on a tract situated on river Aux Gravois, between the Marameck and the village of St. Louis; that she had all the timber prepared for a house, and even began a field, but having been frightened by the reports which have gone abroad of the bad intentions of the Indians, she then retired with her family to the village of Carondelet. Now, she would wish to return and settle with her family upon the said plantation, therefore she claims of your goodness that you will please grant her a concession of ten arpens in front, at the distance of half a league from the junction of said river Aux Gravois with the river Des Peres; the said ten arpens ascending in a straight line, five arpens on each side of the said river Aux Gravois, the length of fifteen arpens, which will make the quantity of one hundred and fifty arpens of land in superficie. She only waits for your decision in order to go and settle herself on said place, and to work thereon with security, and to continue the improvements already begun.

This being considered, may it please you, sir, to grant to the petitioner, at the distance of half a league from the mouth of the said river Aux Gravois, the quantity of ten arpens, five on each side of the river, by fifteen in depth, in ascending the said river in a straight line. The petitioner shall never cease to pray for your preservation.

ST. LOUIS, this 28th June, 1796.

ST. LOUIS, June 3, 1796.

In case that the land asked for belongs to the King's domain, the surveyor of this jurisdiction shall put the petitioner in possession of the quantity of arpens she asks in the manner designated, in order to deliver to her the concession in form, after the plat and certificate of survey are made out.

No. 280.—William Easom, claiming 800 arpens.

No.	Name of original claimant.	Arpens.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date and situation.
280	William Easom.	800	Settlement right.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

ST. LOUIS, April 28, 1813.—William Easom, claiming 800 arpens of land, county of St. Genevieve, on waters of St. Francis.

William Johnson, duly sworn, says that claimant inhabited and cultivated this tract in the winter of 1803, and continued there, as witness believes, till Christmas of that year, and by him or others constantly to this time. (See Bates's minutes, page 42.)

ST. LOUIS, December 24, 1813.—Wm. Easom. (See minutes, page 42.) Thompson Crawford, duly sworn, says that claimant, Easom, left his tract about 1st December, 1803, and never returned. John Sinclair was not inhabiting the cabins built by Patterson, and for a time inhabited by Easom, as early as 25th December, 1803. Easom cultivated the lands adjoining the cabins built by Patterson in 1803, and lived in them from some time in May till 1st December, 1803. Witness thinks that James Campbell lived in those cabins on 20th December, 1803, and is certain that he did on the 25th.

William Dillon, duly sworn, says that claimant moved into the settlement, in the month of May, 1803, and soon thereafter established himself on a tract on Cedar creek. When claimant moved there, there were already two cabins on the premises, built by one Patterson in the summer or fall of 1802. Patterson left the place in the winter following the building of the cabins, made no cultivation that witness knows of, that is to say, on last of 1802, or beginning of 1803. Thinks Easom went there in June, and left it some time in December, 1803. John Sinclair established himself on lands in this neighborhood, perhaps on the opposite of the creek from the cabins already spoken of, in December, 1803; this was a few days before the 20th of that month, as witness thinks. John Sinclair has inhabited and cultivated this tract from that to the present time. This establishment of Sinclair was opposite and near the cabins built by Patterson, and into which Easom went in the month of May or June, 1803, which cabins are the same which Sinclair has occupied since some time in the winter of 1803 and 1804. It is the opinion of the witness that there is sufficient vacant land extending back from the creek as the front line of two tracts, for a survey on each side of 640 arpens, though the quantity could not be made up of good land on either, nor perhaps half the quantity.

Joshua Edwards, duly sworn, says that David Patterson came to these lands in 1802, latter part of the summer, and raised turnips, and having built two cabins, left the place in the following winter, and left the improvement with James Campbell for sale. In spring of 1803, Easom came out and agreed with James Campbell for the place; went on it, planted corn with the assistance of witness. Easom fell sick, he became dissatisfied with the place, and sold to Samuel Campbell, and left it early in the month of December, 1803. James Campbell, brother of Samuel Campbell, lived in the cabins on 20th December, 1803. When Easom left this place he left some pot-metal which had been his, but knows not whether he had sold it, but as he moved on pack-horses he could not very well take such articles. James Campbell told this witness that he had sold the improvement whereon Easom had lived, and where he, James Campbell, was then living, to John Sinclair, for a horse; this was in January or February, 1804. John Sinclair took possession of the cabins in February or March, 1804, and has continued to inhabit and cultivate the premises ever since to this time. John Sinclair was established on the creek, opposite to the cabins, about 17th December, 1803. Where Sinclair first settled, an improvement had, before that time, been made by James Campbell, and sold by Campbell to Sinclair; he afterward purchased of same James Campbell on the opposite side. (See Bates's minutes, pages 105 and 106.)

St. Louis, December 25, 1813.—William Johnson, duly sworn, says, in explanation of his testimony given 28th April last, he did by no means intend to say that claimant was on the premises December 20, 1803, as that was a fact that he could not know, as he was not on the tract himself on that day; had seen him there in the summer, and had heard conversation in neighborhood that he remained there till some time in the winter, and the belief formerly expressed by me was not pretended to be founded on my own certain knowledge. (See Bates's minutes, page 112.)

April 8, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

William Easom, claiming 800 arpens of land on the St. Francis river. (See record-book F, page 98; Bates's minutes, pages 42, 105, 106, and 112; Bates's decisions, page 31.)

The following testimony was taken in Madison county, by James H. Relfe, commissioner:

Samuel Campbell deposeth and saith, that he saw William Easom in possession of a tract of land on the waters of the St. Francis river in the spring of the year 1803; he had a house in which he lived, a kitchen, and about four acres of corn in cultivation, which said Campbell saw gathered the following fall by said William Easom.

The following testimony was taken in October, 1833, by L. F. Linn, commissioner:

State of Missouri, County of Madison:

Thompson Crawford, aged about forty-seven years, being duly sworn, as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he well knew William Easom, the original claimant; that he came to this country, then the province of Upper Louisiana, in the spring of 1803. Witness also knows the land claimed, and knows that claimant settled thereon and made a crop in 1803. There were two cabins built on the place. Claimant fenced in, cleared, and cultivated three or four acres. Claimant remained on the place till some time in the year 1804, when he removed, and that the said land has been actually improved, inhabited, and cultivated ever since. Claimant had a wife and one child.

281	John Taylor.	481	8	Settlement right.		B. Cousin, D. S., 6th December, 1805, countersigned A. Soulard, surveyor general; on Hubble's creek, Cape Girardeau.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

May 1, 1809.—Board met. Present: Clement B. Penrose and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

John Taylor, claiming five hundred and sixty-two arpens seventy-three and a half perches of land, situate on Hubble's and Randall's creek, district of Cape Girardeau, produces to the board, as a special permission to settle, list B, on which claimant is No. 20, for five hundred and fifty arpens, (this claim interfering with the foregoing William Hand,) a plat of survey, dated December 6, 1805, signed B. Cousin, countersigned Antoine Soulard, surveyor general.

The following testimony in the foregoing claim, taken at Cape Girardeau, June 2, 1808, by Frederick Bates, commissioner.

Samuel Pew, sworn, says he knows the land, lives near it, has passed through it, and knows of no cultivation on the premises in 1803.

David Patterson, sworn, says that he knew this tract of land, and was acquainted with it before Taylor moved to it, and verily believes that there was no improvements on the premises in the year 1803. At this time there is a good square log-house, stable, kitchen, smoke-house, and ten or —— acres in cultivation. Laid over for decision. (See book No. 4, page 31.)

March 14, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

John Taylor, claiming five hundred and sixty-two arpens seventy-three and a half perches of land. (See book No. 4, page 31.) It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 4, page 297.)

May 27, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

John Taylor, by his legal representatives, claiming six hundred and forty acres of land, situate on Hubble's creek, in Cape Girardeau county. (See record-book B, page 337, where this claim is entered for four hundred and eighty-one acres and eight poles. (Book No. 4, pages 31, 297.)

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, commissioner, in June and October, 1833:

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Cape Girardeau:

Richard Waller, being sworn, says he knew John Taylor well. He first became acquainted with him in 1802, in the district of Cape Girardeau, where the said John Taylor then lived, and continued to live up to the time of his death, ten or fifteen years ago. He saw him settled on a place in said district, in the year 1803, had built a house to live in, and had cleared some land. He had a wife and several children, number not recollected.

Hugh Criswell is about sixty-seven years old; he was well acquainted with the said John Taylor. He knew the said Taylor in this country, district of Cape Girardeau, in the year 1803; he was then a farmer, and inhabited and cultivated land in said district. He improved his head right of settlement claim in the year 1803, in the said district, and lived on it until the time of his death, which happened some time about the year 1814. This affiant knows that he built a house in Spanish times, and set out peach and apple trees for an orchard. He had a wife, three boys, and two girls, that this affiant recollects.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

William Williams states that he moved to, and settled in the district of Cape Girardeau, Upper Louisiana, in the year 1799; that he was well acquainted with John Taylor, deceased, formerly of said district. To the best of his recollection, the said Taylor moved to, and settled in said district in the year 1802. In the next year (that is in 1803) he moved to a place on the waters of Hubble's creek, about three miles northeast of the present town of Jackson, opened land, and raised a crop on the same, in said year 1803. This affiant also assisted the said Taylor in building a dwelling-house on said place, in said year. The said Taylor had a family at the time, consisting of himself, his wife, and four or five children. The said Taylor had an apple orchard very early on said place, but the year when he set it out, this affiant cannot state. The said Taylor lived on the said place up to the time of his death, some six or eight years after he settled. The said place is now owned by one John Cross.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

December 10, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Louis Buyat and others, claiming a tract of land, situate between the two forks of river Gaboury, and adjoining the 40-arpen lots near Prairie à Gautier, district of St. Genevieve, produce record of a concession from Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant governor, dated September 1, 1797.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. (See book No. 5, page 508.)

May 29, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

Louis Buyat and twelve others, claiming a tract of land, situate between the two forks of river Gaboury, and adjoining the 40-arpen lots near Prairie Gautier. (See No. 5, page 508.)

Produce a paper purporting to be an original concession from Zenon Trudeau, dated September 1, 1797.

The following testimony was taken in June, 1833, by L. F. Linn, commissioner:

STATE OF MISSOURI, county of Saint Genevieve:

Jean Baptiste Vallé, aged about seventy-two years, being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he was well acquainted with each and every of the petitioners and concessionees, and that each and every of them, at the date of the concession, were citizens and residents in the then province of Upper Louisiana, and that those who are dead continued citizens and residents till their death; and that those who are living are still citizens and residents of the country. This witness further says that he was well acquainted with Zenon Trudeau, who was lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana at the date of the concession; that he has often seen him write, and that the name and signature to the concession from said Zenon Trudeau to the said thirteen concessionees, is in the proper handwriting of the said Zenon Trudeau. And this deponent further says that the claimants made a common field on the same, and actually cultivated the same for several years.

283	Dennis Sullivan.	300	Concession to 164 inhabitants. 30th January, 1803. List A, No. 94.		B. Cousin, D. S., 30th December, 1805. Countersigned, A. Soulard, S. G.; on Byrd's creek, Cape Girardeau.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

May 18, 1809.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, commissioners.

Dennis Sullivan, claiming 350 arpens 93⅓ perches of land, situated on Byrd's creek, district of Cape Girardeau, produces to the board as a special permission to settle, list A, on which claimant is No. 94, for 300; plat of survey, dated December 30, 1805, signed B. Cousin, countersigned Antoine Soulard, surveyor general.

The following testimony in the foregoing claim, taken at Cape Girardeau, June 4, 1808, by Frederick Bates, commissioner:

John McCarty, duly sworn, says that claimant came to Louisiana in the year 1802, and worked at the blacksmith business for two years; since which he has taught a school; no improvement. Laid over for decision. (See book No. 4, page 57.)

March 2, 1810.—The board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Dennis Sullivan, claiming 350 arpens 93⅓ perches of land. (See book No. 4, page 57.) It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See No. 4, page 288.)

May 29, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

Dennis Sullivan, by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land, situate in the district of Cape Girardeau. (See record-book B, page 320 for list A, on which claimant is No. 94, for 300 arpens, and same book, page 337, for survey. See also No. 4, pages 54 and 288.)

The following testimony was taken in October, 1833, before L. F. Linn, commissioner:

Jonathan Buis states that, in the fall of 1802, after his return from a visit to New Orleans, he saw and knew Dennis Sullivan or O'Sullivan, in the district of Cape Girardeau, Upper Louisiana, now State of Missouri, where the said O'Sullivan resided and continued to reside up to the time of his death, which took place some time after the change of government. The said Dennis was a mechanic, a blacksmith by trade, which business he pursued and carried on in different places in the said district. This affiant frequently heard the Commandant Lorimier say that mechanics were not required to settle and improve their lands.

JONATHAN BUIS.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND CLAIMS.

November 1, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Curtis Wilbourn, claiming 600 arpens of land, situated in the district of Cape Girardeau, produces to the board list B, on which claimant is No. 10.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 5, page 391.)

June 1, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, James H. Relfe, commissioners.

Curtis Wilbourn, by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land, situated in the former district of Cape Girardeau. (See record-book B, page 324, for list B, on which claimant is No. 10, for 600 arpens; minute-book No. 5, page 391.)

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, commissioner, in June, 1833:

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Cape Girardeau:

John Baldwin knew said Curtis. He came to the district of Cape Girardeau in the year 1803, and settled in Tywapity in the fall of said year; he built a house in fall or winter of 1803, and immediately commenced clearing land, and in 1804 he raised corn and other things on said place. This affiant saw his permission to settle on the books of Lorimier. Claimant was a married man, had a wife and six children, five sons and one daughter. The said Curtis was killed some six or eight years ago. This affiant has understood and believes that all his children are dead except two, who are the actual claimants.

April 27, 1835.—James H. Relfe, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

In claim of James Wilbourn, claiming 640 acres of land, (see book No. 6, page 450,) the following testimony was taken by James H. Relfe, commissioner, in Scott county:

Bridget Lane, widow, stated that she moved to and settled in the district of New Madrid, then province of Upper Louisiana, now State of Missouri, about three years before the Americans took possession of said province. The Christmas, a year after she had moved, James Wilbourn, also, came to the country, and his father's family eat dinner with us. The same winter, or next spring, the said James Wilbourn made a settlement and improvement in Tywapity bottom, in said province. He built a very good little cabin, made a garden, and planted seed which he brought from Georgia with him. This affiant recollects he sowed some sowerdock and she scolded him for it. He had a smart little strip in cultivation. He had a wife and one child; said Wilbourn has lived in the country ever since.

No. 288.—Israel Dodge, claiming 7,056 arpens.

To Don CHARLES DEHAULT DELASSUS, Lieutenant Colonel, attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and Lieutenant Governor of the upper part of the same province:

Israel Dodge, father of a numerous family and (owner) of several slaves, having erected in the country several mills, distilleries, breweries, &c., and having exercised his industry in a blameless manner, hopes that you will be pleased to make him partake of the favors which the government grants with generosity to all those who come to fix themselves under the domination of his Majesty, and particularly to those who, by their labor, have deserved his regard. Therefore, full of confidence in your justice, he has the honor to supplicate you to have the goodness to grant to him in full property, for establishing an extensive stock farm, one league of land in superficie, or 7,056 arpens, to be taken in a vacant part of the domain, at his choice, and in the manner most convenient to his views. Your petitioner, having more than the means necessary to make the establishment contemplated, and this quantity of land having almost always been granted in such cases, without difficulty, by the government, hopes that his known conduct, his character, his submission and fidelity to the laws, will be motives which will contribute, in part, to the accomplishment of his wishes. In so doing, you will do justice.

ISRAEL DODGE.

ST. GENEVIEVE, December 5, 1800.

We, the undersigned, commandant of the post of New Bourbon, do certify to the lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, that the concession for one league (square of land) asked by the petitioner, in a vacant place, not already conceded to any person, and being a part of the King's domain, is indispensably necessary to him for the purpose of establishing a grazing farm, in order to feed and maintain the great number of cattle he owns, which it is impossible for him to do on his lands, they being all situated on barren hills; besides, the establishments so useful to the public, such as mills, distilleries, and breweries, which the petitioner has had erected in this post, at a great expense, are great inducements to grant him the favor which he solicits.

Done at New Bourbon, December 8, 1800.

P. DELASSUS DE LUZIERE.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, December 11, 1800.

Having examined the foregoing statement, together with the information given by the commandant of the post of New Bourbon, captain of militia, Don Pedro Delassus de Luziere, and considering that the petitioner is one of the most ancient inhabitants of this country, I do grant to him and his heirs the land which he solicits, provided it is not to the prejudice of any person; and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the interested in possession of the quantity of land he asks in the place indicated, and this being executed, he shall make out a plat, delivering the same to the party, together with his certificate, in order to serve him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone belongs, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of land belonging to the royal domain.

June 28, 1809.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Agnew Massey, claiming 300 arpens of land, situate in Tywapity, district of New Madrid, produces to the board a certified list of permission to settle, formerly given, No. 1369, on which claimant is No. 248.

The following testimony in the foregoing claim was taken at New Madrid, June 16, 1808, by Frederick Bates, commissioner:

Edward Mathews, duly sworn, says that, in the spring of 1802, claimant built a cabin, and inhabited and cleared, enclosed and cultivated, a few acres; he left the premises in the fall of that year; since which time it has neither been inhabited nor cultivated. Claimant had a wife and one child. Laid over for decision. (See book No. 4, page 108.)

December 12, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners:

Agnew Massey, claiming 300 arpens of land. (See book No. 4, page 108.) It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 5, page 26.)

Agnew Massey, by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land, situate in Prairie St. Charles, alias Mathews' prairie. (See book E, page 194; book No. 4, page 108; No. 5, page 26.)

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Cape Girardeau:

George Hacker being sworn, says he was well acquainted with Agnew Massey, who resided in the district of New Madrid; he first knew him in April, 1802, in Prairie St. Charles, in said district, where he inhabited and cultivated land; he had cleared land which was in cultivation, and built a dwelling-house, &c. He had a wife, one son, and one daughter.

This day personally appeared before me, Lewis F. Linn, one of the commissioners appointed, &c., Robert Giboney, of lawful age, who being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he emigrated to the district of Cape Girardeau, then under the Spanish government, in the year 1797; that, in the year 1804 and 1805, as well as this affiant recollects, in an arrangement made between Agnew Massey and this affiant's brother, about going to Mathews' prairie and bringing his (said Massey's) horses to the saline on the Mississippi, then in the district of St. Genevieve, that this affiant went for his brother, and drove Massey's horses to the saltworks as above; the compensation for the above labor was paid in salt, but how much this affiant does not recollect.

April 25, 1835.—James H. Relfe, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

In the case of Agnew Massey, claiming 640 acres of land, (see book No. 6, page 478,) the following testimony was taken before James H. Relfe, commissioner, in Scott county:

Elizabeth Smith states on her oath, that she moved to and settled in Mathews's prairie, province of Upper Louisiana, now State of Missouri, in the year 1804. In the month of May or June of that year she saw the improvement of Agnew Massey in said prairie; from the appearance of the place, she supposes it was in cultivation the year previous; the fence-rails looked old, as if they had been made several years before. There appeared to be two or three acres under fence, which had been in cultivation.

ELIZABETH her × mark. SMITH.

Also, Daniel Stringer being sworn, states that in 1803 he knew Agnew Massey in Mathews's prairie, in the province of Upper Louisiana. In that year he was at the house of the said Massey, in said prairie; he had a family. This affiant does not recollect as to the size of his improvement. He lived in a log cabin, which was the common kind of houses in the country at that time. He had in that year ground enclosed; how much witness cannot state.

290	Joseph Doublewye.	640	Settlement right.		On the waters of St. Francis river.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

August 2, 1813.—Joseph Doublewye's legal representatives, claiming 800 arpens of land on the waters of St. Francis, county of Cape Girardeau.

David Ferrell, duly sworn, says that claimant, Doublewye, had a man on this tract in 1803 and 1804, working for him, and living on the land, himself being occasionally there. Said tract has been inhabited and cultivated to this time. (See recorder's minutes, page 47.)

December 15, 1813.—The representatives of Joseph Doublewye, claiming 800 arpens of land, on the waters of the river St. Francis, in the county of Cape Girardeau, on the interference of Charles Peyton and Henry Burning.

Robert A. Logan, duly sworn, says that he has lived on the river St. Francis, in the district or county of Cape Girardeau, for upward of ten years, to wit, September, 1803; has constantly resided there, and is, and has been very well acquainted with the settlers on the river, and with those on the waters of the river St. Francis, within the county of Cape Girardeau, and that he, said witness, never either knew or heard of a man of the name of Joseph Doublewye within the said settlements, as an improver of lands. Witness further says that, in April, 1804, a cabin was raised by a man said to have been employed by E. Able on lands in the neighborhood of improvements subsequently made by C. Peyton and others; but at that time there were no immediate neighbors. In the fall of that year said man covered the cabin; this cabin never was inhabited, and a few years thereafter was burnt down. In the year 1806, a man of the name of Hillhouse built a cabin, inhabited and cultivated a tract of land in the neighborhood of said cabin; the dwelling of Hillhouse was about half a mile distant therefrom. Since Hillhouse's establishment, the place improved by him has been constantly inhabited and cultivated to this time. Witness understands that Peyton's and Burning's claims are derived from Hillhouse.

Francis Clark, duly sworn, says that in April or May, 1804, witness went to the settlements on the river St. Francis in the then district of Cape Girardeau; was pretty generally acquainted with the people of that river and its waters in said county, and never knew or heard of Joseph Doublewye either improving or claiming lands therein, until the entry of his notice. Thomas Ring told this witness that he, Ring, had built a cabin for E. Able on the waters of the river St. Francis, in 1804. (See recorder's minutes, page 78.)

December 28, 1833.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Joseph Doublewye, alias Deblois, by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land, situate on the waters of St. Francis, county of Madison. (See record-book F, page 50; recorder's minutes, pages 47 and 78.)

STATE OF MISSOURI, county of Madison:

Samuel Campbell, aged about 68 years, being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith, that he was well acquainted with Joseph Deblois, the original claimant; that he was one of the old settlers of the country, then the province of Upper Louisiana; witness also knows the land claimed, and knows that the claimant settled on the same in the summer of 1803, and actually built a house thereon, and cleared and fenced in several acres of land. Claimant hired one Thomas Ring to help him do the work, for which he paid Ring $40, which was valued between the parties by this witness. Witness also knows that the claimant inhabited the house in the fall and winter of 1803 and 1804, and that in the spring of 1804, the claimant planted corn, made a garden, and cultivated the land. In the summer, the Osage Indians made a break in the settlements, and drove the claimant, with many others, from their farms; but witness knows that claimant returned in the fall and gathered his corn, and then returned to the place and again inhabited the house; and that the claimant and others under him, from thenceforward for several successive years, continued to inhabit and cultivate the same place, and extend his improvements; the claimant had a family, or a wife and two children, and the said tract of land has been continually inhabited and cultivated ever since.

SAMUEL CAMPBELL.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

Also came John Clements, a witness, aged 53 years, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith, that he knows the land claimed; that it was always called Deblois's land or improvement; witness saw Thomas Ring at work there in the fall of 1803, in building a house or cabin, and was told by Ring that it was for the claimant; witness also saw the horse which claimant paid Ring for his labor done on the said place; witness also saw corn standing on the place in the fall of 1804; the house was fenced in by the land cleared, and that was the land that was in corn; witness saw afterward one Hillhouse, or Hillis, on the place, and understood that he was there by permission of Deblois.

And also came John L. Pettit, a witness, aged about 51 years, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith, that he knew the original claimant in this country as a citizen and resident, since the year 1801. Witness had a conversation with the commandant of the post, in 1801, in which conversation the commandant told the witness that claimant had his permission to settle on land; that claimant was entitled to land, being a mechanic, a carpenter, and at work for the government at St. Genevieve. Claimant was one of the old settlers in the country.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, November 11, 1796.

To the Lieutenant Governor.

Antonio Vincent Bouis, sub-lieutenant of the militia of this town of St. Louis of Illinois, and residing in the same, with due respect, and in the best manner possible, has the honor to represent to you, that he wishes to establish a plantation for the increase of agriculture, and wanting lands for that purpose, as also to raise cattle, he humbly supplicates you to be pleased to grant to him, in fee simple, for him and his heirs, or others who may represent his right, twenty-five arpens of land in front by forty in depth, in the place where Emilian Yosty has got his plantation, joining him, and continuing, in a straight line, on the side where passes the road to St. Charles of Missouri, and running, for depth, to the hills, the petitioner obliging himself to leave the said road free, and subjecting himself to what the laws prescribe in this particular. 291	Antoine V. Bouis.	1,000	Concession, 11th November, 1796.	Zenon Trudeau.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

July 23, 1807.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: Hon. John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, esquires.

The same (Antoine V. Bouis) claims 1,000 arpens of land, situate on the river Missouri, district of St. Louis, produces a concession from Zenon Trudeau, dated 11th November, 1794 (1796). It being suggested that the claims of Joseph Williams and Robert Young interfered in this claim, ordered, by the board, that this claim will be taken up for further examination on Thursday next, and that the claimant give notice of the day to the said persons, at least four days previous thereto. (See book No. 3, page 7.)

July 30, 1807.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment.

Antoine V. Bouis, claiming 1,000 arpens, situate on the river Missouri. This case is proceeded on in pursuance of an order of the 23d inst. The claimant files a caveat against Jacques Chovan. The claim of Joseph Williams interfering with the above 1,000 arpens tract, the board went into an investigation of the same.

Nicholas Lecompte, sworn, says that, about the year 1795, he was put in possesssion, and had his land surveyed by one Bouvet, and the deponent produced a plat of survey of his land, dated February 20, 1795.

McDaniel, the agent of Joseph Williams, motioned the board for a postponement of this case after hearing testimony. Ordered, by the board, that the same be postponed until January 29, 1808, if not on Sunday, and if on Sunday, until the next day.

James Mackay, duly sworn, says he is acquainted with the survey of Williams, and that about the year 1798, he saw the said Joseph Williams on his land, and that the same had been inhabited and cultivated ever since.

Robert Owen, sworn, says that the first improvement made on the aforesaid land was by Joseph Williams, about eleven years ago. And witness further says that, in the spring of the year, after the first improvement was made, it was inhabited, and has been inhabited and cultivated ever since; and that, in the year 1800, there was about fifteen or eighteen acres under cultivation.

The agent of the United States declares that he believes the concession and survey of the aforesaid Joseph Williams's land are both antedated; whereupon the board require further proof.

Nicholas Lecompte, duly sworn, says that Joseph Williams informed him, at the time he came to work on the land he now claims, that he had a concession for 400 arpens, to include the land he was then improving; he also says that John Louis Mark settled on land in this neighborhood in the spring of 1796.

Robert Owen, sworn, says, about eleven years ago he was in the quarters of the late Spanish officer, M. Trudeau, where there were several persons present, among others, a certain John L. Mark, who made application for a tract of land adjoining or in the neighborhood of N. Lecompte. M. Trudeau replied that he had already made concessions adjoining Lecompte to A. V. Bouis, and to Joseph Williams, and was doubtful whether there remained any vacant land.

Robert Young, sworn, says that, about the year 1800, James Mackay surveyed the land on which Joseph Williams now lives, and the deponent further says that he carried the chain, but whether by regular appointment or not, he does not now recollect. The tract, as surveyed by Mackay, contained, as well as this deponent now recollects, 800 arpens. The board are satisfied as to the dates of the concession and survey aforesaid.

Christopher Shurls, sworn, says that Zenon Trudeau gave his father a grant to settle on the land which A. V. Bouis now claims, and that, after working there some time, he received an order from said Trudeau to remove from said land, otherwise he would lose his labor, as A. V. Bouis's claim was older than that of the deponent's father. This took place about ten or eleven years ago; in consequence of said order, the deponent's father removed from said land, and that Robert Young afterward settled on Williams's land, at the place from which this deponent's father had removed.

Antoine Soulard, sworn, says that Antoine V. Bouis often applied to him to survey his land, before a survey on Williams's land was made; that various circumstances prevented his compliance with this request; and the deponent further says that the decision of Gayoso, respecting those claims, took place after the surveys of Williams and others were made. (See minutes No. 3, pages, 16, 17, and 18.)

January 29, 1808.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: Hon. John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates.

The contending claims of Antoine Vincent Bouis, for 1000 arpens of land, situate on the river Missouri, and of Joseph Williams, for 800 arpens, referred for decision on this day, at a board held on the 30th of July, 1807, page 16.

Jean Louis Marc, duly sworn, says that at least twelve years ago, during the time that Don Zenon Trudeau was lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, he (the deponent) applied to him for a tract of land, situate between Emilian Yosti and Nicholas Lecompte; the lieutenant governor replied, that he believed he had already granted the said land to Antoine Vincent Bouis; the deponent being informed, by several other persons, that the said land did belong to Antoine Vincent Bouis, he went to him, and agreed with him to settle on the said land for three or four years, as the tenant of said Bouis, and that said Vincent Bouis was to let him have three or four arpens of said land, if he complied with his contract, and that said Vincent Bouis verbally agreed to give the deponent ten or twelve head of cows, and from sixteen to twenty sows; this agreement took place in the fall, and that, in the spring following, he, the deponent, went on said tract of land, and built a small cabin, and made sugar; and that, in the following spring, he built a good cabin on the land between Yosti and Lecompte, on a place which he supposed would be vacant, and that, in case he was on the land of Antoine Vincent Bouis, he would get land from said Bouis, but should it be vacant, he would hold it in his own right; made and fenced in a field of about three arpens, and continued on it about twenty months; further says, that Vincent Bouis never complied with his contract, but told him that his time was still going on; that said Vincent Bouis's stock was scattered about in the rushes and could not collect them; that when the lines should be run he would allow him the land according to contract; that during the time he was settled on said land, a man by the name of Shultz went and cut house logs on said tract, and that the deponent gave notice of it to A. V. Bouis, and that said Bouis applied to the lieutenant governor, Zenon Trudeau, and obtained an order, forbidding the said Shultz from cutting logs on said land. Further says, that his house was on the road of the Indians to their hunting ground, and that his wife was frequently insulted by them; he therefore left the house and went near to St. Charles, expecting to return when there should be other settlers near the place which he had left; says that he went a voyage up the Missouri, and when he returned, found trees marked on said land; says that at the time he made said settlement he considered himself as the tenant of Antoine V. Bouis; further says, that about seven or eight months after he had settled with his family in his large cabin, Joseph Williams came and settled near him. Deponent says, that while settled on said land, he raised corn, tobacco, and garden stuff; had raised nothing when said Williams made his settlement, it not being planting time, but had fenced in his field.

Question by agent of Williams. Do you expect to receive from Vincent Bouis the four acres of land contracted for?

Answer. I know nothing of it; but if Mr. Vincent Bouis gets the land, I suppose it to be just that I should have some land for the twenty months I lived on it. (See book No. 3, page 177.)

February 1, 1808.—Board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: Hon. John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates.

The contending claims of Antoine V. Bouis, for 1,000 arpens of land, and of Joseph Williams, for 800 arpens, before the board.

Louis Braseau, duly sworn, says that he saw Jean Louis Marc making sugar at the bottom of a hill, near the road from St. Louis to St. Charles, about ten or eleven years ago; the said Jean Louis Marc told the deponent, at that time, that he was working on the land of Antoine V. Bouis; deponent further saith, that he knows that Jean Louis Marc was making sugar between the settlements of Emilian Yosti and Nicholas Lecompte, and that there was a cabin built on said place, in which said Jean Louis then lived.

Robert Owens, duly sworn, says that Joseph Williams made the first improvement by one year, but don't know who built the first cabin; further says that Williams made his improvement eleven years ago last spring, or eleven years this spring, but thinks it is twelve years this spring coming.

John Richardson, duly sworn, says that he came to this country in the year 1797, and settled within six miles of Williams; had his washing done at Williams' house; saw corn growing in the field ever since occupied by Williams, same year; that he knows the place where Jean Louis Marc made his improvement; that at that time no improvement was made by said Jean Louis

Question by the agent of Antoine V. Bouis. Do you know Jean Louis Marc?

Answer. I do not.

Question by same. Do you know how long since Williams built the first house on the place where he now lives?

Answer. I cannot say.

Question by same. Was there any building on the land in 1797?

Answer. Nothing more than a camp.

Question by same. Did Williams and his family live on the land in 1797?

Answer. Yes, they did.

Question by same. How far from said land did Williams' wife reside?

Answer. About three or four miles.

Question by agent of Williams. What do you understand by a man and his family?

Answer. I understand he and all his concerns.

Question by same. How large are the apple-trees on said land?

Answer. I saw them in blossom last year.

Question by same. How long did Mrs. Williams remain in the house where she did your washing, before she moved on to the place where Williams made his improvements?

Answer. A very short time, not past three or four months.

Antoine Soulard, duly sworn.

Question by agent of Joseph Williams. Did you, in pursuance of an order of Don Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, dated the 26th of August, 1796, put Joseph Williams in possession of a tract of land?

Answer. Yes, I did.

Question by same. Where is that land situated?

Answer. On the south side of the road from St. Louis to St. Charles, about thirty arpens from the Missouri river, and is the same land described in a survey made the 10th of April, 1800, and certified the 10th of May, 1803.

Question by same. Did you at any time put Antoine Vincent Bouis in possession of a tract of land, in pursuance to an order of Don Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, dated the 11th of November, 1796?

Answer. No, I did not; but I went on to the place to put said Bouis in possession, but the obstacles I met with prevented it.

Question by the same. What were those obstacles?

Answer. In setting out from Yosti's corner, in presence of Lafoucade, agent for A. V. Bouis, and Williams being also present, said Williams told him that if he run that line he would take all his, the said Williams', improvement; which proceeding took place before Williams' survey was made; deponent further says that he ran a line from Yosti's corner, about twelve or fourteen arpens in length; he then became convinced that in running said survey, he would take in the improvement of said Williams; and seeing the concessions of Williams was older than the concession of A. V. Bouis, and that said Williams was established on the land, he therefore did not proceed to the survey required by said Bouis; further says, that there was no settlement made on said Bouis' land, at that time, to his knowledge, and that nothing of the kind was claimed by the agent of said Bouis; further says, that he does not remember to have had any conversation with Lafoucade, the agent of Bouis, concerning any settlement on the land of said Bouis.

Question by the agent of Antoine V. Bouis. Who first applied to you to make a survey?

Answer. Williams applied first, because I had his concession in my hands before that of A. V. Bouis.

Question by same. Why did you proceed to the survey of Antoine V. Bouis' land before that of Williams?

Answer. I did not proceed to the survey for A. V. Bouis before that of Williams; I went to survey both of them, provided there should be vacancy sufficient; and finding there was not vacancy enough, I referred the parties to the lieutenant governor.

Question by the board. Do you know, of your own knowledge, when you ran the assaying line, that said Williams had been settled on said place for several years before?

Answer. Yes.

Question by same. Was the time when said Williams delivered his concession into your hands, near the time that it bears date?

Answer. Very near.

On motion of the agent of A. V. Bouis, this case is postponed until this day two weeks. (See book No. 3, page 180.)

March 14, 1808.—Board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: Hon. John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates.

This being the day given to the contending claimants, Antoine V. Bouis and Joseph Williams, for a hearing, and to receive the answers of Christopher Shultz, on interrogatories filed 15th February last, the same were this day returned and filed. Laid over for decision. (Book No. 3, page 188.)

October 2, 1809.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Antoine V. Bouis, claiming 1,000 arpens of land, situate on the river Missouri. (See book No. 3, page 16, 177, 180, and 188.)

Joseph Brazeau, being duly sworn, says that he saw Louis Marc making sugar upon said land, fifteen or sixteen years ago, perhaps less, but long since; that the land upon which the sugar was made, he understood to be the property of Antoine V. Bouis; further says, that Louis Marc had a cabin thereon, but does not know how long he continued there.

The board order a survey to be made of this claim, at the expense of Antoine V. Bouis; to be made as nearly conformable as may be to the concession, so as to include the improvements made by Jean Louis Marc, and not to interfere with the survey ordered for Joseph Williams in this book, page 174, or any other land legally surveyed, except the survey heretofore surveyed for said Joseph Williams. And the board further order that the said survey of Antoine V. Bouis be made at the same time that the survey ordered for Joseph Williams is made. Ordered by the board, that the clerk of this board transmit to the principal deputy surveyor of this Territory, a copy of the orders of this board, for the surveys in both the claims of Antoine V. Bouis and Joseph Williams, and that the said surveyor survey or make return thereof in two weeks from this day. (See book No, 4, page 175.)

November 1, 1809.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Antoine V. Bouis, claiming 1,000 arpens of land, situate on the Missouri district of St. Louis. (See book No. 1, page 78; book No. 3, pages 177, 180, and 188; book No. 4, page 175.)

It is the opinion of a majority of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. Clement B. Penrose, commissioner, voting for the confirmation thereof. (See book No. 4, page 184.)

July 8, 1833.—L. F. Linn, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Antoine V. Bouis, by his legal representative, F. V. Bouis, claiming twenty-five by forty arpens of land, situate near Yosti's plantation, in the Missouri bottom, on the road leading from St. Louis to St. Charles, (special location.) (See record-book C, page 204; minutes No. 4, pages 175 and 184.) Produces a paper, purporting to be an original concession from Zenon Trudeau, dated 11th November, 1796.

M. P. Leduc, duly sworn, says that the decree and signature to the same are in the proper handwriting of said Zenon Trudeau. (See book No. 6, page 220.)

June 13, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

A. V. Bouis, claiming 1,000 arpens of land. (See book No. 6, page 220.)

The board are of opinion that this claim ought to be confirmed to the said A. V. Bouis, or to his legal representatives, according to the concession. (See book No. 7, page 181.)

No. 292.—Andre Chevalier, claiming 400 arpens.

To Don CHARLES DEHAULT DELASSUS, Lieutenant Colonel in the armies of his Catholic Majesty, and Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana:

Andre Chevalier, jr., humbly supplicates and has the honor to represent to you that, being on the point of settling himself, he desires to make and improve a plantation, and wishes that you would grant and concede to him a concession of 400 arpens in superficie, to be taken in a vacant place of the domain. The petitioner hopes to obtain this favor, being the son of one of the most ancient inhabitants of this place, and also able to improve his plantation and raise cattle thereon. In so doing, he shall never cease to pray for the conservation of your days.

Done at New Bourbon, October 1, 1799.

mark.

We, the undersigned, commandant of New Bourbon, do certify to the lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, that the petitioner is worthy to obtain the concession he solicits for, as much on account of the length of time his family has been settled in the upper part of this colony, and their honesty, as also because he has no other profession to support himself but that of a farmer, which he has practised with advantage since his youth.

Done in New Bourbon, October 4, 1799.

PEDRO DELASSUS DE LUZIERE.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, October 18, 1799.

In consequence of the information given by the commandant of the post of New Bourbon, Captain Don Pedro Delassus de Luziere, and considering that the petitioner is the son of one of the most ancient inhabitants of this country, and that he possesses sufficient means to improve the land he solicits, I do grant to him and his heirs the land he solicits, provided it is not to the prejudice of anybody; and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of the quantity of land he asks for, in a vacant place in the King's domain; and this being executed, he shall make out a plat, delivering the same to said party, with his certificate, in order to serve to him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone corresponds the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

The present original title of concession has been recorded, and its compared copy deposited in the archives of this post of New Bourbon, under No. 20. D. L.

Produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Carlos Dehault Delassus, dated the 29th day of November, 1799.

The following testimony was taken before Lewis F. Linn, esq., one of the commissioners:

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of St. Genevieve:

John B. Vallé, aged about 72 years, being duly sworn, as the law directs, deposeth and saith, that he was well acquainted with François Vallé; that he has often seen him write; that the said François Vallé was commandant of the post and district of St. Genevieve, in the year 1799, and that the name, signature, and writing to the recommendation for said grant, dated as aforesaid, is the proper name and signature, and in the proper handwriting of the said François Vallé, the commandant as aforesaid. And this deponent further says that he was well acquainted with Charles Dehault Delassus; that he has often seen him write; that he was the lieutenant governor of the province of Upper Louisiana in the year 1799, and that the name, signature, and handwriting to the said concession from him to the said Jacob Neal, dated the 29th day of November, in the year 1799, is the proper name and signature, and in the proper handwriting of the said Charles Dehault Delassus. No. 295.—Pierre Dumais, claiming 1,000 arpens.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, January 6, 1800.

To Don CHARLES DEHAULT DELASSUS, Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana, &c.:

SIR: Pierre Dumais has the honor to represent to you that, having resided in this province since his infancy, he would wish to make therein an establishment; therefore he has recourse to the bounty of this government, praying that you may be pleased to grant to him a tract of vacant land, of 1,000 arpens in superficie, to be taken in the district of Cape Girardeau, in the place called the Old Cape, adjoining a tract of land belonging to Mr. Louis Lorimier. Favor which the petitioner presumes to expect of your justice.

PIERRE DUMAIS.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, January 9, 1800.

We, commandant of the post of Cape Girardeau of Illinois, have the honor to inform the lieutenant governor that the statement of the petitioner is true, and that we believe him worthy to obtain the concession which he solicits, and which is a part of his Majesty's domain.

LOUIS LORIMIER.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, January 23, 1800.

In consequence of the information given by the commandant of the post of Cape Girardeau, Don Louis Lorimier, by which it appears that the petitioner possesses means more than sufficient to obtain the concession which he solicits, I do grant, to him and his heirs, the land he solicits, provided it is not prejudicial to any person; and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of the quantity of land he asks, on the designated spot of the royal domain; and this being executed, he shall make out a plat of his survey, delivering the same to said party, with his certificate, in order that it shall serve to him to obtain the concession and title, in form, from the intendant general, to whom alone belongs, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands belonging to the royal domain,

No. 297.—Jean B. Lamarche, claiming 800 arpens.

To Mr. ZENON TRUDEAU, Lieutenant Colonel and Lieutenant Governor of the western part of Illinois and dependencies, &c.:

SIR: J. B. Lamarche, residing in St. Louis, wishing to establish himself on the banks of the Missouri, supplicates you to be willing to grant to him a piece of vacant land, of six arpens in front, situated between Mr. Chartrand on one side, and François Janis on the other, by forty (arpens) in depth, having for boundary on one end the Missouri, and on the other Mr. Yosty. Favor which is expected from you by one who shall never cease to pray most sincerely for your prosperity.

ST. LOUIS, November 18, 1798.

ST. LOUIS, November 18, 1798.

The piece of land asked for, of six arpens in front by forty arpens in depth, being vacant on account of the abandonment made of it by one Water, who absconded from this jurisdiction, Mr. B. Lamarche may locate himself there and improve the same; and the surveyor of this jurisdiction shall make out the survey, in order to serve to obtain the concession of the governor general; whom I inform that the said B. Lamarche is a Canadian, a married man, an inhabitant of the country, and a mechanic, having all the qualifications required to obtain this concession.

ZENON TRUDEAU.

DON ANTONIO SOULARD, Surveyor General of the settlements of Upper Louisiana:

I do certify that a tract of land of 800 arpens in superficie, was measured, the lines run, and bounded, in favor and in presence of Gregorio Sarpy, by virtue of the power given by him for this purpose to the deputy surveyor. Said land belonged originally to B. Lamarche, as appears by the title here annexed, which has been presented to me by the said Gregorio Sarpy, a creditor of the said original owner, who absconded from this country some years ago.

The said land was measured with the perch of the city of Paris, of eighteen French feet, lineal measure of the same city, conformably to the custom of measuring land in this province. This land is situated at about twenty-four miles southwest of St. Louis, and bounded on its four sides by vacant lands of the royal domain. The survey and measurement were made without regard to the variation of the needle, which is 7° 30′ east, as appears by the foregoing figurative plat, on which are described the dimensions, courses of the lines, and other boundaries, &c. The survey was made by virtue of the decree of the lieutenant governor, Don Zenon Trudeau, dated November 18, 1798, here annexed. In testimony whereof, I do give the present certificate, with the foregoing figurative plat, drawn conformably to the survey executed by the deputy surveyor, John Terry, on the 12th of January, 1804, who signed the minutes to which I certify.

September 19, 1806.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment. Present: Hon. John B. C. Lucas and Clement B. Penrose, esq.

John B. Lamarche, claiming 6 by 40 arpens of land, situate on the Missouri, to be bounded on each side by one Chartrand and François Janis, and in the rear by Emilian Yosti. Produces a concession from Zenon Trudeau, dated November 18, 1798, and a survey of said quantity, taken on the river Marameck, in consequence of the above described tract having previously been surveyed by another person, the said survey without date.

Toussaint Cerre, being duly sworn, says that the said claimant actually inhabited the said tract of land as surveyed on the Marameck, about 7 or 8 years ago. Rejected. (See No. 2, page 15.)

September 27, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Gregoire Sarpy, assignee of John Baptist Lamarche, claiming 800 arpens of land. (See book No. 2, page 15, for the claim of John Baptist Lamarche.) It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. (See book No. 4, page 512.)

July 8, 1833.—L. F. Linn, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Jean B. Lamarche, by Alexander McNair's legal representatives, claiming 800 arpens of land, originally granted by Zenon Trudeau, to said Lamarche, on November 18, 1798. (See record-books D, page 345, and C, page 263. Minutes No. 2, page 15; No. 4, page 512.) Produces sheriff's deed. (See book No. 6, page 223.)

June 15, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

Jean B. Lamarche, claiming 240 arpens of land. (See book No. 6, page 223, where this claim is entered for 800 arpens.) The board are of opinion that 240 arpens of land, which is the quantity asked for in the petition, ought to be confirmed to the said Jean B. Lamarche, or to his legal representatives, according to the concession, to be taken within the survey of record in book C, page 263, in the recorder's office. (See book No. 7, page 184.)

No. 298.—J. P. Cabanné, claiming 2,000 arpens.

ST. LOUIS, November 11, 1799.

To DON CHARLES DEHAULT DELASSUS, Lieutenant Colonel, attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and Lieutenant Governor of the upper part of the same province:

SIR: J. Pre. Cabanné, father of a family, residing in this town, and since several years in this province of Louisiana, has the honor to represent to you that, considering the dangers to which one is exposed in the fur trade, which is decreasing every day, and viewing agriculture as the only secure and certain means of procuring an independent existence, he hopes that you will be pleased to treat him with the same goodness and generosity that all the subjects of his Majesty have found in you: therefore, not having yet received any concession, he has the honor to supplicate you to have the goodness to grant to him, in full property, a tract of land of 2,000 arpens in superficie, to be taken in a vacant place of his Majesty's domain, on the north side of the Missouri. This favor shall be one link more to bind him to the soil he inhabits, and will increase in him, if possible, the sentiments of fidelity and devotedness he bears to the government under which he has found all the advantages which can make a Frenchman, whom the revolution has exiled from his country, forget all the evils he has formerly experienced; and you will do justice.

CABANNÉ.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, November 12, 1799.

Considering that the petitioner has been settled in this country since a long time, and whereas we are assured that he possesses sufficient means to improve the lands which he solicits, I do grant to him and his heirs the land he solicits, provided that it is not to the prejudice of any one, and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of the quantity of land he asks, in a vacant place of the royal domain; which being executed, he shall make out a plat of his survey, delivering the same to said party with his certificate, in order to serve to him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone corresponds, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

October 7, 1808.—Board met. Present: Hon. Clement B. Penrose and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

J. P. Cabanné, claiming 2,000 arpens of land, to be taken on any vacant land, produces to the board a notice of said claim to the recorder, dated May 31, 1808, in which he states his concession to have been lost; produces to the board a registry of the same in book No. 2, marked B, page 44, lodged in the recorder's office.

Claimant, sworn, says that he has not the concession in his hands at present; does not know where it is, and believes it to be lost.

Antoine Soulard, sworn, says that, about the year 1800, he had the concession of claimant in his possession, and then recorded it in the registry, as before stated, in book No. 2, marked B, page 44. Laid over for decision. (See minutes, book No. 3, page 283.)

June 18, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Jeane Pierre Cabanné, claiming 2,000 arpens of land. (See book No. 3, page 283.) It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. The board, on examining the registry referred to in this claim, to wit, book No. 2, marked B, find several concessions of subsequent dates to the one referred to, page 44; in the pages of the book preceding that number, and particularly in page 43, one dated 31st March, 1803; and, also, on examining the said alleged registry, (book No. 1, page 27,) the board find a concession dated 21st November, 1803. (See book No. 4, page 386.)

July 8, 1833.—L. F. Linn, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

J. P. Cabanné, claiming 2,000 arpens of land. (See record-book D, page 180. Minutes No. 3, page 283; No. 4, page 386. Spanish record of concessions, No. 2, page 44. See book No. 6, page 221.)

No. 299.—Jean Marie Cardinal, claiming 40 arpens.

Don FRANCISCO CRUZAT, Lieutenant-Governor of the Settlements of Illinois:

Having examined the statement contained in the foregoing memorial, dated August 27th, 1777, and the demand of John Mary Cardinal, inhabitant of this town of St. Louis, in which he represents that he has not a quantity of land sufficient to make the sowings necessary for the maintenance of his family, I have granted, and do grant to him, in fee simple, for him and his heirs, a tract of land of two arpens in width by twenty in length, situated in the prairie called the White-ox prairie; bounded on one side by the (land) of Lewis Biponet, behind by a branch that comes down from the hills, and on the two other sides by land not yet granted, on condition to establish said land in one year from this day, his Majesty reserving the right to dispose of the same, as being his domain, in case of utility to his royal service.

Given in St. Louis of Illinois, August 28, 1777.

FRANCISCO CRUZAT.

ANTONIO SOULARD, Ex-Surveyor General of this Upper Louisiana for his Majesty:

We do certify to all whom it may concern, that the foregoing title is conformable to the original, recorded on page 12, of book No. 3, of the ancient titles of concessions in this Upper Louisiana, under my charge; which copy I have delivered at the request of Mr. Louis Labaume, he being the purchaser of said land by virtue of a certified copy of a juridical deed of sale, which he communicated to us, and executed to him in St. Charles, for the said property, before Captain Mackay, commandant of the settlements on the Missouri, dated July 26th, 1804. Which (certificate) I have delivered in order that it may serve and be available to the (party) interested, as in right, before all competent authorities and tribunals.

No. 300.—Widow Dodier, claiming 120 arpens.

ST. LOUIS, May 23, 1772.

I, the undersigned, Martin Duralde, by virtue of the power in me vested by Don Pedro Piernas, captain of infantry and lieutenant governor of the settlements and other parts dependent of the Spanish government of Illinois, at the request of the inhabitants of this post of St. Louis, asking that the dimensions, courses of the lines, and boundaries of the lands, they own in the vicinity of said post be determined by a competent person, authorized to that effect, declare to all those whom it may concern, that, at the request of each of the said inhabitants, during the fall of the year 1770, and the springs of the years 1771 and 1772, (of which I neither state the months nor the days, the operations (of survey) having been made at different times, and not in succession, in relation to those who have possessions distant from one another and situated in various places,) and, namely, at the desire of the widow Dodier, I purposely went from my dwellings, situated in the above said post of St. Louis, on a tract of land of three arpens in width by forty others in length, to her belonging, part of it ploughed and the rest untilled, situated in the prairie beyond the mound called Lagrange, and adjoining immediately to that (the land) of Mr. Debrusseau, and on the other side to that of said Debrusseau, on the two other sides to the King's domain, in order to survey the same with my instrument and a chain of forty-five feet in length, which length taken four times just makes the arpent used in this country, which has one hundred and eighty feet on each side. In the execution of which survey I was accompanied by the said proprietor and by her said most immediate neighbor, in order to serve as assisting witnesses, and to indicate exactly the true situation of their respective concessions. I succeeded in surveying the same, and had it bounded, in my presence, with stones at its four angles, (extremities,) after having measured it on its lines of width and length; which first two parallels, that is to say, in width, run between north one quarter northwest and the north, or, more exactly, deviate from the north toward the west, five degrees; and the two others, that is to say, in length, also parallels, run west one quarter northwest, or, rather, deviate from the west toward the north, eleven degrees fifteen minutes, without regard to the variation of the compass which may exist, making, consequently, in directing the sight from the point of departure toward the courses indicated, an acute angle of seventy-three degrees forty-five minutes, allowance being made for the differences caused by the unevenness of the land and inclination of the lines toward one another, relatively to the horizontal perpendiculars, which always serve to their true measures, as well on the width as on the length. And I do attest the same with my signature, and with the unanimous consent of all the proprietors here above named, (in livre terrien, No. 2,) assembled at present, with the approbation of the said Don Pedro Piernas, in the government-house, in order to serve mutually as witnesses and affirm the facts, some with their signatures and others with their declarations, not knowing how to sign, in presence of Don Pedro Piernas, the aforesaid lieutenant governor, and Don Louis St. Ange de Bellerive, formerly a captain, and lately commandant of this said post, both serving, to wit: the last named to certify with his signature, that, in his said capacity, and by virtue of the power with which he was vested, to have granted, either by titles or verbally, the above-described tracts of land, in the name of his Majesty; and the said Mr. Piernas to approve, confirm, and ratify, (also with his signature in his capacity of actual lieutenant governor, by which he is vested with the same power of granting,) the possessions already granted by the said St. Ange, and specified in the foregoing register, containing sixty-eight written pages, this inclusive, which I remit in the archives of this government, in order to be therein preserved forever, and serve, in case of need, of surety, authenticity and attestation in behalf of all therein stated.

No. 301.—William Hartly, claiming 650 arpens.

To Don CHARLES DEHAULT DELASSUS, Lieutenant-Colonel, attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana:

ST. LOUIS, January 14, 1800.

Wm. Hartly, Roman Catholic, has the honor to represent to you that he came to this country about three years ago, with the intention to settle himself in the same; that for that purpose he obtained the permission of your predecessor, Don Zenon Trudeau, with his promise of a concession for a tract of land. In consequence he returned to America (the United States) in order to bring his family immediately, but a serious disease having obliged him to delay his departure, he could not get here as soon as he would have wished. He hopes of your justice that you will be pleased to take his demand into consideration, and grant to him a concession for a tract of land corresponding to the number of his family, which consists of himself, his wife, and nine children. Which (land) he has chosen at about six leagues in the N. W. of this town, St. Ferdinand, and near the plantation of Mr. Yosty, in the same settlement. The petitioner having no other views but to live as a peaceable and submissive cultivator (of the soil,) hopes to deserve the favor which he claims of your kindness.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, January 14, 1800.

In consequence of the official note sent to us by Don Antonio Soulard, surveyor general of this Upper Louisiana, under date of this same day and month, by which he certifies to the number of persons composing the family of the petitioner, and to other corresponding circumstances, the same surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put him in possession of 650 arpens of land in superficie, in the place where he asks the same; said quantity being proportionate to the number of persons composing his family, according to the regulation of the governor general of this province. And this being executed, the party interested shall have to solicit the title of concession in form, from the intendant general of these provinces, to whom alone corresponds, by order of his Majesty, the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

November 20, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Absalom Kennison, claiming 640 arpens of land, situate in Bois-brule, district of St. Genevieve, produces notice to the recorder.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See minute-book No. 5, page 442.)

January 31, 1834.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Absalom Kennison, by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land, situate in Bois-brule bottom, Perry county. (See record-book E, page 241; minute-book No. 5, page 442.)

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, commissioner:

Claimant produces, in support of said claim, Thomas Allen as a witness, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he emigrated to this State, then known as the Territory of Upper Louisiana, in the spring of 1797, and settled in the Bois-brule bottom, in Perry county, where he has had his home, and resided ever since. This deponent was well acquainted with the said Absalom Kennison, deceased, and he well recollects that said Kennison moved to and settled in the said Bois-brule bottom in the year 1799, on a place at or near the hill bounding said bottom; and that he continued to reside there for several years; that he well recollects that, in the year 1803, he had on said place a considerable field, he thinks not less than ten or twelve acres, cleared, fenced, and cultivated, and had built a dwelling-house thereon, in which he resided with his family, and other out-buildings, such as were usual in the country at that time. This deponent further states that the place, so settled and improved by the said Absalom Kennison, deceased, is now covered by other claims, and that the same are held, as he believes, and as is generally understood in the neighborhood, by those deriving title to the same from the government; and that the said Absalom Kennison continued to reside in the country until the time of his death, which was, as he thinks, about the year 1816.

Elizabeth Locherd, also being sworn, testifies and says that she came to this country, then Upper Louisiana, in the spring of 1800, and settled in the edge of Bois-brule bottom aforesaid, and that very shortly after her arrival she was at the house of Absalom Kennison, senior, deceased, where he resided with his family, described in the foregoing deposition of Thomas Allen, and continued to visit there frequently, having been the neighbor of the said Kennison in Kentucky, and being also a neighbor here; and that the said Kennison had a considerable field enclosed and cultivated, previous to and in the year 1803, and saw corn and other things growing in said field.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

February 11, 1809.—Board met. Present: Hon. John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates.

Jacob Miller, claiming 350 arpens of land, situate in White Water, district of Cape Girardeau, produces to the board, as a certificate of permission to settle, list B, on which said claimant is No. 32, and a plat of survey signed by B. Cousin, and signed by Antonio Soulard, as received for record.

Joseph Niswanger, being duly affirmed, says that claimant settled in the year 1804, cleared five or six acres, built a cabin. In the same or following year, claimant sold the improvement, and removed to another tract which he had purchased, which latter has an enclosure and cultivation of about ten acres, a cabin and stable. Inhabitation and cultivation to the present day. Claimant has a wife and one child. Laid over for decision (See book No. 3, page 467.)

Jacob Miller, by his legal representatives, claiming 300 acres of land, situate in the county of Cape Girardeau. (See record-book B, page 292; minute-book No. 3, page 467, and No. 4, page 235.)

STATE OF MISSOURI, Cape Girardeau county:

Personally appeared before L. F. Linn, one of the commissioners, &c., Isaac Miller, of lawful age, who being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that his father, John Miller, emigrated to the upper province of Louisiana, now State of Missouri, in the month of October, in the year 1803; that this affiant and the above-named Jacob Miller, an elder brother, moved with him; that in the same year application was made to the Spanish commandant of the post of Cape Girardeau, Louis Lorimier, for a grant of land for each of them, and the said commandant granted to John Miller 800 arpens, and to this affiant and Jacob Miller 300 arpens each, and that the application for these grants was made for the express purpose of permanently settling on and improving the same, they all being farmers and cultivators of the soil; that they all settled on and cultivated those said grants of land; that the grants made to this affiant and John Miller, were confirmed to them by a former board of commissioners. The grant to Jacob Miller, the elder brother, was not confirmed, for some cause to this affiant unknown. This deponent further states that Jacob Miller made valuable improvements on the same—dwelling-houses, out-houses, orchards, &c.; the dwelling-house was built in the year 1803, the other buildings immediately afterward, either late in the fall of 1803, or in the beginning of the year 1804, witness does not positively recollect which. Witness further states claimant commenced preparing ground for cultivation in 1803, and in the year 1804 raised a crop of corn, vegetables, &c.

No. 304.—John Greenwalt, jr., claiming 640 acres.

No.	Name of original claimant.	Acres.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
304	John Greenwalt, jr.	640	Settlement right.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

June, 1806.—The same, (Israel Dodge,) assignee of John Greenwalt, claiming under the second section a tract of land situate on the waters of Bois-brule, produces a deed of transfer executed by the aforesaid John Greenwalt, dated October 27, 1804.

Camille Lassus, being duly sworn, says that the said Greenwalt had obtained a permission to settle from Pierre de Luziere.

Thomas Maddin, being also sworn, says that the said Greenwalt had a concession for said land; that he, the witness, surveyed the same by virtue of said concession; that the same was bought by one Hayden, but, witness believes, never cultivated. The board reject this claim. (See book No. 2, page 23.)

September 28, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas and Clement B. Penrose, commissioners.

Israel Dodge, claiming as an assignee of John Greenwalt, —— arpens of land. (See book No. 2, page 23.)

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 4, page 514.)

January 29, 1834.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

John Greenwalt, jr., by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land situated on Bois-brule creek, Perry county. (See record-book E, page 218; minute-book No. 2, page 23, and No. 4, page 514.)

Claimant produces, in support of said claim, John Greenwalt, the father of said settler, who states that his son John improved a place on Bois-brule creek, in the bottom of the same name, now in Perry county, and State of Missouri, adjoining to a tract of land of Jones Newsom on one side, and John Morgan on the other side; that he settled on said place as early as the winter of 1803 and 1804; that he built a cabin on it, and cleared a piece of ground, and planted fruit trees thereon, previous to the summor of 1804, in which summer he raised corn and all other vegetables usual to be raised. On the ground he had 30 —— cleared. This deponent knows the above facts, because he lived with his son at the same time; that his said son was then more than twenty-five years of age, and doing for himself.

John Greenwalt, jr., claiming 640 acres of land. (See book No. 6, page 488.)

The board remark that the testimony given by Thomas Maddin, before the former board of commissioners, has no relation to this claim, but refers to the claim of John Greenwalt, sr., recorded in book B, page 201, and confirmed by Bates to Clement Hayden, assignee of said Greenwalt, sr. (See Bates's decisions, page 64.)

The board are of opinion that 640 acres of land ought to be granted to the said John Greenwalt, jr., or to his legal representatives, according to possession.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

December 10, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

William Thompson, claiming 790 acres of land, situate in the district of Cape Girardeau, produces record of a plat of survey, dated 14th February, and certified 28th February, 1806. It is the opinion of this board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 5, page 505.)

January 10, 1834.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

William Thompson, by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land, situate on Hubble's creek, county of Cape Girardeau. (See record-book B, page 303; book No. 5, page 505.)

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Cape Girardeau, ss:

William Williams states that he is aged about 58 or 59; that he moved to, and settled in the district of Cape Girardeau, Upper Louisiana, in 1799; that he was well acquainted with one William Thompson; he knows that the said Thompson had an improvement on the waters of Randle's creek, in said district, in the year 1800 or 1801; the said Thompson had corn growing on said place in the year 1801; and this affiant, from the best of his recollection, states that the said Thompson occupied said place up to the year 1802. There was something like two or three acres of land cleared on said place, at the time mentioned above.

No. 309.—Paschal Detchmendy, claiming 7,056 arpens

To Don CHARLES DEHAULT DELASSUS, Lieutenant Colonel, attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and Lieutenant Governor of the upper part of the same province:

Paschal Detchmendy, a Frenchman, residing since several years in St. Genevieve, has the honor to represent to you that, with the aid of the government, he has succeeded in getting in operation the first saw-mill that ever was in the country; which mill has been of the greatest assistance in all the undertakings of individuals; and wishing, more than ever, to turn his industry as much to his advantage as to that of his fellow-citizens, he has in contemplation the establishing of a stock farm, on a large scale, so as to enable him to have, in the said St. Genevieve, a slaughter-house, which will not fail to furnish meat all the year round, at a moderate price; having also the project to establish a tan-yard, when the sale of his cattle shall have procured him a sufficient quantity of hides; he presumes again to hope, in this circumstance, for the protection and assistance of the authorities, in order to obtain the concession of an insulated tract of land suitable to the execution of his undertaking, giving you the assurance that, in case the government was to send troops in this upper part of Louisiana, he would furnish the rations of meat in a way to be relied upon, and at a lower price than anybody else. Therefore, he has the honor to supplicate you to have the goodness to condescend to grant him, in a vacant part of the domain, at his choice, a league (square) of land in superficie, or 7,056 arpens; considering that this same quantity has always been granted, without difficulty, in the posts of Opelousas and Atacapas, to all those who had the means to establish stock farms, and it being well known to you that I can comply with all that is required in such a case; that the Illinois are as susceptible to have such establishments as any other post in this province; the petitioner has the honor to hope that you will be pleased to do justice to the demand of a faithful subject, who is grateful for the bounties which have been heaped upon him, in a country, in the bosom of which he has forgotten his past adversities and misfortunes.

P. DETCHMENDY.

ST. LOUIS, December 27, 1799.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, December 28, 1799.

Whereas, we are assured that the petitioner possesses sufficient means to improve the land which he solicits, I do grant to him and his heirs the land he solicits, provided it is not prejudicial to anybody; and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of the quantity of land he asks, in the place designated; and that being executed, he shall make out a plat of his survey, delivering the same to said party with his certificate, in order that it shall serve to him to obtain the concession and title, in form, from the intendant general, to whom alone belongs, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

On the 28th day of October, 1818, before me, Joseph Bogy, one of the justices of the peace of the county of St. Genevieve, in the Missouri Territory, personally appeared Thomas Maddin, esq., of the said county, who being duly sworn, according to law, deposeth and saith that, in the beginning of February, 1804, he, as deputy for Antoine Soulard, the Spanish surveyor general of the upper part of the province of Louisiana, received instructions from the said surveyor to make a survey for Mr. Paschal Detchmendy, of the said now county, then district, of St. Genevieve, of a tract of land, granted to him by the Spanish commandant, of several thousand arpens, but the exact quantity he does not now recollect; that, in company with the said Paschal Detchmendy, he, the deponent, in consequence of such orders, went to a place now called Bellevue, in the now county of Washington, in the said territory, and in the then district of St. Genevieve, for the purpose of making the said survey; that when they were there, and preparing to make the same, they were met by a number of armed men, at least ten, who, by force, and with threats of personal violence, prevented him from doing so; in consequence of which he was obliged to leave the ground, and desist from his operations. The same armed persons even following them some distance, for fear, as he then thought, and now thinks, that he and the said Detchmendy should return to survey the said tract of land. And the deponent further saith, that the said survey would then have been made, if he had not been opposed in the manner as above mentioned; and that the said survey was so attempted to be made on or about the middle of the said month of February, in the said year, and before the possession of the country was had by the United States. And lastly, the deponent saith that he does not think, nor does he now believe the said survey could at any time thereafter have been made, and that any further attempts to have done so would have been attended with the like danger of personal violence and opposition.

October 8, 1834.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. S. Mayfield, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

In the case of Paschal Detchmendy, claiming 7,056 arpens of land, (see book No. 6, page 378,) the following testimony was taken by James H. Relfe, commissioner:

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Washington:

Personally appeared before James H. Relfe, one of the commissioners for the adjustment of private land claims in the State of Missouri, John Stewart, who deposeth and saith that, in the month of November, 1805, he was appointed deputy surveyor, under Antoine Soulard, for all operations to be made in the settlement of Bellevue, which appointment and instructions from James Wilkinson, is herewith exhibited. In obedience to instructions, he called on Mr. Maddin for a report of such claims as had been surveyed by him within the district now assigned to this deponent; in reply to which, a communication was received, dated December 9, 1805, stating Mr. Bates's and Mr. Stodard's (Strother's) were the only claims surveyed by him which lay within the bounds assigned to this deponent. No application was ever made for the survey of the claim of Paschal (now Morrison's) nor does deponent recollect to have heard of the claim until after the expiration of the time allowed for the survey of the private land claims. In executing the surveys of private land claims in Bellevue, deponent made a survey for William Reed, sr., adjoining the land of Moses Bates, which has been confirmed; also a tract for William Reed, jr., adjoining the land of Edward Johnson, which is now before the board of commissioners; also a survey for Joseph Reed, sr., adjoining the land of Robert Reed, which has been confirmed; and a tract for Joseph Reed, jr., adjoining to and south of the land of Joseph Reed, sr., which is now before the board of commissioners for their action, and which will more particularly appear by reference to the plats and field notes returned by deponent to the proper office, in the months of January and February, 1806. Deponent further says, that the said William Reed, sr., William Reed, jr., Joseph Reed, sr., and Joseph Reed, jr, were four different persons, inhabiting and cultivating the four different tracts named, when the surveys were made. Deponent says he removed to Upper Louisiana from the State of Kentucky, in the year 1800, and established himself in Mine à Breton, and has continued to reside in the district of country now called Washington county, ever since. It was his practice to hunt for some distance round the mines, and he believes himself to have been one of the first Americans who discovered the valley of land now called Bellevue, and it was through his information and advice the first settlements were made by the Reeds and others, in the year 1803. For a considerable time after the commencement of the settlements around the mines, it was dangerous for families to live remote from each other, on account of the Indians, who, if they could find a small party of whites, would beat them severely, and rob them of their horses and other property. As late as the year 1808, the Osage Indians made an incursion in Bellevue, and drove off between twenty-five and thirty horses, or nearly all the work-horses in the settlement.

JAMES H. RELFE, Commissioner.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Washington:

Personally appeared before James H. Relfe, one of the commissioners, &c., John T. McNeal, who deposeth and saith that, in the year 1797, he arrived in the province of Upper Louisiana, and the following year took up his residence at Mine à Breton; that he was well acquainted with the country now called Bellevue, at the time of its settlement by the Reeds and others. At its first settlement it was called Big lick, but late in the year 1803, deponent understood an old Frenchman, of influence at the mines, gave it the name of Bellevue, which it has retained ever since. And deponent further states he never heard of the claim of Paschal, now attempted to be established by Morrison, until after the settlements and surveys of the lands of the Reeds, Bates, Strothers, and others; nor until the attempt of Mr. Maddin to survey the claim, when the settlers drove them off, and would not permit the survey to be made, to include their settlements, as the deponent understood.

Letter of Thomas Maddin to A. Soulard.

ST. GENEVIEVE, February 14, 1804.

DEAR SIR: I have just returned from surveying at the mines for Mr. Choteau, and the inhabitants of the old mines. The division lines between each person's share, I have not yet run, as I find it necessary to have the whole of the proprietors there at the time of the divisions being made. While in that country, I called on Mr. Auston respecting Doctor Watkins's survey, who seemed to find it not consistent with the interest of the Doctor to lay it on that place, nor does not seem to have any other place in view. I told him there was but eight hundred acres surveyed there; should you want it surveyed there, let me know your intentions respecting it, and will have it done as soon as possible; if not, let me know if the land may be surveyed for others. From the mines I went with Mr. Paschal to survey his concession at Bellevue. On my arrival at Wm. Reed's, I found several armed men there, who, without any provocation, behaved very insolent, and declared themselves and country entirely out of the possession of the Spanish government, and that if I surveyed any land within nine miles of that place, they would break, kill, and slay all before them. I have been many times in the course of the night apprehensive for Mr. Paschal, myself, and compass. I hope you will not think that I tell you through any enmity that I think Mr. Auston is at the head of this business, as he called Thomas Rush out of my company, who says that at that time Mr. Auston proposed to him to join the company at Bellevue; that now was the time for him to save his land, and if they could keep the land from being surveyed, he would engage him his land, with other circumstances too tedious to mention. The French people here in general are very much displeased at the rebellious and ungenerous proceedings of those people, who, I think, if ordered, will be willing to assist in bringing them to punishment, the which, if Mr. Lasource does not order, I do not expect we will be able to survey much more. It seems hard to see this rebellious crew have their intentions fulfilled in that manner, and go unpunished, and am, dear sir, with compliments to Madam Soulard,

Your humble servant,

THOMAS MADDIN.

I have made my complaint to Mr. Vallé, who sends it to the governor.

No. 312.—Adrien Langlois, claiming 1,500 arpens.

To Don CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS, Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana, &c.:

ST. GENEVIEVE, October 4, 1799.

SIR: Adrien Langlois has the honor to represent to you that, having emigrated, at the solicitation of Mr. Lassus de Luziere, to this Upper Louisiana, where he has resided a long time with Mr. Lorimier, and with Mr.

LANGLOIS.

We, the undersigned, civil and military commandant of the post and district of New Bourbon, do certify to the lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, that the statement made in the above petition is sincere, exact, and true. We do particularly attest, as it is asserted by the petitioner that he has been induced by us to emigrate from the United States, and to come to settle in Illinois; and that he has well and honestly conducted himself when he was living with Messrs. Lorimier and Peyroux, as well as with Mr. Menard, whose affairs he has yet the management of, on this side; that he is married, and owns a great many cattle, and with his means he is well able to improve the concession he solicits, which evidently belongs to the King's domain.

Done in New Bourbon, October 7, 1799.

P'RE DELASSUS DE LUZIERE.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, October 24, 1799.

In consequence of the information given by the captain of the post of New Bourbon, Don Pr. Lassus de Luziere, by which it appears to me that the petitioner possesses sufficient means to obtain the concession which he solicits, I do grant to him and his heirs the land he solicits, provided it is not prejudicial to anybody, and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of the quantity of land he asks, in the place designated, belonging to the royal domain; and this being executed, he shall make out a plat of his survey, delivering the same to said party, with his certificate, in order to serve him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone corresponds, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

Adrien Langlois, by his heirs and legal representatives, claiming 1,500 arpens of land, situate district of St. Genevieve.

The original concession, in this case, is not produced, the same, as is stated, being lost, destroyed, or mislaid, by time and accident; but claimant produces a copy thereof, dated October 24, 1799, by Charles Dehault Delassus; also, a copy of the recommendation of Pierre Delassus de Luziere; also, a plat of survey, from the register's office, to show that the same has been reserved from sale, &c. (For notice in the recorder, see book E, page 238; No. 5, page 451.)

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, esq., one of the commissioners:

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of St. Genevieve:

Paschal Detchmendy, aged 71 years, being duly sworn, as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he was well acquainted with Adrien Langlois; that he was a resident in this country in the year 1796, when he (the deponent) came to the country, and that he continued to reside in the country for many years before and after the country was purchased by the United States; that he never saw the original concession relied on, but that he always understood he had a grant or concession for land within a few miles of the town of St. Genevieve. And he further states, that he saw the said Langlois at work on the said land, which, he understood, had been granted to him; that there was a house and field thereon; and that the same was always claimed by him during his lifetime, and by his representatives ever since.

No. 314.—Ludwell Bacon, claiming 1,000 arpens.

To Don CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS, Lieutenant Governor and Commander-in-chief of Upper Louisiana, &c.:

Ludwell Bacon, a Roman Catholic, and father of a family, has the honor to represent that, with the permission of the government, he came over on this side of the Mississippi, where he has selected a tract of land in his Majesty's domain, in the district of St. Louis; therefore, he supplicates you to have the goodness to grant him, at the same place, one thousand arpens of land in superficie, said quantity being necessary for the employment of his slaves and his other means. The encouragement which this beneficent government has always given to industry, induces the petitioner to hope that you will please grant him the favor he solicits of your justice.

LUDWELL BACON.

ST. ANDRE, December 6, 1802.

Be it forwarded to the lieutenant-governor, together with the information that the above statement is true, and that the petitioner deserves to obtain the favor he solicits.

SANTYAGO MACKAY.

ST. ANDRE, December 6, 1802.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, December 14, 1802.

In consequence of the information given by the commandant of St. Andre, Don Santyago Mackay, I do grant to the petitioner the tract of land of one thousand arpens in superficie, which he solicits, provided it is not prejudicial to any person; and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of the said quantity of land asked for, in the place indicated; and this being executed, he shall make out a plat, delivering the same to said party, together with his certificate, in order to serve him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone belongs the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

Registered, No. 7.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

October 28, 1808.—Board met. Present: Hon. Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates.

William Russell, assignee of George Pursley, claiming 1,100 arpens of land, situate on the waters of Point Labadie creek, district of St. Louis, produces to the board a notice to the recorder, and a deed of transfer from George Pursley to claimant, dated 2d September, 1807.

Aaron Colvin sworn, says that George Pursley, seven years ago, built a cabin on the tract claimed, and commenced clearing some ground, but never finished it; he knows of nothing else being done on the land by or for him, said Pursley.

Ambrose Boles, sworn, says that George Pursley was living on the tract claimed in April, 1803, had a garden fenced in, and something growing in it, when he was driven off by the Indians. For permission to settle, see Mackay's list. Laid over for decision. (See book No. 3, page 336.)

April 16, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

William Russell, assignee of George Pursley, claiming 1,100 arpens of land. (See book No. 3, page 336.) The following testimony in the foregoing claim, transcribed from the rough minutes, as perpetuated by the board on the 17th January, 1810:

Peter Pritchett, duly sworn, says that Pursley inhabited and cultivated the land claimed, in the spring of 1803; that he, witness, saw vegetables growing at that time on said land; that on or about the 3d of April, same year, the Indians killed a man by the name of Ridenhour in the same settlement; that the settlement, in consequence of said Ridenhour being killed, broke up. Witness says that George McFall, by permission of said Pursley, inhabited said land in the fall of said year; that Pursley's family, in the year 1803, consisted of his wife and four or five children. Witness says that the inhabitants generally returned to the settlement in the fall of 1803.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 4, page 323.)

St. Louis, December 19, 1813.—William Russell, assignee of George Pursley, claiming 800 arpens of land, said to be on the waters of Point Labadie creek, county of St. Louis, produces deed from Pursley, dated 2d of September, 1807. (Recorded in book D, page 322.)

Thomas Gibson, duly sworn, says that George Pursley raised a house on this tract in 1802, in the fall. In the spring of 1803 he moved on the tract and cultivated it. In that year, 1803, this settlement was broken up by an inroad of the Indians. A small field was in cultivation when the Indians drove him away. McFall, when the danger ceased, went upon this tract under Pursley, by purchase or permission. Thinks it was in the fall following, to wit, fall of 1803. The winter succeeding the term of McFall's taking possession, said McFall inhabited the premises.

John McMickle, duly sworn, says that he was at McFall's on this tract in 1804. Said McFall was making sugar. At that time there was a good cabin inhabited by McFall. There was ground clear and fenced at that time. Said tract has been inhabited and cultivated for six years past, constantly. (See Bates's minutes, page 83.)

June 18, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

George Pursley, by his legal representatives, claiming 800 arpens of land, situate on Point Labadie creek. (See record-book D, page 323, for notice of 1,100 arpens; book E, for notice for abandoning over 800 arpens; minutes, book No. 3, page 336; No. 4, page 323; Bates's minutes, page 24, where the same is "not granted." EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

August 31, 1812.—Peter Jump and Ephraim Musick, contending claims.

Monday, the 21st of September next, assigned as the day of hearing. Service of a copy hereof on the adverse party ten days previously to the hearing, or publication in the Missouri Gazette for two preceding weeks, will be deemed sufficient notice. (See Bates's minutes, page 1.)

ST. LOUIS, September 21, 1812.—Present: Frederick Bates, commissioner.

This being the day set for the hearing testimony in the contending claims of Peter Jump and Ephraim Musick, the said Peter Jump appeared with his witnesses.

Peter Jump, claiming 80 arpens of land on Feefee creek, in district of St. Louis, adjoining the tract purchased by said Jump from Ephraim Musick and one Campbell, by virtue of having actually inhabited and cultivated the same.

Absalom Link, duly sworn, says that it is about five or six years since claimant went on the adjoining lands, which he purchased of Ephraim Musick, and has constantly, since that time, cultivated the land claimed; raised, planted trees, apple, peach, and cherry, and built houses.

Question by Peter Jump. Do you know of Ephraim Musick, or any other person than claimant, having actually settled this tract?

Answer. I know of no other than yourself.

Question by claimant. Where was E. Musick actually residing when he cultivated the land claimed?

Answer. He lived on lands which he is understood to have purchased of Joseph Williams.

Lewis Williams, being duly sworn, says that the land claimed was cultivated in the year 1801, by E. Musick; that said land came into possession of claimant by virtue of a deed from E. Musick, given in 1807, and that claimant has had undisturbed possession thereof ever since; that he has two buildings on said tract, and said land cultivated every year since 1801 to the present day. Corn, grass, orchards, &c., are now growing; that the houses in which he first lived were on the line; some on outside. I never knew an actual settler on the place except claimant.

Question by William Russell, for Musick, to Absalom Link. 1st, How long since Peter Jump came to Louisiana?

Answer. Five or six years.

Question 2, by Russell. Who did the first cultivation on tract claimed?

Answer. Does not certainly know; but the land was in E. Musick's possession, and supposes that the first cultivation was either by him or for him.

Question 3. When did E. Musick first come into possession?

Answer. Before 1803, but how long does not know.

Question 4. How long since E. Musick left the possession of said tract?

Answer. Five or six years.

Question 5. Do you or do you not know that E. Musick cultivated said tract before 1803, and till 1806, every year?

Answer. Believes that he did cultivate every year from before 1803, till he left it, probably in 1806.

Question 1—to Lewis Williams.

Answer. Six years this fall.

Question 2. Same answer.

Question 3. Answer. In 1801.

Question 4. Same answer.

Question 5. Do you or do you not know that E. Musick cultivated said tract from 1801 till 1806, every year.

Answer. I believe he did, or had it cultivated.

It is the admission of the parties that E. Musick gave other lands in lieu of the lands in question. At the margin is the following: Not granted—Jump's claim not granted. (See Bates's minutes, pages 1 and 2.)

June 19, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

ST. LOUIS, December 24, 1813.—Thomas P. Bedford's representatives claiming 800 arpens, St. Genevieve, not exceeding seven miles from the town. Thomas Maddin, duly sworn, says that this tract was inhabited and cultivated by Joseph Frederick before 1800, and afterward by one named Bedford. For several years after Bedford, no person inhabited; it was sold by the commandant to satisfy the debts of Bedford, when Girouard became the purchaser, about 1801 or 1802, since which it is believed to have remained in the possession of Girouard or his representatives. Laporte, who married the widow Girouard, has cultivated for a few of the last years.

At the margin, "Not granted." (See Bates's minutes, page 109.)

June 19, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

No. 318.—Joab Line, claiming 750 arpens.

PERMISSION.

Joab Line, formerly an inhabitant of Tennessee, United States of America, has a wife called Jeany, two children, and two young orphans, relations of his said wife; 5 horses, 11 head of horned cattle, 9 hogs, and sundry articles of household furniture and farming utensils. He is a farmer by profession.

I, the undersigned Joab Line, certify that I am ready to take the oath of fidelity to his Catholic Majesty, and to swear that my wife is legitimate; that the cattle and effects above mentioned do belong to us in common, and that we profess the Roman Apostolic and Catholic religion.

JOAB LINE.

NEW BOURBON, December 1, 1800.

In consequence of the foregoing declaration, and having received the oath above mentioned, from the said Joab Line, we may receive him among the number of the inhabitants of our district, and do give him leave to establish himself about the north fork of the river St. Francis, and there to make search for a piece of vacant land belonging to the King's domain, and afterward to ask the concession of the intendant of the province, in order to make his plantation.

Done by us, commandant of New Bourbon, on the 6th of December, 1800.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

September 9, 1806.—Joab Line, claiming under the second section of the act, 400 arpens of land situate on the western fork of the river St. Francis, district of St. Genevieve, produces a permission to settle from Pierre D. de Luziere, dated 6th December, 1800.

Michael Hart, being duly sworn, says that claimant settled a tract of land in the spring of 1801, on the waters of river St. Francis; that the said tract is distant about four miles from said river; that he raised two crops on the same, to wit, in 1801 and 1802, but did not actually inhabit the same; that in the fall of 1802, he sowed a crop which witness believes he did not gather; that in the beginning of the winter of that year he left his house, his wife having eloped from him. Had about sixteen or seventeen arpens under fence; that when absent he still kept on said tract his goods, furniture, and stock, and would often call to see to the same; that he the witness was present when a survey of one Murphy, taken by virtue of a concession, took in said improvement; that claimant objected to the same, threatening to sue him, but all without effect; that when said survey took place, he had a crop of grain in his fields.

James Cunningham, being also duly sworn, says that he saw the above claimant in full possession of said land, in the spring of 1802; that he remained so until the year following, when the survey of said Murphy, by virtue of the aforesaid concession, took in all his improvement, to about three arpens; and also, that his house was surveyed in and taken possession of. He claims no other land in his own name in the Territory, and had, on the 20th December, 1803, a wife.

The board reject this claim. (See book No. 2, page 29.)

May 2, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Joab Line, claiming 400 arpens of land. (See book No. 2, page 29.)

The board, on examining the record of this claim in book B, page 95, find the quantity claimed to be one hundred arpens. It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 4, page 344.)

ST. LOUIS, November 6, 1813.—Joab Line, claiming 750 arpens of land, county of St. Genevieve, on and adjoining waters of Wolf creek.

NOTICE.—John Smith, duly sworn, says he, witness, was on this tract in spring of 1803; saw claimant on the premises. He had a cabin as a dwelling-house, a kitchen, &c. Witness's business there was to bring away a load of corn, which he supposes claimant had raised the year before. Saw at this time wheat growing which had been sowed the fall before; witness also saw a good garden on the premises. At this time saw cornstalks still in the fields. Saw evidences of the cultivation of tobacco also. Also saw a nursery of fruit-trees on this tract. Afterward, during the year 1803, witness occasionally passed this improvement, and generally saw claimant inhabiting the house, and saw that the garden was cultivated, but as the fields lay in an opposite direction from the road, has no particular recollection as to them. (At the margin:) "Not granted. Claim decided by late board. Interference with Murphy." (See Bates's minutes, page 66.)

July 19, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

ST. LOUIS, December 29, 1835.—William Russell, assignee John Donnohue, assignee Walter Smoot, claiming 800 arpens of land, Cape Cinqhommes, in county of St. Genevieve, produces transfers not authenticated.

James McLean, duly sworn, says the first improvement was made on this tract in 1801. Witness saw it again about 15th December, 1803; Walter Smoot was then inhabiting premises. At this time witness also saw corn standing in a field of two or three acres. No cultivation since. Smoot is believed to have removed soon thereafter. Witness did not see this tract for four or five years thereafter, when some fences and peach-trees were remaining. (At the margin:) "Not granted." (See Bates' minutes, page 128.)

320	Abraham Randall.	300	Concession to 164 inhabitants, January 30, 1803. List A, No. 52.	Carlos Dehault Delassus.	778 arpens, 29 perches, by ————. February 2, 1806. Received for record by Antonio Soulard, February 13, 1806.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

February 20, 1809.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Abraham Randall, claiming 778 arpens, 29 perches, of land, situate on Hubble and Randall's creek, district of Cape Girardeau, produced to the board, as a special permission to settle, list A, on which claimant is No. 52; a plat of survey dated 2d March, 1805, and certified 13th February, 1806.

The following testimony, in the above claim, taken by Frederick Bates, commissioner, by authority from the board, at Cape Girardeau, May 30, 1808:

Thomas Bull, duly affirmed, says that said land was first improved by the establishment of a cabin by witness' brother-in-law, who abandoned the same in two or three months as public lands. In 1801 or 1802, Peter Bellen took possession of and lived in the said cabin for a short time, who, in 1803, left the same; after which, claimant made a settlement in 1804, repaired the roof of the cabin and planted peach-trees, who has ever since inhabited and cultivated the premises. About seven or eight acres now in cultivation. Claimant has a wife and two children.

The following testimony taken as aforesaid, May 31, 1808:

John Abernathie, duly sworn, says that when Peter Bellen left the premises, in September, 1803, he offered for sale merely his labor on this land, disclaiming all right to the soil, intending to place, or having previously placed, his head-right on or near White-water.

Medad Randall, duly sworn, says Peter Bellen left premises with an intention to keep a stock for witness. Some little time after this, claimant observed to Bellen that he wished to settle on this tract thus abandoned; Bellen replied, that he might do so, for that he, Bellen, had no claim to it; he was welcome. Laid over for decision. (See book No. 3, page 477.)

No. 321.—François Lacombe, claiming 400 arpens.

To Don ZENON TRUDEAU, Lieutenant Governor, Captain in the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and Commander-in-chief of the western part of Illinois:

SIR: François Lacombe, inhabitant of Carondelet, has the honor to supplicate you to condescend to grant him a concession for a tract of land of ten arpens in front by forty in depth, situated on river Aux Gravois; the said land to be bounded on the upper side by the line of one Hugh Grim's land, and on the two other sides by the King's domain; favor which he expects of your justice.

The petitioner will observe to you that this land has already been granted to one Macfatte, and the said Macfatte having absconded and abandoned the same, it returns to the King's domain.

FRANCOIS LACOMBE.

ST. LOUIS, November 26, 1797.

ST. LOUIS, November 26, 1797.

The surveyor of this jurisdiction shall put the petitioner in possession of the land he asks, provided it be vacant, and is not prejudicial to any person, in order that, after the survey is made, he may solicit the concession from the commander general.

ZENON TRUDEAU.

ST. LOUIS, October 7, 1803.

We, special surveyor of this Upper Louisiana, do certify that, at the time when the land of Mr. Pre. Didier was surveyed, Mr. François Lacombe had not given us any knowledge of the title he obtained by the above decree.

SOULARD.

ST. LOUIS, October 8, 1803.

Having seen the above certificate, and whereas the party interested has delayed until now to have a survey made for the land granted to him by my predecessor, it cannot hereafter be surveyed, unless said party shall content himself of vacant parts of the domain, without any possibility in him to alter anything to surveys already made.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

ST. LOUIS, October 6, 1813.—Charles Sanguinet, claiming 400 arpens of land as assignee of François Lacombe (on vacant lands), produces notice; also concession from Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant governor, dated November 26, 1797; copy of a deed from Lacombe to claimant, dated December 7, 1808.

Antoine Soulard, being duly sworn, says that he knows perfectly well that Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant governor, gave this concession at the time it bears date.

Gregoire Sarpy, duly sworn, says that witness, some years before the cession of this country to the United States, put his own papers generally into the hands of Antoine Soulard. When he received them afterward, the papers appertaining to this claim are supposed to have been misplaced among them, as they were for a long time mislaid, and afterward found among them (this deponent's papers.) Lacombe was an inhabitant of this county for twenty-six years. (At the margin:) "Not confirmed." (See Bates's minutes, page 61.)

June 25, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq. appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

François Lacombe, by his legal representatives, claiming 400 arpens of land, situated on river Gravois. (See record-book F, page 143; Bates's minutes, page 61; Bates's decisions, page 32.)

Produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Zenon Trudeau, dated November 26, 1797.

M. P. Leduc, duly sworn, says that the signature to the concession is in the proper handwriting of the said Zenon Trudeau. (See book No. 7, page 198.)

No. 322.—Jean Harvin, claiming 600 arpens.

Don CHARLES DEHAULT DELASSUS, Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana:

SIR: Jean Harvin has the honor to represent to you that, having resided since several years in this province, he would wish to make a settlement in the same; therefore he has recourse to the goodness of this government, praying that you will please grant him a tract of land of six hundred arpens in superficie, to be taken on the vacant lands on the King's domain, in the place which will appear to him most suitable to his interest. The petitioner presumes to expect this favor of your justice.

JEAN his × mark. HARVIN.

ST. GENEVIEVE, September 8, 1800.

We, the undersigned, captain, civil and military commandant of the post of New Bourbon of Illinois, do certify and attest to Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel in the armies of his Catholic Majesty, and lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, that Mr. Harvin, who presents the foregoing petition, is worthy, under all points of view, to obtain the concession of six hundred arpens of land which he solicits, in a vacant place of the King's domain; the said Harvin having a great number of cattle, and means sufficient to settle and improve his farm, and being a very honest man and a good farmer.

Done in New Bourbon, September 12, 1800.

PRE. DELASSUS DE LUZIERE.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, September 22, 1800.

In consequence of the information given by the captain of the post of New Bourbon, Don Pedro Delassus de Luziere, by which it appears that the petitioner has more than the means necessary to obtain the concession he solicits, I do grant to him and his heirs the land he solicits, provided it is not prejudicial to any person, and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of the quantity (of land) he asks, in a vacant place of the royal domain; and this being executed, he shall make out a plat, delivering the same to said party, together with his certificate, in order to serve him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone belongs, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

Henry O'Hara, by his legal representatives, claiming 1,000 arpens, situate on Grand Glaize, district of St. Louis. (See record-book D, page 166.)

Claimant refers to commissioners' minutes, book No. 4, page 148, for testimony of Antoine Vachard, dit Lardoise, in the case of Charles Vallé, claiming 320 arpens, to wit:

August 2, 1809.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Henry O'Hara, the heirs and representatives of, claiming 320 arpens of land, situate in Grand Glaize, district of St. Louis, as assignee of Louis Robert, who was assignee of Charles Vallé, produces, &c.

Antoine Vachard, dit Lardoise, duly sworn, says that about 22 years ago, he saw Louis Robert residing on the land claimed; that said Louis Robert built a small cabin, made a small improvement, and resided there a short time; that when Louis Robert first went on the land, there was a small cabin already built, and a small improvement, which witness understood to have been made by Charles Vallé. Witness lived a neighbor to Henry O'Hara, who inhabited and cultivated a tract of land adjoining this claim, and also cultivated on this claim; that O'Hara was settled there before deponent went to live there as a neighbor, and said O'Hara continued to inhabit and cultivate, as before stated, all the time deponent lived there, which was about six years. The two tracts of land were separated by a small run coming from two springs near the Mississippi. Witness left said neigborhood about 21 years ago. Witness, O'Hara, and other neighbors abandoned their lands because the Indians were troublesome, and killing some of them. Says that he went to reside in said settlement about 26 years ago. On witness being asked whether Louis Robert left the settlement at the time he, witness, went to reside there, answers that he believes he did in the following year, but the time has been so long he does not remember dates. There were no other settlers but witness, Little Billy, and Henry O'Hara. (See book No. 4, page 148.)

July 7, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

In the case of Henry O'Hara, claiming 1,000 arpens of land. (See book No. 7, page —.)

Baptiste Dominé, duly sworn, says, that he is 86 years of age; that during the Spanish government, under either Manuel Perez or Zenon Trudeau, witness saw the said O'Hara living on a tract of land situate between the river Joachim and the Little Rock, on the Mississippi. Claimant had on said piece of land a dwelling-house, out-houses, a field, and a fine orchard.

Charles Vachard, duly sworn, says that he is about 63 years of age; that, during the Spanish government, he saw claimant on a piece of land situated on the Mississippi, about one mile and a half below the Joachim; that he had a large field, in which he raised corn, wheat, &c.; also had a fine orchard. Witness's brother lived near O'Hara's improvement, and witness was often on said O'Hara's plantation; the said O'Hara had a large family, and that he was driven away from his place by the Indians. Witness further says that he cannot state exactly how long said O'Hara remained on said land, but when witness went to reside with his brother, O'Hara had settled his place several years before, and witness remained seven or eight years with his said brother, during which time said O'Hara continued to inhabit and cultivate said place.

Pierre Chouteau, sr., duly sworn, says that, in the year 1778 or 1779, as he was coming from St. Genevieve in a boat, he was obliged, on account of the ice drifting in the Mississippi, to unload his boat, and put his goods in one Charles Vallé's house; that Henry O'Hara had a plantation adjoining that of said Vallé. Witness knew said O'Hara for many years, having transacted business with him during the time O'Hara remained on said place, which was at least for ten consecutive years. Witness further says that, after the attack of the Indians on the settlements, in the year 1780, all the settlers were called in by the lieutenant governor, and said O'Hara among the rest; that said Henry O'Hara, sometime afterward, sold his plantation, which was situated below the Little Rock, near the Grand Glaize. Witness does not recollect whether it was ever cultivated afterward. (See book No. 7, page 210.)

No. 326.—Gabriel Cerré claiming 400 arpens.

To the BARON DE CARONDELET, Governor General of Louisiana, &c.:

Gabriel Cerré, a merchant of this town, has the honor to represent that, having, since a long time, heard it mentioned that there was a lead mine on the right bank of Marameck river, at about sixty leagues from its mouth, the petitioner made all the exertion in his power to discover the same. An American residing in this country, offered to show him the said mine for the sum of $200; for which sum he would abandon to the petitioner and his heirs all his pretensions to the said discovery. To these conditions the petitioner legally consented, and having gone on the spot to examine whether such mine existed, he actually found some indications, which determined him to pay, according to his promise, the sum agreed upon, to the said American, although it is yet uncertain that the said mine can defray the petitioner of his disbursement and the works he intends to have done, which would become absolutely onerous to him if any one was permitted to work on said place. Therefore, the supplicant humbly prays your excellency to grant him a concession for the said mine, of 20 arpens in front by 20 arpens in depth, taking for centre the said discovered mine, in order for him to work, make the necessary establishments, and maintain the number of cattle required for the working of the same; favor which he hopes to obtain of your goodness.

CERRÉ.

ST. LOUIS, March 29, 1796.

I am satisfied that the lead mine above solicited belongs to his Majesty's domain, and that the granting of it is not prejudicial to any person; on the contrary, its being worked by Don Gabriel Cerré, who is industrious, and who owns a number of slaves, and employs many hired white men, will be very advantageous to our settlements.

ZENON TRUDEAU.

NEW-ORLEANS, April 25, 1796.

The surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall locate, and put the party in possession of, the 20 arpens of land in front, by the depth of 20, including in the centre the lead mine which has been discovered, which may be worked by said party exclusively, provided it is vacant and does not cause any prejudice to the adjoining neighbors, he having to maintain the roads necessary for the public intercourse and transit. Under which considerations the operations of survey shall be made out, and remitted to me, in order to provide the interested with the corresponding title in form.

EL BARON DE CARONDELET.

NEW-ORLEANS, April 25, 1796.

I send back to you, with a favorable decree, the memorial of Don Gabriel Cerré, merchant and inhabitant of St. Louis, in which he solicits a concession for a lead mine discovered lately at 60 leagues from the mouth of the river Marameck, and which you sent me, together with your official letter, No. 246.

May God preserve you many years.

EL BARON DE CARONDELET.

SR. DON ZENON TRUDEAU.

Don Antonio Soulard, Surveyor General of Upper Louisiana:

I do certify that, on the 25th of January, of this present year, (by virtue of the annexed decree of his excellency, the governor general of these provinces, the Baron de Carondelet, dated April 25, 1796,) I went on the land of Don Gabriel Cerré, in order to survey the same according to his demand of 400 arpens in superficie; this measurement was made in presence of the interested, by virtue of the power he gave me to that effect, with the perch of Paris, of 18 feet in length, conformably with the custom adopted in this province of Louisiana, and without regard to the variation of the needle, which is 7° 30′ E., as appears from the foregoing figurative plat. This land is situated on the left bank of the river Marameck, and at about 75 miles, more or less, from this town of St. Louis, and is bounded on the E. N. E., N. N. W., and S. S. E., by vacant lands of the royal domain, and on the W. S. W. by the left bank of the river Marameck. In testimony whereof, I do give these presents, together with the preceding figurative plat, on which are noted the dimensions, and the natural and artificial boundaries which surround said land.

ANTONIO SOULARD, Surveyor General.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

December 21, 1805.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment. Present: Hon. John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and James L. Donaldson, esquires.

In the case of James Richardson, claiming under a concession from Zenon Trudeau, for 400 arpens of land, including a lead mine, under the date of April 25, 1796, granted to one Gabriel Cerré for certain considerations therein mentioned, which said concession is confirmed to the said Gabriel Cerré by the Baron de Carondelet.

In support of his claim, the said James Richardson produced the said concession, so confirmed as aforesaid, together with a certificate of survey for said 400 arpens, dated January 28, 1800, and a bill of sale of said 400 arpens of land, under the date of October 20, 1802, executed by Anthony Soulard to the said James Richardson; an act of partition of the property of the above-named Gabriel Cerré, dated June 19, 1802, was also produced, whereby it appears the said 400 arpens of land had fallen to the portion of the s id Anthony Soulard, as heir to the estate of the above-named Gabriel.

Whereupon the board confirms to the said James Richardson his said 400 arpens, as per the concession and certificate of survey aforesaid. (See commissioners' minutes, book No. 1, page 12.)

December 20, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Clement B. Penrose, commissioner, retired from the board in consequence of his having become interested in this claim since the decision of the former board.

James Richardson, claiming under Gabriel Cerré, 400 arpens of land. Produces a petition signed Gabriel Cerré, directed to Baron de Carondelet, governor general, praying for a concession for 400 arpens of land, including a mine; an information from Zenon Trudeau, L. G., dated March 29, 1796; an official letter from Baron de Carondelet to Zenon Trudeau, L. G., dated April 25, 1796; a concession from Baron de Carondelet, governor general, for the same, dated April 25, 1796; a plat of survey of the same, dated January 25, 1800, certified January 28, 1800; an extract of an act of partition of the estate of Gabriel Cerré, by which it appears that the said 400 arpens of land fell to the share of Antoine Soulard, in right of his wife, as heir of Catharine Giard, deceased, in her lifetime the wife of Gabriel Cerré.

Frederick Bates, commissioner, forbears giving an opinion. It is the opinion of John B. C. Lucas, commissioner, that this claim ought not to be confirmed. (See book No. 5, page 522.)

July 2, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

No. 327.—Robert McCay, claiming 320 arpens.

NEW ORLEANS, April 27, 1802.

Sor. Intendant General:

Don Roberto McCay, captain of militia in the post of New Madrid, with due respect to your lordship, represents that, wishing to establish a cowpen in the district of Cape Girardeau, he hopes of your lordship's goodness, that you will condescend to grant him, in said place, one thousand arpens of land, on which he may form such an establishment; for which favor he will be forever grateful for your lordship's beneficence and justice.

ROBERTO McCAY.

Be it laid before the fiscal.

NEW ORLEANS, April 28, 1802.

El Sor. Don Juan Ventura Morales, principal accountant of the army, intendant per interim of the royal treasury of the provinces of Louisiana and Western Florida, has decided on the above, and put his flourish to it, (lo rubrico,) together with the assessor general.

CARLOS XIMENES.

NEW ORLEANS.

On the same day, I gave notice of the above to Don Roberto McCay, to which I certify.

XIMENES.

On the said day, I made it known to, and laid it before, the sor. fiscal of the royal treasury, to which I certify.

XIMENES.

NEW ORLEANS, May 5, 1802.

The fiscal of the royal treasury, after taking cognizance of the petition of the captain of militia, Don Roberto McCay, who asks a concession of one thousand arpens of land at Cape Girardeau, for the purpose of establishing a cowpen thereon, says that he is of opinion that the tribunal can notify the commandant of said district to give the said quantity of land belonging to the royal domain, provided it is not prejudicial to the surrounding neighbors, and that after the plat and corresponding certificate of survey is made out by the special surveyor of those settlements, the said documents be returned to this intendancy in order to deliver to the petitioner the title in form, conformably to what is stipulated in the regulation made on these matters.

GILBERTO LEONARD.

(Auto:) Be the decree made.

NEW ORLEANS, May 6, 1802.

El Sor. Don Juan Ventura Morales, principal accountant of the army, intendant per interim of the royal treasury of these provinces of Louisiana and Western Florida, has given his decision on the above, and put his flourish to it (lo rubrico), together with the assessor general.

CARLOS XIMENES.

NEW-ORLEANS.

On the same day, I gave notice of it to Don Roberto McCay, to which I certify.

XIMENES.

On the said day, I communicated the same to the fiscal of the royal treasury, to which I certify.

XIMENES.

Having taking congnizance of the foregoing, considering that on account of the distance, the petitioner cannot present the necessary documents, according to the regulation; and whereas, by the same, no more than eight arpens in front, by forty in depth, ought to be granted to him, he shall be made acquainted with it, and if he is satisfied with said quantity, this decree, certified, be delivered to him, in order that, presenting the same to the sub-delegate, he shall order, after giving notice to the adjoining neighbors, the survey and plat to be made, and sent here for the purpose of making the corresponding title.

For the asesoria, ten reals.

JUAN VENTURA MORALES.
MANL. SERRANO, Attorney.

NEW ORLEANS, May 7, 1802.

El Sor. Don Juan Ventura Morales, principal accountant of the army, intendant per interim of these provinces of Louisiana and Western Florida, and sub-delegate of the superintendency general, gave his decree, and signed it in accordance with the attorney, Don Manuel Serrano, assessor general of this intendancy.

CARLOS XIMENES.

RECORDER'S OFFICE, St. Louis, July 26, 1835.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

December 3, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Robert McCay, claiming 320 arpens of land, situate in the district of Cape Girardeau, produces to the board a concession from Juan Ventura Morales, intendant general, dated May, 1802. It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. (See book No. 5, page 17.)

June 24, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Robert McCay, by his legal representatives, claiming 320 arpens of land, in the district of Cape Girardeau. (See record-book E, page 125; book No. 5, page 17; Bates's decisions, page 10, where the same is "not confirmed.")

Produces a paper purporting to be an original order of survey, signed by Juan Ventura Morales, acting intendant, Manuel Serrano, assessor general, dated May 7, 1802.

The following testimony was taken on the 28th of May and the 15th of October, 1833, before L. F. Linn, esq., then one of the commissioners:

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Cape Girardeau:

Joseph Bogy, aged about 51 years, being duly sworn, as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he was well acquainted with Juan Ventura Morales, who was intendant, per interim, in 1802, at New Orleans: that he has often seen him write, and that the signature of the said Morales to the concession or grant appended to the original petition of the said McCay, is the proper name and signature, and in the proper handwriting of the said Juan Ventura Morales. Deponent was also well acquainted with Manuel Serrano, who was the counsellor, attorney, or legal adviser, under the Spanish government, in 1802, and that the signature to the grant aforesaid is the proper name and signature, and in the proper handwriting of the said Manuel Serrano. And this deponent further says that he knew Robert McCay, the original grantee; that he was an officer under the Spanish government, but the exact year he does not remember.

JOSEPH BOGY.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 28th day of May, 1833.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

John Friend, a witness, aged fifty-two years, being duly sworn, as the law directs, deposeth and saith, that he came to this country (then the province of Upper Louisiana) in the year 1799, in the fall of that year; that he became acquainted in that year with Robert McCay, who was then a citizen and resident in New Madrid; that said Robert McCay has, from the year 1799 to the present time, remained and continued a citizen and resident of the country, and still is so.

No. 328.—Joseph Mottard, claiming 1,340 arpens.

To Don CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS, Colonel in the royal armies, and Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana:

ST. LOUIS, January 20, 1804.

Calvin Adams, an inhabitant of this town of St. Louis of Illinois, in the most legal manner, and with the respect due to you, represents that, on the 7th of November, 1800, he purchased of Mr. Patrick Lee about seven arpens of land, situated at the place called Le Cul de Sac; said tract formerly belonging to Mr. Joseph Mottard. As the said land has not been surveyed, the petitioner implores your justice that you will condescend to order the surveyor of this Upper Louisiana to survey the same, and make out a figurative plat for the satisfaction of your petitioner, who hopes to deserve this favor of you; whose life may the Almighty preserve many years.

CALVIN ADAMS.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, January 20, 1804.

Be it transmitted to Don Antonio Soulard, in order that he executes the same.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

September 9, 1806.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment. Present: Hon. John B. C. Lucas and James L. Donaldson, esq.

Calvin Adams, assignee of Patrick Lee, who was assignee of Joseph Mottard, claiming, under the 2d section of the act, 1,340 arpens of land, situate on Mill creek, district of St. Louis, produces a survey of the same, dated 16th of November, 1805; a deed of transfer, executed before commandant, by Joseph Mottard to said Patrick Lee, dated the 7th November, 1800; and another deed of transfer, executed also before the commandant, by said Patrick Lee to claimant, dated the 22d August, 1803.

Auguste Chouteau, being duly sworn, says that the said Joseph Mottard had no family; that the said tract of land was settled about twelve years ago by one Cotard, for said Mottard; that the same was actually inhabited and cultivated until the year 1800; that it was well improved; said Mottard had on the same a house and outhouses. The board reject this claim for want of actual inhabitation and cultivation, on the 20th day of December, 1803. (See minutes, book No. 1, page 524.)

October 25, 1808.—Board met. Present: Hon. Clement B. Penrose and Frederick Bates.

Calvin Adams, assignee of Patrick Lee, assignee of Joseph Mottard, claiming 1,340 arpens of land, situate on Mill creek, district of St. Louis. David Musick produces a deed of conveyance from said Adams and wife to him, dated 22d January, 1808; said deed on file. Laid over for decision. (See No. 3, page 323.)

June 25, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Calvin Adams, assignee of Patrick Lee, assignee of Joseph Mottard, claiming 1,340 arpens of land. (See book No. 1, page 524; No. 3, page 323.) It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. On comparing the plats of survey, this land appears to be within the tract claimed as the common of St. Louis. (See book No. 4, page 405.)

July 8, 1833.—F. L. Linn, esq, appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Joseph Mottard, by Calvin Adams' legal representatives in the name of said Adams, and as assignee of Patrick Lee, who was assignee of Joseph Mottard, claiming 1,340 arpens of land, on Mill creek, near the city of St. Louis. (See record-book B, page 480; Minutes, No. 1, page 524; No. 3, page 323, and No. 4, page 405.)

Produces a paper purporting to be a translation of a concession, sworn to and subscribed by Peter Provenchere.

Louis Dubreuil, being duly sworn, says that forty years ago there was, to his knowledge, people working under Mottard on said piece of land; that he, several times, wrote accounts for his father, for produce which his said father had bought from said plantation; that Mottard had there some cattle; that said place was occupied for a long time by one Cotard, under Mottard; and deponent often went on said place to see said Cotard; and that said place continued to be occupied by or under Mottard till his death, which happened a short time prior to the change of government.

Peter Chouteau, sr., duly sworn, says that 42 or 43 years ago, Joseph Mottard was cultivating said land, and had one Cotard on said place as his agent; that said land was cultivated till Mottard's death; that after his death a mulatto man lived on said place; that at Mottard's death said tract was sold, and, deponent thinks, was bought by Patrick Lee; that Mottard cultivated said land for 10 or 12 consecutive years, by himself or through him. Deponent further says that the said tract did not interfere with the commons.

Alexander Bellissime, being duly sworn, says that he has been in this country these 45 years; that when he arrived in this country, the said Mottard was inhabiting and cultivating said tract of land; that deponent often went on said place to see said Mottard, who had there an orchard bearing fine apples; and that the place continued to be cultivated by or under Mottard, till very near the time of the taking of possession of the country by the American government. (See book No. 6, page 216.)

July 7, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment. In the case of Joseph Mottard, claiming 1,340 arpens of land. (See book No. 6, page 216.)

Pascal L. Cerré, duly sworn, says that he knew Mottard's plantation from the year 1787 to 1791, and from 1794 till the change of government; that said plantation, as cultivated by or under said Mottard, was, to his perfect knowledge, outside of the St. Louis common.

Michel Marli, duly sworn, says that he is 56 years of age; that he knew Mottard's plantation for 40 years; that the fences of the common went to Mottard's field and thence run toward Riviere des Perres, leaving said Mottard's farm ouside of the said common. Witness further says that he rented said plantation for two years, from Calvin Adams; this was about 15 years ago. Witness does not know of any other improvement made in that neighborhood.

Charles Vachard, being duly sworn, says that he has known Mottard's plantation for a great many years; that he, witness, cultivated the same for two or three years; that it was outside of the common, and he can yet show where the fence of the common was laid, leaving said plantation entirely outside of said common. Witness never knew of any other improvement in that vicinity. (See book No. 7, page 213.)

August 20, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, F. H. Martin, commissioners.

Joseph Mottard, claiming 1,340 arpens of land. (See book No. 6, page 217; No. 7, page 213.)

The board are unanimously of opinion that 280 arpens of land (it being the quantity ordered to be surveyed by the lieutenant governor) ought to be confirmed to the said Joseph Mottard, or to his legal representatives, according to the said order of survey. (See book No. 7, page 224.)

No. 329.—Curtis Morris, claiming 746 arpens, 75 perches.

No.	Name of original claimant.	Arpens.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
329	Curtis Morris.	746 75 per.	Settlement right.		John Stewart, D. S., January 6, 1806. Received for record February 26, 1806, by A. Soulard, S. G.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

June 27, 1806.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment. Present: Hon. Clement B. Penrose, and James L. Donaldson, esq.

Curtis Morris, claiming, as aforesaid (under the 2d section of the act), 746 arpens, 75 perches, of land, situate in Bellevue settlement, produces a survey of the same, taken January 22, and certified February 27, 1806.

Benjamin Crow, being duly sworn, says that the claimant improved the said tract of land in the year 1804, built a house on the same, raised a crop in 1805, and had, December 20, 1803, a wife.

The board reject this claim. (See No. 1, page 376.)

September 1, 1810.—The board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Curtis Morris, claiming 746 arpens, 75 perches, of land. (See book No. 1, page 376.) Produces to the board a certificate of permission to settle; on file.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 4, page 483.)

December 16, 1833.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Curtis Morris, by his legal representatives, claiming 746 arpens, 75 perches, of land, situated in Bellevue settlement. (See record-book B, page 227; Minutes, book No. 1, page 376; No. 4, page 482.)

STATE OF MISSOURI, ss:

The State of Missouri to any two justices of the peace within and for the county of Washington, greeting:

Know ye, that, in confidence of your prudence and fidelity, I do require, and authorize, and command you to cause to come before you, James Bear, John Swan, J. T. McNeal and Mary McNeal his wife, Joseph McMaurtry, Samuel Bridge, and Bernard Rogan, and each of them examine upon their respective corporeal oath, to be by you, or one of you, administered, touching their knowledge of anything that may relate to the cultivation, inhabitation, and claiming of the southwest quarter of section No. 18, township No. 35, in range No. 2 east of the said 5th principal meridian, by Thomas Morrow and William Inge, and of William Hinge, prior to the twelfth day of April, 1814; and also to the cultivation, inhabitation, and claiming of the said land by Curtis Morris, in order to perpetuate the remembrance of the said facts, on behalf of William Hudspeth, under Airs Hudspeth. And having reduced to writing, in the English language, or the language of the deponents, the depositions so by you taken as aforesaid, you send the same, certified by you, sealed up and directed, together with this writ, to the clerk of the circuit court of Washington county, wherein the said lands are said to be situated, with all convenient speed.

Given under my hand and seal, in Washington county, this 25th day of June, A. D. 1827.

WILL. C. CARR. [L. S.]

COUNTY OF WASHINGTON:

Be it remembered that, in pursuance of a commission from the honorable William C. Carr, judge of the third district in the state of Missouri, directed to two justices of the peace, in the county and state aforesaid, and agreeably to an advertisement in the Missouri Republican, by William Hudspeth and Airs Hudspeth, we, the undersigned, William Hinkson and Andrew Goforth, two justices of the peace, in the county aforesaid, have met at the house of Andrew Goforth, esq., in the township of Bellevue, on the 9th day of October, A. D. 1827, and proceeded to take the depositions of witnesses as named in the aforesaid commission, touching their knowledge of the facts as contained in the aforesaid commission, and proceeded to take the depositions of witnesses, as follows, to wit:

James Bear, of lawful age, being produced and sworn according to law, upon his corporeal oath deposeth and saith:

Question by A. W. Hudspeth, agent for William and Airs Hudspeth. Did you know of Thomas Morrow and William Inge inhabiting and cultivating on the S. W. quarter section, No. 18, in township No. 35, N., range 3, E. of the 5th principal meridian; and also at the same time a part of the S. E. quarter section No. 13, township No. 35, N., range 2, E. of the 5th principal meridian?

Answer by deponent. I was knowing to Thomas Morrow settling on the S. E. quarter section, No. 13, (agreeably to the surveying,) in township 35, N., range 2, E. of the 5th principal meridian. There was a piece of ground cleared on the same, part of which improvement is included in the S. W. quarter of section No. 18, township 35, N., range 3, E. of the 5th principal meridian.

Question by same. In what year did Thomas Morrow settle there?

Answer by deponent. As well as I recollect, it was in the fall of 1811 or 1812.

Question by same. Did you ever hear Thomas Morrow say that William Inge was his partner?

Answer by deponent. I did.

Question by same. Did you know of any ground being cultivated, in 1812 or 1813, on one or both of the above-named quarter sections?

Answer by deponent. Yes; there was corn raised on the improvement that was included on both of the above-named quarter sections.

Question by same. Who did the labor that raised that corn?

Answer by deponent. I do not know.

Question by same. Do you know of Jacob Mahon working for Thomas Morrow and William Inge, on said improvement, in 1812 or 1813?

Answer by deponent. I saw Jacob Mahan working with Thomas Morrow at the distillery on that place.

Question by same. Did you understand from Thomas Morrow or William Inge that the aforesaid improvement belonged to them?

Answer by deponent. I do not recollect.

Question by same. Did you know who claimed and occupied the improvement in the spring of 1814?

Answer by deponent. I do not recollect.

JAMES BEAR.

Sworn and subscribed before us, on the 10th day of October, 1827, at the place and within the hours first aforesaid.

A. GOFORTH, WM. HINKSON, } Justices of the Peace.

Joseph McMurtry, of lawful age, being produced and sworn according to law, upon his corporeal oath deposeth and saith:

Question by A. W. Hudspeth. In what year did Curtis Morris settle and improve the place whereon Daniel Phelps now lives?

Answer by deponent. In 1805, Curtis Morris married, and the next morning he started, as he said, to fix a house where Daniel Phelps now lives, to live in; further, I do not know whether Curtis Morris had any improvement on that place before that time or not.

Question by same. Did you know of Walter Crow cultivating the land now in question in 1803 or 1804?

Answer by deponent. I was there in 1803 and saw an improvement, and Walter Crow told me that he made an improvement there.

Question by Timothy Phelps. Do you know who claimed the place in 1804?

Answer by deponent. I do not recollect.

And further this deponent saith not.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

John T. McNeal, of lawful age, being produced, and after being duly sworn according to law, upon his corporeal oath deposeth and saith:

Question by A. W. Hudspeth. Do you know when Curtis Morris first settled on, and inhabited and cultivated the place whereon Daniel Phelps and Timothy Phelps now live?

Answer by deponent. I do not know.

Question by same. Were you acquainted with Curtis Morris in the year 1804?

Answer by deponent. Yes, I was.

Question by same. Where did Curtis Morris make his home in the summer of 1804?

Answer by deponent. In the forepart of the summer he made his home at William Ashbrook's.

Question by same. Did you ever hear Curtis Morris say that he raised a crop on Ananias McCay's plantation, or in that neighborhood, in the [omission] of 1804?

Answer by deponent. I am not certain.

Question by same. How far do you think William Ashbrook lived, in the summer of 1804, from the place in question?

Answer by deponent. I suppose it to be about six miles.

Question by same. In what year and month did Curtis Morris marry?

Answer by deponent. Agreeably to my recollection, about the last of January, 1805.

Question by Timothy Phelps. When did you assist Curtis Morris to build a cabin on the place in question?

Answer by deponent. In February or March, 1804.

Question by A. W. Hudspeth. Was the cabin made ready for the reception of a family, and in what situation was the cabin prepared in 1804?

Answer by deponent. It was raised to the eave-bearers the day I assisted, and I do not recollect that I was on the place any more in that year.

Question by Timothy Phelps. Where was the place in question situated, and by whose claims was it bounded?

Answer by deponent. It was situated on the south side of Cedar creek, and bounded by Benjamin Strother's claim on the north, by Walter Crow's on the west, by Benjamin Crow's on the southwest, and by Bernard Ragin's on the south.

Question by Timothy Phelps. Did you understand by Curtis Morris that he claimed that improvement, at the time you helped him to build the cabin?

Answer by deponent. Yes, I did.

Question by A. W. Hudspeth. Did you know of Curtis Morris making any other improvement on the place in question, in the year 1804, except the part of cabin aforesaid?

Answer by deponent. I do not.

And furthermore this deponent saith not. JOHN T. McNEAL.

THE STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Wayne:

Deposition of witness examined on the 4th day of October, in the year of our Lord 1827, between the hours of 8 o'clock in the forenoon and 7 o'clock in the afternoon of that day, in the township of Kelly, at the dwelling-house of Joseph Pain in the county aforesaid, in pursuance of an order from the Hon. William C. Carr, judge of the third judicial district, to any two justices of the peace in the county of Wayne. Ordered, that the deposition of Jacob Mahan be taken to perpetuate the remembrance of facts on the part, and in behalf of William Hudspeth and Airs Hudspeth, relating to the improving, cultivating, and inhabiting of an improvement lying and being on the waters of Cedar creek, in Bellevue township, in the county of Washington, and State of Missouri, now claimed by the aforesaid W. Hudspeth and A. Hudspeth as a pre-emption right. And now, at this day, Jacob Mahan, of lawful age, being produced, sworn, and examined, deposeth and saith as follows;

Question by A. Hudspeth. Were you ever employed by Thomas Morrow and William Inge to work and improve a tract of land in Bellevue township, in the county of Washington and State of Missouri?

Answer by Jacob Mahan. I was employed by Thomas Morrow, and I considered Thomas Morrow and William Inge in partnership, and I was employed to work on and build a still-house on the said improvement, lying and being near the forks of Saline and Cedar creeks.

Second question. In what year, and how long were you employed by Thomas Morrow?

Answer. I began to work with him the last week in November, 1812, and continued with him five months, and assisted him in planting corn in the month of May following, in the same place.

Question. Did you consider Morrow and Inge in co-partnership at the time you were employed by Morrow?

Answer. I did, for they both frequently told me they were in co-partnership.

Question. Do you know who succeeded Morrow and Inge on the aforesaid improvement?

Answer. Yes, in the year, 1814, the third week in February, I was employed by Inge to go out and take possession of the improvement for him, and carry on the work for him, and I continued for him one month to attend the still-house, and raised a crop of corn for myself the following season, but considered the land to belong to Inge.

Question. Did Inge pay you for your services done in the years 1812 and 1813?

Answer. Yes, he agreed to pay me all, and some time afterward he paid me part, and denied the partnership, and refused to pay me the balance after Morrow left the country.

Question. Did you understand that Morrow intended to return to this country when he went away?

Answer. When I parted with Morrow he told me he would come back.

Question. Did you understand what became of Morrow?

Answer. I did not.

Question. Do you know if Inge and Morrow built a mill on Cedar creek?

Answer. Yes, in the time of my work for Morrow, a few days before my time was out, Morrow commenced building a mill on Cedar creek, and from that time till I came out to take possession for Inge, the mill was grinding.

Question. Do you know the section this improvement is on, or who joins it, and who occupied the improvement last, and how far was the improvement from the said mill?

Answer. I do not know the sectional lines, but it laid near south of Benjamin Strother's confirmation claim, and east of Daniel Phelps' claim, and east of the great road leading from Mine à Breton through Bellevue; and when I was at the place last, I saw an old man there, who was called Hudspeth, and told me he lived there. The improvement was about twenty-five rods from the mill, on Cedar creek.

Question by Timothy Phelps. Since Morrow left the country, did you not frequently hear Inge deny the partnership between him and Morrow?

Answer. Yes, I did.

Question. Did you not make a demand of upward of $100 for services rendered and corn made use of on that place, in consequence of Wm. Inge denying the partnership between him and Morrow?

Answer. Yes, I did.

Question. Did not Morrow leave this country with the express declaration of going to the Spanish country in February, 1814?

Answer. Yes, he did.

And further, this deponent saith not. Given under my hand, this 14th day of October, in the year of our Lord 1827.

JACOB MAHAN. [L. S.]

[Here follows the certificate of the two justices, Isaac Kelly and Joseph Pain, same date as above, and also the certificate of John Jones, clerk of the circuit court, and ex-officio recorder, dated November 5, 1827.]

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, commissioner:

Nancy Gregg, of lawful age, being first duly sworn, deposeth and saith that she was acquainted with Curtis Morris before his marriage. Curtis Morris married the sister of this deponent, and during the courtship the acquaintance with him was formed. At that time, this affiant does believe the house or place of residence of said Curtis Norris was at William Ashbrook's, and this deponent never has understood that Curtis Morris changed his place of residence until after he was married to the sister of affiant, as aforesaid. Curtis Morris, after he was married, removed to a place about two miles distant from deponent's father's place of residence, which is the same now claimed by heirs of Daniel Phelps as Curtis Morris's settlement right, situated in Bellevue township, Washington county.

NANCY GREGG.

May 9, 1833. L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

John T. McNeal, of lawful age, being first sworn, according to law, to give evidence in this behalf, deposeth and saith that, in the year 1811 or 1812, Thomas Morrow was in possession of an improvement in Bellevue, on the south side of Cedar creek; it was near a mill that was owned by said Morrow; this mill broke, and Morrow built another dam, and removed the mill upon land that was considered as public. Morrow continued in the occupancy of the said improvement until, this deponent believes, in the year 1813, when William Inge purchased out Thomas Morrow, and continued in the occupancy thereof, until Samuel Morrison purchased said mill and improvement. There was also a distillery on the improvement. This deponent knows positively that there was cultivation on said improvement, to wit, corn and potatoes, in the year 1813, and does believe that the same was inhabited as well as cultivated in the year 1812.

JOHN T. McNEAL.
L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

John Stuart, of lawful age, being produced and sworn, deposeth and saith that he, this affiant, was a surveyor by lawful appointment, and that, agreeably to his authority, he surveyed, in 1806, in the month of January or February, 638 acres and 56 poles of land for Curtis Morris, who then lived on the place where Timothy Phelps now lives, claimed by the heirs of Daniel Phelps and Curtis Morris; at that time there was a small turnip-patch, or improvement like a turnip-patch, at that place, and Walter Crow and Curtis Morris agreed to divide, and did divide, the said truck-patch between them, and then Curtis Morris agreed, and made his beginning at or near the spring where the said Timothy now makes use of for family use, running north, 65 east, 2 poles; thence north, 26 poles; thence north, 65 east, 120 poles; thence south, 70 east, 60 poles; thence north, 70 east, 140 poles; thence east, 100 poles; thence south, 217 poles; thence around to the beginning, agreeably to a plat hereunto annexed, bounded by Robert Reed, Bernard Rogan, Benjamin Crow, and Walter Crow. This original survey left a piece of vacant land up and down Cedar creek, situated in the southeast quarter of section No. 13 in t. 35 north, r. 2 east, on which the mill now owned by A. W. Hudspeth, and the seat that is said to be where Morrow and Inge did build a mill is situated; and the forge seat, with a part of the improvement of the said Hudspeth, as the representative of the said Morrow and Inge, and Inge individually, is situated on the then vacant part of the southwest fractional part of section No. 18, in t. 35 N., in range 3 east of the 5th principal meridian, in the county of Washington, in Bellevue township. The strip of vacant land was about 48 poles wide; the whole of which vacant land, original survey, will more fully appear by reference to the plat hereunto annexed. This deponent further says that he does not intend to say that the turnip-patch, above spoken of, was the only improvement on the land, for there were undoubtedly other improvements on the land, and corn had been raised on the land.

October 8, 1834.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. S. Mayfield, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

In the case of Curtis Morris, claiming 746 arpens, 75 perches, of land. (See book No. 6, page 385.) The following additional testimony was taken by James H. Relfe, commissioner, on the 5th July, 1834:

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Washington:

Personally appeared before James H. Relfe, one of the commissioners for the adjustment of private land claims, John Paul, who deposes and says, he is 67 years of age, or about that, and came to Mine à Breton, in the district of St. Genevieve, province of Upper Louisiana, in the year 1802, and continued to reside there until, in the month of March, in the year 1804, when he removed to Bellevue, in the same district and province. Deponent says he became acquainted with Curtis Morris in the year 1803 or 1804, in Mine à Breton, but at which period deponent is unwilling to say, but it was in the fall of the year. Said Morris resided with William Ashbrook, and continued to live with him until the end of the year 1804, and until he was married to Polly Crow, which he believes was in the latter end of the year 1804, or beginning of 1805. Witness continued to reside in Bellevue for two crop seasons, and never knew of any other Curtis Morris than the one first named, and resided about half a mile from Mr. Ashbrook's, with whom Curtis Morris resided, when he, deponent, moved to Bellevue.

JOHN PAUL.

JAMES H. RELFE, Commissioner.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Washington:

Personally appeared before James H. Relfe, one of the commissioners for the adjustment of private land claims, Martha Paul, who deposes and says she is 63 years of age, and answers to the following interrogatories:

Question 1. Where did you reside in the year 1802 and 1803?

Answer. In Mine à Breton, district of St. Genevieve, province of Louisiana.

Question 2. Where did you reside in 1804?

Answer. In Bellevue, in the same district and province, on Big River.

Question 3. Did you know Curtis Morris in 1804?

Answer. I did know him; he came to the country and resided with William Ashbrook, and, to the best of my knowledge, resided with him that summer and fall. Deponent saw said Morris working with William Ashbrook, ploughing corn in that year. Witness resided between half a mile and a mile from the residence of said Ashbrook; and said Curtis Morris continued to reside with Ashbrook until after his marriage, to the best of her recollection, to Polly Crow, daughter of Benjamin Crow.

Question 4. How long did you continue to reside in Bellevue, and did you know of any other man named Curtis Morris in that neighborhood, during your residence?

Answer. I resided three years in Bellevue, and never knew but the one man named Curtis Morris.

The following testimony in this case was sworn to, and signatures acknowledged, before L. F. Linn, commissioner:

STATE OF MISSOURI, Washington county:

Be it remembered, that on this 10th day of January, 1832, the following persons appeared before me, Henry Shurlds, a justice of the peace in and for said county:

Martin Ruggles, aged 57 years and upward, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he was at the place in now Washington county, commonly called and known, as he believes, as the claim of Curtis Morris, some time in the month of August or September, 1804, at which time he saw a cabin or log-house, about 12 or 14 feet square, at said place, and saw corn growing at the same time and place, supposed to be two or three acres; the corn then appeared to be full grown; there was no person at the cabin at the time, and it had the appearance of being inhabited, and the same has been inhabited and cultivated ever since.

MARTIN RUGGLES.

Sworn to and signature acknowledged before me, this 7th day of May, 1833.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

John T. McNeal, aged 68 years and upward, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he assisted Curtis Morris in raising a cabin or log-house, on the claim of said Morris, in the month of February of first of March, 1804, which claim is situated in what is now called Washington county, aforesaid; that he saw Morris living on the same, in the summer of the same year, and dined with him, he, Morris, having cooked dinner for them. There was, at the time the cabin was built, an enclosure at the same place, of an acre, perhaps, or upward, and a Mr. Reed went to the enclosure, and brought from thence some turnips, of which witness partook. He saw cornstalks, he thinks, standing in the same enclosure, but from the length of time, he cannot be entirely certain, and the place has been inhabited and cultivated ever since.

In the case of Curtis Morris, claiming 746 arpens, 75 perches, of land. (See book No. 6, page 385.) The following testimony was taken before James H. Relfe, commissioner:

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Washington:

Personally appeared before James H. Relfe, one of the commissioners for the final adjustment of land claims in Missouri, John T. McNeal, who testifies and says, in explanation of testimony heretofore taken on the claim of Curtis Morris to land in the county aforesaid, he wishes to be understood, when having said "that Robert Reed or Mr. Reed went into the lot or field, or turnip-patch, and brought in some turnips of which he, deponent, partook," that said Reed brought the turnips from the hole where they had been put for preservation through the winter; that the turnips had been gathered from the piece of ground in which they were buried; and there still was to be seen at that time, viz., in February or March, 1804, turnips growing in said enclosure, which had all the appearance, and I have no hesitation in saying, had been raised from cultivation the fall previous, on the said piece of ground, and which said land has continued in the possession and cultivation of the said Curtis Morris and his representatives to this day.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of St. Louis:

CITY OF ST. LOUIS, Commissioners' office, November 18, 1834.—In pursuance of the annexed order and resolution of the board of commissioners, bearing date the 23d of October, 1834, any two justices of the peace, within and for the county of Hempstead, in the Territory of Arkansas, are hereby commissioned and empowered to cause to come before them, at such time and place as they may think convenient, Walter Crow and others, and them examine, de bene esse, touching their knowledge of the cultivation, possession, and improvement of the land claimed by Daniel Phelps, assignee of Curtis Morris; which said examination of such witnesses shall be taken upon oath or affirmation, and the same reduced to writing, and returned to this board, annexed to the above order and commission for taking the same. Given under our hands and seals, this the day and year first above written.

JAMES S. MAYFIELD,
JAMES H. RELFE,
F. R. CONWAY.

The justices who may take the testimony in pursuance of the within order, will please to forward it by mail, directed to the recorder of land titles, St. Louis, Missouri. It is required of Mr. Hudspeth or Mr. Phelps to advance the amount of charge for postage and any fees that may accrue.

JAMES H. RELFE, Commissioner of Private Land Claims.

July 2, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

The following testimony, in Curtis Morris' claim, was received by mail:

TERRITORY OF ARKANSAS, Hempstead County, ss.:

Depositions of witnesses produced, sworn and examined, on the 12th day of June, 1835, between the hours of eight o'clock in the forenoon and six in the afternoon of that day, in the clerk's office, in the town of Washington, county of Hempstead, Territory of Arkansas, before Birkett D. Jett and Henry Dixon, two justices of the peace within and for the county aforesaid, in pursuance of an order of the honorable board of commissioners appointed for the final adjustment of private land claims in Missouri, passed on the 23d day of October, 1834, authorizing the claimants for the land claimed by Curtis Morris or his legal representatives, to take the deposition of Walter Crow and others, residing in the Territory of Arkansas, it appearing to us that the notice had been given to the adverse claimant, agreeably to the order of the board:

Walter Crow, of lawful age, being first duly sworn, deposeth and saith:

Question by James McLaughlin, agent for A. W. Hudspeth. Do you know Curtis Morris' s settlement right in Bellevue, Washington county, State of Missouri?

Answer. I do.

Question by same. When was it made?

Answer. In the year 1804.

Question by same. When was it inhabited and cultivated by Morris?

Answer. In the year 1805 he moved on it and cultivated it.

Question by same. Do you or do you not know, from information obtained from Curtis Morris, whether he improved and settled said place for himself or another?

Answer. I heard Curtis Morris say, some time after he settled on the place aforesaid, that he settled it for himself, although it had been said he settled it for James Austin.

Question by same. Have you knowledge when he first claimed in his own name?

Answer. I have not.

Question by same. When did he finish his cabin fit for the reception of his family?

Answer. He removed into his cabin early in the year 1805, perhaps in the month of January or February.

Question by same. Did Walter Crow have an improvement in 1804, at the spring where Curtis Morris settled, and did he cultivate it in that year, hold his land by it, and take it within his lines when confirmed, and did he sell it to Daniel Phelps?

Answer. He had an improvement in 1804, but did not cultivate it in that year, and did hold his land by it. When his land was confirmed, and lines run, they left out a part of his own improvement, and took in a part of said Morris's improvement. He sold a part of said land to Daniel Phelps, and that part included his original improvement.

Question by same. Did Curtis Morris cultivate or inhabit it before his marriage?

Answer. I do not know.

Question by same. Were you frequently at that place in the year 1804?

Answer. I do not recollect being on the place but once in that year, and then saw Morris there carrying on work and building a house.

Question by same. Did the original lines of Curtis Morris take in the improvement and mill made by Thomas Morrow and William Inge, and Jacob Mahan, for Inge, and now claimed by A. W. Hudspeth, on Cedar creek, in Bellevue, aforesaid?

Answer. I do not know.

Question by same. Where did Curtis Morris make his home in 1804?

Answer. I do not certainly know, but am impressed with the belief that it was with William Ashbrook, about five miles from the improvement aforesaid.

Question by the justices. Do you know of Curtis Morris, or any one for him, having performed any labor on the land mentioned, prior to the 20th of December, 1803?

Answer. I do not.

And further this deponent saith not. WALTER CROW.

Subscribed and sworn to before the undersigned, two justices of the peace within and for the county of Hempstead, Arkansas Territory, at the place, and on the day, and between the hours aforesaid. Given under our hands and seals this 12th day of June, A. D., 1835.

HENRY DIXON, J. P.
BIRKETT D. JETT, J. P.

James L. McLaughlin, being of lawful age, and first duly sworn, deposeth and saith:

Question. Do you know the land settled by Curtis Morris, and now claimed by the representatives of Daniel Phelps, in Bellevue, Washington county, State of Missouri?

Answer. I do.

Question. When did said Morris first settle, inhabit, and cultivate the same; and what do you know about it?

Answer. In the forepart of 1804, I saw said Morris working on the aforesaid land, building a cabin, which he then raised about as high as a man's shoulders, which cabin he finished, I think, early in 1805. I frequently passed in 1804, and said unfinished cabin is all I recollect seeing until 1805. Mr. Morris married, I think, the 9th of January, 1805, and soon after removed to said cabin, and cultivated it in that year.

Question. Do you know of Curtis Morris, or any person for him, having performed any labor upon the land mentioned, prior to the 20th day of December, 1803?

Answer. I do not.

And further this deponent saith not, being no further interrogated.

JAMES L. McLAUGHLIN.

Subscribed and sworn to before the undersigned, two justices of the peace within and for the county of Hempstead, Arkansas Territory, at the place, and on the day, and between the hours aforesaid.

Given under our hands and seals, this 12th day of June, A. D. 1835.

BIRKETT D. JETT, J. P.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Territory of Arkansas, County of Hempstead, ss.:

I, James W. Finley, deputy clerk for Allen M. Oakley, clerk of the Hempstead county court, do hereby certify that Henry Dixon and Birkett D. Jett, whose names are affixed to the foregoing depositions, are duly commissioned, and acting justices of the peace in and for the county and territory aforesaid, and that, as such, due faith and credit is and ought to be given to all their official acts.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand as clerk, and affixed the seal of said county, at Washington, this 12th day of June, 1835, and of the independence of the United States the 59th.

July 8, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

In the case of Curtis Morris, claiming, &c., (see book No. 6, page 385,) the following testimony was taken before James H. Relfe, commissioner:

STATE OF MISSOURI, Washington county:

Personally appeared before James H. Relfe, one of the commissioners for the adjustment of private land claims, Elijah Gragg, who, on his oath, deposeth and saith that, in about the year 1816 or 1817, he was conversing with Curtis Morris on the subject of his land claim in Bellevue, and asked him why he sold his land so cheap. He replied, he never thought it would be confirmed, as it was not settled in time. As well as deponent recollects, Phelps gave three hundred dollars for the claim.

John L. Pettit, claiming 640 acres of land, situate on the waters of St. Francis river, county of Madison. (See record-book F, page 13; Bates's decisions, page 97.)

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Madison:

John Clements, aged about 53 years, being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he was well acquainted with the original claimant, who, he believes, first came to this country in the year 1801, and was sent back by his father to Kentucky to transact his business; that the witness also knows the land claimed, and knows that the father of the said John L. Pettit, together with a negro boy of the said claimant, for the use and benefit of the said John, settled on, improved, and cultivated the said land in the years 1803 and 1804; there was a house built on the land, and in the year 1804, there was fenced in, cleared, and actually cultivated in corn and other things, about eight or ten acres; the father of said John informed this witness that this building, improvement, and cultivation, was for the said John, his son, as he had sent his son back to the State of Kentucky to wind up his business there; and that the negro boy, who was then at work, was the property of the said John. Witness also knows that the said John returned to this country and still resides here, and that the land claimed has been actually inhabited and cultivated ever since. Witness also worked on the land and hewed house logs, and understood from the father, who was, he understood, acting as agent for the claimant, that the logs, house, and improvements, were for the use and benefit of the claimant, he being absent on business as aforesaid.

Also came John Reaves, a witness, aged about seventy-three years, who, being also duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he was well acquainted with the original claimant; that he came to this country, then the province of Upper Louisiana, in the year 1801 or 1802. Witness also knows the land claimed, and knows that the same was actually settled on in the year 1803; there was then a house and other buildings on the land at that time, and the house, he believes, is still standing, being cedar timber; that Benjamin Pettit, the father of claimant, lived on the land in 1803, and raised a crop thereon; there were some eight or ten acres under fence, cleared and in actual cultivation, and the same land was still inhabited and cultivated in 1804, and further improvements made. Witness also knows, from the information of Benjamin Pettit, the father, that this was the claim of John Pettit, and said he was laboring and fixing the place for and under John L. Pettit, his son, whom he had sent back to Kentucky to finish and wind up his business there, and that in this way they had exchanged work; witness knows that the claim was filed for John L. Pettit in his name, by his father, for witness was present and paid the fees for recording; that some time afterward John L. Pettit returned to this country, and has remained herein to the present time, and is still a citizen, and that the said tract of land has been from time to time inhabited and cultivated ever since, and still is. Witness also knows that while the father was at work on the place for John, that the negro man of John was also there at work on the place.

July 8, 1834.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: J. H. Relfe, F. R. Conway, commissioners.

Peggy Jones, now Peggy Carter, claiming 640 acres of land, situate on Grand Glaize.

Pascal L. Cerré, duly sworn, says that when the former board of commissioners was sitting, the said Peggy Jones came to St. Louis to file her claim before said board; that he, witness, went with said claimant to give testimony in her behalf; that after she had filed her claim, witness was sworn and gave his testimony; that claimant being required to give more testimony, she went back to her settlement for witnesses, but having met with an accident, (a fall from her horse,) she was prevented from coming back for a long while; that Clement B. Penrose, one of the commissioners, meeting the witness some time afterward, asked him the reason why the said Peggy Jones had not come back with her witnesses. Deponent further says that, prior to the change of government, he was several times on the land claimed, and saw cabins, and a field under cultivation; claimant had also horses and cattle; that said Peggy Jones lived there with her husband and children; that said place lies south of Little-Rock creek, west of Samuel Wilson's tract, and bounded east by the Sulphur spring, at the distance of about twenty miles from St. Louis; that said place was much exposed to incursions of the Osage Indians. June 27, 1808.—Board met, on application of a claimant. Present: the Hon. John B. C. Lucas and Clement B. Penrose.

William Janes, claiming 620 arpens, 27 perches, of land, district of St. Genevieve, Bellevue settlement, produces to the board a plat of survey, dated February 20, 1806, certified to be received for record, February 27, 1806, by Antoine Soulard.

Elisha Baker, sworn, says that in 1805, claimant had a cabin on the land, and has inhabited and cultivated the same ever since; raised a crop in 1805. Laid over for decision. (See No. 3, page 214.)

June 6, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

William Janes, claiming 620 arpens, and 27 perches, of land. (See book No. 3, page 214.)

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See No. 4, page 368.)

May 13, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway and James H. Relfe, commissioners.

William Janes, by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land in Bellevue settlement. (See record-book B, page 235; book No. 3, page 214; No. 4, page 368.)

The following testimony was taken in Washington county, by L. F. Linn, esq., in May, 1833:

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Washington:

John T. McNeal, aged about 70 years, being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he was well acquainted with William Janes, the original claimant; that he improved the tract of land claimed in the year 1803, and continued on the same in 1804. Witness saw a cabin on said land in 1804, and in the winter of 1804 and '5, he was on the place, and saw the cornstalks standing there, which must have been the cornstalks of the crop of 1804. There were several acres under fence, and witness believes said Janes continued to live on said land till the year 1807, when he left the country.

No. 334.—J. B. Vallé, claiming 20,000 arpens.

To Don Zenon Trudeau, Lieutenant Governor of the western part of Illinois:

The undersigned, John Baptiste Vallé, supplicates you very humbly, and has the honor to represent that, having a numerous family, and wishing to provide for their maintenance, being owner of a prodigious number of cattle of all kinds, he desires to have lands in proportion, not only for agricultural purposes, but also for pasturage; therefore, the petitioner has recourse to your authority, sir, praying you will please grant him, in full property, a concession for twenty thousand arpens of land in superficie, to be taken in a vacant place of his Majesty's domain. This favor the petitioner hopes to receive from the generosity of the government which you represent, and he shall not cease to pray for the preservation of your precious life.

J. B. VALLÉ.

St. Genevieve, February 15, 1797.

Don Zenon Trudeau, Lieutenant Governor of the western part of Illinois:

The surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall survey, in favor of the interested, the twenty thousand arpens of land in superficie, which he solicits, in the place above mentioned, and (le entregara proceso verbal de su apeo) he shall deliver to him a plat and certificate of his survey, in order that, together with this decree, it will serve him as a title for his property, until the corresponding title in form be delivered to him by the general government.

April 24, 1835.—Board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, James H. Relfe, commissioners.

John Baptiste Vallé, claiming 20,000 arpens of land, by virtue of a concession from Zenon Trudeau. (See record-book E, page 199.)

Produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Zenon Trudeau, dated February 19, 1797.

The following testimony was taken by James H. Relfe, commissioner, in St. Genevieve:

Bartholomew St. Gemme, aged about sixty years, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he was well acquainted with Zenon Trudeau; that he was lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, in the year 1797, at the date of the concession. He further says that he is acquainted with the handwriting of the said Zenon Trudeau; that he has often seen him write, and that the signature to the said concession is in the proper handwriting of the said Zenon Trudeau. This witness further says that he well knows the said John B. Vallé, the claimant; that he was, long before the date of the grant, and after the date of the grant, a citizen and resident in the then province of Upper Louisiana, and that he has continued a citizen and resident ever since; and the said Vallé, at the date of the grant, was the father of a family large and numerous; that he had a large quantity of slaves, and a very large stock of horses, cattle, and other animals; that his family and connections were large and respectable; that he acted as the commandant of the post, and was held in high estimation and repute by the Spanish government.

No. 335.—James Brown, claiming 640 acres.

No.	Name of original claimant.	Acres.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
335	James Brown.	640	Settlement right.		John Stewart, D. S., February 8, 1806. Received for record by Soulard, S. G., February 27, 1806.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

June 27, 1806.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment. Present: Hon. Clement B. Penrose and James L. Donaldson, esquire.

James Brown, claiming, under the second section of the act of Congress, 748 arpens, 68 perches, of land, situate in Bellevue, district of St. Genevieve, produces a survey of the same, dated the 8th, and certified 27th February, 1806.

Elisha Baker, being duly sworn, says that he, the witness, was on the said tract of land early in the year 1804; that the same was then actually inhabited, and bore the marks of its having been cultivated the year before; and, further, that it has been actually inhabited and cultivated to this day. Had, on the 20th day of December, 1803, a wife and child.

The board reject this claim. (See minutes, No. 1, page 376.)

September 1, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

James Brown, claiming 748 arpens, 68 perches, of land. (See book No. 1, page 376.)

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 4, page 482.)

December 7, 1833.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

James Brown, by his heirs and legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land in Bellevue settlement, county of Washington. (See book No. 1, page 376; No. 4, page 482; record-book B, page 349.)

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Washington:

John T. McNeal, aged about 70 years, being duly sworn, as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he was well acquainted with James Brown, the original claimant; that he came to this country in 1803; that he also knows the land claimed, and that the claimant settled on it in the spring of the year 1804; that he built a house and made an improvement in 1804; and, he believes, had a garden that year, and there were several acres cleared that year; that the same James Brown continued to inhabit and cultivate the same some two or three years, and then sold to George Smurls; Smurls then took possession, and continued thereon till he sold to John Stewart, who then took the same into possession, and continued on the same till he sold to Rudolf Hoverstick, and that the said Hoverstick continued on the same till he sold to Samuel Hunter, who went on the premises, and remained thereon till he died; that said James Brown, when he settled on the place, had a wife and one child.

JOHN T. McNEAL.

Sworn to and subscribed before the commissioner, this 9th day of May, 1833.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

And also came John Stewart, a witness, aged 64 years, who, being duly sworn, as the law directs, deposeth and saith, that he was well acquainted with James Brown, the original claimant; that he first saw him in 1803; he had a wife and one or two children; that he first saw him on the land claimed in the fall of 1804; that he had raised a crop there in that year; he had a house on the land at the time, and some cleared land, some few acres; and, he thinks, the next year he traded off the land; then witness surveyed the land in the year 1806, made a plat of survey, and returned the same to the proper officer for record, and that the recording fees were paid.

JOHN STEWART.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 9th day of May, 1833.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

John Stewart, being further sworn, deposeth and saith that James Brown and his wife resided at Squire Boher's at the time he, James Brown, was building and making his improvement before he moved, and this was in the year 1804 that he was building and improving on the land; then Brown moved on the land in 1804.

April 24, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

In the case of James Brown, claiming 640 acres of land, (see book No. 6, page 369,) the following testimony was taken before James H. Relfe, commissioner:

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Washington:

Personally appeared before James H. Relfe, one of the commissioners for the adjustment of private land claims in Missouri, William Davis, sr., who deposeth and saith that, in the fall of the year 1809, witness, with James Brown and others, were on Black-river hunting-land, when James Brown informed witness that he, said Brown, had been employed by Joseph Bear, or Barr, to build a cabin on a tract of land in Bellevue, held by said Barr as assignee of —— Cordor, and, after having built the cabin, he moved into it, and kept possession of the land, until it was confirmed to Barr; believing he had as much right as Barr had to it, while in possession of the land, he sold the west half of the tract to one Saul Hewitt, the same which Samuel Hunter possessed at the time of his death. Deponent says he knows it to be the same land which has been confirmed to the legal representatives of —— Corder, who are now in possession of the same, one King now living in the cabin which Brown informed witness he built.

July 8, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

The following testimony was taken before James H. Relfe, commissioner, in Washington county:

Zachariah Goforth deposeth and saith that he came in the settlement of Bellevue, in the county of Washington, in the Territory of Missouri, in the month of March, 1804; that, in the month of July or August following, a certain James Brown came to the neighborhood, and established himself in a camp about three miles west of the present village of Caledonia, where deponent's father lived; that the said Brown lived in this camp some short time, and then erected a small cabin. Deponent has no recollection of any cultivation on said place, as made by claimant, Brown, that fall. As well as deponent recollects, the next season, viz., in 1805, Brown built a cabin for Joseph Barr, and, when it was finished, moved into it. This is the same improvement which was confirmed to John Corder's representatives. About the time Brown moved into the cabin built on Corder's place, he sold the cabin he first built to one Saul or Solomon Hewitt.

No. 338.—Israel Dodge, claiming 1,000 arpens.

To Don CHARLES DEHAULT DELASSUS, Lieutenant Colonel, attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and Lieutenant Governor of the upper part of the same province:

Israel Dodge, an ancient inhabitant of the country, has the honor to represent to you that he had obtained leave of Monsieur le Chevalier de Bourbon, in consequence of the verbal permission given by your predecessor, Don Zenon Trudeau, to select, on the domain, a tract of vacant lands suitable to his views; for that purpose he took the necessary steps, and discovered, more than one year ago, the tract of land represented in the above figurative plat. He hopes, therefore, that you will be pleased to grant to him, in full property, the quantity of 1,000 arpens of land in superficie, to be taken in the same manner as described in his figurative plat, and at the place designated, as follows: In a bottom situated between the fork of the St. Francis, called Gaboré's fork, and the fork called Des Loups (Wolves' fork), in such a way as to include a spring which discharges a part of its waters in a branch which empties into Wolves' fork; at the said above-mentioned spring there is a tree, commonly called by Americans dogwood, and marked I. D. The said land is situated at about two and a half or three miles north of the Hunter's path, which crosses Wolves' fork and the Gaboré river, at about twenty-five miles W. S. W. of the post of New Bourbon.

The petitioner expects of your justice, in case you are pleased to grant his demand, that you will condescend to empower him to give to his lines any other directions than those designated in the above figurative plat, should it be judged more advantageous to his interest, considering that the directions demanded are the result of a mere guess-work, subject to many errors.

The petitioner, full of confidence in your justice, and in the generosity of the government, to which he has always given proofs of his fidelity, hopes that you will be pleased to do justice to his demand, in a manner favorable to the accomplishment of his views.

NEW BOURBON, October 15, 1799. ISRAEL DODGE.

We, the undersigned, commandant of the post of New Bourbon of Illinois, do certify to Don Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant colonel, attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and lieutenant governor of the upper part of the said colony of Louisiana, that the statement made in the foregoing petition is very exact, sincere, and true; we do certify, besides, that the petitioner is one of the most honest inhabitants of our post, who has often signalized his zeal for the King's service, and that of the colony; in short, we do attest that the said petitioner has erected, at a very great expense, several establishments, such as mills, breweries, distilleries, and others, which are of the most precious utility to the inhabitants of this section of the country; and that under these several heads he is worthy, in all points of view, to obtain the concession which he solicits.

Done at New Bourbon, October 20, 1799. PIERRE DELASSUS DE LUZIERE.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, October 25, 1799.

Cognizance being taken of the statement made in the foregoing petition, as also of the information of the commandant of the post of New Bourbon, the captain of militia, Don Pedro Delassus de Luziere, considering the numerous family of the petitioner, and that he is one of the first Americans who settled in this country, and that he has more than the means and number of hands (population) necessary to obtain the concession which he solicits, I do grant to him and his heirs the land which he solicits, provided it is not prejudicial to anybody; and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of the quantity of land he asks, in the place designated. The alterations solicited in the directions (of the lines) described in the figurative plat, may be effected, because in either way it cannot be prejudicial to any one who holds a title of prior date than this one; and this being executed, he shall make out a plat, delivering the same to said party, with his certificate, in order to serve to him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone belongs, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

I notify the party interested, that I have cause to believe that the tract of land mentioned in his petition is already settled; this might lead into difficulties which it would be better to avoid, by asking of the lieutenant governor the permission to take the same quantity of land in any vacant part of the domain.

ST. LOUIS, December 15, 1799. SOULARD.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, December 16, 1799.

In consequence of the above information, we authorize the party interested to take the same quantity of land in any other vacant part of the domain, to which the surveyor of this Upper Louisiana, Don Antonio Soulard, shall have to conform himself.

No. 339.—Walter Fenwick, claiming 10,000 arpens.

To the Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana:

Walter Fenwick has the honor to represent that, having come over to this side of Illinois with the consent and recommendation of the governor-general, the Baron de Carondelet, in order to make an extensive establishment; therefore he has visited the country and found a vacant tract at the place commonly called La Mine a la Motte, at the distance of about fifteen leagues from the village of St. Genevieve, said place belonging to his majesty's domain, and being fit for cultivation, and at the same time advantageous for the purpose of raising cattle, which are very much needed in the country, and the petitioner being able to draw from the United States all kind of cattle, it might become, in a little while, profitable to him and advantageous to the whole colony. For this consideration, and that of being a new settler, who has become encouraged by the generous offers of government, and his projects requiring an extensive tract of land, as well for cultivation as to establish a stock farm, the petitioner supplicates you very humbly to grant to him, in full property, ten thousand arpens of land in superficie, at the said place of Mine a la Motte. In doing which, he shall never cease to pray for your happiness and prosperity.

ST. GENEVIEVE, August 14, 1796.

WALTER FENWICK.

ST. LOUIS, August 23, 1796.

The surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall survey, in favor of the party interested, the ten thousand arpens of land which he solicits in the said place of Mine a la Motte, and he shall deliver to him a plat and certificate of survey, in order that, together with the present decree, they shall serve as a title to his property until the corresponding title be made out by the general government, in which he shall have to apply for greater formality.

339	Walter Fenwick.	10,000	Concession, August 23, 1796.	Zenon Trudeau.	Mine a la Motte, district of St. Genevieve.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

November 14, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Walter Fenwick, claiming 10,000 arpens of land, situated near Mine a la Motte, district of St. Genevieve, produces record of a concession from Zenon Trudeau, L. G., dated the 23d August, 1796.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. (See minutes, No. 5, page 422.)

August 24, 1833.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: L. F. Linn, A. G. Harrison, F. R. Conway, commissioners.

Walter Fenwick, by his legal representatives, claiming 10,000 arpens of land, situated near Mine a la Motte. (See book No. 5, page 422; records, book D, pages 41 and 43.) Produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Zenon Trudeau, dated August 23, 1796.

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, esq., one of the commissioners:

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of St. Genevieve:

John Baptiste Vallé, sr., being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he is about 72 years of age; that he was well acquainted with Zenon Trudeau; that he was the lieutenant governor of the province of Upper Louisiana in the year 1796; and this deponent further states that he is well acquainted with the name, signature, and handwriting of the said Zenon Trudeau; that he has often seen him write, and that the name, signature, and handwriting, to the said concession from Zenon Trudeau, to said Walter Fenwick, for the quantity of 10,000 arpens of land, dated the 23d day of August, in the year 1796, is the proper name, signature, and handwriting of the said Zenon Trudeau. And the deponent further says that he was well acquainted, personally, with Walter Fenwick, the grantee: that the said Walter Fenwick was, at the date of the grant, a citizen and resident in the then province of Upper Louisiana, and had been for some time before; and that the said Fenwick continued to be a citizen and resident until the time of his death, which the deponent believes was some time in the year 1811 or '12; and that the signature to the petition is in the proper handwriting of the said Walter Fenwick. Sworn to and subscribed before me, L. F. Linn, one of the commissioners appointed to investigate and report on land claims in Missouri, this 4th day of May, 1833.

J. BAPTISTE VALLÉ.

November 17, 1834.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, and J. S. Mayfield, commissioners.

Walter Fenwick, claiming 10,000 arpens of land. (See book No. 6, page 251.)

The board are unanimously of opinion that the above claim is destitute of merit, an alteration being apparent in the original concession on file, as noted in the translation of said concession; the word huit (eight) in the original having been altered into dix (ten). (See book No. 7, page 68.)

JAMES S. MAYFIELD,
JAMES H. RELFE,
F. R. CONWAY.

August 26, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, and F. H. Martin, commissioners.

Walter Fenwick, claiming 10,000 arpens of land. (See book No. 6, page 251; No. 7, page 68.)

On motion, the board agreed to reconsider the decision made on this claim, on the 17th of November, 1834, and, on a re-examination of the original concession, find that the alteration above spoken of is not made in the concession, but in the petition; and the words "diez mil arpanes" (ten thousand arpens) in the concession, are fairly written, it is believed, in the proper handwriting of the lieutenant governor, Zenon Trudeau, and that the alteration in the petition must have been made anterior to the granting of the concession.

The board, therefore, rescind their former decision in this case, and are unanimously of opinion that this claim of 10,000 arpens of land ought to be confirmed to the said Walter Fenwick, or to his legal representatives, according to the concession. (See book No. 7, page 244.)

No. 340.—Peter Burns, sr., claiming 640 acres.

No.	Name of original claimant.	Acres.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
340	Peter Burns, sr.	640	Settlement right.		On the waters of St. Francis river, county of Madison.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

December 27, 1833.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Peter Burns, sr., by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land, situate on the waters of St. Francis river, county of Madison. (See record-book F, page 53; Bates's decisions, page 102.)

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Madison:

John Mathews, a witness, aged about 62 years, being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith, that he was well acquainted with Peter Burns, sr.; that this witness came to this country in the year 1800; that Peter Burns, sr., came to this country, then the province of Upper Louisiana, in the year 1804; that he settled on the tract of land in the summer of 1804; that he had a house on the land, and lived in it with his family, which was a wife and some seven or eight children; that he saw some land open on the place, and that there was something growing thereon, but whether corn, potatoes, or turnips, he does not recollect; that there was a small field of two or three arpens opened at the time, and he is sure some cultivation was done in the year 1804; that said

Peter Burns, sr., remained on the place several years, and then was scared or run off by the Osage Indians, who drove them into the settlements, where the family remained; that the Indians did, at that time, frighten the people, and committed several depredations on the waters of the St. Francis, and forced the people for safety to come into the settlements.

JOHN MATHEWS.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 31st of May, 1833.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

Also came John Clements, a witness, aged 53 years, who being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith, that he was well acquainted with the original claimant; that he came to this country in the year 1803, to the best of his recollection, or early in the year 1804; witness also knows the land claimed, and that shortly afterward he settled on the land, built a house, fenced in and cleared several acres of land, and cultivated the same in corn, tobacco, cotton, vegetables, and common garden; and that the land has been generally inhabited and cultivated ever since the settlement was begun, shortly after he came to the country.

Sworn and subscribed, this 21st of October, 1833.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

Also came Thompson Crawford, a witness, aged about 47 years, who being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith, that he was well acquainted with the original claimant; that he came to this country in the spring of 1804; witness also knows the land claimed, and knows that the claimant inhabited, improved, and cultivated the same in the year 1804; that he built a house thereon, and lived on the same, and that the land has been actually inhabited and cultivated ever since.

THOMPSON CRAWFORD.

Sworn to and subscribed, this 22d of October, 1833.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

And also came John Reaves, a witness, aged about 73 years, who, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he knew the original claimant, who came in this country, he believes, in 1802; that the claimant was here in 1803, and then witness became acquainted with him, from which time witness and claimant lived neighbors. Witness also knows the land claimed, and that the claimant settled on the same early in the spring of 1804, having built a house, and moved into the same on the land in the winter of 1803 and 1804; and that in 1804 he cleared, fenced in, and cultivated several acres in corn and other things necessary for a family. In the summer or spring of 1804, the Osage Indians made a break on the settlement and drove off the settlers, particularly the women, and in the fall claimant returned and gathered his crop, and the said tract of land has been, from time to time, inhabited and cultivated ever since.

JOHN his × mark. REAVES.

No. 341.—William Reed, jr., claiming 727 arpens.

No.	Name of original claimant.	Arpens,	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
341	William Reed, Jr.	727	Settlement right.		John Stewart, D. S., February 26, 1806; received for record by Soulard, S. G., February 27, 1806, in Bellevue, district of St. Genevieve.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

June 26, 1806.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: Hon. Clement B. Penrose and James L. Donaldson, esquires.

William Reed, jr., claiming 727 arpens of land, situate at Bellevue, district of St. Genevieve, produces survey of the same, taken the 26th, and certified 27th February, 1806.

John Lewis, being duly sworn, says that he always understood from the neighbors of the claimant, that he had obtained a permission to settle from some persons authorized to grant the same; that he arrived in the country in November, 1803, settled said land in 1804, worked on the same occasionally, living then with his father-in-law; and further, that he was a single man, and of the age of 21 years and upward.

The board rejected this claim. (See No. 1, page 369.)

December 3, 1807.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment. Present: Hon. J. B. C. Lucas, C. B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates.

William Reed, jr., claiming 727 arpens of land, situate in Bellevue, district of St. Genevieve, produces a survey of the same, dated as above.

William Murphy, being duly sworn, says that he was present when old William Reed obtained permission to settle himself, and friends, and connections, on vacant land, from Mr. De Luziere, late commandant of New Bourbon, in 1798 or 1799; and that witness always understood that said William Reed was brother's son of said William Reed, sr.

Joseph Reed, being duly sworn, says that claimant built a cabin on said tract in 1804, and moved in the same in 1805, and lived in it ever since.

John Lewis, being also sworn, says that claimant raised a crop on said tract in 1806 or 1807. Laid over for decision. (See book No. 3, page 125.)

April 20, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

William Reed, jr., claiming 727 arpens of land. (See book No. 1, page 369; No. 3, page 125.) It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See No. 4, page 335.)

November 30, 1833.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Washington:

Be it remembered that, on the 10th day of January, 1832, before me, Henry Shurlds, a justice of the peace within and for said county, the following persons appeared:

John T. McNaill, aged 68 years and upward, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that, some time in the fall of the year 1804, he called at Jacob Job's, who was then living with his family on what was called William Reed, junior's claim, in now Washington county aforesaid; that he was living in a cabin, and had a crop of corn growing, and he understood from said Reed that Job was living there by his (Reed's) consent. In 1805, Job moved off, and Reed moved into the same place, and continued there until 1815 or 1816, as well as he remembers; and the place has been inhabited and cultivated ever since.

JOHN T. McNAILL.

Subscribed and sworn to by John T. McNaill, who is personally known to me.

JAMES H. RELFE,
F. R. CONWAY.

July 7, 1835.—In the case of Pierre Tornat, claiming 600 arpens of land. (See book No. 6, page 189.)

David Fine, duly sworn, says that he is about 71 years of age; that he came to this country in 1802, and settled a place in 1803, about three miles from the land claimed; that in 1804 he went on the tract claimed, and there saw two men, Giguiere and Baudouin, working on said land; they lived in a cabin which appeared to be an old one. Witness further says there was an enclosure of two or three arpens, and as well as he can recollect, there were some fruit-trees planted, and some of them are yet standing; that said Lajoie moved on said place, he thinks, in 1806, and lived there till his death; that after Lejoie's death his widow left the place for about one year, and having married one St. John, came back to said place, and lived there till the said St. John's death, which happened about ten or eleven years ago. Witness believes there must be now under cultivation about 40 or 45 acres.

Pascal L. Cerré, duly sworn, says that, several years before the change of government, under Mr. Delassus, he saw Giguiere and Baudouin living in a camp made with clapboards, and working on said piece of land for and under Pierre Tornat dit Lajoie, who had hired them by the year; that said two men had, before the cession to the United States, a small field of three or four arpens, in which they raised corn and tobacco, and had apple-trees planted; that said Lajoie moved to said place with his family in 1806 or 1807, and continued to inhabit and cultivate the same until his death. Witness further says, that said Lajoie was an excellent and very industrious farmer; that this land is situated on the north side of the Marameck, about two miles below John Boli's ferry, opposite the little Saline, and bounded on one side by the river Marameck, and on the other by Mrs. Boli's line. Lajoie's house was about twenty-five arpens from the banks of the river. (See book No. 7, page 208.)

REPORTS

Of the Board of Commissioners at St. Louis, under the act of the 9th of July, 1832, and the act supplementary thereto, in relation to the claims to lands in the State of Missouri, upon claims No. 1 to No. 152, inclusive (except No. 20), in the Second Class.

Class 2. No. 1.—Louis Lorimier, claiming 1,000 arpens.

To Don CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS, Lieutenant Colonel in the armies of his Catholic Majesty, Lieutenant Governor and Commander-in-chief of Upper Louisiana, &c.:

The undersigned has the honor to represent to you that, intending to build a saw-mill on a creek which runs through his concession at Cape Girardeau, and the mill-seat being situated so near his lower line that a grantee contiguous to him on that side might easily make the water flow back to his mill, and thereby cause him considerable injury; he has also the honor to observe to you that, when his land was surveyed, it was found, in running the lines conformably to his demand, (granted by a decree,) that the improvements of several inhabitants whose concessions were of a later date, were included in the said survey, and the petitioner, in order not to put them to any inconvenience, had the directions of the lines altered, depriving himself in this way of more than a thousand arpens of the best land, to take in exchange stony lands, unfit for cultivation. In compensation of this sacrifice, and, besides, in order to secure the peaceable enjoyment of his intended mill, the petitioner prays you, sir, to grant to him the tract of vacant lands which is situated to the south of and adjoining his concession, and containing twenty arpens in front on the river, extending in depth to the concession of Mr. E. Robertson. The petitioner shall never cease to pray for the preservation of your days and your prosperity.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, July 10, 1800. L. LORIMIER.

The petitioner shall have recourse to the intendant of these provinces, whom we inform that the petitioner, on account of his usefulness and the zeal he has shown in the royal service before and since he is commandant of the post of Cape Girardeau, besides being an excellent husbandman, appears to us to be worthy of the favor which he solicits; and further, that his project of building a mill shall be of the greatest utility to the public. His lordship will determine as he thinks fit.

ST. LOUIS, July 31, 1800.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

May 25, 1809.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Louis Lorimier, claiming 1,000 arpens of land; produces to the board a petition to Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, lieutenant governor, and a recommendation from said Delassus to the intendant, dated 31st July, 1800. Laid over for decision. (See book No. 4, page 74.)

March 22, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Louis Lorimier, claiming 1,000 arpens of land. (See book No. 4, page 74.) It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. (See book No. 4, page 302.)

March 16, 1833.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: L. F. Linn, A. G. Harrison, and F. R. Conway, commissioners.

Louis Lorimier, sr., by his legal representatives, claiming 1,000 arpens of land by way of extension of a former concession. (See book E, pages 22 and 23; Minutes, No. 4, pages 74 and 302.) Produces a document signed Charles D. Delassus, dated 31st July, 1800.

Pierre Menard, duly sworn, says that the signature to said document is in the handwriting of Carlos Dehault Delassus, and the signature to the petition is in the handwriting of Louis Lorimier, sr. (See book No. 6, page 128.)

November 11, 1833.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: L. F. Linn, A. G. Harrison, and F. R. Conway, commissioners.

In the case of Louis Lorimier, claiming 1,000 arpens of land. (See page 128, No. 6.)

Pierre Menard, duly sworn, says that he was well acquainted with the said Louis Lorimier; that he dealt largely with him; witness believes that in 1803 or 1804, said Lorimier began to build a saw and grist mill; that, if some one had possessed the land below his mill, he might easily have rendered said mill useless, by backing the water; that the whole tract claimed was subject to overflowing. (No. 6, page 317.)

November 17, 1834.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, and J. S. Mayfield, commissioners.

Louis Lorimier, claiming 1,000 arpens of land. (See book No. 6, page 128.)

The board cannot take cognizance of this claim, there being no concession, warrant, or order of survey. (See book No. 7, page 67.)

Class 2. No. 2.—Louis Coyteux, claiming 400 arpens.

To Don CHARLES DEHAULT DELASSUS, Lieutenant Colonel in the armies of his Catholic Majesty, and Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana:

Louis Coyteux, jr., very humbly supplicates, and has the honor to represent to you, that, desiring to make and improve a plantation, he would wish that you would grant to him, for that purpose, the quantity of 400 arpens of land in superficie, to be taken in a vacant place of the domain. The petitioner,, being born a subject of his Catholic Majesty, hopes to obtain this favor; in so doing, he shall never cease to pray for the conservation of your days.

CAMILLE DELASSUS, witness to the mark.

We, the undersigned, commandant of the post of New Bourbon, do certify to the lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana that the petitioner is worthy to obtain the concession which he asks, as much on account of the important services his father has rendered in his capacity of commissary of police for the district of Bois-brulé, as because the said petitioner has no other way of supporting himself but that of farming.

Done at New Bourbon, October 10, 1799.

P'RE DELASSUS DE LUZIERE.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, October 18, 1799.

In consequence of the information given by the commandant of the post of New Bourbon, Captain Don P're Delassus de Luziere, and considering that the petitioner is the son of one of the old inhabitants of this country, and that he possesses sufficient means to improve the lands which he solicits, I do grant to him and his heirs the land which he solicits, provided it is not to the prejudice of any other person, and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of the quantity of land he asks, in a vacant place of the King's domains; and this being executed, he shall make out a plat of his survey, delivering the same to said party, with his certificate, in order to serve to him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom corresponds the distributing and granting all classes of lands belonging to the royal domain.

2	Louis Coyteux, jr.	400	Concession, 18th October, 1799.	Carlos Dehault Delassus.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

July 5, 1833.—L. F. Linn, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Louis Coyteux, jr., by his legal representatives, claiming 400 arpens of land, produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Carlos Dehault Delassus, dated 18th October, 1799, with a recommendation from Pierre Delassus de Luziere, commandant of New Bourbon, dated 8th October, 1799; the whole headed by a petition from said Coyteux.

By the recommendation, it appears that the commandant of New Bourbon recommends the said Coyteux as worthy to obtain the grant which he asks for, as well on account of the signal services of his father, in the capacity of commissioner of police of the canton of Bois-brulé, as because the suppliant has no other means of subsistence but that of a cultivator. Also, the following endorsement is found on the back of the title-papers: No. 17. Dépôt des titres de concession d'une terre accordée au Sieur Louis Coyteux fils, enregistrés sous le No. 17. (The title of concession for a piece of land granted to Louis Coyteux, jr., has been deposited and registered under No. 17.) Also, Rejected for want of a plat of survey.

J. L. DONALDSON, Recorder, St. Louis.

M. P. Leduc, duly sworn, says that the signature to the concession is in the proper handwriting of Carlos Dehault Delassus; that the signature to the recommendation is in the proper handwriting of Pierre Delassus de Luziere, commandant of New Bourbon; that the signature to the endorsement, by J. L. Donaldson, is in the proper handwriting of said Donaldson, then recorder of land-titles in St. Louis. Deponent further says that it appears, by said endorsement, that the said Donaldson rejected the recording of said claim for want of a plat of survey. (See book No. 6, page 210.)

Class 2. No. 4.—Hippolite Bolon, claiming 720 arpens.

Don CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS, Colonel in the armies of his Catholic Majesty, and formerly Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana:

We do certify to all those whom it may concern that, in the year 1799, we required Mr. Hippolite Bolon to come forthwith to this place to fix his residence, in order to fulfil the functions of interpreter to the Indian nations; that he came, and has lived in this place all the time that our command lasted, until the delivery of this province to France.

In testimony whereof, we have signed the present certificate, in St. Louis of Illinois, October 23, 1804.

Class 2. No. 6.—Regis Loisel, claiming 44,800 arpens.

To Mr. CHARLES DEHAULT DELASSUS, Lieutenant Colonel of the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana, &c.:

SIR: Regis Loisel has the honor to submit that, having made considerable sacrifices in the Upper Missouri Company, in aiding to the discoveries of Indian nations in that quarter, in order to increase commerce hereafter, as also to inculcate to those different nations favorable sentiments toward the government, and have them devoted to the service of his Majesty, so as to be able to put a stop to the contraband trade of foreigners who, scattering themselves among those Indians, employ all imaginable means to make them adopt principles contrary to the attachment they owe to the government. The petitioner has also furnished, with zeal, presents, in order to gain the friendship of those different nations, for the purpose to disabuse them of the errors insinuated to them, and to obtain a free passage through their lands and durable peace. The petitioner, intending to continue on his own account the commerce which his partners have abandoned in that quarter, hopes that you will be pleased to grant to him, for the convenience of his trade, permission to form an establishment in Upper Missouri, where he will build a fort, about seven leagues higher up than the great bend (grand detour), distant about four hundred leagues from this town, and which shall be situated on the said Missouri, between the river known under the name of Rivière du vieux Anglais (river of the old Englishman), which empties itself in the said Missouri, on the right side of it, in descending the stream, and lower down than Cedar island, and the river known under the name of Rivière de la Côte de Medecine (river of the medicine bluff), which is on the left side, in descending the stream, and higher up than Cedar island; which island is at equal distance from each of the two rivers above named. That place being the most convenient for his operations, as well in the Upper as in the Lower Missouri, and it being indispensable to secure to himself the timber in an indisputable manner, he is obliged to have recourse to your goodness, praying that you will be pleased to grant to him a title of concession in full property for him, his heirs or assigns, for the extent of land situated along the banks of the said Missouri, and comprised between the river called the Old Englishman's, and the one called the Medicine bluff, here above mentioned, by the depth of one league in the interior, on each side of the Missouri, and including the island known by the name of Cedar island, as also other small timbered islands. In granting his demand, he shall never cease to render thanks to your goodness.

REGIS LOISEL.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, March 20, 1800.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, March 25, 1800.

Whereas it is notorious that the petitioner has made great losses, when in the company he mentions, and as he continues his voyages of discoveries conformably to the desire of the government, which are the cause of great expenses to him; and it being necessary for the commerce of peltries with the Indians, that forts should be constructed among those remote nations, as much to impress them with respect, as to have places of deposit for the goods and other articles which merchants carry to them, and particularly for those of the petitioner: for these reasons I do grant to him and his successors the land which he solicits, in the same place where he asks, provided it is not to the prejudice of anybody; and the said land being very far from this post, he is not obliged to have it surveyed at present; but, however, he must apply to the intendant general, in order to obtain the title in form from said intendant, because to him belongs, by order of his Majesty, the granting of all classes of lands belonging to the royal domain.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

At the request of Mr. James Clamorgan, I do certify to have copied the part of the course of the river Missouri, comprised in the above plat, from a chart of the said river which I have in my possession, and to have drawn the plat of the land granted to Mr. Regis Loisel, deceased, by the lieutenant governor, Don Charles Dehault Delassus, under date of March 25, 1800, as near as possible conformable to the tenor of said title. The said land extends, on its front, 4¾ French leagues of 30 to the degree, or thereabouts, and on its depth, 5½ of those same leagues, which will give a total superficie of upward of 26 leagues; of which quantity, deducting about half for the course of the river Missouri, it reduces the superficie of the said land to about 14 leagues. The said grant is situated at about 1,200 miles from the mouth of the said river, and between the 107th and 106th degrees of the longitude of London, and 44 degrees of latitude. In testimony whereof, I have delivered the present (plat) to the party interested, to serve to him to prove his claim, where needed.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

August 22, 1806.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: Hon. John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and James L. Donaldson.

The same (Jacques Clamorgan), assignee of Regis Loisel, claiming a tract of land or island on the Missouri. Produces a concession for the same from Charles D. Delassus, dated March 25, 1800, and a figurative plan of the same, dated November 20, 1805.

Antoine Tabeau, being duly sworn, says that the said land is situate up the Missouri; that, in the year

1802, he, the witness, went up the said river with the said Regis Loisel, who built a four-bastion fort of cedar, the whole at his own expense, and without any assistance from government; that the year following, to wit, in 1803, they again went up together, when the said Loisel ascended with witness about sixty-five leagues higher up; made a garden and large field; and further that he, the witness, never heard of said Loisel having a concession for the land.

Auguste Chouteau, being also duly sworn, says that the aforesaid fort was begun in 1800.

The board reject this claim, and require further proof. (See book No. 1, page 484.)

September 14, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Jacques Clamorgan, assignee of Regis Loisel, claiming 151,162 arpens and 85 perches of land. (See book No. 1, p. 484.) It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. (See book No. 4, p. 500.)

July 8, 1833.—L. F. Linn, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Regis Loisel, by Jacques Clamorgan's representatives, claiming 44,800 arpens of land, situate at Cedar Island, on the Missouri. (See record book C, page 172; Minutes, No. 1, page 484; No. 4, page 500.)

Produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Carlos Dehault Delassus, dated March 25, 1800; also, a plat certified by Antoine Soulard, and dated November 20, 1805; also, a copy of an adjudication of the said land to Jacques Clamorgan, certified by M. P. Leduc, the 7th of October, 1805; also, the affidavit of Antoine Tabeau and Pierre Dorion, taken before Charles Gratiot, judge of the court of common pleas.

M. P. Leduc, being duly sworn, says that the signature to the decree of concession is in the proper handwriting of Carlos Dehault Delassus; that the signature to said plat and certificate is in the proper handwriting of Antoine Soulard; and that the signature to the adjudication is in the deponent's own handwriting. (See book No. 6, page 222.)

November 17, 1834.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, and J. S. Mayfield, commissioners.

Regis Loisel, claiming 44,800 arpens of land. (See book No. 6, page 222.)

The board do not take cognizance of this claim, it being out of their jurisdiction. (See book No. 7, page 68.)

Class 2. No. 7.—Leo Fenwick, claiming 500 arpens.

To Don ZENON TRUDEAU, Lieutenant Governor of the western part of Illinois, and commandant of St. Louis:

Leo Fenwick, from the State of Kentucky, professing the Roman Catholic religion, has the honor to represent to you, that having determined to come and settle himself in this country, he supplicates you to be willing to grant to him a concession of 500 arpens of land in superficie, situated between the river à la Pomme (Apple river), and the river à la Viand, alias the river of Cape St. Côme. The said Leo Fenwick pledging himself to build on and cultivate the same, in the time prescribed by the ordinance, and to conform himself to the laws and constitution of the kingdom, as a good, faithful, and loyal subject.

LEO FENWICK.

NEW BOURBON, May 26, 1797.

ST. LOUIS, June 10, 1797.

The surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put this party in possession of the 500 arpens of land which he solicits, and the plat and certificate of survey being made out, he shall deliver them to him, in order to enable him to solicit the concession from the governor general of this province, whom I shall inform that the petitioner is a son of Joseph Fenwick, C. A. and R., whom his lordship has recommended, in order that lands should be granted to him, to his family, and to the settlers whom he should bring to establish themselves in this part of Illinois.

7	Leo Fenwick.	500	Concession, June 10, 1797.	Z. Trudeau.	On the Mississippi, between Apple Creek and Cape St. Côme Creek.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

November 14, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Leo Fenwick, claiming 500 arpens of land, situated as aforesaid, produces record of a concession from Zenon Trudeau, L. G., dated 10th June, 1797.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. (See book No. 5, page 423.)

August 26, 1833.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: L. F. Linn, A. G. Harrison, and F. R. Conway, commissioners.

Leo Fenwick, claiming 500 arpens of land, situated between the waters of Apple creek and Cape St. Côme. (See book No. 5, page 423; Records, book D, page 44.)

Produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Zenon Trudeau, dated 10th of June, 1797.

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn. esq., one of the commissioners:

John B. Vallé, senior, aged about 72 years, who, being first duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith, that said Zenon Trudeau was the lieutenant governor in the then province of Upper Louisiana, in the year

1797; that this deponent was well acquainted with his name, signature, and handwriting, having frequently seen him write, and that the name, signature, and handwriting, to the concession from him to Leo Fenwick, dated the 10th of June, 1797, for 500 arpens of land, is the proper handwriting, name, and signature, of the said Zenon Trudeau. And this deponent further saith that he was and is well acquainted with the said Leo Fenwick, the grantee, and that he was, at the date of the grant, a citizen and resident in the then province of Upper Louisiana, and that he has continued a citizen and resident ever since, and is still so (except when on a visit or for the purposes of education.)

Sworn to and subscribed before me, L. F. Linn, one of the commissioners for the settlement of land claims in Missouri, this 4th day of May, 1833.

J. B. VALLÉ.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

November 17, 1834.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, and J. S. Mayfield, commissioners.

Leo Fenwick, claiming 500 arpens of land. (See book No. 6, page 254.)

The board are unanimously of opinion that this claim is destitute of merit, an alteration being apparent in the original concession on file, as noted in the traslation of said concession; the name of river à Brazeau having been altered into that of river à la Viande, alias St. Côme, thus increasing the distance, for location of grant, several miles. (See book No. 7, page 68.)

Class 2. No. 8.—Ezekiel Fenwick, claiming 500 arpens.

To Don ZENON TRUDEAU, Lieutenant Governor of the western part of Illinois, Commandant of St. Louis:

Ezekiel Fenwick, a citizen of the State of Kentucky, professing the Roman Catholic religion, has the honor to represent to you that, having determined to come over to this side to establish himself, he supplicates you to be willing to grant him a concession of 500 arpens of land in superficie, situated between Apple river and river à la Viande, alias river St. Côme, engaging himself, the said Fenwick, to cultivate and build in the time prescribed by the ordinance, and to conform himself to the laws, customs, and constitution of the kingdom, as a good, loyal, and faithful subject.

NEW BOURBON, May 26, 1797. EZEKIEL FENWICK.

ST. LOUIS, June 10, 1797.

The surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the petitioner in possession of the 500 arpens of land which he solicits; and, after having made out a plat and certificate of the survey, he shall deliver it to said petitioner, in order to enable him to solicit the concession from the governor general, whom I shall inform that the petitioner is a son of Joseph Fenwick, the same whom his lordship has recommended, in order that land should be procured to him, his family, and to the C. A. and Roman settlers whom he would bring to settle in this part of Illinois.

November 14, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

James Fenwick, claiming 500 arpens of land, situate as aforesaid. Produces record of concession from Zenon Trudeau, L. G., dated 10th June, 1797.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. (See book No. 5, page 423.)

August 24, 1833.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: L. F. Linn, A. G. Harrison, and F. R. Conway, commissioners.

James Fenwick, claiming 500 arpens of land, situated on the Mississippi, between Apple creek and Cape St. Côme creek, adjoining the land confirmed to George A. Hamilton. (See book No. 5, page 423; records, book D, page 44.)

Produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Zenon Trudeau, dated June 10, 1797. No plat of survey is produced, but claimant states that the same was duly surveyed, and the plat returned to the proper office.

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, esq., one of the commissioners:

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of St. Genevieve:

William James, aged 56 years, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith, that he is well acquainted with the claimant, James Fenwick, otherwise called James J. Fenwick, from his infancy; that the said James came to this country in the year 1797, and that he resided in this country and in the neighborhood of the land claimed ever since, that the tract of land claimed was settled on by Joseph Fenwick, father of the claimant, in the year 1800 or 1801, and that the said James lived with his father on the land at the time; that houses were built, fields cleared and fenced on the same, and that the said tract of land has been actually improved, inhabited, and cultivated ever since, and now is improved, inhabited, and cultivated.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

March 26, 1813.—Nicholas Lachance, claiming 500 arpens of land, between the forks of St. Francis and Castor creek, county of St. Genevieve.

Gabriel Nichol, duly sworn, says that claimant built a cabin in 1803, and established a sugar camp, and made sugar every year to this time. (See recorder's minutes; Bates', page 41.) On the margin the following is written: "Not granted."

December 18, 1833.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Madison:

Francis Caillote Lachance, aged about 66 years, being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he has resided in this country about 46 years; that he is well acquainted with the claimant, who came to this country, then the province of Upper Louisiana, about 43 or 44 years ago. This witness further says that he knows the land claimed; that the claimant settled on the same some thirty-one years, and while the country yet belonged to Spain; that he made a cabin on the same, and made sugar on the lands at that time; that, in one or two years after he built a cabin, the claimant moved and settled, and that he continued to claim the said land till one Charles L. Bird pretended that he had a concession for the land and compelled him to go off; that he has continued a citizen of the country and cultivator of the soil ever since.

F. CAILLOTE LACHANCE.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 31st day of May, 1833.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

And also came Michael Caillotte Lachance, a witness, aged about 62 years, who, after having heard the above and foregoing deposition of Francis Caillotte Lachance read and explained to him, deposeth and saith that he knows the same facts, and that the statements and facts contained therein are just and true.

Class 2. No. 17.—John Payett, claiming 464 arpens.

No.	Name of original claimant.	Arpens.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
17	John Payett.	464	Settlement right.		William Russell, D. S., January 21, 1806; certified February 21, 1806, by Antoine Soulard, S. G.; on Negro fork of the Marameck.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

August 20, 1806.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment. Present: Hon. John B. C. Lucas, and Clement B. Penrose, esq.

John Payett, claiming under the second section of the act of Congress, 462 (464) arpens of land, situate on a fork of the waters of the Marameck, called the Negro fork, district of St. Louis, produces a survey of the same, dated the 21st January, and certified the 17th February, 1806.

James Richardson, being duly sworn, says that he knew the above claimant on the said tract of land, about fifteen years ago; that he raised two crops on the same; that, in the year 1790, he was driven away by Indians; that he remained out until the year 1800, when he went back on said land; that, in 1801, he planted a crop of corn, and was again driven away; that some of the farmers were killed by the Indians in 1803; that although not residing on said land, he still continued the cultivating of the same, and raised four crops; that, in the year 1805, he went again on said land, and has actually inhabited and cultivated it to this day. The board reject this claim. (See minute-book No. 1, page 482.)

June 18, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

John Payett, claiming 462 (464) arpens of land. (See book No. 1, page 482.) It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 4, page 389.)

February 21, 1834.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Abraham Helderbrand, being duly sworn, says that he is fifty-one years of age; that, in 1802, he helped said Payett to raise a house on the land claimed; that, in the fall of 1803, he passed by said place, and eat some melons which grew on said land, and saw a small patch of corn growing; and, in the same fall, the Indians becoming troublesome, he moved to the Marameck settlement, about twelve miles below, and returned, as well as witness recollects, in the spring of 1805, and lived there till his death. Witness further says that his own farm lies about six miles from the land claimed, and that he has lived there for thirty-two years; that he recollects that said Payett lived on the land claimed since he, witness, was about ten years old; during which time the said Payett inhabited said place, except when compelled by the Indians, at different times, to leave the said place.

Jonathan Helderbrand, being duly sworn, says that he is in his fiftieth year; that, in 1801 or 1802, he cannot say which of those years, he passed by said Payett's house, but did not see any white person; there he found an Indian, with whom he passed the night in said Payett's house, the said Indian being a friendly one, and not an Osage; that, in 1805, he saw the said Payett living on said place; that he knows said Payett lived on the land claimed till his death; that said Payett had a family consisting of his wife and several children, but does not recollect how many.

Jacob Payett, being duly sworn, says that he is forty-two years of age; that, in 1801, John Payett went on said place, and planted some corn; and, in 1802, he raised a house, but witness does not recollect whether said Payett moved there the same year, or in 1803; that, in the said year 1803, the said Payett was driven away by the Indians, and stayed away about two years, and then returned and lived on said place until he died; witness further says that, at that time, the said Payett had a wife and eight or nine children; that said Payett died about five years ago. (See book No. 6, page 501.)

November 18, 1834.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, and J. S. Mayfield, commissioners.

John Payett, claiming 464 arpens of land. (See book No. 6, page 501.)

The board are unanimously of opinion that this claim ought not to be granted, the said John Payett having had a confirmation by the former board. (See commissioners' certificate, No. 168. See book No. 7, page 71.)

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

June 25, 1834.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: James S. Mayfield and F. R. Conway, commissioners.

John Scott, by his legal representatives, claiming 800 arpens of land, situate on the waters of Dardenne, county of St. Charles. (See book F, page 12; Bates's decisions, page 96.)

James Baldridge, being duly sworn, says that he is about fifty-eight years old; that he thinks it was in 1800 that he helped said John Scott to make the first improvement on this tract; that, in 1801, he, the deponent, lived part of his time with said Scott on the said place; that Scott had then a house, and between ten and twelve acres cleared and in cultivation; that said Scott lived on the place till his death; that Scott's family has continued to live on said place, and are still living on the same.

John McConnell, duly sworn, says that he is in his fifty-second year; that, late in the year 1799, he helped said John Scott to build a house on the land claimed, and, early in the year 1800, he assisted him in moving on the same; that said Scott lived on said place, and, in the spring of 1800, he cleared and improved a field, and raised corn that same year; that said Scott remained on the place till his death; that his family continued to improve and enlarge the farm, and are still living on the same. Witness further says that he understood that this tract of land lies adjoining a tract confirmed to said John Scott, under Thomas Johnson, of 500 arpens.

John Howell, duly sworn, says that, in 1801, he laid the worm of a fence round a good large field on the land claimed; that, in that same year, John Scott raised a crop in the field which deponent helped to fence in; that said John Scott had a house, and his family was living there with him at the time; that he had then four or five children. Deponent further says that, during the late war with the British and Indians, two of said John Scott's sons served as rangers during the whole war.

Michael Price, duly sworn, says that, in 1801, he was at John Scott's place, and he had then a good smart field, wherein corn was growing; that John Scott was living there with his family, consisting of his wife and four or five children; that said Scott had a good stock of horses, cattle, and hogs; that, from the first settling of said place, Scott (and after his death his family) lived on, improved, and cultivated said place up to this day. (See book No. 6, page 534.)

November 18, 1834.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, and J. S. Mayfield, commissioners.

John Scott, claiming 800 arpens of land. (See book No. 6, page 534.)

The board are unanimously of opinion that this claim ought not to be granted, the said John Scott having had a confirmation under a concession. (See commissioners' certificate No. 120. See book No. 7, page 71.)

November 25, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Edward Mathews, claiming 750 arpens of land, situate in the district of New Madrid, produces record of a plat of survey dated 19th December, 1805, certified 27th February, 1806.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 5, page 453.)

January 22, 1834.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Edward Mathews, by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land, situate in Prairie St. Charles, alias Mathews's prairie, in Scott county. (See No. 5, page 453; Record-book A, page 465.)

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Cape Girardeau:

Daniel Stringer states that he moved to and settled in the district of l'Anse-a-la-graisse, (New Madrid,) Upper Louisiana, in the year 1802; that he was well acquainted with Edward N. Mathews, who then, in 1802, resided in Prairie St. Charles, or Lorimier's prairie, in said district. This affiant knows that the said Edward inhabited and cultivated land in said prairie in the years 1802, 1803, and 1804; and that he continued to live in said prairie up to the time of his death, something better than a year ago. There was a double cabin on the land where the said Edward lived, in 1802, and a considerable improvement. The said Edward died on the said place, having a family, which still lives on said place.

DANIEL STRINGER,
L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

John Friend states that he moved to, and settled in, the district of l'Anse-a-la-graisse, (New Madrid,) Upper Louisiana, in 1799: that he was well acquainted with Edward Mathews. This affiant first became acquainted with the said Edward in the fall of 1801, who then resided in Prairie St. Charles, where he had settled in the spring of that year. This affiant knows that the said Edward inhabited and cultivated land in said prairie in the years of 1802, 1803, and 1804; and that he continued to live in said prairie up to the time of his death, which occurred something like twelve months ago. His children still live on said place, in said prairie.

Class 2. No. 21.—The inhabitants of St. Ferdinand, claiming 1,849¼ arpens.

To Mr. BEAUROSIER DUNEGAND, Commandant of the Militia of the Parish of St. Ferdinand:

ST. FERDINAND, August 13, 1796.

The inhabitants of St. Ferdinand have the honor to represent that the Americans are taking concessions in the common, which is the only resource the said inhabitants have for the pasturage needed for this village; and the undersigned, apprehending that the Americans will ask for the only pasturage which now remains for our cattle, we unanimously claim your authority and your recommendation near Don Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant governor of the western part of Illinois, in order that he will please grant us a certain quantity of land to serve as commons for our cattle. The said commons to be taken south of the said village of St. Ferdinand, at the place called Latrappe, which adjoins the concession of Musick, the American, going north one league in length, and extending to the eastward one league in width, making one league square. Our cultivated lands being fenced in, and the concessions of the Americans bounding us on the other side, we have no other resource for the pasturage of our cattle but the land asked for. This being considered, may it please you to make our humble representations to the governor, that he will condescend to grant us our demand, and be convinced of our respectful submission, and we will unanimously pray for his preservation.

[Here follow the signatures or marks of 26 individuals.]

ST. LOUIS, August 16, 1796.

The commandant of St. Ferdinand will select the most proper place where to have commons of a sufficient extent for the said village, and shall make it known to us in order to deliver the concession.

ZENON TRUDEAU.

To Don ZENON TRUDEAU, Lieutenant Governor and Commander-in-chief of the western part of Illinois, &c.:

ST. LOUIS, April 1, 1797.

The inhabitants of St. Ferdinand have the honor to represent that, having asked you, through our commandant, Mr. Francis Dunegand, a concession for a common of one league square, you had authorized the said Dunegand to mark the place of the said common, and this being done, and it being essential to us to secure, for the benefit of the inhabitants of said village, the property of the said land, we have the honor to pray you to grant us the concession for the said common, as follows: the front to be on the river of the said settlement, beginning from the land of Mr. Musick, eighty-four arpens in depth, and having for boundary to the north the end of the lands of our village; a favor which they hope to receive of your justice, as being absolutely necessary for the pasturage and maintenance of our cattle. Besides, the land demanded is not fit for cultivation; and the said inhabitants shall never cease to pray for your happiness and prosperity.

F. DUNEGANT.

[Here are the marks of 54 individuals.]

St. Louis, April 1, 1797.

The surveyor of this jurisdiction, Don Antonio Soulard, shall set boundaries to a league square in the prairie, in order to form a common pasturage for the village of St. Ferdinand, provided it is not prejudicial to the plantations already granted, or to places suitable to make new ones, on account of the timber which might be convenient to those who may solicit them. The said common can be located but in places unfit for cultivation, for the want of water and timber.

ZENON TRUDEAU.

St. Louis of Illinois, April 15, 1797.

We, the undersigned, surveyor commissioned by the government, certify to all those whom it may concern, that this day, April 15, 1797, by virtue of the decree of the lieutenant governor, dated April 1, same year, we have been on a tract of land destined to serve as commons to the inhabitants of the village of St. Ferdinand, which is to have 84 arpens on the east line, and 70 on that of the north, where it meets the river of St. Ferdinand, which crosses said common almost diagonally. The superfice of said common making altogether 5,206¾ arpens and 1 perch. The said measurement was made in presence of the most notable inhabitants and adjoining neighbors, with the perch of the city of Paris, of 18 French feet in length, according to the usage and custom of this colony. The said common is situated to the eastward of the village of St. Ferdinand; bounded to the north and west by the river St. Ferdinand; to the south by the land of Israel Denton, and vacant lands of his Majesty's domain; and to the east by the same vacant lands of his Majesty. And in order to enable the said inhabitants to prove their right, we have delivered to them these presents, together with the accompanying figurative plat, on which we have marked the natural and artificial limits, &c.

ANTONIO SOULARD.

St. Louis, May 13, 1835.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

August 27, 1806.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment. Present: Hon. John B. C. Lucas and Clement B. Penrose, esq.

The inhabitants of the village of St. Ferdinand, to the number of fifty three, claiming, as commons, a league square, or 7,056 arpens, of land, situate at the aforesaid St. Ferdinand, produce a concession from Zenon Trudeau, dated April 1, 1797, and a survey of 5,206¾ arpens, taken and certified April 15, 1797.

John Bte. L. Collins, being duly sworn, says that he came to the said village about ten years ago; that the said commons had been surveyed a few months prior to his arrival at that place; that it is mostly prairie land, and is used as a pasture for the cattle of the inhabitants, and has always been used as such; that the said land is absolutely unfit for cultivation, being mostly swamp, and part of the time under water; and further, that he did, about eight years ago, see the aforesaid concession in the hands of Francis Dunegand, who was then the civil commandant of said village.

James Richardson, being also duly sworn, says that there is but very little or no wood on said land; that about nine years ago he assisted Anthony Soulard in surveying said commons, and understood then that there was a concession for the same. The board reject this claim, and are satisfied that the said concession was granted at the time it bears date. (See book No. 1, page 497.)

August 20, 1811.—Board met. Present: Clement B. Penrose and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Inhabitants of the village of St. Ferdinand, claiming 5,206¾ arpens of land. (See book No. 1, page 497.)

The board confirm to the inhabitants of the village of St. Ferdinand five thousand two hundred and six and three quarters arpens and one perch of land, as described in a plat of survey, certified April 15, 1797, and to be found of record in book C, page 489, of the recorder's office. (See book No. 5, page 322.)

April 16, 1833.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: A. G. Harrison, F. R. Conway, commissioners.

The inhabitants of St. Ferdinand, claiming 7,056 arpens of land, of which 5,206¾ arpens have been confirmed. (See book C, page 489; Minutes, book No. 1, page 497, and No. 5, page 322. See No. 6, page 156.)

June 8, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

The inhabitants of St. Ferdinand, claiming 1,849¼ arpens of land, it being the balance of 7,506 arpens granted them for commons, of which 5,206¾ arpens have been confirmed. (See book No. 6, page 156.)

The board are of opinion that this claim ought not to be confirmed, the said inhabitants having had the said commons surveyed, conformably to the boundaries asked for in their petition, dated April 1, 1797, and the amount of said survey (5,206¾ arpens) having been confirmed by the former board of commissioners. (See book No. 7, page 169.)

JAMES H. RELFE,
F. R. CONWAY.

I have examined the transcript of the above claim, and concur in the decision.

F. H. MARTIN.

CONFLICTING CLAIMS.

Frederick Hyatt and Lewis Hume, for themselves, Reuben Musick, for himself, Joseph Tebeau, for himself, John Romaine, for himself, William Evans, for himself, and Dougald Pitzer, for himself, oppose and object to the confirmation of the additional claim for commons, in favor of the village of St. Ferdinand, in the county of St. Louis; and in support of their objection they state the following facts:

1. There has already been confirmed to the said village, on the claim for commons, a tract of land of five thousand acres or arpens, which is held without opposition or dispute. The claim now before the board, for an enlargement of the confirmation, is, as they are informed, based upon, or refers to a survey of such claim, made by the late John C. Sullivan, without any lawful authority, and which survey, they insist, is of no validity.

2. Each of the objectors is now the owner of lands within the said illegal survey, by regular and satisfactory titles from the United States. And they hereby offer to exhibit to the board the documentary evidence of their respective titles, according to the memorandum of their claims, which follows, viz.:

Frederick Hyatt and Lewis Hume own the following tracts within said claim and illegal survey:

1. The N. E. fractional quarter of sec. 25, in town. 47 N., range 6 E., 158 acres, evidenced by patent, dated June 10, 1824.

2. The W. half of N. W. quarter of sec. 30, town. 47, range 7 E., 78 acres and 22½ one-hundredths. Patent, November 10, 1830.

3. The S. W. fractional quarter sec. 25, town. 47 N., range 6 E., 16.80 acres. Patent, February 11, 1832.

4. The N. W. quarter of sec. 19, town. 47 N, range 7 E., 153.08 acres. Evidenced by the receipt of the receiver, dated December 27, 1831.

5. The N. E. quarter of sec. 24, town. 47 N., range 6 E., 121 acres. Received receipt December 26, 1831.

Reuben Musick owns the following tract: The S. E. quarter of sec. 24, in town. 47 N., range 6 E., 139.60. Evidenced by a patent, dated June 10, 1828. The enlarged claim of common and the illegal survey also conflict with the confirmed Spanish grant, in the name of John Brown, now owned and possessed by said Musick. The extent of the interference not precisely known.

William Evans owns the following tract: The S. W. quarter of sec. 19, in town. 47 N., range 7 E., 155.64 acres. Evidenced by the receiver's receipt, dated January 2, 1832.

Dougald Pitzer owns the following tract: The N. E. fractional quarter of sec. 19, town. 47 N., range 7 E., 159.92 acres. Receiver's receipt dated October 2, 1831.

John Romaine owns the following tract: The N. W. fractional quarter of sec. 36, in town. 47 N., range 6 E., 35 acres. Receiver's receipt dated October 18, 1832.

And Joseph Tebeau owns the following tracts: 1st. Lot No. 1, in the S. W. quarter of sec. 30, town. 47, range 7 east, 80 acres. Patent, November 10, 1830. 2d. Lot No. 2, in the S. W. quarter of sec. 30, town. 47 N., range 7 E., 81.40 acres. Receiver's receipt, September 14, 1832. 3d. The E. half of N. W. quarter of sec. 30, town. 47 N., range 7 east, 78 acres and 22½ one-hundredths. Receiver's receipt, August 5, 1829.

Upon the intrinsic demerits of the extended claim for commons, and upon the opposing titles above set forth, and now offered to be exhibited in proof, they respectfully insist that said claim ought not to be reported for confirmation.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

ST. LOUIS, December 24, 1812.—The interfering claims of S. Thompson, Burwell J. Thompson, assignees, &c., (of Michael Raber) and Jerusha Edmondson. This being the day assigned, the following witnesses were sworn on the part of J. Edmondson:

Green Jewitt, duly sworn, says he knows the land; that Michael Raber settled on the Joachim tract in the year 1801 or 1802, where he made one or two crops; knows not when he left it. In 1805, witness was at Raber's, on the land claimed; saw several cabins of different descriptions; crops growing, and from the appearance of the plantation, judges them to have been made at least a year previously. It was called Mr. Raber's plantation.

Question by interfering claimant. Was there a cabin on the Joachim tract when Mr. Raber went on it?

Answer. There was.

Question. Did you understand that Raber considered the Joachim tract as his head right?

Answer. I did understand that he had chosen it with that view.

Question. Did you, or did you not know that Raber and the adverse claimant were considered as man and wife, both on the Joachim tract and on the tract now claimed?

Answer. She was called Mrs. Raber: the witness had no positive information on the subject.

Witness says he knew John Tulk, a youth who lived in the family; does not recollect whether Tulk called the adverse claimant mother; he seemed to be acting under directions of M. Raber and J. Edmondson, as heads of families.

William Davis, duly sworn, says that he knows the tract claimed; heard J. Edmondson caution the adverse claimant against purchasing this tract, as she was the real proprietor of the land; helped the agent of Mr. Thompson to get in the corn, in fall 1811.

Samuel Thompson, one of the claimants, being duly sworn, says that he has used due diligence, and that it has been out of his power to procure the attendance of his witness. Ordered, that he be permitted to introduce the testimony hereafter, on giving ten days' previous notice to the adverse party. On the margin, the following is written: "Not granted."

December 23, 1834.—F. R. Conway, esq. appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Jerusha Edmondson, by her legal representatives, claiming 250 arpens of land. (See book F, page 100; Bates's minutes, page 30; Bates's decisions, page 28.)

The following testimony was taken in May, 1833, before L. F. Linn, esq., then one of the commissioners:

John Stewart, aged about 74 years, being duly sworn, as the law directs, deposeth and saith, that he was well acquainted with the said Jerusha Edmondson; that her and one Michael Raber lived together on the tract of land claimed, in the year 1803, and raised a crop thereon in 1804; that there was a dwelling-house, kitchen, smoke-house, and other small houses, on the land; that there were several acres of land cleared, a good garden, and some fruit-trees planted. The houses had the appearance of being one or two years old; that he surveyed the land twice; once for said Michael Raber, and afterward for the said claimant, she claiming the land as hers; that said Raber and her had some difficulty, or quarrel, and both told this witness that they were not married to each other. He heard Jerusha say that the said Raber should not stay on the place, and he knows they separated and continued apart.

JOHN STEWART.

Sworn and subscribed before me, this 9th day of May, 1833.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

Israel McGready, aged about 55, being duly sworn, as the law directs, deposeth and saith, that he was well acquainted with Jerusha Edmondson; that she lived with one Michael Raber on the tract of land claimed; that she remained on the tract of land claimed after said Raber left her, and claimed the same as hers; that he has heard both the said Jerusha and Michael say they were not married; and that the tract of land claimed has been inhabited and cultivated ever since.

ISRAEL McGREADY.

Sworn and subscribed before me, this 9th day of May, 1833.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

Henry Pinkley, aged about 50 years, being duly sworn, as the law directs, deposeth and saith, that he was well acquainted with Jerusha Edmondson; that she lived on the tract of land claimed, and that one Michael Raber lived with her; that he was about to settle at or near the place claimed, and the said Jerusha forbid him to do so, as she said the land was hers; that the land, or place, was always called the place of Jerusha Edmondson by the people at large who spoke of the same; and that Michael Raber claimed land on the other side of the creek, about one half mile from this place claimed; that he had his buildings on the place he claimed, and not on the place claimed by Jerusha, on which this witness wanted to settle.

HENRY PINKLEY.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 9th day of May, 1833.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

John Stewart, being further sworn, deposeth and saith, that he knows that after the said Jerusha Edmondson and Michael Raber parted, the said Raber went off and left the said Jerusha in possession of the place, where she continued, claiming the same as her property; and the only way she could be got from the place was by the purchase of her right and interest, which, both Jerusha and Thompson told him, the said Thompson being the purchaser of her right.

JOHN STEWART.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 10th day of May, 1833.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

Uriah Hull, aged about 56 years, being duly sworn, as the law directs, deposeth and saith, that he knows the tract of land claimed; that the said Jerusha Edmondson and Michael Raber lived together on the same in the year 1804; that some time afterward, say five or six years, they separated, and the said Raber went off, leaving the said Jerusha Edmondson in the possession of the place; that she remained on the place for some time after Raber left her, and this witness understood she had sold her right to one or both of the Messrs. Thompson. This witness has since understood they were not married.

URIAH HULL.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 10th day of May, 1833.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

Benjamin Horine, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith, that he knew Jerusha Edmondson; that her and one Michael Raber lived together on the tract of land claimed, in the year 1804, and perhaps before that time; that the land was sometimes called Raber's, sometimes her's, and that the said Raber went off and left her in possession of the place, where she remained for sometime afterward.

BENJAMIN HORINE.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 11th day of May, 1833.

L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

The following testimony was taken in Washington county, by F. R. Conway, esq. :

John Stewart, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he has once before deposed before L. F. Linn, one of the commissioners, and wishes to amend the said deposition by adding the following facts: that toward the last of July or the first of August, 1804, he, said Stewart, was on, or at the place claimed by said Edmondson, and that there were several acres of land cleared and a good crop of corn growing, and that the said Jerusha Edmondson then told him that her and Michael Raber were not married, and that all the property belonged to her; and that the said Raber sometime afterward told him that he and the said Jerusha were not married, and were not man and wife. And further states, that there were more than one house, a very comfortable cabin for a dwelling-house on the last of July or first of August, 1804, and that she always claimed the premises afterward until she sold.

JOHN STEWART.

Subscribed to and sworn the 5th of July, 1833.

June 8, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

Jerusha Edmondson, claiming 250 arpens of land. (See book No. 7, page 84.)

The board are of opinion that this claim ought not to be granted. The same 250 arpens being the same improvement claimed by, and included in a survey made for one Michael Raber, by John Stewart, deputy surveyor, on the 24th of February, 1806. The said Jerusha Edmondson living at that time with the said Raber, as his wife or mistress. (See book No. 7, page 169.)

Class 2. No. 23.—Joseph Chartran, sr., claiming 998 arpens.

No.	Name of original claimant.	Arpens.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
23	Jos. Chartran, sr.	998	Settlement right.		John McKinney, D. S., 1st February, 1806. Received for record by A. Soulard, S. G., February 25, 1806. On the Missouri.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

July 31, 1806.—Agreeably to adjournment, the Hon. John B. C. Lucas attended the board.

Joseph Chartran, claiming 998 arpens of land, situate on the river Chorette, district of St. Charles, produces a survey of the same, dated the 1st of February, 1805 (1806.)

Charles Tayon, being duly sworn, says that when he was commandant of St. Charles, the above claimant applied to him for permission to settle on vacant lands; that he then submitted the said application to Zenon Trudeau, who told him he might grant the said permission; that the said claimant settled the said tract of land in the year 1801, and did, prior to and on the 20th day of December, 1803, actually inhabit and cultivate the same; and had then a wife and four or five orphan children entirely destitute of the means of subsistence, and looking up to claimant for the same.

The board grant the said claimant two hundred arpens of land, situate as aforesaid. (See No. 1, page 440.)

August 7, 1807.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment. Present: Hon. John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, esquires.

Joseph Chartran, claiming under the 2d section of the act of Congress of the 2d of March, 1805, 998 arpens of land, situate on the river Chorette, district of St. Charles, produces a survey of the same, dated 1st February, 1805.

John Baptiste Leauzon, being duly sworn, says that he knows the land claimed by the said Chartran, situated at the village Chorette; that the land was settled by claimant, in the year 1801, and that he has continued to inhabit and cultivate the same ever since; that the said claimant has generally had four orphan children with him, looking up to him for support, and whom he has treated with tenderness, and in every respect as a good father would treat his own; that in 1803 he had three of them with him. (Laid over for decision. See book No. 3, page 54.)

December 1, 1809.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Joseph Chartran, claiming 998 arpens of land. (See book No. 1, page 440; book No. 3, page 54.)

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See No. 4, page 218.)

March 27, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Joseph Chartran, by his legal representatives, claiming 998 arpens of land, on river Chorette. (See record-book B, page 219; Minutes, books No. 1, page 440; No. 3, page 54, and No. 4, page 218.)

The following testimony was taken in June, 1833, by A. G. Harrison, esq., then one of the commissioners:

John Mary Cardinal, being duly sworn, says that he knew said Chartran; that he made a settlement and improvement on a tract of land on the upper part of Chorette; that he had an orchard on the same tract; that said improvement, settlement, &c., were made under the Spanish government about five or six years before the change of government; that he was married at the time mentioned, and that he cultivated said place about a dozen years.

Charles Reille, being duly sworn, says that, having heard read the testimony of John Mary Cardinal, as above, that he testifies to the same facts in every particular as above, except that witness thinks said Chartran cultivated said land about fourteen years. (See book No. 7, page 109.)

June 8, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, James H. Relfe, commissioners.

Joseph Chartran, sr., claiming 998 arpens of land. (See book No. 7, page 109.)

The board are of opinion that this claim cannot be granted, the said Joseph Chartran, sr., having had two concessions confirmed. (See commissioners' certificates, Nos. 26 and 786. See book No. 7, page 170.)

JAMES H. RELFE,

28	Louis Lacroix.	701	Settlement right		John Stewart, D. S., 25th February, 1806. Received for record, by A. Soulard, S. G., 28th February, 1806; 701 arpens on Fourche à Courtois; 40 acres in Mine à Breton.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

June 27, 1806.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment Present: Hon. Clement B. Penrose and James L. Donaldson, esq.

Louis Grinya and Francis Tibault, assignees of Louis Lacroix, claiming 701 arpens of land, situate at about three fourths of a mile of the Mine à Breton, district aforesaid, (of St. Genevieve,) produces a survey of the same, dated the 25th and certified the 28th February, 1806, together with a survey of 40 arpens, situate at the Mine à Breton, dated and certified as aforesaid.

Amable Partenais, being duly sworn, says that the aforesaid Louis Lacroix had, in 1802, a house built, and seven or eight arpens of land under fence in the aforesaid tract of 40 arpens; that he actually inhabited the same; that, in 1803, he planted a crop, which, together with the said improvement, he sold to claimants, who moved on the same in the month of October, 1803, and did, prior to, and on the 20th day of December, 1803, actually inhabit the same, having gathered the said crop.

The board reject this claim, for want of a permission to settle. (See book No. 1, page 379.)

December 23, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Louis Grinya and Francis Tibault, assignees of Louis Lacroix, claiming 40 arpens of land. (See book No. 1, page 379.)

The board remark that no kind of testimony suggests or makes it appear that the land claimed includes a lead mine.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See No. 5, page 534.)

April 10, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Louis Lacroix, claiming 701 arpens of land. (See minute-book No. 1, page 379; No. 5, page 534.)

The following testimony was taken in Washington county, by James H. Relfe, commissioner:

Personally appeared John T. McNeal, who deposeth and saith that he was well acquainted with Louis Lacroix, who lived in a house and cultivated a garden in Mine à Breton, in the years 1802 and 1803, and, like most others who lived at the mines, cultivated corn at some distance from the village; his field was on Big river. At that early day is was necessary to the safety of the inhabitants to live in the villages, to secure them from the attacks of savages, and for the convenience of working the mines. This deponent never knew Lacroix to claim any other lands.

The following testimony was taken before L. F. Linn, esq., in June, 1833:

George Hacker, being sworn, says he is about 57 years old, and that he knew the said Nancy Ferguson well. She came to the district of New Madrid in the fall of 1802, and made an improvement in the winter of that year. The next season she planted corn and raised a crop on said land, where she also resided. She had two children at that time. She died in the year 1818, leaving her said two children, Elizabeth Northcut and John Johnson, as her sole heirs and legal representatives. She inhabited and culivated the said land in 1803, and had a permission to settle from Don Henry Peyroux, commandant of New Madrid.

Urban Asherbraunner, claiming 350 arpens 95 perches of land, situate on Castor creek, district of Cape Girardeau. Produces to the board a plat of survey certified to be received for record 27th February, 1806, by Antoine Soulard, surveyor general.

The following testimony in the above claim, taken by Frederick Bates, commissioner, at Cape Girardeau, May 30, 1808:

Daniel Asherbraunner, sworn, says that claimant improved a tract of land in the year 1800; that the survey of Philip Bollinger afterward took in the spring of the claimant, which induced him to abandon his improvement, and left the country in the following year; he again returned in the year 1805, and in that year improved the premises now claimed; settled in the following year, erected a cabin, a mill for the grinding of corn and wheat, and cultivated about three or four acres of land. Claimant has continued to inhabit, cultivate, and improve, till the present day; has a wife and one child. Laid over for decision. (See book No. 3, page 479.)

The following testimony was taken before J. H. Relfe, commissioner, in Cape Girardeau county:

William Bollinger, sr., states that he moved to and settled in the district of Cape Girardeau, in the year 1801; that he was well acquainted with one Urban Asherbraunner, then a resident of said district. This affiant knows that the said Asherbraunner inhabited and cultivated a piece of land on Whitewater, in said district, in the year 1802. He had a house built on said place in said year, some trees were ——— and deadened on said place, at the time mentioned, by said Asherbraunner, who lived in this district upward of eighteen years. This improvement was made by the said Urban Asherbraunner, at the time mentioned, for his own use.

Matthew Mullins, claiming 584 arpens 9 perches of land, near Bellevue settlement. (See record-book B, page 227; book No. 5, page 454.)

The following testimony was taken in Washington county, before F. R. Conway, esq.:

John Stewart, of lawful age, being first duly sworn, deposeth and saith that, in November, 1800, this affiant came to Mine à Breton, in the district of St. Genevieve, and was from that time for many years thereafter well acquainted with the above claimant, Matthew Mullins; that this affiant always understood from Moses Austin and others, that said Matthew was entitled to 400 arpens of land, on account of his having come to the Spanish country under Moses Austin, and in virtue of an understanding between Moses Austin and the Spanish authorities of the country, which will more at large appear by an examination of the records of the courts, in or about the year 1797, that being the year said Matthew came to the country, as this affiant has been informed. This affiant would further show, that Elias Bates was also a follower of Moses Austin, and obtained a gratuity of 400 arpens, upon the identical principles upon which Matthew claims his. In January or February, 1806, Matthew Mullins called upon affiant, who was legally authorized to make public surveys of land, to survey for him the above claim. This affiant having been instructed to survey for each land claimant 640 acres, accordingly surveyed for Matthew Mullins 640 acres of land in Bellevue, then district of St. Genevieve, now county of Washington, the plat whereof has been duly returned in order to its being recorded. Matthew Mullins showed the land which was surveyed, and pointed out to this affiant the beginning-corner of the same, which was accordingly fixed and established as such by this affiant, in virtue of his official duty as surveyor. And further, this deponent saith not.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

August 7, 1806.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment. Present: Hon. John B. C. Lucas and Clement B. Penrose, esq.

Daniel Richardson and John Caldwell, claiming, under the second section of the act of Congress, 460 arpens of land, situate on the Missouri, district of St. Louis, produces a survey of the same, dated the 22d, and certified 26th February, 1806.

James Stevens, being duly sworn, says that, in March, 1803, claimants did cut a few poles on said land, and were preparing to build and cultivate, but were prevented by the Indians.

The board reject this claim. (See No. 1, page 444.)

December 6, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Daniel Richardson, claiming 460 arpens of land, situate Point Labbadie, district of St. Louis, produces record of a plat of survey, dated 22d, and certified 26th February, 1806.

May 19, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Daniel Richardson, claiming 460 arpens of land, situate on the Missouri. (See record-book B, page 346; minutes, book No. 1, page 444; No. 5, page 486.)

James Cowen, being duly sworn, says that, in the month of November next, he will be 54 years of age; that, in February, 1803, he settled in the neighborhood of claimant, and it was then reported that the said Daniel Richardson had then begun to improve the land claimed in the spring of said year, 1803, but witness did not see it himself. The first time witness saw the said improvement, was in the fall of 1804, to the best of his recollection; there were, at that time, some rails split, house-logs cut, a small piece of land, about a quarter of an acre, enclosed with rails and poles, and a nursery of peach-trees planted in said enclosure. Witness further says that, in the month of April, 1803, as well as he can recollect, the Indians made an incursion on their settlement, killed a man, burnt houses, and drove the settlers away. Claimant was a single man, and boarded with one Stevens, whose land was adjoining that of said claimant. (See book No. 7, page 155.)

Class 2. No. 41.—Jean Baptiste Vallé and François Vallé, claiming 7,056 arpens.

To his Lordship, the Intendant of the province of Louisiana, in his mansion at New Orleans:

François Vallé, captain, civil and military commandant of the post of St. Genevieve of Illinois, and Jean Baptiste Vallé, his brother, captain of militia in the said post, supplicate very humbly, and have the honor to represent, that they have established and constructed, at a very great expense, two mills, one for grinding and the other for sawing, in the vicinity and between the posts of St. Genevieve and New Bourbon, which mills have been, till now, of the greatest utility to the numerous inhabitants of those two posts; that, by a necessary consequence of the increase of population in those two places and in their districts, in the extent of which considerable clearings and falling of timber have been made, their saw-mill is on the eve of being abandoned, to the great prejudice of the public and of the petitioners, unless they promptly find the means to provide the necessary timber to keep their mill employed; that, consequently, the petitioners have searched for a tract of land not yet conceded to any person, and belonging to the King's domain, upon which there should be pine-trees, it being the kind of timber more generally used for floors, and other carpenters' works, in the upper part of this colony; that they have found such a tract, situated at the place called the Pinery of River aux Vases, having about one league in length on the two ridges of hills running along the south branch of the said River aux Vases, and adjoining the north branch of the said river. The petitioners presume to flatter themselves of obtaining this concession of your goodness, my lord, because it is the only means to prevent the ruin of their said saw-mill, and of continuing to furnish to the daily wants of the public; and that, besides, it is notorious that the greatest part of the soil in this tract is not suitable for any kind of cultivation, and they will prove, by an act drawn in due form before the commandant of New Bourbon, in whose district the said land is situated, (according to the rules prescribed by the relation regulating to the demands of concessions,) that the land they solicit has never been granted to any one, and evidently belongs to the King's domain: therefore, the petitioners apply to you, and earnestly implore your goodness, justice, and authority, my lord, praying that you may be pleased to grant to them, their heirs and assigns, in full property, the concession of the above-mentioned tract of land, being a part of the Pinery of River aux Vases, extending about one league in length upon the two ridges of hills which run along the south branch of the said River aux Vases, and to join the north branch of said river, in order to use the pine and other timbers which are thereon for the works of their said saw-mill. In so doing, my lord, the petitioners shall never cease to pray for the preservation of your days.

Done in St. Genevieve, August 11, 1801. FRANCOIS VALLÉ,
J. BAPTISTE VALLÉ.

NEW BOURBON, February 27, 1802.

We, the undersigned, commandant of the post of New Bourbon, do certify and attest to his lordship, the intendant of the province, that the statement in the foregoing petition is very exact, sincere, and true, and that it is very essential and important for the good of the public that the petitioners' saw-mill should not be stopped for want of timber, because it is the only one which furnishes to the daily wants of the inhabitants of St. Genevieve, of New Bourbon, and even of St. Louis: therefore, we, the said commandant, convinced of the good intentions of his lordship, the intendent, toward all that may tend to the welfare of the inhabitants of this country, authorize, liable to his lordship's approbation, the said petitioners, provisionally, and exclusively of any other, to use the pine and other timbers which may be found on that part of his Catholic Majesty's domains, for which they solicit a concession by the foregoing petition, in order to keep their said saw-mill constantly employed.

PIERRE DELASSUS DE LUZIERE.

The power of attorney made to the clergyman, Don Santiago Maxwell, and the accompanying documents, have been presented. Be they all translated into the Spanish language by the interpreter, Don Pedro Derbigny, and, when it is done, let them be transmitted to the Fiscal.

June 27, 1833.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: L. F. Linn, F. R. Conway, commissioners.

Jean Baptiste Vallé and François Vallé, (the heirs and legal representatives of the latter,) claiming one league square of land, or 7,056 arpens, situate in the Pinery, on the waters of the River aux Vases, county of St. Genevieve. (See record-book C, page 475.) Produces a paper, purporting to be a petition from the said John B. Vallé and F. Vallé to the intendant of the province of Louisiana, dated 11th August, 1801, followed by a recommendation from Pierre Delassus de Luziere, commandant of New Bourbon, dated 27th February, 1802; and an order of Morales, the intendant, to have the papers translated into Spanish, and afterward presented to the Fiscal; also, a certificate signed by Thomas Eaddin, deputy surveyor, and others, certifying that the land demanded belongs to the King's domain.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of St. Genevieve:

Bartholomew St. Gemme, aged about 59 years, being duly sworn, as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he was well acquainted with both the said J. B. Vallé and F. Vallé; that they were, for many years before the year 1801, and in the year 1801 and 1802, citizens and residents in the province of Upper Louisiana, and that the said J. B. Vallé is still a citizen and resident in the country, and that the said François Vallé continued a citizen and resident thereof till his death, and that his heirs and legal representatives have continued citizens and residents of the country ever since, and such of them as are living are still so. This deponent further says that the said J. B. Vallé and F. Vallé both had large families of children, and many slaves, with other property; that they were active, enterprising, industrious, and useful citizens. And this deponent further says, that he knows the claimants had a saw-mill in operation, as stated in the petition, in the years 1801 and 1802, and that it was useful to the public. And this deponent further says that he was well acquainted with Pierre Delassus de Luziere; that he has seen him write, and that the said P. D de Luziere was the commandant of the post and district of New Bourbon, in the year 1802, and that the name and signature to the recommendation for said grant, dated the 27th of February, 1802, is the proper name and signature, and in the proper handwriting of the said Pierre Delassus de Luziere. And this deponent further says, that the names of Thomas Maddin, François Janis, Fremon Delauriere, L. Largeau, and Pierre Delassus de Luziere, to the certificate by them signed, dated the 27th of February, 1802, are the proper names and signatures, and in the proper handwriting of the certifiers; that he has seen them write.

F. H. MARTIN.

Class. 2. No. 42.—François Vallé, jr., claiming 7,056 arpens.

To his Lordship, the Intendant of the province of Louisiana, in his mansion at New Orleans:

François Valle, jr., officer of the militia of the post of St. Genevieve, and residing therein, humbly supplicates, and has the honor to represent to you that, having, until now, employed himself in working the lead mines, in which employment success is always uncertain, and wishing to have his activity and industry occupied in a more secure undertaking, that of a saw-mill has fixed his attention; and having visited several parts of the country, he has succeeded in finding a place fit and suitable for the erecting of a saw-mill, situated at the end of the pinery of River aux Vases, and consisting in one league square, extending along on the two ridges of hills of the north and south branches of said river, and adjoining, on the western side, the concession demanded by Messrs. François Vallé, sr., and Jean Baptiste Vallé, his brother. The petitioner having procured an excellent workman, well versed in the construction of mills, and having already provided himself with the machinery necessary to erect a saw-mill in the place above mentioned, which he binds himself to build and establish immediately; he flatters himself so much the more to obtain this concession of your goodness, my lord, that it is a notorious truth that the said saw-mill shall be of the greatest utility to the public, and particularly to the inhabitants of St. Genevieve and New Bourbon, and, even of St. Louis; there remaining at the present but only Messrs. F. Vallé, sr., and J. B. Vallé's (his brother's) saw-mill, which is situated at St. Genevieve, and is insufficient to provide to the daily and urgent wants of the said inhabitants; and it is also equally notorious that the above-mentioned tract of land of one league square, for which the petitioner solicits a concession, belongs to his Catholic Majesty's domain, and has not been granted to any person. Therefore, the said petitioner applies to you, my lord, praying that you will be pleased to grant to him, his heirs or assigns, in full property, a concession for the said league square of land, situate toward the end of the pinery of River aux Vases, such as it is here above designated, in order to erect thereon the said saw-mill, and to cut and use, for the work of the said mill, the pine-trees and other timbers which may be found on said tract, exclusively to any other persons. In doing which, the petitioner shall never cease to pray for the preservation of your precious life.

ST. GENEVIEVE, March 10, 1802.

FRANCOIS VALLÉ, JR.

NEW BOURBON, March 13, 1802.

We, the undersigned, captain commandant of the post of New Bonrbon, in whose district is situated the concession demanded by the petitioner, do certify to his lordship the intendant, that the statement in the foregoing petition is sincere, exact and true, and that the petitioner is worthy, under all points of view, to obtain the concession which he solicits.

PIERRE DELASSUS DE LUZIERE.

It has been presented, together with the power of attorney and accompanying documents. Let them be all translated by the interpreter, Don Pedro Derbigni, and when so translated, let them be laid before the Fiscal.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

December 1, 1807.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: Hon. John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

The same (Francis Vallé), claiming 7,056 arpens of land, situate in the district of New Bourbon, on the River aux Vases.

Produces a petition to Morales, the intendant general at New Orleans, for the above quantity of land, for the purpose of building a saw-mill, dated the 10th of March, 1802, together with a recommendation from Pierre D. de Luziere, commandant of the district of New Bourbon, to the said intendant general, stating that the claimant is worthy of the grant solicited; also an order by the said Morales to Peter Derbigny, translator, to have the petition and recommendation translated, and then to be transmitted to the Fiscal for examination.

Thomas Dodge, being duly sworn, says that Francis Vallé, jr., began to build a mill and a cabin on said land in July, and finished it in November, 1802, and it was inhabited from that time until this day for claimant; was cultivated in 1803, and ever since; that the mill worked ever since it was completed, when there was a sufficiency of water. Laid over for decision. (Minutes, No. 3, page 107.)

April 17, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

François Vallé, claiming 7,056 arpens of land. (See book No. 3, page 107.)

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. (Book No. 4, page 326.)

June 26, 1833.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: L. F. Linn, F. R. Conway, commissioners.

François Vallé, jr., son of François Vallé, sr., deceased, claiming one league square, or 7,056 arpens of land, situate in the pinery, on the waters of the River aux Vases, or Muddy creek, in the county of St. Genevieve. (See record-book C, page 394; minutes No. 3, page 107; No. 4, page 326.)

Produces a paper purporting to be a petition to the intendant of Louisiana, dated 10th March, 1802, following which, is a recommendation, dated 13th March, 1802, signed by Pierre Delassus Deluziere, commandant of New Bourbon. and an order signed by Morales, the intendant general, to have the documents translated and presented to the Fiscal. Also, a certificate, signed by Thomas Maddin, deputy surveyor, and others, before the commandant of New Bourbon, certifying that the land demanded belongs to the royal domain; also a receipt of Maxwell, dated 13th March, 1802, for the above papers.

State of Missouri, County of St. Genevieve:

John Baptiste Vallé, sr., aged about 72 years, being duly sworn, as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he has often seen François Vallé, jr., write; that he is well acquainted with him, and that the name and signature to the said petition, dated 10th March, 1802, is the name and signature and in the proper handwriting of the said François Vallé, jr. And this deponent further says that he was well acquainted with Pierre Delassus de Luziere; that he has often seen him write; that he was commandant of the post and district of New Bourbon, in the year 1802, and that the name, and signature, and handwriting to the recommendation for said grant, dated 13th day of March, 1802, is the proper name and signature, and in the proper handwriting of the said Pierre Delassus de Luziere. And this deponent further says that he is well acquainted with the tract of land claimed by the said François Vallé, jr., and that the said François Valle, jr., the claimant, did, in the course of the year 1802, build and erect a water saw-mill on the head-waters of River aux Vases, on the said tract of land, for a grant of which he had petitioned, and that the said saw-mill was in complete operation in the spring of the following year, and continued in such operation until about the year 1812 or '13, when it was swept away by an extraordinary flood. And this deponent further says that he knows that the said François Vallé, jr., his servants and workmen, resided at the said mill, on the said tract, at the time the said mill was in operation. And further, this deponent says that, at the date of the application, and long before, the said François Vallé, jr., was a citizen and resident in this province of Upper Louisiana, and has continued and still is a citizen and resident in the province and in this county; that he was born in the province.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, Lewis F. Linn, this 4th day of May, 1833.

J. B. VALLÉ,
L. F. LINN, Commissioner.

And also came John B. Vallé, jr., as a witness, aged about 49 years, who, being also sworn, as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he was in company with Mr. Thomas Maddin, deputy surveyor to Mr. Antoine Soulard, his Catholic Majesty's surveyor general, over the upper parts of the province of Louisiana, when he, the said Thomas Maddin, surveyed the said tract of land, of one league square, for the said François Vallé, jr., the claimant; that he, this deponent, was employed as one of the chain carriers on the making of the said survey; the exact time he does not now recollect.

Class 2. No. 45.—Bartholomew Richard, claiming 1,200 arpens.

To Don ZENON TRUDEAU, Lieutenant Colonel in the armies of his Majesty, and Commander-in-chief of Upper Louisiana:

Bartholomew Richard humbly supplicates and has the honor to represent to you, that he would wish to settle in this colony and employ himself in agriculture, as a subject of his Catholic Majesty, if you were pleased to give him a share of the favors which are heaped by this government upon the inhabitants who cultivate the soil. Encouraged by this hope, the petitioner prays you, sir, to be pleased to grant him, in the district of Cape Girardeau, a concession of 1,200 arpens of land in superficie; favor which he expects of your justice.

B. RICHARD.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, December 12, 1798.

We, commandant of the post of Cape Girardeau, do inform the commander-in chief of Upper Louisiana, that the petitioner, as well on account of his means as of his industry and the fair character he bears, deserves the concession which he solicits, as the same belongs to his Majesty's domain, and is not prejudicial to anybody; therefore, we are induced to recommend him particularly to the beneficence of the government.

Class 2. No. 46.—Isidore Lacroix, claiming 6,000 arpens.

To Mr. ZENON TRUDEAU, Lieutenant Colonel of the stationary regiment of Louisiana, Lieutenant Governor of the western part of Illinois:

Isidore Lacroix, merchant, of Michilimackinac, humbly supplicates and has the honor to represent that, desiring to fix his residence in your jurisdiction, therefore he has the honor to supplicate you to grant to him a lot which is convenient to him for the purpose of building a house, situated in his Majesty's domain, bounded on all sides by public roads, and containing 303 feet in depth by 240 in width; said lot is situated half-way up the hill, in the direction of the village of St. Charles of Missouri, opposite the lot of one Cadieu. He supplicates you also to grant to him a tract of arable land, of 10 arpens in width by 40 in depth, immediately following the lands already conceded, and near to Mr. François Duquette, at the Marais Croche. He supplicates you furthermore to grant him 6 arpens in front, from the Marais Croche to the Missouri. The petitioner presumes to hope, sir, that you will condescend to receive his demand, although he is a foreigner, with that generosity and goodness with which you have gained the esteem and affection of all those who have had the honor of applying to you. It is with that confidence that the petitioner sends you the present petition; he is persuaded that you will grant his demand. He has the honor to be, with the greatest respect, sir, your very humble and very obedient servant,

LITTLE HILLS, ST. CHARLES, January 17, 1797. ISIDORE LACROIX.

ST. LOUIS, January 23, 1797.

I have the honor to inform the lieutenant governor that the lot demanded belongs to the King's domain, and is not prejudicial to any one; that the vacant land between the line of Mr. Duquette and the Marais de Tems-clair also belongs to his Majesty's domain, and it is doubtful whether it contains 10 arpens; that the land demanded at the Marais Croche has been reserved for the use of the prairie lands in the district of St. Charles.

CHARLES TAYON.

ST. LOUIS, January 23, 1797.

The surveyor of this jurisdiction, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put Mr. Isidore Lacroix in possession of the vacant lot of 240 feet in width by 300 in depth, situated in the village of St. Charles, as also of the space of vacant lands between Mr. Duquette and the Marais de Tems-clair, (Clear-weather swamp,) giving to the said tract forty arpens in depth. As to the demand on the Marais Croche, (Crooked swamp,) it cannot be admitted.

ZENON TRUDEAU.

ST. LOUIS, August 9, 1833. Truly translated from book C, page 281.

JULIUS DE MUN.

Don ANTONIO SOULARD, Surveyor General of Upper Louisiana:

I do certify that, on the 5th of December, 1799, (by virtue of the annexed decree of the lieutenant governor, Don Zenon Trudeau, dated January 23, 1797,) I went on the land of Don Isidore Lacroix, in order to survey the same, according to his demand, being 4,400 arpens in superficie. This measurement was made in presence of Don Francisco Duquette, by virtue of the power given him by the proprietor to that effect, and of the adjoining neighbor, with the perch of Paris, of eighteen feet in length, according to the custom adopted in this province of Louisiana, and without regard to the variation of the needle, which is 7° 30′ E., as evinced by the foregoing figurative plat. This land is situated in the Grand prairie called Prairie du Marais Croche, and at about six miles N. E. from the post of St. Charles, bounded on its three sides, N. E., S. E., and N. W., by vacant lands of the royal domain, and on its front S. W. by lands cultivated by the inhabitants of the town of St. Charles, which are called lands of the Grand prairie of the Crooked swamp. In testimony whereof, I do give these presents, together with the foregoing figurative plat, on which are indicated the dimensions and the natural and artificial limits which surround said land.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, May 30, 1803. ANTONIO SOULARD, S. G.

Augmentation of Mr. Duquette, at the Marais Tems-clair, (Clear-weather swamp,) district of St. Charles. Last survey of Mr. Duquette, 1,880 arpens.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

August 15, 1806.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment. Present: Hon. John B. C. Lucas and Clement B. Penrose, esq.

The same, (Francis Duquette,) assignee of the same, (Isidore Lacroix,) claiming 6,000 arpens of land, situate district of St. Charles, and adjoining the town, produces a petition for a tract contained within certain natural boundaries therein described; a certificate from Charles Tayon, the then commandant of St. Charles, stating his belief that the land petitioned for will not exceed ten arpens in width; a warrant of survey from Zenon Trudeau, dated January 23, 1797, for such a quantity as may be found in breadth between a tract, the property of said claimant and the Marais Tems-clair, by a depth of forty arpens, together with a survey of 4,400 arpens, taken December 5, 1799, and certified May 30, 1803; and a deed of transfer of the same, dated September 6, 1800.

Françoise Fabien, being duly sworn, says that the said tract of land was cultivated above nine years ago.

The board reject this claim, and remark that, from the papers on record, it appears that 400 arpens were intended to be granted by the aforesaid concession. (See book No. 1, page 464.)

December 5, 1809.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas and Clement B. Penrose, commissioners.

Francis Duquette, assignee of Isidore Lacroix, claiming 6,000 arpens of land. (See book No. 1, page 464.)

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. (See book No. 4, page, 225.)

July 8, 1833.—L. F. Linn, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Isidore Lacroix's representatives, claiming 6,000 arpens of land, situated at Marais Tems-clair, county of St. Charles. (See book C, page 281; book D, page 178, two surveys; minutes, book No. 1, page 464; No. 4, page 225. See No. 6, page 224.)

June 15, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

Isidore Lacroix, claiming 6,000 arpens of land. (See book No. 6, page 224.)

The board are of opinion that this claim ought not to be confirmed, claimant having had the lot in St. Charles confirmed, as also four hundred arpens of land, (see Bates's decisions, pages 59 and 53,) and no more being granted by the concession. (See book No. 7, page 184.)

November 27, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Henry Cook, heir of McCormack, claiming 1,000 arpens of land, situate on Mill creek, district of St. Louis, produces a notice to the recorder.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 5, page 457.)

March 5, 1834.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

John McCormack, by his heir at law, Henry Cook, claiming 1,000 arpens of land, situate on Mill creek, district of St. Louis, under a settlement right. (See record-book D, page 219; minute-book No. 5, page 457.)

James McRoberts, being duly sworn, says that he is upward of seventy years of age, and knows the tract claimed; that he came to this country in the year 1786, and resided on the east side of the Mississippi; that in the year 1789 he crossed to this, the west side of the Mississippi, for the first time, and passed by and saw this improvement; it then had the appearance of an old improvement; the stumps then looked old and were much decayed; the undergrowth had sprung up; the fences and buildings had been destroyed by fire; the place had not been cultivated for several years, as he understood, McCormack having died some years before; his widow had married again and moved off the place. Witness was informed that the place had been cultivated for some years before the death of McCormack. Witness passed frequently by this place in 1789, '90, and '91, and thinks it was the oldest improvement in that part of the country; he understood that there had been a mill built near this improvement by a man of the name of Thomas Tyler, who built it for the purpose of grinding for a few families; McCormack had charge of the mill; it was, however, soon washed away and never rebuilt. (See book No. 6, page 504.)

June 15, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway and J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

John McCormack, claiming 1,000 arpens of land. (See book No. 6, page 504.)

The board are of opinion that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 7, page 186.)

No.	Name of original claimant.	Arpens.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
48	James Bevins.	200	Settlement right,

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

May 8, 1809.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

James Bevins, claiming 200 arpens of land, situate on Whitewater, district of Cape Girardeau, produces to the board, as a special permission to settle, list B, on which claimant is No. 31.

The following testimony in the foregoing case, taken, as aforesaid, at Cape Girardeau, June 3, 1808, by Frederick Bates, commissioner:

Isaac Miller, duly sworn, says that this land was first settled in 1805, a cabin then built, and four or five acres enclosed and cultivated; constantly inhabited to this time; about 14 acres now in cultivation; no family. Laid over for decision. (See No. 4, page 41.)

February 21, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

James Bevins, claiming 200 arpens of land. (See book No. 4, page 41.)

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 4, page 283.)

January 10, 1834.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

James Bevins, by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land, situate on Whitewater, county of Cape Girardeau. (See minutes, book No. 4, pages 41 and 283.)

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Cape Girardeau:

Isaac Miller states that he moved to and settled in the district of Cape Girardeau, Upper Louisiana, now State of Missouri, in the year 1803; that he was well acquainted with one James Bevins, who also moved to and settled in said district, in said year 1803. This affiant and the said Bevins, in the same year they arrived in the country, called on Lorimier, the Spanish commandant at Cape Girardeau, for land, and got permission to settle. This affiant knows that the said James worked and made improvement on main Whitewater, in said district, in the winter of 1803, and raised corn thereon the next year, where he lived. The said James died in the winter of 1804; the said place is now owned by the heirs of one John Miller.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

May 5, 1806.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment. Present: Hon. Clement B. Penrose, and James L. Donaldson, esq.

David Reese, claiming, under the 2d section of the act, 240 arpens of land, situate on a fork of the river St. Francis, district aforesaid, produces a certificate of survey, dated 19th (20th) February, 1806.

Robert A. Logan, being duly sworn, says that claimant settled this tract of land, by his agent, Charles Logan, in 1803; that he moved on the same in the fall of 1805, and has actually inhabited and cultivated the same to this day; was of the age of twenty-one years and upward on the 20th of December, 1803, and claims no other land in his own name in the territory.

The board reject this claim. (See book No. 1, page 278.)

August 15, 1811.—Board met. Present: Clement B. Penrose and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

David Reese, claiming 240 arpens of land. (See book No. 1, page 278.)

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 5, page 309.)

David Reese, by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land, situate on the waters of the St. Francis. (See book No. 1, page 278; No. 5, page 309; record-book B, page 469.)

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Cape Girardeau:

Francis Clark, being duly sworn, says that he is well acquainted with David Reese; first became acquainted with the said Reese early in the year 1804, in the district of Cape Girardeau, Upper Louisiana. The said Reese was then living on the St. Francis river, in said district; his improvement was small; there were fruit-trees then growing on the said place; the trees were of tolerable size, and looked as if they had been set out some time before; the said place is still claimed by the said Reese, and there is a good house on it, and some ten or fifteen acres cleared. The said place is situated on the St. Francis river, about twelve miles west of north of Greenville, Wayne county, Missouri. There is no other old settler except himself, the deponent, and Mr. Pavrick, who is too old and infirm to come to Jackson, now living in the section of country where the above land is situated.

51	Benjamin Pettit, jr.	640	Settlement right.		On the waters of St. Francis river, Madison county.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

November 28, 1812.—Benjamin Pettit, jr.'s, representatives, claiming 640 acres of land, on St. Francis, district of Cape Girardeau.

Benjamin Pettit, sr., duly sworn, says that claimant settled this tract in 1803, and planted peach-trees. In this year claimant was taken sick and removed to house of witness, his father, and never returned, having died soon after; claimant had a wife and five children in 1803. (See recorder's minutes, page 17.)

December 26, 1833.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Benjamin Pettit, jr., by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land, situate on the waters of St. Francis, county of Madison. (See record-book F, page 13; recorder's minutes, page 17; Bates's decisions, page 28.)

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Madison:

John Clements, aged about fifty-three years, being duly sworn, as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he was well acquainted with the original claimant, Benjamin Pettit, jr., who was the son of Benjamin Pettit, sr., they both bearing the same name; that Benjamin Pettit, jr., had a wife and family; that he came to this country, then the province of Upper Louisiana, in the year 1803. Witness also knows the land claimed; he was with the claimant when he drove his wagon with his family on the land in the fall of 1803, and settled on the same; that claimant immediately built a cabin or house on the same, and resided thereon with his family till he became sick and afflicted, when he went near to his father's, where he died.

June 18, 1833.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

James Rogers, jr., claiming 750 arpens of land, on Big river. (See record-book E, page 356; Bates's decisions, page 94.)

Jacob Collins, duly sworn, says that he knows the land claimed, it being the same tract confirmed to Hugh McCullick, adjoining the one claimed by deponent; that he is well acquainted with claimant; that said claimant improved and cultivated the above mentioned tract, and raised corn thereon in 1802, to the best of his knowledge; that the said James Rogers stayed with him, the deponent, and did not build a house, he being a single man; that claimant had a clever little field, and raised sound corn. (See minutes No. 6, page 177.)

July 5, 1834.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

In the case of James Rogers, jr., claiming 758 arpens of land. (See No. 6, page 177.)

Samuel Harrington, duly sworn, says that he is about 48 years of age; that he knew said James Rogers, jr., in the month of May, in the year 1801 or 1802, witness is not positive; that said Rogers came to this country at the time above mentioned, in company with five or six families, which, after resting a few weeks, scattered about Big river, and made settlements; that said Rogers lived in the same house with Jacob Collins, and worked his improvement, which was at a distance. Witness did not see said improvement at the time, saw it only one year after said improvement was made; that he then saw house, logs, trees deadened, and land ploughed, but does not recollect of having seen corn growing on the same, but he was told that claimant had raised corn there the year before; there was then three quarters of an acre, or may be an acre, cleared. Witness does not believe that the said tract was ever cultivated since. Witness further says that said improvement lies about half way between the improvement of said Jacob Collins and that of McCullick, being about 600 yards from each; that at the time witness saw said improvement, McCullick had not yet come to this country, that said McCullick arrived in the country in the year 1803. Further says that said Rogers was an active, industrious, hard-working man, who has ever since lived in the country, but witness never knew of his living on the place; that claimant had no family, being a single man. Reuben Middleton, claiming 640 acres of land, situated in Bois-brulé bottom, district of St. Genevieve. (See record book E, page 212; minute book No. 3, page 293, and No. 4, page 391.)

Personally appeared before me, L. F. Linn, one of the commissioners appointed, &c., Mr. Thomas Allen, aged about 57 years, who, after being duly sworn, states that he was acquainted with Reuben Middleton; that said Middleton emigrated to the then province of Upper Louisiana and district of St. Genevieve, in the year 1800 or 1801, and settled in Bois-brulé bottom, near a creek of the same name. Deponent states that Middleton built a house in which he lived; he opened some land and cultivated it in potatoes, &c., perhaps two or three acres.

Class 2. No. 56.—Samuel Campbell, claiming 640 acres.

No.	Name of original claimant.	Acres.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
56	Samuel Campbell.	640	Settlement right.		On the waters of St. Francis river.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

November 30, 1812.—Samuel Campbell, claiming 800 arpens of land, on the waters of St. Francis, district of St. Genevieve.

Ezekiel Able, duly sworn, says that, in 1803, saw claimant's family inhabiting this tract, and that in 1804 they still lived on the land and raised a crop. A wife and two children in 1803. (See recorder's minutes, page 20.)

August 2, 1813.—Samuel Campbell, claiming 800 arpens of land. (See minutes, 30th November last.)

David Terrell, duly sworn, says that claimant inhabited and cultivated this tract in 1803 and 1804, and till this time. (See recorder's minutes, page 50.)

December 24, 1813.—Samuel Campbell. (See minutes, pages 20 and 50.) Claimant personally appears and disavows any intention of trespassing or claiming within the lines of James Hendley, as surveyed under concession of Z. Trudeau, dated 18th May, 1798, the plat recorded in book A, page 514; and engages that he will not, at any future time, demand or accept any part of the lands within the lines of said James Hendley, and relinquishes all claim which he may have heretofore had, or pretended to have, within said lines. (See recorder's minutes, page 104.)

December 25, 1813.—Samuel Campbell. (Pages 20, 50, and 104.) Joshua Edwards duly sworn, says that Samuel Campbell lived, on 20th December, 1803, on the plantation of Benjamin Pettit, and remained there until next January following. Witness understood, both from Pettit and claimant, Campbell, that he, Campbell, was the tenant of Pettit, having rented said plantation. Previously to 20th December, 1803, witness never knew claimant to have lived one and a half or two miles below Captain Callaway's. Witness went to that settlement in 1801, and never, until about eight months ago, heard of Campbell having a claim there.

Adam Johnson, duly sworn, says that Campbell lived on Matthew's place in the summer of 1803.

Thompson Crawford, duly sworn, says that Samuel Campbell lived at Pettit's place in 1803, in winter. Witness never before this time heard of Samuel Campbell's having a claim for land about one or two miles below Captain Callaway's. Witness went to that settlement in May, 1803; believes that Campbell did not, at any time that year, inhabit that place.

William Dillon, duly sworn, says that claimant, Campbell, did not inhabit the tract claimed on 20th December, 1803. When claimant left Pettit's place, witness believes, and it was the neighborhood belief, that he went to some of the settlements of the then district of Cape Girardeau; this was some time in the year 1804. (See recorder's minutes, page 110.)

December 26, 1833.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Samuel Campbell, claiming 640 acres of land, situate on the waters of St. Francis river, county of Madison. (See record-book F, page 89; recorder's minutes, pages 20, 50, 104, and 110.)

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Madison:

John Clements, aged about 53 years, being duly sworn as the law directs, deposeth and says that he is well acquainted with Samuel Campbell, the original claimant; that he first saw him in this country, then the province of Upper Louisiana, in the spring of the year 1803. Witness also knows the land claimed, and also knows that the claimant settled on the land in the year 1803; built a house on the same, and had his family there residing; witness also knows that there was several acres of land fenced in and cleared, which were actually cultivated in the years 1803 and 1804, in corn and other things; and witness also knows that the said tract of land has been actually inhabited and cultivated ever since.

Also, came Thompson Crawford, a witness, aged about 47 years, who being duly sworn, as the law directs, deposeth and saith that he is well acquainted with Samuel Campbell, the original claimant; that he was residing in this country, the province of Upper Louisiana, in the year 1803. Witness also knows the land claimed, and that the claimant settled on the same in the latter part of the spring, or early in the summer, of 1803. Claimant built a house on the same and moved into the same; claimant built a blacksmith shop also on the land, about the same time, and did work thereon for the people around him; claimant had a family, a wife, and one child. Claimant fenced in and cleared some three or four acres of land, which was actually cultivated in the years 1803 and 1804, in corn and other things necessary, and the said tract of land has been continually, from that time, inhabited and cultivated ever since.

John Stuart, duly sworn, says that in 1802 claimant had a house and garden on the tract claimed, and that said claimant has ever since resided in this country.

The following testimony was taken before James H. Relfe, esq., on the 21st of last June:

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of Washington:

Personally appeared before James H. Relfe, one of the commissioners for the adjustment of private land claims in Missouri, John T. McNeal, who deposeth and saith that Amable Patnotte, a laboring man, lived in a cabin in Mine à Breton, and cultivated a garden and other improvements in the year 1800, and continued to reside there for some years after, and that he never knew him to claim any other lands.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

St. Louis, December 15, 1813.—James Morrison, assignee of William McHugh, sr., claiming 640 acres, as legal representatives of William McHugh, jr., at Sulphur spring or lick, near Bryan's creek, county of St. Charles.

Frederick Dickson, duly sworn, says that, in 1803, witness saw a cabin near the Sulphur spring, and also a small field in which vegetables, water-melons, &c. were cultivated. Witness went with claimant, McHugh, jr. on this tract in the fall of 1803, and dug potatoes, which witness has no doubt had been planted and cultivated by said William McHugh, jr. The tract and improvement went under his name and was considered as his property. McHugh, jr. was killed by the Indians in 1804. Perhaps the cabin was never completed. Class 2. No. 61.—J. St. G. Beauvais, claiming 60 feet in circumference, &c.

To Mr. HENRY PEROUSE DE LACOUDRENIERE, Captain of Infantry, Civil and Military Commandant of the post of St. Genevieve:

SIR: The undersigned has the honor of representing to you that, desiring to cross to this side to settle himself, and wishing to have his hands to work at Mine à Breton, if you were pleased to grant him a concession of sixty feet in circumference, around each hole where he may find mineral, the undersigned shall pray for your prosperity and conservation.

J. ST. G. BEAUVAIS.

ST. GENEVIEVE, November 19, 1788.

Be the present forwarded to Don Manuel Perez, captain of the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and lieutenant governor of this upper part, in order that he may be pleased to determine on the subject.

Given at St. Genevieve, 19th November, 1788.

PEROUSE DE LACOUDRENIERE.

Don MANUEL PEREZ, Captain of the regiment of Infantry of Louisiana, Lieutenant Governor and Commandant of this western part and district of Illinois:

Having seen the statement in the foregoing memorial, presented by Juan Bautista Senchem, bearing date the nineteenth of the present month and year, in which he solicits to come over to this Spanish side, to establish himself under the laws of his Catholic Majesty, in which consideration I have granted, and do grant, to him, in full property for him, his heirs, or others that may represent his right, the sixty feet in circumference, which he solicits at Mine à Breton, distant twenty or twenty-one leagues from St. Genevieve, on the same terms as he solicits, in order that he may work in said place; being well understood that he is to verify the establishment of his family on this (Spanish) part. Said lands remaining from this date subject to the public charges and others that his Majesty may be pleased to impose.

Given in St. Louis of Illinois, 27th September, 1788. MANUEL PEREZ.

61	St. G. Bauvais.	60 feet around each hole, &c.	Concession, 27th September, 1788.	M. Perez.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

June 20, 1806.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment. Present: Clement B. Penrose and James L. Donaldson, esquires.

The same, (St. Gemme Beauvais,) claiming some mine lands, situated Mine à Breton, district of St. Genevieve, produces a concession from Manuel Perez, granting claimant sixty feet in circumference around each hole wherein he might find ore; said concession dated November 22, 1788.

Baptist Vallé, being duly sworn, says that the claimant worked the said mines for about eight or ten years; that, having purchased a mine tract, he went to work the same; that everybody was at liberty of working the mine, and therefore entitled to sixty feet round the hole; so worked and continued to until an order was issued by government reducing the same to twelve feet square round the same.

The board reject this claim, and remark that the said concession is not duly registered. (See remark of the board at the bottom of this page, to wit:)

In the claim of the same, at the Mine à Breton, in this page, the board are of opinion that this concession vested in the claimant an incorporeal right to dig the mineral, not to affect the right of domain in the soil, which still remained in the Spanish government. (See book No. 1, page 317.)

December 21, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

St. James Beauvais, claiming sixty feet in circumference around every hole where he may find mineral. (See book No. 1, page 316.)

It is the opinion of the board, (majority of,) that this claim ought not to be confirmed. Frederick Bates, commissioner, forbears giving an opinion. (See book No. 5, page 532.)

December 13, 1832.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Abalom Link, by his legal representative, William Ramsey, claiming 510 arpens of land, situated on Whiteoak run, district of St. Louis. (See minutes No. 5, page 444; book B, page 269.)

Produces a plat of survey by James Mackay, dated November 21, 1805, recorded by Soulard, January 26, 1806.

William Campbell, duly sworn, says that, in the spring of 1804, he saw on said place a small piece of ground enclosed, and the foundation of a cabin, as also, the name of Link carved on a tree; that said place was then considered as Absalom Link's land, under a settlement right. (See book No. 6, page 172.)

June 13, 1833.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

In the case of Absalom Link, claiming 510 arpens of land. (See page 172 of this book.)

Sally Williams, duly sworn, says that she is in her 76th year; that she knows the claimant, Absalom Link; that in the year 1801 or 1802 he settled and improved a place adjoining that of her husband's, Joseph Williams; that one Robert Young, who had a grant prior to Link's improving said land, had the said Link's improvements included in his survey. (See book No. 6, page 175.)

July 12, 1833.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: L. F. Linn and F. R. Conway, commissioners.

In the case of Absalom Link, claiming 510 arpens. (See pages 172 and 175 of this book.)

Lewis Musick, duly sworn, says that, at the latter end of 1803, or beginning or 1804, he was requested by the claimant to go with him on a piece of land which claimant wanted to improve; they went together, and said claimant laid the foundation of a cabin, deadened some trees, and cut his name on the bark of a tree; deponent further says, he heard that claimant had made an improvement, which had been taken away from him by a survey subsequently made, which induced claimant to make this new improvement. (See book No. 6, page 232.)

June 17, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway and J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

Absalom Link, claiming 510 arpens of land. (See book No. —, pages 172, 175, and 232.)

The board are of opinion that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 7, page 191.)

63	Peter Burell.	2,000	Settlement right.		South side of Marameck.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

St. Louis, October 12, 1812.—Peter Burell, claiming 2,000 arpens of land on south side of Marameck.

John Helderbrand, duly sworn, says that about 33 or 34 years ago, Burell was inhabiting and cultivating this tract of land. Witness purchased corn of said Burell; he had a considerably large field in cultivation; also a young orchard, beginning to bear fruit. This claimant abandoned this tract, on account of Indian disturbances, soon after. Burell had a wife and child.

John Cummings, sworn, 17th November, says Burell lived on and cultivated about five arpens on this tract, in 1781, and that he continued to inhabit and cultivate said tract for the three following years. Witness believes that claimant was inhabiting and cultivating before 1781, but has no personal knowledge of the fact. In the year 1784, witness went to Natchez, at which time said Burell was inhabiting and cultivating said tract. (See Bates's minutes, page 7. (At the margin: "Not granted.")

June 18, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway and J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

Philip Robert, claiming 1,050 arpens of land, situate in the district of St. Louis, produces notice to the recorder.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See minute-book No. 5, page 492.)

ST. LOUIS, November 30, 1812.—William Russell, assignee of Philip Robert, claiming 1,050 arpens of land, on the waters of Grand Glaize, district of St. Louis, produces notice; also, deed dated 23d August, 1809.

Frederick Connor, duly sworn, says that Robert lived on this tract in 1801, 1802, and 1803, during which time witness believes that he cultivated the same. In 1803 witness knows that claimant had several children, perhaps three.

Benjamin Johnson, duly sworn, says that Robert had a wife and four children in 1803. (See Bates's minutes, page 24.) (At the margin is the following: "Not granted.")

ST. LOUIS, December 29, 1813.—William Russell, assignee John Donnohue, assignee John Daniel, claiming 800 arpens of land on the waters of the Saline creek, county of St. Genevieve. Produces unauthenticated transfers.

James McLean, duly sworn, says that he saw this tract 24th December, 1803, and observed that claimant Daniel had cut a considerable quantity of timber and mauled some rails, and collected logs for a cabin. He had also cleared, fenced, and probably, from appearances, had cultivated a small spot as a garden. At that time no cabin; no person inhabiting. Daniel told the witness that it was his improvement. Witness saw a camp on the tract which had probably been inhabited. (See Bates's minutes, page 128.) (On the margin: "Not granted.")

Class 2. No. 67.—John Weldon, claiming 500 arpens.

To Don Charles Dehault Delassus, Lieutenant Colonel, attached to the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana:

John Weldon, a Roman Catholic, has the honor to represent that he crossed over to this side (of the Mississippi) more than a year ago, and established himself on the north side of the Missouri, with the permission of your predecessor, Don Zenon Trudeau; therefore he has the honor to supplicate you to have the goodness to grant him, at the same place which he cultivates, the quantity of land corresponding to the number of his family, which is composed of himself, his wife, and six children. The petitioner having all the means necessary to improve a farm, and having no other views but to live as a peaceable and submissive cultivator of the soil, hopes to deserve the favor he claims of your justice.

St. Andre, September 5, 1799.

Be it forwarded to the lieutenant governor, informing him at the same time that the above statement is true, and that the petitioner is worthy of the protection of the government.

St. Andre, September 5, 1799.

SANTYAGO MACKAY.

St. Louis of Illinois, September 20, 1799.

In consequence of the information given by the commandant of St. Andre, Captain Don Santyago Mackay, the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of 500 arpens of land in superficie, in the place where he asks the same; the said quantity corresponding to the number of his family, according to the regulation of the governor of this province; and this being executed, he shall make out a plat, delivering the same to said party, together with his certificate, in order to serve him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general of these provinces, to whom alone belongs, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

Don Antonio Soulard, Surveyor General of the settlements of Upper Louisiana:

I certify that a tract of land of 500 arpens in superficie was measured, the lines run and bounded, for and in presence of John Weldon; it was measured with the perch of the city of Paris, of eighteen French feet in length, lineal measure of the said city, according to the custom adopted in this province. This land is situated on the river Missouri, above Bonhomme island, at twenty-four miles from St. Louis, (lindando por A. N. O. C. NE. y O. So.) bounded (on three sides) by vacant lands of the royal domain, and on the S. S. E. by the river Missouri. The said survey and measurement was made without regard to the variation of the needle, which is 7° 30′ E., as appears by the foregoing figurative plat, on which are noted the dimensions, courses of the lines, other boundaries, &c. Said survey was executed by virtue of the decree of the lieutenant governor and sub-delegate of the royal Fiscal, Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, under date of December 20, 1799, here annexed. In testimony whereof, I do give these presents, together with the preceding figurative plat, drawn conformably to the survey made by the deputy surveyor, Don Santyago Mackay, on the 17th of November, 1803, who signed on the minutes, to which I certify.

St. Louis of Illinois, December 27, 1803.

ANTONIO SOULARD, Surveyor General.

Recorder's Office, St. Louis, July 21, 1835.

I certify the above and foregoing to be truly translated from record-book D, pages 108 and 109 of record in this office.

John Weldon, claiming 500 arpens.

No.	Name of original claimant.	Arpens.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
67	John Weldon.	500	Concession, 20th September, 1799.	C. Dehault Delassus.	James Mackay, 17th November, 1803. Certified by Soulard, 27th Dec., 1803.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

April 2, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

John Weldon, claiming 500 arpens of land, situate district of St. Charles, produces to the board a notice of claim.

John Weldon, the claimant, personally appears before the board, and renounces all claim to certain land as surveyed in his name on the river Missouri; survey dated 17th November, 1803, certified 27th December, 1803, and recorded in book D, page 108, of the recorder's office.

Claimant produces also, as a permission to settle, a concession from Charles Dehault Delassus, lieutenant governor, to him, for 500 arpens, dated 20th December, (September,) 1799, recorded in book D, page 108, of the recorder's office.

The following testimony in the foregoing claim, transcribed from the rough minutes, as perpetuated by the board, on Friday, the 30th of March last:

John McConnell, sworn, says that the claimant inhabited a tract of land situate on the waters of the Dardenne, about one or two miles from the habitation of Arund Rutgers, in the winter of 1802. In the spring following cultivated, and has continued to inhabit and cultivate said land ever since. Claimant had a wife and four children in 1802 and 1803.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. But the board do declare that they would have voted for the granting of 500 arpens, had this claim not have been embraced in the tract claimed by Arund Rutgers, under the first section of the act of 1805. (See commissioners' minutes, book No. 4, page 309.)

June 24, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

John Weldon, by his legal representatives, claiming 500 arpens of land, district of St. Charles. (See record-book D, page 108; book No. 4, page 309. See book No. 7, page —.)

68	Jonathan Vineyard.	500	Settlement right.		James Mackay, D.S., 27th December, 1805. Certified to be recorded on the 26th Jan., 1806, by A. Soulard, S. G. On Dubois creek, Franklin county.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

August 19, 1806.—Agreeably to adjournment, Hon. John B. C. Lucas attended the board and received testimony.

Jonathan Vineyard, claiming as aforesaid (under the second section of the act of Congress) 500 arpens of land, situate as aforesaid, produces a survey of the same, taken the 27th December, 1805, and certified the 27th (26th) January, 1806.

James Cowan, being duly sworn, says that claimant settled the said tract of land in September, 1804, and planted peach-stones; that he saw the same growing the spring following; that he came from Georgia, and did not arrive in the country until that time; and further, that he has actually inhabited and cultivated the same to this day. Had, when he arrived, a wife and two children.

The board reject this claim. (See book No. 1, page 475.)

September 14, 1810.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Jonathan Vineyard, claiming 500 arpens of land. (See book No. 1, page 475.) It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 4, page 499.)

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

July 7, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

James Swift, by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres of land in the district of St. Charles. (See record-book D, page 333.)

Arthur Burns, duly sworn, says that he is about 52 years of age; that he came to this country while under the government of Zenon Trudeau; that before the change of government the said James Swift went on a piece of land which had been improved by one Boon; that said Swift built thereon a cabin, and cleared a small piece of land for the purpose of sowing turnips, but witness does not know whether the turnips were sowed. Witness further says that said Swift being out of provisions, and the mosquitoes being very troublesome, he left said place about three weeks after he had first come there, and witness never knew that he returned to said place. (See book No. 7, page 212.)

August 19, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, and F. H. Martin, commissioners.

James Swift, claiming 640 acres of land. (See book No. 7, page 212.)

The board are unanimously of opinion that this claim ought not to be granted. (See book No. 7, page 223.)

Class 2. No. 75.—Diego Maxwell, as Vicar General of Louisiana, claiming 112,896 arpens.

To Don CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS, Lieutenant Colonel in the royal armies and Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana:

Don Diego Maxwell, curate of St. Genevieve and vicar general of Illinois, with all the respect due to you, represents that the most excellent Duke De Alcudia, minister of state and universal despacho of the Indies, having manifested his desire that some Catholics from Ireland should come to settle themselves in this colony of Louisiana, knowing them to be faithful subjects, and affectionate to the Spanish government on account of their religion, as appears by the annexed letter of Don Thomas O'Ryan, chaplain of honor of his Majesty and confessor of the Queen, our lady, written to the petitioner in the English language, by order of his excellency, the above-named minister, the government engaging to have a church built for them in their settlement, and leaving to the judgment of the petitioner to solicit of the government the quantity of land of the royal domain, which he will think necessary for himself and the said settlers. There being some vacant lands belonging to the domain, upon which no settlement has been made to this day, situated between Black river and the Currents, which are branches of White river, at the distance of from thirty to thirty-five leagues from this town, therefore the petitioner humbly supplicates that you will condescend to take the necessary measures in order to enable him to obtain from the government, in full property, the concession of four leagues square, making the quantity of 112,896 arpens of land in superficie, in the said place, and for afore-mentioned purpose; the petitioner having no other object but the advantage to his Majesty's service, and the salvation of the souls which shall be confided to his care. He at the same time informs you that several of the above-mentioned Irish Catholics, induced by him, have already arrived from Ireland, and that many others are coming, and now on their way, with a part of his own family, not without great expenses and costs to your petitioner, for which he hopes to be remunerated by the government, and if not, by God and the gratitude of those poor people, for having rescued them from the British tyranny and persecution to which they were exposed on account of their religion. This favor, solicited by the petitioner, he hopes to obtain from the generosity of the government which you represent in this part of the colony, as being conformable to the intentions of his Majesty, communicated by his minister. Meanwhile, he will pray God to preserve your important life many years.

ST. GENEVIEVE, October 15, 1799. DIEGO MAXWELL.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, November 3, 1799.

(Visto de Illinois de esta peticion.) Supposed to be instead of, having examined the statement in the above petition, supported by the letter cited in the same, which has been presented to me by the petitioner; and whereas its contents are in accordance with the disposition of the governor general of these provinces, Don Manuel Gayoso de Lemos, (who permits the introduction of emigrants in this territory only to those who are really Catholics, A. and R.,) as appears by his order, dated New-Orleans, 3d of September, 1797; giving to the said letter all the consideration it deserves, inasmuch as its contents are derived from a wise disposition of his excellency, the minister of state, which will be, without doubt, of considerable advantage in increasing the population so necessary in these remote parts of his Majesty's domains, with a class of laborious inhabitants, to the satisfaction of the government. Therefore, according to the demand, I do grant to the petitioner four leagues square, or the quantity of 112,896 arpens of land in superficie, in the place he solicits, and for the object here above mentioned; and the surveyor general of this Upper Louisiana, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put him in possession of said quantity in the place mentioned, when requested by the (party) interested; which being executed, he shall make out a figurative plat of his (survey,) delivering the same to the party, with (his certificate,) in order to serve him to solicit the title in form from the intendant general of these provinces, to whom alone corresponds, by royal order, the distributing and granting of all classes of lands belonging to the royal domains.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

I, the undersigned, civil commandant of the post and district of New Bourbon, certify that the said title of concession is recorded, and the copy, compared with the original, is deposited in the archives of this post, and numbered 49.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

June 28, 1806.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment. Present: Hon. Clement B. Penrose and James L. Donaldson, commissioners.

James Maxwell, vicar general of the province of Louisiana, claiming four leagues square, situate at the fork of Black river, district of St. Genevieve, produces a concession from Charles D. Delassus, dated November 3d, 1799, and a survey of 112,896 arpens, dated and certified the 9th February, 1806.

He also produces an affidavit of Pierre Delassus de Luziere, stating that he was present, in the beginning of 1800, at a conversation which took place between the aforesaid claimant and Charles D. Delassus, then lieutenant governor, when the latter inquired of said claimant where he intended to settle his large concession; does not recollect the answer; that a few days after, being at claimant's house, he saw, held, and read the aforesaid concession; a commission of vicar general of the province over the English and American settlers, signed Euge. de Llaguno, dated St. Lorenzo, 22d November, 1794;

A letter from the Bishop of Orleans, dated May 1st, 1799, requesting his attention, as vicar general, to the whole of the clergy of the province, and informing him that he had recommended him to the King;

A letter of instructions, founded upon a Spanish supreme consular state, at Madrid, directed to claimant through Lopez Armesto, secretary of the province, wherein the policy of government toward emigrants is explained, instructing the governor to grant them lands, and showing a desire that they might be converted to the Roman Catholic religion;

The consideration on which this grant was founded, being an obligation on the part of claimant to bring from Ireland Roman Catholic emigrants and form a settlement of the same. The claimant alleged as a reason for not having complied with said obligation, the then existing wars, and the subsequent prohibition of emigration from Ireland.

The board reject this claim, and are satisfied that it was granted at the time it bears date. (See book No. 1, page 384.)

December 7, 1807.—(See page 304, old minutes, St. Genevieve.)

James Maxwell, vicar general of the late province of Louisiana, claiming four leagues square, situated at the fork of Black river, in the district of St. Genevieve, produces a concession from Charles D. Delassus, dated November 3, 1799, and a survey of one hundred and twelve thousand eight hundred and ninety-six arpens, dated and certified the 9th day of February, 1806. Laid over for decision.

Owing to the record having been made up hastily, the above claim of James Maxwell was omitted; in order to supply this omission, we, two of the commissioners, have hereunto subscribed our names and attached the same to the records or minutes, Hon. C. B. Penrose being absent.

James Maxwell, claiming four leagues square of land. (See book No. 1, page 384, annexed to book No. 3, page 161.)

On motion of John B. C. Lucas, commissioner, as follows, to wit: Whereas it appears, in the minutes of the former board, that the said board have remarked that they are satisfied that the said concession was granted at the time the same bears date, and inasmuch as it does not appear that any suggestion of fraud and antedate was made, either by the agent of the United States or any of the members of the board, which being the case, shows that no question did exist before said board, as to fraud or antedate, to which this decision, by way of remark, can apply; and whereas any decision without question is in itself preposterous, and might be considered as officious; therefore, resolved, that this remark and decision be rescinded. A question being taken on the motion, it was negatived; and on a question being taken on the claim, it is the unanimous opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. November 29, 1833.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

James Craig, by his legal representative, Richard Everitt, claiming 800 arpens of land, on the Negro fork of the Marameck. (See record-book F, page 98; Bates's decisions, page 103.)

William Drenen, being duly sworn, says that he is 74 years of age; that he was well acquainted with James Craig, the original claimant; that, in the year 1801 or 1802, he is not positive which, said Craig, the original claimant, went on the tract claimed, cut house-logs, and planted peach and apple seed on the place. Witness does not think that Craig ever lived on the place, but was at that time, or shortly thereafter, a married man; that Craig sold the place to the present claimant, who resided on the same until about two years ago, when he was forced to move off, in consequence of the United States selling the same. Witness knows that said Everitt resided on and cultivated the same for twenty-seven years. (See book No. 6, page 349.)

The following testimony was taken in June, 1833, by L. F. Linn, esq., then a commissioner:

Elijah Dougherty, being sworn, states that he has known the said James Summers ever since the year 1800; the said James then resided in the district of Cape Girardeau, where he has continued to live ever since. This affiant has seen the said James cultivating land, and improving the same, under the Spanish government, about the years 1801, 1802, 1803, and 1804, in the said district of Cape Girardeau, and knows of his cultivating land up to this time, June, 1833. Deponent does not know that the said James claimed the said land as his own.

William Flynn, jr., claiming 240 arpens of land, situated in Bois-brulé, in the district of St. Genevieve, produces in support of said claim, a notice to the recorder of land titles, dated 3d December, 1807.

William Flynn, sr., being duly sworn, says that, in the year 1804, to the best of his recollection, he assisted his son, the claimant, to clear about one quarter of an acre of land, and enclose the same, and also cultivated turnips thereon the same fall, but does not know whether the crop of turnips was taken off or gathered; does not know the age of his son exactly, but believes him to be 23 or 24 years of age at this time; nor does he know whether his son had permission to settle. The following testimony was taken in May, 1833, by L. F. Linn, commissioner:

John Greenwalt testifies and says, that he is about 68 years of age, and emigrated to Upper Louisiana in the spring of 1798, it being the spring after the high freshet of 1797, from which circumstance he is enabled to identify the time of his first coming to the country. Witness settled in Bois-brulé bottom, now in the county of Perry, and State of Missouri, where he has continued most of the time since. He further states, that the father of claimant, William Flynn, sr., emigrated to Louisiana, and settled with his family in Bois-brulé bottom aforesaid, as early as the year 1800, where he resided until the time of his death; that William Flynn, jr., the claimant, came with his father to the country, and was, as witness believes, about 20 years of age, being a man grown, and doing business for himself, and on his own account; that witness knows of claimant cultivatiug a piece of ground in Bois-brulé bottom, as early as the year 1804; that in the summer of 1804 claimant built a cabin, raised turnips and some vines on said land, and also, as he thinks, grew some corn on it, and then claimed, and has ever since claimed, the same as his settlement. Witness further states, that claimant continued to occupy said ground until 1807, when the same lay idle for two or three years, but that afterward, for several years, claimant rented it to men residing on it with their families for several years. Witness further states, that he has been a neighbor to claimant since his first coming to the country in 1800, and that he has uniformly understood from him, that the piece of ground above alluded to was the only land claimed by him as his settlement right, and that he has never had any lands confirmed to him.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

ST. LOUIS, December 31, 1813.—Antoine Vachard, dit Lardoise, claiming 640 acres of land, county of St. Louis, adjoining lands claimed by Henry O'Hara.

William Palmer, duly sworn, says that he knows a tract of land about a mile from the Joachim, and a mile from Glaize à Byet. Claimant bought it twenty-seven or twenty-eight years ago, as witness then understood, of P. Vienentendre. At that time this tract had a good house and garden picketed in, and the inhabitants were driven off about twenty-five years ago by the Indians. Witness has not been there since.

Charles Vachard, duly sworn, says that witness, with claimant, resided on this place for six or seven following years, about twenty-five years ago. Inhabiting and cultivating; left it on account of the Indians. Claimant had this land by purchase, from Vienentendre. (At the margin: "Not granted.") (See Bates's minutes, page 133.)

July 7, 1835.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Antoine Vachard, dit Lardoise, by his legal representatives, claiming 640 acres, in the district of St. Louis. (See record-book F, page 139; Bates's minutes, page 133; Bates's decisions, page 37.)

Baptiste Dominé, duly sworn, says that he is eighty-six years of age; that under the Spanish government he saw said Antoine Vachard inhabiting and cultivating a place between the Joachim creek and the Little rock; that there was a house on said place and a field; and witness, as he went and came from St. Genevieve, saw the said Vachard on said place for about four consecutive years.

Charles Vachard, duly sworn, says that he is about sixty-three years of age; that under the Spanish government, before Zenon Trudeau's time, witness's brother, Antoine Vachard, settled a place between the Joachim and the Little rock; that there was on said place a dwelling-house, a barn, and a field, in which said Antoine raised corn and wheat. Witness thinks his brother lived at least ten years on said place, and was the last of the settlers who left that settlement on account of the Indians; this was several years before the change of government. Witness says that Antoine Vachard never returned on said place, but remained in the country about New Madrid. (See book No. 7, page —.)

A majority of the board are of opinion that this claim ought not to be granted, one John B. Olive having had a confirmation, under said Antoine Vachard, for a tract of 250 arpens in New Madrid. (See commissioners' certificate, No. 631.) F. R. Conway, commissioner, voted for granting 640 acres, on the ground that the tract confirmed to the above-named John B. Olive was sold by said Antoine Vachard prior to the act of Congress of 1805, and consequently was not claimed by him at the passage of that act. (See book No. 7, page 227.)

Whereas we are assured that the petitioner possesses sufficient means to improve the land which he solicits, I do grant to him and his heirs the land he solicits, provided it is not prejudicial to any persons; and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the party interested in possession of the quantity of land he asks, in a vacant place of the royal domain; which being executed, he shall make out a plat of his survey, delivering the same to said party, with his certificate, in order to enable him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone corresponds, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

Don ANTONIO SOULARD, Surveyor General of the settlements of Upper Louisiana:

I do certify that a tract of land of two hundred arpens in depth by one hundred and forty arpens in front, or twenty-eight thousand arpens in superficie, was measured, the lines run and bounded, in the presence of Mr. Albert Tyson, duly appointed by the purchasers, Don Louis Labeaume and Don Santyago St. Vrain, as their agent. The said square of land is divided, as designated in the figurative plat, by dotted lines, indicating the place where each of the original owners is to be located, in thirty-five tracts of forty arpens of land in depth by 20 arpens in front, making 800 arpens in superficie, and each division is marked with the name of the original owner. (La superficie total de la tierra cae al angulo N. correspondiente al que va puesto al margen de cada memorial.) The above, between parentheses, is supposed to have been written in lieu of—At the north angle of each of the said tracts is a number corresponding to the number put at the margin of each memorial—in order to fix with clearness the situation of the respective tracts sold by each vendor, and facilitate to all the knowledge of the conditions contained in the different deeds of sale. The tracts bought by Don Louis Labeaume, twenty-one in number, make a superficie of 16,800 arpens, and are marked with L; and those purchased by Don St. Yago de St. Vrain, fourteen in number, are marked with an S, and make a superficie of 11,200 arpens.

The lines of division between each tract could not be run at the same time as those of the whole square, the deputy surveyor having fallen sick, and it could not be done afterward at the request of the (parties) interested, on account of the suspension of all surveys, until a new order, intimated to me by the captain of artillery of the United States of America, Don Amos Stoddard, first civil commandant of Upper Louisiana. The said survey was made with the perch of the city of Paris, of eighteen French feet, lineal measure of the same city, conformably to the agrarian measure of this province. This land is situated at about sixteen miles, more or less, west of the left bank of the river Mississippi, and at sixty-five miles north of this town of St. Louis. Bounded on its four sides as follows:* [Note.—The rest of this paper is torn and missing.]

E. by lands belonging to Don Santyago St. Vrain and Ambrosio Dorval, and on a small part, by lands of the royal domain. The said survey and measurement were made without regard to the variation of the needle, which is 7° 30′ E., as appears by the foregoing figurative plat, on which are noted the dimensions, courses of the lines, and other boundaries, &c. The said survey was executed by virtue of the decrees of the lieutenant governor and subdelegate of the royal Fiscal, Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, made in the years 1799, 1800, 1801, and 1802, which are here annexed, and to a part of which are subjoined the unauthenticated deeds of sale passed between the parties, the authenticated deeds being deposited in the archives of this government. In testimony whereof, I do give these presents, together with the foregoing figurative plat, drawn conformably to the survey executed by the deputy surveyor, James Rankin, on the 20th of February, of this present year, and who signed the minutes to which I certify.

March 25, 1833.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Louis Lamalice, alias Lemonde, by Louis Labeaume's legal representatives, claiming 800 arpens of land. See book C, pages 342 and 343; for survey, page 349; minutes, book No. 5, page 365.) Produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Carlos Dehault Delassus, dated November 18, 1799. Also, a paper purporting to be an original plat of survey, (part of said paper torn and missing,) embracing thirty-five concessions of 800 arpens each, numbered from 1 to 35 inclusive, on which said Lamalice is No. 1; also, a certificate of transfer, signed M. P. Leduc, recorder.

M. P. Leduc, duly sworn, says that the signature to the concession is in the proper handwriting of Carlos Dehault Delassus, and that the torn original survey is in the proper handwriting of Antoine Soulard. (See book No. 6, page 142.)

August 24, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, F. H. Martin, commissioners.

Louis Lamalice, claiming 800 arpens of land. (See book No. 6, page 142.)

After a careful examination of the testimony, and the various deeds of transfer on the claims numbered from —— to —— inclusive, the board have decided to place them in the second class, believing them to have been founded in an extensive scheme of speculation by the assignees, unknown to the governor, and that the ostensible object, the population of the country, was not intended to be complied with at the time of procuring the grant.

The board are unanimously of opinion that this claim ought not to be confirmed. (See book No. 7, page 228.)

To Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana:

Sir: Baptiste Marle has the honor to represent to you, that he wishes to establish himself in this province, in which he has been residing for some time; therefore he has recourse to the kindness of this government, praying you to be pleased to grant him a concession of 800 arpens of land in superficie, to be taken on the vacant lands of the King's domain, in the place which will appear more convenient to the interest of your petitioner, who presumes to expect this favor of your justice.

BAPTISTE MARLE.

St. Louis, December 16, 1799.

St. Louis of Illinois, December 17, 1799.

Whereas we are assured that the petitioner possesses sufficient means to improve the land which he solicits, I do grant to him and his heirs the land he solicits, provided it is not prejudicial to anybody, and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the (party) interested in possession of the quantity of land he asks, in a vacant place of the royal domain; which being executed, he shall make out a plat of survey, delivering the same to the party, with his certificate, in order to enable him to obtain the title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone corresponds, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands, &c.

CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

May 28, 1806.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment. Present: Hon. Clement B. Penrose.

The same, (Jacques St. Vrain), assignee of Pierre Roussel, claiming 600 arpens of land, situate on the river Cuivre, district of St. Charles, produces a concession from Charles D. Delassus to the said Roussel, for 800 arpens of land, dated 25th January, 1800; a survey, dated 20th February, certified 28th March, 1804, and a deed of transfer of the same, dated 5th of January, 1804.

The board require further proof of the date of the above concession.

On behalf of the United States. Pierre Roussel, being duly sworn, says that, sometime in March, 1804, (as he believes,) he received from Louis Labeaume a concession for which he never had applied; that some time in January or February, of that same year, Labeaume asked him if he wanted land, to which he replied that he would take it if it was given him; that the said concession did not remain in his possession; and further, that in the said month of March, he signed an assignment of 600 arpens of the same to the above claimant, but received nothing for the same; that he has since sold the 200 remaining arpens to another person; was at the time of receiving said concession twenty-five years of age, had a wife and child; never cultivated the same nor inhabited it, and that he claims no other land in his own name in this territory.

The board reject this claim. (See book No. 1, page 302.)

August 17, 1811.—The board met. Present: Clement B. Penrose and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Jacques St. Vrain, assignee of Pierre Roussel, claiming 600 arpens, and Pierre Roussel, claiming 200 arpens of land. (See book No. 1, page 302.)

CLASS 2. SURVEY FOR NOS. 115, 116, 117, 118, AND 119.

Don ANTONIO SOULARD, Surveyor General of Upper Louisiana:

I do certify that five tracts of land, of 800 arpens each, (making in all 4,000 arpens, as it is demonstrated in the foregoing figurative plat,) were measured, the lines run, and bounded, in favor of Don Santyago de St. Vrain, in presence of his agent, Albert Tyson; the said five concessions were bought last year, by the said proprietor, from the primitive owners, as it is proven by the deeds of sale recorded in the offices of this government. Each one of the tracts of land is designated, in the said figurative plat, with the name of the vendor; observing that the dotted lines were not run on the ground, on account of the bad weather which took place, but they shall have to be run at the demand of the interested. These lands have been measured with the perch of Paris, of eighteen French feet, lineal measure of the same city. Said lands are situated at about three miles to the westward of the river Mississippi, and sixty miles to the northwest of this town of St. Louis, and are bounded on the four sides by vacant lands of the royal domain. The said measurement and survey were taken without regard to the variation of the needle, which is of 7° 30′ east, as it is evident by referring to the above figurative plat, on which are noted the dimensions, direction of the lines, other boundaries, &c. Said surveys were taken by virtue of the decrees of the lieutenant governor, Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, as it is proven by the five petitions and decrees here annexed.

In testimony whereof, I do give the present, with the foregoing figurative plat, drawn conformably to the survey executed by the deputy surveyor, Mr. James Rankin, on the 6th and 7th of January of this present year, he having signed on the minutes, which I do certify.

Class 2. No. 119.—Eusebius Hubbard, claiming 800 arpens.

To Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana:

Sir: Eusebius Hubbard has the honor to represent to you, that he would wish to form an establishment in the upper part of this province, where he has been residing for some time; the petitioner promising to submit to all the taxes and charges which it may please his Majesty to impose; therefore, sir, the petitioner prays you to grant to him a tract of land of eight hundred arpens in superficie, to be taken on the vacant lands of his Majesty's domain, in the place which will appear most convenient to the interest of your petitioner, who presumes to expect this favor of your justice.

EUSEBIUS HUBBARD.

St. Louis, January 4, 1803.

St. Louis of Illinois, January 7, 1803.

Whereas it is notorious that the petitioner has more than the means and number of hands (populacion) necessary to obtain the concession which he solicits, I do grant to him and his heirs the land which he solicits, if it is not prejudicial to any person, and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the (party) interested in possession of the quantity of land which he asks, in the place indicated; and this being executed, he shall draw a plat of his survey, delivering the same to the party, with his certificate, in order that it shall serve to him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone corresponds, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

May 28, 1806.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment. Present: Hon. Clement B. Penrose.

Jacques St. Vrain, assignee of Louis Lajoie, claiming 550 arpens of land, situate as aforesaid; produces a concession from Charles D. Delassus to said Louis Lajoie, dated February 19th, 1800; a survey of the same, dated 19th January, 1804, and certified 20th March, 1804; together with a deed of transfer of the same, dated 17th December, 1803.

The board require further proof of the date of the above concession.

On behalf of the United States.—Louis Lajoie, being duly sworn, says that he never applied for a concession; that about two years ago, in the winter, Louis Labeaume called on him and informed him that he was ready to give concessions to such as wanted some; that he, the witness, went to Gregoire Sarpy's where Labeaume lived at that time; that being there, Labeaume showed him some papers which he deemed to be concessions, but did not give him the same; that, not knowing how to write, he made his cross to a paper; that he never received anything for the land he made over to claimant; and, further, that he does not know where the said land lies; was, at the time of the above application to him, the said witness, by said Labeaume, of the age of 22 years; had a wife and child, and claims no other land, in his own name, in this territory.

The board reject this claim. (See book No. 1, page 302.)

August 17, 1811.—Board met. Present: Clement B. Penrose and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Jacques St. Vrain, assignee of Louis Lajoie, claiming 550, and Louis Lajoie, claiming 250 arpens of land. (See book No. 1, page 302.)

Produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Carlos Dehault Delassus, dated 19th February, 1800; also, a plat and certificate of survey, dated 20th March, 1804, by Antonio Soulard; also, deeds of conveyances.

M. P. Leduc, duly sworn, saith that the signature to said concession is in the proper handwriting of Carlos Dehault Delassus, and the signature to plat and certificate of survey is in the proper handwriting of Antonio Soulard. (See book No. 6, page 81.)

December 17, 1833.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

In the case of Louis Lajoie, claiming 800 arpens of land. (See page 81, of this book, No. 6.)

Louis Lajoie, being duly sworn, says that, under the Spanish government, he asked for a concession of 800 arpens of land; that on his demand, the said concession was granted to him; that he asked for said concession through Mr. Labeaume, who drew up the petition; that, at the time the grant was made, he, the deponent, lived in Florissant, and had a wife and two children; that he, in company with about 15 others, came to St. Louis for the purpose of asking land of the government; that he does not recollect of having ever given any testimony before the former board; that if he has, he must have been drunk at the time; that then he was oftener drunk than sober; that previous to obtaining the grant, he had not made any contract with any one for said land; that he recollects of having sold his interest in the grant to Dejarlais, when in a frolic, for a pint of whiskey; that he does not recollect of having signed any deeds for said land. Being asked what was his occupation at that time, he answered, drinking drams. The witness further says that he supported his family by working by the day, when sober; that since a few years he has left off drinking; that at the time the grant was made, the lieutenant governor, Charles Dehault Delassus, lived in a house on Main street, near the market place. (See book No. 6, page 399.)

December 28, 1833.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

In the case of Louis Lajoie, claiming 800 arpens of land. (See page 81 of this book, No. 6.)

Benito Vasquez, being duly sworn, and being shown the original deed of sale from Louis Lajoie to Dejarlais, (said deed dated July 10th, 1804,) signed by him, the said Benito, as witness, says that it is his own handwriting and signature. (See book No. 6, page 423.)

May 28, 1806.—The board met, agreeably to adjournment. Present: Hon. Clement B. Penrose.

The same (Jacques St. Vrain,) assignee of Paul Dejarlais, claiming 600 arpens of land, situate as aforesaid, produces a concession from Charles D. Delassus to said Dejarlais for 800 arpens, dated July 11, 1800; a survey of the same, dated 11th February, and certified 20th (28th) March, 1804; and a deed of transfer of the same, dated the 13th December, 1803.

The board require further proof of the date of said concession.

On behalf of the United States. Paul Dejarlais, being duly sworn, says that some time in the spring of 1804, Labeaume called on him and told him that if he wanted lands he might have some; to which he, the witness, replied, that if he was to pay nothing for the same, he would like to have it; that accordingly, some time in June of that year (as he believes), Labeaume gave him a concession for 800 arpens of land; that the Spanish officers had not then left the country; and that when the said concession was given to him, he gave an assignment of 600 arpens of the same, for which he did not receive any thing; and further, that he had then a wife and children, and claims no other lands, in his own name, in the territory.

August 17, 1811.—Board met. Present: Clement B. Penrose and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Jacques St. Vrain, assignee of Paul Dejarlais, claiming 600 arpens, and Paul Dejarlais, claiming 200 arpens of land. (See book No. 1, page 304.)

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. (See book No. 5, page 318.)

December 19, 1832.—F. R. Conway, esq., appeared, pursuant to adjournment.

Paul Dejarlais, by his legal representative, John Mullanphy, claiming 800 arpens of land. (See book C, pages 328 and 330; book No. 1, page 304; No. 5, page 318.) Produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Carlos Dehault Delassus, dated 11th July, 1800; also, a plat and certificate of survey, dated 28th March, 1804, by Antonio Soulard; also, deeds of conveyance.

M. P. Leduc, duly sworn, says that the signatures to the aforesaid papers are in the proper handwriting of Carlos Dehault Delassus and of Antonio Soulard. (See book No. 6, page 84.)

CLASS 2. SURVEY FOR NOS. 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, AND 137.

Don Antonio Soulard, Surveyor General of Upper Louisiana:

I do certify that ten tracts of land, of 800 arpens (each) in superficie, were measured, the lines run and bounded, in favor and in presence of Don Alberto Tyson, as it is demonstrated in the foregoing figurative plat; the said proprietor having acquired those ten concessions, as well in the last, as in the present year, from the primitive owners, as it is notorious by referring to the extra-judicial deeds of sale annexed to the petitions and decrees of the primitive owners.

Each of the tracts of land is designated, in the said figurative plat, with the name of the vendor, and with the number corresponding to that which is put on the margin of each petition, in order to fix, clearly, the situation of the respective tracts ceded by each vendor, and to facilitate, to the one and the others, the knowledge of the conditions contained in the different deeds of sale—observing, that the dividing lines could not be run on the ground, on account of the bad weather which took place, and they shall have to be run at the demand of the interested.

Said lands were measured with the perch of the city (of Paris, omitted) of eighteen French feet, lineal measure of the same city, according to the agrarian measure in this province, and are situated at about nine miles to the west of the bank of the river Mississippi, and at fifty-one miles to the north of this town of St. Louis; bounded on its four sides as follows: to the N. N. W. by lands of Don Santyago St. Vrain, Alberto Tyson, and of Don Francisco Janin; to the S. S. E. in part by vacant lands of the royal domain, and by lands of various proprietors; to the E. S. E. and W. N. W., by vacant lands of the royal domain. Said survey and measurement was done without having regard to the variation of the needle, which is 7° 30′ E.; as is evident by referring to the foregoing figurative plat, on which are noted the dimensions, directions of the lines, and other boundaries, &c. Said survey was executed by virtue of the decrees of Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, as it is obvious by the ten petitions and decrees here annexed.

In testimony whereof, I do give the present, with the figurative plat here above, drawn conformably to the survey executed by the deputy surveyor, James Rankin, on the 13th of February of this present year, who signed on the minutes, which I certify.

Class 2. No. 139.—Joseph Jamison, claiming 800 arpens.

To Don CARLOS DEHAULT DELASSUS, Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana:

SIR: Jos. Jamison has the honor to represent to you, that he would wish to form a plantation in the upper part of this province, in which he has been residing for some time; the petitioner engaging himself to submit to all the taxes and charges which his Majesty will please to impose; therefore he supplicates you to grant to him a tract of land of eight hundred arpens in superficie, to be taken on the vacant lands of his Majesty, in the place which will appear most convenient to the interest of your petitioner; favor which the petitioner presumes to expect of your justice.

JOSEPH JAMISON.

ST. LOUIS, February 8, 1802.

ST. LOUIS OF ILLINOIS, February 9, 1802.

Whereas it is notorious that the petitioner has more than the means and the number of hands (populacion) necessary to obtain the concession which he solicits, I do grant to him and his heirs the land which he solicits, if it is not prejudicial to anybody, and the surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put the interested in possession of the quantity of land which he asks, in the place indicated; and this being executed, he shall draw a plat of his survey, which he shall deliver to the party, with his certificate, in order to serve to him to obtain the concession and title in form from the intendant general, to whom alone corresponds, by royal order, the distributing and granting all classes of lands of the royal domain.

JULIUS DE MUN.

Don ANTONIO SOULARD, Surveyor General of the settlements of Upper Louisiana:

I do certify that a tract of land of eight hundred arpens in superficie was measured, the lines run and bounded, in favor and in presence of Joseph Jamison; said measurement was done with the perch of the city of Paris, of eighteen French feet in length, lineal measure of the same city, conformably to the agrarian measure of this province, which land is situated at about 130 miles to the northwest of this town, and 13 miles to the west of the river Mississippi; bounded to the north and east by vacant lands of the royal domain; to the south by lands of Dorresto Flubbert, and to the west by lands of Daniel Quick. Which surveys and measurements were executed without regard to the variation of the needle, which is 7° 30′ east, as can be verified by referring to the foregoing figurative plat, on which are noted the dimension, direction of the lines, and other boundaries, &c. Said survey was taken by virtue of the decree of the lieutenant governor and sub-delegate of the royal Fiscal, Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, dated December 1, 1800, here annexed. In testimony whereof, I do give the present, with the foregoing figurative plat, drawn conformably to the survey executed by the deputy surveyor, Mr. James Rankin, on the 2d of January, 1804, who has signed on the minutes, which I do certify.

JULIUS DE MUN, T. B. C.

Don ANTONIO SOULARD, Surveyor General of Upper Louisiana:

I do certify that two tracts of land, of 800 arpens each, making the quantity of 1,600 arpens in superficie, as it is evinced by the foregoing figurative plat, have been measured, the lines run and bounded, in favor of Don Louis Labeaume, and in presence of his agent, Albert Tyson; which two concessions have been purchased last year by the said proprietor from the original owners, as can be seen by the deed of sale, recorded in this government, and by another deed (familiar) inserted below one of the petitions here annexed. Each of the tracts of land are designated in the said figurative plat by the name of the vendor; observing that the dotted line could not be run on the spot on account of the bad weather which occurred, and it shall be run whenever the interested (party) shall require it. The said lands were measured with the perch of the same city, according to the agrarian measure of this province, and are situated at about 100 miles north of this town of St. Louis; bounded north by the banks of Salt river; south by the lands of William Jamison; east by vacant lands of the royal domain, and west by other lands of Carlos Fremon Delauriere. The said survey and measurement were executed without regard to the variation of the needle, which is of 7° 30′ E., as is evinced by the foregoing figurative plat, on which is noted the dimensions and courses of the lines, and other boundaries, &c. This survey was executed by virtue of the decree of Don Carlos Dehault Delassus, as it is proven by the petitions and decrees here annexed. And in order that the whole be available, according to law, I do give the present, with the foregoing figurative plat, drawn conformably to the operations executed by the deputy surveyor, James Rankin, under date of January 4, of this present year, and who signed on the minutes, to which I certify.

To the Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana:

Joseph Fenwick, a Roman Catholic, father of ten children, owner of a number of slaves, and of a great number of cattle of all kind, has the honor to represent that, having come from the United States to these parts, with the consent and recommendation of his excellency the governor general, the Baron de Carondelet, in order to form an extensive establishment, as well for agricultural purposes as for raising horses, cattle, and (parcherie—supposed to mean tanyard), he has made choice, on the waters of the river St. Francis, of a tract of land suitable for the above-mentioned purposes, containing twenty thousand arpens, on his Majesty's domain, and which cannot be prejudicial to any person, on account of its remoteness from all other settlements. Therefore, may it please you to grant to him, his heirs or assigns, a concession for the said twenty thousand arpens of land, to be taken in the aforesaid place. The petitioner shall never cease to pray for the preservation of your days.

ST. GENEVIEVE, August 10, 1796.

JOSEPH FENWICK.

Don ZENON TRUDEAU, Lieutenant Governor of the western part of Illinois, &c.:

Don Antonio Soulard, surveyor of this jurisdiction of Illinois, shall survey, in favor of the party interested, the twenty thousand arpens of land in superficie, in the place where he solicits the same, provided it belongs to his Majesty's domain; and he shall deliver to him the plat and certificate of survey, in order that, together with this decree, it will serve to the said party as a title to his property, until one in better form shall be delivered to him by the general government of the province, to which he shall have to apply in due time.

Joseph Fenwick, claiming 20,000 arpens of land. (See book No. 6, page 175; No. 7, page 58.)

A majority of the board are of opinion that this claim ought not to be confirmed, F. R. Conway, commissioner, voting for the confirmation. (See book No. 7, page 243.)

F. H. MARTIN,
JAMES H. RELFE,
F. R. CONWAY.

The majority of the board who rejected the claim of Joseph Fenwick to 20,000 arpens of land on the St. Francis river, and numbered 148 in the report, offer the following reasons for the grounds of their opinion: The claimant was an emigrant from the State of Kentucky, and proposed to establish himself in Upper Louisiana, and make certain improvements, if a grant of land should be given to him of 20,000 arpens, on the river St. Francis. His proposition, as set forth in his petition, was acceded to. The following year, viz.: on 26th May, 1797, as a citizen of the United States and an inhabitant of Kentucky, he makes a similar proposition, asking for 3,000 arpens between the mouth of Apple creek and the river St. Côme, promising to remove to, settle, and cultivate the same, if it should be granted. Lieutenant Governor Trudeau made the grant on the 10th of June, 1797, and, from the records of this office, it appears that Joseph Fenwick complied with the conditions set forth in his petition, and this government has confirmed to said Fenwick the claim of 3,000 arpens; but there is no evidence of his having made any improvement, or establishment, as promised in his petition for the 20,000 arpens on the river St. Francis.

Class 2. No. 149.—James Clamorgan, claiming 536,904 arpens.

To Don CHARLES DEHAULT DELASSUS, Lieutenant Colonel of the stationary regiment of Louisiana, and Lieutenant Governor of New Madrid and dependencies, &c.:

James Clamorgan, merchant, residing in the town of St. Louis, has the honor to represent that he has been strongly encouraged by his excellency, the governor general of this province, to establish a rope manufactory, for the purpose of making cordage for the use of his Majesty's ships, and especially to supply the Havana, at which place his excellency desires that the petitioner should send the cordage under his protection, conformably to the notice he has given to you on that subject, in order that, in all cases, the petitioner should have recourse to your goodness, so as to be favored by all your power, particularly in this undertaking, which may become very important to the prosperity of this dependency, and very profitable, in time, to all the inhabitants of this Upper Louisiana, so much the more, as the petitioner is connected in correspondence and matters of interest with a powerful house in Canada, which can procure hereafter a sufficient number of farmers to come to this country to teach the cultivation of hemp, and its fabrication into different kinds of cordage in the most perfect manner, thereby fulfilling the views of the general government, which desires this undertaking to succeed by all just and honest means which it will be possible to use, in order to exempt his Majesty from drawing, henceforth, from foreign countries, an article so important to the fitting out of his navy. In hopes of obtaining this end, the petitioner has made the most pressing demands to obtain from his correspondents in Montreal a considerable number of people fit for this cultivation, whom we are compelled by necessity to attract to this country, although, for the present, political circumstances in Canada appear opposed to it, but in more peaceful times, this object may indubitably be obtained.

Meanwhile, the petitioner is obliged to secure beforehand a title from you, sir, which will guaranty to him the property of a quantity of arable land, proportionate to his views, in order to form an extensive establishment, as soon as circumstances will appear favorable to his undertaking, and when his correspondents will be able to cause to emigrate to this country, without hurting their feelings, the number of people necessary to give a start to this culture, so much desired by the government.

The petitioner hopes, sir, that, in consideration of the above statement, and of the particular recommendations of his excellency, the governor general of the province, you will be pleased to grant him the quantity of land he wishes to obtain, as much in order to favor him in all that may contribute to the execution and future prosperity of his undertaking, as it will also facilitate to him the means of drawing from foreign parts an emigration of cultivators, who, perhaps, cannot be obtained but after a considerable lapse of time, and under promises of rewards which the petitioner shall be obliged to fulfil. Therefore, he supplicates you to grant him, in the name of his Majesty, the tract of land lying on the western side of the river Mississippi, to begin from the place opposite the head of an island situated at about one hundred arpens below the little prairie, which is distant about thirty miles from the village of New Madrid, in descending the current, and continuing to follow said current, until one is placed on the same western side, right opposite the mouth of the river commonly called river à Carbono, which is on the eastern side of the Mississippi. So that, from the said place, situated opposite the mouth of the aforesaid river Carbono, a line be drawn toward the interior, running southwest or thereabout; said line shall be prolonged paralled to the one which will have to be drawn from the place situated opposite the head of the island lying as here above stated, at about one hundred arpens below the said little prairie; these two said lines shall run in the depth, in a southwestern direction or thereabout, and shall be the boundaries of each of those two opposite sides, until the extremities of the said two lines be sufficiently prolonged in the said direction, so as to reach the banks of the branches of the river St. Francis, the most distant from the Mississippi; which banks (of said branches) of the river St. Francis, shall be the boundary and limit to the third side of the land demanded, and the banks of the Mississippi shall be the fourth (side of the same,) to begin from the head of the aforesaid island of the little prairie, and descending the current on the western side, till the place situated opposite the said river, called river Carbono; in order that as soon as it is in the power of the petitioner, he may select and improve, in the said tract demanded, the land which is most suitable for the cultivation of hemp; a great part of this same tract being overflowed by ponds and impracticable low swamps, which will prevent the improving of the whole in all its extent. And the petitioner to enjoy and dispose of the same for ever, as if a thing to him belonging, and to his heirs or assigns; and even to distribute the said lands, or part of them, if he thinks proper, in favor of such person or persons whom he may judge fit, in order to attain, as much as in his power lies, the accomplishment of his project. And the petitioner shall never cease to render thanks to your goodness.

Done at New Madrid, this 1st day of August, 1796.

J. CLAMORGAN.

NEW MADRID, August 9, 1796.

Having examined the statement contained in this petition; being satisfied as to the means of the petitioner, and of his late partnership with the house of Todd, which may facilitate to him the accomplishments of the undertaking he proposes, the profits of which, if it succeeds, will devolve in part to the benefit of this remote country, so miserable on account of the actual want of population; due attention being paid to the particular recommendations made to me by the Baron de Carondelet, governor general of these provinces: (Attando ha tenido a bien el nombrar de comandante de est puesto y dependencias de huscar.) Supposed meaning: Considering that he thought fit to recommend to the commandant of this post and dependencies, "to seek, by all possible means, the mode of increasing the population and of encouraging agriculture in all its branches, and particularly that of hemp." It appearing to me that what the petitioner proposes will contribute to the attainment of this last recommendation, I do grant to him and his heirs the land which he solicits, in the place where, and in the same terms as, he asks the same, provided it is not prejudicial to any person. And when he establishes the said land, he shall have it surveyed, not compelling him to have it done immediately, as its extent is so considerable that it would occasion a ruinous expense to him if he was to execute said survey before the arrival of the families which he must send for to Canada; but as soon as they arrive, and he settles them on said land, he shall have to secure his property by having the same surveyed, in order afterward to have recourse to the governor general to obtain the approbation and the title in form for this, his concession.

NEW BOURBON, May 26, 1797.

ST. LOUIS, June 10, 1797.

The surveyor, Don Antonio Soulard, shall put this party in possession of the five hundred arpens of land he solicits, and his survey being executed, he shall deliver it (the plat and certificate) to him, in order to enable him to solicit the concession from the governor general of these provinces, who is, by these presents, informed that the petitioner is a son of Don Joseph Fenwick, the same whom his lordship has recommended in order that lands should be granted to him, his family, and to the Catholic and Roman settlers he would bring with him, to establish themselves in this western part of Illinois.

151	Martin Fenwick.	500	Concession, 10th June, 1797.	Z. Trudeau.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

November 14, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

Martin Fenwick, claiming 500 arpens of land, situate as aforesaid (Apple creek, district of St. Genevieve). Produces record of a concession from Zenon Trudeau, lieutenant governor, dated 10th June, 1797.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. (See minutes, book No. 5, page 422.)

April 24, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway and James H. Relfe, commissioners.

Martin Fenwick, claiming 500 arpens of land. (See record-book D, page 44; minutes, No. 5, page 422.) Produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from Zenon Trudeau, dated 10th June, 1797.

The following testimony was taken before James H. Relfe, one of the commissioners, at St. Genevieve, on the 22d of April, 1825:

Barthelmi St. Gemme, aged about sixty years, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith that he was well acquainted with Zenon Trudeau, and he was lieutenant governor in Upper Louisiana, in the year 1797. He further says, that the signature to the concession is in the proper handwriting of the said Zenon Trudeau, that he has often seen him write. Witness further says that he knew the claimant, and he was the son of Joseph

Fenwick; that there was a large and respectable family of them; and that the claimant, at the date of the grant, was a citizen and resident in the then province of Upper Louisiana, and continued so until long after the change of government. BARTHELMI ST. GEMME.

September 15, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, and F. H. Martin, commissioners.

Martin Fenwick, claiming 500 arpens of land. (See book No. 7, page 129.)

The board are unanimously of opinion that this claim is destitute of merit, an alteration being apparent in the original petition on file, as noted in the translation; the name of a river à Brazeau having been altered into that of a river à la Viande, alias St. Côme, thus increasing the distance, for location of grant, several miles; and the conditions not having been complied with. (See book No. 7, page 246.)

Class 2. No. 152.—Jacques Clamorgan, claiming 500,000 arpens.

To Don ZENON TRUDEAU, Lieutenant Governor of Upper Louisiana:

Nothing has made the petitioner so proud as the encouragement and emulation you have given to his industry, for the purpose of accomplishing the discovery of the Indian nations extending themselves to the Pacific ocean. The petitioner being charged with that mission by the general government, you condescended to give him hopes that he would have the honor of your protection and support; you did more, you solicited from the general government the aid claimed by the petitioner, in order to proceed with vigor, in an enterprise in which his Majesty himself appeared to be occupied. In fact, his Majesty granted to the petitioner an exclusive privilege for trading ten whole years with the nations of Upper Missouri, not only in order to open a new branch of commerce in furs, but also to get information about, and topographical knowledge of, the immense territory which was to be explored. Those objects could not be attained but by making great sacrifices among the Indian nations, in order to concilitate to us their esteem and friendship. In consequence of your recommendations, sir, his excellency, the Baron de Carondelet, laid before his Majesty an account of the excessive expenses to which the petitioner had been subjected in this arduous enterprise of facilitating communications then so extensive. His Majesty, in his goodness, determined, in favor of the petitioner, that a sum of ten thousand dollars should be paid annually to him, in order to contribute to the expenses occasioned by the discovery of the nations and territories of Upper Missouri, as also in keeping away foreigners, who, from Hudson's bay and Lake Superior, transported their goods, in order to bribe the credulous natives inhabiting the said Upper Missouri. His excellency, the Baron de Carondelet, as well as you, sir, communicated immediately, by official letters to the petitioner, the generosity of his Majesty in his favor; but it had not its intended effect, on account of the impediments thrown in the way by the intendant Morales, who pretended at the time to have in the King's coffers no funds appropriated to that object! In consequence of that state of contradiction between the two powers, the petitioner has remained a victim of his zeal and activity in rendering himself useful in compliance to the wishes of the general government and to the intentions of his Majesty.

In these unfortunate circumstances, the petitioner presumes to claim of your goodness that you will be pleased to grant to him, on the western side of the river Mississippi, some leagues above the mouth of the Missouri, the tract of land bounded on one side by the little river called Lacharette, alias Dardenne, and on the other by the little river called Au Cuivre, one on the south the other on the north, will serve as boundaries to those two sides. The petitioner wishes, moreover, that you would be pleased to grant to him sixty arpens of land in front, on the banks of the Mississippi, immediately adjoining the mouth of the first above-named river Lacharette, in descending the current of the Mississippi; and again, sixty arpens in front, also on the banks of the Mississippi, adjoining immediately to the upper side of the mouth of the second above-named river Au Cuivre; and ascending the current of the Mississippi. The depth of the three different above-described tracts of land to be extended by two lines, starting from the banks of the Mississippi, one from the most southern, and the other from the most northern point (of the front) of the above-demanded tracts, which two lines shall be run parallel, on each side, in a westerly direction, until they reach the top of the high hills in the rear, and from there, the said two lines to be continued and prolonged in the same westerly direction, until they reach a point at the distance of about two hundred arpens from the foot of said hills; and then those two extreme points shall be connected together by a straight line which shall be run so as to form the fourth side of the said three tracts here above demanded. The said lines encompassing in their extent all the waters of the above-mentioned rivers Lacharette, alias Dardenne, and Au Cuivre, in order that, hereafter, the petitioner may erect saw and grist mills thereon, also place there a number of cattle, have slaughter-houses, and send salt meat to the capital. And the petitioner shall render thanks to your goodness.

J. CLAMORGAN.

ST. LOUIS, March 1, 1797.

Don ZENON TRUDEAU, Captain in the regiment of Louisiana, Lieutenant Colonel by brevet, and Lieutenant Governor of the western part of Illinois:

Cognizance being taken of the statement made by Don Santyago Clamorgan, and the governor general, the Baron de Carondelet having particularly recommended to me to facilitate and protect the discovery and commerce of Upper Missouri, in which the above-named Clamorgan has engaged in my entreaties; considering the losses which said enterprise has occasioned to him, and the new expenses to which he shall have to contribute on account of the same undertaking, and how important it is to favor and extend the discoveries here before mentioned, without prejudice to the royal treasury, and to the interest and welfare of these settlements, but on the contrary, in contributing to their prosperity, by drawing new inhabitants: For these considerations, and on account of the said Clamorgan having rendered himself worthy and deserving of the favors of the government, the surveyor of this jurisdiction (as soon as the occupations of his place will permit) shall survey, in favor of the party interested, the extent of land he solicits, in the way and manner described in the foregoing document, which, together with the plat and certificate of survey, and of the boundaries which shall be set (to said land) will form the title of concession, which, in due time, he shall have to lay before the general government of the province, in order to get its approbation and record.

NEW ORLEANS, May 26, 1794.

I have read, sir, with much interest, the memorial you have addressed to me. It contains political views which do honor to your understanding, and are in accordance with the ideas I have laid before the court two years ago. We are, perhaps, very near the moment when we shall see them realized, but time and pains are needed to convince the ministers of their utility. The grand objects which for the present absorb all the attention of the different powers will, perhaps, delay for some months the approbation of this plan, but I do not despair to see it adopted before the end of the year.

Some errors have crept in among your details, which the enthusiasm for what is good, and too full conviction of your own ideas, have hidden from you; but in the main they are just, and the means of execution well combined.

I have the honor to be, with the most perfect consideration, sir, your very humble and very obedient servant,

LE BARON DE CARONDELET.

MONS. CLAMORGAN.

No. 2.

NEW ORLEANS, July 22, 1794.

SIR: I have, indeed, received the political memorial you directed to me under the double cover which you mention. The letter annexed to it, for Mr. Delassus, was also received at the same time, and suspecting some mistake, and also conjecturing what might be the contents of it, I threw it into the fire.

I have already had the honor to tell you my sentiments on one part of the contents of your memorial, which I have read with the greatest interest. Let us wait till the storm which agitates the political atmosphere be somewhat dissipated, and then we shall see what the future situation of Europe will permit us to do for the welfare of Louisiana, which, I hope, will advance more in the last five years of this century, than it has done ever since the beginning of it, up to the period of my coming into the province.

Your views, sir, are in perfect accordance with mine. True wealth is to be found only in agriculture, and this requires a competent population and easy outlets. Louisiana is susceptible of all these advantages, but present circumstances are not favorable to our views. Let us then have patience for awhile, and, by remaining attentive spectators of passing events, we may seize on the first opportunity of success.

I have the honor to be, with the most perfect consideration, sir, your very humble and very obedient servant,

LE BARON DE CARONDELET.

MONS. DE CLAMORGAN.

No. 3.

NEW ORLEANS, May 11, 1796.

SIR: In consequence of what you wrote to me in your letter of 10th April, I send to Mr. Trudeau some medals for the company, and among them a very fine gilt one, which I intend for the great Maha chief, in order to flatter him most. I also send several commissions, leaving a blank for the names, so that Mr. Trudeau may have them filled up; but it is to be wished, as much for the company as for the King, that there should be but one single chief decorated with a great medal, one with a small one, and two captains in each nation; for hereafter, those chiefs will require compensations adequate to their grades. I send also five flags by Mr. Chouteau, and when, in execution of the treaty concluded with the United States, we shall abandon the bluffs, the commandant will send to Mr. Trudeau ten swivels for the service of the company's forts.

Mr. Chouteau is also bearer of a commission, such as you desired, for Mr. Mackay. Finally, I send to Mr. Trudeau the order that Mr. Todd may take an interest in the order of discoveries.

There are no objections to Mr. Todd having the exclusive trade of the Sac and Fox nations in the country east of the Missouri, and even on the said Missouri, during the term of his contract; but it would not be proper to have it extended to the western side before we positively know and are perfectly acquainted with the force and situation of the nations situated on the (last) above-mentioned side of said river. Besides, I must avoid to have those nations at variance with the Osages, whom Messrs. Chouteau are beginning to keep in subjection, and who will be an impediment to the aggrandizement of our settlements, as long as we cannot keep them in peace.

I am concerned to see that our settlers of Upper Mississippi, who might acquire true wealth by agriculture, prefer to devote themselves to the fur trade, which is as dangerous as it is precarious. The working of the lead mines would also afford great profits, because we might furnish the Havana with this article, and yet we are constantly destitute of it, for want of labor; at this moment there is none, either in the king's or in private warehouses.

I have the honor to be, with the most perfect consideration, sir, your very humble and very obedient servant,

LE BARON DE CARONDELET.

MONS. DE CLAMORGAN.

No. 4.

NEW ORLEANS, July 9, 1796.

SIR: I have received the account of Mr. Mackay's travel to the Maha nation, as also his instructions given to the party going to the discovery of the South sea. I would be so much the more flattered, should this last (expedition) succeed, as it is confidently reported that a Spanish squadron has sailed from Europe, in order to go and dislodge the English from Nootka sound, and it would be a curious fact if our people were to reach the same point at the same time.

I thought that I had written to you that the establishment of a fort at the river St. Peter had already been proposed to the court, which is occupying itself of the means required to put Louisiana in a respectable state of defence; but time is needed, for everything remains yet to be done, and the political circumstances of Europe attract all the attention.

I have the honor to be, with the most perfect consideration, sir, your very humble and very obedient servant,

No. 5.

NEW ORLEANS, September 18, 1796.

SIR: I have just received the agreeable news of the approval of the "Spanish company formed in 1794, (these are the proper words of the royal decree made in the council of state held on the 27th of last May"), for the purpose of making discoveries to the westward of the Missouri, as also of the regulations and instructions under which your lordship has sanctioned and granted to the said company the exclusive privilege of the fur trade with all the nations of Indians on said Missouri, who inhabit beyond the nation of Poncas, offering three thousand dollars as a reward to the first who will reach the South sea.

2d. The permission granted to the said company to arm and maintain armed in the forts which it has or may have hereafter, at the expense of his Majesty, the one hundred men who are thought to be necessary; the whole being under your lordship's orders, for the end designated, which you will watch with the greatest care, &c.

I hope, sir, that, in consequence of these favors and privileges, the company will derive new vigor, and will make the greatest efforts in order to correspond to the intentions of his Majesty, and exclude the English from those parts.

The house of Todd is also approved of by the King, who has added to all these favors, that of the reduction of the duties, from fifteen to six per cent. for all the colony.

We will see if Leglise gets the prize of $3,000.

I have the honor to be, with the most perfect consideration, sir, your very humble and obedient servant,

NEW ORLEANS, October 26, 1796.

In a royal order, under date of the 11th of June of this year, the most excellent Sor. Don Diego de Gardoqui, Secretary of State, and of the Universal Despacho, &c., among other things, tells me the following:

"In the council of state, held on the 27th of last month, extracts of your lordship's last letters, up to the 10th of February, were laid before the King, together with the topographical plat of the rivers Mississippi and Missouri, on which are demonstrated the progress of the Spanish company of discoveries, to the westward of this last river, established on the 12th of May, 1794, as also the encroachments of the English companies upon the Spanish possessions. His Majesty being well informed of all the occurrences in that province, and of the means which your lordship has proposed, with the advice of the intendant and of the English merchant, Don Andrew Todd, of Michilimackinac, his Majesty has condescended to grant, with the unanimous accordance of the said council, the following points and favors:

1st. The approval of the Spanish company formed in 1794, for the purpose of making discoveries to the westward of the river Missouri, under the instructions and regulations with which your lordship has permitted, and granted to said company the exclusive privilege of the trade with all the nations of the Indians on the said Missouri, who inhabit beyond the nation of Poncas, offering a reward of $3,000 to the first who reaches the South sea.

2d. The permission that the company may arm at its own expense, and maintain armed in the forts which said company has or may have hereafter, the one hundred men who are considered necessary; the whole to be under your lordship's orders for the purpose indicated, the accomplishment of which your lordship shall have to watch with the greatest care.

3d. That all the duties on imports and exports shall be reduced, for the present, to six per cent., as your lordship and the intendant have proposed, both taking care, with the greatest exactness possible, to observe and lay before his Majesty, at the end of the first year, the results which are expected from so munificent a disposition.

Finally, that your lordship give to understand to all the magnitude of these concessions, and the immense benefits which the sovereign munificence has condescended to accumulate in the treaty of amity, limits and navigation; benefits which are of reciprocal utility to his beloved subjects, to the United States, and to the Indian nations allied and friendly to the two contracting parties; and that your lordship shall so order, that all the important objects which are expected from these dispositions shall be duly executed. All which I do communicate to your lordship, by order of his Majesty, for your intelligence and for their execution.

I forward the same to you for your satisfaction and government.

May God have you in his keeping many years.

NEW ORLEANS, November 5, 1796.

Under date of the 3d instant, the intendant of these provinces writes to me what follows:

"The meaning which I give to the article in the royal order of the 11th June of this year, upon which Don Santyago Clamorgan, director of the Spanish company of discoveries to the westward of the Missouri, has founded the demand which your lordship has been pleased to enclose in your official note of 31st ultimo, is, that the cost of arming, and the maintenance of the one hundred men whom the company wants for the forts it has or may have hereafter, must be on its own account, and in this opinion, besides the literal interpretation of said article, to wit, the permission that the company may arm at its own expense, and maintain armed, &c., I am, moreover, confirmed, 1st, by the circumstance of the permission of arming having ever been granted, for, it appears to me that, had it been intended to be on the King's account, it would only have been necessary to notify that the one hundred men were to be furnished to the company; 2d, by said royal order not mentioning any sum, as it would have been indispensable in order to enable the royal treasury to make the disbursement; and, finally, by his Majesty not having appropriated funds for this no small expenditure, which cannot be supported by his royal coffers in this province, particularly in their present state of scarcity and embarrassment, without being deprived of the means necessary to maintain the troops, the civil officers, the squadron of galleys, the works at Pensacola, and other extraordinary contingencies which occur every day. In consequence of all this, I find myself under the obligation to oppose the delivery of the said sum of ten thousand dollars, and to beg of your lordship, that, in case my reasons should not appear well founded, to consult his Majesty on this matter, and in order that, by his royal declaration, I shall be sheltered from the responsibility which would result to me were I to accede to the demand of Mr. Clamorgan on the terms he has established it."

I transmit the same to you for your knowledge and government.

May God have you in his keeping many years.

I see no objection to your levying in the country of Illinois the one hundred militia-men whom his Majesty has granted for the forts of the Missouri company, but I cannot answer for the reimbursement of the ten thousand dollars, because it depends on his Majesty's decision, although I am confident that when he sees my representation he will order it to be made, since I have solicited and supported the same.

It is all I have at present to answer to your official letter on this subject.

SIR: I have received the letter you directed to me under date of the 15th of last April.

Your claim is accompanied by the best reasons possible, and would not suffer any difficulties, were it not for the obligation I am under to take all the sureties necessary to the responsibility of my place, in order to justify, in the clearest manner, the extraordinary use made of the funds confided to me by his Majesty. Therefore, I have written on this subject to Mr. Dehault Delassus, and according to the explicit answer which I expect of him, I will order what shall appear to me most advisable.

Under date of April 5 of this current year, the governor general, Baron de Carondelet, writes to me as follows:

"I have read your official note dated 11th of last March, in which you state the motives which have induced you to grant to Mr. Clamorgan the tract of land situated between the two rivers Charette and Cuivre, both emptying into the Mississippi; also sixty arpens to the north and sixty arpens to the south of said rivers, which serve to determine the situation of said land, having the Mississippi in front. Two parallel lines are to be drawn, running in the interior of the country until they reach at the distance of two hundred arpens beyond the foot of the first hills, conformably to the solicitation of the party interested. All which I do approve, Clamorgan having deserved this favor from the government."

I transmit the same to you for your knowledge and government.

James Clamorgan, claiming 500,000 arpens.

No.	Name of original claimant.	Arpens.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
152	James Clamorgan.	Not ascertained.	Concession, March 3d, 1797.	Z. Trudeau.	On Cuivre and Dardenne, on the Mississippi.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

November 14, 1811.—Board met. Present: John B. C. Lucas, Clement B. Penrose, and Frederick Bates, commissioners.

James Clamorgan, claiming 500,000 arpens of land, situate on rivers Mississippi, Dardenne, and Cuivre, district of St. Charles. Produces a concession from Zenon Trudeau, L. G., dated 3d March, 1797; also, four letters to claimant from Zenon Trudeau, Juan Ventura Morales, and Baron de Carondelet.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed.

James Clamorgan, claiming 60 arpens, front on the Mississippi, Chorette, and Dardenne, back to the hills, about 200 arpens, district of St. Charles. Produces same concession and papers as in the preceding claim.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed.

James Clamorgan, claiming 60 arpens of land, front on the Mississippi, commencing above the mouth of Cuivre, up the Mississippi, and back to the hills. Produces same concession and papers as in the foregoing claim.

It is the opinion of the board that this claim ought not to be confirmed. (See minutes, No. 5, page 417.)

June 21, 1833.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: A. G. Harrison and F. R. Conway, commissioners.

James Clamorgan, by his legal representatives, claiming a tract of land on the Cuivre and Dardenne;

Produces in evidence six letters, purporting to be original letters from Baron de Carondelet to James Clamorgan; also, a certificate of James Mackay, and one of Charles Sanguinette, both sworn to before a magistrate; also, a paper purporting to be a translation from Spanish into French of a letter from Baron de Carondelet to Clamorgan, translated by M. P. Leduc, and certified by him to have been so translated from the original letter in the proper handwriting of the said Carondelet; also, a paper purporting to be a receipt from Risdon H. Price for two original letters from Baron de Carondelet to James Clamorgan.

M. P. Leduc, duly sworn, says that the signatures to the six above-mentioned letters are in the proper handwriting of Baron de Carondelet, and that the translation here above produced, is a faithful translation made by him from the original letter written in Spanish, in the proper handwritiug of said Baron de Carondelet.

L. E. Lawless, agent of claimants, being duly sworn, says that the two original letters described in the receipt were delivered by him to said R. H. Price, on the day of the date of said receipt signed by said Price. To the best of deponent's belief, the concession, as recorded, was, at same date, in the possession of said Price, and that said Price is at present out of this State. Deponent further thinks that said documents have remained in the possession of said Price, and are now out of the reach of the present claimants. Deponent further states that said Price obtained said documents for the purpose of laying the same before Congress, in order to obtain the confirmation of said claim. (See minutes, book No. 6, page 179.)

June 29, 1833.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: L. F. Linn and F. R. Conway, commissioners.

In the case of James Clamorgan, claiming lands on Cuivre and Dardenne, (see page 179, No. 6,) the following testimony was taken:

Pascal Cerré, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that he was well acquainted with Charles Sanguinette, sr., who died some twelve or fifteen years ago; that he was a man of probity, and in every way to be relied on; likewise he was a man of considerable property. The deponent further states that he was acquainted with James Mackay, and that he was a man of respectability and property; that, about forty years since, Mackay made a voyage of discovery and trading up the Missouri river. The deponent knows the outfit was made at Clamorgan's house, and believes that Mackay was concerned and interested with Clamorgan in the enterprise.

Jesse Richardson, being duly sworn, says that he is 57 years of age; that he has lived in the now State of Missouri, and in that vicinity, since 1799. This deponent says he knew James Clamorgan, deceased, and always understood, among the old inhabitants of the country, that the said Clamorgan had been in the employment of the Spanish government, and that the Spanish government was largely indebted to said Clamorgan, and that by way of remunerating said Clamorgan for his services, and compensating him for what the government owed him, large grants of land were made to said Clamorgan, particularly a large tract lying on the Mississippi, and on the rivers Dardenne and Cuivre. This tract was looked upon by the old inhabitants under the Spanish government, as said Clamorgan's property. Deponent says that he knew James Mackay; he was a man of probity and of high standing under the Spanish government. Charles Sanguinette, deceased, was a man of good reputation, and this affiant believes that the statements of said Mackay and Sanguinette are entitled to full credit, any statements they made in relation to this claim, or on any other subjects.

Question by commissioners. Do you know the quantity and boundaries of said tract?

Answer. I do not know the boundaries of said tract. I understood it was very large, embracing a great portion of the lands lying in the fork of the Missouri and Mississippi. This affiant has always heard the people expressing their fears that this claim would be confirmed, and deprive those settled on it of their possessions. This affiant understood the land was about 500,000 arpens; that it lies on the Mississippi, extending from above the mouth of the Cuivre to below the mouth of the Dardenne and back, for quantity.

Question by commissioners. Did you ever hear of this claim spoken of as fraudulent?

Answer. Never; but on the contrary. I always understood that it was made to Clamorgan, to pay him what the Spanish government owed him as a reward for his services. I never heard any person who was interested against this claim pretend that it was fraudulent, or any person whatever.

Question by commissioners. Have you any interest in this claim?

Answer. No. I have feared that it would interfere with a claim I have, not confirmed, but, on inquiry, I believe there is no danger. (See minutes, No. 6, page 205.)

July 16, 1833.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: L. F. Linn and F. R. Conway, commissioners.

In the case of James Clamorgan, claiming land on Cuivre and Dardenne. (See page 179 of this book, No. 6.)

Jean Elie Tholozan, being duly sworn, says that he believes it was about the year 1816, that he gave to Risdon H. Price the concession and all the papers he had in his possession relating to this claim, in order to have said claim presented to Congress for confirmation; that he has heard that said Price is now out of this State, and does not know where those papers are, and neither to whom to apply for them. (See No. 6, page 234.)

September 26, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, and F. H. Martin, commissioners.

In the case of James Clamorgan, claiming land on Dardenne and Cuivre. (See book No. 6, pages 179 and 234.)

The board are unanimously of opinion that this claim ought not to be confirmed, believing it to have been disregarded by both Trudeau, the lieutenant governor, who made the grant, and by his successor, Delassus. For a full opinion and notice of interferences, see the report of the board to commissioner of the General Land Office. (See book No. 7, p. 249.)

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1341. [1ST SESSION.

APPLICATION OF MISSOURI FOR AN EXTENSION OF THE RIGHT OF PRE-EMPTION TO CERTAIN SETTLERS IN THAT STATE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 16, 1835.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the general assembly of the State of Missouri, would respectfully present for your consideration, the propriety of further extending the laws relative to pre-emption rights, so as to include all persons who have, or may settle on any unappropriated lands belonging to the United States. Such is the condition of the new States having public lands lying within their limits, that we deem such an extension not only proper, but just and necessary to the harmony and prosperity of their citizens. It is well known that these States receive annually a large emigration; and the surveyed lands bearing but a small proportion to those which are unsurveyed, and the best of those which have been in market having been selected, it necessarily happens that emigrants must and will settle upon such as are good and valuable, whether they have been surveyed or not. This is a result unavoidable, from the circumstances mentioned, and it would be unreasonable, under such a state of things, to expect any other consequence. Besides, a vast number of our citizens have settled on the public lands under the belief that so soon as the lands should be brought into market, they would be entitled to a pre-emption right, and have, consequently, gone on to make fine and valuable improvements on the lands upon which they have settled. Believing, as we do, that it comports with the spirit of our government and its institutions, that such measures in relation to the public lands should be adopted as will be calculated to afford to the citizens of the country, upon easy and generous terms, the means of getting homes for themselves and families; and that it was never contemplated that these lands should be made a matter of speculation by the government, we earnestly recommend that the generosity which has hitherto been shown to such as have settled on lands that have been in market, will be extended to all those who have, or hereafter may settle upon such lands as are unappropriated, of whatever character they may be. And, as the best of these lands which have been in market have been selected, and none but such as are of an inferior quality remain unsold, it is respectfully recommended that the price of the latter description be graduated to its corresponding value. If such were the case, they would soon be in the hands of industrious citizens, and brought into a state of cultivation, and the State receive the benefit of taxes, which would arise from their being in the possession of private individuals. We, therefore, respectfully pray for the passage of a law, giving to actual settlers on all unappropriated lands, a pre-emption right to one quarter-section of land to every person who has, or may hereafter settle on said lands, to extend until the year one thousand eight hundred and forty; and, also, there are many poor, but meritorious citizens, who have settled on these lands. We would further pray that they be allowed the indulgence of five years, from and after the time of settling on said lands, the right to enter the same, in quantities not exceeding one quarter-section each, upon the condition, that if in that time such person should not enter the same, that the lands so settled upon, together with the improvements which they may have made on the same, shall be liable to entry as other public lands.

Approved, January 27, 1835.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1342. [1ST SESSION.

APPLICATION OF MISSOURI FOR A GRANT OF 500,000 ACRES OF LAND, FOR PURPOSES OF EDUCATION.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 16, 1835.

A Memorial to Congress for Land.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled:

The general assembly of Missouri represent that they are very desirous of establishing in this State a good system of common schools, so as to render the opportunity of education co-extensive with the State. They are aware that the information of the people is the best security of republican government. The State is, as yet, too young and embarrassed to raise the requisite funds by taxation. The United States have granted to several of the new States, particularly to Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, large quantities of the public lands for public purposes; and the General Assembly presume that Congress intends placing the State of Missouri on an equality with the other States. They therefore ask that a grant of five hundred thousand acres of the public lands be made to the State of Missouri, for the purposes of education generally, so as to enable the assembly to raise a fund to be devoted to the purposes of common schools throughout the State.

JOHN JAMESON, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

APPLICATION OF MISSOURI FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A NEW LAND DISTRICT IN THAT STATE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 16, 1835.

To the Congress of the United States:

Your memorialists, the legislature of Missouri, would respectfully represent, that much inconvenience is sustained by a great number of its citizens for the want of an additional land office; the present offices are so remotely situate from each other, that purchasers undergo considerable expense and trouble in purchasing their lands. Your memorialists therefore pray Congress to establish a new land district, bounded as follows, (to wit:) beginning at a point on the Missouri river, where the range line between ranges eight and nine strikes the same; thence south with said range line, to a point where the said line intersects the township line between townships thirty-eight and thirty-nine; thence west with said township line to the range line between ranges twenty-three and twenty-four; thence north along said range line to the Missouri river; thence down the middle of the main channel thereof to the beginning; and the land office be as near the centre of the district as practicable.

APPLICATION OF ARKANSAS FOR A DONATION OF LAND TO SETTLERS WHO WERE REMOVED BY THE TREATY WITH THE CHOCTAW INDIANS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, DECEMBER 16, 1835.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the general assembly of the Territory of Arkansas, respectfully represents to your honorable body that, by the treaty of the general government and the Choctaw Indians, the settlers in the ceded country, by order of the then Secretary of War, were required to remove from it. In obedience with the order, a large and respectable number of the citizens of this Territory immediately quit their country, and surrendered their homes and farms to the Indians, and sought other homes for themselves and children in the wilderness. As a remuneration for their losses thus sustained, we humbly pray your honorable body to pass a law giving to each settler so removed from the lands ceded to the Choctaws, a donation of one quarter-section of land, to be located on any of the unappropriated lands of the United States in this Territory. Your honorable body cannot but bear in mind that those settlers who resisted the power of the government, and were removed by force, have already received a donation of three hundred and twenty acres of land, while those who removed quietly, and in obedience with the will and orders of the government, are left to sue for a much smaller and more righteous remuneration.

JOHN WILSON, Speaker of the House of Representatives.
CHAS. CALDWELL, President of the Legislative Council.

Approved, November 3, 1835.

APPLICATION OF ARKANSAS FOR A PROVISION FOR RECLAIMING ALLUVIAL LANDS IN THAT STATE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 16, 1835.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

The petition of your memorialists, the general assembly of the Territory of Arkansas, would respectfully represent to your honorable body that there are vast bodies of alluvial lands in the bottoms of the Mississippi and Arkansas rivers, which are now subject to annual or occasional inundations, the draining of which they would respectfully recommend to your honorable body as entirely practicable and expedient. The accomplishment of this magnificent project will be attended with results important both to our Territory and to the United States; to the Territory of Arkansas, both in point of wealth and health; and to the general government, by immediately pouring into the national treasury an immense revenue. We would beg leave further to represent, that a levee on the west bank of the Mississippi river, from the Louisiana line to the mouth of the Arkansas, and continuing on the south bank of the last-mentioned river to the Pine Bluffs, a total distance of 300 miles; and a levee also on the north bank of the Arkansas river, commencing at Gordon's bayou, and continuing up said river a distance of about 150 miles, would reclaim at least 1,500 acres of land. The distance from the line of Louisiana to the mouth of the Arkansas is about 120 miles; from the mouth of the Arkansas to the Pine Bluffs, 180 miles; from Gordon's Bayou to a point opposite Pine Bluffs on the north bank of the Arkansas, 150 miles. It is also computed that the cost will be about $500 per mile, which, for the whole distance of 450 miles, will be $225,000. The country thus to be reclaimed would be one of the finest cotton countries on earth, and meet with immediate sale, which at the government price would place in the Treasury the sum of $2,750,000. Without enlarging upon these data, your memorialists believe that some action will be had on the subject by Congress; and your memorialists, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

APPLICATION OF ARKANSAS FOR LAND FOR ROAD FROM FORT SMITH TO THE SOUTHWEST CORNER OF THAT TERRITORY, AND FOR PUBLIC BUILDINGS AT THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 16, 1835.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States assembled:

Your memorialists, the general assembly of the Territory of Arkansas, most respectfully represent that the continuation of a road shortly to be completed by the United States, terminating at Fort Smith, from that point along the western boundary of the Territory to the southwest corner thereof, would be alike advantageous to the government and Territory. Fort Smith is already a point conspicuous for its importance to the general government, its situation, immediately at the crossing of Arkansas river, gives to it such advantages as will one day make it necessary that that point should be owned and rebuilt by the United States; a road therefrom connecting the south with this point cannot fail to be an object worthy of attention. Your memorialists therefore request that such steps be taken, and such appropriations made, as will cause the proposed road to be opened, and as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the general assembly of the Territory of Arkansas respectfully represents to your honorable body, that by the act of Congress, approved on the 2d March, 1831, entitled an act granting a quantity of land to the Territory of Arkansas, for the erection of a public building at the seat of government of said Territory, ten sections of the unappropriated public land in the Territory of Arkansas were granted to the said Territory for the purpose of raising a fund for the erection of a public building at Little Rock, the seat of government. And that the said lands have been disposed of and a public building commenced. Your memorialists represent that the said fund is insufficient for the purpose of completing said building, and that unless the Congress of the United States will make a further appropriation for the purpose of completing said public building, the work will be entirely useless to the Territory. Your memorialists therefore respectfully request your honorable body to make a further appropriation of ten sections of the public lands within the said Territory, for the purpose of completing said public building; and your memorialists, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

APPLICATION OF ARKANSAS THAT CAPT. HENRY M. SHREEVE MAY BE ALLOWED TO ENTER SIX SECTIONS OF LAND IN THE RAFT OF RED RIVER FOR RECLAIMING THE SAME.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 16, 1835.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the general assembly of Arkansas Territory, would respectfully state that a distinguished officer in the engineer department of the United States, Capt. Henry M. Shreeve, has petitioned of your honorable body the right to enter six sections of land at government price, in the great Raft on Red river, now inundated by water, that may be reclaimed hereafter by his labor. Your memorialists, impelled by a sense of the high obligation due this distinguished officer for the many inestimable services he has already rendered to this Territory in removing the obstructions in its rivers, and those we expect to receive, would respectfully ask your honorable body to take into consideration his petition, and would urge, in behalf of his claim, if individual services and the invention of useful machinery should ever entitle one to call on the munificence of his country, Capt. Shreeve assuredly deserves this privilege. Your memorialists are perfectly apprized that this government has always deprecated the principle of bestowing gifts on its public officers; but your memorialists conceive this to be an extraordinary exception to the general rule, and could say, without the fear of contradiction, that the many obstacles which present themselves to the safe navigation of the Mississippi river, and which once proved so destructive both to human life and property, by the ingenuity of this individual has been entirely removed, and the wealth and commerce of five millions of people now proudly floats with safety and ease upon its expanded bosom. Your memorialists would further say, that the petition in question does not ask for a donation of land, but a mere right to enter six sections of land at government price, which may be reclaimed by the labor of the petitioner; which land is now, and ever would remain, useless to the government, if it was not for the enterprise and ingenuity of this individual; an undertaking once thought to be the mere idle speculation of the theorist, we now see almost in a state of completion, under the superintendence of your petitioners, a consummation of which will throw thousands of dollars in the Treasury of the Union. A petition like this, so deeply founded in justice, and so reasonable in its request, induces your memorialists in duty bound ever to pray.

NUMBER OF SPANISH CLAIMS TO LAND DEPENDING IN THE COURTS OF FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 16, 1835.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 9, 1835.

SIR: In compliance with a resolution of the House of Representatives, dated the 23d February last, directing the Secretary of the Treasury "to report to the House, at its next session, the number of Spanish claims to land in Florida now depending in the courts of that territory, under the act of Congress of 1828, the amount of land claimed, the nature of the claim, and by whom granted, with a schedule of those made by the same officers and for the same objects, of those confirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States, and whether the lands covered by those titles are reserved from survey, or sufficiently designated to be laid down on the township plats:"

I have the honor to submit copies of letters from this department, addressed to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and to R. K. Call, esq., assistant counsel of the United States, employed under the authority of the act of the 23d May, 1828, together with their respective reports upon the several heads of inquiry, and which contain all the information thereon, in the possession of the department.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. SPEAKER of the House of Representatives.

No. A.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 11, 1835.

SIR: I enclose a copy of a resolution of the House of Representatives, dated the 23d ult., requiring certain information in relation to claims, arising under the act of May, 1828; and have to call your attention to that part of the resolution inquiring whether the lands covered by titles, similar to those which have been confirmed by the Supreme Court, are reserved from survey, or sufficiently designated to be laid down on the plats of survey, so that it may be in your power to furnish the information in season, to enable the department to comply with the resolution. General Call, the assistant counsel of the United States, has been requested to furnish the necessary information, to enable the department to answer the other heads of inquiry embraced in the resolution.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

COMMISSIONER of the General Land Office.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 11, 1835.

SIR: As the assistant counsel for the United States, in the defence of claims arising under the act of 1828, I have herewith enclosed a resolution of the House of Representatives, dated the 23d ultimo, requiring this department to report certain information, in regard to the number, quantity and character of the claims arising under that act; and have to request that you will prepare and submit to the department, in time to enable it to comply with the resolution, a statement exhibiting the information required. In describing the character or nature of the claim, you will report your opinion, whether it comes within the purview of those already decided or confirmed by the Supreme Court.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

R. K. CALL, Esq., Washington.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 14, 1835.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 11th instant, covering a copy of the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 23d ultimo, respecting the Spanish claims to land in Florida, now depending in the courts of the Territory, under the act of Congress of 1828, and requesting a report upon so much of that resolution as requires information "whether the lands covered by those titles are reserved from survey, or sufficiently designated to be laid down on the township plats," and beg leave to report:

That as this office has no knowledge of the particular claims now depending in the courts of Florida, it is not in my power to say whether the lands embraced thereby have, or have not, been surveyed, or whether the title papers, under which they are held, give such descriptions of the precise localities and boundaries of the claims, as would allow of their being laid down on the township plats, without an actual survey in each case, connecting the boundaries of the claim with the township and sectional lines of the public surveys.

In reference to the unconfirmed claims in Florida, generally, it is proper, perhaps, to state the following facts:

The land offices in that Territory were established by the act of the 3d of March, 1823, (Land Laws, page 841,) and the lands are, by the 10th section, directed to be offered for sale in the same manner, and with the same reservations and exceptions, and on the same terms and conditions, in every respect, as the other public lands of the United States. To ascertain, therefore, what lands were thus reserved and excepted from sale, it becomes necessary to look at the preceding legislation in respect to those parts of the country over which Spain and other foreign powers have, at different times, exercised jurisdiction. By reference to the act of the 3d March, 1811, (Land Laws, p. 586,) which established the offices at New Orleans, Opelousas, Ouachita, and St. Louis, it will be seen by the proviso to the 10th section, that, until the decision of Congress thereon, no tract of land can be offered for sale, the claim to which had been, in due time and according to law, presented to the proper officers authorized to receive and act upon the notices of such claims. And by the 3d section of the act of the 17th February, 1818, (Land Laws, p. 720,) it will be seen that the same provision is made applicable to the claims in the land districts in Missouri and Arkansas created by that law.

Under these provisions of law, it is conceived that no lands can be sold in Florida, the claims to which have been, in due time and according to law, filed with the proper officers, for the purpose of being investigated, until the decision of Congress thereon.

With respect, however, to those claims in Florida, over 3,500 acres, which were not reported against, special provision is made in the 12th section of the act of the 8th February, 1827, (Land Laws, p. 928,) by authorizing the holders thereof to furnish, within a limited time, to the surveyor general of the Territory, such information as would enable him to exhibit them with accuracy upon the township maps, and by directing their reservation from sale. Under this section, the instructions contained in the enclosed paper, marked No. 1, were given to the surveyor general of Florida, on the 26th February, 1827.

In consequence of your having referred to this office, on the 23d of October last, a letter to you from General R. K. Call, of the 11th of that month, suggesting the propriety of reserving from the approaching sales at St. Augustine, those lands which had been surveyed as public property, but were held under Spanish titles, which have not been finally rejected, with an endorsement thereon, stating that the department approved of his suggestion, and requiring the necessary instructions to be given to the land officers upon the subject,—the necessary orders were given to them on the 25th of October last. Copies of those letters are herewith enclosed, marked 2, 3, and 4.

As the assistant counsel on the part of the United States, to whom will be referred for a report the other clauses of the resolution, resides at the same place as the surveyor general for the Territory, and can readily have access to the plats of all the surveys which have been made in Florida, I would most respectfully beg leave to suggest, that as he will thus have the means of ascertaining "whether the lands covered by these titles are reserved from survey, or sufficiently designated to be laid down on the township plats," his request should also furnish the desired information on those points.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

No. 1.

Extract of a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, to Robert Butler, esq., surveyor general, &c., Tallahassee, Florida, dated February 26, 1827.

SIR: I now have the satisfaction to transmit a paper containing a copy of the act to provide for the confirmation and settlement of private land claims in East Florida, and for other purposes.

You will perceive, that the 7th and subsequent sections of this bill provide for the surveying and connecting with the township lines, the private confirmed claims, and for designating on the township plats the unconfirmed claims over 3,500 acres, which have been filed with the commissioners. The 7th section of this act has invested you with extensive powers and very responsible duties, both executive and judicial, and for the due execution of which it will be indispensably necessary that you commit the surveying and laying down of the private claims, only to your most experienced and judicious deputies, in the fidelity and judgment of whom you have the most implicit confidence.

No. 2.

TALLAHASSEE, October 11, 1834.

SIR: I have received a letter from one of the claimants of land in East Florida, complaining that the lands advertised to be sold in that district, in December next, include a large quantity of land claimed by individuals, under grants from the Spanish government, some of which have been confirmed, but which have not been surveyed, owing to absence or non-residence of the claimants at the time the public surveys were made. I am inclined to believe this is the case in many instances, and should these lands be sold by the government it may give rise to great embarrassment.

To avoid the inconvenience, I would respectfully suggest that the register and receiver of that district may be instructed to withhold from sale any lands which they may have reason to believe covered by grants to individuals, which have not been finally rejected.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant, R. K. CALL.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Copy of the endorsement on the above letter.

"The department approves the suggestion made by General Call, and refers this letter to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, that the proper instructions may be given.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE.

SIR: Your letter of the 11th instant, to the Secretary of the Treasury, respecting the propriety of withholding from sale certain lands in East Florida, which are represented upon the township plats as public property, having been referred to this office, I enclose herewith, for your information, a copy of my letter of this date to the land offices at St. Augustine, directing them to reserve those lands from sale.

I am, very respectfully, &c., &c.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, October 25, 1834.

GENTLEMEN: It having been represented to this office, that some of the land claims in your district which have been confirmed, are not represented upon the township plats; and the unconfirmed claims which were, in due time, and according to law, presented to the officers authorized by law to receive the evidence in support of private claims and to decide therein, being by law reserved from sale until the final decision of Congress thereon; you are hereby required to withhold from entry, all such tracts of land represented upon the township plats as public property, as you may be satisfied, either by an examination of the records and documents in your office, or by the evidence of credible persons, are included in the limits of any confirmed claims, or of any unconfirmed claim, the title to which was in due time and according to law, filed with the commissioners, or the register and receiver, for the purpose of being investigated; marking the boundaries of such claims upon the township maps, by pencil lines, as accurately as practicable.

At the close of each month, you will forward to this office an abstract of the lands reserved under this order, specifying the name of the claimant in each case, and giving the necessary references to the claims, as entered in the reports of the commissioners, or of the register and receiver.

I am, very respectfully,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

SIR: From the enclosed copy of a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, you will perceive that the Land Office is not in possession of the information necessary to enable me to comply with the last clauses of the resolution transmitted with my letter of the 11th instant. I must, therefore, rely on your exertions to obtain all the information embraced by the call.

BALTIMORE, November 4, 1835.

SIR: I have the honor herewith to enclose my report on the land claims of Florida, made in pursuance to your letter of the 11th March last. You will find it voluminous and dull in in its details, but it will give you a faithful description of the claims now depending in court, and will inform you of the manner in which similar claims have been disposed of by the court. I regret very much, that I am compelled to send it to you in so rude a form, but the indisposition of one of my children renders it necessary I should hasten to the South, and I have not time to make out a fair copy. You will, therefore, I hope, excuse the original draft with all its imperfections. I believe, however, you will find it correct in all its details.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

To the Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury:

SIR: In obedience to the instructions contained in your letter of the 11th of March, enclosing a copy of a resolution adopted by Congress, on the 23d of February last, requiring me, as the assistant counsel of the United States, to render a statement exhibiting the number, quantity, and character of the land claims now depending in the courts of Florida, and requesting me to state whether, in my opinion, they are embraced by the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, given in similar cases, I have the honor to submit the following report:

In the superior court for the district of East Florida, held at St. Augustine, there are now depending, including those which have been argued, and submitted for decision, sixty cases, in which actions have been brought by individuals against the government, to establish titles to land. Those several cases embrace the quantity of one million one hundred and eight thousand three hundred and ninety acres. In addition to these, there are eighteen cases in which petitions have been filed in that court, but which have not yet been placed on the docket for trial, presenting claims for land to the amount of thirty-three thousand nine hundred and twenty-six acres.

In the superior court, for the same district, held at Jacksonville, there are fourteen cases depending, in which are claimed thirty thousand three hundred and ninety-six acres of land.

In the Southern Judicial District there are two claims, amounting to upward of one hundred thousand acres (100,000). In these cases, decrees have been rendered against the government, and appeals will be prosecuted to the Supreme Court of the United States.

In the western and middle districts, there is one case depending to establish the title to an island in the river Appalachicola, presented as a gratuity, by the Creek and Seminole Indians, to John Forbes, in the year 1811. This river being the boundary between the two districts, the petitioners brought their suit in both, and by agreement of counsel, it has remained on the docket, to abide the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Colin Mitchell and others vs. the United States.

In order to comply more effectually with the instructions contained in your letter, and the resolution of Congress, I have divided the claims into classes, and arranged them in different abstracts, on each of which I shall present a brief report.

The prefixed abstract, No. 1, contains a list of claims under what are denominated mill grants. If these grants were intended to convey the land to the claimants, which, from their phraseology, is at least an exceedingly doubtful proposition, it was on the condition precedent, of constructing a water saw-mill. In only three of these cases, those of John Breward, John W. Low, and Horatio Dexter, have the conditions been performed. They are generally for sixteen thousand acres each, a quantity so great, when compared with the limited and parsimonious concessions made on conditions of habitation and cultivation, in the absence of all authority to support them, it is difficult to resist the conviction, that they were not designed to convey a title to the land, but a mere usufruct for the enjoyment of the timber, or that they were made in violation of the laws and usages of the Spanish government. That they were intended only to confer the privilege of erecting a water saw-mill, and of using the pine trees on a certain quantity of land, is, I think, rendered manifest, not only by the terms in which those grants are expressed, but by the continued and universal usage of the Spanish government during the whole period of its existence in East Florida. For although the concessions for this purpose commenced as early as the year 1793, yet not a single instance is to be found in which one of them was confirmed by the Spanish authorities, and the land conveyed in fee simple to the grantees. In support of this fact, I beg leave to refer you to the report of the register and receiver, acting as land commissioners, on mill grants hereunto annexed, marked C, and the testimony of Antonio Alvarez, keeper of the public archives, marked D. Mr. Alvarez has been employed in one of the offices of the archives of the province, since the year 1807, has an intimate knowledge of the documents, and the usage and custom of the government, and from his general intelligence on the subject of the land titles of the country, he has been frequently examined as witness by both parties, in the cases now depending in court. In the case of Zephaniah Kingsley, claiming sixteen thousand acres of land under one of those concessions, the witness was asked in the fourth interrogatory, "Do you know of a single instance where a concession was made upon condition of building a saw-mill, that was followed up by a royal title? If you do, please state the case, and annex a copy of such royal title and concession." To this the witness answers, "No." In the fifth interrogatory, the witness is asked to examine his office, and see if there is any such royal title to be found in it, and if there is not, to state the fact. To this he answers, "There are none." Now here is a whole class of cases, embracing a quantity of land nearly equal to the entire amount confirmed by the Spanish government to individuals, and yet the archives of the country furnishes no precedent for the confirmation of one of them. If during the whole period, from the year 1793 until the year 1821, none of these grants were confirmed, does it not offer a strong argument in favor of the proposition, that if Florida had remained under the dominion of Spain, that they never would have been confirmed. The quantity of land claimed under these several mill grants, amounts in the aggregate to three hundred and twelve thousand six hundred acres, while the whole amount confirmed to grantees for habitation and cultivation, the paramount object of the laws and ordinances of Spain, from the 29th day of October, 1790, until the year 1821, was only one hundred and seventy-nine thousand nine hundred and twenty-seven and a half acres, as will fully appear from the document marked A, herewith exhibited, and to which I beg leave to call your attention. It is signed by the keeper of the public archives, and presents an abstract of all the real or royal titles given by the Spanish government under the royal order of 1790. The quantity of land contained in each of these grants will be found worthy of consideration. It will go far to prove the conformity of the usage and custom of the province, with the laws of the Indies, and the royal order of 1790, which authorized the granting of lands to individuals, in proportion to their ability to cultivate and improve them, and on the condition of habitation and cultivation. Until the year 1816, the largest grant ever confirmed by the Spanish authorities to any individual, for any purpose, was for three thousand two hundred and seventy-five acres, as will fully appear from the two documents marked A and B, containing a list of all the confirmed grants, and from the testimony of Antonio Alvarez, taken in the case of Benjamin Charis. In his answer to the third interrogatory, he says, "The largest quantity of land confirmed by a royal (real) title, previous to the year 1816, was to John McQueen, a copy of which is hereunto annexed." This grant will be found in the document marked D, and contains the quantity before mentioned of three thousand two hundred and seventy-five acres.

On the 6th day of April, 1816, Governor Coppinger confirmed to George J. F. Clark a grant for 16,000 acres of land, as a reward for a valuable invention which he professed to have accomplished, in the construction of a saw-mill to be propelled by animal power. This appears to have been the first departure from the established usage of the province, and the first violation of the laws and ordinances of Spain. It was the commencement of that system of extravagance and prodigality in the exercise of the granting power, which characterized the administration of Governor Coppinger, and which continued to increase from that period until the surrender of the province to the United States, on the 10th day of July, 1821. It may not be uninteresting to examine the abstracts marked A and B, and discover in what numbers, and for what large quantities, grants were confirmed from the year 1816, until the month of June, 1821. It will be found, by this examination, that near ten times the quantity was granted within that short period, which had been disposed of previously from the year 1790. This sudden and extraordinary change in the practice of Governor Coppinger, might seem to justify the belief that there had been a corresponding change in the law regulating the granting power. Such, however, was not the case. The laws of the Indies, the royal orders of 1790 and 1815, and the local regulations predicated on those authorities, remained in full force, unchanged and unrepealed, as is fully shown by the testimony of Alvarez, taken in open court, in the case of Villalobus and Fergues, and where the witness was asked, "Are you acquainted with all the royal titles granted by the Spanish governors of this province, for land to individuals?"

And answered, "All the royal titles exist in my office. I am acquainted with them in that way. I know they are all in my office."

"Were not all the royal titles granted under the royal orders of 1790 and 1815?" To this he answered, "Yes."

"Were not the regulations of Governor White in force in this province, from their publication in 1803, until the transfer of the province to the United States?" To this he answered, "Yes."

Again, in the case of John W. Low, the same witness was asked, in the second interrogatory, to state particularly whether all the grants or concessions of land in East Florida, made since 1790, were not made under either one or the other of the royal orders of 1790 and 1815, and if not, under what royal order were they made? To this interrogatory, the witness answered, "I believe that all the grants of land made in East Florida since 1790, are founded upon the royal order, communicated to this government on the 29th of October, 1790, and the royal order of the 29th of March, 1815." The first of these royal orders will be found in Clark's Land Laws, page 996, and the second at page 1009–10. The regulations of Governor White, to which the last refers, and on which it is based, will be found at page 1001 of the Land Laws.

That these royal orders were in force, and that they constituted the only rule for making grants in the province, is abundantly shown by Governor Coppinger himself, even in the very acts by which he violated them. For in every title confirmed by him, from the commencement to the close of his administration, without one single exception, he writes one or the other of these royal orders, and refers to it as his authority for making the grant. Hence, it appears that although there was a manifest and most extraordinary change in the mode of exercise of the granting power, yet there was no change in the law. When we consider the time at which this change occurred—when we consider that Don Onis was commissioned to negotiate with this government for the cession of Florida, as early as the year 1816, it is a fair presumption, in the absence of any law to sustain these grants, that they were made in anticipation of the transfer of the country, and designed as a fraud on the government of the United States. This, however, in the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States, seems to constitute no objection to the validity of these grants. In the case of Clark, 8 Peters, we find the following remark: "It is stated that the practice of making large concessions, commenced with the intention of ceding the Floridas, and these grants have been treated as frauds on the United States." "The increased motives for making them, have been stated in argument, and their influence cannot be denied. But (say the court) admitting the charge to be well founded—admitting the Spanish government was more liberal in its cessions, after contemplating the cession, than before—ought this circumstance to affect bonafide titles to which the United States made no objection?" Now, with the most profound respect for the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States, I cannot admit that the proposition is correctly stated, or that the deduction is properly drawn from the premises. There is a vast difference, I conceive, between the liberality of the "Spanish government," and the unlawful and unauthorized acts of a Spanish governor, who thinks proper to transcend his power in making grants, because he perceives that the country is about to be transferred to a foreign government. The government of Spain, in the person of the King, possessing sovereign and unbounded power over the royal domain, had an undeniable right, in some instances, to exercise liberality in its disposal. While the governor of a province, acting under fixed and limited rules prescribed by law, could not go beyond the law for the purpose of being liberal, and if he did, all such grants made by him must be absolutely null and void.

In the case of Clark, when the governor, in making the grant, writes the royal order of 1790, in the usual form, the court seems to have regarded the recital as an immaterial fact, and to have considered the grant as not professing to have been made under that order. But the court appears not to have been aware of the fact, that it was customary, in issuing perfect titles to land, for the officer to write the authority on which the grant was made. If the court could have examined the two hundred and fifty-six cases found in the public archives, an abstract of which is contained in the document marked A, and have seen that in every case, whether the grant was made to a foreigner or native, the royal order of 1790 was recited as the authority for making the grant, I doubt not but that it would have arrived at a very different conclusion, and that the claim of Clark must have been rejected. In that case, at page 448, 8th Peters, the court observes, "it is too plain for argument, that if the validity of the grant depends on its being in conformity with the royal order of 1790, it cannot be supported." That all grants made in East Florida, except those for military services under the royal order of 1815, were made under the royal order of 1790, I have already shown by the testimony of Mr. Alvarez. This fact is further supported by the statement of the register and receiver acting as land commissioners In their report, at pages 22, 23, they observe, "that this order of 1790 relates entirely to foreigners who should take the oath of allegiance to the King, but as the number of acres prescribed by the laws of the Indies, to be given to each native-born subject of his Majesty, were intended evidently for the earliest infancy of a settlement, it became customary, as it was doubtless equitable, to grant to subjects of his Majesty the same number of acres as, by the royal order of 1790, was granted to foreigners."

An important fact was assumed in the case of Clark, which appears to have had great weight with the court, though in reality it never existed. It was contended that the governors of Florida made regular reports of their proceedings to their superior officer, to whom they were responsible. That the grants made by them were, therefore, known to the King, and from the fact thus assumed, an argument was founded that they were legally made and approved, because there was no evidence produced to show that they were disapproved by the Crown. That the court attached much importance to both the fact and the argument, is shown by the frequency with which they recur to them in delivering the opinion. At page 458, 8 Peters, the court observes, "The regular reports of the governors must have kept their superiors informed of their proceedings." Again, at page 464, they say, "If it be shown by the person holding the concession, that it was made by the officer authorized to grant lands, that it was the duty of this officer to give a regular account of his official transactions, that no grant ever made by the person thus intrusted, had ever been disapproved, courts ought to require very full proof that he had transcended his powers before they so decide. We do not think this full proof has been given in the present case" And again, at page 451, they say, "The connection between the Crown and the governor justify the presumption that he acts according to his orders. Should he disobey them his hopes are blasted, and he exposes himself to punishment." It would seem, from the opinion of the court, thus expressed, that the facts to which it alludes, were well established. Such, nevertheless, was not the case; there was no proof on the record, in the case of Clark, to sustain the position; and it is positively and conclusively disapproved by the testimony of Alvarez, who appears to have had a familiar and perfect knowledge of the proceedings of the governors of the province, since the year 1807. I beg leave, again, to refer you to the testimony of this intelligent witness, examined in the case of John Breward: it will be found in the document marked D, hereunto annexed. He is a native Spaniard, with all his feelings and prejudices enlisted in behalf of the claimants. But I believe his statements are faithfully given, and worthy of every consideration.

In the sixteenth interrogatory, the witness was asked "Did any of said governors ever undergo a residentia in said provinces, if yea, which of them and when?" To this he answers, "I know of no governor of East Florida who underwent any such residentia."

Seventeenth, "Did any of said governors ever render any account to the King, captain general, intendant of Cuba, or any other officer, of the land granted by him, except the single case of the exchange of lands for a vessel with John Russell?" To this he answers, "The governors of East Florida never rendered an account of the lands granted by them, except in the case of the exchange of four thousand acres of land for a schooner, with John Russell." The facts presented on the record in each of the mill grants, now depending in court, are so essentially different from those supposed to have existed in the cases heretofore decided, as to justify the belief that they will be rejected on a final adjudication.

There is another most objectionable feature presented in most of those mill grants, which my duty impels me to lay before you. These grants generally confer a right on the grantee to erect a water saw-mill on some stream designated in the grant, and to use the pine-trees on the adjacent land to the extent of five miles square. Now, if any land whatever can be taken under such a grant, it must be that contained in a square of five miles at the place designated. And yet most of these grants have been surveyed in four or five different tracts, many of them more than one hundred miles distant from each other, covering the best land to be found, instead of the pine forest designated in the grant, which was intended to supply timber for the saw-mill. These different surveys and locations were generally made by the public surveyor, without any order or decree of the governor making the grant. Surely it requires no argument to prove the absurdity of such claims, and yet they are gravely prosecuted in the courts of the Territory. Whether the lands embraced in these claims "are reserved from survey, or sufficiently designated to be laid down on the township plats," are matters on which I have no information.

With regard to these claims, it only remains for me, in obedience to the instructions contained in your letter of the 11th of March last, to add my opinion whether they come within the provision of those cases already decided by the Supreme Court of the United States. The case of Francisco Richard, reported in 8th Peters, was a mill grant for 16,000 acres of land. This grant was confirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States, and until that confirmation there was not an instance in the Territory of Florida, where land was held in fee simple, under a grant of that description. The case of Richard, however, differs materially from most of those now depending in court. In that case the condition of building the mill had been performed, and it was on this ground confirmed by the court. In all the remaining cases, except those of John W. Low, John Breward, and the heirs of Horatio Dexter, claiming 2,560 acres of land, the conditions of building a mill have not been complied with. In the case of the heirs of Dexter, the mill was built in 1801. It was destroyed in 1812, and has been since that time abandoned. These three cases may perhaps come within the principles settled by the court in the case of Richard; but the non-performance of the conditions in all the others, must, I conceive, exclude them from favorable consideration. The agent of the Duke of Alagon, in a letter to the governor of East Florida, on the subject of the land titles of that province, alluding to these mill grants, made the following remarks: "No royal order, nor the regulations, speak of the concession of lands for the establishment of foretoises, and much less for such as are treated of, which cannot offer any benefits to the public of this province."—(White's Compilation, 254.) This letter was referred by the governor to Savandia, the same officer of the crown, who, in reply, when speaking of cases of this description, where the conditions had not been performed, says, as "it is certain that many individuals who have obtained such concessions have remained inactive, without having for so long a time advanced the establishment of said works, it appears just that such concessions which have remained in inactivity, should be declared null and of no effect."

This was approved of by Governor Coppinger, in the following terms: "I conform to the foregoing opinion, and let it be complied with."—(White's Compilation, 257.)

Waiving the objection arising from the want of power in the governor to make such concessions, it would seem, from these proceedings, that, in all cases where the conditions were not performed, the grants were declared "null and of no effect" by the Spanish authorities. Such should be the result under our government.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. K. CALL.

Report on the cases contained in Abstract No. 2.

You will perceive from this abstract, and the remarks made on each of the claims which it contains, that, with a very few exceptions, none of the original title papers have been produced. and I may add, that their absence has in no manner been accounted for.

The counsel for the government have had recourse to the public archives, where those documents should have been deposited and preserved, and after the most diligent search and inquiry, no trace of them is to be found. For the practice of the Spanish government, in granting and preserving the evidence of titles to land in East Florida, I beg leave to refer you to the testimony of Antonio Alvarez. taken in the case of Elizabeth Wiggins, hereunto annexed, marked D, and an extract from the report of the register and receiver, acting as commissioners, marked E. These two documents, and the authorities to which they respectively refer, will give you a comprehensive view of the laws and ordinances of Spain, and the practice under them, in making grants of land in East Florida.

You will perceive that, in every case contained in this abstract, where the original title papers are not produced, the claim is presented under a concession, and not a perfect grant: and that in every case the copy of the concession offered in evidence is certified by the same person, Thomas de Aguilar. Alvarez states that all the original concessions made by the governors were deposited in the office of the secretary, whose duty it was at the time of making the concession to furnish a certified copy of it for the grantee. That this office was held from the year 1809 until 1821 by Thomas de Aguilar. That the original royal or real titles were signed by the governor, and deposited in the office of the escribano or notary of government, who, in like manner, furnished the grantee with a certified copy of his grant. Now, it is worthy of remark, that not a single instance has occurred in the investigation of the land claims of the country where a claimant has presented a copy of a grant certified by the escribano, in which the original grant was not found on examination in the public archives; and yet that so many and such important cases should be presented under the certified copies given by Thomas de Aguilar, for which no originals can be found. It has been attempted to explain this circumstance, by the fact that the perfect grants or real titles were drawn and signed on the protocols of the notary, and that they were afterward bound in books, which rendered them less liable to be mislaid and lost than the concessions, which were merely tied up in bundles. But it is a fact well known, that two thirds of these original complete titles are still remaining in the sheets on which they are described by the witness to have been drawn; and the difference in the correspondence between the originals and the copies, from the two offices, can only be accounted for by the difference in the fidelity and integrity of the two officers by whom the originals were kept, and the copies certified.

The remarkable difference in the quantity of land contained in the real titles given by Governor White, and that contained in the certified copies of concessions, said to have been made by him, is worthy of consideration, and goes far to sustain the belief, that there never were any originals in these cases. Document marked A, contains all the confirmed grants on royal titles given by Governor White, and they prove most conclusively, the consistency of his practice with the regulations prescribed by him, and found at page 1001 of the Land Laws. There is more than ten times the quantity of land contained in a single one of these copies of concessions, for which no original can be found, than was granted in full property by Governor White, during fifteen years of his administration of the government of East Florida. It does not appear that he ever confirmed a grant to any one, on any other consideration than that of habitation and cultivation. The following extract of a letter from this officer, found at page 1002 of the Land Laws, is expressive of the rigid and economical views he entertained on the subject, of disposing of the royal domain: "For the purpose of avoiding the abuses which have been experienced in the granting of land to new settlers, without certain restrictions, which will oblige them to cultivate the same, I have thought it convenient to establish the rules in the accompanying document, which I forward to your lordship for your intelligence and approval. My predecessor has assigned one hundred acres of land to the fathers of families, and fifty to each child and slave, whether full grown or small; a quantity really excessive," &c. By the regulations of Governor White, which he forwarded to the captain general of Cuba for approval, he reduced this quantity of one hundred acres to fifty for the head of a family, and twenty-five for each member, whether children or slaves, above the age of sixteen, and fifteen acres for each between the ages of eight and sixteen. To avoid the effect of these regulations, the advocates of the large grants, in which such reckless prodigality is manifested, contend that these regulations were not obligatory, and that they were not observed by Governor White himself, in the exercise of the granting power. The only proof offered, in support of this charge, is found in these large concessions, certified copies of which only have been produced, with the exception of one case, which is believed to be a forgery. And thus, before any of these large concessions are proved to be genuine—before the fact is established that any of them were issued by Governor White—they are resorted to as proof of his disregard of the regulations made and published by himself, while all his authenticated official acts, all the real titles issued by him, are in strict conformity with his regulations. It would seem to me, that the want of correspondence and agreement between these large concessions and the regulations of Governor White, prove the fraudulent character of the concessions, rather than that the regulations were not enforced or respected even by the officer who made them.

But if these large concessions are genuine—if they were issued in 1794, 1809, 1810, and 1811, according to their respective dates, why, permit me to ask, were they not matured into real titles under the government of Spain? Were these concessions of 256,000 and 368,644 acres, of so little importance as to be neglected by the claimants, or were they not sensible of the necessity of having their titles confirmed? Some of them, at least, appear to have been sufficiently apprized of this necessity, for we find the same Arredondo and the same Miranda, who now claim under these large concessions, applying for and obtaining confirmations of titles for tracts of four, five, and six hundred acres, so late as the year 1820 and 1821, as will be shown by reference to document marked B. These parties knew full well, that under the laws and ordinances of Spain, and under the practice and usage of that government, the concession, if legal and proper, gave them but the inception of right, and that until consummated by a "real" title, they could enjoy no permanent estate in the land. Most of them were inhabitants of the town of St. Augustine, the seat of the provincial government, and must have been apprized for several years of the anticipated transfer of the province to the United States. From the character of these claims, and the conduct of the claimants, it is difficult to avoid one or two conclusions, both of which are equally fatal to the interest of the parties. First, that they are spurious, or secondly, that their confirmation was denied by the Spanish authorities. For we cannot believe that individuals holding these large concessions would neglect to apply for their confirmation, at a time when they were soliciting and obtaining perfect titles for small tracts, of so much less importance.

The caution and delay with which these claims have been presented to our own tribunals for adjudication, give further proof, that, in the estimation of the claimants themselves, there was much doubt of their validity.

The board of commissioners for the adjudication of land claims in East Florida was organized in the year 1823. By the 5th section of the act, under which it was constituted, found at page 842 of the Land Laws, it was provided that all claims to land within that district not filed with the commissioners on or before the 1st day of December next, following, should be void. By the act of Congress, approved the 24th of February, 1824, found at page 855 of the Land Laws, the time for filing claims was extended to the 1st day of September, 1824. Again it was extended until the 1st day of November, 1825, and the commissioners required to close their session on the 1st day of January, 1826. This was accordingly done; but, notwithstanding the warning given by Congress, from time to time, and the danger of having their claims excluded by the delay in presenting them, it does not appear that any of these contained in this abstract was offered to that tribunal for adjudication. On the 26th day of January, 1826, the commissioners made their final report on these claims to the Secretary of the Treasury, in which they say, at page 119 of their report, communicated at the first session of the 19th Congress: "No. 9 is a class of claims differing from all others in an apparent formality. The other claims were authenticated by documentary evidence filed in the office, and were entitled to all the legal presumption in their favor, which applies to records in our government But the claims of this class were found in the possession of the claimants, and without any trace of evidence in the archives; and this circumstance, coupled with the equivocal character of the officer who verifies them, casts a shade of suspicion over the whole. In the investigation of these claims, the commissioners have required the parties to show reasons why they were not on file in the archives, as well as to prove the execution; but from the interested character of the witnesses produced, the evidence on these points has been hitherto inconclusive; thinking it probable, however, that some, if not many of these claims are good and valid, and being informed by the parties of their ability to remove the suspicion, the commissioners have thought it due to justice that their opinions be suspended, and that a reasonable time should be afforded for the production of testimony." Report No. 9 is headed thus: "Register of claims of which the originals are not found in the office of the keeper of the public archives, and of which there is no proof before the board but the certificates of Thomas de Aguilar, late secretary of the Spanish government." These claims were only five in number: one of them for 16,000 acres, one for 400, two for 300 each, and one for 250 acres. They appear to have been all of that class which were presented to the commissioners during a session of nearly three years, though it was publicly known that this commission would expire at a certain time under the limitation prescribed by Congress. They seem to have been all abandoned without the promised explanation, and without further prosecution; but in the year 1828, the register and receiver were authorized, by an act of Congress, to serve as land commissioners, and to settle all the remaining land claims of this district. It was not until after this, that any of the claims contained in abstract No. 2, founded on the certificates of Thomas de Aguilar, were presented for adjudication; for the manner in which these claims were regarded by the register and receiver, I refer you to the report made to the Secretary of the Treasury, in January, 1829, found from page 88 to 100 inclusive, where you will find a special report on each claim. In the case of Francisco Aguilar, who claimed before that board the 30,000 acres of land now claimed by the heirs of Rodrigues, they make the following report: "It appears that the petitioner possessed a certificate of Thomas Aguilar, and presented it to the governor of Cuba in 1823, with a request that a certified copy of Aguilar's certificate should be made by the notary of Cuba, and the original, to wit: Aguilar's certificate, returned to her. This is done with all the imposing pomp of the seal notarial, &c., but it amounts simply to this: that in 1815, Aguilar certifies that Governor Quesada, in 1794, on the 24th of February, granted to the petitioner, in absolute property, 30,000 acres of land, at a place called Horn creek, situated to the south of the river St. John, about twelve miles distant therefrom. Let us look at the memorial on which the grant is made: in 1794, Don Juan Rodrigues states, "that having a sufficient number of slaves to dedicate himself to agriculture, and the raising of horned cattle, and also to aid in the maintenance of his large family, he hopes that his excellency, following the spirit of royal orders, which protects the Spanish inhabitants who sacrificed themselves in the service of the said province during the turbulent times which have taken place in it, your memorialist having been one of its defenders, for which reason he prays," &c. Now, every remark made by us in the case of the two Arredondos, will apply with double force to the case before us, with this essential difference against this claim, that, in 1794, when this grant bears date, we do not believe that any disturbance whatever had taken place in this province. In 1796 there was a small rising on the St. John's river, and the Arredondos may claim that services were rendered at that period; but here is a bold appeal in 1794 to the governor, to reward services performed during the turbulent periods which have taken place in it, and there was no turbulence until 1796; 'following the spirit' (we use the words of the memorialist) 'of the royal orders, which protect the Spanish inhabitants who have sacrificed themselves in the service of the province.' Such, in 1794, is the appeal to the provisions of a law passed in 1815; we are unwilling, by any opinions of ours, liable as we may be to error, to debar any individual from a redress in the courts of his country; we will not therefore pronounce this grant a fraud, or forgery, but we unhesitatingly reject it."

In almost every one of these cases, the register and receiver make the same remark: "We are not disposed to pronounce on the authenticity of this grant, so as to bar the claimant from his remedy in a court of law, but we cannot recommend it for confirmation." They would not pronounce those claims fraudulent, or forgeries as they might have done, and thereby have excluded them from the jurisdiction of the courts, under the provisions of the act of 1828—but that these officers regarded them all as fraudulent is most apparent, from their general observations on the subject.

There is another case contained in this abstract, where a paper is produced, said to be an original concession, made by Governor White, on the 26th of November, 1810, to Pedro Miranda, for 368,640 acres of land, which is considered at least of most doubtful character. It has been impeached as a forgery, and an issue out of chancery has been directed to a jury to try the fact, whether the signature of Governor White to this document is or is not a forgery. The case has been postponed from time to time, for the last two years, at the instance of the counsel for the claimants, while the United States attorney has, on each occasion, avowed his readiness to proceed to trial. For the character of this claim, and the nature of the testimony by which it was supported, I refer you to the report of the receiver and register hereunto annexed, marked F.

If these claims were genuine, and if the parties interested had possessed the least confidence in their success, it is scarcely to be credited, that, from the year 1823 until 1826, they would have withheld them from the examination of the tribunal appointed to pass on their validity; that they would have allowed the first commission, after a session of nearly three years, to expire, and have waited until after the passage of the act of 1828, before they presented them for adjudication.

There are certainly many reasons why these copies should not be received in evidence, until the absence of the originals shall have been satisfactorily accounted for. Until this is done, the rules of evidence forbid them to be received, and a departure from those well-known and salutary rules would open a door for fraud, not to be closed, so long as the government has one acre of unappropriated land in Florida. What other security, I would ask, can the government have against spurious and pretended claims, than to require the production of the original grant, or that its absence should be satisfactorily accounted for? Forgeries may be detected by comparison, and proof of genuine signatures; but as it was the duty and practice of Thomas de Aguilar to give copies of all concessions made by the governor to the claimant, if he has, since the transfer of the country to the United States, been induced to give certified copies of concessions, when there are no originals, what check or control can be placed on his fraudulent designs, and those with whom he may have been associated, than to require that the originals shall be found in the office where the copy professes to have left them, or proof that they once existed there, and that they have since been lost or destroyed.

It was to guard against frauds and forgeries, that the second article of the treaty ceded to the United States all the archives and documents which relate directly to the property and sovereignty of the provinces, and required that those archieves and documents should be left in the possession of the officers or commissioners of the United States. And it was for the same purpose that the acts of Congress, providing for the settlement of land claims in Florida, found at pages 825, 841 and 855 of the Land Laws, required the production of the original grants or title papers. If copies alone are produced in evidence, it is quite impossible by such copies to detect a forgery in the original, and thus the grossest frauds on the government may be rendered successful, by concealing or destroying the originals. Such certainly was not the design of Congress, when, by the fifth section of the act of 1822, found at page 827 of the Land Laws, access was given the commissioners "to all papers and records of a public nature, relative to any land titles within said provinces."

I have thus endeavored, in obedience to your instructions, and the resolution of Congress, to give you the nature of these claims, and to present the first objection to their validity which naturally arises in their investigation, to wit: the absence of the original title papers. Another objection, of no less importance, is the want of power in the officer to make such grants. They profess generally to have been made as a reward for services, when no law or ordinance of the Spanish government can be produced to authorize the issuing of such grants. For my views on this subject, and the proper construction of the treaty between Spain and the United States, I refer you to a printed argument, which I had the honor to submit to the Supreme Court of the United States, a copy of which, marked G, is hereunto annexed.

In reply to that part of your letter which requires me to state whether, in my opinion, these cases, or any of them, are embraced by the decisions already given by the Supreme Court of the United States; in candor I must say, that as bad as I believe these cases to be, yet I consider the worst of them little inferior in law or equity to most of those already decided by the court; and that the principle settled in the case of Mitchell and others vs. the United States, will, if applied, cover all the objections which can be presented to the confirmation of any of the cases now depending in any of the courts of the Territory, except in those cases where the land is situated within the Indian boundary, on which I shall hereafter offer a few remarks. I consider that the badges of fraud were as strongly developed in the case of Mitchell and others, as they are in the worst of the cases contained in abstract No. 2. So far as the question of evidence is involved, there is an exact correspondence between that case and those which depend upon certain copies of concessions. In the case of Mitchell and others, the copies on which the suit was founded were taken from copies certified to by Pablo de Lorin, secretary, and Maximilian de Maxent, lieutenant governor of West Florida. In the cases now depending in court, the copies are certified by Thomas de Aguilar, secretary of the government of East Florida. In both, the certificate states that the original remains in the archives. The archives of East and West Florida, and the archives of Cuba, have been diligently searched, and no original is to be found. In both, the absence of the originals were entirely unaccounted for. In short, it is the same question of evidence presented in both, and fully decided in the case of Mitchell and others. In that case the suit was brought on copies, taken from copies deposited in the archives of Havana, which purported to have been taken from originals remaining in the archives of the province of West Florida, at Pensacola. At the trial of the case, the counsel for the government objected to receiving these copies in evidence, and insisted that the originals should have been produced, or their absence satisfactorily accounted for. In the territorial court the claim was rejected. At the argument of the case in the Supreme Court the objection was renewed, and the following is the manner in which that objection was disposed of by the court: "It is objected by the counsel of the United States, that the original acts of confirmation of the Indian sales, by Governor Folch, are not produced, and that the copies in evidence are not legal proofs of such acts. This objection seems to us not to be well founded in fact or law. The original Indian deeds were produced by the agent of the United States from the public archives in Havana (record 529, &c.), and are now before us. The deeds of confirmation were made according to the rules of the civil law adopted by Spain, and in force in Florida and Cuba. The original is on record and preserved in the office, which cannot be taken out; a testimonio or copy is delivered to the party, which is deemed to be, and is certified as an original paper, having all the effect of one in all countries governed by the civil law. Such is proved to be the law of those colonies as a fact by Mr. White. (Record 628.) Such is the form of the certificates in this case, varying in phraseology somewhat, but agreeing in substance and effect, (record 19, 38, 45, 50, 58, 91, 196, 111,) in perfect accordance with the civil law adopted in Louisiana, and recognized by this court, in the case of Owens vs. Hall, decided at the present term. We therefore consider those now produced as original deeds of confirmation by the governor, duly certified and proved." (9 Peters, 732.) One would suppose, from the description of these certified copies, thus given by the court, that they were notarial acts, or "authentic acts;" that they were executed by a notary public, with all the forms and ceremonies; and that they were entitled to all the faith and credit given to such instruments by the civil law. That they were, in the language of the court, "certified as an original paper." It will appear, by the reference of the court, that there are a number of different copies. Now it will be shown, by an examination of each, that the original were not notarial instruments. That they were not written on a notarial protocol, or countersigned by a notary public. Nor was any one of the copies taken from the originals by a notary public, and signed and certified by him as such. On the contrary, they are all, both originals and copies, what are termed in the civil law private acts, and entitled to no faith or credit whatever.

It is true, as stated by the court, that the law required this act of confirmation by Governor Folch to have been executed as it is described by the court to have been done, and the court appears by "legal intendment" to have supplied the defect. But that the law was not observed, that they were not notarial acts, that these copies were not "certified as originals," I presume to show by the following copies of the certificates, taken from page 111 of the record referred to by the court. The following is the authentication of the first copy: "I, Francisco Maximilian St. Maxent, colonel of infantry, lieutenant colonel and commandant of the regiment of infantry of Louisiana, provisory, civil and military governor of this province of West Florida, do hereby certify that the foregoing copy is agreeable to the original title despatched in favor of the house of John Forbes & Company, and delivered to their attorney, John Innerarity. In faith of which, I signed the present, under my hand and seal, and countersigned by the underwritten secretary of this government. Pensacola, December 20, 1811." The next reference of the court is at page 106 of the record, where the certificate of authentication is in the following language: "I, Don Francisco Maximilian St. Maxent, &c. [his titles], do hereby certify, that the above testimony is in conformity to the original record which exists in the office of the secretary of this government, which original title has been delivered to John Innerarity, as the attorney of the house of Forbes & Company, and to show it, I give the present, under my hand and seal, and countersigned by the underwritten secretary of this government. Pensacola, December 20, 1811."

The next reference of the court is at page 91 of the record, where is found an authentication of the copy of the grant to John Forbes for an island, which was not embraced in the suit of Colin Mitchell and others; the certificate is similar to the one last copied. The next reference is to page 58 of the record, where is found an authentication of the Indian deed, and not a copy of the grant of confirmation by Governor Folch. At page 50 is another copy of the grant of confirmation by Governor Folch in 1811, and authenticated in the following manner: "The original document remains in the office of the secretary of this government, under my charge, relative to the cession which the preceding title confirms, and of the whole proceedings was made out a copy, with an authentic copy of said title, and the same delivered to the surveyor general of this province, Don Vincente Pintado, to be deposited in his archives, [this is contradicted by Pintado at page 218 of the record,] and another was also delivered to John Innerarity, attorney of the interested parties." At page 45 is found the following: "Certificate of Don Francisco Maximilian St. Maxent, governor, &c., that the foregoing pieces are faithfully copied from the original proceedings, which exist in the office of the secretary of this government, of which an original title has been given to John Innerarity, as attorney of the house of John Forbes & Co.; in witness whereof the present is signed by me, sealed with my arms, and countersigned by the secretary of this government. Pensacola, December 20, 1811. [Signed by] Maxent."

At page 38 of the record referred to by the court, is found the authentication of the copy of the grant of Governor Folch to Panton, Leslie & Co., in 1806, and is in the following language: "The original proceedings relative to the cession which the foregoing title confirms, exists in the office of the secretary of the government under my charge, and with an authentic copy of said title and of the whole, was delivered a copy to the surveyor general of the province, Don Vincente Sebastian Pintado, in order to deposit in his archives, [contradicted by Pintado, page of the record 218,] and another copy was at the same time given to John Innerarity, as representing the interested parties. Pensacola, December 20, 1811. [Signed] Pablo de Lorin."

At page 19, referred to by the court, there is no copy of authentication to be found. I have thus laid before you copies of all these authentications of the copies of the grants of confirmation referred to by the court, and I leave it for you to decide how far they can be regarded as notarial acts, which are so favorably regarded by the civil law, and how far they sustain the fact stated by the court, that they are "certified as an original paper." It is somewhat remarkable, too, that all of them should bear the same date, that some of them should be signed by Maxent, the acting governor, and others by Pablo de Lorin, and that all should be different in some essential particulars. If it be true, as stated in some of them, that the originals were delivered to the attorney of the interested parties, why were not these originals produced on trial? If, according to others, authentic copies were delivered, why, I would ask, were not these authentic copies produced, instead of copies of these copies, certified under a notarial seal in Havana? If these originals ever existed in the office of the secretary of the government, what became of those originals, and why is it that no trace of them could be found either in the archives of West Florida, or the island of Cuba? But these objections are all answered by the decision of the court, that copies are originals. The court, after speaking of the forms and effect of these certificates, proceeds, "in perfect accordance with the civil law adopted in Louisiana, and recognized by this court in the case of Owens vs. Hall, decided at the present term. We therefore consider those now produced as original deeds of confirmation by the governor, duly certified and proved." It seems to be somewhat paradoxical, under any circumstances, to call a copy an original, but the decision in this case will appear the more extraordinary by comparison with the case of Owens vs. Hall, referred to by the court. Perhaps two more contradictory opinions were never recorded in the same tribunal, than that of Owens vs. Hall, and Mitchell and others vs. the United States. Both profess to have been given in accordance with the civil law, and they are just as opposite to each other as the principles of light and darkness. In the case of Mitchell and others copies are declared to be originals, and were received as primary evidence. In the case of Owens vs. Hall, (9 Pet., 624, 625,) copies are decided to be copies, and regarded as secondary evidence, not to be received unless the absence of the original is sufficiently accounted for. In that case the copy offered in evidence was taken by a notary public, and authenticated under his official seal. On the law governing such case the court observed, "now in Louisiana, as indeed in all countries using the civil law, notaries are officers of high importance and confidence, and the contracts and other acts of parties executed before them, and recorded by them, are of high credit and authority." The court decided, that the absence of the original in that case was sufficiently accounted for, because it was in the office of the notary where the law required it to be kept. In the case of Mitchell the copies were not executed by a notary public, and the originals were not in the public archives where the law required them to be deposited. The principles settled in the case of Hall, if applied in the case of Mitchell, must have been fatal to the claim of the petitioner. In one of these cases the court took judicial notice of the civil law in force in Louisiana, in the other it received the statement of a witness to prove the law governing the execution of grants.

The doctrine of the civil law is no doubt well settled in the case of Owens vs. Hall; the learned judge, in delivering the opinion, refers to the civil code of Louisiana, and his opinion coincides with the decisions of the Supreme Court of that State, and the decision in the case of Minor vs. Tillotson, 7 Peters, 99.

If the numerous cases now depending in the territorial courts are to be decided according to the principles settled in the case of Owens vs. Hall, all those must be rejected where the originals are not found to exist in the office where the law requires them to be deposited, unless their absence is satisfactorily accounted for. But if,

on the contrary, they are to be settled according to the rules adopted in the case of Mitchell and others, it seems to me that, so far as the question of evidence is involved, they must be sustained by the court. Which of those cases will form the basis of future decisions, can alone be decided by the court.

In all the claims presented, and disposed of by the court, an important question has arisen, involving the power of the officer to make the grant on which the suit was founded. It was contended by the counsel for the United States, that the intention of Congress, in giving jurisdiction to the courts in these cases, was to have the law, regulating the granting power, fully considered and settled. That there was no provision contained in the act of 1828 and the act of 1824, authorizing individuals to institute suits against the government, which relieved such individuals from the burdens and responsibilities of plaintiffs in ordinary cases; and that where the answer of the United States, by its attorney, expressly denied the authority of the officer to make the grant, that the law or ordinance of the Spanish government confirming such authority must be produced to sustain the validity of the grant. The position thus assumed by the counsel for the United States, was supposed to be fully sustained by the second section of the act of 1824, (found at page 873 of the Land Laws,) which provides, that every petition presented under the provisions of this act, shall be conducted according to the rules of a court of equity," &c., and that the decree to be given by the court on such petition, "shall, in all cases, refer to the treaty, law, or ordinance, under which it is confirmed or decreed against." The same section of the law gives, as rules for the government of the courts in the performance of this duty, "the stipulations of any treaty, and proceedings under the same; the several acts of Congress in relation thereto; and the laws and ordinances of the government from which it [the grant] is alleged to have been derived." One of these rules is prescribed in the 4th section of the act for ascertaining claims and titles to land in Florida (found at page 826 of the Land Laws). That section, after describing the character of the claims which should be received, and directing them to be filed and recorded, provides that said commissioners shall "proceed to examine and determine on the validity of said patents, grants, concessions, and orders of survey, agreeably to the laws and ordinances heretofore existing of the government's making the grants respectively, having due regard, in all Spanish claims, to the conditions and stipulations contained in the eighth article of the treaty," &c. The counsel for the United States considered this a further evidence of the intention of Congress that the authority of the officer in making the grant should be produced, and that the validity of the grant must depend on the sanction of the laws and ordinances of Spain.

But the court seems to have given a very different construction to the legislation of Congress on this subject, and has decided that the grant itself shall be considered as evidence of the authority by which it was made. In the case of Arredondo, (page 726,) a reference is made to the several acts of Congress, providing for the settlement of land claims in Florida, in which the court seems not to have considered the concluding part of the 4th section of the act of 1822, which I have quoted above, and at page 727 they observe: "It is thus clearly evidenced by the acts, the words and intentions of the legislature, that in considering these claims by the special tribunals, the authority of the officer making the grant, or other evidence of claim to land, formed no item in the title it conferred; that the United States never made that a point in issue between them and the claimants to be even considered, much less to be adjudicated." Now, with every respect for the opinion of the court, it still appears to me that if the authority of the Spanish officers to make grants of land is to be sought in the laws and ordinances of Spain, Congress has, in the 4th section of the act of 1822, (Land Laws, p. 826,) most imperatively required an examination of that authority before the commissioners were empowered to decide on the validity of a grant.

In 6 Peters, page 728, the court observes, it is true that a grant made without authority is void under all governments, &c., but in all, the question is, on whom the law throws the burden of proof, of its existence or non-existence. A grant is void unless the grantor has the power to make it, but it is not void because the grantee does not prove or produce it. The law supplies this proof by legal presumption, arising from the full, legal, and complete execution of the official grant, under all the solemnities known or proved to exist, or to be required by the law of the country where it is made, or the land is situated. In 9 Peters, 735, the court decided, that "by the laws of Spain is to be understood the will of the King, expressed in his orders, or by his authority, evidenced by the acts themselves, or by such usages and customs in the province as may be presumed to have emanated from the King, or to have been sanctioned by him, as existing authorized law." Thus, the "acts themselves" of the Spanish officers, in making grants, is evidence of the law conferring the granting power. Now, one grant regularly executed by the officer is as high evidence of his authority as another, and, therefore, one grant is quite as good as another, whether the officer has transcended his power or not in making it. Thus, if the laws which have been published and known, authorize grants to be made for certain purposes, to the amount of 100 acres of land, and the officer exercising the granting power issues a grant for 2,000 acres, the grant itself, being evidence of the authority on which it was made, may support a presumption that the former law had been repealed, and although the grant is apparently in violation of the law, yet it will be sustained and confirmed. This may be considered an illiberal commentary on the text of the court, but when the decision in the case of Percheman (7 Peters, 95) is well examined, it will go far to establish this principle, and will prove how utterly impossible it is, in practice at least, to sustain the negative proposition, that the officer had no power to make such a grant. In that case the court said: "An objection not noticed in the decree of the territorial court has been urged by the Attorney General, and is entitled to serious consideration. The governor, it is said, was empowered by the royal order on which the grant professes to be founded, to allow to each person 'the quantity of land established by regulation in the province, agreeably to the number of persons composing each family.'

"The presumption arising from the grant itself of a right to make it, is not directly controverted; but the attorney insists that the documents themselves prove that the governor has transcended his authority.

"Papers translated from a foreign language, respecting the transactions of foreign officers, with whose powers and authorities we are not well acquainted, containing uncertain and incomplete references to things well understood by the parties, but not understood by the court, should be carefully examined, before we pronounce that an officer holding a high place of trust and confidence has exceeded his authority." At page 96, in the same case, the court proceeds: "The attorney contends that the royal order of the 29th of March, 1815, empowered the governor to grant so much land only, as according to established rules was allowed to each settler. This did not exceed one hundred acres to the head of a family, and a similar portion for each member of it."

"The extraordinary fact that an application for two thousand acres should be founded on an express power to grant only one hundred—that this application should be accompanied by no explanation whatever—and that the grant should have been made without hesitation, as an ordinary exercise of legitimate authority, are circumstances well calculated to excite some doubt whether the real character of the transaction is understood, and to suggest the propriety of further examination." Now all the circumstances mentioned by the court would seem to warrant the belief that the claim should have been rejected. But, after discussing the provisions of the royal order of 1815, and deciding that the petitioner was not embraced by that order, as one of the persons entitled to receive a grant of land of any description, and without referring to any other law or ordinance than the "established rules" by which the quantity to be granted "did not exceed one hundred acres to the head of a family, and a similar portion for each member of it," they say at page 98, "We do not think the testimony proves that the governor has transcended his power," and confirmed the claim. The grant will be found at pages 54, 55, (7th Peters,) and will show that it professes, in distinct terms, to be made under the royal order of 1815. This order will be found at pages 1009, 1010, of the Land Laws; and the "established rules" or regulations to which it refers, and which specifies the quantity of land to be granted, is at page 1001 of the Land Laws.

In 7th Peters, 98, in allusion to the point raised by the attorney general, in the case of Percheman, the court said: "The objection does not appear to have been made in the territorial court, where the subject must have been understood. It was neither raised by the attorney for the United States, nor noticed by the court." Now a reference to the record in that case, will show that the objection was distinctly made in the territorial court by the attorney for the United States, who, in his answer, denies that the governor had power to make the grant; and this was the material issue in the case. This fact was unobserved by the court; had it been perceived, it might have produced a different result.

In the case of Mitchell and others against the United States, the attempt was again made to prove by the law the want of power in Governor Folch, to confirm the grant of the Indians to John Forbes & Co., and Panton, Leslie & Co. In the exercise of that power, Governor Folch professed to have acted according to "the faculties conferred on him by our lord the King, and in his royal name." (Record 49.) It was contended by the counsel for the United States, that the king had conferred on the civil and military governor of West Florida no such power; and the following ordinance of the King, found at page 218, White's Compilation, was relied on to sustain the objection:

SAN LORENZO, October 22, 1798.

In a royal order of this date, I communicate the following to the governor of this province. The King has been pleased to resolve, after having seen your letter of the 31st of August of this year, No. 3, addressed to the Prince of Peace, and another from the intendant ad interim of this province, of the 16th of October of the same year, No. 174, respecting the power of granting the King's lands in the district under your command, which power was vested in the political and military government, since the royal order of the 24th of August, 1774; that with a view to the good of the service, and for the better fulfilment of what is contained in the 81st article of the royal ordinance respecting the intendants of New Spain, the power of granting and distributing all kinds of lands be restored to, and made the particular province of, the intendant of this province, with inhibition to other authorities, in conformity to the legal provisions of the laws; consequently, the power of making such grants, heretofore vested in the government, is repealed and abolished, and shall henceforth abide in the intendancy."

This authority was considered conclusive by the counsel for the United States, but was overruled by the court. In 9th Peters, 740, the objection is disposed of in the following terms: "It is next contended that the power to grant lands in West Florida was not vested in the governor, but was confided exclusively in the intendant; this is clearly proven to be the settled law of the province, as to royal lands which were the property of the crown, and is admitted by the counsel for the petitioner. But the reverse is, we think, equally apparent as to Indian lands, until their right had been abandoned, and the land become annexed to the royal domain by a process in the nature of an office at common law." I do not find the grant of power to the intendant limited to "crown lands," but in the language of the ordinance of 1798, it is extended to "all kind of lands." Whatever power the King possessed over crown or Indian lands, was conferred on the intendant. Hence, Governor Folch had no "faculties conferred on him by our lord the King, and in his royal name, to confirm and ratify to John Forbes & Co. the cession of two pieces of land," &c. In support of the distinction made by the court between crown lands and Indian lands, reference is made to White's Compilation, pages 25, 40, 42, 43, 79, 215. It will be found, on examination, that the several laws referred to by the court, except that found at page 215, were made a century before the royal order of 1798, and consequently, if they contain principles inconsistent with the last ordinance, they must so far be repealed by it. I find, too, on referring to my brief, in the case of Arredondo, (6 Peters,) that every one of these laws were referred to by me for the purpose of sustaining the Indian right to the village of Alachua, which had been granted to the petitioner by the intendant of Cuba, and that they were, on that occasion, overruled by the court. The reference to White's Compilations, 215, which I excepted in the above remarks, is the 31st article of the regulations of the intendant Morales, based upon the ordinance of 1798. Now it is very evident that Morales could not, if he would, have repealed the ordinance of the King, conferring on him this high trust and confidence. But the article itself shows most clearly that in the estimation of this high officer of the crown, his jurisdiction extended over the Indian lands. It is expressed in the following terms: "Indians who possess lands within the government, shall not in any manner be disturbed; on the contrary, they shall be protected and supported, and to this the commandants, syndics, and surveyors, ought to pay the greatest attention to conduct themselves in consequence." This article of the regulations of Morales, the intendant of Louisiana and West Florida, to the common understanding of intelligent men, will not support the proposition that the governor of West Florida had jurisdiction over the Indian lands after the ordinance of 1798, giving power to the intendant over "all kind of lands."

But the question very naturally arises, what were Indian lands in Florida under the laws and government of Spain? The question is fully answered in the very laws referred to by the court, for the purpose of sustaining the jurisdiction of the governor, and which I have above enumerated. Those laws will show most distinctly that the Indian lands were limited to those on which their farms and villages were located, and that to the extent of one league around those villages, they had, as Spanish subjects, in virtue of their habitation and cultivation, an absolute, indefeasible right, which they were capable of conveying in fee simple. Before the royal order of 1798, to render such a sale valid, it required the approval of the governor, but after that time, as I conceive, it required the approval of the intendant. If these laws are not sufficiently expressive of this right, a reference to the decisions of the supreme court of Louisiana will place it beyond the possibility of doubt.

In the case of Martin vs. Johnston, (5th Martin's Reports,) page 658, which involved the Indian rights to land in Louisiana, the court remarked, "the fact, as given to the world in all the laws enacted on the subject, is, that the King of Spain, in taking possession of his dominions in America, disregarded the original rights of the lords of the soil, and declared himself the sovereign of the country. As some compensation, however, for that usurpation, he assigned to the former proprietors such extent of land as they wanted; and particularly took care to secure to them, by law, such tracts as he considered were sufficient for the purpose of cultivation and the pasturage of their cattle. In the title 12, book 4th, of the Recopilacion de los Indias, treats of the manner in which lands shall be disposed of generally; the law 13, among other dispositions, provides that the Indians "shall be maintained in the possession of the lands which had hitherto been allotted to them, and shall receive an additional quantity which they may want." On the regulations concerning the lands and villages of the Indians, the whole 3d title, book 6, may be referred. The law 8th of that, however, particularly says: "The seats on which the villages of the Indians shall be placed shall be such as are well provided with water, arable lands and woods, and to which there may be easy access, and they shall have a common of one league in extent, where their cattle may graze without being mixed with those of the Spaniards."

In the case of Reboul vs. Nero, (5th Martin, 490,) it was decided, that under the laws of Spain the Indians were permitted to occupy a specified spot, and the law gave them a right to one league around it. In the case of Maes vs. Gilliand's heirs, et al, (7th Martin, 314,) it was decided, that Indian tribes were entitled, by settlement under the Spanish government, "to the quantity of land contained in a square league." Now, if the claim of Mitchell and others had been for a tract of land to the extent of one league around an Indian village, it would have been "Indian lands." The Indians would have had a right to sell it, and whether the sale had been confirmed by the governor or intendant, would have been a matter of little importance to the government. But, instead of that, it was for 1,250,000 acres, sold by the Indians, when there was not an Indian village, hut, or field, upon it. A further evidence of the limitation of the Indian right to a league around their villages, is found in the decision of the supreme court of Louisiana, in the case of Spencer's heirs vs. Grimball, (6th Martin, N. S. 367;) in speaking of the plaintiff in that case the court observed: "They have contended that, by the local usages existing in Louisiana, the Indians were entitled to more than a league; and the evidence they offer of these usages, is the assent of the governor to a sale by which much more was sold by one tribe. Respect is certainly due to the official acts of the officers of the former government, and in the absence of proof to the contrary, we should be inclined to consider them prima facie correct. But in relation to the subject matter before us, we have the law itself, which clearly limits the quantity to which the Indians were entitled. Now, for us to say, a violation of that law was an evidence of a usage which controlled it, would be to place all laws at the mercy of those who owed them obedience." The application of this rule of law, and this rule of decision, must have been fatal to the claim of the petitioners in the case of Mitchell and others.

But it is contended that in Florida the Indian right was not thus limited; that by the treaty of Picolata, in 1765, a boundary was established between the Indians and the British government, which was afterward recognised and continued by the Spanish authorities, and that the land claimed by Mitchell, being within the Indian boundary, was not crown land subject to be granted by the intendant. On this point the decision of the court in the case of Mitchell is in direct opposition to the decision in the case of Arredondo, in 6th Peters, and the case of Clark, 8th Peters. In the case of Arredondo, the intendant of Cuba had granted to the petitioner 268,000 acres of land within this Indian boundary, including the Indian village of Alachua. It was contended for the United States in that case, that the land belonged to the Indians, and was not subject to the granting power of the crown. The court decided otherwise, and confirmed the claim of the petitioner.

In the case of Mitchell and others, the counsel for the United States referred to the decision in the case of Arredondo, to show that the lands within that boundary were not Indian lands, but crown lands, subject to the grant of the intendant. In 9th Peters, 742, the court disposes of the objection in the following terms: "The counsel for the United States pressed in argument the decision of this court in the case of Arredondo, as an affirmance of the right of the intendant of the province, or of Cuba, to grant Indian lands. In that case the lands granted had been in the possession and occupation of the Alachua Indians, and the centre of the tract was an Indian town of that name. But the land had been abandoned, and before any grant was made by the intendant, a report was made by the attorney and surveyor general, on a reference to them, finding the fact of abandonment, on which it was decreed that the land had reverted to, and become a part of the royal domain." Now, in both these cases the land claimed is admitted to be within the same Indian boundary. In one case the grant is made by the intendant of an Indian village, on the ground that it had been abandoned, and in the other case a sale was made by the Indians of wild and uncultivated lands, on which there were no fields or villages, and yet both claims were confirmed by the court. If the Indian right to the village, in the case of Arredondo, became forfeited by abandonment, could the Indian right have existed, in the case of Mitchell, where there had never been an occupancy? If the intendant had a right to grant an Indian village because it ceased to be occupied, would he not have the same right to grant the wild lands which have never been occupied by the Indians? But if the inconsistency of these two cases could in any manner be reconciled, still the case of Clark remains to be disposed of. In that case the grant was made within the Indian boundary, by the governor of East Florida, where there was no pretence of abandonment by the Indians; and although the fact that the land was within the Indian boundary distinctly appeared on the record, without taking the least notice of it, the court confirmed the claim. In two of these cases the court has sustained the power of the officers of the crown to grant lands within this boundary, and in one of them they have positively denied that right, and confirmed an Indian sale for 1,250,000 acres of land, ratified by Governor Folch, on the ground that they were Indian lands, that they were not crown lands, and therefore not subject to be granted by the intendant. In the case of Arredondo the grant professed to have been made in consequence of the abandonment of the village by the Indians, and the court has considered the proceedings of the intendant as a judicial decree, (9th Peters, 743.) Thus considered, it is high authority for the position we assumed in the argument, that the Indian right was confined within the limits of one league around their villages. It corresponds with the nature of that right as defined by the laws of Spain, and is in strict accordance with the decisions of the supreme court of Louisiana. If the intendant had regarded the Indian right as extending over all the lands within the Indian boundary, how could he have decreed that a village within that boundary became annexed to the royal domain by the abandonment of the Indians? A possession of a part of the land within that boundary, if their right extended over the whole, would, according to all legal decisions on the subject, have been possession of the whole.

Much the greater number of the claims now depending in our territorial courts are for land within this Indian boundary, when there is no pretence that they were abandoned by the Indians. How those claims will be regarded by the court, I cannot undertake to express an opinion. I have thus given you some of the leading questions decided, in order that you may determine for yourself how far the cases yet depending in court are embraced by those decisions, and that you may be advised of the utter impossibility of proving by the laws and ordinances of Spain, the negative proposition that the officer had no power to make a grant, while, under the rule adopted by the court, the grant itself is regarded as evidence of that authority. It is admitted by all, that these claims are cases of special and limited jurisdiction, and that the only power of the court to pass judgment upon them, is conferred by the several acts of Congress on the subject. Now, if those acts have been properly construed—if, in the language of the court, "the authority of the officer making the grant, or other evidence of claim to lands, formed no item in the title it conferred, that the United States never made that a point in issue between them and the claimants, to be even considered, much less adjudicated" (9th Peters, 727)—if Congress, by directing, at page 873 of the Land Laws, that every petition presented to the court "shall be construed according to the rules of a court of equity," intended that the petitioner should not be required to make out his case by producing the authority under which his grant was made, when that authority is put in issue by the answer of the United States, expressly denying such authority—if it was the intention of Congress that the grant should be received as evidence of the authority of the officer by whom it was made—then it would seem that there is little more to be done in those cases than for the court to ascertain that a grant was made, (and this, according to the decision in the case of Mitchell, may as well be done by the production of a copy as an original,) and on that grant to enter a decree of confirmation.

If this was really the intention of Congress, much delay, expense, and inconvenience to the claimants, and to the government, might have been, and still may be, avoided by the passage of an act confirming all grants of every description.

The claims contained in abstracts numbered 3 and 4, are sufficiently described by the caption of the abstracts, and the remarks made on each claim. They will, therefore, require no special report.

The claims depending in the superior court at Jacksonville, amounting to 30,396 acres, are not different in character from those contained in the abstracts numbered from 1 to 4, inclusive, and must be decided by the same principles. Such will be the case of those for which petitions have been filed in the court at St. Augustine, but which have not yet been placed on the docket for trial.

A number of the cases contained in each abstract have been argued, and submitted to the court for decision, and there are many others in that situation which do not appear in either of the abstracts, because after their argument and submission they were discontinued on the docket. It is presumed they will be decided, and that the appeals will be taken to the next term of the Supreme Court of the United States.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. K. CALL, Assistant Counsel.

LAND OFFICE, St. Augustine, December 12, 1827.

The grants of five miles square, or sixteen thousand acres of land, for the erection of a water saw-mill, present a class of claims totally distinct from any other in this office. It is to be regretted by us, that our predecessors in office, although the whole body of these claims was before them, have never decided a single case by which the principles that would have governed the whole class could have been settled. It is left, then, for us to decide on the validity of these grants, and the interests intended to be conveyed by them, without reference to, or assistance from, any other source of predecision.

We beg leave to present a short historical abstract of these grants, in the order in which they were made.

The first claim of this sort that appears to have been presented to the governor of East Florida, is that of Horatio S. Dexter, for two thousand five hundred acres. On the 24th of October, 1801, Don Eusebio Bushnell and D. Seth Stubblefield, both inhabitants of the city of St. Augustine, present their petition to Governor White, stating that "they desire to build a water saw-mill, to saw wood, at the head of the creek of Moultrie, or at the crossing place which goes to Matanzas. But," they go on to say, "to enjoy the end proposed, they have occasion for the superior permission of your excellency, as also to be able to cut the necessary logs on said wood, &c., that by those means they may provide this neighborhood with plank, &c., from its being useful to the petitioners and the public. They ask the necessary license, to be able to effect the building of a water saw-mill."

To this petition Governor White, on the same day, directs the "commandant of engineers to report."

The report of the engineer, Don Pedro Dear Berrio, is rendered in two days after the order, and is favorable to the petitioners. It declares that the mill does not (will not) injure the city; "and if there shall result a benefit to the inhabitants, in having a supply of timber at prices more moderate," &c., then he advises to "grant the license which they solicit, and permission, that, in the woods, they may cut the pieces they may have occasion for."

The decree, dated October 27, 1801, closes the proceedings. It is as follows: "Let there be granted to the petitioners, without injury to a third person, permission to construct a water saw-mill, and to cut timber in the places which they solicit."

These are all the material papers in this case. It may be well to add, that Bushnell sells to Cowan, and Cowan to Dexter, and that there is an anonymous survey made, so far as appears to the board, without order and without authority, in a square of one hundred and sixty chains, and containing two thousand five hundred acres. A mill was erected by Bushnell and Stubblefield.

Before our board, no evidence has been taken in this case, nor will it be necessary at this time to notice the testimony of a general application on the subject of mill grants.

Let us examine this claim; the petition, the report, and the decree; the property and the rights demanded, as well as those which have been granted; for on the decision of this will depend the decision of all others of this class of claims.

It must be remembered that this city (St. Augustine) was a military fortress, and every application for lands, or for the privilege of building on and cultivating the lands of the crown, as in the case of the mil quinientos, was referred to the chief engineer, for his opinion on the influence which the permission applied for might have on the defences of the city.

The application here is, first, for permission to build a mill on public lands; the leave, on reference to the engineer, is granted. Secondly, to cut timber on public lands to saw; this, too, is granted.

It does not appear, in any part of the preceding case, the first of the mill grants, that the soil is asked for, or that any definite number of acres is granted on which the applicants may cut their logs. They may build a saw-mill at Moultrie, and may cut logs in the woods. This is all that is asked and all that is granted. If it be a conveyance of the soil, the limits of the grant are restricted alone by the woods of Florida, which are co-extensive with the Territory; and the survey of the grant had been surrounded by vacant lands, must have been extended to sixteen, twenty, or fifty thousand acres, as well as to two thousand five hundred, the quantity claimed. If a permission to build a mill gives a fee to sixteen thousand acres, and if a license to cut timber in the woods gives a title to the soil, then these mill grants are good.

It would be an idle waste of your time, as well as ours, to reason further on this subject. Independently of the want of power in the governor to make such grants, if they were really made, it is evident, from all the papers or claims of this sort, that no title to the soil was intended to be given. Take up any case at hazard: the terms of all are alike. "You may build a mill, and you may cut timber in the woods," are the words used in every grant. Nor was it ever pretended that more was asked, or more was given. We have in vain attempted to discover the cause or reason for limiting these grants to sixteen thousand acres. No law, no authority is pretended, but the will of the governor; and it seems at first to have been a gratuitous act of Don George Clarke, who, as surveyor general, bestowed this quantity.

The next on the list, in point of time, is the claim of Robert Pritchard's heirs, for sixteen thousand acres.

In 1803, R. Pritchard obtains leave to build a saw-mill on Dewee's creek, "and the land necessary for it." This is all that is done before the year 1818; Pritchard dies, and there is no mill built. In 1818, James Hall, who had married his widow, renews the papers, as his copy had been lost. On the 29th of June, 1818, James Hall presents his memorial to the governor; states "that the sickness and death of Pritchard, together with the many well-known delays and obstacles in which his testamentary estate was left, had thus far prevented the erection of the mill;" and prays that "his excellency be pleased to grant him two miles and a half of pine land to each cardinal point of the compass, on the same terms, and under the same conditions, in which it has been made to others." On the fifth day of June, twenty-four days before the date of the petition, the governor grants the request "to carry into effect the erection of a water saw-mill, &c., but with the precise condition that, until he shall establish the said saw-mill, this concession shall be held as not made, and of no value or effect until that event takes place." Now on this grant we would observe, first, that in the grant made to Pritchard, not one word is said of five miles square, or sixteen thousand acres. Second, that if it had been a valid grant for "head rights," it would have been forfeited by fifteen years' abandonment and want of occupancy. Third, that all of the parties seemed, in 1818, to consider their claim was forfeited, and required to be renewed. Fourth, that the last grant under Coppinger, under which alone they can claim, the first being forfeited, though made by Coppinger twenty-four days before it was asked for, was made six months after the date at which it is declared by the treaty the power of the governor on this subject shall cease; and fifthly, that although the words of this grant are imperative, "that this concession shall be held as not made, and of no value or effect, until a mill is built;" to this day no mill has been built. We would not dwell on this subject, but to expose a gross attempt at fraud and imposition. In the petition of James Hall to Governor Coppinger, in 1818, he expressly declares that the mill was not set up, in consequence of the illness and death of Pritchard. Yet has this same individual produced a witness to this board, one George Petty, to swear that in 1804 "he was hired by R. Pritchard to build a mill," that said mill was put in operation, and that said Pritchard died in possession of said mill. Nay, more; this said James Hall, who says in 1818 that no mill was built, and assigns reasons for the failure, now, when he believes that the performance of the conditions of the grant would place him in a more eligible position, in 1827, in a memorial to the President of the United States, which is sworn to and filed in this office, solemnly avers that Pritchard did build a mill, and died possessed of it. This claim is bad by abandonment; it is bad by the treaty; is suspicious from the relative dates of the memorial and concession; which suspicion is increased fourfold by the subsequent contradictions, on oath, of the several statements of the claimants; and if the governor had power to make such grants conferred by law, and every other claim of this kind were good, we should pronounce this one bad. There is no pretence even now that a mill has been built since 1818.

The next claim, in point of time, is that of William Mills, for sixteen thousand acres of land. In January, 1804, he applied, as do the rest, by memorial: "it is his intention," he says, "to build a water saw-mill," and he asks for the necessary land on a vacant place on Mulberry creek, granting him also the use of the pine land for the supply of said mill. On the 4th of January, 1805, one year after, Governor White says, "he may build a mill, and as respects the cutting of timber, there will be issued to him the permission to do so on vacant lands;" and upon these papers the claimant demands sixteen thousand acres of land. It is needless to say one word on a subject like this. It is our present object to vindicate the governors from the charge of violating the law under which they acted. They could not make a grant of this kind; and with one single exception of Governor Coppinger, they never have. In this case it is our duty to observe, that four witnesses have been introduced to prove that the mill on this tract was built and in operation from twelve to nineteen years ago; but this cannot vary the principle of decision. If it demanded nothing more than the right to cut timber; if nothing more was granted or could be enjoyed when the mill was in the full tide of successful operation, surely now there is no just claim for sixteen thousand acres of land, unless it be that the loss of the mill is the acquisition of the soil. This, too, must be rejected without reference to the powers of the governors. These three grants, to Dexter, to Pritchard, and to Mills, are all the mill grants made by Governor White.

The next is a grant to Samuel Miles, by Governor Kendelan, in 1813; in this we find the first mention made of five miles square, or sixteen thousand acres. The memorialists says that he is poor, that the government owed him money, and it was long before they paid him; that he had enjoyed a good reputation in the city; that he had contracted marriage with a young lady, (giving her name,) the daughter of a man of the greatest consideration for his character; that his father-in-law died, and his wife too, and he moved into the country: therefore, he begs his excellency to give him sixteen thousand acres of land to build a mill, as he is a foreigner. Now we see nothing in the royal order of 1790, the only ordinance under which a foreigner can claim, by which he is entitled, as such, to sixteen thousand acres of land, either because he is poor, because the government owed him money and had paid him, or because he had married a fine young lady; or because his wife and her father died, and he had moved into the country. Independently of this want of power, we beg leave to remark, that this is one of the claims supported by the certificate of Thomas l'Aguilar, over which so much suspicion has been thrown, and the original of which is not in the office. One witness has deposed that the grant was made by Kendelan, and the original was in the office; but this and some other of the unsupported certificates of Aguilar, are the only grants in the office where no condition is prescribed. In this no mill has been erected.

Bernard Segui, 16,000 acres. This is a mongrel grant, "for taking charge of fugitive negroes," "for disbursing money in their maintenance," for going to the city of Havana as elector, supporting a widowed mother and two maiden sisters, and for a saw-mill, of five miles square land, at the west head of Indian river, "in absolute property." The governor is made to say that, for the services and the merits of the interested, and for the advantages which will result to the province, "and according to what is provided in the royal order of 1790, relative to the concession of land to new settlers," he grants "to the said memorialist, in absolute property, the five miles square of land which he asks for." Now, in the memorial to which the concession is attached, Bernard Segui describes himself as a native and resident of this city; and yet the governor declares that the grant is made by the order of 1790, which relates to foreigners, new settlers alone; is limited by the number of workers, and requires ten years possession to give lands "in absolute property." It is strange that a governor, who meant to violate a law, should, in doing so, refer to the law itself, and aver its applicability to foreigners alone, when Segui was a native. In vindication of Kendelan we must add, that this, too, is a certificate of Aguilar, though the original is in the office of the public archives.

The year 1816, in which Coppinger was governor, was prolific in these grants. In this year we have no less than eleven.

Zephaniah Kingsley. Here we have a genuine grant made by Coppinger, a permission to build a mill, "but with the precise condition, that until he shall establish said water-mill, this concession shall be held void and of no effect." There is no pretence that the mill is built; and by the very terms of the concession, the grant is void. The governor further says, that "then [when the mill is built] he may make use of the pine trees, comprised within the five miles square." Thus it is clear, that as the mill is not built, he has nothing. If it were built, he would have nothing but a license to cut timber. We would now observe, that in this case, as in many others, the surveyor has located these lands, these five miles square in various parts of the Territory, seven thousand at one place, three thousand at another, and five thousand at a third, sometimes one hundred miles apart, without the possibility of transportation, to furnish lumber to a saw-mill.

The case of William Hobkirk is precisely similar to that of Kingsley; a right to build a mill, to be void until erected, and then a right to cut timber "in the five miles square." There is no evidence that a mill has been built.

William Drummond asks for three miles square. It is conceded in the very words, and on the very conditions of the two preceding; and no mill has been erected.

Eleazur Waterman's claim is similar to the preceding. Together with the accompanying certificate of George J. F. Clarke, dated May, 1820, "that Don E. Waterman, of the district under my [Clarke's] command, has built a horse mill." It will be remembered that in this, as in every other genuine grant, even of Coppinger, when the mill is erected, nothing more is granted than a license to cut timber. Five thousand four hundred and sixty acres are surveyed to him by Clarke, and this alone is claimed by him.

Francis Richard, a permission to build a saw-mill, and to make use of the pine-trees, which are comprised within a square of five miles. The mill has been built, and Richard, not content with the timber, contends for the lands.

Andrew Burgevin. This is a similar application, and a similar concession,—"no mill, no grant,"—and when a mill, then leave to cut timber. And no mill has been built.

Bowen & Co Lith. Philad.a

The Marquis Fougeres. This grant was made to Argote Villalobos, to build a saw-mill, and to cut the pine trees in the five miles square. The Marquis has built a mill, and George Clarke has surveyed to him six thousand acres of land on Indian river. Now, whether this tract of six thousand acres on Indian river, one hundred and fifty miles off, is comprised within a tract five miles square, on Black creek, or how the lumber on that tract can be serviceable to the Marquis's mill, we are not advised.

Charles Sibbald. This claim is divided into three surveys; two thousand in Rowley's hummock, four thousand in Turnbull's swamp, and ten thousand acres on Trout creek, on the St. John's; within five miles square can never vest a right to the soil in Turnbull's swamp, or Rowley's hummock, near one hundred miles off, although George Clarke has surveyed it to him, nor can a right to cut pine-trees give Mr. Sibbald a right to the soil. But the board beg leave to remark in this case, that if industry and zeal—if the erection of a steam saw-mill, which promises to benefit this section of the Territory more than anything else, will entitle an individual to security and indemnity, Mr. Sibbald has a claim to it. And although, in the opinion of this board, he has no title under the Spanish government, or by the Spanish laws, yet, if acting meritoriously, in good faith, will enable him to come before Congress, he has a fair claim for ten thousand acres on Trout creek. And if we were permitted, we would recommend his relief by a private act of Congress.

The next claims are John Breward, Farquhar Bethune, Jehu Underwood, H. S. Dexter, Charles W. Clarke, John Low, Henry Yonge, and James Dell, who have not built mills, and Charles Seton, who has. Of George Clarke's claim we shall speak presently.

Breward's is a claim of a similar character to the others, with this difference, to its prejudice, that it is supported only by a certificate of Aguilar's, without any evidence that the original is in the office.

Bushnell, Mills, and Seton, have erected mills which have long since been destroyed; how far the abandonment of a right like this to cut timber, when the mill was built, is annulled by the subsequent destruction of the mill, and long continued failure to rebuild it, is not for us to decide. The Marquis Fougeres, Mr. Richard, and Mr. Sibbald, have mills now in successful operation.

In every other case no mill has been built; and the grant, wherever it is genuine, has declared, in as strong language as could be used, that the grant of license should be void, and considered as not made, until the mill is built.

From what has gone before, we are warranted in coming to the following conclusions:

First. That the governors of this province were not authorized by any law, ordinance, or decree, in granting away sixteen thousand acres of land for a mill-seat.

Second. That where there is no suspicion thrown over the claim, they have never attempted to exercise that power, with the single exception afterward to be mentioned.

Third. That all they have ever granted is leave to build a mill, and leave to cut timber.

Fourth. That Governor White gave a license to cut pine timber in the woods, and Governors Kendelan and Coppinger gave a license "to cut pine timber within the five miles square, of sixteen thousand acres."

Fifth. That the building of a mill is made in every case a condition precedent to the license to cut timber.

The exception which we have above alluded to, is a royal title to George J. F. Clarke, who claims to have performed all conditions for the 16,000 acres. George Clarke has, for himself as for others, surveyed this land in different parts of the Territory.

To give an idea of this claim by royal title, we beg leave to copy the preamble of the grant itself, to show the authority under which the governor acted, by his own declaration:

"Don José Coppinger, lieutenant colonel of the royal army, civil and military governor, pro tem., and chief of the royal domain of this city and its province, &c. Whereas, by a royal order communicated to this government on the 29th of October, 1790, by the captain general of the island of Cuba and the two Floridas, it is provided, among other things, that to foreigners, who of their free will present themselves to swear allegiance to our sovereign, there will be granted to them lands gratis, in proportion to the workers that each family may have; and whereas Don George Clarke, inhabitant of the town of Fernandina, has presented himself, manifested that he has constructed, from his own ingenuity, a machine that, with four horses, saws eight lines at one time, cutting two thousand superficial feet of timber in a day; and soliciting, in virtue thereof, a grant, in absolute property, of five miles square of land, for a stock and supply of timber, which is the portion that has been granted for water saw-mills," &c.

Now Governor Coppinger gives this land under the order of 1790. That order restricts the granting of lands to foreigners—George J. F. Clarke is described as an inhabitant of Fernandina; and for "head rights"—this is for a saw-mill; "in proportion to their workers"—this says nothing of workers. So much for this royal title. This very preamble of the grant shows the governor's want of power.

The views we have taken on this subject, we submit with great deference to Congress.

Testimony of Antonio Alvarez, as taken in the case of Z. Kingsley vs. the United States.

Superior Court, District of East Florida.

THE UNITED STATES ads. ZEPHANIAH KINGSLEY. } Claim (mill grant) for 16,000 acres of land.

Interrogatories to be administered on behalf of the United States to Antonio Alvarez, esq., keeper of the public archives in St. Augustine, a witness to be produced, sworn and examined in the above entitled cause.

First. Please to state your age, how long you have resided in East Florida, what offices you held therein, if any, under the Spanish government, and how long you have held the office of keeper of the public archives in St. Augustine.

Second. What is the date of the first concession belonging to that class commonly called mill grants, now on file in your office? Please state, and annex a copy thereof to your deposition to be taken on these interrogatories.

Third. Please to state whether there are any royal titles on file in the archives under your charge, which were made to any grantee after a previous concession of the land to such grantee, upon condition of erecting a saw-mill; if there are, please state to whom they were made, and annex a copy of the concession and royal title in each of said cases to your said deposition.

Fourth. Do you know of a single instance where a concession was made upon condition of building such saw-mill, that was followed up by a royal title? If you do, please state the case, and annex a copy of such concession and royal title.

Fifth. Please to examine your office, and see if there is any such royal title on file in it, and if there is not, please to state that fact.

THOMAS DOUGLAS, U. S. Attorney, &c.

Superior Court, District of East Florida.

THE UNITED STATES ads. ZEPHANIAH KINGSLEY. } Claim (mill grant) for 16,000 acres of land.

The answers of Antonio Alvarez, esq., a witness, sworn and examined in behalf the United States, in the above-entitled cause, before the commissioner appointed in the annexed commission.

To the first interrogatory—Witness answers: My age is forty-four years; I have always been a resident of East Florida; I have been a clerk in the government secretary's office, from the year 1807 to the year 1821, with two intermissions of about a year each. I was appointed keeper of the public archives in the year eighteen hundred and twenty-nine.

To the second interrogatory—Witness answers: The first concession for a mill grant, as far as I have been able to ascertain, was, on the twenty-ninth of January, seventeen hundred and ninety-three, made to William Pengree, a copy of which is hereunto annexed.

To the third interrogatory—Witness answers: There are none.

To the fourth interrogatory—Witness answers: No.

To the fifth interrogatory—Witness answers: There are none.

ANTONIO ALVAREZ.

TERRITORY OF FLORIDA, County of St. Johns:

I do certify that, having been appointed commissioner, on the part of the United States, by the annexed commission, and having been first sworn, I did proceed to examine, on oath, the witness, Antonio Alvarez, esq, named in the said commission, to the interrogatories herewith annexed, and his answers thereto are herein correctly and truly set forth.

JOHN C. CLELAND, Commissioner.

Translation of the document referred to in the above answers of Antonio Alvarez.

His Excellency the Governor:

Don Guillermo Pengree, an old inhabitant of this province, with the due respect to your excellency, says: That the back of the lands of his property, about five miles, and at the head of Nepomuceno creek, and also of Doctor's lake, there is a creek proper for the construction of a water saw-mill; and the petitioner, confiding in the goodness of your excellency, has ordered all the iron work made which is necessary for this, and also to finish another which he half finished upon his own lands, for all of which he has expended considerable moneys; therefore he supplicates your excellency will be pleased to grant him the lands at said place, which are vacant, and that the number be one or two thousand, or according as your excellency should think convenient, (besides those corresponding to the number of his family, which have increased three in number since the commissioner received his oath,) in order that they may be able to work said mills without being ever deficient of pine lands, or that some other inhabitant should come and locate himself in the vicinity thereof. It would be convenient that your excellency should determine the limits, otherwise the petitioner will be exposed to have his work mutilated and also injured by his expense, if he should have to go a great distance to get his timber, and it is a favor which he hopes to receive from the meritorious justice with which your excellency dispenses your correct decision.

ST. AUGUSTINE, FLORIDA, January 24, 1793. WILLIAM PENGREE.

ST. AUGUSTINE, January 26, 1793.

The Captain Don Pedro Marrot, commissioned for the general distribution of lands, will report upon each one of the points of this petition, in accordance with the instructions and orders in his possession, and edicts published by this government, what may to him seem fit.

QUESADA.

SENOR GOVERNOR: In reply to your excellency's superior decree, I say: That the lands which this old inhabitant solicits on the back of those of his property, five or six miles, are actually vacant, and also are calculated for the construction of a water saw-mill; but I am ignorant of his having expended any money for his works; I only know that he has commenced one on his own lands; as to what relates to the solicitation which he also makes of this government, to grant him one or two thousand acres of land, besides those which correspond to him for his family, in order that he may never be deficient of timber for his mills, I have no instructions whatever by which to be regulated, only the edict of good government says that the King grants one thousand acres besides those which correspond to the inhabitants, who can cultivate more than that which he owns; but said edict does not embrace the petitioner in any manner whatever, as he has not solicited it for agriculture, but for cutting timber; wherefore, and considering that if the number of acres are not granted to him which your excellency may think proper to grant, besides those which correspond to him, he will be much injured; your excellency will resolve what you may judge most in accordance to your notorious and strict administration of justice.

In relation to said edict, and other instructions which I have from this government, I do not consider the petitioner entitled to the 150 acres which he now solicits for the three negroes, by which he says his family has been increased; for said documents make no mention of but the number of persons which each family should have at the time of making the oath and measurements of their lands. It is all that I can inform your excellency on the subject.

ST. AUGUSTINE, January 28, 1793. PEDRO MARROT.

ST. AUGUSTINE, January 29, 1793.

Notwithstanding the one thousand acres offered in the edict of this government, in addition to the heads of families who should cultivate more than that which corresponds to them, are not for the purposes proposed by this party—taking into consideration the laudable end which he solicits them for, and the general and private utility which will result to this province in the exportation of lumber, by the establishment of water saw-mills for that purpose—there are granted to him the one thousand acres at the place where he solicits them, and where he has projected establishing the new fabric, but not the 150 for three negroes with which he has increased his family, as the rule is, that the measurement shall be considered at the time when the oath is taken by the inhabitant, without calculating with the increase or diminution happening afterward.

Under these considerations, Don Pedro Marrot will proceed to the measurement of the lands corresponding to this party, with the addition of that now granted to him—all without injury to third persons, and in accordance with the instructions and orders given him.

QUESADA.

I certify the foregoing to be a true and correct translation of the Spanish document annexed.

JOS. S. SANCHEZ, In. and Tr. Sup. Court, E. D. F.

Superior Court, East Florida, July term, 1833.

ELIZABETH WIGGINS vs. THE UNITED STATES. } Land claim, 300 acres.

July 20, 1833.

Antonio Alvarez, keeper of the public archives, sworn as a witness in open court, on behalf of the said claimant, states:

That his age is forty-two years, and was born in this city, and that he has constantly resided here, and has sometimes been abroad, but considered this his place of residence; was absent at one time for eighteen months. Witness states that he was employed as a clerk in the government secretary's office here during the Spanish government, from the year 1807 till the year 1821, during which time he was absent twice, once in 1809 and '10, and at another time in 1814 and '15. Witness states that the government secretary's office was kept in 1807, '8, and '9, by one Juan de Pierra, and after that time by Thomas de Aguilar, who continued at the head of that office till the cession of this country to the United States. Witness states that persons wishing grants of land from the Spanish government presented a memorial to the governor, and he decreed on the memorial, and that decree of the governor was filed in the office of the government secretary, and constantly retained there. Witness states, that when the decree of the governor ordered a royal title to be issued, the decree was transferred to the escribano's office; but when the decree did not order a royal title to be issued, the decree remained in the government secretary's office; and in either case the grant remained in the possession of the government. Witness states, that the evidence given to the grantee, on the making of a grant, was a certified copy of the decree, or of the memorial and decree, by the government secretary. Witness states, that to obtain a royal title, a second memorial and decree was necessary, which went into the escribano's office, in which office royal titles were made. Witness states, that it was one of the ordinary duties of the government secretary to make certified copies of memorials and decrees, which copies were made for the use of the parties. Witness states, that it was generally the case that the decree of the governor directed a copy of the decree and memorial to be made for the use of the party; it was not always the case, but it was generally done after Governor White's time. Witness states that, according to the usage and practice of the Spanish government, copies made by the government secretary, and certified by him, would be received as evidence of title in the Spanish courts of justice; in speaking of these copies, witness has reference to copies made in the government secretary's office, which are not called duplicates, but copies. Witness states that these certified copies of the memorial and decree were made immediately on the making of the grant, and delivered to the party when he called for them. Witness states that it was not the practice of the government secretary to annex seals to his certificates; the escribano always affixed a seal to his certificate, which was made with a pen; and the secretary of the government had no such seal to his certificate. Witness states that he is well acquainted with the handwriting of Thomas de Aguilar. Witness states that, on the transfer of this province from Spain to the United States, the papers in the offices of Mr. Aguilar, the government secretary, and Mr. Entralgo, the escribano, were taken possession of by the government of the United States. Witness states that, according to the usage of the Spanish government, the parties had no right to the original title papers; they remained under the charge of the proper officers.

Examined by United States attorneys.—Witness states that he does not recollect of a certified copy of a grant being received in evidence in a Spanish court of justice, where the original was not on file in the proper office; and from his knowledge of the practice of the government, he does not believe that such copy would be received in evidence in a Spanish court, unless the party could prove that the original was in the office at the time the copy was made. Witness states that he does not know that he ever heard of a copy of a copy of any document being received in evidence in a Spanish court of justice; it might depend upon some circumstances, however, which might alter the case. Witness believes that a copy of a copy, properly authenticated and regularly filed in the proper office, would be received in evidence. Witness thinks that he has seen the copy of a copy, where it was regularly authenticated, received in evidence in a Spanish court; for instance, where the copy of a power of attorney, executed in the Havana, was filed in the escribano's office here, a copy of that copy would be received in evidence in any court of the province; and the impression of the witness is, that he has seen such copies received in evidence in the court of which the escribano kept the papers, and there was no office in which judicial proceedings were kept but the escribano's office. Witness states that it is his belief, that if it were known that there was no original of this power of attorney in the Havana, that this copy of the copy would not be received in evidence, unless the party could prove that, at the time the copy was made, the original was in the proper office.

Examined by claimant's counsel.—Witness states, that he considers a certified copy by the government secretary, as evidencing whatever was contained in that copy; and that he understands the certificate of the government secretary as evidencing all the facts to which it certifies. Witness states, that, according to his understanding of the Spanish law in this province, the certified copy by the government secretary was evidence of the memorial and of the decree of the governor as set forth by such certified copy; and that if the government secretary's office here had been burnt, these certified copies by the government secretary would have been received as evidence of the party's right to the land granted. Witness states, that he considers that, according to the Spanish law, the certificate of the government secretary would be received in all the courts as evidence of the facts contained in it. Witness states, that if the original memorial and decree had been in any manner lost, or destroyed, or abstracted from the office, that he considers that a certified copy by the government secretary would be received as evidence of the making of the memorial and decree; that he means the certified copy given to the party at the time of making the memorial and grant, or before the loss of the originals, while he had them to make the certified copies from. Witness states, that the papers in the secretary of the government's office, at the time of the cession, were taken forcibly by a person sent by the American commander here, whose name he does not recollect; they were taken from the secretary's office in the governor's house; that after they were thus taken, he believes they were some time at the old custom-house, and supposes some person had charge of them while there, but don't know what person. Witness thinks there was a commission appointed to examine these papers, and that Mr. Lynch, Mr. Reynolds, and he believes Mr. Anthelm Gay, were on that commission; witness thinks five persons constituted that commission—does not remember the names of the others. That the object of that commission, as witness understood, was to select the papers which, according to the treaty, the American government claimed. That these papers, after they were taken from the custom-house, were put into an office in the lower part of the building now occupied as a court-house, and were kept there by a Mr. Law. Witness does not know how Mr. Law kept these papers—don't remember to have seen them about the floor—was not in Mr. Law's office much. From Mr. Law these papers went into Mr. Tingle's possession; from Mr. Tingle's possession to Mr. Reynolds; from Mr. Reynolds's possession to Mr. Murphy, and from Mr. Murphy's possession to that of the witness, as keeper of the public archives; and that some of these papers, while in the possession of Mr. Reynolds, were delivered to Dr. Gibson and Dr. Simmons. Witness states, that a number of boxes of papers belonging to the archives were delivered to the witness as keeper of the public archives, by the United States marshal for this district. There was an inventory of these papers delivered by the marshal, made by Mr. Reynolds and witness; and he does not know whether that inventory contained all the papers in those boxes or not. Witness states, that he believes that the original memorial and decree to Elizabeth Wiggins in this case, is not now to be found in his office as keeper of the public archives.

Examined by U. S. attorney.—Witness states, that where there was no original grant to be found, a certified copy would not be received in evidence unless the loss of the original was proven or accounted for. Witness states that he was a clerk in Mr. Aguilar's, the government secretary's office, and had access to the papers in that office, and has searched for papers in that office when he was so directed by the secretary, and found the papers in good order and carefully preserved. Witness states, that it is not within his knowledge that any original grant or concession was withdrawn from the proper office of the archives during the Spanish government. Witness has seen some originals out of the office of the public archives since the change of government, but does not know how they got out, or that they were ever in the office of the archives; and some of those originals are now on file in the office of the public archives, having been deposited there by the register and receiver, before whom they were filed by the parties. Witness states, that there are one or two books in the office of the archives, of the proceedings of the first commissioners appointed to receive these papers, and it is the impression of the witness that these commissioners did not make a list of the grants received by them, but he thinks, they made a list of the bundles received by them. Witness states, that when these papers were delivered to Mr. Reynolds, I believe there was a list of the memorials and grants of land made.

Examined by claimant's attorney.—Witness states, that these papers came into the possession of Mr. Reynolds in 1823. Mr. Reynolds was appointed keeper of the public archives by the governor, or governor and legislative council that met at Pensacola in 1822, and Mr. Reynolds, on his arrival from Pensacola, immediately took possession of these papers; and the impression of the witness is, that he, Mr. Reynolds, received these papers from Mr. Tingle, they having already been in the possession of both Mr. Law and Mr. Tingle. Witness states, that these original grants which he has spoken of as being deposited in his office by the register and receiver, ought to have been in the government secretary's office; it was the usage of the Spanish government to file them in that office. Witness states, that he does not recollect of any case in which a certified copy made by the government secretary was ruled out by a Spanish court, on a suggestion that the original was not in the proper office. Witness states, that certified copies of memorials and decrees were given to the party as evidence of his grant.

Examined by U. S. attorney.—Witness states, that he does not recollect of any case having occurred, in which it was decided, that a certified copy made by the government secretary was ruled out by a Spanish court, on a suggestion that the original was not in the proper office—does not recollect of any such case occurring. Witness states, that he does not recollect a case in which a copy was offered in evidence where the original was not in the proper office.

July 26, 1833.

Antonio Alvarez again called, and examined by claimant. On witness being requested to refer to the original certificate of Aguilar, attached to the copy of the memorial and decree in this case, and brought into court by the said witness, under a subpœna duces tecum, and state whether the said certificate is not in the usual form of such certificates, the witness answers, it is; and on further inquiry being made, the witness states, that the signature "Tomas de Aguilar," attached to said certificate, is in the handwriting of Thomas de Aguilar, late secretary of the Spanish government in this province.

Question. Has, or has not, application been made at your office, by Elias B. Gould, esq., to know whether the original concession in this case was in the office under your charge as keeper of the public archives of East Florida, and if so, when?

Answer. Mr. Gould has made application to me a few days since.

Question. Did you, or not, on this application, search for the said original in your office?

Answer. I did.

Question. Did you find it?

Answer. I did not find it.

Question. Did you so inform Mr. Gould?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Was, or was not, the certified copy of the original concession now exhibited to you, brought into this court from your office, as keeper of the public archives, on a subpœna duces tecum, therefor?

Answer. Yes, it was.

Question. Be pleased to state how the said original certified copy came into your office as keeper of the public archives.

Answer. It was delivered to me by the register and receiver, who acted as land commissioners at one time, with the other papers relating to private land claims.

Examined by United States attorneys.—Question. Do you know from whom the register and receiver received that document?

Answer. I do not know.

Question. You have said on your former examination in this case, that you were a clerk in the same office with Mr. Aguilar, at the time of the transfer of this province to the United States, and for many years before that time. Do you recollect to have seen or heard of the original concession in this case before the change of government?

Answer. I do not recollect.

Examined by the court.—Question. What proceeding was called an expediente? Was no particular proceeding called technically expediente?

Answer. An expediente was any proceeding which was done in writing; if there was more than one document of any paper, it was called an expediente. Sometimes they were called autos, which, I believe, means no more than the proceedings of a lawsuit.

Question. What was the autos of which you speak?

Answer. The proceedings in a lawsuit were called autos, any other proceedings were called expediente.

Question. What was diligencia?

Answer. Diligencias was where a party wanted to prove anything. I should think that diligencias and expediente are very much alike. I should, in speaking Spanish, consider them as synonymous.

Question. What was the meaning of the prayed, sometimes preferred in Spanish times, that the proceedings be had and taken in continuation?

Answer. A document made in continuation, was merely that the document should be continued on the same sheet of paper.

Question. What validity was ascribed to papers or documents in continuation?

Answer. I do not know that any particular validity was given to a document made in continuation; it might sometimes be done at the request of the party. I don't recollect any case in which a party, where the design was to establish the copy instead of the original, prayed that the copy be taken in continuation of the original.

Examined by claimant.—Question. Are there not now in your office, as keeper of the archives, many grants or concessions, which you have seen as such keeper of the archives, but which you do not recollect either to have seen or heard of in Spanish times?

Answer. I suppose there must be many—I cannot recollect the fourth part of them; it is impossible, where there are such a large number of grants, to recollect either the names of the grantees or the quantity of land granted.

Question. Was, or was not, an expediente record, proof of the proceedings contained in it?

Answer. Certainly; all documents in the office prove themselves.

Examined by the court.—Witness states, that there did not come into his hands, as keeper of the public archives, any list or index of the grants to lands made here by the Spanish government. There was a list made by Mr. Reynolds, but it contained nothing more than the names of the claimants, without mentioning the number of acres. Mr. Reynolds was keeper after Mr. Law. Witness states, that he believes there was a list of the bundles of papers in the Spanish archives, made during the Spanish government, but witness has not seen that list since the transfer, and don't know what has become of it. Witness states, that when a party got a decree for a royal title he carried it to the escribano, and the escribano drew out the royal title in a book, and the governor signed it, and that was the original. Witness states, that the memorial of a party praying for a royal title, together with the certificate of the concession given by the secretary of government, the survey and plat of the land, and the original proof, having complied with the conditions of the concession, and the original decree ordering a title or patent to be issued in favor of the grantee, was called the expediente, which expediente remained on file in the office of the escribano. Witness states, that the escribano had no separate books in which he noted the royal titles; they were issued from those in which they were contained. At every ten sheets of paper on the small books, which he first made, there was a blank sheet left, on which the escribano made an index of the grants that preceded that sheet, and when he had enough of these sheets or small books, they were bound into large books, and these indexes were taken out, and a general index made to the whole book. Witness states, that there was no book in the secretary of the government's office, in which a note was made of the concessions that issued; they were merely filed away in his office on the loose sheets on which they were made, and were filed away in bundles alphabetically, and without any list.

Examined by U. S. attorneys.—Witness states, that where concessions were made under the royal order of 1790, the governor generally required proof of the compliance of the conditions before he gave a royal title. Witness states, that he thinks it was considered that a person had no right to obtain the royal title, though he had a claim to the land, till he had complied with the conditions, unless the party could show that he could not comply with the conditions of his grant from disturbance in the country, Indian wars, or something of that kind. It was generally considered that a person had to comply with the conditions of his grant before he could obtain a royal title.

Question. Was not the legal estate or title to the land conveyed to the claimant by the royal title issued from the office of the escribano?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Was there any other mode by which the title from the King was conveyed in full property by the governors of this province to the claimants of land?

Answer. No other mode, except in some cases I have alluded to before, where the governor has given the party permission to sell his land. Witness thinks, that although a party had not obtained a royal title, if he had complied with the conditions of his concession, he would have a right to the land; and if a party were to abandon the land after he had complied with the conditions, he would be entitled to it, though he had obtained no royal title.

Question. You have said that you believe the claimant would be entitled to the land if he had complied with the conditions of his concession, though he had not obtained the royal title: what other evidence would he have of this right to the fee simple in the land, except the royal title?

Answer. The evidence of having complied with the conditions.

Question. Would the claimant, in such a case as the one mentioned in the last question, be required to have the proof of his having complied with the conditions of his concession filed in the proper office of the government?

Answer. If the claimant made the proofs they would be filed in the proper office, and he would receive a royal title. I have never known a person that made these proofs except on application for a royal title.

Question. Were not all deeds of conveyance of land from one individual to another drawn out on the protocol of the notary of government, and did not the notary always refuse to allow the party to sell until he had procured a royal title for the land?

Answer. Yes, he would refuse to make the deed; he could not refuse to let the parties sell; the parties might agree between themselves, and pass receipts, or in any other manner, and run the risk of being bound to prove that the conditions of the grant had been complied with; after a party had complied with the conditions of his grant, I believe that he had a complete right to the land, though he had obtained no royal title.

Question. Where a party failed to comply with the condition of his concession, could not the government grant the land to another individual, and if a royal title were given to the last individual, would not the claim of the first person who had failed to comply with the conditions, be entirely defeated?

Answer. Certainly.

Question. Were not the regulations of Governor White, on the subject of granting lands under the royal order of 1790, generally observed in this province?

Answer. They were, except in some instances by Governor Kendelan, and since Governor Kendelan.

August 5, 1833.

Antonio Alvarez, heretofore sworn as a witness in this case, called by the counsel for the United States.

Question. Please look at the concession in this case, and say if it be or be not the usual form in which concessions were given by the Spanish government, under the royal order of 1790, on condition of habitation and cultivation.

Answer. Upon looking at concession, witness replies: Yes, it is in the usual form.

Question. In all cases of concessions, such as the one you have just examined, wherein no conditions were specified, was it not always understood that the ordinary conditions of habitation and cultivation were implied and annexed to said concessions?

Answer. Yes.

Question. In all concessions, such as are described in the last two preceding questions, was not the person to whom the concession was granted required to take possession of the land within six months from the date of said concession?

Answer. I can't say precisely the time a party was required to take possession; it was a regulation of Governor White, that the party should take possession of his land, I believe, from three to six months. But I have seen some instances where a party was allowed more time than six months to take possession of his land.

Question. Will you please state the instances in which more time than six months was allowed the party to take possession of the land conceded to him; and was not such longer time always granted—when granted at all—by a decree of the governor, on the petition of the claimant asking for a longer time?

Answer. I cannot say or mention the particular cases, but I recollect of such cases having happened; I am inclined to think, a longer time was given on the petition of the claimant and the decree of the governor, but I cannot be positive.

Question. When a party was allowed a longer time than the regulations of Governor White prescribed, for taking possession of the land conceded under the royal order of 1790, was it not considered a departure from the established practice and usage of the province?

Answer. I think it was.

Question. In all cases of concessions under the royal order of 1790, wherein no time was mentioned within which the party should take possession of the land, and no condition was mentioned, was not the party required to prove habitation and cultivation of said land before he could obtain a title in full property for said land?

Answer. Yes, generally that was the case.

Question. When a party settled on land under a concession, and inhabited and cultivated it during the period the law and the regulations required to entitle him to a royal title, would not the governor give a royal title for a larger quantity of land than that mentioned in the concession, if the party proved, that from the number of his slaves and family, he would be entitled to a greater quantity?

Answer. I don't recollect a case of that description, but I believe he would be allowed a larger quantity.

Question. When a party applied to the governor for a royal title under the royal order of 1790, was he not required to prove the number of his family and slaves, as well as his habitation and cultivation, before the royal title was given, and was not the quantity of land granted by the royal title in proportion to the number of his slaves and family?

Answer. I don't recollect of any instance where a party had to prove the number of his family at the time of petitioning for a royal title. The number of acres in the royal title was generally the same as contained in the concession.

Question. At what time did he prove the number of his family and slaves?

Answer. I can't say positively; sometimes the party, at the time he applied for a concession, presented a list of his family and slaves; at other times the number of his family and slaves was mentioned in the memorial; sometimes they were not mentioned in the memorial; and sometimes the party petitioned the governor for a quantity of land corresponding to his family.

Examined by claimant.—Question. How do you know that there was a condition implied that the grantee should take possession and cultivate in concessions like the one before the court, though no such condition was expressed?

Answer. I know it by the general practice, and by seeing when they applied for royal titles, that they had to prove compliance with the usual conditions established by the government.

Question. Do you know, and can you state, a single case where a party who had received a grant without any condition expressed, was obliged afterward to prove cultivation or settlement?

Answer. In many instances; I can't name any of them.

Question. Are there not many instances in concessions under the order of 1790, in which it is expressly made a condition that the grantee should take possession within a limited time?

Answer. Yes, there are.

Question. Will you state whether it was not understood that the governors could grant the lands solicited absolutely and without condition, if they thought proper and chose to do so?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Did you mean to say, in answer to the third interrogatory by counsel for the United States, that there was an established practice in the province of actually taking possession of the lands conceded, in three or six months; or did you only mean to say that it was directed in White's regulations that possession should be taken in three or six months?

Answer. I know Governor White had specified a time in his regulations; I don't know what that time is; I spoke of the practice while I was in the office; I don't know anything about whether the party took possession of the land in three or six months; I have never seen it proved when the party took possession; he proved that he had been in possession and cultivation ten years.

Question. Have you ever known an instance in which a party was prevented by the government from taking possession of the lands conceded to him, because he had not done so within six months?

Answer. I do not know of an instance.

Question. Did not a concession under the order of 1790, according to the usage and practice of the Spanish government, remain operative and valid for the benefit of the grantee, though he had not taken possession of the land, provided it had not been granted to another, or some proceeding had not taken place, for the purpose of divesting the title of the grantee?

Answer. That is my impression.

Question. Were the regulations of Governor White, in regard to the granting the public lands and the taking possession of them, considered as obligatory upon his successors, or even upon himself?

Answer. If I have to judge by their practice in some instances, I should say they were not.

Question. Will you state whether there is any other grant or concession of land to Elizabeth Wiggins, in the office of the archives, of which you are the keeper, than the one now in question?

Answer. I believe not. I have examined whether the original concession in the present case was in the office, and I did not find it, and I did not find any other.

Examined by the United States attorneys.—Question. Were not the regulations of Governor White observed and enforced in all cases of grants under the royal order of 1790, by Governor White and all his successors in office?

Answer. The ordinances of Governor White were in force; that is, they were not repealed, but the governors acted on their discretionary powers, different from what is stated in them.

Question. Did Governor White, or his successors in office, ever deviate from the regulations of Governor White, so far as to dispense with proof of habitation and cultivation in any case, when the party asked for a royal title for land?

Answer. I don't know if Governor White ever dispensed with those proofs, but I know that the others have in some cases.

Question. Were not the cases to which you allude very unusual, and contrary to common practice and the custom of the province?

Answer. They were.

August 8, 1833.

Antonio Alvarez again called, and examined on the part of the United States.

Upon the witness referring to the document offered in evidence in this case on the part of the United States, and numbered 1, and he being requested to state whether that document does not contain the regulations of Governor White, referred to by him in his testimony above, witness answers, that that document does contain the regulations of Governor White, to which he has referred in his testimony above.

August 10, 1833.

Antonio Alvarez, a witness heretofore sworn in this case, called by claimant's counsel.

Question. You have, in your former testimony in this case, referred to certain regulations alleged to have been made by Governor White, concerning the granting of lands in East Florida; will you be pleased to state whether the original of the said regulations is in your office, and if not, whether it has been in it since you have had charge of the public archives?

Answer. The original is not in my office, nor has it been since I have had charge of it; and I think it was not in the office of archives at the time Mr. Reynolds had charge of the office.

Question. What is the nature of the instrument to which you have particularly referred in testifying on this point? If it be a copy, state how it is certified.

Answer. The document of which I gave a copy to Mr. Douglas, (and which is filed in this case as part of the evidence of the United States, and numbered 1,) is taken from a copy certified by José de Zubizaretta, and the certificate of Zubizaretta is dated on the same day that the regulations bear date.

Question. Are there not a number of royal titles in your office, which have been given before the conditions were complied with, besides the two or three which have been filed in this cause by the counsel for the United States?

Answer. Yes. There are some titles which have been issued to the parties before the ten years' occupation. The copies which I have furnished, and which are filed in this cause, are not cases where the titles have issued before the ten years' occupation, but are cases in which the party was allowed to sell his land before he had got his titles, and before he had occupied the land ten years.

Examined by the United States attorneys.—Question. Will you please state the cases in which royal titles have been given for land before the claimant had occupied and cultivated, during the period required by the regulation of the province?

Answer. I can't state any case; I am certain that there are some cases, but I don't recollect the name of any particular case, except the case of Mr. Kingsley, the papers of which case I had occasion lately to look over.

Question. Do you recollect any case under the royal order of 1790 where a royal title was given to the claimant, before he had inhabited and cultivated the land?

Answer. No.

Testimony of Antonio Alvarez, taken under commission, in the case of John Breward against the United States.

District of East Florida, Superior Court, St. John's County.

THE UNITED STATES ads. JOHN BREWARD. } Land Claim, 16,000 acres.

Interrogatories to be propounded to Antonio Alvarez, esq., a witness to be sworn and examined on behalf of the United States, before Elias B. Gould and John C. Cleland, esqs.

First. Are you a native of East Florida, or not?

Second. What is your age?

Third. How long have you resided in the city of St. Augustine, in East Florida?

Fourth. Did you hold any office in East Florida before the transfer of that province to the United States? If you did, please to state what office, and when and how long you discharged the duties of such office?

Fifth. Did you at any time act as clerk in the governor's secretary's office, or in the office of the escribano or not? If you did, please to state which, when, and how long.

Sixth. In what office were concessions of land made and kept in East Florida, before the transfer of that province to the United States?

Seventh. In what office were royal titles (real titles) made and kept in East Florida, before the transfer of said province to the United States?

Eighth. In what office should the papers now be found deposited, which are referred to in the 6th and 7th preceding interrogatories? Is, or is not, the public archives the proper place of deposit for such papers?

Ninth. Are you the keeper of the public archives of East Florida, or not? If you are, please to state how long you have held said office.

Tenth. Is there any original grant or concession to John Breward, for the above memtioned 16,000 acres of land, on file in said archives, or not?

Eleventh. Please to name the several persons who held and exercised the office of governor of the province of East Florida, between the years 1784 and 1821, and the time when each of said persons entered upon the discharge of his duties as such governor, and when they respectively ceased to discharge the said duties?

Twelfth. Is there any order on file, in the said archives under your charge, from the King of Spain, or from the council of the Indies, requiring said governor to render an account of his administration, during the time when he held and discharged the duties of said office as governor as aforesaid? If there is, please state to which of said governors said order was directed, and annex to your answer a copy thereof.

Thirteenth. Were any of said governors ever required to render such account? If yea, state which of them.

Fourteenth. Did any one of said governors ever render such an account? If they did, please state which of them, when it was made, and particularly whether such account contained a statement of the number of grants or concessions of land made by said governor, during such administration, with the name or names of each grantee or grantees, and the number of acres of land granted to each.

Fifteenth. Is there any copy of such an account, made by any of said governors, now on file in the archives under your charge? If there is, please annex a copy thereof to your answer.

Sixteenth. Did any of said governors ever undergo a residencia in said province? If yea, which of them and when?

Seventeenth. Did any of said governors ever render any account to the king, captain-general intendant of Cuba, or any other officer, of the lands granted by him, except the single case of the exchange of lands for a vessel with Juan Russell, or not? If they did, please to state which of them, and of what said account consisted, and state also the particulars of the case of Juan Russell.

THOMAS DOUGLAS, United States Attorney.

JOHN BREWARD vs. THE UNITED STATES. } Land Claim for 16,000 acres, &c.

Cross-Interrogatories.

First. If you answer to the 10th direct interrogatory, that the original grant or concession of the mill-seat to John Breward, for 16,000 acres, is not on file in your office, be pleased to state whether the original certificate of that grant or concession by Thomas de Aguilar, the secretary of the government, is there, and if so, how it came there.

Second. State whether such certificate was not the only original evidence of title, furnished to the grantee by the government, in cases of grants or concessions, and whether such certificate, according to Spanish law and usage, was not to serve the grantee as proof of his grant or concession in any event.

Third. Had the grantee, in case of grant or concession, any right to, or control over the possession of the grant or concession, deposited in the office of the secretary of government, and of which the grantee received a counterpart certified by the secretary?

Fourth. Is not the case of John Russell a matter of record in your office, and are not all the proceedings set forth in writing thereon?

Objection. To so much of the 17th direct interrogatory, as makes inquiry as to the case of John Russell and the particulars thereof from the witness, we object, because the testimony of the witness is not the best evidence in the case: the question itself supposes that John Russell's case is of record in writing in the office of the archives, and a copy of that record is better evidence of its contents than the verbal testimony of the witness.

LANCASTER and SMITH, for Claimant.

Superior Court, District of East Florida.

THE UNITED STATES ads. JOHN BREWARD. } Land claim, 16,000 acres

The answers of Antonio Alvarez to the interrogatories and cross-interrogatories hereunto annexed, taken before commissioners appointed for that purpose in behalf of the United States.

Answers to direct Interrogatories.

To the first interrogatory—Witness answers: I am a native of East Florida.

Second. To this he answers: My age is forty-two years.

Third. To this he answers: St. Augustine has always been my residence. I was absent for some time in 1809 and 1810, in the Havana.

Fourth. To this he answers: I was clerk in the government secretary's office from 1807 to the change of government, during which time I was absent in the year 1809 and part of 1810, and parts of 1814 and 1815.

Fifth. To this he answers: I was clerk in the government secretary's office, as stated in the preceding answer. I also acted as clerk in the office of the escribano for a few months, in the year 1814.

Sixth. To this he answers: Concessions of land were made and kept in the office of the secretary of the government.

Seventh. To this he answers: Royal or real titles were made and kept in the office of the escribano.

Eighth. To this he answers: The proper place for the deposit of such papers is in the office of the public archives.

Ninth. To this he answers: I am the keeper of the public archives, and I have held the office since 1829.

Tenth. To this he answers: There is no original grant to John Breward on file in the office of the public archives. There is a copy of said grant, certified by Thomas de Aguilar, as secretary of the Spanish government, now on file in my office, which was transferred to me by the register and receiver of land office while acting as land commissioners.

Eleventh. To this he answers: Zespedes, from 1784 to 1790; Quesada, from 1790 to 1796; White, from 1796 to 1811; Estrada, from 1811 to June, 1812; Kendelan, from 1812, I believe, to May, 1815; Estrada, the balance of 1815; and Coppinger, from 1816 to the change of flags. My knowledge of the time of the government of Zespedes and Quesada is derived from the information I obtained in the office of the secretary of the government.

Twelfth. To this he answers: I know of no such order.

Thirteenth. To this he answers: I know of none.

Fourteenth. To this he answers: None of the governors made such account.

Fifteenth. To this he answers: There in no such document on file in my office.

Sixteenth. To this he answers: I know of no governor of East Florida who underwent any such residencia.

Seventeenth. To this he answers: The governors of East Florida never rendered an account of the lands granted by them, except in the case of the exchange of four thousand acres of land for a schooner, with John Russell.

Answers to Cross-Interrogatories.

To the first—Witness answers: There is a copy of said grant on file in my office, certified by Thomas de Aguilar, as secretary of the Spanish government; which copy was transferred to me by the register and receiver of the land office, while acting as land commissioners.

Second. To this he answers: I answer in the affirmative.

Third. To this he answers: The grantee had no right or control over the original.

Fourth. To this he answers: I answer in the affirmative.

We, whose names are hereunto subscribed, commissioners named in the annexed commission, do certify, that after being sworn ourselves, we did examine the witness named in said commission, under oath, and his answers to the interrogatories and cross-interrogatories annexed to said commission are truly and correctly herein set forth. Testimony of Antonio Alvarez, taken under commission, in the case of John W. Lowe and others against the United States.

District of East Florida, Superior Court.

THE UNITED STATES ads. JOHN W. LOWE, and others. } Land Claim, 16,000 acres.

Interrogatories to be propounded to Antonio Alvarez, esq., keeper of the public archives of East Florida, a witness to be sworn and examined before John C. Cleland, esq., a justice of the peace.

First. Are there any royal order or royal orders from the King of Spain, or any order or orders from the council of the Indies, the captain general or intendant of the island of Cuba, providing for the granting of lands in East Florida, on file in your office, except the royal orders of the 29th October, 1790, and the royal order of July 7th, 1815, or not? If there are, please to name them, and annex a copy thereof to your answer.

Second. Are the royal orders, dated Havana, October 15, 1790, and published in Clarke's Land Laws, page 996; and the one dated Havana, July 7, 1815, and published in the same book at page 1019, the same that you have first mentioned above, or not? Please to state particularly whether all the grants or concessions of land in East Florida, made since 1790, were made under either one or the other of these two last-mentioned royal orders, or not. If not, under what royal order were they made?

Third. Was it the duty and the practice of the governors of East Forida, to file, in the office of the escribano of that province, (or in some other office, and which,) all the orders which they respectively receive from the King of Spain, or from any of their superior officers, relative to the granting of lands in said province or not?

Fourth. Were you acquainted with the laws and usages of the government of East Florida, before the transfer of that province to the United States, or not?

Fifth. When the governor of East Florida referred any matter of judicial inquiry in relation to lands, in which the King of Spain might have an interest, to the auditor of war for his report, and said auditor reported thereon, and the governor made a decree approving such report, and requiring it to be complied with; was or was not the said decree, according to the laws and usage aforesaid, conclusive as to all the matters and things contained in said report?

Sixth. Was or was not such decree held and considered by the tribunals of the province aforesaid as of the highest judicial authority, and conclusive upon all the matters embraced by such report, unless the same was reversed by the King, or by the said governor himself upon a review thereof?

THOMAS DOUGLAS, United States Attorney.

JOHN LOWE ET AL. vs. THE UNITED STATES. } Land claim, &c.

Objections and cross-interrogatories.

We object to so much of the second interrogatory, as calls for an answer from the witness to the following inquiry, to wit: "Whether all grants or concessions of land in East Florida, made since 1790, were made under either or the other of these two last-mentioned royal orders or not? and if not, under what royal order were they made?"

We object to this inquiry because it is an attempt to prove the contents of grants or concessions by parol. The grants or concessions themselves in writing, in the office of the public archives, are the best and only legal evidence of their contents; and of these, certified copies are authorized and directed by law; or in a proper case, under the mandate of the court, the originals themselves may be taken from their depository, and exhibited in evidence; no parol testimony, no inference from, or construction of, their contents is admissible from any witness.

We object to the inquiry also, because it calls for evidence wholly irrelevant to this case; to the issue before the court; to the grant now in question. Grants in other cases, and the orders under which made, are foreign to, and not legal and pertinent evidence in this case.

First cross-interrogatory. If, in answer to the third interrogatory, you undertake to say what was the duty and practice of the governors of East Florida, as to the matters inquired of in the interrogatory, be pleased to state how you acquired a knowledge of the duty of these governors, and how you know what was their practice, as to all the orders which they respectively received as to the granting of lands.

Second cross-interrogatory. If you undertake to give any opinion upon the law questions propounded to you in the fifth and sixth interrogatories, state your means of knowledge, and upon what principles your opinion is founded.

We object to the fifth and sixth interrogatories, that they call for the opinions of the witness, who is not a lawyer, upon mere questions of law.

The answers to the interrogatories propounded to Antonio Alvarez, keeper of the public archives of East Florida, a witness examined in the above cause; the said Antonio Alvarez being first duly sworn:

To the first interrogatory—Witness answers: There are none to my knowledge.

Second interrogatory—Witness answers: I have never read Clarke's Land Laws. I believe that all the grants of land made in East Florida, since 1790, are founded upon the royal order communicated to this government, on the 29th of October, 1790, and the royal order of the 29th March, 1815.

Third interrogatory—Witness answers: It was the practice to file in the secretary's office all official communications received by the governors, and it was considered their duty to do so.

Fourth interrogatory—Witness answers: I am not acquainted with the laws, but I am with some of the usages.

Fifth interrogatory—Witness answers: As far as I know, all the decrees of the governors of East Florida, relating to lands, with or without the report or advice of the auditor of war, were here considered conclusive except when the governors themselves referred the same to a higher authority; but I cannot say anything with respect to the law on this subject.

Sixth interrogatory—Witness answers: To this interrogatory I answer the same as in the preceding one.

Cross-interrogatories.

First cross-interrogatory—Witness answers: While I was a clerk in the government secretary's office, it was the practice to file all the official communications handed by the governors to the secretary, but I do not know whether the governors retained or not in their possession any official communications. It was considered the duty of the governors to hand them to the secretary; but I know of no law respecting this subject.

Second cross-interrogatory—Witness answers: I have stated, and now repeat, that I know nothing of the law on this subject.

First. Are there any royal titles on file in your office, which were given by any governor of East Florida, conveying the title to lands to the grantee or grantees on account of services rendered by such grantee or grantees, or on account of losses sustained by such grantee or grantees, during the insurrections which took place in said province, during the year 1812 and 1813, or at any other time or not?

Second. If you answer the preceding direct interrogatory in the affirmative, please to examine such royal titles particularly, and state the time when the first of such royal titles was made, and annex a copy thereof to your answer to this interrogatory.

Third. Please examine your office, and ascertain to whom the largest quantity of land was confirmed by a royal title in said province, previous to the year 1816; state to whom said royal title was made, and annex a copy thereof to your answer to this interrogatory.

Fourth. Please to state the quantity of land embraced in a Spanish cabelleria, as known or generally understood in said province, before the transfer thereof to the United States.

Fifth. Was it generally considered and understood to be thirty-three and one third acres, or not?

To the first interrogatory—Witness answers: There are on file in my office, original royal (real) titles, given as a reward for services rendered the Spanish government of East Florida, during the insurrection in the years 1812 and 1813, and afterward, I believe, there is no specific title made as a payment for losses sustained.

Second interrogatory—Witness answers: The date of the first original royal (real) title in my office for services, is the 20th December, 1815, and a copy of said title is hereunto annexed.

Third interrogatory—Witness answers: The largest quantity of land confirmed by a royal (real) title, previous to the year 1816, was to John McQueen, a copy of which is hereunto annexed.

Fourth interrogatory—Witness answers: Thirty-three and one third acres.

Fifth interrogatory—Witness answers: Yes.

Document referred to in third answer of Alvarez.

Title in favor of Don Juan McQueen of ninety-eight caballerias and eight acres of land, at the plantation called San Juan Nepomucene:

Don Enrique White, colonel of the royal armies, civil and military governor of this city of St. Augustine of Florida and its province, by his Majesty: Whereas, in royal order communicated to this government, on the twentieth of October, 1790, by the captain general of the island of Cuba and two Floridas, it is provided, among other things, that to those strangers who, of their own accord, should present themselves to swear vassalage to our sovereign, there should be granted and surveyed lands gratis, in proportion to the workers that each family might have: That Don Juan McQueen, captain of militia and commander of them upon the rivers St. Johns and St. Marys, having presented himself and taken the customary oath, he solicited of the government, and there were granted, surveyed, and delivered to him, among other lands, ninety-eight caballerias and eight acres of land, at the plantation called San Juan Nepomucene, as a part of those corresponding to him; which land is known and distinguished under the following dimensions and lines. The first line runs south twenty-two degrees west, beginning at a pine marked with a cross on the margin of the river St. Johns, and ends at a stake with the same mark, bounding on the lands of Don Thomas Sterling, containing in measurement one hundred and forty chains. The second runs west, begins at said stake and ends at a pine with the same mark, having in measurement one hundred and fifty-five chains. The third runs north, beginning at said pine, and ends at another with the same mark of a cross; its measurement is of one hundred and sixty chains. The fourth runs west, commencing at said pine, and ending at another with the same mark, containing in its measurement one hundred and ten chains. The fifth runs north, beginning at the pine referred to, and ends at a stake with the same mark; its measurement is one hundred and ten chains. The sixth runs to the east, beginning at the aforesaid stake, and ends at a pine with the same mark, containing in measurement eighty chains. The seventh runs north fifty degrees east, beginning at said pine referred to, and ends at a cypress marked with the same mark of a cross; it has in measurement forty chains. Its front runs partly on the river St. Johns, and partly on McGirt's creek, forming an irregular figure divided by various creeks, as appears from the certificate given by the captain Don Pedro Marrot, commissioned judge for said distribution and measurement of lands, dated the fourteenth of January, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two, and its corresponding plat, executed by Don Samuel Eastlake, who was surveyor at said measurement. And whereas, there had been no title whatever issued to him for proof and security of his dominion to the said lands, in the form that it was executed to others; that there has already elapsed more than the ten years' uninterrupted possession to obtain the useful and direct dominion to the aforesaid lands, and in absolute property, having built houses upon, and cultivated them, and finally complied with all the other conditions which the government established for the grants and concessions of this nature, apparent in the title issued to other settlers, as is stated in the proceedings moved by the interested, soliciting to have issued to him the corresponding titles to the lands which he has already measured and bounded, and of which he is in possession: Therefore, and in consideration of all of which, having been previously advised by his lordship, my lieutenant auditor of war, and assessor general, I have thought proper to grant to him as in the name of his Majesty and of his royal justice which I administer, I do grant to the aforesaid Don Juan McQueen the aforesaid ninety-eight caballerias and eight acres of land, of which the said plantation is composed, for himself, his heirs, and successors, in absolute property, and in issuing to him, as by these presents I do, the corresponding title, by which I separate the royal exchequer from the right which to said land it had, and I cede and transfer it to the aforesaid McQueen, his heirs and successors, that in consequence thereof they may possess it as their own, use and enjoy it free of all incumbrance, with all its inlets, outlets, uses, customs, rights, and services which it had, has, and in right and in law thereto appertained and might belong, and it being their will they may sell, cede, exchange, transfer, and alienate them as may best suit them, in virtue of the royal order already cited. To all of which I interpose my authority as far as I can and of right ought to.

Given under my hand, and countersigned by the undersigned escribano of his Majesty and of the government and royal exchequer in this city of St. Augustine of Florida, the twenty-seventh of February, one thousand eight hundred and four, (interlined,) to the aforesaid Don Juan McQueen—valid.

Question. How long have you had charge of the office in which the surveys and returns made by the surveyors Marrot and Clarke are deposited?

Answer. Since the year 1829.

Question. Were you or not a clerk in the office in which these documents were deposited, under the Spanish government; and if so, how many years were you employed in said office?

Answer. The office in which these surveys were deposited in Spanish times, was the office of the escribano, and not the office in which I was a clerk?

Question. Have you examined particularly the surveys and returns made by Marrot and Clarke, now in the public archives under your charge, and do you think you are well acquainted with them?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Do you find among the archives any instance in which Marrot changed the location of a grant without the order or decree of the governor for such change of location?

Answer. As well as I have been able to ascertain, there are two or three cases where Marrot has surveyed land at a different place from that where the grant called for.

Question. In the cases you have mentioned, are there no orders or decrees of the governor for the change of location?

Answer. No.

Question. Were those locations approved by royal title, for the land located?

Answer. I find no royal title for them.

Question. What is the date of the concession and the date of the change of location in the cases you have mentioned?

Answer. I do not recollect precisely; these cases were between 1791 and 1793. I cannot recollect the precise date of each case.

Question. Have you examined the surveys and plats returned to the office of the notary of government, by George J. F. Clarke, in Spanish times?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Do you find among the returns he deposited in Spanish times, any instance in which the said surveyor general, George J. F. Clarke, changed the location of the grant, without the order or decree of the governor, and located other lands than those mentioned in the grant?

Answer. Yes; I find more than one instance in which he has changed the location without the decree of the governor.

Question. Please state how many instances of the kind you have found, and under what circumstances the change of location appears to have been made.

Answer. One instance is a case of Burgos Higginbottom, for 700 acres of land. In this case I am positive that the change of location was made and filed during the Spanish government; the other instances in which changes of location were made, the papers have been filed in my office by the register and receiver. The case of Higginbottom is the only case that I find filed in the office under the Spanish government, where a change of location has been made by George J. F. Clarke, as far as I have been able to ascertain. The concession to Higginbottom is made in the year 1803. Mr. Clarke made a survey of it in 1816 of 500 acres, and another of 200 acres, at a different place from that for which the concession was made, and he states in his certificate of survey, that the land granted by the concession, being occupied by another person, Higginbottom had taken possession of, and cultivated the land that he surveyed.

Question. Was the land surveyed by Clarke granted to Higginbottom by a royal title?

Answer. In 1819 a royal title was issued to the heirs of Higginbottom.

Question. Was not the royal title granted to Higginbottom, on a petition, stating that he had inhabited and cultivated the land surveyed to him for a number of years?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Was it not the custom to grant lands in absolute property to those who had settled on the royal lands without a concession, when they proved that they had inhabited and cultivated agreeably to the regulations of the province?

Answer. I don't know. If there is any instance of it, I do not recollect. I believe Marrot was authorized to survey lands to those persons that were established in the province, according to the number of their family, and that survey was considered a concession.

Question. Did Marrot exercise any other powers than those of a surveyor, when engaged in surveying lands to actual settlers?

Answer. He had the power of surveying to each person the quantity corresponding to his family. He was a commissioner to survey lands to persons that were entitled to them. In each certificate of survey which he made, he states that the survey corresponds to the number of the family of the person, according to the oath which he made, and sometimes, in his certificate of survey, that the land corresponded in part to the number of the person's family.

Question. Did not the surveys and returns of Marrot show that he had surveyed to the settler the land which he, at the time, inhabited and cultivated, and that the quantity of land surveyed to him was in proportion to the number of his family and slaves, agreeably to the regulations of the province?

Answer. In his certificate of survey he never says whether the party was settled there before or not. He says that the quantity of land that he surveys is in part of the quantity the person is entitled to, or the whole he is entitled to. I have nothing to judge from but his certificates on file in my office.

July 31, 1833.

Antonio Alvarez again called and examined on the part of the United States:

Question. Are you acquainted with all the royal titles granted by the Spanish governors of this province for land to individuals?

Answer. All the royal titles exist in my office. I am acquainted with them in that way. I know they are all in my office.

Question. Were not all these royal titles granted under the royal orders of 1790 and 1815?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Were not the regulations of Governor White in force in this province, from their publication in 1803, until the transfer of Florida to the United States?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Is not the case of Higginbottom, filed in this cause, the only instance in which a royal title was granted for lands, where the change of location was made by the surveyor, without the express order of the governor in writing?

Answer. It is the only one that has come within my knowledge.

Examined by claimant—Question. Were Governor White's regulations, respecting the granting of lands, considered as absolute law, in all cases, and bound the governors, his successors in office?

Answer. I don't know that they were in force—I don't know how far they bound the governors.

Question. Was the rule adopted by Governor White, of ten years' occupation and cultivation of land conceded, necessary for a complete title, what is called a royal title, in cases of concessions made by other governors?

Answer. I don't know that Governor White made any rule of ten years' possession. I believe it was Governor Quesada that made that rule. I know that that rule was departed from in some instances, particularly by Governor Kendelan, and since.

Examined by United States attorney—Question. Do you remember any particular instance in which the rules you have referred to in your last answer, was departed from by Governor Kendelan and his successors?

Answer. I don't recollect precisely the different instances—I know very well that the rule was departed from.

Question. Were they not cases which occurred after the date of the treaty, of if before the date of the treaty, were they not some peculiar circumstances which caused the departure from the general rule?

Answer. I cannot recollect what caused the departure from the rule—I cannot recollect the cases—I know that they occurred before the date of the treaty. By reference to my office I might be able to state the cases. The persons had not commenced settling on the land in those I have alluded to; I am now speaking with respect to concessions in which the rule was departed from. In relation to royal titles, I know of two instances in which the party has been permitted to sell the land by the governor without having obtained royal titles.

Question. Do you recollect any case in which a royal title was granted for land, until the party had complied with the conditions of his grant, and did not the government always require proof of such compliance with conditions before the royal title was given?

Answer. I do not recollect of any case. I know that they generally required proof of their having complied with the conditions of the concession.

Examined by the court.—Witness states, that no time was limited, after the concession was made, within which the survey was to be made. The general time within which the party was to take possession of the lands granted, was from three to six months, in some instances more time was allowed. Witness supposes that the survey of the land would be the taking possession. Witness states, that the party must have ten years' continued possession to entitle him to the royal title. Witness does not know of any difference as to the survey, occupancy, and possession, between mill-grants and other grants.

Examined by claimant—Question. Did, or not, Governor Coppinger, often depart from the rule of ten years' occupation of the land conceded by him, before he gave a royal title?

Answer. I have said that from Governor Kendelan's time, and since, the rule was departed from in many instances; I do not recollect the particular cases.

Examined by United States attorneys.—Witness being requested to look at the document offered in evidence, on the part of the United States, and filed herein and numbered 8, and state whether that document does not contain the usual form of applying for, and obtaining a royal title, or a title in full property, under the Spanish government—witness replies, that it does.

Witness being requested to look at the documents offered in evidence, on the part of the United States, and filed herein, and numbered 9 and 10, and state whether those documents are not copies of the documents in the two instances which he has mentioned in his testimony, where the Spanish governor of this province has given the party permission to sell the land without obtaining royal titles—witness answers, Yes.

Documents in the case of Burgos Higginbottom, referred to by the witness, Antonio Alvarez, in the foregoing testimony.

SEN. GOVERNOR: Dona Isabella Higginbottom, inhabitant of the river St. Mary's, widow, and mother of sixteen children, with the respect due to your excellency, presents herself and says: That, under date of the twenty-fourth of September, of the year one thousand eight hundred and three, his excellency the governor Don Enrique White, was pleased to grant to her deceased husband, Burras Higginbottom, seven hundred acres of land, as appears by the certificate which accompany, which land he cultivated until his death, in the year 1812; and since then, this party interested has continued in the possession and cultivation of the same, keeping upon them her increased family, which she is ready to prove, wherefore she prays your excellency will be pleased to order, (after having complied with the customary forms,) there should be issued to her, her title of property, inasmuch as there has already elapsed more than the ten years' possession established to entitle her to ask it. It is a favor which she hopes for, from the justice of your excellency.

ST. MARY'S RIVER, February 25, 1819. ELIZABETH HIGGINBOTTOM.

DECREE.—St. Augustine, March 6, 1819. The documents which accompany are taken for presented, admit the proof which this party offers, the witnesses testifying under the formalities of law, before the present notary, to whom it is referred, certifying, first, the conditions under which the lands are granted, and being done, let it be reported, that it may be acted upon.

Don Juan de Pierra, lieutenant of the 3d battalion of the regiment of infantry of Cuba, and secretary of the government:

I certify that the memorial, presented by Don Farquhar Bethune, relinquishing the one thousand and one hundred acres of land, which, on the 6th August, 1803, were granted to him at a place formerly cultivated by one Captain Ross, near Indian river; and having asked for an equal number of acres on Halifax river, its boundary commencing south of the lands granted to Samuel Williams, the following decree was on this day had: "Admit the relinquishment which this party interested makes, of the one thousand and one hundred acres of land that were granted to him near Indian river; granting to him, in lieu thereof, an equal number of acres at the place he solicits.—WHITE." And that it may serve the party interested as security, I give the present in St. Augustine of Florida the 25th September 1805.

JUAN DE PIERRA.

In virtue of the commission conferred on me, by his excellency Don Enrique White, civil and military governor of this province, on the 7th October, in the year 1803:

I certify that I have measured and bounded to Don Farquhar Bethune, a piece of land that contains one thousand and one hundred acres of land, situated on Halifax river; bounded on the north by lands of Don Samuel Williams, on the east by Halifax river, on the south and west by vacant lands; which form and demarcation are those denoted in the following plat, (see plate I., fig. 3,) and that it may appear, I sign the same, in St. Augustine of Florida, this 18th day of May, 1806.

JUAN PURCELL, Surveyor.

SEN. GOVERNOR: Don Farquhar Bethune, a new settler of this province, with due respect to your excellency, appears and says: that in the month of August of the year 1803, the government was pleased to grant me one thousand and one hundred acres of land on Indian river, and having experienced in two years of successive cultivation its little or no value, I obtained of the government the favor of being permitted to abandon this land, and take in lieu of them a like quantity on Halifax river, as will appear by the certificate of the secretary, Don Juan de Pierra, which is annexed to this solicitude; and as the ten years' possession required by the government has already elapsed, that at their expiration and not before, there is granted to the new settlers the title of property, and having effected its survey and demarcation according to the certificate and plat given by Don Juan Purcell, surveyor, appointed for the purpose, and is also hereunto annexed: Therefore, he prays your excellency will be pleased to order that the corresponding title of property be extended and issued to me, for the one thousand and one hundred acres of land. It is favor which I hope to obtain from the just administration of your excellency.

Before me: JUAN DE ENTRALGO, Notary of the Government pro tem.

In St. Augustine, on the same day, month, and year, I made known to Farquhar Bethune the preceding decree.

Attest: ENTRALGO.

On the same day I notified Don José Mariano Hernandez of his appointment of interpreter, said in such decree; and being informed, he said he accepted it, and did accept, promising under oath in form, which he took before the auditor of war, to discharge the duties of interpreter well and faithfully, and signed with said auditor, of which I attest.

ARREDONDO,
JOSEPH M. HERNANDEZ.

Before me: JUAN DE ENTRALGO, Notary of the Government pro tem.

I certify and attest, that the conditions referred to in the preceding decree, are: first, that the grantee, his heirs and successors, shall, within two years, calculated from the date when the titles are issued to them, build on the lands granted a house with a chimney, proportioned to his means and family; second, it shall be the duty of the same to keep the land cleared for the purposes of cultivation; as also within the term of three years, he shall have at least five head of horned cattle for every fifty acres of land that may not be fit for cultivation; and that whenever any part of them should be required for public works or fortifications, it shall be ceded, returning the same quantity to the grantee at some other vacant place of his choice, or he shall be paid its value according to appraisement; and finally, that although the gift and concession is made in perpetuity, the receiver, nor his heirs, shall not alienate nor transfer the lands to other dominion, unless the lapse of the term of ten years' possession, and even then, the first transfer ought to be made by the permission of the government, and otherwise it shall be null; which conditions will be seen in the titles which this government has issued to some settlers, after having received the royal order on concessions of lands; and in compliance with what is ordered, I put my signet and sign the present, in St. Augustine of Florida, the 2d of March, one thousand eight hundred and fourteen.

JUAN DE ENTRALGO, Notary of the Government pro tem.

In St. Augustine of Florida, the third of March, one thousand eight hundred and fourteen, before me, Don Juan de Arredondo y Santelices, auditor of war pro tem. of said city, appeared Don Ezra Patch, to testify, being a resident planter of this province, widower, and native of Connecticut, in the United States of America, to whom his lordship, before me, and with the assistance of Don José Mariano Hernandez, who acted as interpreter, received oath, which he made according to law, upon which he promised to tell the truth in what he should know of what should be asked him: and being asked about the contents of the memorial which precedes, presented by Don Farquhar Bethune, and showing him the documents annexed thereto, he said that he knew for certain that the memorialist has cultivated, for the space of more than ten years, the lands which the government granted to him on Halifax river, calculating this time with that he held near Indian river, which he relinquished; that as the witness has lived a long time in the Territory of Musquito, engaged in agriculture, he has frequently been at Bethune's plantation, referred to in the certificate and plat I have before me, and he can assure that the lands are cleared; that there are buildings for habitation of whites and blacks, fences, and various kinds of stock, and all else necessary upon a plantation, having complied, in the opinion of the witness, with the conditions established by the government; and says that all is true, under the oath he has taken. That he is forty-seven years of age. And having read this declaration to him, he said it was correct, and signed it, with his honor the auditor and interpreter, to which I attest.

In the city of St. Augustine, Florida, on the same day, month, and year, before his honor, the auditor of war, appeared Don Gabriel Guillermo Perpall, a native of Mahon, residing in and settled in this province, of the married state, a witness presented by Don Farquhar Bethune, to prove what he has been ordered; from whom his honor, the said auditor before me, the escribana, received his oath, which he made according to law, under which he promised to speak the truth of what he knows of what may be asked him. And having been asked concerning the memorial presented by the petitioner, and the documents which accompany it, he said that he knows for certain that Don Farquhar Bethune has cultivated and planted the lands which he has on Halifax river, from the time the government granted them to him; and, besides, has built houses, fences, and all else necessary on a plantation, with stock of animals, and has cleared it for planting, which the witness has seen, and is publicly known; and says all is true under his oath; that he is forty-five years of age, and having made him acquainted with the contents of this declaration, he said it was correct, and signed it with his honor the auditor, to which I attest.

ARREDONDO,
GAB. G. PERPALL.

Before me:

JUAN DE ENTRALGO, Notary of the Government pro tem.

In the city of St. Augustine of Florida, on said day, month, and year, Don Farquhar Bethune, to prove what had been ordered, presented Don José Mariano Hernandez, native resident and merchant of this city, of the married state, from whom his honor, the auditor of war, before me received oath, which he made according to law, under which he promised to speak the truth in what he knows of what might be asked him; and being asked concerning the memorial presented, showing him the documents which were presented with it, he says: That he knows, positively, from what he has seen, that Don Farquhar Bethune has cultivated the lands which are mentioned in the certificate which has been manifested to him, since this government made concession of them to him, and that it is true he has cleared, opened, and improved said lands, as building dwelling-houses, fences, and all else necessary for a plantation, well managed with stock of animals, by which, in the opinion of the witness, he has complied with the conditions established to obtain titles of property, and says that all is true under the oath he has taken; that he is over twenty-six years of age, and being informed of the contents of this declaration, he expressed its being correct, and signed it with his honor the auditor, to which I attest.

ARREDONDO,
JOSEPH M. HERNANDEZ.

Before me:

JUAN DE ENTRALGO, Notary of the Government pro tem.

SEN.: By the merit shown by the preceding proof and documents presented by Don Farquhar Bethune, to prove the long possession and cultivation had upon the lands which this government has conceded to him on the Halifax river, as is seen by the certificate exhibited, and that he has complied with the conditions that are imposed to make himself entitled to the title of property, let there be issued the title solicited by the said Bethune, in the customary form, and according to the plat which is found annexed to this proceeding, the costs of which will be paid by the party interested, with twenty-four rials, judges' fees.

SENOR GOVERNOR: Jose Bonely, of this vicinity, to your excellency, respectfully says: That, as will appear from the annexed certificate issued in his favor by the secretary of this government, on the 16th of January, 1799, your excellency was pleased to grant him 600 acres of land south of the orange grove at Matanzas bar, distant twenty-five miles from this city, at which place he then settled himself, cultivating them personally, with his children, until about the first of last year, when he was obliged forcibly to abandon them, in the exercise of his natural right, which obliged him to retire to this place, driven by the Indians, who, your excellency knows, (and it is notorious,) abused his family, taking all of them to their towns with the greatest rigor and inhumanity, leaving his eldest son dead; and, although it is true, that through the many and effective steps taken by your excellency, I have obtained (getting after much time) my wife and three children, it is also true they retain two of each sex from me. By this occurrence, which has reduced him almost to beggary, he has determined to sell the right which he has acquired to said lands, with the improvements which he made upon them when he cultivated them, which houses are exposed, from being abandoned by the petitioner since the day of his misfortune; and for this purpose he supplicates your excellency most earnestly to pity his misfortunes, and through an effect of charity, to be pleased to permit him to make the aforesaid sale, that with its proceeds he may be compensated for the damages and injuries which he has suffered; which favor he hopes to merit from the piousness of your excellency's heart.

No. 17.—Peter Miranda, claimant—368,640 acres of land.

As this is a large grant, and one which has been much spoken of, we shall give at length the petition of the party and the decree of the governor:

SENOR GOVERNOR: Don Pedro Merando, second pilot of the launch of the bar of this port, with the most profound respect, states to your excellency that he has had the honor to serve his most Catholic Majesty (whom God preserve!) from the year 1788, when he was employed as a rower in said launch, in which capacity he continued until, by his distinguished merits and skill, he was appointed to his present employment. Furthermore, your excellency well knows the truth of his good management, fidelity, and love of the service of his Majesty, proved in divers expeditions which, by order of this government, the deponent made in the year 1795, in the rivers of this province, when it was ravaged by the rebels; and as for such remarkable services, and others latterly performed, to the satisfaction of your excellency: Wherefore he prays your excellency to be pleased, in recompense of what he has set forth, and in consideration of his impoverished situation, to grant him an absolute property, eight leagues square, in the royal lands which are on the waters of the bays of Hillsborough and Tampor, in this province, by virtue of the royal orders for the granting of lands gratis to Spanish subjects; a favor which he hopes to obtain from the justice of your excellency.

ST. AUGUSTINE, FLORIDA, November 26, 1810.

The merits and services which this party sets forth being well known and established, let there be granted to him, on the terms which he solicits, the quantity of land at the points indicated, without injury to a third person; and to authenticate this grant at all times, let a certified copy of this memorial be issued from the secretary's office, for his security.

WHITE.

The witnesses examined in this case before the former board of commissioners, are Gabriel W. Perpall, F. Bethune, James Hall, Antonio Alvarez, and B. Segui. The only point upon which their examination goes, is the authenticity of the original, and the signature of Governor White.

Perpall says, that "it looks like the signature of White, but he cannot swear to it." "That, from the finishing of the flourish attached to the name, he cannot believe or disbelieve it to be genuine, as the difference might arise from the position in which the writer's hand was placed, or from some other cause."

Carrado has never seen the governor write, and knows nothing about it.

Bethune does "not think the writing as perfect as Governor White's signature usually was, the governor being remarkable for great precision therein; but it may nevertheless be his, as it may have been written when he was unwell."

When cross-examined, he says, "the governor died in 1811, and had been indisposed several months before his death, but was not confined to his bed." "That he had seen the governor sign different decrees, some of which were for land and some for passports, but neither within a few months before his death." When asked whether he had seen Governor White write on any other occasion than those mentioned above, so as to enable him to acquire a knowledge of the governor's handwriting, he answered in the negative. He says, furthermore, that "the governor, a few years before his death, drank a little hard in the afternoon, though he did not usually transact business at that time." The witness, in 1810, lived on the river St. John's, and came occasionally to town.

James Hall was acquainted with the governor from 1798 until 1810, and "has often seen him write." When the original was presented to him, he says, "the signature of White looks something like the governor's; but witness had never seen any of his writing done so incorrectly as this." That his opinion is formed "from the latter part of the name, White, which appears to have been written lower down than was usual with the governor. That this is the only material difference perceived by witness, though the whole does not appear so correct as he, White, usually wrote."

The above witnesses seem to have been sworn on the part of the United States, and those that follow on the part of the claimant.

Antonio Alvarez deposes "that he is acquainted with the handwriting of Governor White. That he has been a clerk in his office, in which situation he has often seen him write. That he entered said office in the year 1807, and continued there, with two slight intermissions, until the change of flags in 1821." When the original concession, brought before the board from the office of the public archives, by the keeper thereof, was exhibited to the witness, and he was asked whether he believed the signature, White, to be genuine, he answered simply in the affirmative.

When cross-examined, he deposes, "that his opinion of the genuineness of the signature is formed both from the signature itself and the flourish immediately under it." "He has no particular recollection of the t's or the e's in Governor White's name, or the manner in which the first was crossed, or the second joined to it; but, from the general appearance of the signature, believes it to be genuine." He does not believe the e is made totally different from the manner in which Governor White usually made it, but it seems closer to the t than Governor White placed it usually; that the governor signed his name with great uniformity, and he considers this signature regular and uniform."

The witness knows nothing of the making of this grant. He says that concessions for lands were deposited in the government secretary's office. When asked if it was within his knowledge that, since the time at which this concession was made, it had always been in the said office, he adverted to the date of the concession, and answered in the affirmative.

He furthermore deposes, that vacant lands, situated at a distance from St. Augustine, were not considered of much value or importance about the year 1810; and, to the question of the district attorney, he answers, that "Governor White was always cautious and sparing in granting to individuals any part of the public lands."

B. Segui "is well acquainted with the handwriting of Governor White, having seen him write many times." Witness lived in the government notary's office, whence it was his duty, almost every day, to carry papers to the governor for his signature. In this office he continued, with a few intermissions, from the year 1800 to the year 1812 or 1813. When the grant now under adjudication was presented to him, and he was asked whether he believed the signature to be genuine, he answers, that "he has no doubt of it." He says further, that "he became acquainted with the existence of the grant a few days after it was made, as he (the witness) drew the memorial, at the request of Mr. Morando; and that the lands situated at such a distance from St. Augustine, as those granted by this concession, were then considered of very little value."

On a question of the district attorney, whether the governors of this then province were not regulated in the distribution of lands to individuals, more by the principles and rules they had adopted and established for the granting of lands than the value of lands granted—the witness answers, that "the governors were regulated, in the granting of lands, by the merits of the individual, the number of his family, or the value of the lands asked for, according to his own discretion." We have thus given, at full length, the documentary evidence upon which this claim is based, and an abstract of the evidence taken before the board of commissioners, nearly as long as the depositions themselves, adopting, for the most part, the language of the witnesses; not that we have deemed this testimony at all important to the decision of the case, if our decision was final, but it may be satisfactory to the numerous claimants under the pretended grantee. It seems to us strange that the name of White should be attached to a grant like this, whose uniform practice and unvarying declarations have shown, in the language of the witness Alvarez, that "he was always cautious and sparing in granting to individuals any part of the public lands." There are many letters of Governor White to the superintendent at Cuba. There are many of his decrees and regulations, in all of which he has invariably declared, that he would conform to the laws in granting of lands. Nay, more, he has, by his own act, made those laws more rigorous than they were, and circumscribed within narrow limits his own authority. He has said, in his letter to the governor general of Cuba, that the regulations of Quesada were too liberal in granting one hundred acres to the heads of families, and one half of that quantity to its members; and by his (Governor White's) own decree, he has reduced the relative quantity to fifty and twenty-five acres.

If we examine the laws of Spain, we shall see by the laws of the Indies, published in the recent copy of the Land Laws, page —, and in the royal order of 1754, so much spoken of, published in the same book for the first time, page —, we shall find by those laws, that no authority is given for a grant like this. The only subsequent decree upon the subject of land which we have been enabled to discover, is the royal order of 1790, made specially for this province. That order applies exclusively to foreigners; and it was a matter of courtesy on the part of the governors, to extend its provisions to the native subjects of Spain. It has been contended that, by the provisions of that order, there is no fixed quantity of acres named, to which the party should be entitled; or, in other words, the power of the governor upon that subject is left without limit.

Without adverting to the many declarations of his Catholic Majesty made in his royal orders, of dates both previous and subsequent, that lands should be granted in proportion to the workers of a family, or, in other words, that no man should have granted to him more lands than he could cultivate; and, furthermore, that lands should only be given for the sake of cultivation and improvement, and not for the sake of speculation; we might admit, for the sake of argument, that the quantity to be granted was left only to the governor's discretion. That discretion has been exercised by Governor Quesada, in the first place, and afterward by Governor White. This last governor, in his letter to the Marquis de Someruelos, the captain general of Cuba, dated 15th of October, 1803, uses these words: "My predecessor has assigned one hundred acres of land to the fathers of families, and fifty to each child or slave, whether full grown or small, a quantity really excessive, and could only have taken place at that time in which there were few strangers who came in solicitude of lands; but at present there are many who come, and, consequently, there would result the greatest injury in the improvement of the province, unless said number of acres be diminished, on account of its being more than one individual can cultivate in a year, even divided into three parts, for the purpose of giving rest to the lands. Which circumstance I have had also present for the deduction which has been made."

After this, it is impossible for us to believe that Governor White, either before or after dinner, ever made a grant of 368,640 acres of land to any individual whatever. The grantee cannot claim the land under the laws of the Indies, or the royal orders of 1754 or 1790, and we know of no authority vested in the Spanish governor, before the year 1815, to make a grant to any individual for services, however much more than Governor White that governor may have been disposed to be liberal.

If we look at the grant itself, and take the claim and merits of Miranda, as set forth by himself, to be true, how contemptible and ridiculous do they seem, when viewed as a basis for a grant like this.

P. Miranda, second pilot of the launch of the bar of this port, promoted by his distinguished merits and skill, from a common rower on board of said launch, claims a principality as his reward. In addition to high services as a pilot and rower, he represents that he has made some magnificent expeditions in the rivers of this province, and then, for his services and his poverty, modestly begs for eight leagues square, by virtue of the royal orders for the granting of lands gratis to Spanish subjects.

We will not pronounce this grant a forgery, and thus debar the party of the rights which he may have acquired by the law of 23d of May, 1828. We are prevented from this by the deposition of Segui and Alvarez; but we think it our duty to say, that we view any grant purporting to be made by Governor White to a larger amount than is prescribed by the royal orders, and by his own regulation, as extremely suspicious. We consider him the most correct governor who has ever presided in East Florida, the most strictly observant of the laws, and the most parsimonious of the public lands; and we do firmly believe, that if his example had been followed by his successors, and if his name had never been signed after his death, there would now be no confusion in the land titles of East Florida. We furthermore believe, that, previous to the year 1803, Governor White never made a grant of land more extensive than that prescribed by the regulations of Quesada, nor, subsequently to that period, more extensive than was permitted by his own. We do not believe that he has ever yet made a grant for services, nor for anything other than head rights; that he has never made a grant, when living, of 20,000 acres to one individual, whatever he may have done since dead; and that he has never made a grant within the Indian boundaries, within which limits this land then lay.

It is true, that the original of this document, or claim, has been found in the office of the public archives; but it is a matter of history, that the papers now deposited there were, for a long time after the change of government, most loosely kept and guarded; and it was a matter of equal facility to take a paper out, or smuggle it in. From the best evidence we have been enabled to acquire upon this subject, it appears to the board that there were two offices at this place under the Spanish government—the escribano office, which was regularly kept in books, stiched together in consecutive pages, with all the records closely following each other, so as to make it extremely difficult to interpolate a grant. For the records of this office we have high respect; it seems to have been a place where all grants were recorded when fully matured. The other, the office of the governor's secretary, was of a different character; here all the papers were in loose and detached sheets, easy to have been taken away, or to have had a forged document thrust among them, without the power of detection.

This is the office in which all the memorials for lands, with the inchoate decree of the governor, were first thrown; and it does appear to the board, that these first decrees do, in no case, amount to a grant, but barely give to the applicant the right to become a settler upon the performance of all the conditions imposed by the law. We will give an exemplification of our ideas: A. B., upon coming into the province, if he is a new settler, writes his memorial to the governor, and applies for 50,000 acres of land; the governor says, "let it be granted, until, accordingly to the number of his family, the portion to which he is entitled is allotted to him. This paper is thrown into the governor's secretary's office, and, as we conceive, is itself no record, and conveys no title. It is a bare permission to the applicant to settle in the country, and to receive his lands if he shall take the oath of allegiance; 50,000 acres if he has workers enough to justify the grant, and 500, if, by the number of his family, he is entitled to no more. It will not be pretended that the party could claim the lands thus granted, if he never afterward took the oath of allegiance; nor can it be pretended that, by the mere grant, as above supposed, the 50,000 acres are conveyed, until some subsequent step is taken by the party to consummate his title. In addition to the oath of allegiance, he was required to swear to the number of his workers; and when this was done, according to the number of his workers was the quantity granted, and subsequently surveyed by the public surveyor. Then it was that the documents were all transferred to the office of the escribano, fairly written out in a book of records, and entitled to the fullest confidence; but the loose papers in the governor's secretary's office, the first memorial and decree, such as we have just described it, do not seem to have conveyed any title, to have been considered any record, or worthy of any preservation. It was over this last office that Thomas de Aguilar presided; it is from this office that so many monstrous grants have emanated; it is from this office that the originals of Thomas de Aguilar's certificates of grants are lost; and it is in this office that the original of the grant before us is to be found. It may be as well, from the loose manner in which these documents in the governor's secretary's office were kept, as from the little faith to be attached to Aguilar's certificates, that so many of the originals of these certificates are lost; and if the view which we have taken of this matter be correct, Aguilar may have been a meritorious officer, his certificates perfectly genuine, and the grants which are pretended to be conveyed by them of no validity.

It is possible that, after making application for the lands, as certified by Aguilar, the party, unable or unwilling to comply with the conditions, had abandoned his intention of becoming a Spanish subject and a Spanish grantee; and yet, having scrupulously preserved the certificate of Aguilar, given at the time when the original, known to be of no value, was thrown away, has come before this board since the change of flags, and applied for the lands; and such a case, if it were not for the "grant on absolute property," might we deem this of Miranda's to be. If he had asked for ten leagues square of Governor White, and the governor had said, "Let it be done in proportion to his family," and Miranda had proved that he had 1,000 negroes or 1,000 children, Miranda would have been entitled to the amount, however large, which, by the regulations, he could claim for them; but, as he has proved neither the one nor the other, and has never surveyed the land, even if the grant be genuine, he can take nothing by a title like this.

Argument of the counsel for the United States in the Supreme Court, in the cases of the United States vs. George I. F. Clark, John and Antonio Huertes, Joseph M. Hernandez, et al.

The right which Spain acquired by discovery and conquest, on this continent, was universally acknowledged and acquiesced in by all the nations of Europe, and has never been denied by the government of the United States.

According to the laws and policy of Spain, as well as the theory of the British constitution, all vacant lands are vested in the crown, as representing the nation; and the exclusive power to grant them is declared to reside in the crown as a branch of the royal prerogative. (White's Compilation, page 41.)

The fee of the crown could only be divested by the King himself, or by the persons to whom his power was especially delegated, and in the form and manner prescribed for their government.

The exercise of the granting power by any other person, or in any other manner, would convey no estate in the land to the nominal grantee; it would not divest the fee of the crown, and would be, to all intents and purposes, an absolute nullity.

The 6th section of the act of 1828 gives jurisdiction to the superior courts over all claims to land in Florida, embraced by the treaty.

The terms "embraced by the treaty," as employed in the statute, can include only those claims which the treaty imposes an obligation on this government to confirm.

The English version of the 8th article has been rejected; and the Spanish version of the treaty has been adopted by the court: and from a proper translation of the language used by the Spanish minister, without regard to the language, understanding, and obvious intention of the American negotiator, we must determine on the one hand the rights secured to the people of the ceded territory, and on the other, the obligations and responsibilities imposed on the United States.

According to the translation of the 8th article of the treaty, as made by the translator of foreign languages for this government, "all grants of land made by his Catholic Majesty, or by his lawful authorities, before the 24th of January, 1818, in the said territories, which his Majesty cedes to the United States, shall remain ratified and confirmed to the persons who are in possession of them, in the same manner that they would have been if his Majesty had continued in the dominion of the said territories." This clause of the treaty contemplates perfect titles; titles given after the performance of all the conditions of the grant, either expressed or implied in law: grants which, previous to the date of the treaty, had been confirmed and ratified by the King, or by his lawful authority. Any grant not ratified and confirmed before the date of the treaty, could not remain ratified and confirmed after the date of the treaty. Until it had been ratified and confirmed, it could not remain ratified and confirmed. The confirmation must have had being, before it has continuance and remainder. This appears to be the plain and natural interpretation of the 1st clause of the 8th article. But for a more perfect illustration of the intention of the Spanish negotiator, (and we will at present consider his intentions alone, without regard to the intentions of the other party to the contract,) it is only necessary for one moment to examine the laws and ordinances, rules and regulations, provided by the Spanish government, for the disposal of the royal domain.

Until after the date of the royal order of 1815, there was neither law, ordinance, or local regulation, in East Florida, which authorized a grant of land for any other purpose than that of habitation and cultivation.

This opinion is advanced with confidence, because the united efforts of numerous and learned counsel, in behalf of the claimants, in this and in the court below, have been unable to produce any authority: and the judge, although he decides otherwise, has been unable to refer to any such law, although specially required to do so in his decree, by the act of 1824.

The laws of the Indies, authorizing grants of land, forbid the investment of title in the grantee, until he shall have inhabited and cultivated the land during four years. (Law 1, liber 4, title 12, page 967, Land Laws. Law 2, Land Laws, page 968.)

If the grantee failed to comply with the conditions of his grant he acquired no right, and the land was granted to some other individual. (Law 2, Land Laws, page 969.) One of those conditions was, that the grantee should take possession of the land within six months from the date of the grant, and on failure to do this, he lost his right of occupancy.

When the condition was not expressed in the grant, it was nevertheless always understood:

"That all concessions in which no time is specified, shall become extinct, and shall be considered as null, if the persons to whom they are made do not take possession, and cultivate the same, within six months." (4th article of the regulations of the 12th of October, 1803, found at page 1001 of the Land Laws.)

That this was the rule governing the grants in East Florida, is fully shown by the opinion of Don Ruperto Saavedra, judge of the province, given on the 27th October, 1818, at the instance of the agent of the Duke of Alagon.

In the 7th article of his report, found at page 252 of White's Compilation, he says, that "the concessions made to foreigners or natives, of large or small portions of land, carrying their documents with them, (which shall be certificates issued by the secretary,) without having cultivated or even seen the land granted them—such concessions are of no value or effect, and should be considered as not made, because the abandonment has been voluntary, and they have failed in complying with the conditions prescribed for the encouragement of population."

Had Florida remained under the dominion of Spain, the grant to the Duke of Alagon would have been valid, and other grants within its limits would have been subjected to the rule above mentioned.

The first article of the instructions given to the surveyor, George Clark, found at page 1003 of the Land Laws, shows the distinction taken between perfect and imperfect titles to land in East Florida.

"The possessors of lands in this province shall be considered under three classes: 1. As proprietors; 2. As grantees; and 3. As grantees and proprietors.

"The first are those who hold lands by titles not obtained by grants from the government. (These were English inhabitants who remained in the province after the treaty of 1783, and who held lands by patent from Great Britain.) The second are they who, on compliance of certain conditions of time and labor, will get titles of property. And the third are those who have acquired those titles."

The following opinion of the notary of government of the royal domain, whose duty it was to countersign all complete grants under his official seal, will further show the distinction between a complete and an incomplete grant, and will show the usage and custom of the province until the month of October, 1818, the time when it bears date. It will be found at page 250 of White's Compilation.

"As I best can and ought to do, I certify and attest that the conditions prescribed by this government for grants of land, to which the decrees of the 2d instant, placed on the proceedings refer, are the same which appears in the foregoing title delivered in favor of Don John McQueen, dated on the 12th of March, 1804, which conditions subsisted in all their force until the year 1815, when the then governor of this place, Brigadi Don Sebastian Kendelan, altered them at his discretion, granting lands under the single circumstance that when the grantee proves that he has cleared them, built houses, fences, and other things necessary for the improvement of a plantation, the title of proprietorship should be delivered to him, as has been done to several who have not passed the ten years' possession pointed out in said title of McQueen, as appears from the different proceedings in the archives in my charge, to which I refer; and in compliance with orders in said decree, I sign and seal these presents in St. Augustine, &c., October, 1818."

The regulations of Governor White required ten years' residence to enable the grantee to obtain a perfect title. Governor Kendelan, in 1815, altered this regulation, and granted the land in absolute property, in proportion to the working hands each family possessed, whenever they could prove satisfactorily that they had performed the conditions of "clearing land, building houses, fences, and other things necessary for the improvement of a plantation." This alteration appears to have been the only one made by Governor Kendelan, as the largest grant confirmed by him or his predecessors up to, and inclusive of, the year 1815, was the grant to McQueen for 3,275 acres, and that on proof of the number of his family and slaves, and of his having complied with the conditions of cultivation and improvement.

The royal order of 1735 required that all perfect titles should be given by the king, after the grantee had performed the four years' residence and cultivation required by the laws of the Indies. To remedy the inconvenience arising from this regulation, the royal order of 1754, found at page 973 of the Land Laws, was issued, which vested the power of appointing sub-delegates and judges for the disposal of the royal domain, in the presidents and viceroys of his American dominions. The 5th article of the royal order authorizes the confirmation of all imperfect grants, where the grantee had complied with the conditions of the grant, and where the quantity claimed was no more than the party was entitled to.

By the 81st article of the ordinance of 1768, the power of granting and confirming titles to land was vested in the intendants. (See Land Laws, 972.)

The royal order of 1774 repealed this article of the ordinance of 1768, and conferred the granting power on the civil and military governors. The royal order of the 22d of October, 1798, so far as it regards the provinces of Louisiana and West Florida, invested the intendant with full and exclusive power to grant "all kinds of lands." (See White's Compilation, 218.) In East Florida, the royal order of 1774 remained unrepealed in every particular, and the granting power continued to be exercised by the governors of that province.

From the preceding laws, ordinances, royal orders, and official reports, the court will readily perceive the difference between a title in full property, and an inchoate title, where the fee is yet in the crown, and to be divested only on the performance of a condition precedent to the estate; the difference, in the language of the treaty, between a grant ratified and confirmed, and a grant to be ratified and confirmed after the performance of the conditions of habitation and cultivation.

This difference will be still more fully illustrated by a comparison of the form of the imperfect title, which was always given in the first instance, with the perfect, or "ratified and confirmed" title, given after the performance of all the conditions of the grant. The imperfect title consisted always of the petition of the grantee, and the order of decree of the governor, under which the party was permitted to take possession of the land, and to enjoy its use and possession, until, by his habitation and cultivation during the time prescribed, he became entitled to have his grant confirmed. The petition and decree, or order of the governor, found at pages 6 and 7 of the record, in the case of the United States vs. John Huertis, No. 82, presents the ordinary form of an inchoate title, or a title intended afterward to be confirmed when the conditions should have been performed, with the exception of the following words, which are altogether unusual: "With the precise condition to use the same for the purpose of raising cattle, without having the faculty to alienate the said tract, either by sale, transfer, contract of retrocession, or by any other title in favor of a stranger, without the knowledge of this government." These unusual and extraordinary restrictions prove the intentions of the governor to have been, only to grant the use and occupation for the purpose of "raising cattle," and not to give the incipient title, afterward to be matured into a perfect grant.

At page 8 of the same record, will be found the form of a perfect title, or a "ratified and confirmed" title, such as could only be given after the performance of the conditions, either expressed in the imperfect grant, which it is intended to confirm, or implied in law. The court will perceive by comparison, that the concluding part of this instrument conforms almost literally to the latter clause of the 5th article of the royal regulation of 1774, found at page 974 of the Land Laws, which provides that "the confirmation of the patents of the possessors of these lands shall be given in my royal name, by which their property and claim in the said lands shall be rendered legal." That this royal order and the several laws of the Indies, to which it relates in the 2d article, and found from page 967 to page 971 of the Land Laws, were in force in East Florida, we have the most conclusive proof furnished by the royal order of the 8th of June, 1814, found at page 1010 of the Land Laws. By the latter order, the king commands the royal order of 1754, and the laws of the Indies, to be observed and obeyed.

The court is respectfully referred to those laws and those royal orders, which, with the royal orders of 1790 and 1815, and the local regulations founded upon them, formed the entire code and system for granting lands in East Florida. All grants made and confirmed according to these laws, royal orders, and local regulations, are, according to the decision of the court in the case of Arredondo and son, confirmed by the Spanish version of the treaty.

All grants made in contravention of these laws, royal orders, and local regulations, are made without authority. They are not made by the "lawful authorities of his Catholic Majesty," and were therefore void before, and cannot have been ratified and confirmed by the treaty.

Having shown that the terms "shall remain ratified and confirmed," as expressed in the first paragraph of the 8th article of the treaty, can be applicable only to those grants which have been confirmed by the Spanish government before the time limited in the treaty; and having shown from the laws and usages of Spain, what is the nature and form of such a grant, we are now the better enabled to discuss the nature of an imperfect title, and to decide what rights the grantee had under it, and what responsibility was imposed on the United States to confirm those grants.

The following is the language of the last clause of the 8th article, which expresses, very clearly, the intention of the Spanish negotiator, at the same time it shows the nature of the imperfect titles, intended to be confirmed on the occurrence of the contingency on which the right of confirmation might be claimed by the grantee: "But the proprietors who, in consequence of the circumstances in which the Spanish nation has found itself, and the revolutions of Europe, have not been able to fulfil all the obligations of their grants, shall be obliged to fulfil them according to the conditions of their respective grants from the date of this treaty, in default of which they shall be null and void." Without perverting the terms employed, and distorting the obvious intention of the negotiator, this clause of the treaty cannot be made to apply to any other than imperfect titles, grants made on conditions which remained to be performed at the date of the treaty, and which, until the performance of those conditions, entitled the grantee to no estate in the land. It cannot be so construed as to confirm any imperfect grants by its own action, but imposes an obligation on this government to confirm them, provided the conditions shall have been performed by the grantee within the time specified in the same clause of the treaty.

It proves, as do the laws, ordinances, and royal regulations of the Spanish government, that all these grants depended on conditions precedent; and with them, as with us, the conditions must be performed, the contingency must occur, before the estate can arise or take effect. If all the conditions be performed within the time specified in the treaty, an obligation is imposed on the United States by the treaty to confirm the title. If all the conditions be not performed within the time stipulated, then the grant is, by the force and effect of the laws of Spain, no less than by the express provision of the treaty, forever "null and void."

The first and second clauses of the 8th article of the treaty, when taken and construed with each other, according to the translation of the Spanish version, ratify and confirm all grants ratified and confirmed by his Catholic Majesty, or his lawful authority, before the 24th of January, 1818, and it imposes an obligation on the American government to ratify and confirm all imperfect grants made by his Catholic Majesty, or his lawful authorities, before the 24th of January, 1818, to the same extent that they would have been valid, or in the "same manner that they would have been," (ratified and confirmed,) "if his Majesty had remained in the dominion of the territories."

If the Spanish word "concesiones" be translated concession, instead of grant, it cannot vary in the most remote degree the construction given to this article of the treaty. In technical phrase there is with us a difference between concession and grant. The one generally implies an imperfect, the other a perfect grant. But the term, as expressed in the first and second clauses of the 8th article, can only mean the grant or the title which the claimant may have. If rendered "concession," in English, and understood to mean imperfect titles which had not been confirmed by the Spanish government, then they could not remain ratified and confirmed, because they must have been confirmed and ratified before they can so remain. If they are ratified and confirmed concessions, they are perfect grants, by which the crown has been divested of the fee, and they remain ratified and confirmed by the treaty. The court will then perceive that the language of the 8th article of the treaty gives the best explanation of the term "concesiones," and shows that it was intended by the Spanish negotiator to signify grant or title, perfect or imperfect, or the land granted, as its meaning is varied by other terms with which it is associated in the first and second clauses of the treaty. When it speaks of a concession which shall remain confirmed, it means a title which has been confirmed; and when it speaks of a concession to be confirmed on the performance of certain conditions, it means an imperfect or inchoate grant or title.

With this understanding of the 8th article of the treaty, and the distinction and manifest difference between confirmed grants or titles in full property, by which the crown was divested of the fee, and imperfect titles, where the party had obtained only the first decree by which he went into possession of the land, when he was merely progressing in the performance of those conditions imposed by law, and where the fee still continued in the crown, as we have shown by the laws and usages of Spain, and the form of the respective titles given in either case, we shall be prepared to decide what lands were conveyed to the United States, and what lands were confirmed to the inhabitants of the ceded territory by the stipulations of the 8th article of the treaty.

The treaty conferred no new or additional right of soil on the inhabitants of the ceded territory, it only secured those rights to the same extent that they had been conferred by the government of Spain. The United States found them as they had been left by Spain; some with perfect titles to the soil, granted by the lawful authority of his Catholic Majesty; some with inchoate titles, to be perfected after proof of performance of the conditions of the grant; and others with titles, formal and informal, not made by the lawful authorities of his Catholic majesty, or any other than the self-created authority of the officer by whom they were made in anticipation of the change of government, and his relief from responsibility.

If then, as we think, we have abundantly shown that in no case the fee of the crown was divested, until after the performance of the conditions of the grant, and then, only by that formal deed or grant prescribed by the 5th section of the royal order of 1754, found at page 974 of the Land Laws, and according to the 18th article of the regulations of Morales, found at page 984 of the Land Laws, which refers to other preceding articles that contain the same provision, and declares that no one of those who have obtained the first decree or imperfect title, "notwithstanding, in virtue of them, the survey has taken place, and that they have been put in possession, can be regarded as owners of land until their real titles are delivered, complete with all the formalities before recited," it must follow, as a natural result, that the fee in all lands within the ceded territory, not embraced in real titles, or formal and complete titles, passed to the United States by virtue of the treaty. The estate must rest somewhere. The King had not conveyed it to the claimant; he held it as security for the faithful performance of the conditions on which it was to be given; and if it did not vest in the United States by virtue of the treaty, the King of Spain is yet the proprietor of millions of acres of land in a territory which he declares in the 2d article of the treaty he cedes in full property and sovereignty to the United States.

We think, then, that the United States is invested with the fee in all lands claimed by imperfect titles, or illegal titles from the government of Spain; that when the claimant, under these imperfect titles made by the lawful authority of his Catholic Majesty, shall prove a compliance with the conditions of his grant within the time prescribed by the laws of Spain, and the treaty, the United States will be bound to confirm his title to the same extent that such title would have been valid under the government of Spain.

The nature of these conditions, and the time within which they must be performed, can only be determined by the laws under which they are imposed, and the provisions of the treaty by which they are recognized and required to be performed.

A treaty is a contract between two nations, and may, in many respects, be construed by the rules which govern contracts between individuals. The intention and understanding of the parties is to be sought in the language in which they have contracted with each other; and they are only bound to the extent of their understanding and intention in creating the obligation.

The eighth article of the treaty imposes an obligation on the United States. She contracted in her own language, and is responsible to the full extent of the obligation which she created and to which she assented in the negotiation. But can she be responsible under a contract not understood, and to which her consent was never given?

On this subject, Vattel observes, at page 310:

"But it is asked, which of the contracting parties ought to have his expressions considered as most decisive, with respect to the true sense of the contract; whether we should stop at those of the power promising, rather than at those of him who stipulates? The force and obligation of every contract arising from a perfect promise, and he who promises, being no farther engaged than his will is sufficiently declared; it is very certain, that in order to know the true sense of the contract, attention ought principally to be paid to the words of him who promises; for he voluntarily binds himself by his words, and we take for true against him what he has sufficiently declared."

It is provided in the English version of the eighth article of the treaty, that "all grants of lands made before the 24th of January, 1818, by his Catholic Majesty, or by his lawful authorities in the said territories, ceded by his Majesty to the United States, shall be ratified and confirmed to the persons in possession of the land to the same extent that the same grants would be valid," &c. This is the obligation imposed by the contract, and which, in good faith, she is bound to observe. That which is sought to be enforced against her is written in a language which she did not comprehend, and to which her assent was never given. It is, according to the translation of the Spanish version of the eighth article of the treaty, "all grants of lands made by his Catholic Majesty, or by his lawful authorities, before the 24th of January, 1818, in the said territories, which his Majesty ceded to the United States, shall remain ratified and confirmed to the persons who are in possession of them, in the same manner," &c. The term "them" refers to the "grants of land," and it is contended that the United States are bound under this stipulation to confirm the grants to the persons in possession of them, (the grants,) instead of the persons who are "in possession of the lands," according to the express stipulation made in the English language. If thus understood, they are separate and distinct obligations; they impose responsibilities essentially different from each other. The United States are not bound by both, and the question arises, which of them her national faith is pledged to redeem? She can only be required to execute her contract; her contract is to confirm the "grants of land" to the persons in possession of the "lands," and not to confirm the grants of land to the persons in possession of the grants or title papers. It is believed to be a rule in diplomacy, and one invariably observed by civilized nations, to negotiate in their own language, and to be bound only by the contract expressed in that language. If this principle be correct, then it is obvious that the United States are not bound to confirm the grants or titles to the persons in possession of "them;" but to confirm the grants to the persons in "possession of the land."

The eleventh article of the treaty provides, that the United States shall pay to our merchants, on account of spoliations committed on our commerce, a sum not exceeding five millions of dollars. This obligation is clearly expressed in the English language, and shows the will and intention of the negotiator, by which the nation is bound. Suppose in the Spanish version of the same article, when translated into English, it should be found that the stipulation was to pay the five millions to the King of Spain; would any one seriously contend that the United States are bound to pay this money to the King of Spain, or to pay it to any other person, or in any other manner, than she had promised to pay it? The cases are parallel, and the reasons the same. The government has the same legal right in a controversy with individuals, that it would have in a controversy with a foreign nation, and the treaty must be construed according to the same rules.

There are other reasons why the English version of the treaty should prevail, and be in force. It expresses, beyond doubt, the understanding and intention of both the contracting parties, at the time of the negotiation, as is fully shown by the following extract from the correspondence of Mr. Adams, Don Onis, and Mr. de Neuville. (Executive papers, vol. i., pages 46, 59, 68; 1819–20.)

"The minutes upon the eighth article, compared with the draft in the project of Mr. de Onis, with that of the counter project by the Secretary of State, and with the article as finally expressed in the treaty, fully elucidate the understanding of the parties, that the grants of land, dated before, as well as after, the 24th of January, 1818, were annulled, excepting those among which settlements had been commenced; the completion of which had been prevented by the circumstances of Spain, and the recent revolutions in Europe.

"Mr. de Neuville's particular attention is requested to the difference between the two projected articles, because it will recall particularly to his remembrance the point upon which the discussion concerning this article turned. By turning to the written memorandum drawn up by Mr. de Neuville himself, of this discussion, he will perceive he has noted that Mr de Onis insisted, that "this article could not be varied from what was contained in the chevalier's project, as the object of the last clause therein was merely to save the honor and dignity of the sovereignty of his Catholic Majesty.

"It was then observed by Mr. Adams, that the honor and dignity of his Catholic Majesty would be saved by recognising the grants prior to the 24th of January, as 'valid to the same extent as they were binding on his Catholic Majesty,' and he agreed to accept the article as drawn by Mr. de Onis, with this explanation. (See Mr. de Neuville's memorandum.) It was on this occasion that Mr. de Neuville observed, that if the grants prior to January 24, 1818, were confirmed only to the same extent that they were binding on the King of Spain, there were many bonafide grantees, of long standing, in actual possession of their grants, and having actually made partial settlements upon them, but who have been prevented, by the extraordinary circumstances in which Spain had been situated, and the revolutions in Europe, from fulfilling all the conditions of the grants; that it would be very harsh to leave these persons liable to a forfeiture, which might, indeed, in rigor, be exacted from them, but which very certainly never would be if they had remained under the Spanish dominion. It will be well remembered by Mr. de Neuville how earnestly he insisted upon this equitable suggestion, and how strongly he disclaimed for Mr. Onis every wish or intention to cover, by a provision for such persons, any fraudulent grants. And it was then observed, by Mr. de Neuville, that the date assumed of 24th of January, 1818, was not sufficient for guarding against fraudulent grants, because they might be easily antedated. It was with reference to these suggestions of Mr. de Neuville, afterward again strenuously urged by Mr. de Onis, that the article was finally modified as it now stands in the treaty, declaring all grants subsequent to 24th January, 1818, absolutely null, and those of prior date valid to the same extent, only that they would have been binding upon the King, but allowing to bonafide grantees, in actual possession, and having commenced settlements, but who had been prevented by the late circumstances of the Spanish nation, and the revolutions in Europe, from fulfilling all the conditions of their grants, time to complete them. It is needless to observe, that, as these incidents do not apply to either of the grants to Alagon, Punon Rostro, or Vargas, neither of those grants is confirmed by the tenor of the article as it stands; and that it is perfectly immaterial in that respect, whether they were dated before or after the 24th of January, 1818, it being admitted, on all sides, that these grants were not binding upon the King, conformably to the Spanish laws. The terms of the article accord precisely with the intentions of all the parties to the negotiation and the signature of the treaty. If the dates of the grants are subsequent to the 24th of January, 1818, they are annulled by the date; if prior to that date, they are null because not included among the prior grants confirmed"

This shows the sense in which the term grant was expressed and understood by Don Onis, and it shows the persons who were intended to be embraced by the treaty. It was not those persons who had obtained conditional grants, who held "them" in possession, and had not settled on, or even seen the land granted to them; but bonafide grantees of long standing, in actual possession of their grants, and having actually made partial settlements upon them, who had been prevented by the extraordinary circumstances in which Spain had been situated, and the revolutions in Europe, from fulfilling all the conditions of their grants.

No one can read this correspondence and resist the conviction, that it was the intention of both parties to the negotiation to provide for the confirmation of grants to the persons in possession of the land, and that by the possession of the grants, was meant the possession of the land. To use this expression in any other sense would involve an absolute absurdity. In propriety of speech we could not say that a person had actually made partial settlements upon the grants, unless we understand, by the term grants, the lands granted, instead of the title papers. As this is evidently the sense in which it was understood in the correspondence, we may naturally infer that the same terms were understood in the same manner when afterward adopted by the same parties in the treaty.

The letter and spirit of the whole of the 8th article of the treaty, both in the English and Spanish languages, give further proof that such was the intention of the parties. The terms of the treaty, as well as the laws of Spain, to which we have already invited the attention of the court, shows that the grants were made on conditions precedent. These conditions were, that the grantees should, according to the 4th article of the regulations of 1803, found at page 1001 of the Land Laws, take possession and cultivate the land granted to them within six months from the date of the grant, and on failure to do so, that the grant should be void Habitation and cultivation being the condition required by the laws of Spain, as well as by the treaty, and as the grantee could not inhabit or cultivate without being in possession of the land, it is self-evident that the treaty required the claimant to have been in possession of the land, and in progress with the performance of the conditions, on which his confirmation of title might be acquired.

Except in the few cases where grants were made for military services, under the royal order of 1815, all the grants legally made in the province of East Florida were in consideration of habitation and cultivation, to be performed by the grantee. Under the government of Spain, those persons would not be entitled to the land until they proved a performance of all the conditions of the grant. The treaty places them under the government of the United States on the same conditions; and to say the possession of the title papers or grants shall be substituted for the possession, habitation, and cultivation of the land, required no less by the treaty than by the laws of Spain, is to defeat both the treaty and the law, and to confirm titles to millions of acres of land, which, under the Spanish government, would never have been confirmed.

There is now, and has been, in suit in the courts of Florida, more than ten times the quantity of land to which confirmed titles were given by the Spanish government, and where the claimants are in possession of the grants or title papers, without ever having seen the land which they claim.

The conditions imposed by the laws and usages of Spain, and enforced by the treaty, were not that the claimant should have possession of his grant or title papers, for copies of those, duly certified, were always given to him at the time of making the concession; but that he should enter into possession of the land, should cultivate and improve it, and make it his home for four years at least, to entitle him to a grant in fee simple.

The truth of this proposition is fully shown by the following laws of the Indies, found at page 968 of the Land Laws: "To those who shall have lands and lots in the new settlement of any province, there shall not be granted or distributed any lands in another province, unless they shall have left their first residence, and proceeded to reside in the new settlement, except they shall have continued the four years necessary to acquire property in the lands," &c.; "And we declare the allotment of lands made contrary to the provisions of this, our law, to be null." As a further evidence that the conditions required to be performed by the treaty were possession, habitation, and cultivation, the court is respectfully referred to law 1, title 12, book 4, 2d vol. of the Laws of the Indies, a translation of which is found at page 967 of the Land Laws, which provides, that "after a residence in those settlements (referring to the settlement required by the preceding part of the same laws to be made on the land by the grantees) for four years, and labor therein, we grant them power thereafter to sell their possessions, or dispose of them at pleasure as their own property."

We have already shown, by the royal order of 1814, that these and other laws containing the same provisions, were in force in Florida. That, until after the receipt of the royal order of 1814, ten years' habitation and cultivation were invariably required before the grantee could acquire a title to the land in full property. That, in the year 1815, according to the statement of Entralgo, notary of government, found at page 250, (White's Compilation,) Governor Kendelan altered the regulations of Governor White, of the year 1803, which required ten years' habitation and cultivation, and "granted lands under the single circumstance that when the grantees proved that they had cleared them, built houses, fences, and other things necessary for the improvement of a plantation, the title of proprietorship should be delivered to them." This appears to have been the custom ever after, until 1818. Entralgo states that this alteration was made at the discretion of Governor Kendelan; but the court will perceive, from the time when the alteration was made, that it was under the royal order of the 8th of June, 1814, addressed to the governor of St. Augustine (the same Sebastian Kendelan), who made the alteration, commanding him to obey the laws of the Indies, and the royal order of 1754, in all things relative to the distribution of lands. This royal order shows, not only that the laws above referred to were in force in East Florida, but it shows the limited discretion of the governor, and the laws themselves show the limited power conferred on him in making grants of land.

In the case of Percheman, 7 Peters, page 87, the court remarked, "had Florida changed its sovereignty by an act containing no stipulation respecting the property of individuals, the right of property, in all those who became subjects or citizens of the new government, would have been unaffected by the change." This just and equitable principle is not controverted by the counsel for the United States; on the contrary, it is that for which they contend. We received the people of the ceded territory with the same "right of property," and none other, than that which they possessed under the former government. And the question arises, what is the nature of that right? This court has ever decided that the right of property in land must be determined by the laws of the country where the land is situated. The law, therefore, must be produced, and by the law individual rights must be determined. We have already referred the court to the laws of Spain, and we have endeavored to show from those laws, that no grants of land in Florida, other than those authorized for military services, by the royal order of 1815, could have been made, except in proportion to the ability of the grantee to cultivate and improve them, and on condition of actual habitation and cultivation. We have endeavored to show by those laws, and we think not without success, that no "rights of property" in land were conferred on the grantee, until after the performance of all the conditions of the grant, on proof of which a title in full property or "real title," divesting the crown of the fee, was made out and executed under the hand and seal of the proper officer, and delivered to the grantee. The grant or concession, given in the first instance, was ever on conditions precedent, leaving the fee still in the crown, and not to be divested until after the performance of all the conditions. We have shown that the practice of the province conformed to these laws, at least until the year 1816, without the least variation; that it was continued after that time until October, 1818, (See White's Com., page 250,) which creates the strongest presumption against the validity of any grant not made in conformity to those laws, and the long-continued practice under them; a presumption only to be rebutted by producing the authority of the officer by whom the grant is alleged to have been made, not in comformity with that practice.

With this understanding of the laws of Spain, and the unvaried practice of the provincial government under those laws, until after Don Onis had been commissioned by the King of Spain to negotiate with the American government for the cession of the Floridas, we cannot be at a loss in understanding what was ceded to the United States, and what is meant by the term "vacant lands" in the second article of the treaty. The term "vacant lands" is well understood to mean the lands of the crown, (law 14, title 12, book 4, 2d vol., page 42 of the Laws of the Indies, a translation of which is found at 969 of the Land Laws, declares "that all lands and soil that have not been granted away by the kings, our predecessors, or by us in our name, belong to our patrimony and royal crown.")

No land or soil was granted in cases of imperfect titles, when the right of property and of soil was withheld until after the performance of the conditions prescribed by law, and the lands in all such cases were vacant lands, and passed to the United States; but the claimant came with the lands, under this government, with the same right to consummate his title by a performance of the conditions imposed by law, that he had under the government of Spain. According to the decision of this court, in the case of Percheman, page 87, without the stipulated protection of the treaty, his right of property would "have been unaffected by the change." It would have remained the same as under the former government. It does remain the same as it was under the former government, by the 8th article of the treaty, which provides that such claims shall be ratified and confirmed to the persons in possession of the land, to the same extent that the same grants would have been valid if the territories had remained under the dominion of his Catholic Majesty." The fee not having vested in the grantee before the treaty, it must have passed to the United States as vacant land, charged with the incipient right of the claimant, under an obligation to perfect that right, and convey the estate in fee simple, after the performance of the conditions, or the fee is still in the crown of Spain. Nor is this view of the subject changed in the smallest degree by the enumeration of what is ceded in the 2d article: "The adjacent islands dependent on said provinces, all public lots and squares, vacant lands, public edifices, fortifications, barracks, and other buildings, that are not private property." It never has been contended that private property was conveyed by the treaty. The King professes to cede only that which belonged to him, and the government claims nothing more. Private property reserved in the enumeration, refers not to vacant lands, public lots and squares, public edifices, fortifications, and barracks; these, from their very terms, show that they were not private property; that they were public property, or property of the crown. But "private property" refers to "buildings." The King ceded all that he had, either of soil or sovereignty, and among other things, "all buildings" that were not "private property."

In the case of Percheman, at page 88, 6 Peters, the court, in remarking on the difference between the English and Spanish versions of the 8th article of the treaty, observe "if the English and Spanish parts can, without violence, be made to agree, that construction which establishes this conformity ought to prevail." From what we have already observed on the subject, it will be shown that this conformity of construction may be given in all points presented under that article which affect materially the interest of the parties. We make this qualification, because we deem it quite unimportant whether the complete grants, executed with all the legal formality necessary to convey the fee in the land, be considered ratified and confirmed by the action of the treaty, or whether the treaty requires them to be confirmed. In either case, if the grant was made before the 24th of January, 1818, by his Catholic Majesty, or his lawful authority, the land was private property at the date of the treaty, and the government has no interest in it; and in neither case can the right of inquiry be denied, whether the officer had power to make the grant. This is the first question presented in every case, and if the court is satisfied that the power has been legally exercised, it must give a decree of confirmation; and if it be not satisfied, the claim must be rejected.

But the other technical variance suggested is of a more important character, and which, if not reconciled, must operate with peculiar injustice to the government, and defeat the spirit and design of the 8th article as expressed in both languages. That article was intended to save the validity of grants made by the government of Spain, to the same intent and no further than the same grants would have been valid under that government, if Florida had not passed under the dominion of the United States; the English version requires a confirmation to that extent to the person in possession of the land; the Spanish version requires a confirmation to the same extent, to the persons in possession of the grants. By considering the term grants as signifying the land granted, as it was most certainly considered by the negotiators of the treaty, as shown by their correspondence, then the English and Spanish versions of the treaty will correspond with each other, and impose the same obligation on the government of the United States. Both will require the confirmation of grants made by his Catholic Majesty, or his lawful authorities, to the same extent that they would have been valid under the former government; if, however, we construe the "possession of the grants" to be the mere possession of or custody of the title papers, as contended, then the grants must be confirmed to a greater extent than they would have been valid under the former government. The treaty, in requiring the performance of conditions, evidently contemplates the conditions prescribed by the laws of Spain, and the performance of which must have been precedent to an estate in land; those conditions were not, as we have shown, the possession of the grants, unless we understand by that term, the possession of the land granted: it was not one of the conditions that the claimant should be in possession of the title papers, but that he should be in the actual occupancy and cultivation of the land. In common speech, the term grant is a figurative expression, from which, in one sense, we understand the land granted; nothing is more common, and nothing better understood; and the sense in which it is intended to be regarded, is to be sought in the expressions with which it is associated. On this subject, Vattel, at page 315, sec. 278, remarks, "There are figurative expressions, become so familiar in the common use of language, that they take place on a thousand occasions of the proper terms, so that we ought to take them in a figurative sense, without paying any attention to the original, proper, and more direct signification; the subject of the discourse sufficiently indicates the sense that should be given to them." According to this rule of interpretation, the possession of the grant, in the Spanish version of the 8th article of the treaty, can, without "violence," be construed to agree and correspond with the possession of the land granted, as expressed in the English version of the same article. "The subject of discourse, as expressed in that article in both languages, shows this to have been the sense in which it was understood. The condition required to be performed by both, was habitation and cultivation; actual possession of the land was an essential prerequisite to habitation and cultivation. If we dispense with the first, we cannot require the second, although it constitutes the entire condition required by the language of both the contracting parties, and without the performance of which, both declare the grant to be null and void. If we reject this interpretation, then we depart from all the well-established rules of construction; we do not arrive at the intention and understanding of the parties, from what they have said on the subject; but we take one isolated expression of one of the parties, and give it a meaning by which the whole force and character of the contract is perverted. If we construe the term possession of the grant, in the translation from the Spanish version of the 8th article, to mean the possession of the title papers, then that term not only defeats the stipulation of the English version, which requires the possession of the land, but it destroys the spirit and letter of the residue of the article, in the language in which it is written.

The interpretation for which we contend restores harmony and correspondence between the Spanish and English versions of the 8th article of the treaty, and agrees with the letter and spirit of both. We believe it will be adopted by the court, and that in all cases in which the crown of Spain had not been divested of the fee, by a grant in fee simple, made by his Catholic Majesty in his lawful authority, the first inquiry will be, was the party in possession of the land at the time contemplated by the treaty; and secondly, has he performed all the conditions required by the treaty and the laws of Spain? If he has, his title must be confirmed; if not, it must be rejected.

When the party had acquired a perfect title, after the performance of all the conditions expressed or implied, the laws of Spain did not require him to remain in possession. The land was in his full property, and he could do with it as he thought proper. The treaty requires no more than was required by the laws of Spain, and the United States require no more than is required by the treaty. The law and the treaty are the test by which the rights of the United States, and the rights of her adopted citizens, are to be determined. The court will administer the law, and the law will dispense justice.

But if the fixed and stable principles of the law are to yield to the vague and uncertain presumption drawn from the exercise of power unknown to the law—if we are to presume the law, to which we have referred the court, repealed, because the act of the officer is contrary to the law—if we are to presume the existence of other laws, in order to sustain the exercise of the granting power—then the law may not be administered, and justice may not be done. If the law, as known and understood, commands one thing, and another be done, apparently contrary to law, we ask whether the natural presumption, arising from such premises, be not in favor of the supremacy of the law, and against the validity of the act? If it be, as we believe it is, we respectfully submit to the court, whether both the presumption and the law be not opposed to the claim of each of the present petitioners. We further most respectfully ask of the court, whether the royal order of 1790, which constituted the only authority, and under which all grants professed to have been made, except those for military services, and which authorized "grants of land to be made in proportion to the working hands each family may have," will authorize a grant for fifteen, twenty, and twenty-six thousand acres of land, when the petitioners, by their own showing, prove that the grants were not made "in proportion to the working hands they had." And we ask, whether any other authority, save the apparently illegal act of the officer making the grant, has been produced in favor of the claims presented, and professing to have been made under this royal order?

We make the same inquiry with regard to claims presented for military services, all of which expressly profess to have been made under the royal order of the 29th of March, 1815, which appears to have been the only authority delegated by the King for that purpose; and we ask, whether the provisions of this order, which effectually limits the exercise of the granting power in favor of the soldiers of the three companies of white militia, of the city of St. Augustine, and the married officers and soldiers of the third battalion of Cuba, can be extended so as to include persons who, by their own showing, prove beyond the existence of doubt, that they were not soldiers or married officers of either of those corps? And we ask whether the royal order, providing in express terms for a grant of only "a certain quantity of land as established by regulation in this province, agreeably to the number of persons composing each family," can be so construed as to confer authority on the governor of the province to grant 25,000 acres of land to one not embraced in this royal order, and who shows that he did not receive the grant agreeably to the number of persons composing his family, and according to the quantity established by regulations in this province?" The regulation referred to is found at page 1001 of the Land Laws, and authorizes a grant of fifty acres of land to each head of a family, and twenty-five acres for each child or slave above the age of sixteen years, and fifteen acres for each child or slave between the age of eight and sixteen years. To have authorized a grant of land for 25,000 acres under the royal order of 1790, and 1815, the family of the grantee must have consisted of nine hundred and ninety-eight persons above the age of sixteen years. This extraordinary possession is a fact, in the absence of all proof, which cannot be presumed to sustain the granting power, which appears independently of this to have been illegally exercised. The royal order of 1815 proves that the regulation of the province to which it refers was in force, and must have continued in force as long as the order by which it was adopted, for it became and by adoption constituted an essential part of that order. The grants themselves, by referring to this royal order as the source of power under which they were made, prove that it was in force at their respective dates, and that the governor, who made the grant, considered that he had neither power nor discretion beyond that conferred by this order to make a grant for military services. This proves, most conclusively, that no other law, ordinance, or royal order, could have been in force at the same time inconsistent with the provisions of the royal order of 1815. The same remarks are applicable to the royal order of 1790, and the same results ensue. The court will find, on examination, that each of the grants refer to one or the other of these royal orders as constituting the power of the governor to make the grant. His express reliance on this source of power repels the presumption that these orders were repealed, or that there were other grants of power which he might legitimately have exercised. We have then the evidence of Governor Coppinger himself to prove that these royal orders were in force; that in making the grants he acted under them; and if, according to the ordinary rules of construction, these royal orders do not sustain the authority of the governor in making the grant, then it must follow that they were made without authority, and are therefore void.

In the case of Soulard and others, the court observed, it was important, in order to make a satisfactory decision of the case, that the power of the officer to make the grant should be produced. That case has been postponed three years, for the production of this authority. The cases now under consideration have been pressed on the court by the learned counsel of the petitioners, and a decision required. If, after the unremitted researches of ten years, with all the facilities and assistance given by the government, they have been unable to find the least authority for making grants of this magnitude, and they still persist in having a decision, it would seem that the decision should be against the validity of the grants.

The time when made, no less than the quantity of the land embraced in the grant, and the persons to whom they were made, all concur in creating a presumption of fraud designed against this government. They were made in anticipation of the transfer of the province to the United States. They were about the same time with those of the Duke of Alagon and others, which Don Onis admits were fraudulent and a disgrace to his country. When we have detected the fraudulent design of the monarch himself, in exercising the granting power; when we have compelled him to revoke the grants which he had fraudulently made; can we give greater faith and credit to the acts of his subordinate officers than we give to his, and greater than we are required, by the treaty, to give to the requisitions of the laws and ordinances of Spain?

The court will find, on examination, that Don Onis was commissioned by the King to negotiate with the American government, in September, 1816. And it will find, by an examination of the transcript from the archives of East Florida, that there was near ten times the quantity of land granted, in the year 1817, and from that time until the year 1821, than had been granted, previously, during the whole period of the occupation of that province by Spain, commencing in the year 1783.

The position taken by the learned counsel in the several cases now before the court is worthy of remark. He says: "The grantees whose names are herein stated, and whose cases are now before the court, did not belong to either of the corps mentioned; and in referring to that article, as one of the motives for giving the grants, only intended to indicate the royal sanction to gifts of lands to soldiers for their fidelity in the recent insurrection.

It does not say that his Majesty forbids his governors to grant to any other portion of his loyal and faithful subjects; it does not limit the quantity, nor indicate the royal will, that no larger quantity shall be given to those who suffered losses, advanced money, or rendered distinguished services. The recitation therefore in these grants, that 'Whereas his Majesty has been pleased to grant the favors and gratifications proposed by Governor Kendelan' to certain officers and soldiers, in land, does not change that pre-existing power under the laws of Spain, nor confine it to that class of subjects alone.

It will not be denied that those embraced by the royal order are restricted by its provisions, and that they are entitled to no more land than the order authorizes to be granted to them.

Now, if the learned counsel is correct in his conclusions, what an unparalleled instance of injustice and inconsistency is presented by the royal order of 1815! The claimants under the provisions of that order are admitted not to be embraced by the same, and it is therefore contended, that they are not restricted to the quantity which the order authorizes to be granted for military services. It is further argued, that the governor had unlimited power before the date of the order, although no such power has been shown, and yet he has requested grants to be made to the gallant officers and soldiers who served in a protracted and harassing siege, for a few acres of land only, when, without the order, he might, in his own discretion, have rewarded each according to his merit, by giving him such quantity of land as he thought proper. The natural conclusion resulting from these erreoneous premises is, that in consequence of the gallantry, fidelity, and patriotism of those who rendered important services during the siege, the governor made a suggestion, by which his power to reward them was restricted, and that they are therefore entitled to a less reward than others who rendered less important services. This proposition, we think, involves an absolute absurdity, and cannot be sustained by the court. It is evident there was no power vested in the governor, before the date of the royal order of 1815, to grant lands for military services. If that unlimited power existed before, why should it have been restricted? Why should the soldiers of the three companies of militia of the city of St. Augustine, and the married officers and soldiers of the third battalion of Cuba, by royal order, be denied the same reward which, it is contended, the governor had power, both before and after the order, to bestow on others, particularly when the order professes to grant a reward for their fidelity, and not to deprive them of a bounty, which, before the date of the order, they might have received under the power of the governor?

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1349. [1ST SESSION.

LEVEES ON THE MISSISSIPPI, RED, ARKANSAS, AND MISSOURI RIVERS, FOR RECLAIMING OVERFLOWED PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 16, 1835.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 9, 1835.

SIR: In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives, dated the 2d of March last, directing "the Secretary of the Treasury to cause an estimate to be made of the probable expense of constructing a levee on the public land on the western bank of the Mississippi, and the southern bank of Red river, in the State of Louisiana; also, an estimate of the expense of constructing levees on, or removing obstructions from, the rivers of Arkansas and Missouri, through the public lands, wherever they may be necessary; together with the probable advantages or disadvantages of such works, respectively: the probable effect upon the health and prosperity of the country in which any such works may be constructed; and the probable quantity, quality, and value of the land belonging to the United States, which will be reclaimed by the construction of any such levees, and make report thereof to the next Congress," I have the honor to submit copies of letters from the department to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and a copy of his circular, showing the measures taken to fulfil the objects of the resolution; and also his reports, communicating the result of the inquiries in reference to the subjects embraced in it. (Nos. 1 to 17.)

I have the honor, likewise, to transmit the original letters referred to in the Commissioner's report, together with a tabular statement, prepared by this department, to exhibit, in a summary view, such specific information, required by the resolution, as is contained in those letters. In connection with the objects embraced in the resolution, I would respectfully refer to a communication from this department to the House of Representatives, dated 14th January, 1829; and which is numbered 99 in the documents of that body for the 2d session of the 20th Congress; and which contains some general suggestions and facts which may be deemed pertinent and useful.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. the SPEAKER of the House of Representatives.

No. 1.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 5, 1835.

SIR: I transmit a copy of a resolution of the House of Representatives, adopted on the 2d ultimo; and have to request that you will immediately institute the inquiries necessary to enable the department to give the desired information. The inquiries will be addressed to the surveyors general within the proper surveying districts, and to the registers and receivers in the land districts indicated by the resolution, and to such other sources of information as are to be relied on, and may be accessible to the General Land Office. It is desirable that all the information necessary to comply with the resolution, may be in the possession of the department on or before the first of October next. As all the information desired must be obtained without expense, no appropriation having been made for the purpose, the information expected will be only the best which the parties can procure and give by correspondence.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

COMMISSIONER of the General Land Office.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 13, 1835.

SIR: Annexed is a copy of a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury to this office, dated the 5th instant; and, also, a copy of the resolution of the House of Representatives therein referred to.

In pursuance of the instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury, I have to request that you will have the goodness to furnish the department with any information in your power, touching any of the several points of inquiry embraced in the resolution, as follows:

"An estimate of the probable expense of constructing a levee on the public land on the western bank of the Mississippi river, and the southern bank of the Red river, in the State of Louisiana.

"An estimate of the expense of constructing levees on, or removing obstructions from, the rivers of Arkansas and Missouri, through the public lands, wherever they may be necessary; together with the probable advantages or disadvantages of such works, respectively; the probable effects upon the health and prosperity of the country in which any such works may be constructed; and the probable quantity, quality, and value of the land belonging to the United States, which will be reclaimed by the construction of any such levees."

In the estimate respecting levees, it is desirable that the points between which it may be recommended to construct them, the length of the line, and the probable expense of construction, per rod, should be clearly and distinctly indicated.

It is highly desirable that any information you may be enabled to afford on these subjects, either from your own personal knowledge and observation, or from the experience of others in whose judgment and accuracy you can confide, should be as much in detail as practicable, and calculated to lead to practical results.

With great respect,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

COMMISSIONER of the General Land Office.

The following resolution, offered by Mr. Clay, from the Committe on Public Lands, on the 3d February, was taken up, read, considered, and agreed to, viz.:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to cause an estimate to be made of the probable expense of constructing a levee on the public land on the western bank of the Mississippi, and the southern bank of Red river, in the State of Louisiana; also, an estimate of the expense of constructing levees on, or removing obstructions from, the rivers of Arkansas and Missouri, through the public lands, wherever they may be necessary; together with the probable advantages or disadvantages of such works respectively, the probable effects upon the health and prosperity of the country in which any of such works may be constructed, and the probable quantity, quality, and value of the land belonging to the United States, which will be reclaimed by the construction of any such levees, and make report thereof to the next Congress.

No. 4.

ST. FRANCIS COUNTY, ARKANSAS TERRITORY, September 27, 1835.

SIR: I received your communication from the General Land Office, dated March 13, 1835, requesting me to give such information to that department as was in my power, "touching any of the several points of inquiry embraced in the resolution of the Congress of the United States, as agreed to, February 3d."

As to the first inquiry laid down in your communication, "an estimate of the probable expense of constructing a levee on the public land on the western bank of the Mississippi river," I shall, in this communication, give you the "information" which I have derived from authentic sources, which you may rely on, as I received it from gentlemen of undoubted veracity. As to my "personal knowledge and observation," of the section of country which I shall here describe, it is but little known to me by "personal observation," though I live immediately adjoining it; but by information from other persons, I can give you a very correct description of it, which, perhaps, may throw some light on the subject of inquiry.

I shall commence at Cape Girardeau, on the Mississippi river, in the State of Missouri, and end at Helena, on the said river, in the Territory of Arkansas, as my professional business has been of that nature which called my whole attention to it. I have not travelled much in the section of country I shall describe. I have lived four years bordering on it.

From Cape Girardeau to Helena is 350 miles, as the Mississippi river meanders, and the land subject to inundation from the large freshets of the Mississippi river, will average thirty miles in breadth, from the first to the latter place. Taking this as an average medium, there are 10,500 square miles, and one mile contains 640 square acres, which gives in round numbers, 6,720,000 square acres of land; which, at $1 25 per acre, will amount to $8,400,000. And in 350 miles, there are 112,000 rods, (320 rods in a mile,) and the "probable expense of constructing the levee, per rod," I shall put down at $4 per rod, including all the necessary expenses. The amount, then, for constructing the levee from Cape Girardeau to Helena, will cost the general government $448,000, leaving a balance for the treasury of $7,952,000: this will be a handsome revenue to the government, for lands at this time not considered worth one cent per acre. There will be many places along the line where the levee will run, that will not need any throwing up. There are, in this section of country, many places of high land, that do not inundate, averaging from fifty to a thousand acres; but when the Mississippi overflows its banks, they are surrounded with water from one to six months in the year; therefore, those places are of no more value, in their present situation, than if they did overflow. There is land that will be worth from ten to twenty dollars per acre, under the public hammer, if reclaimed; and in a few years this section of country would be thickly inhabited, and would be the paradise of the southwestern section of the United States. Lying immediately, as it does, on the majestic Mississippi, which is an outlet at all times and seasons of the year to the New Orleans market, and not only there, but to the commercial world, the farmer or merchant could ship his commodities to any port or market, whether American, European, African, or Asiatic, from his own door.

As to the "health of the country," it would be greatly promoted, not only in the section reclaimed, but in other sections of country lying adjacent. There are sections of country, which, to my certain knowledge, at this time are very sickly; and if the said leveeing was to be completed, there are many sections, now subject to fevers of various kinds, which would become entirely healthy, or as much so as any low country enjoys.

As to the "prosperity" and value of the lands, there cannot be any exact computation made; it will so far surpass any calculation that can be made at this time. The whole country that I have described can be cultivated, if reclaimed, with the exception of some lakes, and many of them can be drained, if the overflow waters did not come every year, and fill them up; and the reclaimed lakes would make as good farm land as any, and I shall not hesitate in saying, as good as any in the world.

There is another subject I shall call your attention to, not named in your communication, the removing the rafts out of the St. Francis river, and removing other obstructions, which are at this time an impediment to the navigation of that river with steamboats. Steamboats, about from two to three months in the year, can ascend from one hundred to one hundred and fifty miles up the said river at this time. In the time of the winter and spring freshets, there is another essential obstruction to the navigation of the said river. In the years of 1811 and 1812, the land sunk about one hundred feet perpendicular, about fifty miles in length, and thirty in breadth. This sunk land, as it is called by the inhabitants, is about one hundred and fifty miles from the mouth of the St. Francis river. This forms different channels through the said sunk land, which makes it dangerous to navigation, as a true channel has not as yet ever been ascertained. The river is navigable from its mouth, where it empties into the Mississippi, for upward of five hundred miles, if the above obstruction was removed. Meandering through the public lands for several hundred miles, and immediately through the lands that will be reclaimed, as stated above, extending far up in the State of Missouri, which, if the above obstruction was removed, would be an outlet of large quantities of produce from the State of Missouri and the upper parts of the Territory of Arkansas, and would make the public lands lying adjacent to it much more valuable. The section of country above described was never known to overflow until the shakes of the earth in 1811 and 1812; and by the survey of the United States engineer, in laying out the military road, from Memphis to Strong's, on the St. Francis river, he found, by actual measurement, the bank of the Mississippi, from the point where the road commences, to be sixteen feet higher than the banks of the St. Francis river, where the said road crosses. The eastern bank of the St. Francis river should be leveed one hundred miles up from its mouth, to prevent the back water of the Mississippi from overflowing the public lands that lie between the two rivers, in time of a freshet in the Mississippi.

The probable expense to remove the rafts, (three in number,) and other obstructions to the navigation in the St. Francis river, would be about $15,000; and the expense of constructing the levee 100 miles on the east bank of the St. Francis river, at $4 per rod; there is 32,000 rods in 100 miles, which makes the sum of $128,000—add $15,000 to $128,000, makes, in the aggregate, $143,000; take this from $7,952,000, the surplus left, after paying all the expenses for leveeing the western bank of the Mississippi from the above named points, leaves $7,809,000, the whole profits to the general government, after constructing the above works. The St. Francis river runs through the section I have above described.

As it respects Red river, Arkansas river, and Missouri river, I know nothing about them, and, therefore, cannot make any communication respecting them.

I have the honor to be, yours, with great respect,

WILLIAM G. BOZEMAN.

RECEIVER'S OFFICE, Little Rock, September 4, 1835.

SIR: From the want of experience, and practical, personal knowledge, I am unable to furnish the information, in a satisfactory manner, which you desire in your circular letter of the 13th of March last, wherein you requested me to furnish "an estimate of the probable expense," &c., &c. I have, however, endeavored to procure the information desired, from others in whose judgment and accuracy I have confidence.

I enclose you herewith a letter from Nicholas Righton, esq., a practical surveyor, and an old resident of this Territory, in reply to mine, requesting him to furnish me all the information in his power, on the several points of inquiry embraced in your letter of the 13th of March last. I trust, the letter of Righton will shed some light on the subjects of your letter. I also enclose you herewith, a copy of my letter to Thomas Mathers, esq., an old resident of the Territory, and formerely a practical surveyor therein, a gentleman of much experience and information, as regards the subjects of inquiry contained in your letter of the 13th of last March. As soon as I receive his reply, which, I have no doubt, will shed additional light on the subjects of inquiry embraced in your letter, I will transmit it to you.

I am, sir, with great respect, your obedient servant,

P. T. CRUTCHFIELD.

HELENA, COUNTY OF PHILLIPS, Arkansas Territory, May 10, 1835.

SIR: I have received your letter of the 5th inst., by which you request of me to make "an estimate of the expense of constructing levees on, or removing obstructions from, the rivers of Arkansas and Missouri, through the public lands, wherever they may be necessary, together with the probable advantages and disadvantages of such works respectively; the probable effect upon the health and prosperity of the country in which any of such works may be constructed, and the probable quantity, quality and value of the lands belonging to the United States, which would be reclaimed by the construction of any such levees." You commencing, however, by saying such "information has been requested by the Treasury Department," wherefore I should most naturally draw this conclusion, that the object in the department was barely to feel the pulse of the Western citizens upon the subject, for they must have known that they could not obtain good and useful information through such channels. The subject is too weighty, entirely too ponderous for any man, (or set of men who possess the ability,) to do it justice gratuitously. As to myself, it is true, I have surveyed for the United States, to a large amount, in the Arkansas and Mississippi bottoms, and well know that it is practicable to reclaim by levees large tracts of land, and so too peculiarly situated, as to fall within the sphere of advice for the same to be done; but to make an estimate for the cost of such embankments against the water, and the amount of land which would be reclaimed, I should have to survey the same; then I would have the data upon which I could make the estimate for cost, and the amount of land which would be reclaimed, and could further answer the question as regards quality; however, the quality of the soil in overflowed bottoms is generally good, sometimes rather too sandy.

As to the atmospheric tendency which the reclaiming system would have, I cannot conceive any counteracting principles to its adding regularly to the salubrity or improvement of the air and health, in proportion to the extent of the works.

As to reclaiming upon general principles, that is, confine all the water to the open streams in our large western rivers, such as Missouri, Arkansas, or the Mississippi, would be an undertaking, I believe, too great for our government; but, for the sake of a position, I will admit that it is practicable, and say that it is now the policy of our government The first question now is, how high would a Mississippi levee have to be made; or, in other words, if all the water of the Mississippi was confined to the open stream, how much higher would the river rise? It is not likely that this question would get a satisfactory solution in the world; for there would be such a discordance in the calculations and the results, that there would be no knowing what to believe, and the question still remain unsettled; but I shall here undertake to answer the question by hypothesis, or rather data marked with much simplicity, and the truth of which will be recognised by every man who is acquainted with the western waters. In the first place let it be understood, that the bottom lands of our rivers are very wide; the Mississippi anywhere below the mouth of the Ohio, about thirty straight miles across, interspersed with deep reservoirs, or overflows in some places for miles together, bearing marks of from twelve to twenty feet in height. These large overflows, or reservoirs, communicate with the river by means of bayous, and when the river rises, the water runs from the river, through those bayous, and pours their contents into those large reservoirs, or overflows and fills them up, and when the river falls, the water returns through the same bayous into the main stream, with some slight exceptions.

The bottom or beds of those bayous are generally about twelve feet above low-water mark of the river. Now, when the river commences to rise at low water, (or ten to fifteen feet of low water,) it is not uncommon for it to rise four feet in twenty-four hours, but as soon as it gets up so that the water flows through the bayous to the overflows, it is checked in its rising; in lieu of four feet in twenty-four hours, it then rises only about two feet, and the higher it rises the more of these communicating bayous are brought into action, as their beds are various in regard to depth; so that when the water is within eight to ten feet of the top of the high bank, it is shocking to all persons acquainted with the Mississippi to learn that the river is rising at the rate of twelve inches in twenty-four hours.

Now, if not for the thousand bayous flooding the water from the main river, in lieu of its rising but twelve inches in twenty-four hours, it would rise four feet, the same as it did before the bayous were brought into action; but the higher the river gets, the slower it rises, so that when it is near bank full, the water from the river running over some of its low banks, as well as all the communicating bayous flooding the waters off into the great basins of overflow, the main river now rises one inch in twenty-four hours, notwithstanding the mighty rivers of the north, east, and west, Mississippi, Ohio and Missouri, together with their thousand tributaries, with their foaming mouths gorged to overflowing into the lower Mississippi, it is no larger in its channel than either of the others aforementioned.

Now, from the above data could be nearly estimated how high the Mississippi would rise, if all its waters were confined to the main stream; but it is sufficiently proven, that our highest bottoms would have to present a front levee of ten feet at least, to be preserved against the high floods, and the reckless consequence that would follow can be easily conceived.

I have spun out this branch of the subject so far, that I have not the time to nominally analyze others; wherefore I will conclude by saying, that I am an advocate for the reclaiming system judiciously conducted.

N. RIGHTON.

RECEIVER'S OFFICE, Little Rock, September 3, 1835.

SIR: I have been requested to furnish the Treasury Department of the government of the United States "an estimate of the probable expense of constructing a levee on the public land, on the western bank of the Mississippi river, and the southern bank of the Red river, in the State of Louisiana;" also, "an estimate of the expense of constructing levees on, or removing obstructions from, the rivers of Arkansas and Missouri, through the public lands, wherever they may be necessary; together with the probable advantages or disadvantages of such works, respectively, the probable effects upon the health and prosperity of the country in which such works may be constructed, and the probable quantity, quality, and value of the land belonging to the United States, which will be reclaimed by the construction of any such levees."

I have been requested to furnish information on the foregoing subjects of inquiry, either from my own personal knowledge and observation, or from the experience of others in whose judgment and accuracy I can confide. Having little personal knowledge and experience touching the foregoing points of inquiry, I am unable to reply to them satisfactorily. Believing, however, that you have great practical knowledge and experience relative to the subjects embraced therein, I trust that you will impart it to me, by responding to the above inquiries as early and as much in detail as may comport with your time and convenience. By doing so, you will confer a favor on the public at large, and oblige me from whom the information is sought.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. T. CRUTCHFIELD.

THOMAS MATHERS, Esq., of Conway County, now at Little Rock, A. T.

No. 6.

LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS, October 9, 1835.

SIR: In compliance with your request of the 13th March last, touching the expense of constructing levees on the west bank of the Mississippi river, and the southern bank of Red river, in the State of Louisiana, and the constructing of levees on, or removing obstructions from, the rivers of Arkansas and Missouri, through the public lands, wherever they may be necessary, together with the probable advantages or disadvantages of such works; the probable effect upon the health and prosperity of the country in which any of such works may be constructed, and the probable quantity, quality, and value of the land belonging to the United States, which will be reclaimed by the construction of any such levees, I now give answer, containing such information as I have in my possession. With regard to leveeing Red river, in Louisiana, and the removal of obstructions from the Arkansas and Missouri rivers, and the constructing of levees on the Missouri river, I will not undertake to give information, as I am not acquainted with Red river in Louisiana, nor the Missouri river, and am not acquainted with the expense of operating in the removing of obstructions from rivers. But with the situation of the country on the Mississippi and Arkansas rivers, within this Territory, I have some acquaintance—have seen some levees on the Mississippi river, and with the cost of the constructing of which I made some inquiry. Such levees as I saw on the Mississippi river, would cost from one to one and a half dollars per rod. There are points on the Mississippi river yet not leveed, which would cost more to construct levees upon than those levees I saw, on account of the bank inundating to greater depth; consequently, the levee would have to be proportionately higher, and more than proportionately broad, to give it sufficient strength to withstand the weight of water that would come against it in a high flood. Those levees I have seen on the Mississippi river (in the Territory) are from one to two and a half feet in height, and from five to eight feet broad on the base. It would, I think, rarely be the case that a levee of more than four feet in height would be required on the west bank of the Mississippi river, in the Territory; and where a levee of four feet in height would be required, it should be at least twelve feet broad at the base, to make it of sufficient strength to withstand the weight of the water. The construction of such a levee would cost two and a half to three dollars per rod.

The Arkansas river would require, in some instances, larger levees than the Mississippi, but rarely any more than four feet in height, the cost of the construction of which would be about the same as on the Mississippi. The quantity of land that would be reclaimed from inundation, by making a permanent levee on the west bank of the Mississippi river, within this Territory, and the banks of the Arkansas river, would be immense. The most fertile lands are subject to inundation, which, if reclaimed, would not be surpassed, in point of fertility, by any land in the world. I can give no correct estimate of the quantity of land that would be reclaimed from inundation, by making permanent levees on the banks of those rivers, within the bounds of the Territory, but will say that many hundreds of thousands (at least a million) of acres of this superior soil would be reclaimed. As to the effects produced by such works on the health and prosperity of the country, there is not a doubt with me that they would be of great importance. As to health, the permanent drying of the land would evidently contribute much to that greatest blessing—the blessing of health, together with the many other advantages which would result from the drying of those lands, to wit, principally the rapidity with which they would be thrown into successful cultivation, would add incalculably to the prosperity of the country.

I am, very respectfully, your most obedient and very humble servant,

ALLEN MARTIN, D. S.

ST. CHARLES, Mo., May 12, 1835.

SIR: I have just received a copy of a circular from you, making inquiries respecting the practicability, utility, and probable cost of constructing a levee to prevent the overflowing of the Mississippi, and certain other western rivers.

I am not possessed of sufficient mathematical skill, statistical information, and knowledge of the nature of such works, to form anything like an estimate of the cost of such an undertaking, nor do I believe that any safe estimate could be made without a careful examination of the ground by competent engineers. I have had just enough of experience in the business of engineering to know, that men are generally greatly deceived when they attempt to judge by the eye, respecting ascents and descents, and different levels. This is especially so, when the ground is apparently level, or nearly so.

All that can be expected of men who have made no scientific examination of the country, is to give a general statement of the extent and quality of the country that is occasionally inundated, and of the nature of the work required to prevent such inundations. I am aware that there are many persons who are much better qualified to give you satisfactory information on this subject than myself; but I fear that many of those to whom your circular is addressed will not take the trouble to lay before you the facts and important information in their possession. I have therefore taken my pen to contribute my mite of information, on a subject of immense interest and importance to the whole western country.

On the whole course of the Mississippi there is an immense quantity of first-rate land that is sometimes overflowed, and consequently rendered useless, unsaleable, and uninhabitable. This land is generally of the very richest soil that exists in the world, and very advantageously situated for access, exportation, and commerce. If it were drained, it would be forthwith thickly settled, and become the most productive and valuable part of the country. At present these inundations render the bottoms unfit for cultivation, and impair the health of the adjacent country to such an extent, as greatly to retard and prevent the settlement of the neighboring bluffs and uplands. The Mississippi bottoms, in the States of Missouri and Illinois, would produce the greatest abundance of all kinds of grain and bread stuffs, and are admirably calculated for meadows, and for raising various other productions. Their situation is such, that all their produce could be quickly, safely, and cheaply shipped down the river, to supply the wants of the citizens of our sister States that are engaged in the culture of sugar and cotton. The unusual fertility of the soil, and the commercial facilities and advantages possessed by those living on the Mississippi bottoms, would enable them to establish an extensive trade, highly beneficial to themselves and the southern planters. The general settlement of the bottoms would afford much more desirable accommodations to steamboats and other vessels engaged in the navigation of the river, and render navigation and travelling on it more comfortable, healthful, and safe.

It would bring into market a large body of superior land now overflowed, and promote the settlement and cultivation of much valuable country, that now lies waste on account of the fears entertained respecting the health of its situation.

In the southern part of this State, the quantity of fine land that is overflowed is much greater than in the northern. But as I am better acquainted with the northern part of the State, I will confine my remarks to that section.

The point of land between the Missouri and Mississippi rivers is entirely alluvial for twenty miles above the confluence. The highlands terminate at the "Mamelles," about three miles below the town of St. Charles. All the strip of country below that point is level, and exceedingly fertile. It varies from two to ten miles in width. No section of country, of equal extent in the United States, possesses greater agricultural and commercial advantages than this country would, if proper measures were taken to prevent the inundations of the Mississippi, and to drain some lakes, such as the "Marais Croche," and the "Marais Temp Clair." The bottom of the Mississippi is about four miles wide at the "Mamelles," and extends to Clarksville, about sixty miles higher up the Mississippi river. In this distance, it varies from one to four miles in breadth. From Earlsville, there are no bottoms of consequence on the Missouri side of the river, until you come into Marion county, in the neighborhood of the town of Hannibal. From that point to the mouth of the Des Moines river, there is a similar bottom, which extends some distance up the Des Moines river. This would be a most delightful and productive farming country, if the high floods of the river could be effectually guarded against. In this bottom, as well as in that extending through St. Charles and Lincoln counties, the soil is loose and alluvial, and the work of excavation would be easy, and the cost of canals and embankments comparatively small. In many places, the ground near the river is sufficiently high to render embankment unnecessary, but it would be required in the intermediate places. There are several creeks that empty into the Mississippi through this bottom, which would have to be embanked for a short distance from their mouths. If the high water of the river were kept out, the work of draining the lakes would be cheap and easy.

If this were effected, every foot of the land in this region would be speedily bought by individuals, and reduced into a state of cultivation. If the main work were done by the government, much work of a similar nature would be done by individual enterprise. If the whole of this country were owned by an individual, it would certainly promote his pecuniary interest to execute this important enterprise; and as the government owns the greater part of the overflowed land, and much valuable land adjacent thereto, policy would dictate the propriety of undertaking the work. The land is unproductive and useless to the government as it lies, and will continue so, until some energetic measures be taken to render it valuable. It would be much better that the whole of this land should be ceded to the State, or given to individuals or companies, on condition that they drain and embank it, than that it should lie in its present state.

During last winter, I wrote a short account of a new county, recently organized in the southern part of this State, called "Stoddert," which I have cut from a paper in which it was published, and enclose to you, as being somewhat connected with the inquiries in your circular.

Respectfully yours, &c.

WM. M. CAMPBELL.

Hon. ELIJAH HAYWARD.

STODDERT COUNTY.

We are indebted to the kindness of a highly intelligent friend for most of the material facts contained in the following article on Stoddert county. This county has been recently established by the legislature of this State, and, as it is a section of country about which very little has as yet been said, although of very considerable extent, and possessing in a high degree inducements to emigrants and settlers, we have therefore thought proper to give to the description more space than is usually allotted to a single article.

This county is an island surrounded on all sides by rivers, swamps, or lakes. It is bounded on the north by a swamp, which separates it from Wayne and Cape Girardeau counties; on the east by an extensive swamp, which separates it from Scott and New Madrid counties; on the south by Arkansas Territory; on the west by the St. Francis river, which separates it from that Territory and Wayne county in Missouri.

Owing to the insular situation of Stoddert county, it is very inconvenient of access. A tolerably good road passes through the swamp on the north, leading from Cape Girardeau to Stoddert, by which nearly all the existing intercourse is carried on with the new county. The inconvenience of access from the direction of New Madrid and Arkansas is great, in consequence of the almost total impracticability of crossing the swamps in their present state. Stoddert county is about ninety miles long and from ten to twenty wide. It is very generally of an alluvial formation; there are no mountains, the hills are not considerable, and are entirely free from rock and stones. Stoddert is the region which was most seriously injured by the earthquakes, which ruined a part of New Madrid. By the extraordinary effects of the earthquakes a large part of the territory sank and was destroyed, the courses of the creeks and rivers were changed and interrupted, and their waters thrown into the depressed territory, and a number of extensive swamps and lakes formed. The waters of the St. Francis river and other streams were spread over the region to such an extent that it is sometimes difficult to determine where their channels really are. St. Francis river would be navigable for steamboats to the upper part of the county, if the rafts which obstruct its channel were removed. The inhabitants of that region sometimes call it Lead Fork. Castor river flows through Madison and Wayne counties, and the northern part of Stoddert, and in the swamp unites with White Water, and forms Little river, which flows south for some distance and empties into the St. Francis. The rafts on the St. Francis river and its branches are formed of immense masses of heavy timber, piled up and compactly driven together, extending across the streams until some of them cover several hundred acres. By the deposit of trash and the decay of timber and vegetation, a soil has been formed on them, and they are covered with living trees, grass, and herbage. On some of them a person may cross the St. Francis river without seeing the stream, or being conscious that he is near a watercourse. The river enters above, flows under the raft, and issues again below as if it had just risen out of the ground.

Some of these rafts rise and fall with the rise and fall of the stream, like a floating bridge. The principal raft is opposite to the lower end of West Prairie, and is about a mile long. There are several smaller rafts lower down the St. Francis, and on its tributaries. It is considered very practicable to avoid the obstruction in the navigation of the St. Francis and its branches, by cutting channels around the rafts. As they are situated at the bends of the river, and the soil is alluvial, the expense would be inconsiderable, and the benefits and advantages great.

A considerable part of the counties of St. Francis, Perry, Cape Girardeau, Madison, Wayne, Scott, New Madrid, and Stoddert, are watered by this river and its tributaries; and as much the greater part of the territory on its waters is still the property of the United States, an appropriation by Congress for the removal of the rafts, and the improvement of the navigation, would be not only just and reasonable, but highly politic and expedient. No part of the county of Stoddert has been surveyed or brought into market by the general government.

There are no private land claims in the county, except a very few old Spanish grants. The inhabitants live on the land as squatters, with the expectation of availing themselves of pre-emption rights, whenever the land shall be brought into market. A large part of Stoddert is heavily timbered with valuable kinds of timber. The northern part of the county is alternately swamps and ridges. There are within its boundaries two rich prairies of considerable exteut. West prairie, about the centre of the county, is twenty miles long and five wide. Grand prairie, in the southern part of the county, is about twelve miles long, and extends into Arkansas. The soil of these prairies is loose, sandy, and exceedingly productive. The timbered land is all of the richest kind of soil, equal in fertility to any part of the world. The climate is that of the northern part of Tennessee, and the productions similar. Sometimes there is ice, frost or snow, in this region, but not in great quantities. The woodland, prairies, and swamps, afford a varied and inexhaustible range of the finest kind, for horses, hogs, and cattle of all kinds, both winter and summer. The canebrakes also afford valuable range for stock. Cattle never require to be housed and fed here in winter. Immense stocks of hogs can be raised with great ease. Corn is produced in large abundance; other crops might be advantageously cultivated, and most kinds of stock may be raised with very little labor, trouble, or expense. The soil and climate are admirably adapted to the culture of cotton, in which article it can compete advantageously with any part of the southern States. The soil of Stoddert is fertile, its climate pleasant, its products plentiful, and its opportunities for trade in stock to the lower country valuable. Its territory holds out inducements to emigrants who expect to engage in stock raising or the culture of cotton. When the navigation of St. Francis river shall have been cleared out, it will possess very advantageous means of trade and intercourse with New Orleans, as the navigation will never be obstructed by ice.

Game, of various kinds, is abundant. There are immense numbers of bears and deer, some elk, and a few scattering buffalo. In the swamps are great numbers of muskrats and otters, and a few beavers. The principal trade is in peltries. For many years past there have been taken from these swamps, furs to the amount of from $20,000 to $30,000, and sold at New Madrid and other places. Owing to the difference of climate and situation, there are, in this region of the State, a number of fowls, wild animals, and vegetable productions of different species and descriptions from those that are found in the northern and western parts of Missouri. Until within a few years past, this section of the State was inhabited almost exclusively by Indians, but they have nearly all removed to the territory assigned to them west of the State of Missouri. There is still one Indian village situated on the edge of the swamp, between West and Grand prairies. It is composed of fragments of tribes of Senecas, Shawnees, Muscogees, Delawares, and Cherokees. They have resided long in the village, and their number is reduced to about fifty. They are peaceable, inoffensive, and have made some progress in agriculture and the ruder arts of civilization. They subsist by farming on a small scale, stock-raising, hunting, and the trade in peltries. They have had no opportunities of education, or of any kind of literary or religious instruction. The tribe owns no land here, and they only remain by the sufferance of the government and its citizens. Some of them are shrewd men, and very desirous of becoming permanently settled citizens of the country. Chiletican is principal chief, and exercises a species of patriarchal government over them.

Until lately the inaccessible situation of Stoddert kept off all population. Some speculators fixed upon this county as a situation for a terrestrial paradise separated from the evils of society; others viewed it as only a fit resort for outlaws and fugitives from justice.

It has, however, recently began to attract a population of a valuable and substantial description, and by the influx of inhabitants and progress of society, promises to become a flourishing county. The present population is supposed to be about one thousand. They are principally emigrants from Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, and other quarters. The soil, climate, and productions peculiarly suit the feelings, habits, and constitutions of emigrants from those States, and other portions of the southern country.

A large portion of that part of Stoddert which is now a swamp, might be readily reclaimed and rendered valuable and productive. Several of its streams might be rendered navigable for boats. It is said that there are indications of lead and iron ore in parts of the swamps that have sunk, and about the "earthquake hills." This region affords a fine field for the researches of the curious, and the enterprise of the trader and emigrant. The adjacent counties of Lawrence and Phillips, in Arkansas, contain considerable population, and there is a considerable region of country in that territory west of Stoddert.

A measure has been proposed in Congress by General Ashley to construct a road across the great swamp from New Madrid to Stoddert. If this should be effected, it would attract an immense amount of travelling and emigration to Arkansas and Missouri. It would render the road from New Madrid to Batesville, in Arkansas, shorter by more than one half the distance. It would require to be made across the swamp about nine miles, and would thus connect good roads in Kentucky with fine roads in the best part of Arkansas. It would be advantageous to the government of the United States to make this road, if they appropriate the whole of the land in Stoddert county for that purpose. This region only needs to be known in order to attract much emigration.

LAND OFFICE AT FAYETTEVILLE, September 26, 1835.

SIR: Your circular letter of the 15th of March last, in relation to the construction of levees on the Mississippi, Missouri, and Arkansas rivers, has been received, and in reply thereto, we can only say, that our situation is so remote from those rivers, that we are unable to give any correct opinion, or form any correct estimate, in relation to the subject of inquiry.

We are, with great respect, your obedient servants,

COMMISSIONER of the General Land Office.

No. 9.

NEW MADRID, MO., June 10, 1835.

DEAR SIR: I received your letter of the 13th of March, containing a resolution from the Committee on Public Lands, touching divers inquiries, &c., in answer to which I must confine myself pretty much to the county of New Madrid, which is the extreme southern county of the State of Missouri, and occupies a front on the Mississippi river of about 70 or 75 miles, including its meanderings, and 45 or 50 on a direct line, two thirds of which distance is occasionally subject to inundation; which liability is annually diminishing, from some unknown cause, probably its gradual increase of width, depth of channel, removal of the obstructions thrown up in the bed of the river in the time of the earthquakes. Ten years ago, when I first came to this county, great quantities of lands, occupying a front on the river, and at that time considered worthless and invaluable, from the great depth of the annual overflow covering them, are at this time (except in very uncommon seasons) dry and arable land, and held in high estimation by the occupants. Most of the land which is termed refuse, i. e., which was never surveyed by the United States government, was deeply overflowed in 1828, very partially in 1832, and not at all since, except at particular low places at the mouth of the bayous, creeks, &c. Every deep overflow leaves behind it a deposit, of from three to ten inches, just in proportion to the length of time and the depth the country is covered with the muddy water of the Missouri. Hence, the raise of the lowlands and the gradual diminution of the overflow. The greatest rise of water that ever takes place in the Missouri, Upper Mississippi, Ohio, Cumberland, or Tennessee, singly, has but slight effect to produce inundation here; but when these upper rivers raise simultaneously (as in 1815) at the same time, a universal flood is the consequence, when all the feeble efforts of man must stand in quiet submission. These circumstances are, however, like "angels' visits, few and far between," so that little dread and apprehension of injury arises from them. New Madrid is situated at the mouth of bayou St. John, near the middle of a large bend in the river; and except about two sections of surveyed land on the opposite side of the bayou from the town, all the scope of country of thirty miles fronting the river (20 direct), and 20 back, lying E. and N. E. to the mouth of James bayou, thence W. and S. W., embracing a great tract of country, is all refuse land, that has neither been surveyed nor brought into market as yet; and if it could be drained, by the means of a levee, would reclaim at least 200 sections. I think the general average height of a levee to answer every purpose, would not be over five feet, and the cost of that per rod not over $2 00; so that the expense of a levee from New Madrid to James bayou, (the mouth,) the N. E. corner of New Madrid county, would not be over $20,000, thereby leaving a net balance to the government of $140,000. The whole extent of this territory just spoken of is occupied by settlers every mile fronting the river. The country back from the river between the two bayous, St. John and St. James, holds a pretty near equal height to that on the bank, generally speaking, some higher and some lower; so that, in ten miles, there is not probably a descent of more than ten feet, which would lead to some doubts as to the salutary effect a levee would have, as there would seem to be no drain to the water that oozes up through the ground during an inundation, and the rain-water which falls frequently in such great abundance as to inundate large tracts of low boggy country, six and seven feet deep in water. It is, however, absorbed into the earth, and taken by evaporation much quicker than the doctrines that govern those subjects would seem to admit. This section of country just spoken of approaches directly to the town of New Madrid, embracing a tract over twenty miles square, lying N. and E. As to the probable effect these improvements would have on the health of the country, on both sides of the bayous, it is manifest to every eye. Whatever may have the effect to render this tract dry and arable, would of course check animal and vegetable decomposition, and cut short miasmatic diseases, at least in some measure. The section of country from bayou St. James to the mouth of the Ohio, and for some distance above that, are subject pretty much to the same observations as the one just spoken of, except some ten or fifteen miles front in the neighborhood of Wolf Island, which lands have been surveyed, and are now in market, or at least have been entered and sought after with great avidity.

The distance from bayou St. James to the mouth of Ohio, is about forty miles; and probably the private lands may occupy one third or more of this distance, Spanish grants and congressional entries. No accurate calculation could be made without admeasurement, as to the quantity of land that would be reclaimed by a levee from this to the mouth of the Ohio; not less, however, than five hundred sections of the first quality; and the cost of the levee, say seventy-five or eighty miles, would fall far short of the amount of proceeds arising from the sale of one hundred sections.

Great care would have to be used in running the levee at some distance from the bank of the river in the bends, (say from one to two hundred yards,) so as to avoid being destroyed by the falling banks. The country from New Madrid down the river, for the distance of twenty-five miles, is but little subject to inundation, the banks and the country back being generally high, so as to render any levee entirely unnecessary. This space of twenty-five miles is entirely occupied by private lands, congressional entries, and Spanish grants. The country from where these high lands terminate, is subject pretty much to the same remarks as the country to the mouth of the Ohio, except that the descent back is greater toward the lowlands of Little river, a branch of the St. Francis, and the water finds its outlet in this way. The distance here to levee to the southeast corner of the county is about twenty-five miles, intersected, however, with spots of several miles not requiring it; at least, one not over three feet would be sufficient. Bayou Pemisco empties into the Mississippi, fifteen miles above the southeast corner of the county, and presents a low, flat aspect at its mouth, for two or three miles, that would require a levee of ten feet. The amount of land to be reclaimed by this levee, back with the Arkansas line, thence north, intersecting the high lands in the middle of the county, would be even greater than the country described above, with the same salutary effect as regards health.

Twenty miles back of the Little prairie, in a northwest course, is the West prairie, Grand prairie, &c., and but for the lowlands that cut it off and separate it from the river in a direct line, would be one of the richest and most fertile counties of Missouri (now Stoddert).

In conclusion, upon a fair calculation, forty thousand dollars would levee all that is necessary to levee in New Madrid county, fronting the river, and would reclaim five hundred or one thousand sections of land, worth $1 25 per acre, on a general average. Some situations on the river, on those refuse lands, are now worth from one to three thousand dollars for the bare occupant right to half a mile front, and one or two back. These lands afford homes for thousands of families free from taxation and the sheriff's reach; over which the poor, but happy man, can walk in proud independence, as proprietor of the soil, without money and without price. I can see no propriety in constructing levees on the Mississippi, as the highlands approach always within three miles of the river; on one side or the other, much nearer, as far as my observation extends, about three hundred miles up. Of the waters of Red river and Arkansas I know nothing, and, therefore, can offer no reflections on the subject of improvements there.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. B. MARTIN.

ST. FRANCIS, June 3, 1835.

SIR: Your communication, directed to me, dated 13th March, has been duly received and considered; and in reply, I have been settled on and in the vicinity of the Mississippi for the last twenty-eight years, and am pretty well acquainted with the local situation from Cape Girardeau, in the State of Missouri, to the mouth of the Arkansas, a distance of something near four hundred and sixty-five miles by way of the river. Of this distance,

I believe it to be practicable to levee three hundred and fifty miles, that is, from Cape Girardeau to the town of Helena, as at Helena the high lands run down the St. Francis river from its head on its west bank, intersecting the Mississippi at this point; from Cape Girardeau to Helena, there are but few places but what can be leveed with little expense, comparatively speaking, as in many places there are high ridges of land running parallel with the river, that would not require a levee of more than from one to three feet in height. I believe one half the distance would be protected with a levee averaging three feet; say the other half would require a levee of six feet, which I am conscious would be as high as would be required. The amount that would be required to levee from Cape Girardeau to Helena, three hundred and fifty miles, I believe would not exceed $500,000. But in order to reclaim this section of the country, there must be a levee run up the east bank of the St. Francis river, say one hundred miles, which would require the further sum of $166,000. There would also be other objects which would have to be taken into consideration, to reclaim and qualify for farming, navigation, &c., this section of the country. About three hundred miles up the St. Francis, from its mouth, are three rafts of timber formed across the river; the most extensive one does not exceed one mile in length. Those rafts are formed at the head of the back water on the St. Francis, from the overflow of the Mississippi. By leveeing the Mississippi, and the clearing out of those rafts, they never would impede this stream again. In the vicinity of this raft, what is called the Big swamp, in the southeast corner of the State of Missouri, empties in. This swamp is something like eighty miles in length, situate adjoining the ridge of high lands lying in the fork of the St. Francis and Mississippi, and running parallel with the Mississippi swamp, is made from the waters of these hills, which can easily be reclaimed, by cutting a canal adjacent to the high lands, to intersect a small stream situated in the bottom, called Little river, which empties in the St. Francis, a short distance below the raft. To cut this canal would require say $250,000. There is also one other object to be taken into consideration. A short distance below the raft on the St. Francis, in 1811 and 1812, the earthquakes sunk a considerable portion of these low lands, so much so that it destroyed the channel of the St. Francis for near thirty miles. The channel is divided into a number of streams, none of which are large enough for large boats to pass. By filling up all those channels except one, and cutting it deeper, it would afford a good navigation the most part of the year for tolerably large steamboats. I believe that this object might be effected say for $50,000. The St. Francis river, if cleared of the obstructions above named, is one of the finest streams of its size in the western country. It would afford a splendid navigation for the distance of from four to five hundred miles; and if reclaimed, there is no country under the heavens, for its extent, affords more good lands; and the southern counties of the State of Missouri would be greatly profited, as it would afford them a safe navigation, as it were, from their doors. The country that would be reclaimed from these two points would be vast; say a country of three hundred miles in length, averaging thirty miles in width. By making the improvements as herein detailed, it would be hard to estimate the value of the country reclaimed. It must be borne in mind that by making these improvements, it would in a great degree make the country healthy. Only to think that 36,000 families can he settled down for life on lands that improve and get better for fifty years to come, and that on lands now considered to be worth nothing. There is something very remarkable in the vast overflow between the St. Francis and Mississippi. From the best information that I can get, and from my own knowledge, the bottoms of the St. Francis did not overflow until since the earthquakes in 1811 and 1812. It appears the country between the St. Francis and Mississippi was sunk, so that the high water made its way into the St. Francis several places, the first of which is near New Madrid, and from there in different places within fifteen miles of Memphis. It has been ascertained by engineers, from running a level from the bank of the Mississippi to the bank of the St. Francis, that the bank of the Mississippi is sixteen feet above the bank of the St. Francis. Where the banks are equal as regards the overflow, one hundred miles above the mouth of the St. Francis, I believe that the required levee between Cape Girardeau and Helena will not exceed four feet in height on an average; and I am bound to believe that it could be done for less than four dollars and fifty cents per rod; but I believe the best plan for the government to insure the work for the least sum, would be to purchase negroes and provisions, and employ overseers.

As regards the improvement on the Mississippi south of Helena, I believe it may be done, but the expense will be considerably increased beyond the estimate before laid down; and as there are many others, I presume, better acquainted than myself to inform you, I will forbear giving any further indication.

I have a slight knowledge of the Arkansas, but not of that particular character to enable me to give you the necessary information. I am not acquainted with the Missouri, and am unprepared to advise in relation thereto. I hope that my slight sketch may be of some service.

I am, very respectfully, WILLIAM STRONG.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, November 14, 1835.

SIR: In looking over the answers to your circular of the 13th March last, on the subject of the resolution of the House of Representatives, dated the 2d of that month, I perceive that none of them have any reference to the southern bank of Red river, in the State of Louisiana; and as in replying to the resolution, it will be proper to account for the reason for the absence of the required information on that head, I will thank you to state what steps were taken to procure it, and the cause of the failure. It has occurred to me that a Mr. Brooks, now in this city, and who has resided for several years in the interior of Louisiana, may be acquainted with the locality of that region, and be able, on application to him, to communicate some information on the subject. I shall be glad, therefore, you would seek an interview with him for that purpose, and report the best estimate you can form as to that section.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

The COMMISSIONER of the General Land Office.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, November 16, 1835.

SIR: In relation to the subject of your letter of the 14th inst., I have the honor to inform you that the circular letter of 13th March last, to which you refer, was transmitted to the following sources of information:

To the registers and receivers of the land offices in the States of Louisiana, Missouri, and the Territory of Arkansas.

To the senators and representatives from the same States, and to the delegate from the Territory, and, also, to the governors of each; to whom was also furnished an additional number of copies for distribution to such other sources of information as they might see proper to direct them to, amounting in all to one hundred and eighty-three copies.

Agreeably to your suggestion, I purpose to consult Jehiel Brooks, esq., who has resided for many years in the interior of Louisana, as to the probable expense of constructing a levee on the public lands on the southern bank of Red river in that State.

I am, respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, November 16, 1835.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit a reply from the land officers at Jackson, Missouri, on the subject of the circular letter of the 13th March last, respecting the resolution of the House of Representatives, passed on the 3d day of February last.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

LAND OFFICE, Jackson, Mo., October 20, 1835.

The undersigned, register and receiver of the land office at Jackson, Missouri, in obedience to instructions from the Land Office Department, of the 13th March last, respectfully submit the following report:

Having no means to obtain the information required by that portion of the instructions relating to the State of Louisiana, they have confined their inquiries to that portion relating to this State, and more particularly to the inundated lands in this immediate land district.

To construct a levee on the margin of the Mississippi river, so as to effect the object of the department, if indeed practicable, will be attended with great expense, and from the instability of the banks, (being principally composed of sand,) and the great rapidity of the current of the river, would, in the opinion of the undersigned, be of little utility. It is true, levees are permanently constructed on the Mississippi in Louisiana, but it should be taken into consideration that the material of which the banks are composed higher up the river is very different, and the current much more rapid.

From the best information the undersigned have been enabled to obtain, a levee cannot be constructed at a less average expense than from two thousand five hundred to three thousand dollars per mile, and when completed cannot be considered permanent.

The undersigned, however, would respectfully suggest, that the object of the department in reclaiming the inundated lands in this district could be effected by a mode entirely practicable, and at comparatively little expense, and beg leave to refer to the enclosed letter of Mr. John Rodney, who having surveyed the public lands in the vicinity of the Great swamp, and whose residence in that section of country for many years has given him opportunities to obtain much practical information; and would further suggest, that a survey—by a competent person—of the inundated lands, in what is generally known as the Great swamp, be ordered; having no doubt not only of the entire practicability of the plan suggested by Mr. Rodney, but that it would result in advantage to the government, and incalculable benefit to this section of country, reclaiming a vast extent of land of the highest productive quality, and at the same time furnishing an easy and safe navigation.

They also beg leave to refer to the enclosed letter from Dr. Thomas Neale, whose views of the effects upon the health of the country is founded upon the experience of thirty years' residence in this section of the country, all of which is respectfuly submitted.

JACKSON, MO., October 14, 1835.

GENTLEMEN: In compliance with your request I now briefly present to you views in regard to the influence on the health to the inhabitants of Cape Girardeau county which the clearing and draining the lands of the Great swamp would be productive of. The present condition of the Great swamp to engender disease, and the salutary influence on the health of those residing near it, when drained and in a state of cultivation, are evident to the most ordinary observer.

The immense mass of vegetable matter which annually grows in the swamp and on its margin, when decomposed, is unquestionably a prolific source of disease to those living within its destructive influence. The season most favoring the decomposition of vegetable matter is the summer, and the agents which nature employs for that purpose are heat and humidity, and at that season of the year they are always present in the swamp region.

The undrained situation of the Great swamp, and the peculiar humid state of the atmosphere in and around it, aided by the action of an intense summer sun on vegetable matter and stagnant water covering superficially its surface, are calculated to impart great activity to marsh effluvia, which is highly deleterious to human health and life. During the season when fever prevails in this country, it has always been observed to be of a more malignant character during the prevalence of south winds than under any other circumstances. This is accounted for upon the principle that the extensive morbid exhalations of the swamp are wafted by the south winds to the settlements lying in an opposite direction.

The draining and cultivation of the Great swamp would disencumber it of its superabundant decayed and decaying vegetable matter, and of its noxious stagnant waters.

What benefit, it may be asked, would result from the new order of things as above stated? It is believed that it would improve the health of the country fifty per cent., by rendering the atmosphere more salubrious; and the advantage in an agricultural point of view would be immense, for it is as fertile a region as is on the globe. Much might be written to illustrate this subject; but as medical gentlemen now generally agree as to the causes that produce fever, it is presumed that the cursory remarks here presented will be deemed sufficient.

I am, gentlemen, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOMAS NEALE.

GREAT SWAMP, SCOTT COUNTY, MO., August 28, 1835.

Messrs. FRANK J. ALLEN and RALPH GUILD, Register and Receiver of the Land Office, Jackson:

Having been solicited by you to give some information on the subject of levelling and draining the swamp and earthquake lands lying in the southeast part of the State of Missouri, and also lying within the bounds of your Land Office:

It will, of course, be expected that the office within whose bounds the swamps lie, will give the fullest and most detailed description of them, and would be most able to advise and suggest a plan to reclaim them. I therefore take the liberty to state to you what I know from ocular examination, and also what would be my plan of reclaiming them in the cheapest and most practicable method.

Beginning at the head of the Great swamp, about three miles west of the Mississippi river, near the range line between ranges thirteen and fourteen, township thirty, north, it being the highest part of the swamp, to construct a small levee across the lowest part or bed of the swamp, to prevent the overflow or back water of the Mississippi from passing down the swamp: The length of the levee would not exceed one mile; the highest part of the levee, in the lowest place, would not exceed six feet, and that only a small distance; the balance of the levee, each way from the lowest part of the swamp, would become still of less height, until it would come to the surface of the highest part of the swamp, so that the whole line of levee would not average more than a height of three feet by a width of eight feet, which would be sufficient to keep out the water at all stages of the Mississippi river. The probable cost of constructing said levee, at the estimate of one cent for removing each cubic foot of earth or other substance that would intervene, will amount to eleven dollars and eighty-eight cents per rod or perch, and consequently, the whole levee would amount to three thousand eight hundred and one dollars and sixty cents.

This levee is all that is necessary to prevent the water of the Mississippi from flowing down the swamp, and of course there would be no other water to drain off the swamp, except what might fall into it by rain and the small creeks and rivulets that fall into it on each side, which all descends down the swamp in a southwest direction, and almost forms a natural canal, until it enters Hubble's creek, which is a distance of about eight miles. This natural canal, improved and cleared out to about the width of eight feet at top and four at bottom, and six feet deep, would be all-sufficient to carry off all the waters that would collect in the swamp between the first-mentioned levee and Hubble's creek, by the assistance of a few small drains cut from the body of standing water to intersect said canal.

The canal, at the same rate of one cent for each cubic foot of earth, at a distance of eight miles, would amount to the sum of fifteen thousand two hundred dollars, for the second section of eight miles of canal. Thence down Hubble's creek to its intersection with Whitewater, a distance of about six miles, allowing the clearing out of the bed of the creek of logs and other obstructions at about the same rates per mile, will amount to eleven thousand four hundred dollars, and from that point, Whitewater will be fully sufficient to drain off all waters that would accumulate, by the assistance of the same process of widening and deepening the channel so as to confine all the waters within its banks; and it would also afford a good navigation as high up as the foot of the highlands on Whitewater. The clearing out of the same down to what is called the large body of earthquake lands, opposite a point on the Mississippi, six miles below New Madrid, to the mouth of Portage bay, about thirty miles distance, at the same rates per mile of the former sections, will amount to the sum of fifty-seven thousand dollars, and would completely drain and reclaim all the swamp lands that lie low down, and cause the whole of the lands to be arable and fit for cultivation, and in fact, will entirely become the most desirable lands in our country. Thence a canal cut through the Portage bay to cause the whole collection of waters to mouth in at that place, would curtail a great deal of the further expense of continuing it down the natural bed of the large body of standing water that lies south of that.

The canal down to Portage bay would necessarily be about six miles in length, and would give the water a reaction in said bay, inasmuch as the bay is shallowest at its head; it has no supply of water only from the Mississippi river in time of high floods, and throwing up a levee across the bed of Little river, immediately below the junction of the Portage bay, would cause all the waters that supply that large body of standing water to vent out at the mouth of the bay, and of course the head of the bay would become the mouth of all the waters of the swamp north of it, and would cut off the supply of water to the swamp south of it. The six miles of canal, and cleaning out the Portage bay, at the above rates quoted, would amount to the sum of eleven thousand four hundred dollars, and for constructing the cross levee to turn the water down Portage bay, say a levee of two miles in length, at an average height of six feet, at the rate of one cent for each cubic foot of earth or other substance removed, would amount to the sum of three thousand eight hundred dollars; which sums altogether amount to one hundred thousand six hundred dollars; which would, in all probability, drain and reclaim about what would be equal to twenty townships of land, equal to four hundred and sixty thousand eight hundred acres of public lands, which, taken at the government price, will amount to five hundred and seventy-six thousand dollars; from which subtract the probable cost of reclaiming, leaves a balance in favor of government of four hundred and seventy-five thousand six hundred dollars of the public land reclaimed. And not only that profit would result to the government, but then an equal to that quantity of land adjoining those swamps, that is not included in this estimate, that will, in all probability, come into demand immediately after the operation on these swamps should or would be performed; as it is well ascertained that many purchasers from different States seem very anxious to become landholders on the margin of the Mississippi river in the State of Missouri, and all the other navigable waters of the State, if those large bodies of swamps and standing waters are drained off and formed into navigable streams, and thereby the whole cause of sickness removed from the south part of the State of Missouri.

Respectfully,

JOHN RODNEY.

No. 14.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, November 20, 1835.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit enclosed a letter from Mr. Brooks, of Natchitoches, in answer to an inquiry directed to him from this office, (agreeably to your suggestion,) concerning embankment on the southern shore of Red river.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN.

The SECRETARY of the Treasury.

NEAR WASHINGTON CITY, November 19, 1835.

SIR: I received your communication of the 16th instant, with the accompanying circular, &c., &c., last night, and am sorry to say that I find myself badly prepared at this time to reply to its various contents satisfactorily.

The resolution itself seems ambiguous: for, as nearly all of "the public land on the western bank of the Mississippi, in the State of Louisiana," is north of the mouth of Red river, I cannot discern its relation, as to a levee, with "the southern bank of Red river;" nor why the northeast bank of that stream should not also be taken into consideration, when equally as much, if not a greater part of the public land lies on that side.

But if the resolution only means the country immediately below the mouth of the Red river which is submerged the greater part of the time, occasioned by the junction of the two rivers, then I would say, that in my poor judgment, the land reclaimed would not compensate the expense of the work, while the shutting out the wide spread of water in that direction must of necessity extend the overflow proportionally north and west, and probably jeopard the eastern bank of the Mississippi for some distance below; for, it must always be borne in mind, that alluvial formations are uniformly graded according to the local influences of the water. Now it is a fact well settled in the mind of every observer, that originally, the Red river and Mississippi were not united; that the valley of Red river was comparatively the lowest; and that their accidental junction has given a factitious elevation to the waters of both, but of greatest extent upon Red river. I once had occasion to travel through this low region of country, diagonally, from the northernmost part of the Avoyelles prairie, to the Mississippi river, some miles above the mouth of Red river. It was an uncommonly dry season, which enabled me to perform it on horseback. And while in the valley of Red river, proper, the high water mark upon the trees was from fifteen to twenty feet from the ground, which rapidly diminished as I approached the Mississippi.

The "expense of constructing a levee" must depend entirely upon its dimensions, whether made or cleared, or wood land, and the season of the year when the work could be carried on; but I am too little informed in the detail, to venture even a conjecture as to its probable expense through such a country. Still as to the Red river, throughout, I cannot refrain expressing, that my decided impressions are against the utility of the measure, as appears to be contemplated in the resolution, even if applied to both banks, so far as the interest of the government is involved.

As to its "effects upon the health of the country," I will barely remark, that, in those fertile alluvial sections, sickness is not so much occasioned by inundations, as by the excessive exuberance of vegetable growth.

In short, as to improving the present condition of the Red river valley, (except near its mouth,) and where the largest tracts of public land abound, all that is necessary to reclaim the overflowed part is, to widen and deepen the channel of the stream, which, to my mind, is much the most feasible operation.

I know not, sir, to whom I owe an apology most; to the originator of the resolution, or to yourself, for the long detention upon vague generalities, doubts and uncertainties, and therefore, will not increase my imprudence, by the attempt at so unprofitable a discrimination; but conclude with the prediction that, should the government carry out the present plan of operations on the Red river, to the full extent of their utility, it will inevitably develop, by its process, the advantages of any other plan of future improvement.

I am, sir, with esteem and respect, your most obedient servant,

J. BROOKS.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, November 25, 1835.

SIR: I herewith transmit a communication from Henry T. Williams, esq., surveyor general of Louisiana, in compliance with the request of the circular letter of the 15th of March last, with an estimate of the expense of constructing a levee on the west bank of the Mississippi river, below the efflux of the Atchafalaya, accompanied by a plat; and his letter of the 9th instant, intended to correct an error presumed to exist in the original estimate.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

No. 16.

SURVEYOR GENERAL'S OFFICE, Donaldsonville, November 1, 1835.

SIR: In compliance with the request in the circular letter from your office, of the 13th of March last, I beg leave to submit, for the examination of the Secretary of the Treasury, the enclosed plat, and estimate of expense for constructing a levee on the west bank of the Mississippi river, below the efflux of the Atchafalaya.

The proposed levees are designated on the plat by parallel red and yellow lines; which, with the lands known to be owned by private individuals, will make the levee complete as far as the Atchafalaya; and in addition of the remote benefit to the land on the west side of the Atchafalaya and south of Grand river, will materially improve the district between the Mississippi and Atchafalaya, which is represented on the plat, and estimated at 675,000 acres, two thirds of which (to wit, 450,000 acres) is believed to be government land.

I have thought proper to divide the work into lots, which will be designated on the map by appropriate numbers.

	Cubic yards.
No. 1 is a proposed levee across Racourcie bend, upon private land, so situated that the claimant could not be compelled to make the cross levee. It is 2,640 yards long; 400 yards requires a levee 10 feet high, and the balance averaging 5 feet	23,866
No. 2, a levee from the west Bouligny's upper line, to the lower line of Gen. Lafayette's Latenache tract, being 4,576 yards, and requiring an average levee of 5 feet. It is believed that there are some pre-emptions on this line, but the improvements are very small.	31,777
No. 3, an embankment at the mouth of the Latenache, 100 feet long, by an average height of 25 feet	4,814
No. 4, an embankment near the mouth of Bayou Moreau, 100 feet long, and averaging 25 feet high	4,814
No. 5, a levee from the upper end of the private claim of S. Devanport, to the lower side line of lands, said to have been granted to Gen. Lafayette; part of this is believed to have been covered by pre-emption rights, under the act of 1830 and 1834; the length of levee required, will be 3,586 yards, averaging 4 feet high	15,141
No. 6, 10,516 yards long; this passes through land believed to have been granted to Gen. Lafayette, but unimproved; 600 yards should average 10 feet high, and the balance 4 feet	56,201
No. 7, 2,596 yards long; part of this is believed to be covered with pre-emptions under the acts of 1830 and 1834; the levee should average 5 feet high	16,585½
No. 8, an embankment near the mouth of the little Atchafalaya, averaging 25 feet high and 200 feet long; nearly the whole line passes through timbered land	9,628

The above estimates are made on a calculation of four times the height for the base, and a level surface at the top of 3 feet, which is believed to be sufficiently strong.

The total number of cubic yards will be 143,571; which, estimated at 25 cents per yard for embankment and clearing, will be $40,706 75; to which should be added $4,000 for surveying and laying off the line, and for contingent expenses.

These estimates have been made on personal knowledge of the country, acquired by actual survey, and are respectfully submitted.

To reclaim the land effectually, it will be necessary to continue a levee, averaging 4 feet high, down the east side of the Atchafalaya about 40 miles, which will be 297,244 cubic yards, and will cost $74,311; but the resolution of Congress does not refer to this improvement, and it is believed that if the levee were made on the margin of the Mississippi, it would be continued by individual enterprise.

My knowledge of the west bank of the Mississippi above the mouth of the Atchafalaya and the south bank of Red river, is not sufficient to justify my offering any remarks on the expense of leveeing them; but presuming that it may be attended to by some other person, for the south bank of Red river, I have annexed to my plat a sketch of the country that would be benefited by such an improvement, and have marked by a yellow line the route that is believed to be least expensive.

I am, with great respect, sir, your obedient servant,

H. T. WILLIAMS, Surveyor General, La.

E. A. Brown, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office.

P. S.—A large proportion of the line of levee upon Red river and Bayou de Glaize, has been and will be made by individuals.

Surveyor General's Office, Donaldsonville, November 9, 1835.

Sir: On review of the copy of my letter of the 1st instant, I find the following errors which are presumed to exist in the original, to wit:

In estimate No. 2, it was transcribed 4,576, it should be 4,974 yards.

The total cubic yards transcribed 143,571, it should be 162,827.

I omitted also to state that I allowed in my calculations, 4 feet level surface for the embankments at the mouths of the bayous, to afford a single track for horses during high water.

May I beg the favor of you, to have the corrections made either in the body of the letter, or by marginal note? By so doing, you will greatly oblige

Sir, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. T. WILLIAMS, Surveyor General.

Ethan A. Brown, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office.

November 17, 1835.

A levee to commence where the range line between range four and five strikes the Arkansas river, on the south side; thence down on the south side of Arkansas to strike the Mississippi river, one mile east of the meridian line; thence down the Mississippi river with the dotted line of the map furnished, to the south boundary of Arkansas. The distance would be about ninety-five miles. This levee should be eleven feet at its base, and four feet wide at the top, and six feet high, and at fifteen cents per square yard, for throwing up dirt, it would cost one hundred and twenty-four thousand four hundred and fifty dollars. In making this levee there also would be about eight bayous to levee, which would cost about fifty thousand dollars in addition to the first sum named, which would make the entire cost one hundred and seventy-four thousand four hundred and fifty dollars. This levee would reclaim about five hundred and fifty-one thousand acres of land, of which about five hundred thousand belongs to the government, and would be worth at least a million of dollars, if this levee was made, and would add greatly to the prosperity and health of the country.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 9, 1835.

Letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting the information required by a resolution of the House of the 24th December last, in relation to lands on the Mississippi, in the State of Louisiana, which are rendered unfit for cultivation by the inundations of said river.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 14, 1829.

SIR: In obedience to the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 24th of December last, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to "communicate to the House any information in his possession, showing the quantity and quality of the public lands in the State of Louisiana which are rendered unfit for cultivation from the inundations of the Mississippi, the value of said lands when reclaimed, and the probable cost of reclaiming them," I have the honor to transmit, herewith, a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated the 12th instant; the statements and views contained in which are deemed to be of much interest on the subject embraced by the resolution.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient servant,

RICHARD RUSH.

The Hon. the SPEAKER of the House of Representatives of the United States.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 12, 1829.

SIR: In compliance with a resolution of the House of Representatives, "directing the Secretary of the Treasury to communicate to this House any information in his possession, showing the quantity and quality of the public lands in the State of Louisiana which are rendered unfit for cultivation from the inundations of the Mississippi, and the value of said lands when reclaimed, and the probable cost of reclaiming them," I have the honor to report, that the Mississippi, in its course between the 33d degree of north latitude, the northern boundary of Louisiana, and the gulf of Mexico, inundates, when at its greatest height, a tract of country, the superficial area of which may be estimated at 5,429,260 acres: that portion of the country thus inundated which lies below the 31st degree of latitude may be estimated at 3,183,580 acres: and that portion above the 31st degree of north latitude may be estimated at 2,245,680 acres, of which 398,000 acres lie in the State of Mississippi. This estimate includes the whole of the country which is subject to inundation by the Mississippi and the waters of the gulf. A portion of this area, however, including both banks of the Mississippi, from some distance below New Orleans to Baton Rouge, and the west bank nearly up to the 31st degree of latitude, and both sides of the Lafourche for about fifty miles from the Mississippi, has, by means of levees or embankments, been reclaimed at the expense of individuals. The stripes of land thus reclaimed are of limited extent; and estimating their amount as equal to the depth of forty acres on each side of the Mississippi and Lafourche, for the distance above stated, they will amount to about 500,000 acres, which deducted from 3,183,580 acres, will leave the quantity of 2,683,580 acres below the 31st degree of latitude, which is now subject to annual or occasional inundations; this, added to the quantity of inundated lands above the 31st degree of latitude, makes the whole quantity of lands within the area stated, and not protected by embankments, equal to 4,929,160 acres.

By deepening and clearing out the existing natural channels, and by opening other artificial ones, through which the surplus water that the bed of the Mississippi is not of sufficient capacity to take off, may be discharged into the gulf, with the aid of embankments and natural or artificial reservoirs, and by the use of machinery (worked in the commencement by steam, and as the country becomes open and cleared of timber, by wind-mills,) to take off the rain-water that may fall during the period that the Mississippi may be above its natural banks, it is believed that the whole of this country may be reclaimed, and made, in the highest degree, productive.

The immense value of this district of country, when reclaimed, is not to be estimated so much by the extent of its superficies as by the extraordinary and inexhaustible quality of the soil, the richness of its products, and the extent of the population which it would be capable of sustaining. Every acre of this land lying below the 31st degree of north latitude might be made to produce three thousand weight of sugar; and the whole of it is particularly adapted to the production of the most luxuriant crops of rice, indigo, and cotton. Good sugar-lands on the Mississippi, partially cleared, may be estimated as worth $100 per acre, and rapidly advancing in value. The rice-lands of South Carolina, from their limited quantity, are of greater value. It is believed that the exchangeable value of the maximum products of these lands, when placed in a high state of cultivation, would be adequate to the comfortable support of 2,250,000 people, giving a population of one individual for every two acres; and it is highly probable that the population would rapidly accumulate to such an extent as to banish every kind of labor from agriculture except that of the human species, as is now the case in many of the best districts of China; and this result would also have been produced in many parts of Holland, had not that country become, from the nature of its climate, a grazing country.

The alluvial lands of Louisiana may be divided into two portions: the first, extending from the 33d to the 31st degrees of north latitude, in a direction west of south, may be termed the upper plain, is 120 miles in length, and generally from 25 to 30 miles in breadth, and at particular points is of still greater width. That portion below the 31st degree of north latitude may be termed the lower plain. It extends in a direction from northwest to southeast for about 240 miles, to the mouth of the Mississippi; is compressed at its northern point, but opening rapidly, it forms at its base a semicircle, as it protrudes into the gulf of Mexico, of 200 miles extent, from the Chafalaya to the Rigoletts. The elevation of the plain at the 33d degree of north latitude above the common tide waters of the gulf of Mexico, must exceed one hundred and thirty feet.

This plain embraces lands of various descriptions, which may be arranged into four classes:

The first class, which is probably equal in quantity to two thirds of the whole, is covered with heavy timber, and an almost impenetrable undergrowth of cane and other shrubbery. This portion, from natural causes, is rapidly drained as fast as the waters retire within their natural channels; and possessing a soil of the greatest fertility, tempts the settler, after a few years of low water, to make an establishment, from which he is driven off by the first extraordinary flood.

The second class consists of cypress swamps: these are basins, or depressions of the surface, from which there is no natural outlet; and which, filling with water during the floods, remain covered by it until the water is evaporated, or is gradually absorbed by the earth. The beds of these depressions being very universally above the common low-water mark of the rivers and bayous, they may be readily drained, and would then be more conveniently converted into ricefields than any other portions of the plain.

The third class embraces the sea marsh, which is a belt of land extending along the gulf of Mexico from the Chafalaya to the Rigoletts. This belt is but partially covered by the common tides, but is subject to inundation from the high waters of the gulf during the autumnal equinoctial gales; it is generally without timber.

The fourth class consists of small bodies of prairie lands, dispersed through different portions of the plain; these pieces of land, generally the most elevated spots, are without timber, but of great fertility.

The alluvial plain of Louisiana, and that of Egypt, having been created by the deposit of large rivers, watering immense extents of country, and disemboguing themselves into shallow oceans, moderately elevated by the tide, but which, from the influence of the winds, are constantly tending in a rapid manner to throw up obstructions at the mouths of all water-courses emptying into them, it is fairly to be inferred that the alluvial plain of Egypt has, in time past, been as much subject to inundation from the waters of the Nile, as that of Louisiana now is from those of the Mississippi; and that the floods of the Nile have not only been controlled and restricted within its banks by the labor and ingenuity of man, but have been regulated and directed to the irrigation and improvement of the soil of the adjacent plain: a work better entitled to have been handed down to posterity by the erection of those massive monuments, the pyramids of Egypt, than any other event that could have occurred in the history of that country.

That the labor and ingenuity of man are adequate to produce the same results in relation to the Mississippi river and the plain of Louisiana, is a position not to be doubted; and it is believed that there are circumstances incident to the topography of this plain, that will facilitate such results.

The Mississippi river, entering this plain at the 33d degree of north latitude, crosses it diagonally to the highlands a little below the mouth of the Yazoo; thence it winds along the highlands of the States of Mississippi and Louisiana, to Baton Rouge, leaving in this distance the alluvial lands on its western bank; from a point a little below Baton Rouge, it takes an easterly course through the alluvial plain, and nearly parallel to the shores of the gulf of Mexico, until it reaches the English Turn; and thence, bending to the south, it disembogues itself into the gulf of Mexico by six or seven different channels. The banks of the Mississippi, which are but two or three feet above common tide-water near its mouth, gradually ascend with the plain, of which they constitute the highest ridges, to the thirty-third degree of north latitude, where they are elevated above the low-water mark of the river from thirty to forty feet. The banks are, however, subject to be overflowed throughout this distance, except at those points protected by levees or embankments; this arises from a law incident to running water-courses of considerable length, which is, that the floods in them acquire their greatest elevation as you approach a point nearly equidistant from their mouths and sources. The depth of the Mississippi is from 130 to 200 feet, decreasing, as you approach very near the mouth, to a moderate depth. Exclusive of a number of small bayous, there are three large natural canals or channels, by which the surplus waters of the Mississippi are taken off to the gulf. The first of these, above New Orleans, is Lafourche, which, leaving the river at Donaldsonville, reaches the gulf in a tolerably direct course of about ninety miles. The Lafourche is about one hundred yards wide; its bed is nearly on a level with the low-water mark where it leaves the river; its banks are high, and protected by slight levees; and in high floods it takes off a large column of water. Above Lafourche, the bayou Manchac, or Iberville, connecting with the lakes Maurepas and Pontchartrain, takes off into the gulf, through the Rigoletts and other passes, a considerable portion of the surplus water of the Mississippi. The bed of this bayou is fourteen feet above the level of the low water of the Mississippi; and as it reaches tide-water in a much shorter distance than the Mississippi itself, it would take off a large column of water, if its channel was not very much obstructed.* Nearly opposite to Manchac, but lower down the river, is Bayou Plaquemine, a cut-off from the Mississippi to the Chafalaya; but as there is a considerable declination, in this part of the plain, of the alluvial lands, and being unobstructed in its passage, it is rapid, and takes off a large body of water; where it leaves the river, however, its bed is five feet above the level of the low-water mark. About eighty-eight miles above Manchac, and just below the 31st degree of latitude, is the Chafalaya. This is one of the ancient channels of the Mississippi river, and being very deep, carries off at all times great quantities of water; and were its obstructions removed, it would probably carry off a much larger quantity. As the distance from the point where the Chafalaya leaves the Mississippi, along its channel, to the gulf, is only 132 miles, and that which the Mississippi traverses, from the point of separation to the gulf, is 318 miles, it is evident that a given column of water may be passed off in much less time through the channel of the latter stream. From this topographical description of that portion of the plain south of the 31st degree of latitude, it is evident that, independent of the general and gradual declination of this plain, descending with the Mississippi, it also has a more rapid declination toward the lakes Maurepas and Pontchartrain on the east, and toward the valley of the great lake of Attakapas on the west; and it may, as to its form and configuration, be compared to the convex surface of a flattened scollop shell, having one of its sides very much curved, and the surface of the other somewhat indented; there is, therefore, good reason to believe, that, by comforming to the unerring indications of Nature, and aiding her in those operations which she has commenced, this plain may be reclaimed from inundation.

The quantity of water which has been drawn off from the Mississippi, through the Iberville, the bayou Lafourche, and the Chafalaya, has so reduced the volume of water which passes off through the Mississippi proper, that individual enterprise has been enabled to throw up embankments along the whole course of that river, from a point a little below that where the Chafalaya leaves the Mississippi nearly to its mouth, and for forty or fifty miles on each side of the Lafourche; the lands thus reclaimed will not, however, average forty acres in depth fit for cultivation, and may be estimated at four hundred thousand acres. This is certainly the most productive body of land in the United States, and will be, in a very short period, if it is not at the present, as productive as any other known tract of country of equal extent.

If the waters drawn off in any given time from the Mississippi, through the natural channels now formed, were delivered into the gulf through those channels in the same given time, then they would not overflow their natural banks, and the adjacent lands would be reclaimed; but this is not the fact; and the object can only be accomplished by increasing the capacities and numbers of outlets of the natural channels, by which the water is now disembogued, and by forming other artificial ones, if necessary, by which the volume of water that enters into the lower plain of Louisiana in any given time may be discharged into the gulf of Mexico within the same time. If that volume were ascertained with any tolerable degree of accuracy, then the number and capacity of the channels necessary for taking it off into the gulf might be calculated with sufficient certainty. A reference to the map of that country will show that the rivers which discharge themselves into the lower plain of Louisiana, and whose waters are carried to the gulf in common with those of the Mississippi, drain but a small tract of upland country; for Pearl river, and, if necessary, at a very moderate expense, the Teche, may be thrown into the ocean by separate and distinct channels.

* The difference between the highest elevation of the waters at the efflux of the Manchac, and the lowest level of the tide in Pontchartrain, is from 27 to 30 feet

At the thirty-first degree of north latitude, and near to the point where Red river flows into, and the Chafalaya is discharged from, the Mississippi, the waters of that river are compressed into a narrower space than at any other point below the thirty-third degree of north latitude; this may be considered as the apex of the lower plain. The contraction of the waters of the Mississippi at this point is occasioned by the Avoyelles, which, during high water, is an island, and is alluvial land, but of ancient origin; from this island a tongue of land projects toward the Mississippi, which, though covered at high-water, is of considerable elevation. It is probable, therefore, that, at the point thus designated, a series of experiments and admeasurements could be made, by which the volume of water discharged, in any given time, on the lower plain, by the Mississippi, at its different stages of elevation, might be ascertained with sufficient accuracy to calculate the number and capacity of the channels necessary to discharge that volume of water into the gulf of Mexico in the same time. With this data, the practicability and the expense of enlarging the natural, and excavating a sufficient number of new channels to effect this object, might readily be ascertained. If that work could be accomplished by the government, everything else in respect to the lower plain should be left to individual exertion, and the lands would be reclaimed as the increase of the population and wealth of the country might create a demand for them.

The contraction of the plain of the Mississippi by the elevated lands of the Avoyelles, and the manner in which Red river passes through the whole width of the upper plain, in a distance of nearly thirty miles, has a strong tendency to back up all the waters of the upper plain; therefore it is, that, immediately above this point, there is a greater extent of alluvial lands, more deeply covered with water, than at any other point perhaps on the whole surface of the plain of Louisiana; and at some distance below this point, the embankments of the Mississippi terminate. To enable individuals to progress with these embankments, and to facilitate the erection of others along the water-courses, and to reclaim with facility the lands of the upper plain, it will probably be found to be indispensably necessary to draw off a considerable portion of this water by artificial channels. The Red river, arrested in its direct progress by the elevated lands of the Avoyelles, is deflected in a direction contrary to the general course of the Mississippi, and traverses the whole width of the upper plain in a circuitous course of upward of thirty miles before it reaches that river. There is good reason to believe that the waters of the Red river, or a very large portion of them, in times past, found their way through the Bayou Bœuf and the lake of the Attakapas to the ocean; and during high floods, a small portion of the waters of that river are now discharged into the Bayou Bœuf, at different points between the Avoyelles and Rapides. A deep cut from the Red river, through the tongue of elevated alluvial land east of the Avoyelles, to the Chafalaya, and opening the natural channels by which it now occasionally flows into the Bayou Bœuf, would probably take off the waters which accumulate at the lower termination of the upper plain with such rapidity, and reduce their elevation so much as to enable individual enterprise and capital to continue the embankments, which now terminate below this point, not only along the whole course of the Mississippi, but along all those extensive water-courses running through the upper plain.

The Tensa, a continuation of Black river, is, for fifty miles above its junction with Red river, a deep water-course, and in breadth but little inferior to the Mississippi. It draws a very small portion of its waters from the high lands, but communicates with the Mississippi by a number of lakes and bayous, at different points, from near its mouth to its source, which is near the thirty-third degree of latitude, and through these channels aids in drawing off the surplus water of the Mississippi, while it continues to rise: when the Mississippi, however, retires within its banks, the waters in these bayous take a different direction, and are returned through the same channels into the Mississippi. Particular local causes will produce this effect at particular points; but the general cause, so far as these bayous connect with the Tensa, will be found in the fact that there is not a sufficient vent for the waters of the upper plain at the point of connection with the lower plain of Louisiana. The Tensa is also connected in times of high-water, at several points, with the Washita and its branches. When the Mississippi has risen to a point a few feet below its natural banks, the whole of the upper plain of Louisiana is divided by the natural channels which connect the Mississippi with the Tensa, and the Tensa with the Washita, into a number of distinct islands of various extent. The banks of the rivers, and the natural channels which connect them, are very generally the most elevated lands; and each and all these islands might be reclaimed from inundations by embankments, thrown entirely round them, of from six to twelve feet high; provision being made to take off the rain-water, and that occasioned by leakage and accidental crevasses in the banks, by machinery. While the Mississippi is rising, the waters are carried off through these natural channels and their outlets into the lakes, and the lowest and most depressed parts of the plain. During this process, there are currents and counter currents in every possible direction; but when the floods have attained their greatest known height, then this whole plain becomes covered with water, from a few inches to twelve feet deep, as its surface may be more or less depressed; and if it could be exposed to view, would exhibit the appearance of an immense lake, with a few insulated spots dispersed throughout it, such as the island of Sicily, the banks of the lakes Concordia, Providence, and Washington, and some very narrow strips partially distributed along the banks of the Mississippi and the other water-courses. If the whole of the upper plain were reclaimed in the manner above mentioned, then the waters, being contracted into much narrower channels, would, necessarily, be very considerably elevated above the point to which they now rise; and passing off on the lower plain with greater elevation and greater rapidity, and having only the present natural channels of outlet to the gulf, the inevitable consequence would be, that the whole of the lower plain would be inundated, and probably parts of Attakapas and Opelousas would again be subject to inundation.

The reclamation of both of the plains of Louisiana will depend, under any possible plan that may be proposed, upon the practicability of tapping the Mississippi and Red rivers at one or more points, and to an extent that may draw off rapidly such a quantity of water as will prevent the refluent waters now collected just above the thirty-first degree of latitude from rising to the heights to which they now do, and the practicability of delivering the waters into the ocean within periods equal to those in which they were drawn off. We have seen that the natural channels of the Lafourche, Plaquemine, Iberville, and the Chafalaya, have so reduced the mass of water in the Mississippi below their points of efflux, as to enable individuals, by very moderate embankments, to confine that part of the Mississippi within its banks. The Lafourche is the only one of these natural channels that takes off the waters to the ocean so rapidly and directly as to enable individuals to erect levees or embankments along its whole course. The passes at the Rigoletts and at Berwick's bay not being sufficient to take off the waters, which flow through them, as fast as they are discharged into their reservoirs, it is evident that no beneficial effect could be derived from tapping the Mississippi at any point on its eastern bank, or at any point on its western bank above the Lafourche, unless the capacity of the outlets at Berwick's bay and the Rigoletts be greatly enlarged. The passes at the Rigoletts are well known; and it is probable that, by enlarging them, and cutting off that portion of the waters of Pearl river which now flows through them, they might be made adequate to take off, in a sufficiently short period, the waters of Iberville, and those of the short rivers of Feliciana, so as to prevent that portion of the plain between the Iberville and the city of New Orleans from being inundated, except so far as the waters of Pontchartrain, elevated by high winds and tides, may produce that effect. It is only, therefore, on the west bank of that river, or the south bank of Red river, that the proposed tappings can be made with the prospect of a successful issue.

The course of the Mississippi from Donaldsonville to New Orleans being nearly parallel to the gulf, and the distance to the gulf across that part of the plain being much shorter than that by its natural channel to tide water, that portion of the river presents eligible points for tapping, particularly near to New Orleans; the commerce to which, in time, not perhaps distant, may require a deep cut to be made to the gulf. The width of the river at Donaldsonville being about seven hundred yards, the rise above its natural banks about one yard, and its velocity two and a half miles per hour; if then, by one or more tappings below this point, a volume of water of the above dimensions could be carried off to the ocean with equal velocity, then would the highest elevation of the river be reduced very considerably everywhere below such tapping, and for some distance above. Such a reduction of the elevation of this part of the river, aided by the clearing out of the rafts from the Chafalaya, would possibly produce so great a reduction of the refluent waters at the junction of the Red and Mississippi rivers, as to enable individuals to proceed gradually to the reclamation of the whole of the upper plain by common embankments. It would require only an increased capacity to be given to the outlets of the lake of Attakapas to insure the reclamation of both plains. But if this effect cannot be produced by the tappings below the Lafourche, then they must be made at points higher up, either between Plaquemine and the Chafalaya, or at a point about the mouth of the Bayou Lamourie, or Du Lac, on Red river. A reference to the map will show that the waters of Red river can be taken to the gulf from this point in almost a direct course, through channels that it is more than probable they formerly occupied, and in a distance of less than one half of that by which they reach the ocean through the channel of the Mississippi, and by forty or fifty miles less than that through the channel of the Chafalaya. A deep cut at this point, of ten miles, through an alluvial soil, would discharge the waters of Red river into Bayou Bœuf; and as these waters would pass through an alluvial plain, having probably a fall of not less than sixty feet in seventy miles from the point of tapping, there is reason to believe that they would work for themselves, without much artificial aid, a channel of great capacity.

The question then arises, how are these waters, in addition to the superabundant waters of the Chafalaya, which already overflow all the valley of the lake of Attakapas, to be taken off to the gulf? To solve this question satisfactorily, it will be necessary to take a view of the outlets of the lake of Attakapas. The Teche is a natural canal, almost without feeders or outlet, except at its mouth; and having, no doubt, been a channel for a much larger mass of water in time past, its adjacent lands have been formed precisely as those of the Mississippi have been, and its banks, of course, occupy the highest elevation of the country through which it runs. For forty miles above its mouth it is contracted by the waters of the Attakapas lake on the one side, and by those of the gulf on the other, so as to exhibit almost literally a mere tongue of land just above high-water mark. It enters Berwick's bay about eighteen miles from the gulf. Nearly opposite to the mouth of the Teche, is the mouth of Bayou Black, or Bayou Bœuf. This bayou, like the Teche, is also a natural canal, occupying the highest elevation of a narrow tract of land extending eastwardly nearly to the Bayou Lafourche, that is seldom inundated, and which would seem to be a prolongation of the Attakapas country; inducing a belief that the Teche formerly discharged its waters, at a point further east, into a bay that occupied the whole of the present plain, from the Attakapas lake to Bayou Lafourche and the Mississippi. It is this elevated ridge that causes the indentation in the lower plain to be deluged by the waters of the Mississippi; which, forcing a passage for themselves across the Teche, have formed an outlet called Berwick's bay. This pass is narrow, and is about seven or eight feet deep, passing, in part of its course, through lands not of recent alluvion, and disembogues into the bay of Achafolia, through the lake of that name, and two or three other outlets.

Following up, then, this indication of nature, by cutting artificial outlets from the lake to Attakapas across the Teche, at different points, for a distance of fifteen to twenty miles above its mouth, at such places as the drains emptying into the ocean may approach nearest to Attakapas lake, giving to such cuts any width that may be required, and a depth that may be on a level with low-water mark, and embanking the lake of Attakapas so as to raise it three feet above its present surface, it is believed that a capacity may be obtained for taking off any volume of water that it may be necessary to throw into the lake of Attakapas, and at an expense very trifling in comparison to the object to be obtained. All the waters of the Atchafalaya being thrown into Lake Attakapas, and that late embanked, the whole of the plain between it and the Mississippi would be exempt from inundation. The rain-water, and that from the weepings and crevasses in the embankments, would find a reservoir in the deeper lakes and beds of Grand river, the surplus being taken off by machinery, or by tide locks in some of the bayous, which now connect with these lakes in the highest floods.

It is believed that three brigades of the topographical corps, operating for a few seasons from the 1st of November to the 1st of July, would be able to obtain sufficient data to decide upon the practicability of devising, and the expense of accomplishing, a plan that would affect the reclamation of both plains; but if it should be found to be impracticable, or too expensive for the state of the population and wealth of the country, yet the minute knowledge which they would obtain of the topography of the entire plain would enable them to designate different portions of it in both plains which could be reclaimed from inundation at an expense commensurate with the present capital and population of the country.

The gradual elevation of the plain of the Mississippi* by the annual deposits, and the accumulation of population and capital, will ultimately accomplish its entire reclamation from the inundations of the Mississippi,

* The gradual elevation of the plain is not perceptible, because the gradual elevation of the beds of the water-courses, arising from the same cause, occasions as general an overflow of their banks as formerly; but that which is perceptible is the rapid filling up of the ponds and shallow lakes; and there can be no question that the great annual alluvion and vegetable deposite must produce similar effects through the whole plain.

The Mississippi river is among the muddiest in the world, and deposits its muddy particles with great rapidity; its waters hold in solution not less than one sixteenth part of their bulk of alluvion matter, and some experiments are stated to give a greater proportion. If, then, within the embankments of the Mississippi, a piece of level ground be surrounded by a dike sixteen inches high, and filled with the waters of the Mississippi when above its banks, and those waters drawn off when they have deposited all their muddy particles, nearly one inch in depth of alluvion matter will have been obtained; if this process be repeated as often as practicable during a season of high waters, a quantity of alluvion will have been accumulated of not less than six or eight inches in depth. This process is similar to that termed warping, in England, and is in use to some extent along the waters of the estuary of the Humber for manuring lands; and it is a process by which the lands of the plain of Louisiana will be rendered inexhaustible, so long as the Mississippi continues to bear its muddy waters to the ocean.

but the interposition of the government, and the judicious expenditure of a few millions of dollars, would accomplish that object fifty or perhaps a hundred years sooner than it will be effected by individual capital, aided by the slow operations of nature.

I attach a small diagram of the country, as illustrative of some of the points referred to in this report.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

GEO. GRAHAM.

Hon. RICHARD RUSH, Secretary of the Treasury.

An estimate of the expense of excavating outlets from the lake of Attakapas to the gulf of Mexico.

On the presumption that the waters of the gulf of Mexico, at low tide, reach within six miles of the lake —and it is believed that they do, at several points between the Bayou Cypress and Berwick's bay—let positions at one or more of the most favorable of these points be selected, the aggregate width of which shall be two thousand yards; let such portions of these positions as may be inundated at high-water be drained by common embankments so that oxen may be used in removing the earth; let excavations be made through them, of such numbers and of such widths as may be best adapted to the removal of the earth, leaving, however, the proportion of excavation to that of embankment as three to one. A number of canals will be then formed, with an embankment between each, the excavation of which, their beds being on a level with low-water, would not average a depth of three feet. These proportions will give the amount of excavation as equal to 15,840,000 cubic yards, which, at 20 cents the cubic yard, gives $3,168,000 as the expense of excavating outlets which, at low tide, would have the capacity of discharging from the lake, with great velocity, a column of water of fifteen hundred yards in width and one yard in depth, at the point where it left the lake.

No estimate, with any tolerable approximation to accuracy, can be made of the expense of excavating a deep cut from Red river to the Bayou Bœuf, and of enlarging the bed of that bayou; of the embankments along the lake of the Attakapas, necessary to give it the required elevation; or for tide-locks, machinery, &c., until an accurate survey on the ground be made. It is possible that the judicious expenditure of five millions of dollars by the government would be sufficient to make the excavations, and erect embankments, tide-locks, and other machinery, that would be necessary to give such a control over the waters of the Mississippi and its outlets as to reduce them so nearly within their banks at high floods as to enable individual capital to progress with the entire embankment of them, and the reclamation of the whole plain.

The quantity of land belonging to the government within the limits of the alluvial plain may be estimated at upward of three millions of acres, which, at a minimum price of ten dollars per acre, would be upward of thirty millions of dollars.

RELATIVE TO PRIVATE LAND CLAIMS AT MICHILIMACKINAC, GREEN BAY, AND PRAIRIE DU CHIEN, IN MICHIGAN.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 16, 1835.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 10, 1835.

SIR: In obedience to the resolution of the House of Representatives, of the 14th of January last, directing the Secretary of the Treasury "to furnish the House with a copy of the decision of the commissioners on all private land claims at Michilimackinac, Green Bay, and Prairie du Chien, in the Territory of Michigan, together with connected plats and copies of the field notes of all such claims as have been surveyed at either of the aforementioned places," I have the honor herewith to transmit to the House a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, to whom this resolution was referred, together with the documents accompanying his report.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. J. K. POLK, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 7, 1835.

SIR: The resolution of the House of Representatives, of the 14th of January last, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to furnish that House "with a copy of the decision of the commissioners on all private land claims at Michilimackinac, Green Bay, and Prairie du Chien, in the Territory of Michigan, together with connected plats, and copies of the field notes, of all such claims as have been surveyed at either of the aforementioned places," and the resolution of that House of the 3d of February last, requiring the information called for by the resolution of the 14th of January "to be prepared in season to be submitted at the commencement of the next session of Congress," having been referred to this office, I beg leave to state that, as all the reports referred to by the resolution had been printed in the compilations of State Papers, now published under the direction of Congress, and as preparing manuscript copies of those reports under these circumstances seemed to be unnecessary, while their preparation would have imposed considerable labor upon the office at a time when all its energies were unequal to the performance of its ordinary and indispensable duties, it was respectfully suggested to you whether a reference to the printed copies of the reports would not be a sufficient compliance with the calls of the resolution; and that suggestion having been acceded to by you, I now have the honor to enclose an abstract, marked A, referring to the volumes and pages of the beforementioned compilations of State Papers which contain the proceedings of the several boards of commissioners upon the claims at Michilimackinac, Green Bay, and Prairie du Chien. In obedience to that part of the resolution requiring connected plats and copies of the field notes of the claims which have been surveyed at those places, I beg leave to transmit the undermentioned documents, viz.:

A copy of Greeley's map of claims in the county of Michilimackinac, marked B.

A map of the private claims at Michilimackinac, surveyed in 1828, marked C.

A map of the private claims on the island of Michilimackinac, surveyed in 1828, marked D.

A map of the claims on the island of Bois Blanc, surveyed in 1828, marked E.

A map of the private claims on Fox river, surveyed in 1828, marked F.

A map of a claim at the portage of Fox river, surveyed in 1828, marked G.

A map of the private claims at Prairie du Chien, surveyed in 1828, marked H.

A book, containing copies of the field notes of Greeley's surveys at Michilimackinac, marked I.

A book, containing copies of the field notes of the surveys at Michilimackinac, Green Bay, and Prairie du Chien, of confirmed claims under the acts of 1823 and 1828, marked K.

All which is respectfully submitted.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1351. [1ST SESSION.

LAND CLAIMS IN ARKANSAS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, DECEMBER 21, 1835.

OFFICE OF THE RECORDER OF LAND TITLES,
St. Louis, Missouri, September 30, 1835.

SIR: The undersigned, recorder and commissioners for the final adjustment of private land claims in the State of Missouri, were required, by an act of Congress, entitled, "An act for the relief of John Eli Tholozan and William Russell," approved the 28th of June, 1834, to examine into and decide upon certain land claims within the Territory of Arkansas, and report the result of their proceedings in the next Congress.

In obedience to said act, the commissioners herewith respectfully transmit their report, with the request that you will lay it before the Senate at its next session.

We have the honor to be, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servants,

F. R. CONWAY,
JAMES H. RELFE,
FALKLAND H. MARTIN.

Hon. MARTIN VAN BUREN, President of the Senate of the United States.

OFFICE OF THE RECORDER OF LAND TITLES,
St. Louis, Missouri, September 30, 1835.

Received of the recorder and commissioners on private land claims in the State of Missouri, one tin box or canister, containing their report upon eleven private land claims in the Territory of Arkansas, and a transcript of the evidence in each claim, directed to the Honorable Martin Van Buren, President of the Senate of the United States, Washington city, D. C., which I promise to deliver according to the direction, in a reasonable time from the date above written.

(Signed duplicates.) JAMES H. RELFE.

Resolved, That James H. Relfe, a member of the board, be, and is hereby authorized and required to take to the city of Washington the report mentioned in his foregoing receipt, and deliver the same as specified in his said receipt, in order that they may be submitted to Congress, according to the requisition of the act creating the board, approved the 9th July, 1832.

F. H. MARTIN,
F. R. CONWAY,
JAMES H. RELFE.

OFFICE OF THE RECORDER OF LAND TITLES,
St. Louis, Missouri, September 30, 1835.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

The board of commissioners for the adjustment of private land claims in the State of Missouri have, in pursuance of an act of Congress, entitled, "An act for the relief of John Eli Tholozan and William Russell," approved the 28th of June, 1834, examined into and classed all the claims which were submitted for their consideration under said act, eleven in number, of which ten are placed in the first class, numbered from one to ten inclusive, and recommended for confirmation; and one, numbered one, in the second class, the evidence not being considered sufficient to recommend it.

The transcripts embracing the evidence in each claim are herewith forwarded. For the principles which governed the board in making their decisions on these claims, they beg leave to refer to the resolutions forwarded in their report made to the Commissioner of the General Land Office in 1833.

All of which is most respectfully submitted.

JAMES H. RELFE,
FALKLAND H. MARTIN,
F. R. CONWAY.

CLASS I.

No. 1.—John Baptiste Dardenne, claiming 1,600 arpens.

No.	Name of original claimant.	Arpens.	Nature and date of claim.	By whom granted.	By whom surveyed, date, and situation.
1	John Baptiste Dardenne.	1,600	Settlement right.		On Arkansas river.

EVIDENCE WITH REFERENCE TO MINUTES AND RECORDS.

June 29, 1814.—The representatives of John B. Dardenne, claiming 1,600 arpens of land on Arkansas river.

Jos. Imbau, duly sworn, says Dardenne inhabited and cultivated this tract during the French and Spanish governments, and died on the premises; that the son was taken by the Indians, and redeemed and brought back by the traders. After the death of the father, nothing was done on the premises by others. The old man resided on this tract eight or nine years; was on this tract when witness first saw it. A good house with stone chimney. This tract is at Big Point Remou. (At the margin: "Not granted.") (See Bates's minutes, page 158.)

June 19, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway and J. H. Relfe, commissioners.

John Baptiste Dardenne, by his legal representatives, claiming 1,600 arpens of land, situate on Arkansas river. (See record-book F, page 226; Bates's minutes, page 158; Bates's decisions, page 26. See book No. 7, page 194.)

August 18, 1835.—The board met, pursuant to adjournment. Present: F. R. Conway, J. H. Relfe, and F. H. Martin, commissioners.

John B. Dardenne, claiming 1,600 arpens of land. (See book No. 7, page 194.)

No. 10.—Jacques Vincent, claiming 10,000 arpens.

Before me, a notary public, residing in New Orleans, and the undersigned witnesses, personally appeared Mr. Jacques Vincent, who has for a long time resided in this city, and who exhibited to me a document, in order to have the same registered in the book kept in my office for the registry of notarial acts, and the said document to be afterwards returned to him; consequently, I have copied the same literally, as follows:

Senor Governor and Intendant General:

Don Santyago Vincent, an inhabitant of this city, with due respect presents himself before your lordship, and says that, wishing to settle in the post of Illinois, on some vacant lands of the royal domain, he supplicates your lordship to condescend to grant him ten thousand arpens of land in superficie, in the place commonly called Blackwater; that is to say, in the vicinity of the river of that name, or in a more convenient place which may be found vacant and belonging to his Catholic Majesty's domain, without prejudice to any of the neighbors; favor which he hopes to receive of your known justice.

J. VINCENT.

NEW ORLEANS, May 24, 1794.

NEW ORLEANS, May 30, 1794.

The surveyor of this province, Don Carlos Laveau Trudeau, shall put this party in possession of the ten thousand arpens of land in superficie, which he solicits in the foregoing memorial, provided they belong to the vacant lands of the domain, and are not prejudicial to any person; and he shall remit them to me, in order to provide the interested with the title of concession in form.

EL BARON DE CARONDELET.

In consequence of the foregoing decree, considering that my important occupations for the royal service in this city do not allow me to absent myself to go to such a distance as that of the Black islands (Islas Negras) in order to put the said decree in execution; besides, it being notorious that at the said Black islands there is actually no surveyor appointed by the government to despatch business of this nature, the party shall keep these documents in his possession until a surveyor shall have been nominated or commissioned to execute what is therein ordered.

CARLOS TRUDEAU.

NEW ORLEANS, May 31, 1794.

Conformable to the original, which I returned to the party on the same day as above dated, to which I refer, and, at the request of the said party, I do give these presents, at New Orleans, on the 31st of July, 1811.

CHARLES TRUDEAU.

I, the said notary public, do certify the above copy to be conformable to that which has been exhibited to me by the said Vincent, to whom I returned the same, to which I refer, and for which he gave me his receipt; that in consequence of the said document, the said Jacques Vincent has, by these presents, and in the best form possible, ceded, abandoned, and transferred, from now and forever, to the said Jean Elie Tholozan, residing in this city and here present, who accepts for himself, his heirs or assigns, all the right and title which he has, or may have, on the ten thousand arpens of land in superficie, situated in the place commonly called Blackwater, near the river of that name, in Illinois, without any reserve; and that, by virtue of this cession and transfer, he puts him in his stead and place, and he may lay claim to the said land, and take all the necessary steps, until he is put in possession by any competent authority, by virtue of these presents; the said Vincent desisting himself of, and abandoning all his right and title upon the ten thousand arpens of land in superficie which he has ceded and transferred gratuitously to the said Tholozan. Promising, &c., obliging himself, &c., and renouncing, &c.

Done in my office, at New Orleans, this 9th of August, 1811, and the 36th of the independence of America.

And, after reading was made, the parties have signed, and also Messrs. D. C. Williams and D. Wright, who were called as witnesses, being inhabitants and residents here present, and I, the said notary public, to which I certify.

NOTA.—When the said Jacques Vincent was requested to sign this deed, he represented that it was impossible for him to do so, on account of his short sight, which did not permit him to write; at his request, Messrs. Antoine Julia, Jean V. Drouillard, and Louis Liotau, witnesses, also inhabitants and residents here present, have signed, and I, the said notary, to which I certify.

I certify that the foregoing copy is conformable to its original, remaining in the office under my charge, to which I refer, and at the request of Mr. Tholozan, I deliver these presents at New Orleans, August 12th, 1811, and in the 36th year of the American independence. I sign and set the seal of my office.

Jacques Vincent, by his legal representatives, Jean Elie Tholozan, claiming 10,000 arpens of land, situate on Blackwater, Arkansas Territory. (See record-book F, page 138; Bates's minutes, page 26; Bates's decisions, page 30.)

ST. LOUIS, Commissioner's Office, December 1, 1812.

Jean Elie Tholozan, claiming 10,000 arpens of land, on Blackwater river, north fork of White river.

Claimant being duly sworn, declares that he conceives the testimony of Antoine Janis to be very material to him in support of his claim, and that the extreme old age of the said Janis, together with a severe indisposition with which said witness is at this time afflicted, render it impossible to remove him from Saint Genevieve, where he now is, to this place; thereupon the said claimant is permitted to cause the deposition of said Antoine Janis to be taken de bene esse, by some justice of the peace within the district of St. Genevieve, and certified forthwith to this office, together with this order.

Attest: FREDERICK BATES.

(See Bates's minutes, page 26.)

In pursuance of the within order, I, Michael Amoureux, a justice of the peace in and for the St. Genevieve township, in the district of St. Genevieve, have taken, de bene esse, the deposition of Antoine Janis, as within the said order directed, and have annexed to this order the said deposition.

At St. Genevieve, this 6th day of December, 1812.

M. AMOUREUX.

[Translation.]

District of St. Genevieve, Territory of Missouri:

In the county of St. Genevieve, on the 6th day of the month of December, of the year 1812, before me, Michael Amoureux, one of the justices of the peace for the said county, by virtue of an order of permission, issued from the office of the honorable Frederick Bates, commissioner of the United States for the land claims in the said Territory, the said order being dated St. Louis, the 1st of December instant, and annexed to these presents, personally appeared Mr. Antoine Janis, residing on the Blackwater river, district of New Madrid, who, after having sworn on the holy evangelists to say the truth, has been summoned, at the request of Jean Elie Tholozan, to declare what he knew concerning the settlement of a concession of land originally claimed by Jacques Vincent, surgeon-major in the service of Spain. To which summons the said Antoine Janis answered, that he well knew the lands claimed by the said Jacques Vincent, on the Blackwater river, having visited them several times; that he has perfect knowledge that the said Jacques Vincent had caused sundry clearings to be made in the years 1795 and 1796 on the said lands; had built cabins and planted fruit trees, and that he knew that one Charles Logan was inhabiting and cultivating one part of the said lands. And further this deponent saith not.

In testimony whereof, the said Antoine Janis has signed this, his present deposition, at St. Genevieve, this 6th day of December, 1812.

ANTOINE JANIS.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, Michael Amoureux, a justice of the peace in and for the townships of St. Genevieve aforesaid, dated above.

M. AMOUREUX, J. P.

I certify the above translation of Antoine Janis's deposition to be truly translated from the original filed in this office.

APPLICATION OF LOUISIANA FOR A DONATION OF LAND FOR REMOVING OBSTRUCTIONS IN ATCHAFALAYA RIVER.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, DECEMBER 21, 1835.

Whereas the removing of the obstructions in the Atchafalaya at the expense of the State, will cost immense sums of money, and that said improvement will considerably increase the value of the United States' lands on both sides of said river:

Resolved, That our senators and representatives in Congress be requested to use their best efforts to obtain from the general government in favor of the State of Louisiana, the donation of a quantity of land proportioned to the advantages accruing to the United States in consequence of said improvement.

Be it further resolved, That the governor of the State be invited to forward, as soon as possible, copies of said resolution to our senators and representatives in Congress, with all the information that he may have respecting the works mentioned in the aforesaid resolution.

APPLICATION OF LOUISIANA FOR A GRANT OF LAND FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE ATCHAFALAYA RAILROAD.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, DECEMBER 21, 1835.

Be it resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana, in general assembly convened, That our senators and representatives in Congress be requested to use their best exertions to obtain from the general government, a grant of land between the parish of Point Coupee and Opelousas Church, on the tract which may be chosen by the Atchafalaya Railroad and Banking company, enough for the purposes of said railroad, and also that the said company have the privilege of using so much of the timber on the route as will be sufficient for the construction of said railroad. Also, that the governor of the State be requested to forward copies of this resolution, together with copies of the resolution passed on Wednesday, the twenty-fifth of February, 1835, in relation to levees on public lands and across Raccourci Point, to our representatives in Congress, forthwith.

APPLICATION OF MISSOURI FOR THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE FUNDS ARISING FROM THE SALE OF THE SEMINARY LANDS AMONG THE PRIMARY SCHOOLS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, DECEMBER 24, 1835.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the general assembly of the State of Missouri respectfully represents: That by the several acts of Congress, passed at different times, certain lands have been given to this State for the purpose of establishing therein a seminary of learning; that the greater part of said lands have been sold under the authority of the State, and the proceeds deposited in the treasury. Your memorialists acknowledge and appreciate the liberality of Congress, by which those lands have been acquired, and means to some extent thus provided for the instruction of our youth, so necessary for the preservation of our free institutions. A seminary in which the higher branches of literature might be taught, would no doubt be useful, less so, however, in a government like ours, where all are equally free, and where all to some extent participate in making and administering the laws, than in those less favored countries, in which the classes of society are widely separated, and the ignorant multitude governed by the few. As among governments, that is best which secures the greatest share of liberty ard happiness to the greatest portion of its citizens. So among systems of instruction, that is best which dispenses the greatest measure of useful learning among the greatest relative portion of the youth of the whole State. To your memorialists, primary school instruction, of which all, both rich and poor might avail themselves, appears best adapted to this desirable object, and therefore ask, that an act of Congress be passed, granting to the general assembly the right to appropriate for primary school instruction equally throughout the state, the interest which may arise from the funds produced by the lands aforesaid.

All of which is most respectfully submitted.

APPLICATION OF ALABAMA FOR THE CONFIRMATION OF GRANTS OF LAND ON THE BOUNDARY LINE BETWEEN ALABAMA AND GEORGIA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, DECEMBER 28, 1835.

A JOINT MEMORIAL of the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Alabama, in General Assembly convened, to the Congress of the United States.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the legislature of the State of Alabama would most respectfully represent, that the State of Alabama has been some years greatly desirous to have the boundary line between the States of Alabama and Georgia established; for this purpose, the legislature of Alabama has heretofore proposed to the authorities of Georgia, that commissioners might be appointed by the two States, to determine the permanent boundary line between said States. This proposition, though so just and reasonable, has not been acceded to by the State of Georgia, but she insists on her present western boundary remaining as heretofore fixed by herself. This determination on the part of the State of Georgia is believed to arise from the fact, that she has disposed of to her citizens the fee simple in the soil along her western boundary, and a change therefore in said boundary might interfere with the grants made to her citizens. In order to avoid this difficulty, your memorialists would respectfully ask of Congress to grant and relinquish to the persons who have acquired title from the State of Georgia, whatever lands may fall within the State of Alabama, and which have been disposed of by the State of Georgia to private persons by lottery, sale, or otherwise, when the boundary line between the States of Georgia and Alabama may be run and determined on; and your memorialists, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Alabama, in general assembly convened, That our Senators be instructed, and our Representatives be requested to aid in effecting the object of the foregoing memorial.

And be it further resolved, That his excellency, the governor, forward a copy of this memorial to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

APPLICATION OF ALABAMA FOR AN INCREASE OF COMPENSATION TO DEPUTY SURVEYORS OF PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 29, 1835.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the general assembly of the Territory of Arkansas respectfully represents: That the public lands remaining unsurveyed in this Territory, although much of it is first-rate land, yet, in consequence of the selections which have been previously made, in the districts operated upon, in the progress of the public surveys, much of the unsurveyed land contains cane-brakes, some swamp, and a large portion of upland covered with undergrowth and brush, rendering it so exceedingly difficult for the surveyor to extend the lines of surveys, that, in many cases, his progress, throughout his district or contract, will not average more than one and a half miles per day. Your memorialist would further represent, that the present price for surveying the public lands remaining unsurveyed in this Territory is not a sufficient compensation to pay the surveyor for his extraordinary labor in performing the work, agreeably to the instructions furnished him by the surveyor general. It not unfrequently happens, as your memorialist has been informed and believes, that the price received by the surveyor, according to the present rate of compensation, for surveying a contract of eight or ten townships, has not reimbursed the moneys which he has expended in making the surveys, leaving him wholly unremunerated for his great labor in performing the work. Your memorialist further represents, that in many instances, the price received by the surveyor for surveying a district, has not paid for the provisions and hire of hands required in performing the work, leaving the surveyor wholly penniless, and his contracts with individuals unpaid. And further, that large sums of money have been offered by individuals, in addition to the price given by the government, to induce surveyors to take contracts in which they are interested, and wished brought into the market, which, in some instances, have been taken, and even then the surveyor was barely made safe by the private donation. In one instance, as your memorialist has been informed, a surveyor received five hundred dollars from individuals, as an inducement to survey a district which was offered by the surveyor general, and even then was not remunerated for his great labor and expense. Your memorialist represents, that it will require more than ordinary labor to complete the surveys which yet remain unfinished in this Territory. To run the lines truly, mark them distinctly, and establish the corners permanently, your memorialist believes that six dollars per mile for bottom lands, and four dollars per mile for uplands, would be a compensation barely paying the surveyor a reasonable compensation for performing the duties of this laborious business. Your memorialist, therefore, respectfully solicits your honorable body, to pass a law, raising the price of surveying the public lands in Arkansas from the present prices given by the government, to the sums before mentioned, to wit: six dollars per mile for bottom lands, and four dollars per mile for uplands. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

CHAS. CALDWELL, President of the Legislative Council.

Approved, October 29, 1835.

WM. S. FULTON.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 12, 1836.

SIR: On the subject of the memorial of the legislature of the Territory of Arkansas, which accompanied your letter of the 8th instant, I have the honor to apprize the committee, that the public interest has frequently suffered for the want of suitable provisions of law to insure the execution of the surveys of public lands, under peculiar circumstances, where the maximum of compensation allowed by law for that service has proved inadequate. Cases of this description are not, however, peculiar to the lands in Arkansas, but exist to a greater extent in Louisiana. They also exist in Alabama and Mississippi.

Wherever the nature of the work is complex, the field of operation at a distance from the deputy, and the amount too small to render it an object worthy the attention of any deputy surveyor, by reason of the travelling expenses necessary to be incurred, it is evident that the work must either be left undone, or the parties interested in the survey must make up to the deputy the deficiency of the legal allowance. There are many cases of this character which have been suspended for years.

Also in the surveying of cane-brakes, and other lands where the local impediments are unusually great, it has been found that the maximum allowance is inadequate to effect the required surveys, as under the circumstances set forth in the Arkansas memorial.

The surveyors general have frequently been enabled to procure the execution of difficult and unprofitable work, by giving out their contracts in such a manner as to divide the advantages and disadvantages. But, in cases where this cannot be done, it is evident that the public interest requires that an increased allowance be made.

Although the exercise of a discretionary power is always odious, and one which I should feel very reluctant myself to exercise, yet it is not perceived how any remedy can be applied that would so well do away the existing difficulties.

The memorial, I observe, proposes an increase of the price to six dollars per mile for bottom lands, and four dollars per mile for uplands. These might answer in most cases, but would still leave a class of cases, of small amounts generally, but of difficult and complex character, unprovided for by law.

Although the committee have not been pleased to call on me to propose any plan, by way of relieving what are considered defects in the surveying laws in respect to the matter of the memorial, I have ventured, with a view to save time, to express the foregoing opinion, and to transmit herewith a paper, which, at the pleasure of the committee, may be shaped into a bill.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN INDIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, DECEMBER 29, 1835.

MR. CARR, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of William Bowman, reported:

That the affidavit of said Bowman sets forth that he erroneously entered the southeast quarter of section 21, and the west half of the southwest quarter of section 22, in township No. 13 north, of range No. 2, west; intending at the same time to have entered the northeast quarter of section 28, and the west half of the northwest quarter of section No. 27, in township 13, of range 2, west. That the mistake was made by the person employed by him to take the numbers, he being unable to do it himself, from want of education; that he used every reasonable precaution and exertion to obtain the correct numbers, by employing a person believed to be competent to take the numbers, and to prevent mistakes with the register, by sending him the same numbers, and that he has no way sold or transferred his right to the said erroneous entry. S. Dunagan swears that he was employed by the above named William Bowman, to take the numbers of the land above referred to, and that he made the mistake in doing so, intending to have given the numbers of the northeast quarter of section 28, and the west half of the northwest quarter of section 27, in township 13, range 2, west, instead of the numbers of that erroneously entered. The register and receiver of the land office at Crawfordsville, say the witnesses in this case are respectable and entitled to credit, and that the change of entry ought to be granted. It appears that application was not made to the proper department for change of entry, within six months from the date of entry, as requested by the act of 24th May, 1824, hence the application was rejected. The committee are of opinion that the petitioner is entitled to relief, and for that purpose report a bill.

APPLICATION OF BEALE'S RIFLE COMPANY FOR A GRANT OF LAND ON ACCOUNT OF EXTRAORDINARY SERVICE IN DEFENCE OF NEW ORLEANS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, DECEMBER 31, 1835.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

The memorial of Beverly Chew, John McDonogh, Nathaniel Cox, Benjamin Story, William Flower, Dennis Prieur, Seaman Field, John K. West, Thomas Banks, and James Powell, citizens of the State of Louisiana, respectfully represents:

That they are, as they believe, the only survivors of the volunteer company of militia, styled "Beale's Rifle Company," which faced the British army on the shore of the Mississippi, at the invasion of this State, in the years 1814 and 1815, say on the memorable night of the 23d of December, 1814, and in every succeeding conflict down to the battle of the 8th of January, 1815, when that army was so completely overthrown and destroyed; that on the afternoon of the aforesaid night of the 23d of December, 1814, we, your memorialists, with said company, consisting of sixty-three men, led the van of the American army in the face of the British, (being the first company which marched from the city of New Orleans to their rencounter,) and kept that van until the end of the conflict, when we, your memorialists, with the residue of our company, in the withdrawal of the American army within its lines, brought up its rear, bringing with us a part of the British prisoners whom we had made on the field of battle.

Your memorialists beg leave further to state, in relation to that eventful struggle, and in proof of the justice of their claims for relief on your honorable body, (many of us being now poor in the good things of this world, and suffering from the effects of wounds, the scars of which we still carry about us, received in the defence of our country,) that, in the execution of our duty on that ever-memorable night, (our company being placed under the command of the lamented Colonel Lauderdale, with four hundred mounted riflemen, a great part of whom, with their brave commander, found an honorable grave on that night,) our company, always in the van, penetrated and took possession of the British camp, where, our fire being so destructive to the enemy, we had the satisfaction of seeing an entire British regiment of riflemen ground their arms and submit themselves prisoners of war to us.

In this situation, the British army, under Lieutenant General Keene, who was engaged with the American forces under our gallant general, now the President of the United States, on our right, hearing our fire in his camp, and fearing his communication would be cut off and intercepted with his fleet, from whence his supplies of men and everything else were drawn; and also induced to believe that the attack in front by our troops was a feint, and that the one on his camp in the rear was the principal attack, immediately drew off his troops from the right, from the contest with General Jackson, and marched them on us, where he found our company in possession of his camp, and with his overwhelming force cut us to pieces. By this means, this company, of which we, your memorialists, formed a part, drew off, as we have just stated, the whole of the British army from the attack of our gallant general, who was contending against it with an inferiority of force of one to three.

Under all these trying circumstances, though it was for the first time we had faced an enemy in battle, (having lost in killed, wounded, and prisoners made by the enemy, twenty-seven of our company,) the remainder, thirty-six in number, placing thirty-two British prisoners in our centre, in the face of an overwhelming British force, marched them out of the enemy's camp, brought up the rear of the American army, and, by command of General Jackson, marched the said prisoners the same night to the city of New Orleans, and lodged them in Fort St. Charles and the public prison.

Your memorialists beg leave further to state, in elucidation of their services and claims on their country, that on the day which succeeded that memorable night, say the 24th of December, 1814, the commander-in-chief of the American forces, in his general order of the day, directed the post of honor, the right of the army, to be occupied by the thirty-six men, the remains of Beale's rifle company, who had made good their retreat on that night, in which post they defended the honor of their country in every subsequent attack of the enemy; and on the general assault of the American lines by the whole British army, on the 8th of January, 1815, when the right of the American army was in imminent danger of being turned, in consequence of the misconduct of a company of regulars of sixty men, who abandoned and fled, on the approach of the British army, from a redoubt constructed there, in which were two brass eight-pound guns, which redoubt was taken possession of, and occupied for a moment, by the celebrated Colonel Rainy and a detachment of the British army, and might have been decisive of the day, had not your memorialists, with the residue of their company, retook said redoubt, making the British colonel, and every man who entered it, to bite the dust.

For those services, therefore, rendered our country, with many others not enumerated, and great privations, sacrifices, and sufferings, for which we have received neither bounty, indemnity, nor reward, your memorialists pray your honorable body to pass a law granting unto each individual of said company that is now in existence, and to the heirs and representatives of all who have paid the debt of nature, (as said company existed on the evening of the 23d day of December, 1814, and marched into battle,) permission to locate, on the public lands lying within the State of Louisiana, a section of six hundred and forty acres, to which they shall be entitled to a patent, that, by this means, they and their posterity may have a home and a resting-place on the soil which they have assisted to protect and defend; and your memorialists, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN ARKANSAS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 5, 1836.

Mr. KENNON, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Thomas P. Eskridge and Alvarez Fisk, reported:

That said petition alleges that Thomas P. Eskridge, for himself and the said Alvarez Fish, entered sundry tracts of land in the Batesville land district, in the Territory of Arkansas, and at Helena, in the Mississippi land district, in said Territory, amounting in all to 3,800.36 acres, and for which he paid the sum of $4,750 45; that said entries have been declared void by the Commissioner of the General Land Office; that application has been made to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, to have said money refunded, and that said application was overruled upon the alleged ground, that the Secretary had no power at that time to cause the same to be refunded. The petitioners pray, that the money so paid may be refunded, with interest from the time payment was made until repaid.

It appears from the evidence exhibited by the petitioner, being letters from the register at the land office at Batesville; the Commissioner of the General Land Office; the Secretary of the Treasury, and copies of the receipts of the receivers of public moneys at those two land offices—

1st. That said Eskridge and Fish had entered in township 8 north, of range 8 east, at said land offices, the quantity of land specified in said petition, and that payment was made for the same, as follows, to wit:

By Alvarez Fisk,

1833, June 21st	$1,000 00
" August 19th	150 00
" October 8th	200 45
1835, March 10th	1,200 00
Total	$2,550 45

By Thomas P. Eskridge,

1833, June 21st	$1,000 00
" October 14th	400 00
1835, March 10th	800 00
Total	$2,200 00

2d. That the receivers of public moneys at those places at the times said entries were made, believed said lands to be subject to private entry, and permitted the same to be entered.

3d. That in fact said lands had not been offered at public sale, and were not at the time of private entry subject to be so entered.

4th. That so soon as the purchasers were notified that said purchase was void, they made application to the Secretary of the Treasury to have the purchase money refunded.

The committee are of opinion that the prayer of the petitioners ought to be granted, and report a bill accordingly.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN INDIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 5, 1836.

Mr. MAY, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Daniel Smith, reported:

That, upon an examination of this case, it appears that, on the 13th of October, 1830, Daniel Smith entered at the Crawfordsville land office, Indiana, the southeast quarter-section 20, township 13 north, range 1 west. He received a certificate of purchase for the same, which was duly transmitted with the monthly abstracts of the register for that month, and recorded on the books of the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, preparatory to a patent being issued to him for said tract of land, and which patent, had it been duly issued, would have borne date January 3, 1831. On the 11th of April, 1831, Joseph Mosier entered the same land; the register at Crawfordsville granted his certificate of purchase, and a patent issued, bearing date November 2, 1831. The entry having been reported as a case of pre-emption, the books of the office of the Commissioner were made to conform thereto, and the original entry of Daniel Smith cancelled. This pre-emption right was claimed and reported under the act of the 29th of May, 1830; upon an examination of which, the committee are of opinion that the entry made by Smith should not have been cancelled. It appears to be just and lawful that he should be placed on a basis of equal right, as far as a patent may be deemed evidence of title, before the State tribunals. A bill is therefore reported.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1364. [1ST SESSION.

ON THE GRADUATION OF THE PRICE OF THE PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 5, 1836.

Mr. CASEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred so much of the President's message as relates to the Public Lands, reported:

That they have entered upon the examination of the subject referred to them, with a deep sense of the magnitude of the questions involved, as well as with a sincere desire to arrive, if possible, at such a result as shall be best calculated to preserve the respective rights of the old and the new States, and, at the same time, provide for that disposition of the public lands, by which they will, in the shortest period, pass out of the hands of the federal government, become the property of individuals, and be subject to the laws and jurisdiction of the States in which they are situated.

That part of the message of the President of the United States on the subject of the public lands, referred to the committee, is as follows, to wit: "Among the evidences of the increasing prosperity of the country, not the least gratifying is that afforded by the receipts from the sales of the public lands, which amount, in the present year, to the unexpected sum of $11,000,000. This circumstance attests the rapidity with which agriculture, the first and most important occupation of man, advances and contributes to the wealth and power of our extended territory. Being still of the opinion that it is our best policy, as far as we can, consistently with the obligations under which those lands were ceded to the United States, to promote their speedy settlement, I beg leave to call the attention of the present Congress to the suggestions I have offered respecting it in my former messages."

The committee have referred to the former messages of the President, on the subject of the public lands, and find that in his annual message of December 4, 1832, he says: "Among the interests which merit the consideration of Congress after the payment of the public debt, one of the most important, in my view, is that of the public lands. Previous to the formation of our present Constitution, it was recommended by Congress, that a portion of the waste lands, owned by the States, should be ceded to the United States, for the purpose of general harmony, and as a fund to meet the expenses of the war. The recommendation was adopted, and at different periods of time the States of Massachusetts, New York, Virginia, North and South Carolina, and Georgia, granted their vacant soil for the uses for which they have been asked. As the lands may now be considered as relieved from this pledge, the object for which they were ceded having been accomplished, it is in the discretion of Congress to dispose of them in such way as best to conduce to the quiet, harmony, and general interest of the American people. In examining this question, all local and sectional feelings should be discarded, and the whole United States regarded as one people, interested alike in the prosperity of their common country. It cannot be doubted that the speedy settlement of these lands constitutes the true interests of the republic. The wealth and strength of a country are its population, and the best part of that population are the cultivators of the soil. Independent farmers are, everywhere, the basis of society and true friends of liberty.

"In addition to these considerations, questions have already arisen, and may be expected hereafter to grow out of the public lands, which involve the rights of the States and the powers of the general government; and unless a liberal policy be now adopted, there is danger that these questions may speedily assume an importance not now generally anticipated. The influence of a great sectional interest, when brought into full action, will be found more dangerous to the harmony and union of the States, than any other cause of discontent; and it is the part of wisdom and sound policy to foresee its approaches, and endeavor, if possible, to counteract them.

"Of the various schemes which have been hitherto proposed in regard to the disposal of the public lands, none has yet received the entire approbation of the national legislature. Deeply impressed with the importance of a speedy and satisfactory arrangement of the subject, I deem it my duty on this occasion, to urge it upon your consideration, and to the propositions which have been, heretofore, suggested by others, to contribute those reflections which have occurred to me, in the hope that they may assist you in your future deliberations.

"It seems to me to be our true policy, that the public lands shall cease, as soon as practicable, to be a source of revenue, and that they be sold to settlers in limited parcels, at a price barely sufficient to reimburse to the United States the expense of the present system, and the cost arising under our Indian compacts. The advantages of accurate surveys and undoubted titles now secured to purchasers, seem to forbid the abolition of the present system, because none can be substituted which will more perfectly accomplish these important ends. It is desirable, however, that, in convenient time, this machinery be withdrawn from the States, and that the right of soil, and the future disposition of it, be surrendered to the State, respectively, in which it lies.

"The adventurous and hardy population of the West, besides contributing their equal share of taxation, under our impost system, have, in the progress of our government, for the lands they occupy, paid into the Treasury a large proportion of forty millions of dollars, and of the revenue received therefrom but a small part has been expended among them. When to the disadvantage of their situation, in this respect, we add the consideration, that it is their labor which gives real value to the lands, and that the proceeds arising from their soil are distributed chiefly among States which had not, originally, any claim to them, and which have enjoyed the undivided emolument arising from the sale of their own lands, it cannot be expected that the new States will remain longer contented with the present policy, after the payment of the public debt. To avert the consequences which may be apprehended from this course, to put an end forever to all partial and interested legislation on the subject, and to afford to every American citizen of enterprise the opportunity of securing an independent freehold, it seems to me, therefore, best to abandon the idea of raising a future revenue out of the public lands."

Again, in his message of the 4th of December, 1833, returning with his objections the bill "appropriating for a limited time the proceeds of the sales of the public lands, and for other purposes," after a lengthy view of the manner in which the public lands were acquired, and the conditions upon which they are now held by the United States, says, "On the whole, I adhere to the opinion expressed by me in my annual message of 1832, that it is our true policy that the public lands shall cease as soon as practicable to be a source of revenue, except for the payment of those general charges which grow out of the acquisition of the lands, their survey and sale."

And again, the President says: "I do not doubt that it is the real interest of each and all of the States in the Union, and particularly of the new States, that the price of these lands shall be reduced and graduated, and that after they have been offered for a certain number of years, the refuse, remaining unsold, shall be abandoned to the States, and the machinery of our land system entirely withdrawn. It cannot be supposed the compacts intended that the United States should retain for ever a title to lands within the States, which are of no value, and no doubt is entertained that the general interest would be best promoted by surrendering such lands to the States. This plan for disposing of the public lands impairs no principle, violates no compacts, and deranges no system. Already has the price of those lands been reduced from two dollars per acre, to one dollar and a quarter, and upon the will of Congress it depends whether there shall be a further reduction. While the burdens of the east are diminishing by the reduction of the duties upon imposts, it seems but equal justice that the chief burden of the West should be lightened in an equal degree at least. It would be just to the old States and the new, to conciliate every interest, disarm the subject of all its dangers, and add another guaranty to the perpetuity of our happy Union."

From a careful examination of all the suggestions of the President of the United States in his former messages, on the subject of the public lands, and again recommended to the favorable consideration of Congress, in his annual message at the commencement of the present session, the committee can arrive at but one conclusion as to the policy of the present administration, on the subject of the public lands; that policy is, that the public lands shall cease, as soon as practicable, to be a source of revenue, except for the payment of those general charges which grow out of the acquisition of the lands, their survey and sale; to reduce and graduate the price of the public lands; to afford to every American citizen of enterprise, the opportunity of securing a freehold and home of his own, and that, after they have been offered a reasonable length of time at reduced prices, the refuse, remaining unsold, should be surrendered to the States, and the machinery of the present land system entirely withdrawn. In those doctrines, and with this policy, the committee most cordially agree. Large and uninhabited tracts of land add nothing to a nation's strength. A hardy and industrious population, and every facility to encourage such a population, is, without doubt, the soundest policy of the government, and the best interest of its citizens. Can, then, any policy contribute more to this end than so to adjust the system of the public lands, as that every citizen shall be a freeman, indeed, by the possession of that species of property which makes him a home, and from which spring all those endearing attachments both to country and society?

In the cultivation of the soil, in the opening and improving of the wilderness, in the affording of homes to our people, that they may be independent and grow in wealth, that they may be surrounded with the means of raising their children in the paths of virtue and knowledge, consists the true policy which shall elevate us to the proud rank we aspire to, and make us in truth, what in justice we claim to be, the freest and happiest people on the globe.

Your committee are proud to have it in their power to say, that the public debt is now entirely extinguished; we are out of debt; we have a full and overflowing Treasury; the resources of the government multiplying, and daily developing her strength and greatness; the public mind already disturbed, not as to what plans shall be adopted for the purpose of raising a revenue, but what course is best to be adopted as to the disposal of the revenue, which is more, by millions of dollars, than is necessary for the expenses of the government, and yet, according to the present land system, the people, at whose sovereign will this government came into existence, are to be grievously taxed in procuring homes for themselves and families.

The purposes for which these lands were held by the government have been accomplished. The public debt is now extinguished. Why then continue this system? The original object has been obtained; the pledge is redeemed by the payment of the debt. The necessity no longer exists which gave birth to the measure; it has given way to the rapid growth and the expanding resources that have marked the character, and developed the strength of our country.

The situation of the new States is such as to claim a full portion of the consideration of this government in reference to this subject. To those States it is of the first importance that the public lands should become the property of their citizens with the least delay compatible with the national interest.

The numerous petitions, memorials, and legislative resolutions, heretofore presented from them, show the anxious concern with which the present state of things impresses them. After a full consideration of the subject, looking to the interests of the government, the harmony and strength of the Union at large, and considering what is due to the tranquillity and peace of the new States, the committee cannot resist the conviction that a law should be passed reducing and graduating the price of the public lands, and ceding the refuse to the States in which they lie. The bill now presented is intended to effect these objects, and proposes:

1st. That all lands heretofore offered at public sale, and which shall remain unsold for five years, shall be offered at private sale, at annual reductions of price, commencing at one dollar per acre, and abating twenty-five cents per acre every year, until a purchaser is found, or the land falls to twenty-five cents. This provision is intended to operate on such lands as are now in market at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, a portion of which has been in market for about fifty years, and other portions for five, ten, fifteen, twenty, twenty-five, and thirty years.

2d. That lands not hereto offered for sale, and which may hereafter be brought into market, shall have the same rule applied to them.

3d. That all actual settlers shall have the right of pre-emption on small tracts secured to them, for six months after the time of any reduction of price, provided for in the first and second sections of the bill.

4th. That no person shall be permitted to enter, at the graduated prices, more than six hundred and forty acres. This is intended to prevent speculating in the public lands, and to give to the actual settler, the cultivator of the soil, that preference which his situation seems to require. It is not the amount of money to be realized by the sale of the public lands, which should influence and determine the conduct of a wise and paternal government. In the language of the message of December, 1832, "The wealth and strength of a country are its population, and the best part of that population are the cultivators of the soil. Independent farmers are everywhere the basis of society and true friends of liberty." It may be asked, triumphantly, when did the honest farmer, the cultivator of the soil, willingly abandon the principles, or knowingly become the enemy of free governments? The soundness of the principle laid down is sustained by the history of all time past. This provision in the bill proposes to carry out the sentiment expressed in the same message, that it is our true policy that the public lands shall cease, as soon as practicable, to be a source of revenue, and that they shall be sold to settlers in limited parcels, at a price barely sufficient to reimburse the United States the expense of the present system, and the cost arising under our Indian compacts.

5th. The bill provides that after the land shall have been offered for one year at twenty-five cents, and remain unsold, it shall be ceded to the States in which it lies. In the language of the President, "It cannot be supposed that the compacts intended that the United States should retain forever a title to lands within the States which are of no value, and no doubt is entertained that the general interest would be best promoted by surrendering such lands to the States."

Finally. The bill provides for the closing of the land offices that shall become useless under the operation of the proposed system, by which means the "machinery" of the present land system shall ultimately be entirely withdrawn from the States. The committee report the bill.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1365. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 5, 1836.

Mr. PATTERSON, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Farish Carter, and of Seaton Grantland, administrator of Charles Williamson, deceased, reported:

That Evans Audere, Ervin Williams, James Roach, Willis Drew, Pearson Peacock, and Nathan Ramsay, were each entitled to pre-emption rights to one quarter-section of land in the Territory of Florida, and located the said pre-emption rights according to law; for which the government price of said land, to wit, one dollar and twenty cents per acre, was paid to Richard K. Call, esq., receiver of public money for the land office at Tallahassee, who issued certificates for the said purchase money for the pre-emption rights aforesaid. That Farish Carter, assignee of the aforesaid persons, now holds said certificates, and was entitled to the patents for the said quarter-sections of land described in said certificates. That application has been made at the General Land Office for patents for said lands, contained and described in said certificates, which have been refused to the said Carter, upon the ground that the said lands have been granted by the United States to the deaf and dumb asylum.

And the committee further report, that the said Charles Williamson, when in life, purchased and paid for one half of a quarter-section and lot containing eighty acres, for the first of which he paid one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, and for the latter the sum of two dollars and fourteen cents per acre, to the receiver of public moneys at Tallahassee, for which he held certificates from the said receiver, and which are now held by Seaton Grantland, his administrator; and that application has been made to the General Land Office for patents for said land, in compliance with said sale, and the same have been refused. Your committee, therefore, recommend that the said Farish Carter should have leave to enter, free of purchase, six quarter-sections of land belonging to the United States, in lieu of the land which he had purchased as assignee; and that Seaton Grantland, as administrator of Charles Williamson, should have the right to enter one half quarter-section of any land of the United States which has been offered for sale, free of purchase, in lieu of the land purchased by the said Charles Williamson; and for that purpose your committee have drawn and report a bill for their relief.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 5, 1836.

Mr. HARRISON, of Missouri, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of David Browning, reported:

The petitioner sets forth that he entered at the land office in the Palmyra district, in the State of Missouri, a small piece of land, which appears to be, from the receiver's certificate, which accompanies and is affixed to the petition, the southeast quarter of the northeast quarter of section number twenty, township number forty-nine north of the base line, range number two east of the fifth principal meridian. He states that the said piece of land, for the purposes of agriculture, is not worth anything; that he entered it for the want of information of the proper numbers, and that so soon as he discovered his mistake, he applied to the receiver to correct it, but that it was too late to do so, as the quarterly returns, which included it, had been made to the General Land Office; and he prays, therefore, that he may be allowed to enter some other piece of land subject to private entry.

The committee being of opinion that the petitioner is entitled to relief, have reported a bill accordingly, giving to the said petitioner the right to enter, in lieu of said tract, a quarter quarter-section of any unappropriated land within said district, subject to private entry.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 5, 1836.

Mr. HARRISON, of Missouri, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Jonathan Boone, reported:

The petitioner sets forth, that, in the spring of 1834, he emigrated to the State of Missouri, and being ignorant of the mode of finding out the parts of sections, he employed a person who had the reputation of being acquainted with it, for the purpose of being furnished with the numbers of parts of sections; that, in being furnished with the numbers by the person thus employed, a mistake was made, by which the petitioner was made to enter, at the land office in the St. Louis district, in the State of Missouri, a piece of land which he represents as poor and unfit for cultivation, being the northeast quarter of the northeast quarter of section twenty-six, township forty-one north, range ten west. The petitioner further states, that he did not discover the mistake until it was too late to have it corrected. The petitioner prays, therefore, that he may be allowed to enter some other quarter quarter-section of unappropriated land subject to private entry.

The committee being of opinion that the petitioner is entitled to relief, have reported a bill accordingly, giving to the said petitioner the right to enter, in lieu of said tract, a quarter quarter-section of any unappropriated lands within said district subject to private entry.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1368. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE BOARD OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 5, 1836.

Mr. HUNTSMAN, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition (and accompanying documents) of Don Lewis Rosamond Orillion, having had the same under consideration, reported:

That, from a careful examination of the facts, it is ascertained that John Willson and Henry M. Sykes (the grantees under whom the petitioner claims), did purchase lands lying in the eastern district of Louisiana, and which were offered for sale at New-Orleans, on the 9th of February, 1824. Three several lots, which lay on the side of Bayou Crosse, known and described as lots Nos. 26, 27, and 28; the first for 159 acres, the second for 153.50 acres, the third for 168.75 acres, for the respective prices of $198 75 for lot No. 26, $204 37 for lot No. 27, and $207 94 for lot No. 28; those lots lie in township 7 and 8, range 10 east. Patents have issued from the General Land Office, bearing date the 1st day of April, 1826; and there is a regular chain of conveyances from the patentees to the petitioner. It is alleged that the petitioner cannot be let into the enjoyment of the premises so purchased by him, because of the older and superior claim of John Franchebois, which includes all but a small fraction of lots Nos. 26, 27, and 28, before referred to.

In support of the superior claim of Franchebois, the following certified copy of the report of the commissioners of lands in the district of Louisiana has been produced, to wit:

"LAND OFFICE, Eastern District of Louisiana.

"Second species of the first class.

"John Franchebois claims a tract of land situate in the county of Point Coupee, measuring twenty-five acres in front, on each side of Bayou Grosse Tite, on Grand bayou, by forty acres in depth on each side, and bounded on one by lands of Alexander Reboul, and on the other by lands of Rosamond Beccas.

"This claim is founded on order of survey, issued by the proper Spanish officer.

"We are of opinion that all the claims included under the second species of the first class, are already confirmed by the act of Congress of the 12th of April, 1814.

ALFORD LORRAND, Receiver."

"REGISTER'S OFFICE, New-Orleans.

"I, B. Z. Canonge, register of the land office at New-Orleans, do hereby certify the foregoing to be a true copy of the reports of the late register and receiver of said office, on the claim of John Franchebois, No. 415, as taken from the Reports on Land Claims, on record in this office, which said reports bear date the 20th of November, 1816, and were confirmed by act of Congress of the 11th of May, 1820.

"In faith whereof, I have subscribed my name, this 19th of November, 1835.

"B. Z. CANONGE, Register."

From which it appears that the commissioners, appointed by the acts of Congress in such cases made and provided, have reported in favor of the claim of Franchebois, as having been founded upon a legal order of survey, issued by the competent Spanish authorities. The acts of Congress referred to by the commissioners have been examined; they are to be found in the volume of laws relating to the public lands, in pages 651, 652, and 778; and it is believed that the proper construction has been put upon them by the commissioners, and that Franchebois's claim is legalized by those acts, and consequently that he has a superior title to the land. A plat, and certificate of interference, has been made out by the proper officer, and exhibited with the petition, by which it appears that the petitioner has lost all the lands covered by his patents, with the exception of a small quantity, say 79 acres, which lies in such a situation as to be of no service to him whatever, but may be serviceable to adjoining claimants; the amount taken is 412.27 acres.

The petitioner prays for liberty to locate the 412.27 acres upon any other public lands in Louisiana. The committee think that the petitioner is entitled to relief, and beg leave to report a bill accordingly.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1369. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 6, 1836.

Mr. CHAMBERS, of Pennsylvania, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of August Brazeau, with the accompanying documents, reported:

That the petitioner represents, that he applied on the 19th May, 1800, to the lieutenant governor of the province of Louisiana, for a grant of eight hundred arpens of land in said province, and that, on the 21st May, 1800, there was a concession made to him of the same, by Charles Dehault Delassus. A survey was made for the applicant of eight hundred arpens, on the Mississippi river, in the now State of Missouri, in the month of March, 1804.

By the act of Congress of March, 1805, provision was made for confirming the titles dependent on a duly-registered warrant or order of survey, obtained from the French and Spanish governments, respectively, during the time either of said governments had possession of said province, and prior to the 1st of October, 1800; and which land was on that day actually inhabited and cultivated by said claimant, or for his use. By the said act further provision was made in favor of actual settlers, who were inhabiting and cultivating land in said province, on the 20th December, 1803. It was also enjoined on such claimant that he should, before the 1st March, 1806, deliver to the register of the land office, or recorder of land titles, within whose district the land may be, a notice in writing stating the nature and extent of his claim, and together with a plat of the tract claimed, shall deliver to the register and recorder his grant, order of survey, &c., for record. If such claimant neglected to deliver such notice in writing, with the plat, and cause to be recorded his evidence of the same, it is declared by the said act, that his "right shall become void, and forever thereafter be barred;" and it is further provided, that such incomplete grant, warrant, or order of survey, or other written evidence which shall not be recorded as above directed, shall not ever after be considered or admitted in evidence, in any court of the United States.

In the instructions from the Treasury Department of September 3, 1806, to the commissioners of land claims, appointed under the authority of said act of Congress, to receive and report on said claims, it is stated that no titles were to be considered as complete but legal French or Spanish grants, made and completed before the 1st October, 1800, and duly recorded at the proper office in New Orleans; and that when the party claimed under a grant, no claim other than those derived from complete titles shall be admitted, unless the lands claimed were actually inhabited or cultivated on the 1st of October, 1800. That all claims must be rejected, unless the concession, order, or warrant of survey, shall have been duly registered in the books kept for that purpose. If the officer issuing such concession or order of survey kept books, any concession not registered was to be considered "prima facie" as surreptitious and antedated; and when there was no registry, the burden of proof of date, &c., should fall on the claimant.

Various subsequent acts were passed by Congress, extending the time for giving notice and registering claims; among others is the act of March, 1813, the last, we believe, on that subject, giving to the 1st of January following to the claimant for the purpose of delivering the written evidence to the recorder, &c., as required, and for the neglect to deliver the same, the rights are again declared void.

When such are the requisitions of the law in relation to grants of land in what was the province of Louisiana, now the State of Missouri, the failure to comply with them, and obtain the evidence of title in the manner required by the law of the province, must bar the applicant of all right or claim.

There is in this case not the chance of one essential requisition, but of several, which are insuperable obstacles, in the opinion of the committee, to a confirmation.

If the application and order of survey be genuine, of which there is no evidence, yet it was not registered in conformity to the law, and as, from the absence of evidence of registry, it is "prima facie" to be taken and considered surreptitious and antedated, it was incumbent on the applicant to prove satisfactorily its true date, and that it was prior to the 1st of October, 1800.

There is no evidence that the evidence of title was filed with the recorder, nor is it alleged that the claim was presented to the commissioners authorized to receive and investigate such claims under the acts of Congress.

Nor is there any evidence that the applicant, at the time of the order of survey, or at the time of survey, or at any time since, resided on or cultivated the said land, or any part thereof.

Ignorance of the law, the only alleged excuse for so many omissions and imperfections of title, cannot be allowed to exempt the claimant from a compliance with the provisions of law, through which he was to acquire a title, if any.

The omission to procure his title, unaccompanied with possession and registry, is, in the opinion of the committee, under the laws of Congress, a bar to the claim; and your committee can discover no good or equitable reason why Congress should, by any new act of legislation, give validity and confirmation to a claim so imperfect and dormant.

The committee are of opinion that the claim is not well founded, and ought not to be granted, and submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the petitioner is not entitled to relief.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1370. [1ST SESSION.

APPLICATION OF ILLINOIS FOR GRANTS OF CERTAIN LANDS TO INDIVIDUALS, FOUNDED ON CULTIVATION.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 7, 1836.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the general assembly of the State of Illinois, respectfully represent to your honorable body: That a number of the early emigrants to that part of the territory northwest of the Ohio river, which is now included in the State of Illinois, made improvements and settlements under the belief that they would receive the donations of land offered by the resolves and acts of Congress. That those pioneers to the then wilderness of the West necessarily had to encounter great privations, hardships, and losses, as well as to risk their lives in becoming inhabitants and settlers in the country, and by which they certainly acquired a strong claim upon the justice of the government, for a portion of the soil which they settled and defended, and certainly to the quantity of acres which they had a right to expect from the resolves and acts of the government before mentioned.

Your memorialists will further state, that the portion of the emigrants to whom they refer are those who settled the country between the years 1780 and 1790, and that among the number were Joseph Ogle, James McRoberts, James Lemen, Peter Castelin, Benjamin Ogle, George Biggs, and Thomas Biggs. That about the year 1798, and subsequent to that date, they exhibited before the then governor of the Territory the proof of their settlement and cultivation of the soil, of their being heads of families, &c., as required by the acts of Congress, and the instructions to the governor. That the governor, in some instances, for reasons certainly unknown to your memorialists, made grants to them of land, but without acting upon a uniform rule, as will be seen by reference to his grants in the archives at Washington city, as in some instances he granted four hundred acres, the quantity which seems to have been intended by Congress, and in other cases a less quantity, thereby depriving a portion of the settlers of rights awarded to others, when the rights growing out of the occupancy and cultivation of the soil, and of being heads of families, were precisely the same. Your honorable body will observe, that when these facts were proved, to wit: a residence in the country, the cultivation of the soil, or being heads of families within the years prescribed by the acts of Congress, by the settlers in the Territory, they had complied with the requisites which placed them upon an equal footing with regard to the quantity of land to which they were severally entitled. Any distinction, therefore, in the grants, when the rights and services were the same, was manifestly partial and unjust. The individuals whose names we have mentioned are among those who did not receive the quantity of land to which they were entitled. For example: Joseph Ogle received 250 acres, James McRoberts, 100 acres, Peter Castelin, 250 acres, Benjamin Ogle, as assignee, &c., 300 acres, James Lemen, 200 acres, Thomas Biggs, 250 acres, and George Biggs, 300 acres, leaving a deficit in each case, and which is claimed by these individuals to make the quantity in each case 400 acres.

Your memorialists will further remark, that the said governor, in a number of instances, declined to make any grant whatever to individuals who exhibited claims, and that in these cases, after the organization of a board of commissioners by Congress to adjust the claims, the same individuals again exhibited their claims before the said board, and in all cases, as your memorialists believe, received the full quantity of 400 acres. The evidence of this fact, of which your memorialists do not doubt, is entirely within the reach of your honorable body, in the archives of the nation. It was, therefore, unfortunate for that part of our citizens who did not receive their full quantity of land, that they ever presented their claims to the governor of the Territory. Had they waited and exhibited their claims before the board, they would have received the full complement of acres before stated. Your memorialists will further add, that they have been informed and believe, after the organization of the board of commissioners, the abovenamed individuals reëxhibited their claims before the board, and were informed by the board that they had no doubt of the justice of the claims; that in all such cases the board granted the full quantity of 400 acres, and that they would then grant the deficiency, so as to give each applicant 400 acres, but from a doubt as to the powers of the board to vary the number of acres in cases where the governor had made grants; that they held their powers under the act of Congress to be, to readjudicate the claims, and to confirm or reject them without changing the quantity of acres in the grant. In this situation, therefore, the above claims have ever since been suspended.

Your memorialists beg leave further to add, that the fact of the governor making grants for any quantity of acres, is proof conclusive that the grantees had settled in the country, cultivated the soil, or were heads of families within the time prescribed by the acts of Congress; because, without this proof, the governor could make no grant whatever. Your honorable body will further remark, that separate grants were authorized to be made, to wit: one predicated upon the cultivation of the soil, the other from being the head of a family. Your memorialists, therefore, respectfully solicit your honorable body in behalf of the individuals named, that your honorable body will examine the claims stated, and pass an act granting to the heirs of Joseph Ogle 150 acres of land, to James McRoberts 300 acres, to Benjamin Ogle, assignee, &c., 100 acres, to James Lemen's heirs 200 acres, to the heirs of Peter Castelin 150 acres, to the heirs of Thomas Biggs 150 acres, and to the heirs of George Biggs 100 acres, so as to complete the quantity of 400 acres to each.

SURVEY AND SALE OF LANDS IN SCOTT COUNTY, MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 7, 1836.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, April 9, 1834.

SIR: I herewith transmit a copy of a communication from E. T. Langham, surveyor of public lands at St. Louis, Missouri, on the subject of the memorial of the inhabitants of Scott county in that State, respecting the bringing into market of certain lands in that county.

There have been several similar applications from residents of that county at different periods, and the department has invariably failed to accomplish the completion of the surveys by reason of the inadequacy of the compensation allowed by law.

There are several circumstances wherein the present maximum price of surveying per mile has been found inadequate, to wit:

The running of principal meridian and base lines.

The running or retracing of boundary lines.

The accomplishing of surveys where the amount of work is too small to make it an object for a surveyor to contract for that single service, however urgent and important it may be deemed, either by the government or by individuals. One remarkable instance, to prove that some further legislative provision is necessary, is the fact that the general government is known to possess a valuable property in the city of New Orleans, which cannot be ascertained and surveyed under the existing rate of mileage.

These are evils which should be remedied by further legislative provisions, and I embrace the present occasion of calling your attention to the subject, and would suggest the passage of a law authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury, under peculiar circumstances of difficulty in making the public surveys, and where the present maximum price has proved inadequate, to allow such additional compensation as, on satisfactory proof of the fact, shall be found indispensably necessary to accomplish the object.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

Hon. WM. H. ASHLEY, House of Representatives.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, St. Louis, February 10, 1834.

SIR: In compliance with your letter of the 26th November, enclosing a petition of the inhabitants of Scott county, Missouri, I submit the following report:

According to Browne and Bancroft's map of Missouri, the county of Scott includes either the whole or a part of each of the following specified townships and fractional townships, situated north of the base line, and east of the fifth principal meridian; viz.: 26 to 28 of range 12, 25 to 30 of range 13, 24 to 30 of range 14, 23 to 29 of range 15, 23 to 28 of range 16, 23 to 28 of range 17, and 24, 25, 26, and 27, of range 18; which said townships and fractional townships and the plats thereof are severally conditioned as follows, viz.: townships 26, 27, and 28, of range 12, and 25 of range 13, have not been subdivided, and to judge from the field notes of such portions of the exterior lines as have been surveyed, the conclusion would be drawn that the land is generally swampy, and but small portions desirable for the habitation of man.

Townships 26 and 27 of range 13 have been subdivided, the plats in this office are authenticated; the fractional sections adjoining the private surveys, require to be subdivided under the act of Congress of the 5th April, 1832, and the plats to be copied for the register.

Township 28 of range 13 is conditioned as stated in the margin of the plat thereof, transmitted to the General Land Office with my letter of the 12th of October, 1832. A competent surveyor cannot be obtained for the price allowed by law to put the work in proper order.

Townships 29 and 30 of range 13 have been surveyed, and the plats thereof are in the register's office.

Township 24 of range 14 has been in part surveyed, and the register furnished with a plat thereof. No reasons are given in the field notes for the survey having been left incomplete.

Townships 25, 26, and 27, of range 14, have not been subdivided, and are believed to contain large bodies of swampy land.

Townships 28, 29, and 30, of range 14, have been subdivided. The plats in the office are not authenticated, but copies have been furnished the register. The survey of township 28 seems to be incomplete.

Townships 23 and 24 of range 15 have not been subdivided, and are supposed to contain much swampy land.

Township 25 N. of range 15 has been partly surveyed, and a plat thereof furnished the register, the plat in this office not authenticated.

Townships 26, 27, 28, and 29, of range 15, have been subdivided, and a plat of each has been transmitted to the register. The plats of said township on file in this office are unauthenticated.

Townships 23 and 24 of range 16 have not been subdivided, for what cause this office is uninformed.

Townships 25 and 26 of range 16 have been subdivided, the plat of township 25 in this office is authenticated; that of township 26 is not. Copies of each must be prepared for the register.

Township 27 of range 16 has been partly surveyed, and a plat thereof furnished the register. The survey of the township seems to have been left incomplete on account of lakes and swamps. Township 28 of same range has not been surveyed.

Township 23 of range 17 has not been subdivided, the reasons therefor are not known.

Townships 24, 25, 26, 27, and 28, of range 17, have been subdivided, the plats thereof on file in this office are authenticated, and all that is necessary to prepare them for the register is to subdivide the fractions under the act of Congress of the 5th of April, 1832.

Township 24 of range 18 has been subdivided into sections, but the plat thereof on file is not authenticated. The fractions have to be subdivided under the act of Congress of the 5th of April, 1832, and a plat prepared for the register.

Township 25 of range 18 has not been subdivided.

Townships 26 and 27 of range 18 have been subdivided into sections, the plats thereof on file in this office are authenticated, and require only the subdivision of the fractional sections to be in readiness for the register.

Plats of the townships and parts of townships before specified as having been subdivided and not yet furnished the register, can be prepared and transmitted to him by the 1st of April.

The inhabitable land in the aforesaid townships and fractional townships which have not been surveyed, is understood to be so intermixed with swampy and marshy lands, that much difficulty will occur in the execution of the surveys, and much loss of time in crossing the obstructions so as to keep up a proper connection of the lines; and it is recommended that, for the completion of the surveys, in the counties of Scott, New Madrid, and Cape Girardeau, and for such portions of the county of Wayne as lie south of the standard line, between townships 29 and 30 north, and is watered by the St. Francis, a liberal per-diem allowance and expenses paid be authorized, so as to induce a surveyor competent to the task to undertake the work; or if this is deemed objectionable, that the mileage should be at the least what is allowed in the Southern States and Territories, viz.: $4.00 per mile.

I am sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. T. LANGHAM.

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Esq.,
Commissioner of the General Land Office, Washington City.

APPLICATION OF INHABITANTS OF MISSISSIPPI FOR THE SETTLEMENT OF PRIVATE LAND CLAIMS AND EXTENSION OF THE PRE-EMPTION RIGHT TO SETTLERS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 11, 1836.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled:

The undersigned, citizens of the State of Mississippi and other States, now attending the land sales, with the view of purchasing from the government, respectfully represent: That, by the provisions of the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, there was granted to each Choctaw head of a family, a reservation, the conditions of which, by reference to said articles, will more fully appear. To carry which article into effect, by securing, on the one hand, the rights of the Indians who truly desired to become citizens of the State, and, on the other, to protect the government from fraud and imposition, the President of the United States, at a very early period, ordered the Indian agent, Colonel William Ward, to enrol, in a proper register, the names of the heads of families and their children, who should signify their intention to avail themselves of the benefits held forth by said article. At a later period, but before the commencement of the first land sales, the Executive appointed George W. Martin, esq., special locating agent, with instructions to locate all Indian claims, following for his guide the provisions of the 14th article of the treaty. The register of the said William Ward, in locating the interests of claimants, while in the discharge of his duties, a number of applications were made to Mr. Martin, the locating agent, for reservations, which he felt bound to reject, for the reason that their names were not to be found on the said register. Some of the applicants thus rejected applied to the Department of War for relief, enclosing testimony of a compliance, so far as depended on their own acts, with the several conditions of the grant offered by said 14th article, and praying that their lands might be reserved from sale, and when sold, that other lands might be set apart for them, so as to save them from the delay, vexation, and expense, so inseparable from a trial of their rights to the particular tracts in a course of law, and which they were so ill prepared to encounter. On mature consideration of the evidence submitted, the President thought proper to issue an order to the proper departments, directing instructions to be given to the locating agent and the registers of the land offices, to reserve from sale land of similar value and equal quality, subject to the then future action of Congress, in the name of each Indian claimant who would adduce satisfactory evidence of, 1st, being a Choctaw head of a family; 2d, of application to the agent for registration within six months after the ratification of the treaty; 3d, of failure or refusal by the Indian agent to record, or of loss of the record when registered. These instructions were general in their terms, though predicated on the particular cases above referred to.

A few active, enterprising, and intelligent speculators, discovering the opening which was thus presented for the acquisition of large fortunes, have, by agents beyond the Mississippi and at home, procured documents purporting to be powers of attorney from Indians to select lands, and transfer their rights to lands selected, supported by ex parte testimony on the above-named points set forth in the President's order, and the instructions from the departments of the Treasury and of War, and by those papers have caused to be set apart for them the choicest lands in the country, sweeping over large districts inhabited and cultivated by persons who settled the public lands on the faith of the policy of the government indicated by the passage and renewal of pre-emption laws at almost every session of Congress, that their homes would be given them at a reasonable price, unexposed to the heartless grasp of the voracious speculator. To the alarm of your memorialists, these claims have now amounted, as they are informed, to upward of three thousand, which, at an average of 1,280 acres each, amount to the enormous aggregate of 3,840,000 acres; and many of the said speculators, availing themselves of the panic which their operations have produced, are now selling out, and receiving a portion of the price in ready money, which they refuse to become bound to refund in the event that the title is not confirmed; thus securing to themselves large fortunes, without having advanced to the Indian one cent, so far as your memorialists are informed and believe. Your memorialists are persuaded that not more than one out of twenty claims is founded in equity and justice, and, if scrutinized by a tribunal sitting in the vicinities of the land offices, with competent powers to reject or confirm, and to compel the attendance of witnesses, those honestly claiming would be secured in their rights, a most stupendous system of fraud on the government be exposed and defeated, the settlers relieved from the embarrassments brought on them, and Congress saved from the teasing and vexatious applications of false claimants for a series of years to come. A compliance with the above suggestion, by the passage of a proper law, your memorialists most respectfully solicit. They also pray, in behalf of actual settlers, an extension of the pre-emption privilege.

ON THE APPLICATION OF MISSOURI THAT REGISTERS OF LAND OFFICES BE DIRECTED TO ENDORSE THE FIELD NOTES ON PATENTS FOR LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 11, 1836.

Mr. EWING, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the following memorial from the legislature of Missouri, reported that the prayer of the memorial be rejected:

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the general assembly of the State of Missouri, would most respectfully represent, that under the present regulation of the Land Office department of the United States, patents issue to the purchasers of lands; and it devolves on those purchasers to procure, at their own expense, from the register of the particular land district, the field notes appertaining to such parcel of land, so by him purchased of the government of the United States. Your memorialists will further represent, that they cannot discriminate between the duty devolving on a government upon a sale of its property and an individual in making a sale of his. In the latter the individual affords, at his own expense, a complete description of the land by him sold. Your memorialists would, therefore, most respectfully request (if in your wisdom it shall seem meet) the passage of a law making it the duty of the register of the particular land district where land may be entered, to furnish to the patentee or purchaser of land, a copy of the field notes, to be by said register endorsed in a fair hand on the back of each patent, free of expense to such purchasers, and as in duty bound, your petitioners will pray, &c.

Resolved, by the general assembly of the State of Missouri, That the Secretary of State is hereby required to forward to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress a copy of the above memorial.

Approved, February 11, 1833.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 4, 1836.

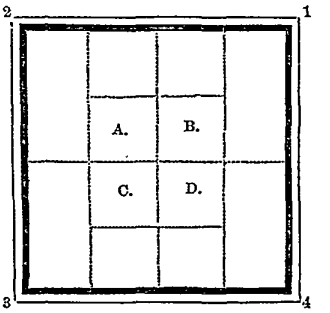
SIR: Your letter of the 30th ultimo contains the following inquiries: "A memorial of the legislature of Missouri asks that the registers of land districts be required to endorse on the backs of patents the field notes of the surveys; would a law requiring them to do so cause much additional labor? Would it be of any considerable value to the purchasers?"

In reply to your first inquiry I have the honor to state, that the labor would be considerable: all the patents ever issued for sales made in each district being liable to such endorsement, and that it could not, with propriety, be made the duty of registers without a provision of adequate compensation for such additional labor. It would draw off the time of the clerks from attending to purchasers and the preparation of the returns, and might materially interfere with the transaction of the current business.

A SECTION.



In regard to the second inquiry, I would state that, in the opinion of this office, the information would be of no essential utility. The information would have to be extracted from the descriptive notes, which indicate only the quality of the soil and character of the timber, in general terms, on the surveyed lines, which are one mile apart, and would be still less uncertain as to the interior half quarter-sections.

Thus, in the annexed diagram, the descriptive notes can furnish no accurate information except as to the timber and character of the soil on the lines 1.2—2.3—3.4—4.1. This can hardly be expected to afford any information as to the east halves of the northwest and southwest quarters, or the west halves of the northeast and southeast quarters—and assuredly nothing at all as to the quarter quarters, A, B, C, and D.

In view of all the circumstances presenting themselves in connection with the subject, I am of opinion that it would be almost useless, and therefore inexpedient to legislate on the subject.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. THOMAS EWING, Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, Senate U. S.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1374. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN MICHIGAN.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 12, 1836.

Mr. MAY, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of the heirs of Jacob Smith, reported:

That Jacob Smith, the father of the petitioners, had for many years been a trader among the Chippewa tribe of Indians, in Michigan Territory, to whom, on account of the many kind and beneficial services rendered them by said Smith, they had become warmly attached. That some time previous to a treaty held at Saginaw, in the year eighteen hundred and nineteen, the said Chippewa nation of Indians, as an expression of their gratitude, adopted the children of the said Jacob Smith, five in number, as members of their tribe, appropriating to each of them an Indian name, by which alone they were known and designated among said tribe, and made a donation of a section of land to each, at or near the Grand Traverse of Flint river, in said Territory; that the said five sections of land were reserved by the treaty concluded at Saginaw, between the said Chippewa tribe and the United States, on the twenty-fourth day of September, eighteen hundred and nineteen, to the said five children of the said Jacob Smith, by their respective Indian names; and that, from that time they have been in possession of said lands, by virtue of said donation and reservation. Your committee further report, that in consequence of an inadvertence in the wording of the said treaty, by which said reservations are stated to be for persons of Indian descent, said petitioners have not been able to procure patents for said reserved lands. Your committee are perfectly satisfied, from the affidavits of gentlemen who were present and subscribing witnesses to said treaty, and from the statements of the chiefs and head men of the said tribe, that there were no persons of Indian descent who passed by the names appropriated to said petitioners, who could take under said reservation, and that the said petitioners are the identical persons for whom said reservations were designed, and that the names in the said reservation are the same names by which they were designated and known among said tribe. Your committee further state, that a large number of the neighboring inhabitants of said reservations have presented a memorial, stating that the settlements of the adjoining lands are much retarded for the want of confirmation by Congress of the title in said land to said petitioners, and praying that patents may issue to said petitioners, to whom they allege said lands of right and in justice belong.

ON A GRANT OF LAND TO ARKANSAS FOR THE COMPLETION OF THE BUILDING FOR THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 12, 1836.

Mr. CASEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the memorial of the Legislature of the Territory of Arkansas, soliciting of the United States a further grant of ten sections of the public land to aid said Territory in the completion of their legislative house for said Territory, reported:

That by an act of Congress, approved on the 2d March, 1832, a grant of ten sections of the public land was made to Arkansas, for the purpose of building, at the seat of government in Arkansas, a house for the accommodation of the legislature. The land has been sold and the funds applied for the purposes for which the grant was made. The funds are exhausted, and the building is yet unfinished. As it has been the invariable practice of the government, in each of the new States and Territories, when the United States owned the soil, to make similar grants for similar purposes, it is thought by the committee to be but reasonable to grant the prayer of the petitioner, especially as that Territory will shortly become a State, and will be, for several years, but illy able to complete such a work, as they will have to defray the expenses of their own government, and will be deprived of the advantages of raising a revenue by taxation upon the public land. The committee, therefore, report a bill.

ON THE RE-ISSUE OF A BOUNTY-LAND WARRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 12, 1836.

Mr. CHAMBERS, of Pennsylvania, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom the petition and documents of Robert Allison, of Franklin county, Pennsylvania, claiming indemnification for the loss of two hundred acres of bounty land, were referred, reported:

That they have had the petition and documents under consideration, for which they extract the following facts: The petitioner was a lieutenant in the third regiment of the Pennsylvania line in the Revolutionary army, and served until the close of the war, and thereby became entitled to two hundred acres of bounty land, under the laws of Congress. A warrant, No. 43, was issued in his name, for two hundred acres of bounty land, on the 6th day of April, 1799, which was located by and for a certain William Steel, on the 10th day of February, 1800; upon which, together, with other warrants surrendered by said Steel, to the amount of four thousand acres, a patent issued in the name of said Steel, upon section three, township six, range seven. The authority under which Steel undertook to locate the warrant in the name of Robert Allison, appears to have been an assignment in the warrant to him, purporting to have been executed by Allison. The petitioner states, in his petition, that the warrant "never came to his hands, and that he never, in any form or manner, transferred or parted with his right to said land, or warrant, or gave any person any authority to assign or transfer the same." And to the petition is attached his affidavit, "that the facts set forth are just and true, as stated therein." In proof of the assignment to Steel not being the genuine act of the petitioner, the deposition of Hon. Matthew St. Clair Clarke was submitted, the most material part of which is the following extract, in which he says "deponent, knowing well the character of Captain Allison for integrity and truth, requested to see the surrendered warrants. They were shown to this deponent, and, without hesitancy, he pronounced the name of Captain Allison, as assignor, a forgery. The handwriting he did not believe to be that of Captain Allison, nor was the name spelled correctly." This evidence, in connection with the good character of the petitioner, as stated by Mr. Clarke, who appears to have been well acquainted with him, and also by some of the committee, to whom he is well known, the committee deemed as satisfactory that the assignment of the warrant to Steel was a forgery.

Under this state of facts, it appears to the committee no more than justice to the petitioner to grant him a new warrant, the warrant to which he was entitled under the acts of Congress, having been without his consent or knowledge, spent and executed in such a manner, under the direction of the officers of the government, as placed it out of his power to obtain what he was entitled to, even were he willing to adopt the location thus made without his consent, which would be imposing, of itself, a hardship upon him which would be unjust. His warrant was not laid upon any specific two hundred acres which could be designated or distinguished from any other two hundred acres of the four thousand covered by Steel's patent; and, even if it could, if the land had passed to a third person, purchasing bona fide under Steel, without knowledge of the fraud, your committee are of opinion he could not recover an ejectment; but, as before observed, it would be unjust to subject him to this trouble and expense without his consent, if it were even manifest that he could recover it. Your committee, however, are clearly satisfied that his right in the land covered by that warrant is gone from him past recovery; that he cannot recover in an ejectment; the two hundred acres covered by his warrant being thrown in with three thousand eight hundred acres more, in one general patent covering the whole, it is impossible for him to describe any particular two hundred acres, so as to entitle him to recover it; and this without his act or participation, and without any fault of his. In this view of the case, the committee have reported a bill, authorizing the proper officers of the government to issue a new warrant to the petitioner.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 12, 1836.

Mr. CARR, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred a resolution to inquire into the expediency of making compensation to John Barkley, for a deficiency in quantity in a tract of land purchased of the United States by him in fractional section No. 4, township 6, of range 8, between the Miami rivers, in the State of Ohio, reported:

That it appears from a plot or diagram of said fractional section, certified from the records by M. T. Williams, late surveyor general, that it was returned as containing three hundred and forty-seven acres. It is also in evidence before the committee, that upon a resurvey of said fractional section, it was found to contain two-hundred and fifty acres, one rood, and one pole. From an examination of the plot of the resurvey, field notes, and calculations made thereof, it appears that said resurvey is correct; the committee are of opinion the said Barkley is entitled to relief, and for that purpose report a bill.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN ALABAMA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 12, 1836.

Mr. CARR, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Amelia Leach, reported:

That the petitioner states that, in the month of June, 1835, the application at the land office, Tuscaloosa, for the entry of the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section 19, township 23, of range 11, east, that she has not received a duplicate for the land she wanted. Ransom Davis swears, that about the 8th day of June last, he was applied to by Amelia Leach and others, to survey and number certain lots of public lands designed to be entered by her; and said Amelia Leach designed to enter the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section 19, township 23, range 11, east. Deponent further swears, that he discovered the error so soon as the said Amelia Leach submitted the duplicate to his inspection, and informed her that the duplicate did not call for the land she intended; the duplicate accompanying the papers, and which appears to have been executed by the receiver at the land office, at Tuscaloosa, on the 10th June, 1835, designates that Amelia Leach purchased the northeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section 19, township 23, range 11, east. The papers representing this case are not as formal as might be desired, yet the committee are of opinion, that the facts are stated, and that the petitioner is entitled to relief, and for that purpose report a bill.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1379. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 12, 1836.

Mr. HUNTSMAN, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and the accompanying documents of John Armstrong, having had the subject under consideration, reported:

That the petitioner claims 640 acres of land, by virtue of settlement, &c., upon the neutral territory between the Rio Rondo and the Red river, under the several acts of Congress of the 3d of March, 1823 and the 20th of May, 1824. (See volume of the Land Laws, pages 844 and 883, and also by the Act of 24th of May, 1828).

The first act required the settlement or habitation to have been made upon the premises previous to the 22d of February, 1819, and upon due proof of that having been done in good faith, and produced to the commissioners appointed by the act of 1823, and the provisions of which were continued, with some modifications, by the act of 1824, they were to reject or confirm, as the case might be.

It appears, from the transcript of the proceedings of the board of commissioners, that two witnesses deposed before said board, that the petitioner resided on the premises claimed at and before the 22d of February, 1819, and raised corn; as to what amount or what kind of settlement then existed seems to be evaded; but, upon testimony, the commissioners recommended his title for confirmation. However, when the claimant afterward tenders his own affidavit in support of his claim, he deposes that he was in possession of the premises on or before the 1st day of November, 1824, as a resident; and two other persons testify to the same fact. This discrepancy between his own affidavit and those of the witnesses who deposed before the commissioners, is not satisfactorily accounted for. But one thing appears conclusively to the committee, both by the affidavit of the petitioner and the mandate of the Indian agent which is produced and sworn to by the petitioner, that the lands lay, at the time of the settlement being made, and at the time of the adjudication of the commissioners confirming said claim, and at the time, toward the 19th of October, 1832, when the Indian agent ordered petitioner off from the Indian territory, within the Indian boundary, and were not subject to entry, settlement, or disposition, and consequently were not contemplated by the acts of Congress referred to, nor was the possessory right in Congress to give or grant to petitioner or any one else. The petitioner must have settled within the Indian country against the positive enactments of Congress, and should not be permitted to reap an advantage from his own violation of the laws. It is presumed that these facts were not known to the commissioners, at the time of adjudication upon his claim; otherwise, it would not have received their confirmation.

The committee have had reference to the act of the 24th of May, 1828, upon which the petitioner seems to bottom his right, under the supposition that said act confirmed his title; and, so far from drawing the conclusion that said title is confirmed thereby, they are constrained to believe the very reverse of the proposition contended for. For, although the petitioner's claim is not one of those which were suspended by that act for the purpose of ascertaining whether they lay within the boundaries of the Cadoo nation of Indians, yet it is clearly discovered by said act that it was not the intention of Congress to confer any claim that did lie within the Indian boundaries.

The committee are therefore of opinion that the prayer of the petitioner is unreasonable, and ought not to be granted.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1380. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 12, 1836.

Mr. HUNTSMAN, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of the heirs of Thomas F. Reddeck, reported:

That they have diligently examined all the documents and testimony submitted for their consideration, which present the following statement of facts as the foundation of said claim:

On the 30th of March, 1799, Zenon Trudeau, then acting as lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, officially issued the following order:

"It is permitted to Mr. Lewis (Fresson) Honori to establish himself at the head of the rapid of the river Desmoines; and his establishment once formed, notice of it shall be given to the governor general, in order to obtain for him the concession of a space sufficient to give value to the said establishment, and, at the same time, to render it useful to the commerce of the peltries of this country; to watch the Indians, and to keep them in the fidelity which they owe to his Majesty."

There were other privileges given in said order, to trade with the Indians, &c. Possession of the land now claimed was immediately taken by Lewis Fresson Honori, which lies in the district of St. Charles, upon the river Mississippi, above the river Desmoines, and perhaps two hundred and fifty miles above St. Louis. The taking and keeping possession from 1799 until 1805 is satisfactorily proven by two witnesses. While he retained possession of the premises, he became indebted to one Joseph Robedoux, who applied, under the then existing government and laws, to the proper authority for process to coerce the payment of said debt. The ordinary proceedings having taken place, in pursuance of the usual form of legal proceedings, in those tribunals, a decree was obtained the 12th day of March, 1803, for the seizure of the property of Lewis Fresson and others, which was executed on the 27th of March, 1803. This land was sold on the 15th day of May, 1803, and purchased by Joseph Robedoux, in satisfaction of his decree. The order of seizure aforesaid, and the levy thereof, gives a minute description of the lots and lands which were levied upon, and says, among other things, that "the land lies about six leagues above the river Desmoines," and that "the four lots, here abovementioned, are a part of one league (square) which has been granted by the government to Mr. Lewis Fresson Honori, whose titles are in the archives at St. Louis, of Illinois. The said league (square) was also seized, &c. It appears that the lots attached to and being a part of this land, was improved, by building houses, planting orchards, and a small piece was under fence and cultivation; and that a continued possession of the premises has been kept up by the said Honori, and those claiming under him, up to this time. Joseph Robedoux died, and, by his last will and testament, appointed Augusti Choteau his executor, with power in said will to dispose of his property, personal and real. And, on the — day of April, 1805, the said Augusti Choteau, executor aforesaid, proceeded, according to law, to dispose of said land at public sale, when and where the said Thomas F. Reddeck became the purchaser, and, in a short time, entered into the possession and enjoyment of the premises, where his heirs yet remain. The grant to Fresson Honori, which is recited in the proceedings, or a copy of it, has not been produced, and there is no evidence that it exists or ever existed.

The evidence establishing the foregoing facts, together with the claim, was submitted to the commissioner appointed by the government, (to wit, Frederick Bates,) for the adjudication of similar claims. He proceeded in the examination, and by the authority of the acts of Congress of 1812, '13, '14, and '15, &c., granted 640 acres to the claimants, in the following words, to wit: "Granted 640 acres, if Indian right extinguished."

This last expression has created all the difficulty in obtaining patent by the heirs of Reddeck.

It is contended by the petitioners, that the claim for six hundred and forty acres has been confirmed by the several acts of Congress, passed in 1804, page 509, 14th section; the act of 1805, section 2, page 518; 1812, section 3, page 620-21; 1814, sections 1 and 2, page 652, of the volume of the Land Laws. Those several acts of Congress have been examined, to ascertain how far an actual settlement by Honori, in 1799, and a continuation of it until after the 20th day of December, 1803, under the aforesaid written authority from the Spanish government, comes within the purview and meaning of said acts, and the result of that examination has produced a conviction upon the minds of the committee that the claim has been confirmed, substantially, by those acts; but the Commissioner of the Land Office, feeling some difficulty in regard to the expression in the award of the commissioners appointed to adjudicate those claims, to wit: "if the Indian claim extinguished," hesitated to issue the patent, and recommended the claimant to apply to Congress for further legislation upon the subject, as appears by his letter dated the ———, and filed with the committee.

The committee, therefore, think the prayer of the petitioner reasonable, and such as should be granted.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND BY A PERSON WHO ACTED AS A SPY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 12, 1836.

Mr. HAMMOND, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Abraham Forbes, reported:

That said Forbes was a citizen of the United States, and removed to Upper Canada prior to the last war; that he joined the troops of the United States, and was employed as a spy, and had the entire confidence of the officers of the United States, and performed many valuable and important services to the United States in that character; that he had been promised a handsome remuneration by Col. Christie, whose premature death perhaps, prevented any communication to the government in behalf of said Forbes; that he acted with the United States troops until the close of the war, and was honorably discharged. It further appears that, before the war, he was independent in his circumstances, and that when his family was sent to the United States, there were sent over a few boxes of his goods of but little value; and he alleges that his other property was confiscated, but of this fact no evidence is furnished the committee. The committee are of opinion that the important and faithful services rendered the United States by Forbes, entitle him to the provision made, by the act of 1816, for the benefit of Canadian volunteers. They, therefore, introduce a bill, allowing 320 acres of land.

LAND CLAIMS IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 12, 1836.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 8, 1836.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit the reports of the register of the land office and receiver of public money, at New Orleans, made to this department, under the provisions of the acts of Congress, approved 6th February and 3d March, 1835, together with a communication from the Commissioner of the General Land Office on the subject, to which the report under the latter act refers.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. J. K. POLK, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 6, 1836.

SIR: The report of the register and receiver at New Orleans, made in consequence of the second section of the act of Congress of the 3d of March, 1835, communicated to them by a letter of my predecessor, dated the 31st of the same month, has been examined by me, with all the attention which the other urgent business of the office has allowed me, since the report has been in my possession. I have now the honor of returning it to you with the following remarks.

The objections to the class A, that caused the present cases to be again referred, are no otherwise obviated in this report, than by reference to precedents of decisions by the former commissioners, as being sanctioned by Congress. Neither time nor means are at my command to investigate the principles of the confirmations quoted, nor for observing how far they bear analogy to the present cases; nor yet (if it were pertinent for me), to compare them with the laws, ordinances, and regulations, that governed the disposal of the royal domain, in the province of Louisiana; nor can I hope to obtain opportunity for all these researches, before it may be proper for you to lay the report before Congress. I am, therefore, necessarily confined to brief suggestions, which perhaps may appear to you, sir, imperfect and inconclusive.

The register and receiver present the class A, as supported by complete French or Spanish titles. This view of them I take to be erroneous; not perceiving any authority for this assumption. It is believed that the regulations of O'Reilly, Gayoso, and Morales, were in conformity with the fundamental laws of Spain, and these regulations made the grant depend upon conditions, which rarely, if ever, could have been previously performed by the person to whom land was allotted; accordingly, the acquisition of a perfect right in every one of the cases mentioned, is presumed to have been dependent on the performance of conditions subsequent, by the settler, whereby he might indeed make good his equitable title, but not a legal one without confirmation. In Nos. 10, 25, and 46, of this class, that confirmation is expressly made to depend on the settler's compliance with the terms stipulated. Several acts of Congress have relaxed these rules, and under their modifications, claimants have been allowed to prove their equitable claims; but confirmation seems still indispensable to a perfect grant.

You will not, sir, have failed to observe, that the regulations referred to, prescribed limitations to the extent of concessions; and that local causes occasioned peculiar restrictions in this respect upon the banks of the great Mississippi, and of the numerous smaller channels through which its waters are discharged. It is probable that an additional concession might be allowed here, as in other situations, in proportion to the means of cultivation, or for the use of an established plantation. Such causes are assigned for enlargement in the instances of Nos. 42 and 43, in class B, but there is no evidence that ranges any of the cases of class A in this category; nor can I determine, for the reason before mentioned, how far the former board of commissioners, or Congress, have been heretofore governed by such considerations.

A reference to class A will show that copies of original concessions, or permissions to settle, are furnished for Nos. 3, 10, 32, and 46, but none for Nos. 25 and 32. The former objections of undefined or excessive quantity, or for extension, (in one case unlimited, except by arbitrary construction,) remain without other explanation than the quoted precedents afford. Testimony is adduced, that No. 10 was inhabited and occupied at least twenty-five years before the cession to the United States, and No. 32 for more than fifty years.

It is not pretended that in class B there exists any written permission to occupy the Nos. 13, 19, 23, and 28, nor any registered warrant or order of survey, for either of them. The surveyor recognises an order for the survey of No. 29, but none is set forth, as it might have been, if registered. The same may be said in regard to No. 47. Nos. 35, 42, and 43, are accompanied by copies of orders to survey. The reasons assigned for surveying a second depth in two cases of this kind have been already mentioned, but none are offered for the excessive contents, uncertain length of lines, and disproportionate dimension of claims, noted in the report of the Committee on Private Land Claims, upon the 10th of February, 1834. The parole evidence of the loss of certain title papers will have notice in another part of this communication.

No new light is cast by this report, upon the circumstances that induced Congress to adopt the recommendation of the committee just alluded to, so far as to refer back certain cases in the class C to the land officers, for further report. The impediments then described to the confirmation, are not removed by the returns before me, unless the force of precedent be considered to have that effect. No evidence is produced to account for the extraordinary quantity claimed in some cases, for the failure to ascertain the length of lines in others, nor for disproportion of form where it occurs. In some respects, the Nos. 220 and 221 may be excepted from the last remarks. The surveyor's plat, presented on this occasion, describes the bearing and length of some of the lines within which one of them is included; no field notes are furnished to test the correctness with which the other is protracted. The scarcity of arable land in these tracts may, perhaps, be thought some justification of the extra pretensions of the claimant in point of extent: but the statutory limitations are unrepealed.

It will be observed, that among the conditions of confirmation, provided by the act of the 2d of March, 1805, there is one that requires the person or persons therein mentioned, to be resident within the ceded territories at the time. No proof of such residence is produced in the cases composing the lists A and B.

The claims in the class C, being founded on the second section of the 3d of March, 1807, it is somewhat remarkable that the required possession for ten consecutive years, prior to the 20th of December, 1803, and actual residence and possession on that day, are not proved, in the simple terms of the law, in any one of the cases under review; but in relation to the possession for ten consecutive years, we are left to discover, by calculation and inference, whether the condition has been complied with. Many of the depositions attest a duration of habitation and cultivation amounting to more than forty years; but in respect to several of the cases of ancient habitation and cultivation, we are left in doubt whether such habitation and cultivation actually embraced the ten consecutive years immediately preceding the 20th of December, 1803. The former commandant, Vernet, deposes to the establishment of several farms on the Bayou La Fourche, several years before the province was transferred, and declares that Nos. 84 and 85 were established while he commanded, but gives no precise dates. No witness proves residence and possession on the 20th of December, 1803, in either of the present cases, save in No. 186, wherein is testified the constant possession of the claimant, and of those under whom he holds, for forty years.

In all cases where it is pretended that titles had been conceded by the authorities of Spain, but the papers to prove them since lost, the evidence appears too slight, vague and indeterminate, to found a decision upon; and, besides, parol evidence does not seem the best of which the nature of the case is susceptible. If concessions or warrants of survey ever existed, they ought to have been recorded in their day; such, I believe, having then been the uniform practice. I conceive, therefore, it may properly be asked, why have not the archives of the colony been searched for more authentic proof?

In consequence of the pressure of other duties of the General Land Office, and of the consideration that confirmations can only affect the claim of the United States, without precluding judicial investigation of conflicting claims of private persons, I have not critically examined the chains of transfer and descent exposed in the report; some of which did not appear very clear upon a cursory perusal. I beg leave, sir, respectfully to remark, that so far at least as the claims of the United States are concerned, the absence of "a perfect transcript" cannot be supplied by the narratives and references to records and documents that sometimes occur in the report, such not being the evidence which the register and receiver were required to lay before the Secretary of the Treasury by the act of last March.

The four recent cases reported for confirmation by the register and receiver, under the act of the 6th of February, 1835, transmitted with their letter, dated on the first of the past December, are unaccompanied by any transcript of an act of concession or order of survey, or any such proof as the aforesaid act of Congress requires.

All which is very respectfully submitted.

ETHAN A. BROWN.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

LAND OFFICE, New Orleans, December 1, 1835.

SIR: By virtue of the second section of the act of Congress, approved 3d of March, 1835, and pursuant to the requisition contained in the letter of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, under date of the 31st of March last, we have the honor of transmitting, herewith, full transcripts of the evidence filed in this office, in support of the claims mentioned and recited in the act of Congress above alluded to, and referred back to us for further report.

In revising the claims in question, and the testimony upon which they are respectively based, we have been at some pains not only to examine the several laws heretofore, at different times enacted, having reference thereto, but also the preceding decisions and reports of record in this office, wherein might be found the interpretations and constructions given to and put upon the provisions of said laws; and we deem it but an act of justice to the highly respectable claimants interested in the issue, and to our immediate predecessors in office, to state that, in almost every instance we have found the claims under consideration supported not only by our construction of the law, but also by precedents immediately in point of the most satisfactory character, and which have been fully established by the formal sanction of Congress.

If, in cases of doubt, where the law or rule appertaining thereto is not sufficiently clear or definite, it be safe and legitimate to be guided by the interpretations by which experience has removed all uncertainty, and established a sure and unerring standard, then have our predecessors, in recommending the abovementioned claims, only acted in conformity with that principle which pervades all the most important transactions of society, and which has so frequently elevated precedent into law.

We feel satisfied that a careful perusal and examination of the evidence above alluded to, will induce you to incline to our view of the question; and although it is not our intention to trespass upon your time and patience by any attempt at a labored argument in support of our position, still we trust that we will be excused for glancing at a few of the excepted or suspended cases mentioned in the report of the committee, and also at a few of the precedents of record in this office already referred to.

In the first place, a number of claims have been suspended, because "no specific depth in arpens, nor any superficial extent," &c., had been designated, &c. On inspection of the books in this office, connected with other circumstances, we feel assured that this must be the first time that Congress has made any exception to claims similarly situated; for we find a large number, precisely the same in character, acted upon, not only by the old board of land commissioners in this district, but also by the registers and receivers who immediately succeeded, and in almost every instance, confirmed unqualifiedly. A few cases will suffice.

1st. The case of Chs. de Villiers, wherein a depth to the lake in the rear was claimed; confirmed by the old board of commissioners, as per decision No. 135.

2d. The case of Bernard Marigny, who claimed a front of twenty-five arpens on the Mississippi, with a depth to Lake Ouachas; confirmed by the board, as per decision No. 350.

3d. The case of Jno. McDonough, who claimed a depth from the Mississippi to Lake Maurepas; reported favorably on by the register in 1816, and confirmed by the Congress May 11, 1820. (No. 406.)

4th. The case of Fanny and Clara Dupré, of the same species, and mentioned in the same report, No. 567.

5th. The cases of Norbert Fortier, mentioned in the same report, Nos. 410, 411, and 412, and confirmed by the same act.

6th. And the case of B. Lafon, who claimed "a tract or point of land situate in the county of Orleans, bounded by Lake Pontchartrain on the north side, and upon the east by Bayou Chef-Menteur," without any specification of quantity; also confirmed by the old board, as per decision No. 316.

In the second place, a few claims have been suspended, because, as to quantity and shape, they "do not seem sanctioned by the usage and custom of the Spanish or French governments," &c. Here, too, precedents are not wanting, as may be seen by reference to the following cases, viz.:

1st. The case of Joseph E. D. Livaudais, whose claims called for three leagues front on Bayou des Allemands by one arpent in depth; confirmed by the old board, as per decision No. 202.

2d. The case of P. de la Ronde, who claimed 168 arpens front on Bayou aux Bœuffs by 5 arpens deep; confirmed by the board, as per decision No. 282.

3d. The case of François Mayronne, who claimed "an island containing two leagues front," without any mention or specification of depth or quantity whatsoever; recommended in the report of the register, dated 6th January, 1821, and confirmed by act of Congress of 28th of February, 1823.

4th. The case of the family Boulté, whose claim called for an island situate in the district of Barrataria, and containing 14 or 15 leagues in circumference, founded principally on ancient possession; recommended in the last-mentioned report, and confirmed in the same manner.

And in the third place, some few are suspended in the report of the committee, because the tracts are owned by the same individual, &c. This objection, it strikes us, is not well founded, particularly as on the most superficial inspection of the decisions and reports above referred to, numerous instances may be adduced where Congress and the proper tribunals have recognized the right of individuals to more than one tract at the same time.

The cases above quoted as precedents form a small number of those of a similar character with which the books in this office abound. Many of them, it is true, cannot be brought literally within the strict limits of some of the various enactments applicable to the subject, but it was properly deemed necessary and just by those who were called upon to act in the matter, to be guided and influenced by the strong equity growing out of the peculiar claims presented. In a country like this, which has from time to time passed and repassed from under the domination of one government to that of another, and been subjected to the changing influences of the various and ever-shifting laws and regulations of each, a very little experience in our land claims is sufficient to convince any one of the difficulty of drawing, with strict precision, the lines of demarcation between the many degrees and classes of claims upon which Congress has attempted so often to legislate.

Be this, however, as it may, one thing is certain, that almost all the claims which have been sent back to us for further report are marked and distinguished by strong features of genuineness and equity, and on examination will be found to be completely within the limits so fully established by the many precedents above cited, and which, we have authority for saying, were considered by our predecessors and those interested as sure and unerring guides.

We forbear dilating any further on the topic, as the accompanying evidence will, no doubt, remove every obstacle which may have been in the way of a speedy and final adjustment of the suspended claims in question, and will be the means, it is to be hoped, of vesting in the highly respectable claimants interested, by a surer tenure, those titles which they have so long been induced to look upon as their own, by every principle of justice and equity. All which is most respectfully submitted.

We remain, with sentiments of deep respect, sir, your most obedient servants,

B. Z. CANONGE, Register.

Notice of claim of Simon Cucullu, sr.

To HILARY B. CENAS, Register of the Land Office at New Orleans, and WM. L. ROBESON, Receiver of Public Moneys, for the southeastern district of Louisiana, at New Orleans:

The notice of claim of Simon Cucullu, sr., of the city of New Orleans, represents:

That he is the owner of a certain tract of land, or plantation, situate in the parish of St. Bernard, county of Orleans, on the east bank of the river Mississippi, about eight miles below the city of New Orleans, containing nineteen arpens and twelve toises in front, and a depth extending back as far as the lake; bounded above by the plantation of Mr. Villére, and below by that of Mr. Ducros, as will more fully appear by a plan thereof, executed by L. Bringier, surveyor general, on the 23d of April, 1827, herewith presented.

That said plantation was purchased by the present claimant, from Charles Jermonville de Villiers, by an act passed before Felix de Armas, esq., notary public, on the 9th day of February, 1830, and was confirmed to the said De Villiers, by the board of commissioners, for the eastern district of the late Territory of Orleans; with the exception only of the extension of depth to the lake, lying immediately back of the first depth of six arpens front of said land or plantation, which was rejected by said board for want of sufficient evidence of title, all which will appear by reference to Decision No. 135, on said claim, recorded at page 83, of the book of decisions, &c., in the custody of the register of the land office, aforesaid.

That since said rejection, a complete grant has been discovered, for said extension of depth, made by the said French government to Robert Gautier de Montreuil, on the 14th day of June, 1767, a duly certified copy of which grant is herewith presented.

Wherefore, this claimant prays, the premises considered, that the documents herewith presented in support of his claim to the extension of depth to the lake, lying immediately in the rear of the first depth of said six arpens front, may be duly recorded, and his said claim now confirmed to him.

NEW ORLEANS, September 20, 1832.

Concession of land to Robert Gautier de Montreuil.

JUNE 14, 1767.

CHARLES PHILIPPE AUBRY, Chevalier de l'ordre Royal et Militaire de St. Louis, Commandant pour le Roi à la Louisiane, et DENIS NICOLAS FOUCAULT, faisant les fonctions d'ordeur, en cette province:

Vu l'exposé en la requête en l'autre part du Sieur Robert Gautier de Montreuil, officier réformé des troupes de la marine ci-devant entretenus en cette colonie, nous lui avons concédé et concédons par les presentes ce qui reste de terre vacante entre le Lac Borgne et l'extrémeté de son habitation située à environ deux lieux au dessous et du même côté de cette Ville en suivant le prolongement de ses limites, pour par lui et ses hoirs ou ayant cause en jouir et disposer en toute proprieté et usufruit. Comme de chose á eux appartenant; sauf titres ou possession antérieurs á ce contraires. Et à la charge de payer les droits seigneureux, si quelques uns sont par la suite établis en cette sus dite province. Nous en réservons d'ailleurs pour sa Majesté, tous et chacun les bois nécéssaires pour construction de forts, magasins, et autres ouvrages qu'elle a ordonnés ou pourra ordonner á l'avenir, même pour le Radout et Carene de ses Vaisseaux, toute fois et quantes il en sera besoin, ainsi que le terrain nécéssaire pour chemins royaux et fortifications.

Donné á la Nouvelle Orleans, sous les sceaux de nos armes et le contreseings de nos secretaires, le quatorze Juin, mil sept cent soixante-sept.

Signé, AUBRY ET FOUCAULT.
Contre-signé, SOUBIE ET DUVERGE.

LAND OFFICE, New Orleans.

I, Hilary B. Cenas, register of the land office, for the eastern district of Louisiana, do hereby certify the foregoing to be a true copy taken from the records, now in my possession, of the patented concessions, made by the French government, of lands situated within the late province of Louisiana, (book No. 1, page 198.)

In faith whereof, I hereunto subscribe my name at New Orleans, this 22d day of January, 1831.

Avril 22, 1799.—Concession faite par le conseil de la Régie de la province de la Louisiana, d'un morceau de 15 arpens de face snr une profondeur de 40 arpens, au Sieur Bertrand Jaffre.

Procès verbal de l'arpentage de six arpens de face que Mr. Montreuil céde au bas de sa terre à Mr. Chabert, en échange de pareille quantité que celuici donne au premier au haut de la même terre, 11 Novembre, 1777.

Je soussigné Capitaine d'infanterie et second aide-major de place à la Nouvelle Orleans, chargé par la commission du gouvernment des fonctions d'ingénieur at d'arpenteur en cette province de la Louisiane, certifie m'être aujourd'hui, onze Novembre, 1777, transporté à la réquisition de Messieurs Montreuil et Chabert, à limite metoyema entre leur habitations réciproques, situées a deux lieux et demie environ au dessous et du même bord de cette susdite capitaine pour arpenter, borner ét livrer à mon dit Sieur Chabert, les six arpens d'en bas de la terre de mon dit Sieur Montreuil, sur deux limites paralleles. Et sur toute la profondeur jusqu'au lac que mon dit Sieur Montreuil donne à mon dit Sieur Chabert, en échange d'une pareille quantité de six arpens de face, aussi jusqu'au lac, que ce dernier donne au premier, attenant à sa limite d'en haut d'une part, et à celle de l'habitation de Mr. Morant l'ainé, et qu'il a acquise de Mr. Augustin Macarty ci-devant mousquetaire à l'effet de quoi j'ai oppéré ainsi qu'il suit.

J'ai d'abord établie le grasomètre au pied intérieur de la levée sur le prolongement de la limite actuellement mitoyenne entre mes dits Sieurs Chabert et Montreuil, que j'ai trouvé couranten profondeur à vingt-cinq degrés du nord vers l'est, et dont le premier borne s'est trouvé coupê de pourriture à fleur de terre; de ce point j'ai tiré une perpendiculaire à la dite limite, courant vers de haut du fleuve à soixante-cinq degrés du nord vers l'ouest, sur la qu'elle ligne j'ai mesuré less six arpens, ou cent quatra-vingt toises de face au fleuve, que Mr. Montreuil céde à Mr. Chabert, au bout de laqu'elle j'ai tiré une autre ligne vers la profondeur perpendiculaire, ou d'équerre à la sus dite ligne de mesurage, c'est à dire paralele à la sus dite limite d'embas, et dans cette nouvelle ligne courant par conséquent en profondeur à vingt-cinq degrés du nord vers l'est, j'ai fait planter deux bornes de bois de cypre, de dix pieds de longeur chacune; la première est vieille et porte sept pouces quarré de grosseur, elle est appointée d'un pied à son sommet, s'est percée de deux grandes mortoises, dont une sur la face vers le bois, et l'autre sur le coté vers le bas du fleuve; elle a aussi diverses autres entailles et mortoises à son pied, qui est planté de deux pieds et demi en terre à une arpent, ou trente toises de distance du bord actuel du fleuve, et la seconde de six pouces et demi quarrés de grosseur, avec flage sur le quatre angles et pointe, aussi d'un pied au sommet, et est également plantée de deux pieds et demi de profondeur à cinquantes toises, c'est à dire, à un arpent deux tiers en arriére de la précédente.

En foi de quoi j'ai dréssé le present procés verbal, que j'ai signé avec mes dits Sieurs Montreuil et Chabert à l'habitation de ce dernier, les jour, mois, et an, énonces en tête du présent.

PIERRE CHABERT,
ANDRY R. MONTREUIL.

Mr. Simon Cucullu, sr., became the proprietor of the plantation mentioned and described in his foregoing notice of claim, by virtue of a purchase he made of the same, by an act of sale executed before Felix de Armas, esq., a notary public in this city, on the 9th day of February, 1830. In which said act of sale the said plantation is described as follows:

Premièrement, une habitation establie en Sucrerie, situé à environ deux lieues et demie au dessous, et du même bord de la ville de la Nouvelle Orleans, ayant de dix-neuf à vingt arpens de face au flueve sur une profondeur, s'étendant jusqu'au lac Borgne, dans la partie d'en bas, et jusqu'aux proprié es de Mr. Barthelmy Lafore, au Chef Manteur, dans la partie d'en haut, bornée du coté d'en haut par Messieurs R. pos. Ducros et P. A. Ducros, ensemble tous les établissements, constructions, et améliorations faits sur la dite habitation, circonstances, et dépendances sans exception.

A—No. 10.

Notice of claim of Pierre Gervais Arnould.

To the Register of the Land Office and Receiver of Public Moneys in and for the southeastern district of Louisiana, at New Orleans, notice of claim of Pierre Gervais Arnould, of the parish of Jefferson, represents:

That he is the proprietor of a certain tract of land, (upon which he resides,) situate in said parish of Jefferson, on the east bank of the river Mississippi, about three leagues above the city of New Orleans, containing about six arpens front, by a depth to Lake Pontchartrain; bounded above by land belonging to the widow and heirs of the late M. de Labare, and below by the land of M. d'Aguire.

The said tract of land is claimed in virtue of a regular grant made thereof by Governor De Bienville to Joseph Chavin Delery, on the 22d of October, 1723; from which latter, it has descended to the present owner and claimant, by a series of regular deeds of conveyance, as will more fully appear, by reference to the documents herewith presented.

Wherefore, this claimant prays, the premises considered, that the said documents, by him produced in support of his said claim, may be duly recorded, and a favorable report made thereon, as provided by the act, now in force for the final adjustment of land claims in this district, approved 4th July, 1832.

January 30, 1833.

Les Commandants et Directeurs Generaux de la Louisiane:

Sur la demande qui nous à été faite par Joseph Chauvin Delery de lui vouloir accorder la concession d'un terrain situé aux environs de la Nouvelle Orleans, le long du fleuve Mississippi, territoire de Choupitoulas, de six arpens de front, sur la profondeur courant jusqu'au Lac Ponchartrain, tenant d'une part au Sieur Legoix, et d'autre au Sieur Beaulieu, pour y faire une habitation.

Nous en conséquence de nos pouvoirs avons concédé et concédons au dit Chauvin le terrain ci-dessus expliqué pour par lui, ses hoirs ou ayant cause, en jouir, en plaine propriété à condition d'y faire travailler et défricher et en a la charge de payer les droits seigneuriaux si aucun s'etablissent, ci après lequel terrain à vente la limite le plutot que faire se pourra, pour le procès verbal de ces présentes être envoyé en France à Messieurs les directeurs généraux de la Compagnie d'Occident, pour être confirmée et expedié concession en forme sous les dites conditions. Faite à l'Isle Dauf^me. le 24 Avril, 1719.

BIENVILLE HUBERT LARCEBAULT.

Le Sieur Delery:

Enregistré par nous greffier en chef au conseil superieur de la province de la Louisiane, au reg^re. fol. 29, v^o. en consequence de l'ordonnance du conseil à la Nouvelle Orleans, le 22 Octobre, 1723.

ROSSARD, Greffier.

Pardevant le notaire royal de la province de la Louisiane, résidant à la Nouvelle Orleans, en présence des témoins soussignés, furent presents en leurs personnes, Sieurs Antoine Chauvin Desistere, et Dame Charlotte Faucon Dumanoir son éspouse, qu'il autorise à l'effet des présentes, les quels ont vendus, cédés, quittés, transportés, et delaissés des maintenant à toujours et promettent garantier de tous troubles, dont, douaires, dettes, hypotheques, evictions, substitutions, et autres empechements. Generallement quelques conques au Sieur François Pascalis de la Barre, ici présent, et acceptant une habitation size aux Chapitoulas, attenant d'un côté à l'habitation de la succession de feu M. Chauvin de Beaulieu, et de l'autre à M. De Lalande, consistant en six arpens de face jusques au Lac pour la profondeur, avec toutes les maisons, batimens, et barraques, qui sont dessus, circonstances et dependances, dont il sera fait inventaire, entre les parties, et dont le dit sieur acquereur est contant pour avoir le tout vû et visité, lui en faisant le dits sieur et dame vendeurs toute cession et transport necessaire de fond en comble sans en rien reserver n'y retener; à la reserve des orangers qui sont dessus, que les dits sieur et dame vendeurs feront enlever quand bon leur semblera et jouira le dit sieur acquereur des susdites choses vendues connu d'un bien à lui appartenant ainsi qu'en à joui M. Desglese a qui la susdite habitation est échue par partage de la succession de feu Sieur Joseph Chauvin Delery, son père, et la susdite vente cession et transport ainsi faite sous l'obligation qu'en ont faits le dits sieur et dame vendeurs d'en rapporter permission de M. l'Ordonateur, avec les trois publications ordinaires, et moyenant le prix et somme de douze mille livres en espéces sonnantes, ou en le mandat d'exchange sur Ms. les Trésoriers Généraux de la Marine qui mon dit Sieur de la Blane promet et s'oblige de payer dans un an de ce jour au dit Sieur Desiletz a été convenu que faute du dit payement dans le susdit terme mon dits sieur et dame vendeurs rentreront dans leurs habitations, batimens, circonstances, et dépendances, sans aucune difficulté ni méme aucune demande en justice et pour dédommagement desquelles terres mon dit Sieur de la Blane promet et s'oblige de payer au sieur vendeur la somme de mille livres, tant pour tenir lieu de dédommagement que de la not jouissance de la dite habitation, comme aussi s'oblige le sieur acquereur de rendre les choses au même etat qu'elles se trouvent aujourd'hui qu'il se met en possession suivant le dit inventaire que sera annexé à la minute des présentes, et en outre mon dits Sieur et Dame Desiletz ont pareillement par ces dites présentes baillé à titre de loyer, et prix d'argent à mon dit Sieur de la Barre pour lui faciliter les travaux de la dite habitation, la quantité de vingt-sept négres ou négresses, &c.

Pardevant le notaire royal de la province de la Louisiane, résidant a la Nouvelle Orleans, et en présence des témoins soussignés, fut présent en sa personne le Sieur François Pascalis de la Barre acquéreur d'une habitation provenant de M. Antoine Chauvin Desillets, située aux Chapitoulas, suivant le contrat passé pardevant nous N^or^, sous le douze Février dérnier, lequel contrat communiqué à M. François Marie Joseph Hazur, capitaine d'une compagnie detachée de la (comme aussi) Marine, entretenue en cette colonie; mon dit Sieur de la Barre en a par les présentes fait retrocession à mon dit Sieur Haznr aux mêmes charges et conditions que lui en avait fait mon dit Sieur Desillets sans en rein reserver n'y retenir tous de la dite terre consistant en six arpens de face sur la profondeur jusques au lac, avec tous ses batimens qui sont dessus, circonstances, et dependances sans en rien reserver n'y retenir de fond en comble ainsi que mon dit Sieur Desillets lui en avait lessée moyenant le prix et somme de douze mille livres, payable dans le courant de Février de l'année prochaine 1750, lesquelles clauses et conditions mon dit Sieur Hazur qui du tout a pris communication, s'est bien et volontairement mis en son lieu et place pour faire les payments à mon dit Sieur Hazur de rendre et payer la dite somme de douze mille livres au dits Sieur et Dame Desilletz que mon dit Sieur de la Barre promet de faire agréer et ratifier par mon dit Sieur Desilletz de qui il le pourra attendre le même du dit Sieur.

A été en outre convenu entre mon dit Sieur de la Barre et mon dit Sieur Hazur, qu'il prendra possession de la dite terre dans tout le courant de Decembre prochain que même. Il pourra y envoyer plutot ses négres pour travailler à la dite terre. Le dit Sieur de la Barre, ne se réservant jusquén Decembre, que pour avoir le tems de faire sa récolte entiere qu'il pourra faire enlever, attendu que le dit Sieur Hazur ne pourra éxiger du dit Sieur de la Barre que les choses que lui ont été vendues par le dit Sieur Desilletz, sans entrer dans ce qui concerne le loyer et utensils de négres et autres objets, les quels il sera resté de remettre au dit Sieur et Dame Desilletz et lui payer les dits loyers ainsi qu'ils sont convenus davance, promet s'obligeant chacun en droit son ren^n^.

Notice of claim of Magloire Guichard.

To the Register of the Land Office and Receiver of Public Moneys in and for the southeastern district of Louisiana, at New Orleans.

The notice of claim of Magloire Guichard, of the parish of St. Bernard, and State of Louisiana, aforesaid, represents:

That he is the owner, by virtue of purchase, of a certain tract of land, with all the buildings and improvements thereon, situate in the said parish of St. Bernard, on the east side of the river Mississippi, about nine miles below the city of New Orleans; which said tract of land contains twelve arpens in front, by the ordinary depth of forty arpens, with the exception of the upper two arpens front, which has a depth to the lake, and is bounded above by the plantation of Mr. Celistin Chapella, and below by that of the Messrs. Phillippon.

The said tract of land, described as above, is claimed in virtue of two original grants, made and completed, in due form, by the French government, while in possession of the province of Louisiana, to wit: one to Jacob Corbin Bachemin, for thirty arpens of land front, by the ordinary depth, dated the 23d day of March, 1765, and of which the said above-described tract makes a part: and one to Jousset de Laloire, dated 2d January, 1767, for an extension of depth to Lake Borgne, and of which the additional depth in the rear of the first or ordinary depth of the above-mentioned two upper arpens front, makes part: all which will more fully appear by reference to the documents herewith presented.

Wherefore, the said claimant prays, that the said evidence of his claim may be duly recorded, and a favorable report made thereon, as provided by the act of Congress, now in force, for the final adjustment of land claims in this district, approved 4th July, 1832.

NEW ORLEANS, April 12, 1833.

MAGRE. GUICHARD.

Concession.

Mars 23, 1765.

Charles Philippe Aubry, ch^er^ de l'ordre royal et militaire de St. Louis, commandant pour le Roi à la Louisiane, et Denis Nicolas Foucault, faisant les fonctions d'ordonnateur en cette province. Sur la demande que le Sieur Jacob Corbin Bachemin, ancien officer d'infanterie, nous a faite de lui concéder une terre de trente arpens de face bordant le fleuve St. Louis, ou Mississippi, sur la profondeur ordinaire de quarante arpens, à prendre de la borne de celle du Sieur Laloir son beau-pere, en descendant au dessous et du même côté de cette ville; et vû l'éxpose en sa requette et le certificat de Mr. Amelot, Ingenieur en cette colonie, le tout ci contre.

Nous lui avons concédé, et concédons par les présentes, de la dite terre, vingt arpens seulement de face au dit fleuve, à prendre de la dite borne, sur la profondeur ordinaire de quarante arpens, pour par lui et ses hoirs, ou ayant cause, en jouir et disposer en toute propriété et usufruit comme de chose à eux appartenant, sauf des titres ou possession antérieurs à ce contraires: aux conditions, que sous un an de ce jour il y formera l'établissement qu'il se propose, à défaut de quoi le dit tems passé, ils seront réunis au domain du roi, qui pourra en disposer comme si la présente concession n'avait pas été accordée, et à la charge de payer les droits seigneurieaux, si quelques-uns sont par la suite établis en cette dite province. Nous en réservons d'ailleurs pour sa Majesté tous et chacuns les bois nécéssaires pour construction de forts, magazins, et autres ouvrages qu'elle à ordonner ou ordonnera à l'avenir, même pour le radout et carêne de ses vaisseaux toutes fois, et quantes il en sera besoin, ainsi que le terrain nécéssaire pour chemins royaux et fortifications. Quant aux airs de vents qui doivent limiter les dits vingt arpens de face, ils seront réglés par bornes qu'on plantera à cet effet dont on dressera procés verbal qui sera annexé aux présentes après qu'elles auront été régistrées à notre registre concessions.

Donné à la Nouvelle Orleans, sous les sceaux de nos armes, et les contre seings de nos secrétaires, le vingt-trois Mars, mil sept cent soixante-cinq.

Signé AUBREY & FOUCAULT.
Contre-signé SOUBIE & DUVERGE.

Notice of claim of Widow François Pascalis La Barre.

NEW ORLEANS, June 7, 1833.

To the Register of the Land Office and Receiver of Public Moneys in and for the southern district of Louisiana, at New Orleans:

The notice of claim of the widow of François Pascalis La Barre, of the parish of Jefferson, represents:

That she is the owner of a certain tract of land, situate in the said parish of Jefferson, on the east or left bank of the river Mississippi, about three leagues above the city, containing twenty arpens front, by a depth extending back to Lake Pontchartrain; and bounded above by the lands of Norbert Fortier, sr., and below by those of Gervais Arnould. The said tract of land is claimed in virtue of a possession formerly recognized at different times by the French government, when exercising dominion over the late province of Louisiana, and is, without doubt, part of a larger tract anciently in the possession of M. Le Breton, who obtained by formal concession from Governor Kerlerec, an extension of depth to the same, as far back as Lake Pontchartrain, on the 6th of October, 1767; which said concession, and the petition upon which it is based, are recorded in full in a book belonging to the archives of your office, entitled, "Book No. 1, French Concessions. at pages 54 and 57;" and in which concession, part of said land is mentioned as having been in the possession of the family of Lafrenière. If further evidence of antiquity of possession be necessary, the claimant would further call your attention to a plan of part of the coast above this city, executed by Broutin, surveyor general of the province, and dated February 5, 1728, on which the tract above claimed is laid down and marked as belonging at that time, part to Lafrenière, and part to Demoutry.

The said land was purchased by the claimant and her late husband, part on the 16th of August, 1771, and part from Duval Demoutry, on the 13th May, 1811, and has been constantly and uninterruptedly inhabited and cultivated for upward of fifty years. In support of all which, she herewith produces full and authentic evidence as required by law, which she prays may be duly recorded, &c.

A—No. 38.

Notice of claim of William Gormley, Jacques Encalada, and others.

To the Register and Receiver of the Land Office in and for the southeastern district of Louisiana, at New Orleans:

William Gormley, Jacques Encalada, and others, claim by virtue of purchase, a certain tract of land, or island, situate in the parish of Jefferson, district of Barrataria, called the island of "Chetimachas," but more generally known by the name of "Cheniére Caminada," containing about one hundred and twenty-six arpens front, on the bay of Caminada, with the whole depth, according to the original grant, to the Bayou of the West.

The said island was granted by the French government, in due and complete form, to Monsieur Du Roullin, on the 6th of August, 1763, from whom it descended, through a series of regular conveyances, to Alexander Harang, under which latter claimants now hold also in virtue of regular conveyances.

Wherefore, they pray that the said grant, which is herewith presented, may be duly recorded, etc., according to the acts of Congress, in such cases made and provided.

Louis de Kerlerec, Chevalier de l'ordre Royal et Militaire de St. Louis, Capitaine des Vaisseaux du Roi, Gouverneur de la Province de la Louisiane, et Jean Jacques Blaise Dabbadie, Conseiller du Roi dans ses Conseils, Commissaire Général de la Marine, Ordonnateur en la dite Province:

Vu l'exposé en la présente requête en vertu sa des pourvoirs qu'il a plú à Majesté nous départir, nous avons concédè, et concédons par les présentes, au Sieur Roullin, officier des troupes en cette colonie, les terres appellés, La Chenière, au lieu appellé La Fourche des Chetimachas, ayant cent vingt-six arpens de face sur toute la profondeur qu'il y aura jusques au bayou qui s'y trouve dans la partie de l'ouest, ainsi quel'ile nommée de la Saline, situé sur le lac dépendant de la dite Fourche des Chetimachas, et éloigné des dites terres, d'environs cinq quarts de lieu, suivant le relevé ci-joint, certifié de Monsieur de Chermont, ingénieur en cette colonie, des quels cent vingt-six arpens de terre de face, et dit isle, qui suivant le dit relevé, a trente deux arpens de face sur douze de profondeur, le dit Sieur Roullin ainsi que ses hoirs, ou ayant cause, pourront jouir et disposer en toute propriété et usufruit, comme d'un bien à lui appartenant, aux conditions que dans vingt mois de ce jour, que nous lui accordons en considération de leur éloignement de cette ville, il les mettra en valeur et rapport; à défaut de quoi, le dit tems passé, le tout sera reuni au domaine du Roi, qui pourra en disposer comme si la présente concession n'avait pas été accordée, et à la charge de payer les droits signeurieux, si quelques-uns sont par la suite établie en cette province. Nous en réservons d'ailleurs pour sa Majesté, tous et chacuns les bois nécéssaires pour construction de forts, magazins, ou autres ouvrages qu'elle a ordonnée, ou pourra ordonner à l'avenir, même pour le radout et carène de ses navires toutes fois, et quantes il en sera besoin, ainsi que le terrain nécéssaire pour chemins royaux et fortifications.

Donné à la Nouvelle Orleans, sous les sceaux de nos armes, et contreseing de nos Sécrétaires, le six Août, mil sept cent soixante trois.

KERLEREC et DABBADIE.

Et plus bas est écrit,

Par mon Seigneur, SOUBIE.
Par mon Seigneur, DURAGE.

Alexander Harang held the whole island of Caminada (or "Chetimachas,") in virtue of an act of sale made by the sheriff of the parish of Orleans, dated the 12th of June, 1810, for the one half of said island, in a suit of Robert Ellis, syndic or assignee of the estate of Nicholas Lynch vs. James Workman, who held the same in virtue of an act of sale from Honoré Fortier and Paschal Paillet, passed before the late Pierre Pedesclaux, notary public, on the 26th day of June, 1807, and the other half as sole syndic of the said Honoré Fortier, with full power to sell and do all acts in the same manner as he could do, as will be seen by reference to the proceedings of the insolvent in the parish court of this city, dated the 11th day of April, 1811. Honoré Fortier and Paschal Paillet held the whole island by purchase of Prosper Prieur, testamentary executor of Francis Caminada, per act passed before the late Charles Ximenes, notary public of this city, dated the 3d day of November, 1800, the said island of Chenière, or Caminada, measuring about one hundred and twenty-six arpens front, with the whole depth of the bayou of the west. Francis Caminada held the said island of Chenière from Monsieur Du Roullin, who sold it to him on the 16th day of March, 1769. Monsieur Du Roullin held under an original grant made to him by persons exercising the government of Louisiana, in the name of the King of France, on the 6th day of August, 1763, as will appear by reference to the registry of the land office of the United States in this city, and by virtue of a judgment of the supreme court of the late Territory of Orleans, in the cause of Honoré Fortier and Paschal Paillet vs. Paul Pierre Gaudin, rendered the 28th day of June, 1807.

B—No. 13.

To the Register of the Land Office and Receiver of Public Moneys, in and for the southeastern district of Louisiana, at New-Orleans, the notice of claim of St. Julien de Tournillion, of the parish of Assumption, represents:

That he is the owner, by virtue of purchase, of a certain tract of land situate in the said parish of Assumption, and being and lying immediately in the rear, and forming the second depth thereof, of a front tract, also owned by him, of about five arpens and seven toises front on the right bank of Bayou Lafourche, by the usual depth of forty arpens; which said back tract or second depth contains an area of fifteen hundred and twenty arpens, or twelve hundred and eighty-six acres, according to a plat of survey thereof, executed by Walker Gilbert,

P. D., surveyor, and recorded at page 135, of "Register C. No. 3, of the county of Lafourche," belonging to, and forming part of the archives of your office.

The claim to the above described back tract is principally founded on a petition or "requete," to the commandant of the district within which it lies, in 1802, which petition was granted, and was presented to the former board of commissioners for this district by Bernardo de Deva, then owner of the land, but was rejected by the said board, on the ground that the claimant had produced "no evidence whatever of an actual settlement of the land," all which will appear by reference to the decision of said commissioners, No. 451, and the documents as recorded under said claim, at pages 135 and 136 of the above mentioned "Register C—No. 3."

The present claimant, who holds under the said De Deva, by virtue of regular conveyances, now produces authentic proof of the settlement and cultivation of the land in question, on or before the 20th December, 1803, and prays that the same may be duly recorded, and a favorable report made on said claim, as now presented, according to the different laws of Congress, in such cases made and provided.

B—No. 19.

To the Register of the Land Office, and Receiver of Public Moneys, in and for the southeastern district of Louisiana, at New Orleans, the notice of claim of Jean Louis Gaston Villars, of the parish of East Baton Rouge, represents:

That he is the owner of a certain tract of land, situate in the parish of Jefferson and district of Barrataria, about thirteen leagues distant from the city of New Orleans, which said tract contains about five leagues front on the Bayou Dupont, by about three arpens in depth, and is bounded on one side by the Rigolets, and on the other by the Bayou St. Denis.

The said tract of land was anciently the property of Claude Joseph Villars Dubreuil, ancestor of the present claimant, and of his wife, Marie Peyeur, which latter died about the year 1754, and at whose death an inventory of the property belonging to the community which existed between her and her said husband, was taken in due form by the proper authorities, by and with the sanction of the government; in which inventory, (bearing date the 27th of May, 1754,) the said tract of land now claimed is included as forming part of said community property. The said tract of land has, moreover, been constantly inhabited and cultivated for the last forty-five years.

In support of all which, he, the claimant, herewith produces full and authentic evidence, as required by law, which he prays may be duly recorded; and he further prays for a favorable report on his said claim, as provided by the act of Congress, now in force for the final adjustment of land claims in this district, approved July 4, 1832.

NEW ORLEANS, June 1, 1833.

François Huchet de Kernion, conseiller assesseur au conseil supérieur de la Louisiane, commissaire en cette partie, en présence de M. J. B. Raguet, conseiller du roi au dit conseil, y faisant les fonctions de Procureur Général, et assisté du notaire royal en la dite Provence, à la requête du Sieur Claude Joseph Villars Dubreuil, et en présence, 1° de Dame Felicité de Lachaise, veuve de M. Louis V. Dubreuil, et tutrice des sept enfans minuers d'elle et au dit feu Sieur son mari, petits enfans de la dite defunte Dame Villars Dubreuil; 2° du Sieur Jacques Lachaise, garde des magasins du roi, conseil de la dite Dame Veuve Villars Dubreuil, et oncle maternel de ses dits enfans minuers; 3° et du Sieur Claude Joseph Villars Dubreuil, fils de la dite dame defunte Villars Dubreuil, et subrogé tuteur des dits sept mineurs Villars Dubreuil. Le dit inventaire en date du 27 Mai, 1754; a été litteralement extrait ce qui suit.

Item. Quatre habitations distantes de douze lieues de la Nouvelle Orleans, passant par le canal, lesquelles contiennent savoir:

L'Ile de Barrataria de quinze lieues de tour. Une habitation en face de la dite Ile, de quatre lieues de face sur deux de profoundeur. Une autre habitation au dit lieu acquise du Sieur Dauphin, d'une lieue face de sur deux de profondeur. Une autre terre au dit lieu acquise du Sieur Le Bretton, d'une lieue de face sur deux de profondeur. Sur lesquelles terres il ya deux vacheries, une maison de charpente, couverte en bardeaux, qui n'est point entourée et trois cabanes à négres. Les dites terres non estimées, mises ici pour mémoire.

Item. Une autre liasse de papiers contenant la concession de l'Ile de Barrataria et des terres vis-á-vis la dite Ile. Le titre de concession á M. Le Bretton d'une terre á Barrataria echangé au dit Sieur Dubreuil. Celle du nommé Kentrok dit dupont d'une terre acquise par le dit Sieur Dubreuil.

Et les pièces concernant les terres situées au dit lieu, acquises de nommé Dauphin père et fils.

Item. Une concession de terre au Canal de Barrataria pendant deux lieues de longuer sur vingt arpens de face.

Extrait par moi, Louis T. Caire, notaire public pour la vilete et paroisse de la Nouvelle Orleans, dûment commissionné et assermenté sur la minute du dit inventaire etant en ma possession.

LOUIS T. CAIRE, Notaire Public.

De l'inventaire après le décès de Mr. Claude Joseph Villars Du Breuil, capitaine des Milices, le quel a été fait par Mr. Nicolas Chauvin de Lafreniere, conseiller assesseur au conseil superieur de la province de la Louisiane, et commissaire en cette partie, assisté de M. Raguet, procureur général de Roi, et de Mr. Garrie, avocat et notaire royal, à la requête de Mr. Claude Joseph Villars Du Breuil, fils de Dame Félicité de Lachaise, veuve de Mr. Louis Du Breuil, au nom et comme tutrice des Dames Félicité Amelot et Rose Dessalles, Louis Joseph Jacques et Raimond Du Breuil, ses enfans mineurs; assistée du Sieur Jacques Delachaise, garde de magazin du Roi, son conseil, élu par avis de parens homologué au conseil superieur; les dits Sieur Claude Joseph Villars Du Breuil fils, et mineurs Du Breuil, habiles à se porter héritiers de dit défunt Sieur Claude Joseph Villars Du Brsuil, encore le dit Sieur Claude Joseph Villars Du Breuil fils ayant agé, en qualité d'éxécuteur du testament du dit feu Sieur Villars Du Breuil, son pêre, réçu par Garie, notaire royal, le six Octobre, 1757; et encore en présence du Sieur Amelot, comme ayant épousé Demoiselle Fèlicité Du Breuil, et du Sieur Dessalles, comme ayant Demoiselle Rose De Breuil. Le dit inventaire en date au commencement du 15 Octobre, 1757, a été litteralement extrait ce que suit:

Item. Une liasse contenant un titre de concession de la terre du Canal Barrataria; un billet du Sieur Artaud, de cinquante quatre quarts de mays et vingt-un de fèves; un billet du Sieur Alexandre, en faveur du Sieur Assailly de trois cent vingt-cinq livres, en date du 3 Août, 1739.

La dite liasse cotée M * * * * * ci * M *

Une liasse contenant les concessions de Barrataria, dont cinq pièces cotées No. 48, ci * * * * 48.

Et le dix septiéme jour du mois de Janvier, 1758, nous sommes transportés sur l'isle de Barrataria, ou étant avons trouvé.

Premièrement, un canal d'environ une lieue de long, de vingt pieds de large, sur trois pieds de profondeur, que le dit feu Sieur Du Breuil avait fait faire. Le dit Sieur Villars nous ayant déclaré que lors de la cession qui lui a été faite de l'habitation, le dit Sieur Du Breuil s'était réservé un arpent de terre entier pour le courant du cette canal.

Item. Une terre, nommée l'ile Jannette, contenant deux lieues et demie de face sur la rivière de Barrataria, et sur le bayou qui va à la mer. Ci pour mémoire.

Item. Une autre terre vis-à-vis l'ile ci-dessus, contenant demi lieue de face, sur la quelle il n'y à aucun établissement, servant à faire les vivres du négre Vacher * * * pour mémoire.

Item. Nous étant transportés à demi quart de lieue plus haut sur une autre habitation, appellé l'ile Barrataria, avons trouvé sur la dite ile un batiment tombant totalement en ruine, de trente cinq pieds sur vingt de large, couvert en Barrataria, et trois mauvaises cabannes à négres, ou étant le négre Pierrot dejà inventoré; nous aurait déclaré qu'il y aurait sur la dite ile, soixante-dix bêtes, qui n'ont jamais parqué, et marronnes, dans la dite ile. Ci pour mémoire.

L. T. CAIRE, Not. Pub.

Aujourd'hui le quatrième jour du moi de Mai, de l'année 1833, et la cinquante-septième de l'Independance des Etats Unis d'Amerique.

Pardevant Louis T. Caire, notaire public dans et pour la ville et paroisse de la Nouvelle Orleans, dûment commissioné et assermenté, et en présence des témoins ci-après nommé et soussigné.

Fut présent—Mr. J. B. Du Breuil Villars, demeurant paroisse Jefferson, étant présentment en la ville de la Nouvelle Orleans.

"Agissant en son nom personnel, et au nom et comme fondé du pouvoir spécial, á l'effet des présentes, que lui a donné Mr. Bernard Villars, demeurant á Baton Rouge, suivant un écrit sous signature privée, daté de Baton Rouge, le 27 Avril dernier, le quel écrit répresenté par le dit Sieur Du Breuil Villars, est demeuré ci annexé après qu'il la eu certifié veritable, et signé en présence du notaire et des témoins soussignés.

Le quel comparant a, par ces présentes, vendu, cédé, quitté, délaissé, et abandonné dès maintenant et à toujours, et s'est obligé, et a obligé le dit Sieur Villars, son mandant, solidairement entr'eux sans division ni discussion, et leur deux seul tous le tout a garantir de tous troubles, dons, dettes, hypothèques, et autres empêchemens quelconques.

A Mr. Jean Louis Gaston Villars, demeurant à Baton Rouge, étant présentement en la ville de la Nouvelle Orleans, à ce présent et acceptant acquéreur pour lui, ses héritiers et ayant cause, une terre dite de Barrataria, ou de bayou Dupont, située paroisse de Jefferson, dans le district Barrataria, à environs treize lieues de la ville de la Nouvelle Orleans, ayant cinq lieues de face au bayou Dupont, sur une profondeur de trois lieues, s'etendant vers le petit lac; cette terre est bornée par les rigolets et le bayou St. Denis qui forme sa borne inferieure, ensemble tous les édifices qui existent sur la dite terre. Ainsi que la dite terre se poursuit et comporte avec toutes ses appartenances, et telle qu'elle appartient aux vendeurs, sans aucune exception ni réserve. A la quelle terre le dit Sieu Villars, acquereur, n'a pas désiré qu'il fut fait plus de designation, la connaissance parfaitement et en étant content. Cette terre appartient aux dits Sieurs Villars, vendeurs, come l'ayant recuillié dans la succession de feu Mr. Joseph Villars, leur pêre, dont ils sont seuls héritiers chacun pourmoitié.

Le dit feu Sieur Jos. Villars en était proprietaire comme lui ayant été abandonnée par arrangement entervenu il y à environ vingt-huit ans entre lui et ses cohéritiers dans la succession de feu Mr. Claude Joseph Villars Dubreuil son pêre; ainsi que le declare le dit Sieur Dubreuil Villars, comparant l'un des vendeurs, et qu'il est dailleurs à la connaissance du dit Sieur Villars, acquéreur qui n'a pas desiré quil fut fait ici plus d'énoncé sur les titres de propriété de la dite terre, pour par le dit Sieur Villars, aquéreur, ses héritiers et ayant cause, jouir, faire et disposer de la dite terre en pleine et toute propriété comme de chose leur appartenant à compter de ce jour et à l'avenir. Le dit Sieur acquéreur reconnaissant etre en possession et jouissance de la dite terre, depuis quatre ans que la vente ci-dessus realisée avait été convenue entre les parties. La présente vente est faite moyenant le prix et la somme de six cents piastres que le dit Sieur Dubreuil Villars comparant et l'un des vendeurs, reconnait avoir reçu comptant du dit Sieur Villars acquéreur, en espèces ayant cours de monnaie comptées et delivrées hors la vue du notaire et des témoins soussignés et dont en son nom et au dit nom, il donne quittance pure et simple.

Attendu ce payement, le dit Sieur Dubreuil Villars comparant met et subroge en son nom et au dit nom, le dit Sieur Villars acquereur, dans tous les droits de propriété et autres que les dits vendeurs ont et peuvent avoir sur la dite terre, même dans tous les droits de recours en garantie et actions quelconque qu"ils ont ou pourraient avoir à exercer à raison de la dite terre contre les anciens proprietaires à tel titre et pour telle cause que ce soit, se dessaisissant et dessaisissant son mandant de tous les dits droits sans exception en faveur du dit Sieur Villars acquéreur, voulant qu'il en soit saisi et puisse en user, faire et disposer en leur lieu et place, et ainsi qu'ils auraient du faire, en toute propriété au moyen des présentes.

Le dit Caire notaire soussigné ayant demandé aux parties comparantes du lui representer le certificat du conservateur des hypothéques de la paroisse de Jefferson dans la quelle est située la terre ci-dessus vendue, elles ont déclaré qu'elles n'avaient pas ce certificat et que cependant elles voulaient. Passer à l'instant même ces présentes, mais qu'elles déchargeraient purement et simplement le dit Caire, de toute obligation que la loi lui impose à cet égard et que même elles sobligent solitairement entr'elles à le garantir de tout événement à ce sujet. Dont acte fait et passé en l'etude a la Nouvelle Orleans les jour, mois et an que dessus, en présence des Sieurs Chs. Ducantel, et Phpe. Lacoste, témoins a ce requis et domiciliés en cette ville, les quels out signé avec les parties et moi notaire aprés l'ecture faite. Signé Gaston Villars, D. Villars, Chs. Ducantel, Phpe. Lacoste.

B—No. 23.

To the Register of the Land Office and Receiver of Public Moneys for the southeastern district of Louisiana, at New Orleans, the notice of claim of Jean Baptiste Degruys, domiciliated in the parish of Jefferson, repre sents :

That he is the true and legitimate owner of a certain tract of land, situated in the aforesaid parish of Jefferson, within the Barrataria district, lying at about six miles from the river Mississippi, at the very place usually called "Les Petites Coquilles," in the Barrataria bayou; which tract of land has an extent of fifteen miles on the left bank of said bayou, and three miles front on the right side, on twenty arpens depth on each side, the same being bounded, on one side, by the lands belonging to Antoine Foucher, and, on the other, by the bayou "Aux Carpes." That the aforenamed claimant bought the said described land from M. François Bouligny, on the 8th of May, 1792, by an authentic act, passed before Antonio Pedro Pedesclaux, then a notary public in the city of New Orleans, a duly certified copy of which is now annexed, which land the seller, François Bouligny, held from a concession duly granted to him by the Spanish government, already recorded in this office.

That the said land has been, for the last fifty years and upward, constantly settled, cultivated, and inhabited by the present claimant and those under whom he holds, as it will more fully appear, from the concordant depositions and testimony of four old and respectable citizens of this State, residing in the aforesaid parish of Jefferson, taken before the parish judge, and herewith annexed.

Wherefore the claimant prays, the premises considered, that the documents herewith presented may be duly recorded, and that his claim, if found to be embraced within the provisions of the laws of Congress for the adjustment of land claims in this district, may receive from you a favorable report for the confirmation of his title to one league square of the above-described land, reserving to himself the right of claiming the balance, and as in duty, &c., &c.

A. GRAILHE, Attorney for Claimant.

En la paroisse de Jefferson dans l'Etat de la Louisiane le 15 Mai, 1833, et dans la 57^{me} de l'Independance des Etats Unis d'Amérique

Pardevant Jean Murville Harang, Juge de paroisse dans et pour la paroisse de Jefferson, exerçant ex officio les fonctions de Notaire Public dans et pour la dite paroisse, y résidant et en présence des témoins ci-après nommés et soussignés.

Sont personellement comparu Messieurs Godfroy Boutté, J. M. Casterede, André Pizanni, et Pierre Coulon, tous quatre anciens proprietaires de cette paroisse, âgés de plus de soixante-cinq ans.

Les quels après avoir été respectivement et dûment assermentés, ont déclaré qu'ils connaissent parfaitement une terre appartenant à M. J. B. De Gruys, située en cette paroisse, dans le district de Barrataria, à environ deux lieues du fleuve Mississippi, à l'endroit appelé les "Petites Coquilles," sur le Bayou Barrataria, la quelle terre ayant sur la guache du dit bayou cinq lieues de face, et sur la droite une lieue, faisant ensemble six lieues des deux bords du dit bayou, sur vingt arpents de profondeur des deux bords, bornée d'un coté par les terres de M. Antoine Foucher, Ju^{r}, et de l'autre coté par le Bayou aux Carpes: la quelle terre à été acquise de M. François Bouligny par Mess^{rs} Françoise Mayronne, et J. B. De Gruys, en l'an 1792, et elle à toujours été habitée, établie et utilisée à partir de l'année 1774, jusqu'à ce jour.

Fait et passé en la paroisse de Jefferson les mêmes jour, mois et an que dessus, en présence des témoins ci-après, Messieurs J^{ques} Charbonnet, Ju^{r}, et L^{s} Lebreton D'Orgenoy domiciliés en cette paroisse qui ont signé avec les comparans et le susdit Juge Notaire. B—No. 29.

To the Register and Receiver of the Land Office in and for the southeastern district of Louisiana, at New Orleans:

Jean Louis Beaulieu, a free man of color, claims, by virtue of purchase, a certain tract of land situate in the parish of Jefferson, at about five miles distant from the city of New Orleans, and containing two arpens front on the bayou Metairie, by a depth on the south side of said bayou, extending to the limits of the Macarty plantation (of about eighteen arpens) and on the north side of the Lake Pontchartrain, bounded above by the land of Marie Pierre Dumouillé, and below by that of Hyacinthe Hazeur.

The said tract of land is the upper half of a larger tract of four arpens front, anciently the property of Don Mateo de Veau y Ines, in favor of whom it was surveyed by special decree, by Don Carlos Trudeau, surveyor general of the late province of Louisiana, in the year 1791. The said half, as above described, is now claimed in virtue of said survey, and of continued and undisputed possession and cultivation by claimant, and those under whom he claims and holds, for upward of fifty years last past. In support of all which he herewith produces said original survey and other evidence, which he prays may be duly recorded, and so reported on as to secure a full confirmation of his claim.

NEW ORLEANS, June 25, 1833.

Certifico el presente plano conforme a la medida hecha en conformidad de los actos de venta y en virtud del decreto del tribunal con fecha del dia 16 del mes de Marzo de 1791, en aquel plano no falta mas que reconocer el punto del limite de la parte del sur.

Jean Louis Beaulieu became proprietor of the land described in his foregoing notice of claim, by virtue of the purchase he made thereof, by an act passed before Peter Pedesclaux, late a notary public in this city, bearing date the 15th July, 1814, in which act the land is described as follows:

Une habitation située à la Maitiree à environ une lieue et un quart de cette ville ayant deux arpens de face de chaque coté du chemin, sur une profondeur jusqu'au Lac Pontchartrain du coté du nord, et jusqu'à la limite de Messieurs Macarty et Lamesse, du coté du sud, bornée d'un coté par Mr. Bousseau et de l'autre par Mr. Demony, ensemble tous les edifices qui y sont construits. Ainsi que cette habitation se poursuit et comporte, sans en rien reserver ni excepter, l'acquereur declarant la bien connaitre, en être content et n'en pas desirer une plus ample designation.

Le Sieur Greffin est proprietaire de cette habitation et de ces deux esclaves au moyen de l'acquisition qu'il en a faite du Sieur Pierre Maspero suivant acte à mon rapport en date du 30 Juin dernier, &c., &c.

To the Register of the Land Office at New-Orleans, and Receiver of Public Moneys; the claim of Elizabeth C. Goddard, residing at Georgetown, in the State of South Carolina, on behalf of her minor children, Thomas H. Goddard, Wm. H. Goddard, F. B. Goddard, P. C. Goddard, M. E. Goddard, and F. M. Goddard, respectfully shows:

That they are the great-grandchildren and only heirs of John Alman, whose name was sometimes spelled Alleman, who died at Alman's Prairie, on the high lands, near Galveston, in the month of March, 1805, as appears by the depositions enclosed.

Your claimant states that an order of survey, and a survey of four hundred and eighty arpens of land, situated on the bayou Manchack, was made by the Spanish government in favor of said Alman. The land has twelve arpens front, by forty in depth, and is bounded below by lands granted to James Smith Marbury. She herewith encloses the order of survey, and prays that her claim and said documents may be enregistered, and the title of her children to said land may be confirmed. As in duty bound, &c.

Senor Gobernador General:

Juan Allemand, habitante del Distrito de Galveztown, con el devido respeto ante V. S. me presento y digo que he tenido la desgracia de perder en el yncendio accurido a esta ciudad, el 21 de Mayo del año pasado de 1788, el primer decreto de rena tierra qui tengo situado en el distrito de Yberville compuesto de doze arpanes de frente, con la profundidad ordinaria de quarenta en el parage llarnado fourche d'Yberville lindando a todas partes a las tierras del dominio de S. M., en cuya atencion se ha de servir V. S. concederme un nuevo titulo de concesion de la referida tierra afin de que pueda gozar de ella libremente en lo sucesivo gracia que espero en just^a de la distributiva q^o V. S. administra.

NUEVA ORLEANS, 9 de Febrero de 1789.

NUEVA ORLEANS, 10 de Febrero de 1789.

El agriminsor de esta provincia Don Carlos Trudeau establecera esta parte sobre los doze arpanes de frente con la profundidad ord^r de quarenta en el parage indicado en el memorial antecedente estando vacantes y no causando perjuicio alguno con las prisisas conditiones de hacer el camino y desmonte regular en el termino perentorio de un año y de quedar nula esta concesion si al expirar el preciso espaco de tres la tierra, no se hallare establecida y de no poder anagenarla en los mismos baxo cuyo sup^to se estenderan à continuacion las dilig^as de apeo que me remetira p^a proveer al interesado del corresp^te titulo en forma.

ESTEVAN MIRO.

I certify the foregoing petition and order of survey to be a true copy of an original document, filed in bundle H, No. 120, among the records deposited in the surveyor general's office, under my charge.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and the seal of my office, in the city of New Orleans, this 17th day of June, eighteen hundred and thirty-third year of our Lord, and the fifty-seventh of the Independence of the United States of America.

State of Louisiana.—First Judicial District Court.

THE HEIRS OF THOS. F. GODDARD, vs. THOS. URQUHART. } 9,137.

Depositions taken under a commission directed to any justice of the quorum, or to any justice of the peace, in Georgetown, State of South Carolina, issued from this court, on the 28th April, 1831.

Mary Hillen, being sworn, answered the interrogatories propounded to her as follows:

1st. I knew Thomas F. Goddard; his mother was Mary Atchinson Alman; she was first married to William Goddard, and after his death, she married John Paisley. They are all dead. I know of no documents to prove the marriages. Thomas F. Goddard was the only issue of the marriage of William Goddard and Mary Atchinson Alman. There were several children by John Paisley, but all died in their infancy.

2d. Jane Baxter was the grandmother of said Goddard. She was first married to Mr. Frazer, and afterward to John Alman. Know of no documents to prove the marriage. The only issue of John Alman and wife, was Mary Atchinson Alman, the mother of said Goddard.

3d. Thomas F. Goddard has been dead twelve months; left a widow and several children; but knows nothing of their names or ages.

4th. I was personally acquainted with all the parties, and know that Thomas F. Goddard was the only descendant of John Alman.

5th. I believe John Paisley returned from Louisiana to South Carolina in 1806; never heard of his bringing anything with him but one hogshead of sugar.

6th. I have stated all I know.

MARY HILLEN.

Answers to cross-interrogations.

1st. All I have stated is from a personal knowledge of the facts.
2d. I have already said I know of no documents.
3d. I am no way related.
4th. Mary Hillen; 62 years of age; live upon my income.
5th. I have no manner of interest.

MARY HILLEN.

Mrs. Elizabeth Blyth, being first sworn, answered the interrogations propounded to her as follows:

1st. I did know Thomas F. Goddard; his mother was Mary Atchinson Alman, who married William Goddard; I know of no documents to prove; she and her husband are both dead; after the death of William Goddard, his widow married John Paisley, who is also dead.

2d. Jane Baxter was the grandmother of said Goddard; she first married a Mr. Frazer, and after his death she married John Alman. Knows of no documents to prove her marriage; she is dead; the only issue of her marriage with John Alman was Mary Atchinson Alman, the mother of said Goddard.

3d. Thomas F. Goddard has been dead about one year; he left six children, names, Thomas Atchinson, William Henry, Francis Benjamin, Peter Cuttino, Mary Elizabeth and Frazer Mathias Goddard; he left a widow named Elizabeth Cuttino; cannot be particular as to the ages of said children.

4th. Mary Atchinson Alman's mother's name was Jane Baxter, who was first cousin to my own mother, and the relationship to the family makes me positive as to the fact of Thomas B. Goddard being the only descendant of John Alman, formerly of Louisiana.

5th. John Paisley did return from Louisiana to South Carolina; cannot tell at what time, neither do I know anything about what he brought with him.

6th. I have stated all that I know that can be of any service.

ELIZABETH F. BLYTH.

Answers to cross-interrogatories.

1st. I know of my own knowledge the truth of the facts I have stated.
2d. I have already answered that I know of no documents.
3d. I have already stated in what degree I am related to the plaintiff, in my answer to the fourth direct nterrogatory.
4th. Elizabeth Frances Blyth; I am 68 years of age, and am engaged in planting.
5th. I have no earthly interest.

ELIZABETH F. BLYTH.

SOUTH CAROLINA, Georgetown District:

Henry Cuttino, being sworn upon the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, deposeth and saith, that he knew the late Thomas F. Goddard; that said Goddard was married, on the 25th of February, 1818, to Elizabeth C. Hutchinson, by the Rev. Lee Compere; the first child of said marriage was a son, born 6th December, 1818, named Thomas Hutchinson Goddard; the second was William Henry Goddard, born 29th September, 1820; the third was Francis Benjamin Goddard, born 24th November, 1822; the fourth was Peter Cuttino Goddard, born 15th January, 1825; the fifth was Mary Elizabeth Goddard, born 15th November, 1827; the sixth was Frazer Mathias Goddard, born 26th August, 1830; all of whom are now living. Thomas F. Goddard died 25th December, 1830. Deponent is uncle to Mr. Goddard, but in no wise interested in the event of the suit. Deponent knows nothing of his own knowledge relative to the marriage of the father and mother of said Goddard, other than he derives from a record kept in a Bible, which has always been considered by the family as their family Bible, and from which the following is extracted:

"William Goddard, the son of Francis and Ann Goddard, was born January 8, 1793, Saturday. William Goddard was married to Miss Mary Atchinson Alman, by Parson Hunter, December 24, 1793. Thomas Frazer Goddard, the son of Mary and William Goddard, was born November 8, 1764."

HENRY CUTTINO.

Henry Cuttino also deposeth to the following as being a true extract from the family record mentioned in the foregoing, to wit: "Mrs. Mary A. Paisley departed this life June 7, 1806;" and also that the following is a correct copy of a memorandum made in the handwriting of Major Savage Smith, who was the administrator of the estate of William Goddard, after the death of John Paisley: "Mrs. Paisley died July, 1806, while Mr. Paisley was at New Orleans, leaving a son, Thomas Frazer Goddard, by her first marriage with William Goddard, of P. D. Mr. Paisley died some time in the month of December, 1806."

HENRY CUTTINO.

District Court:

I hereby certify the foregoing depositions to be copies from the original on file in the office of the clerk of this court, in the foregoing entitled case.

B—No. 47.

To the Register and Receiver of the Land Office, in and for the southeastern district of Louisiana, at New Orleans:

Francis Enoul Livaudais claims a certain tract of land situate in the parish of Jefferson, and district of Barrataria, about eleven leagues distant from this city, containing about three and a half leagues front on the right bank of Little lake (Petit lac) by a depth of from two and a half to three arpens, and bounded on one side by the Bayou des Amoureaux, and on the other side by a small stream or cut-off "racourci," leading to the sea.

The said tract of land was granted to claimant by the Spanish government, about forty years ago, but the original papers in relation to said grant have been lost. The fact, however, is proven by the solemn declarations (herewith presented) of two old and respectable inhabitants of the said parish of Jefferson, who also prove the habitation and cultivation of the land claimed, for upward of forty years past.

Whereof, claimant prays that said declarations may be duly recorded, and that a favorable report may be made on his said claim pursuant to the act of Congress of 4th July, 1832, providing for the final adjustment of land claims in this district.

C—No. 6.

To the Register and Receiver of the Land Office in and for the southeastern district of Louisiana at New Orleans, the notice of claim of Edmond and Jean Baptiste Drouet, of the parish of Jefferson, represents:

That they are the owners of a certain tract of land upon which they reside, situated in said parish of Jefferson, on the bayou Washa, at about eight leagues distant from the city of New Orleans, containing about one league and a half front on said bayou, by from five to six arpens in depth, bounded on one side by land of Arnaud Magnan, and on the other by the bayou Lapointe.

The said land was anciently the property of the Messrs. Villars Dubreuil; who sold the same on the 18th July, 1776, to Juan Souquet, from whom it has descended to the present owners and claimants by virtue of regular successive deeds. It has, moreover, been constantly inhabited and cultivated for the last forty years and upward; all of which will more fully appear by reference to the deeds of sale and depositions herewith presented.

Wherefore these claimants pray, the premises considered, that such of the documents by them produced in support of their claim, as may be deemed sufficient, may be duly recorded, and a favorable report made thereon, as prescribed by the act now in force for the adjustment of land claims in this district, approved 4th July, 1832.

LOUIS F. CAIRE, Notario Publico.

Au'jourd'hui, 29 mois de Septembre, de l'an 1806, et la trente et unième de l'Independence des Etats Unis d'Amerique.

Pardevant moi, Pierre Pedesclaux, notaire public des Etats Unis d'Amerique á la Nouvelle Orleans, est comparu Joseph Lagrange, demeurant proche cette ville, le quel declare par ces présentes vendre, ceder, quitter, delaisser, dès maintenant, et á toujours en toute propriété, et sous la guarantie de tous empêchements et de toutes hypothèques ce que certifie moi notaire annotateur, quant á l'hypothéque seulement, à Monsieur Pierre Roi et Marie Thérése Seguin, son epouse, deux portions de terre indivises, situées a Barrataria, au lieu dit le bayon aux Oies, et allant jusqu'au haut du bayou la Pointe, lesquelles deux portions de terre dont la quantité n'est past designée, parceque'lle n'a jamais été mesuré, lui appartiennent; l'une comme hérétier de Jean Seguin dit Souquet, et l'autre comme l'ayant acquise de Joseph Seguin au même titre. Cette vente faite et accepté entre les parties pour la somme de quarante piastres, que le dit sieur vendeur declare et reconnait avoir reçu, comptant avant la possession des presentes, et des quelles ill donne quittance. La quelle terre appartenait au dit Juan Seguin dit Souquet, pour l'avoir acquise en 1776, de Villars Dubreuil et consort, par acte au raport de Garie, le 18 de Juillet, le quel port cinq ou six arpens de terre haut, au moyen de quoi le vendeur se demêt et dessaisit de tout droit de propriété sur la dite terre en faveur des acquereurs, qui pourront en disposer comme de chose á eux appartenant.

Fait et passé en l'etude à la Nouvelle Orleans let dit jour, en présence des Sieurs J. B. Ramirez, Joachim Lozano, témoins que ont signé avec nous notaire, les parties déclarant ne savoir signer. Dont acte: la minute est signée. J. B. Ramirez, Joaq$^{n.}$ Lozano.

PIERRE PEDESCLAUX, Notaire Public.

Pour copie conforme à l'original resté en mon étude pour recours. En foi de quoi j'ai signé, le présent et apposé le sceau de mon office, à la Nouvelle Orleans, le 6 Septembre, 1832.

LOUIS T. CAIRE, Notaire Public.

Aujourd'hui, le 12$^{me.}$ jour du mois d'Octobre de l'année, 1829, et la cinquante-quatrième de l'Indépendance des Etats Unis d'Amérique.

Pardevant Louis T. Caire, notaire public dans et pour la ville et paroisse de la Nouvelle Orleans, dûment commissionné et assermenté et en présence des témoins ci-après nommés et soussignés.

Fut présent Mr. François Rigaud, demeurant á la Grande isle, quartier de Barrataria, paroisse de Jefferson, en cet Etat, le quel a, par les présentes vendu, cédé, quitté et transporté avec garantie de tous troubles, dons, dettes, hypothèques, évictions, aliénations, et autres empêchemens généralement quelconques provenant de ses faits, de son titre de propriété ou de ceux qui l'ont précédé mais sans aucune garantie des prétentious que peut ou pourrait avoir á éxércer le gouvernement général des Etats Unis, sur less terres qui feront l'objet de la présente, ni de toute éviction qui pourrait en résulter pour quelque raison et á quelque titre que ce soit. A Messieurs Edemond Drouet et Jean Baptiste Drouet, demeurant tous deux dans la dite paroisse de Jefferson, ici présents et acceptant acquéreurs, chacun pour une moitié et par indivise pour eux, leurs héritiérs ou ayans cause. Un lot de terre ayant une lieue et demie de face plus ou moins sur la Grande isle Barrataria avec cinq ou six actes de terre haute dans la profondeur, le dit lot commençant au bayou aux Oies jusqu'á la hauteur du bayou Lapointe, tel qu'il se poursuit et comporte, mais sous la réserve dont il sera ci-après parlé lui appartenant au moyen de l'acquisition qu'il en a faite de Mr. Charles Clark en sa qualité de sindic des créanciers du Sieur Wm. K. Cornwell par acte passé devant feu Michel de Armas alors notaire public, le 21 Octobre, 1818. Le Sieur Cornwell en était en possession et proprietaire pour l'avoir acheté de Messieurs Pierre Seguin et Pierre Roy et Dame Thérése Seguin, épouse de ce dernier et de lui dûment autorisée par acte au rapport de feu Pierre Pedesclaux de son vivant notaire en cette ville en date du 26 Decembre, 1809, ces dernièrs en étaient propriètaires pour en avoir hérité une partie de feu Jean Seguin dit Souquet et pour avoir acquis l'autre du Sieur Joseph Lagrange ainsi quil apport d'un acte au rapport du même notaire en date du Septembre, 1806; et lei sieur vendeur a déclaré aux acquéreurs que par acte devant Michel de Armas alors notaire public en date du 25 Juin, 1819, il á vendu au Sieur Dominique Perin, un lot de terre à prendre depuis la pointe du bayou aux Oies jusqu'á la coulée ou se trouvait alors la maison du dit Perrin; que le dit lot de terre faisait partie de celui ci-dessus décrit et acheté de Mr. Cornwell, qu'il doit être déduit de la quantité qu'il continait alors et ne peut faire partie de la présente vente. Et les Sieurs acquéreurs reconnaissent qu'ils ont été sur les lieux, qu'ils connaissent l'etendue du lot de terre de Perrin et de celui qui leur est vendu, qu'ils en sont contens et satisfaits en n'en demandent pas d'avantage. La présente vente este fáite et acceptée pour et moyenant la somme de quatre milles piastres en payment de la quelle les sieurs acquéreurs ont tout présentement et á la veu du notaire et des temoins soussignées payé et compté la somme de deux milles piastres en espèces, au sieur vendeur qui le reconnait et en consent bonne et valable quittance et décharge. Et pour la balance les dits sieurs acquereurs ont conjointement l'un pour l'autre souscrit á l'ordre de Mr. Raphael Toledano qui l'a endossé, un billet de la somme de deux Mille piastres, payable dans un an de sa dite; au domicile de Messieurs Toledano et Gaillard, en cette ville, le quel billet daté de ce jour après avoir été signé Nevariatur par le notaire soussigné pour l'identifier avec les présentes, á été remis au sieur vendeur qui le reconnait et en consent bonne et valable décharge. Mais il est bien entendu, entre les parties que les bestiaux qui sont sur la terre ci-dessus décrite ne font pas partie de la présente vente, le did Sieur Rigaud se réservant de les retirer dans le cas, ou ils ne les vendrait pas á l'aimable avec les dits Sieurs Drouet, leur heretiers, ou ayans cause; au moyen de ce qui precede et sous les reserves ci-dessus mentionées, le sieur vendeur met et subroge les sieurs acquereurs conjointement et separement dans tous les droits de propriéte generalement quelconques qu'il avait, a, ou peut avoir, sur lot de terre presentement vendu, voulant et entendant qu'ils en soient saisis et revêtus pour en jouir, faire et disposer comme de chose leur appartenant, des maintenant et á toujours. D'après le certificat du juge et conservateur dès hypthèques de la paroisse Jefferson, en date du 10 courant. Ci-annexé pour recours il appert qu'il n'y a point d'hypothèque enregistrée contre Mr. François Rigaud sur le lot du terre ci-deseus decrit et vendu.

Dont acte fait et passé en l'etude á la Nouvelle Orleans les jour, mois, et an que dessus, en presence de Messieurs Chs. Darcantel et José Antonio Bermudes témoins, a ce requis et domicilié en cette ville, les quels ont signé avec les parties contractantes et moi notaire, après lecture faite, à l'exception de Mr. Rigaud, qui a déclaré ne le savoir et a fait sa marque ordinaire.

Le minute est signé François Rigaud, sa × marque ordinaire; Ed. Drouet; J. B. Drouet; Chs. Darcantel; José Antonio Bermudez.

PAROISSE DE JEFFERSON, le 14 Septembre, 1832.

C—No. 40.

To the Register and Receiver of the Land Office at New-Orleans:

René Trudeau, a citizen of the State of Louisiana, makes, under oath, the following statement to you of his claim and titles to land in the parish of St. Charles, under the requisites of the law of 4th July, 1832.

1. A tract measuring 26 arpens front on the river Mississippi, in the parish of St. Charles, comprised between lines opening 16 degrees, and extending in depth to the Lake Pontchartrain; below by land, belonging to the heirs of H. Kennor, deceased, and above by the tract next hereafter described.

This tract was acquired by the present R. Trudeau, your affiant, at a public sale, by N. Trepaynier, sheriff of the parish of St. Charles, 16th July, 1821.

2. The second tract of your affiant is adjoining the upper part of the former tract, and measuring two arpens and twenty toises front on the river, and extending in depth on a line parallel to the upper limit thereof to the Lake Pontchartrain, bounded above by land of the widow Adelaide Fortier.

The first tract of 26 arpens was sold, as stated, by the sheriff, on an execution against the syndic of J. K. Smith, which Smith purchased of the widow and heirs of Zenon Trudeau, 12th March, 1818, and Zenon Trudeau was the owner of the whole 28 arpens 20 toises, by purchase from L. A. Meuillon, 8th October, 1806.

The two arpens and 20 toises this affiant purchased from the widow and other heirs of Zenon Trudeau.

The aforesaid L. A Meuillon, purchased the whole tract on 3d December, 1782, from Simon Bellisle, with 12 arpens more; these latter being part of plantation, now Pizereau, and before Madame Adelaide Fortier, and the only part of that plantation, running to Lake Pontchartrain.

In all these acts of sale, certified copies of which are now left with you, the land is described and sold as stated by this affiant, that is to say, as extending to the Lake Pontchartrain.

This Simon Bellisle, who sells the land now in question, with the front and limits already stated, was the Spanish commandant, of known character and reputation, and who is yet favorably remembered by some of the old inhabitants.

He mentions, as you will observe, in the act of sale, dated 3d December, 1782, that he remits to Meuillon, his purchaser, all the titles of this plantation.

Zenon Trudeau was the father of this affiant, and this affiant well remembers that the titles and the plan, which he has himself often seen, made by Charles Laveau Trudeau, 1784, from the acts of proprietorship, were delivered to Mr. Watkins, who left them with Mr. Gurley shortly after his appointment as one of the commissioners. Mr. Gurley has often acknowledged to affiant that he had them; has promised frequently to return them, and always assured affiant, on his inquiring of him on behalf of his father, that they were duly recorded and approved; neither of which things were done, and the papers themselves were all lost, and have never again been under the control of the family, nor can any trace of them be discovered.

Mr. Gurley was notoriously negligent in his affairs, and careless of the papers committed to him by virtue of his office. The present surveyor general can testify to you, if necessary, the many valuable papers spoiled or destroyed by the carelessness of Mr. Gurley.

Madame Adelaide Fortier, part of whose plantation is parcel of the tract sold by Bellisle to Meuillon, has her property confirmed by the United States, including the twelve arpens front to the river, and ending at the lake, which she holds under the same act of sale (in 1782) as your affiant holds all of his. The present land in question is of twenty-eight arpens and twenty toises front, extending to the lake. It has been occupied and cultivated by the father of this affiant, by others known to him, and by himself, in its whole extent, since 1806; and before 1806, it has been cultivated and occupied in its whole extent, to the knowledge of this affiant, by James Mather, deceased, who had purchased it from Meuillon; but Meuillon was afterward obliged to take it back, and in 1782 sold it to Zenon Trudeau; and this affiant commonly understood, and verily believes, and it was matter of notoriety, that Bellisle had cultivated and occupied the tract for many years previous.

While Mather had it, and previous to 1782, timber was known to have been cut upon it, and timber bordering on the lake. A canal was cut from the river to the middle of the swamp, and was kept open during all the time.

Pierre St. Amand and Mr. Lafon, engineer, who are now both dead, have informed this affiant that they have seen the grants of this land, and that they were complete, and carried it to the lake; and Lafon once told him, that if he was uneasy as to his titles, he thought he might find them, but he did not.

Mr. Cabaret, now dead, who was the brother-in-law of Bellisle, in (favor) former affairs, that he had looked on the grants of his land, and that they were perfect as now claimed.

This affiant was often in the office of Charles Laveau Trudeau, who was his uncle, and has often examined the plan of the land referred to in the sale from Meuillon; he has also seen it recorded in the grand terrein of Laveau, where plans of all the lands granted and surveyed were gathered by Laveau, and which most important book was delivered to the commissioners, and was suffered to be lost or stolen. The latter is generally supposed to have been the case, and the grand terrein is thought to be yet in existence, perhaps in Havana; and further this affiant states not, but submits his claim and titles to your further examination.

Rene Trudeau being sworn, deposes, that the facts stated in the above pages are within his own knowledge.

RENE TRUDEAU.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, at New Orleans, this 22d January, 1833.

PAROISSE ST. CHARLES, le 17 Janvier, 1827.

To the Register of the Land Office at New Orleans:

George Mather, citizen of Louisiana, residing in the parish of St. John the Baptist, says, that he is a son of James Mather, deceased, formerly residing in this State, and owner of the plantation which was sold by Meuillon, in 1806, to Zenon Trudeau. That his father owned it in 1791 or 1792, and perhaps before; it had thirty-four arpens and twenty toises front; his father cultivated it as an indigo plantation, afterward as a cotton, and as a rice plantation. It was commonly known to have been regularly granted, and to extend to the Lake Pontchartrain. Deponent cannot say that he has himself seen the titles, though he thinks he might have done so. His father told him that the titles were perfect, and that they carried him to the lake. Meuillon has mentioned the same thing. Meuillon is dead. Canals were cut through the estate while deponent was a boy, and timber cut through all the swamps, during the time his father had it; and there were canals cut through it long before his father had it; one was named Canal Dupac.

His father returned the plantation to Meuillon somewhere about the year 1804, who sold it to Zenon Trudeau, in the year 1806, excepting six arpens front, which, with six arpens more which he derived from Bellisle, made the twelve arpens front, afterward sold to Madame Adelaide Fortier, and which title has been confirmed by the United States, and was part of the present plantation.

Deponent remembers Mr. Trudeau having informed him that he has delivered his father's titles to this estate to Mr. Watkins, who had given them to Mr. Gurley, one of the commissioners; this was told him at the time that Gurley was one of the commissioners here.

Mr. Gurley was careless of papers, and may well have lost them. Deponent has heard Mr. Trudeau ask Watkins what had become of his papers, and require him to obtain them from Gurley, and has assisted Mr. Trudeau, while Mr. Harper was register, in searching the papers of the land office for them.

Watkins died before the last war, and deponent has examined his papers to try to find these titles of Mr. Trudeau, but did not find anything relating thereto. Deponent can only speak of these titles from the general knowledge of their existence, and of their being perfect grants, which was a matter of notoriety through the neighborhood; but he has no doubt of the fact that the rights were exercised, and this estate occupied and cultivated, for as far back as he can remember. Deponent is forty-nine years old.

Deponent knows that the plan book of Charles Laveau Trudeau, in which were collected the most important surveys taken from the titles and orders, was reported to have been lost or stolen; the latter was supposed to be the case. Deponent further says that he had never seen the book himself.

NEW ORLEANS, June 10, 1833.

SIR: Please take notice that I claim, by purchase, a tract of land lying on the right bank of the bayou Ouacha, or Barrataria, containing thirty acres, more or less, in front on said bayou, and one hundred and ten acres, more or less, in depth, being a part of the tract formerly owned by the late Antoine Bernard d'Autreive, and in proof of title thereto I now lay before you (in conformity to law, and for the purpose of enregisterment and decision thereon) a file of papers marked D, containing, 1st, a document marked No. 7, being a deed of sale, among other properties, of said tract of land from the late Thomas Dumford to me, for the sum of four thousand dollars, executed on the 10th of October, 1823; 2dly, a document marked No. 8, being a certificate of Andrew Dumford, executed on oath before J. M. Corner, a justice of the peace for the parish of Plaquemine, attesting that he had seen a title for said tract of land, either from the government of France or that of Spain, in the hands of his father, the late Thomas Dumford, or some other person, and that he believes said tract of land had been improved and cultivated for fifty or sixty years; 3dly, a document marked No. 9, being a certificate of Baptiste Roussène, executed on oath before J. M. Corner, esq., justice of the peace for the parish of Plaquemine, attesting the improvement and cultivation of this tract of land previous to the year 1803, and his belief that it had been improved and cultivated as far back as 1770 or 1780; and for still further proof (if more should be necessary) I beg leave to refer you, sir, to the certificates of four respectable gentlemen, on oath, in the claim of the heirs of Antoine Bernard d'Autrieve, on record in your office, in volume marked "Register F, book 6, page 210," wherein they attest that this tract of land (with the fifty acres front, which the heirs of D'Autreive claimed, and which was confirmed to them by your predecessor in office, and by a law of Congress) formed a part of the tract formerly owned by the late Antoine Bernard d'Autrieve, for which they had seen a French title, and which had been improved and in cultivation for fifty or sixty years.

All which is respectfully submitted.

J. McDONOGH.

HILARY B. CENAS, Esq.

Before Felix d'Armas, notary public for and in the city of New Orleans, State of Louisiana, United States of America, and in presence of the witnesses hereinafter mentioned, named, and undersigned:

Personally came and appeared, Thomas Dumford, of the city of New Orleans, who doth, by these presents, grant, bargain, sell, assign, transfer, and set over, now and forever, with promises of warranting of all troubles, gifts, alienations, debts, mortgages, evictions, and other incumbrances whatsoever, unto John McDonogh, of this parish of New Orleans, here present and accepting purchaser for himself, his heirs, or assigns, to wit: 1. A tract of land situated at Barrataria, having thirty acres, more or less, in front, on the bayou Barrataria, by one hundred and ten acres, more or less, in depth, it being the whole of the tract bought by said Thomas Dumford at sheriff sale, on the seventh of August, eighteen hundred and twenty, seized as the property of J. B. Degruis. 2. A tract of land situated in the district of Baton Rouge, on the left bank of the river Mississippi, near the town of Baton Rouge, having about fourteen acres, more or less, in front, on the said river, by a depth of eighty acres; bounded on one side by lands belonging to Mr. Duplantier, and on the other by lands late the property of Mr. Beauregard, said tract of land having been purchased by said Thomas Dumford, at a public sale, at Baton Rouge, on the thirty-first day of December, eighteen hundred and four. 3. A lot of ground in the suburb Annonciation, designated as number eight, in square number thirty-nine, having sixty feet front on Constance street, by one hundred and twenty feet on Edward street, with the building thereon, said lot bought by said Thomas Dumford, at sheriff sale, on the third day of April, eighteen hundred and twenty-one. 4. One piece of land of two lots, less by about three feet, with all the improvements thereon, suburb Lacourse, fronting Tchapitula street, Lacourse, and Religieuses (nuns) street; said lots and improvements bought by the said Thomas Dumford, at sheriff sale, on the thirtieth day of October, eighteen hundred and fourteen.

The whole property known to the said purchaser, who doth declare to be contented and satisfied, and requires no further descriptions.

The present sale is made for and in consideration of the total sum of twelve thousand and six hundred dollars, to wit: four thousand dollars for the tract of land situated at Barrataria; six thousand and five hundred dollars for the tract of land situated in the district of Baton Rouge; five hundred dollars for the lot situated in suburb Annonciation; and one thousand and six hundred dollars for the lots or piece of the suburb Lacourse; and as the said vendor is well and truly indebted unto the said John McDonogh of a larger sum than the amount of the present sale, they, the said vendor and vendee, do acquit, release, and discharge each other of the said sum of twelve thousand and six hundred dollars, to wit: the said vendor in favor of the said vendee for the price of the said premises, and the said vendee in favor of the said vendor in part payment of the sum due to him by the said vendee, as per account between them, sealed on the seventeenth day of June now last past.

And by means of the present compensation, and of that made by the act passed between the same parties, before the said notary, undersigned, on the fourth instant, the said Thomas Dumford is and now remains debtor to the said John McDonogh, of the sum of nine thousand seven hundred and sixty-two dollars, being the balance of all accounts between them, which is acknowledged and declared hereby by both parties contracting.

Possession of the said premises being taken and acknowledged by the said purchaser, according to the certificate of the recorder of mortgages, bearing equal date herewith. There is no mortgage existing against the vendor hereby bargained and sold.

Done and passed in the city of New Orleans, in the office of said notary, on this tenth day of October, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and twenty-three, and the forty-eighth of the American independence, in the presence of Louis A. Verneuille and Louis Ferrand, both witnesses hereto required and domiciliated in this city, and the said contracting parties have hereunto set their hands, together with the notary and witnesses undersigned. Signed: Thomas Dumford, John McDonogh, Louis A. Verneuille, L. Ferrand, Felix de Armas.

I do hereby certify the foregoing to be a true and faithful copy of the original on file in my office on record, in faith whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and affixed my notarial seal, at New Orleans, the fifth day of August, eighteen hundred and twenty-four, and the forty-eighth of American independence.

FELIX DE ARMAS.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of East Baton Rouge:

I, Charles Tessier, parish judge, and ex-officio notary public, in and for the parish aforesaid, do hereby certify that the foregoing was recorded in my office, book M, folio 192, No. 203. In testimony whereof, I grant these presents under my signature, and the impress of my seal of office, at Baton Rouge, this fifteenth day of March, 1825.

CHS. TESSIER, P. J.

Be it known, that on the eighth day of the month of June, in the year eighteen hundred and thirty-three, before me, S. M. Corner, justice of the peace, in and for the parish of Plaquemine, personally came and appeared, Andrew Dumford, a proprietor and inhabitant of this parish, to me personally known, who declared and said that he has seen in the hands of his father, the late Thomas Dumford, or of some other person, a title of a certain tract of land, situated on the right bank of the bayou Ouacha, or Barrataria, and having thirty acres more or less in front of the said bayou, to the depth to the Trembling prairie of one hundred and ten acres, and is the same tract of land which my said late father sold to John McDonogh, of New Orleans, on the 10th day of October, 1823, which said title was derived from the government of either France or Spain, and was for a much larger quantity of land than the tract above mentioned, being only a part of it; he also declares and says, that he has every reason to believe that said tract of land has been improved and under cultivation for the last fifty or sixty years.

A. DUMFORD.

Sworn and subscribed before me,

J. M. CORNER, Justice of the Peace.

Be it known, that on this the eighth day of the month of June, in the year eighteen hundred and thirty-three, before me, J. M. Corner, justice of the peace in and for the parish of Plaquemine, personally came and appeared, Baptiste Ronssine, an inhabitant of this parish, who declared and said, that the tract of land situated on the riget bank of the bayou Ouacha, or Barrataria, having thirty acres more or less in front on said bayou, by one hundred and ten in depth, owned by John McDonogh, it being the same tract of land which he acquired by purchase of the late Thomas Dnmford, was, to his personal knowledge, improved and cultivated previous to the time when the government of the United States took possession of Louisiana, in the year eighteen hundred and three, and believes that it has been improved and cultivated for the last fifty or sixty years.

C—No. 176.

To the Register of the Land Office and Receiver of Public Moneys in and for the southeastern district of Louisiana, at New Orleans:

Narcisse Lassé claims, by virtue of purchase, a certain tract of land, situated in the parish of Jefferson, and on the high road known by the name of the Metairie road containing two arpens front, on each side of said road, by a depth extending to the lake Pontchartrain, and the other side to the limits of the Macarty's plantation, and below by the land of Marie Pierre Dumony, f. w. c. The said tract of land was formerly the property of one Perre Dumony, who purchased the same in the year 1791, from Don André Almonastar y Roxas; it is now claimed by virtue of ancient possession, and continued and uninterrupted habitation and cultivation, by claimant, and those under whom he holds, for upward of fifty years past. In support of which, he hereunto produces full and authentic evidence, which he prays may be duly recorded, and favorably reported on, &c.

NEW ORLEANS, June 26, 1833.

Narcisse Lassé became the proprietor of the land claimed by him in his foregoing notice, by virtue of the purchase he made thereof from Philippe Guesnau, by an act passed before Louis T. Caire, a notary public in this city, on the 6th July, 1832; in which said act, the said land is described and set forth as follows, to wit:

Une habitation située sur le chemin de la Métairie dans la pareisse Jefferson, ayant deux arpens de face de chaque coté du dit chemin et s'etendant dans la profondeur jusqu'au Lac Pontchartrain d'un coté, et jusqu'a l'habitation de Monsieur By. Macarty de l'autre coté, bornée a sa limite superieure par Joseph Beaulieu, h. c. l. et a sa limite inferieure par Marie Pierre Dumony, f. c. l. ensemble les edifices qui sont dessus la dite habitation, circonstances, dependances, appartenances sans en rien excepter ne reservir; le sieur vendeur declarant qu'il ne garantit que les mesures ci-dessus enonciés; mais comme il parait, tant de la declaration faite par sa vendresse Marie Pierre dite Heloise Dumony que d'un plan fait par Monsieur Louis Bringier arpenteur général, de cet etat, la quatre Mars mil huit cent vingt huit annexé a un acte d'un rapport de Felix de Armas notaire public en cette ville, en date du huit d'Octobre, mil huit cent vingt-neuf que la dite terre ou habitation a une plus grande etendue que celle qui est ci-dessus stipulée, il vend céde, quitte, transporte et abandonne egalement, mais sans aucune garantie au dit Sieur Lassé tout ce qui pourait excéder les mesures ci-dessus indiqués le mettant et le subrogeant à cet égard à son lieu et place quelque soit le surplus qui pourait s'y trouver.

L'habitation présentement vendue appartient au dit Sieur Guesnan au moyen de la venté que lui en a faite Marie Louis dite Héloïse Dumony, f. c. l. par acte au rapport de Felix de Armas, notaire public en cette ville, en date du huit Octobre, mil huit cent vingt-huit, auquel acte se trouve annexée un certificat de l'honorable M. Harang, juge et conservateur ex officio pour la paroisse Jefferson daté du treize du méme mois d'Octobre, par lequel ill appert que l'hypotheque consentir par la dite Marie Louise ou Héloïse Dumony conjointement avec Marie Pierre Dumony par acte devant Felix de Armas du dix Mars, mil huit cent vingt-sept avait été levée et qu'il n'y avait alors dans ces registres aucune autre hypotheque enregistrée contre elle. Par acte reçu par Felix de Armas, notaire public en cette ville, en date du dix Mai, mil huit cent vingt-sept, la dite Maria Louise dite Héloïse Dumony avait achetté conjointement et par indivis avec sa soeur Marie Pierre Dumony une habitation située à la Métairie measurant quatre arpens de face de chaque coté du chemin.

Par acte devant le méme notaire la dite Marie Louise dite Héloïse Dumony avait vendue sa moitié indivise de la dite habitation à Joseph et Louis Fandall, mais cette vente a été resiliée par les parties par acte devant le méme notaire, du prémier Juin, mil huit cent vingt-neuf et par suite de cet acte la vendresse est devenue de nouveau propriétaire de la dite moitié indivise, cependant par acte reçu par le dite Felix de Armas le quatorze Juillet, mil huit cent vingt-neuf les dites Marie Louis dite Héloïse Dumony et Marie Pierre Dumony ont fait un acte de partage de l'habitation qu'elles possedaient en commun et par cet acte la dite Marie Louise Dumony est devenue seule propriétaire de l'habitation vendue à Monsieur Guesnan et objet des présentes. Cette habitation dépendant de la succession de Pierre et Jeane Dumony avait été acheté par le dit Pierre Dumony à Monsieur André Almonaster y Roxas par acte devant Pierre Pedesclaux lors notaire en cette ville en date du prémier Fevrier, mil cept cent quatre-vingt-onze, &c.

PAROISSE JEFFERSON, le 25 Juin, 1833.

Pardevant moi, François Pascalis Labarre, juge de paix, dans et pour la paroisse Jefferson, sont personellement comparus Pierre Volant Labarre et Hyacinthe Hazeur, lesquels ont déclarés sous serment que l'habitation de Monsieur Narcisse Lasse é ait autre fois, á leur connaissance, la proprété de Monsieur P. H. Guesnon qu'elle est située à la Métairie, bornée d'un coté par l'habitation de Joseph Beaulieu H. C. L. et de l'autre par Marie Pierre Dumony, P. C. L. qu'elle était habitée et cultivée, au moins vingt cinq ans avant que la Louisiane, ne passat au pouvoir du gouvernement Américain. En foi de quoi, ils ont signés le présent certificat pour servir comme de droit. Signé, H. Hazeur, Volant Labarre.

C—No. 177.

To the Register and Receiver of the Land Office in and for the southeastern district of Louisiana, at New Orleans:

Marie Pierre Dumony, f. w. c., claims a certain tract of land situate in the parish of Jefferson, and on the high road known by the name of Metairie road, containing two arpens front on each side, by a depth on one side running to Lake Pontchartrain, on the other side extending to the limits of the Macarty plantation, bounded above by land of Narcisse Lassé, and below by land of Joseph Beaulieu, f. m. c.

The said tract of land is part of a larger tract purchased by the late Pierre Dumony, father of the claimant, in the year 1791, from Don Almonaster y Roxas. It is now claimed in virtue of said ancient possession, and on continued and uninterrupted cultivation and habitation for upward of fifty years past.

In support of which, she the said claimant herewith produces full and authentic evidence according to law, which she prays may be duly recorded and favorably reported on, &c.

NEW ORLEANS, June 25, 1833.

En la ville de la Nouvelle Orleans, dans l'Etat de la Louisiane, ce quatorze Juillet, mil huit cent vingt-neuf, et dans la cinquante quatrieme année de l'Indépendance des Etats Unis d'Amérique. Pardevant Felix de Armas, notaire public, dument commissionné dans et pour la ville et paroisse de la Nouvelle Orleans y résidant et en presence des témoins ci après nommés et soussignées.

Sont personnellement comparues, Marie Pierre Dumony et Marie Louise dite Héloïse, femmes de couleur libres demeurant toutes deux dans la paroisse de Jefferson en cet Etat. Lesquelles ont dit et déclaré quelles sont propriétaires par indivis d'une habitation située sur le chemin de la Métairie, ayant quatre arpens de face de chaque coté du dit chemin et s'etandant dans la profondeur jusqu'au Lac Pontchartrain d'un coté, et de l'autre coté jusqu'á l'hab^on. de M. Barthélémy Macarty, bornée à sa limite supérieure par Joseph Beaulieu et par Louis Beaulieu, à sa limite inférieure ensemble toutes les batisses et autres circonstances et dépendances de la dite habitation en vertu d'un acte au rapport du notaire soussigné en date du dix Mai, mil huit cent vingt sept. Que voulant faire cesser l'indivision que existe entre elles, elles sont convenues de proceder au partage de la dite terre et de ses dependances et en ont composés les deux lots suivants, savoir: Le prémier lot composé des deux arpens de face bornés par Joseph Beaulieu á la limite supérieure. Le second lot bornée par Louis Beaulieu á la limte inférieure, des deux autres arpens ensemble toutes les batisses et arbres fruitiers qui s'y trouvent. Les lots ayant été ainsi faits les parties les ont tirés au sort le prémier est échu á la dite Marie Louis, dite Héloïse Dumony, et le second á la dite Marie Pierre Dumony.

En conséquences les parties s'abandonnent respectivement et á titre de partage et sous toutes les garanties de droit, ci accepté par chacune d'elles en ce qui la concerne, savoir: La dite Marie Louise, dite Héloïse Dumony á Marie Pierre Dumony, tous les droits de propriétés et autres qu'elle peut avoir sur le second lot, et la dite Marie Pierre Dumony á Marie Louise, dite Héloïse Dumony, tous ses droits généralement quelconque sur le prémier lot. Pour par chacunes d'elle jouir, faire et disposer du lot á elle échu du partage comme de choses à elle appartenant en pleine propriété et Jouissance à compter de ci jour.

Et attendu que la maison principale qui se trouve au milieu de la dite habitation de quartre arpens, c'est a dire partie sur les deux arpens échus à Marie Pierre Dumony et partie sur les deux arpens échus à Marie Louise, dite Héloïse Dumony, il est expressment convenu entre les parties, que cette maison qui à été batie et payée des fonds de la dite Marie Louise, dite Héloïse Dumony, sera occupée par elle ses herétiers et ayant causes jusqu'à ci que la maison ait été entierement détruite de vétusté ou canse de force majeure.

Il est de plus convenu que la dite Marie Pierre Dumony, ses héritiers et ayant causes auront l'usage du pont qui traverse le bayou, le quel pont se trouve sur la proprié é de Marie Louise, dite Héloïse Dumouy, et ce, jusqu'à ce que le pont ait été detruit de vétusté ou causes de force majeure.

Et attendu encore que tous les arbres fruitiers et quelques bàtisses se trouvent compris dans le lot de la dite Marie Pierre Dumony, il résulte en faveur de Marie Louise, dite Héloïse Dumony, une soute de cent piastres que la dite Marie Pierre Dumony à payé à cette derniere que le reconnait, en un billet de pareille somme souscrit par elle à la date de ce jour à l'ordre de la dite Marie Louise, dite Héloïse Dumony, et payable à deux ans de cette date.

Les parties ayant été requis par le notaire soussigné de produire un certificat de non hypothéque du juge ex-officio conservateur des hypothéques pour la paroisse de Jefferson, ont déclarées qu'elles ne s'etaient point pro-curé de semblables certificats et qu'il n'existait d'autre hypothéque contre elles, sur la dite habitation que celle consentie en faveur de leur vendeur.

Fait et passé à la Nouvelle Orleans en l'etude, en présence de Messieurs Ferdinand Percy et Jules Massy, témoins requis et domiciliés en cette ville, que ont signés avec le notaire, mais non les comparantes qui ne sachant écrire ni signer ont fait leur mark ordinaire aprés lecture faite: signé marque × ordinaire de Marie Louise, dite Héloïse Dumony, f. c. l.; marque × ordinaire de Maire Pierre Dumony, f. c. l.; Felix Percy; Jules Massy.

C—No. 178.

To the Receiver and Register of the Land Office in and for the southeastern district of Louisiana, at New Orleans:

François Pascalis Volant de Labarre claims, by virtue of purchase, a certain tract of land situate in the parish of Jefferson, on the bayou of the Métairie, at about six miles from this city, containing two arpens front on each side of said bayou, by a depth extending to the Lake Pontchartrain on the north side, and ten arpens on the south side; bounded, on one side, by land of George l'Esprit, a free negro, and, on the other side, by land of François Peyroux, f. c. w.

The said tract of land was purchased by claimant from the widow of Valery Boisdore, on the 3d of May, 1832, and is now claimed in virtue of ancient and undisputed possession, having been constantly and uninterruptedly inhabited and cultivated by claimant, and those under which he holds, for the last forty years and upward. In support of which, he hereunto produces full and authentic evidence. which he prays may be duly recorded, and favorably reported on, &c.

NEW ORLEANS, June 25, 1833.

Aujourd'hui troisieme jour du mois de Mai, mil huit cent trente deux, cinquante-sixieme année de l'Indépendance des Etats Unis d'Amerique. Pardevant moi Octave de Armas, notaire public dans et pour la ville et paroisse d'Orleans, Etat de la Louisiane, en présence des témoins ci-aprés nommés et soussignés. Est personellement comparue Mad^e. Eugene Perez, veuve de feu Valery Boisdoré, demeurant en cet Etat dans la paroisse Jefferson, agissant aux présentes en son propre et privé nom, comme ayant été commune en biens avec le dit feu Sieur V^y. Boisdoré son mari et en sa qualité de tutrice naturelle, dûment confirmée, de ses enfants mineurs, Laurens Valery, Alezfort, et Sidney Boisdoré. Laquelle Dame comparante es qualités a dit et exposé qu'en vertu d'un ordre de l'honorable cour des preuves de la paroisse Jefferson, daté du vingt-deux Mars, mil huit cent trente-deux, rendu en suite des deliberations d'une assemblée de famille de ses dits enfants mineurs tenue au greffe du juge de paroisse ex officio notaire public de la dite paroisse Jefferson et aussi aprés les publications requises par la loi, il a été offert en vente publique au café de la Nouvelle Bourse, en cette ville, le Samedi vingt-huit Avril dernier, par le ministére de François Dutillet, encanteur en cette ville, toutes les proprietées dependantes de la succession de dit feu Sieur Boisdoré, et qu'à la dite vente publique Monsieur François Pascalis Lacestiere Volant de Labarre de la dite paroisse Jefferson, s'est vendu acquereur par adjudication de la dite terre ci-aprés decrite au prix termes, clauses et conditions stipulés au certificat de vente delivré par le dit encanteur et annexé aux présentes pour recours. En conséquence, voulant fournir au sieur adjudicataire un titre authentique de proprieté à la terre à lui adjugée, la Dame comparante es qualités declare par ses présentes: vendre, ceder, transporter, quitter et delaisser des le jour de l'adjudication et à jamais avec garantiés de tous troubles, dons, dettes, hypothéques, evictions, aliénation et autres empéchemens généralement quelconques et avec substitution et subrogations à tous les droits, titres et actions provenant tant de la Dame vendresse et du dit feu sieur son épouse que de leurs vendeurs et de tous vendeurs, précedents au dit Sieur F. P. L. V. de Labarre ici présent et acceptant acquéreur pour lui, ses héritiers, ou ayans cause. Une habitation située dans la paroisse Jefferson, sur le chemin de la Métairie, à deux lieues de cette ville, mesurant deux arpens de face de chaque coté du bayou de la Métairie sur dix arpens de profondeur au sud, et s'étendant au nord aussi en profondeur jusqu'au Lac Pontchartrain; bornée d'un coté par le terre de Jean l'Esprit, negre libre, et de l'autre par celle de François Peyroux, f. c. l. ensemble avec toutes les batisses, constructions, circonstances et dépendances, droits, privileges et servitudes y attachés et qui en fort partie sans excepter ne reserver; le tout vu, connu, et visité, à loisir par le dit sieur acquéreur, qui s'en declare satisfait et s'en reconnait en bonneet due possession. Cette propriété fait partie des biens provenant de la succession de feu Sieur Valery Boisdoré au moyen de l'acquisition que ce dernier en à faite de Juan Angeling, executeur testamentaire de feue Charlotte Grenoble, negresse libre, par acte du vingt-six Mars mil huit cent huit, au rapport de feu Stephen de Guinones Lars, notaire en cette ville. La présente vente par suite de l'adjudication est faite et acceptée pour la somme de deux mille huit cent piastres, payables a un, deux es trois ans de terme, en billets endorsés à satisfaction avec hypothéque jusqu'à parfait payement. En conséquence a présentement souscrit à l'ordre de Monsieur J^n. B^te. V^t. de Labarre, trois billets datés du 28 Avril dernier, chacun de la somme de neuf cent trente-trois piastres, trente-trois cents metiers, le premier payable à un an, le second a deux ans, et le troisieme a trois ans, de la date lesquels billets, aprés avoir été signés et paraphs ne varietur par le notaire soussigné, pour on constater l'identité avec les présentes ont été remis a la venderesse et qualite, qui le reconnait et en donne décharge, et pour mieux assurer le dit payment des susdites trois billets à leur echeance respective la proprieté objet des présentes est et demeure affectée obligée et hypothequée au moyen de quoi et sous la reserve de cette hypothéque. La Dame venderesse en qualité, cede, et transporte à l'acquereur, ses héritiers et ayant cause, tous les droits de proprieté, de garantie et autres que le dit feu Sieur Boisdoré avait et que sa veuve et ses héritiers ont et peuvent avoir sur la terre et dépendance objet des présentes, pour par le dit sieur acquereur en faire jouir et disposer comme de chose lui appartenant bien et légitimement tant en vertu des présentes que de l'adjudication a l'encan. D'aprés le certificat du conservateur des hypothéques de la paroisse Jefferson c'y annexé pour recours, il resulte qu'il n'y a pas d'hypothéque inscrite à son bureau contre la dite succession, sur l'habitation objet des présentes; car ainsi, &c., dont acte faite et passé, à la Nouvelle Orleans en l'etude, en présence de Messieurs Gustave le Gardeur et Edouard Lavigne, temoins, requis et domicilié en cette ville, qui ont signés avec les comparans et le notaire aprés lecture. Lacestiere Volant Labarre and J. B. Volant Labarre became proprietors, each for one undivided half of the land claimed by them in their foregoing notice, in virtue of the purchase they made from Mrs. Elizabeth Maria M. P. Perez, widow of Antoine Maxent, by an act passed before Felix de Armas, a notary public in this city, on the 15th November, 1830, in which said act the land is described and set forth, to wit:

Une habitacion, située dans cette paroisse d'Orleans, cidevant maintenant dans la paroisse Jefferson, au quartier de la métairie, distante d'environ deux lieues de cette ville, ayant douze arpens de face de chaque côté du bayou de la métairie, sur onze arpens ou environ de profondeur du côté de fleuve, et de l'autre côté courant jusqu'an Lac Pontchartrain, bornée, dans la partie supérieur, par l'Esprit, negre libre; dans la partie inférieure, par Joseph Dorville, ensemble toutes les ediffces existants sur la dite habitacion. Ainsi que le tout se poursuit et comporte, sans par la venderesse en rien excepter ni reserver, n'en étant fait ici une plus longue description à la requisition des acquereurs, qui ont déclarés la bien connaitre, et en ètre contents pour l'avoir bien vue et visitée. Madame Veuve Maxent est propriétaire de la dite habitation au moyen de l'adjudicacion qui lui en a été faite par jugement rendu par l'honorable cours des preuves pour cette ville et paroisse, en date de neuf Janvier, mil huit cent dix neuf.

Antoine Maxent, in conjunction with his brother Maximilian, purchased said land from Jos. Deville Degoutin Bellechasse, on the 6th of August, 1807, by an act passed before Stephen de Quiñones, notary public.

Bellechasse purchased from Noyrit, by an act passed before Pedro Pedesclaux, notary public, on the 20th November, 1806; and Noyrit purchased from Doña Maria de la Luz Jusra Ximenes, heiress of Don Carlos Ximenes, on the 8th of May, 1806, by an act passed before the said Pedro Pedesclaux.

C—No. 186.

To the Register and Receiver of the Land Office in and for the southeastern district of Louisiana, at New Orleans:

The heirs of John Dugat claim a certain tract of land, situate in the parish of Lafourche interior, on the left bank of the bayou of Lafourche, and about twenty-three leagues of the river Mississippi, containing about sixty arpens front by all the depth thereunto appertaining, not exceeding forty arpens; bounded above by land of Raphael Landry, and below by land of Louis Baube.

The said tract of land was purchased by the late Jean Dugat, father of claimant, from Francis Aufraie, on the 19th December, 1806, and is claimed in virtue of ancient and undisputed possession, having been constantly and uninterruptedly inhabited and cultivated as private property for the last forty years and upward. In support of which the said claimants produce full and authentic evidence, which they pray may be duly recorded and favorably reported on, &c.

NEW ORLEANS, June 18, 1833.

This indenture, made 19th December, 1806, between Aufraie, of the county of Lafourche, on the first part, and Jean Dugat, of the said county, on the second part, witnesseth, that for and in consideration of the sum of twenty-five dollars, paid in hand to the said party of the first part, the receipt whereof is hereby confessed and acknowledged, hath granted, bargained, sold, remised, released, aliened, and confirmed, and by these presents doth grant, sell, remise, release, alien, and confirm, unto the said party of the second part, in his actual possession now being, to his heirs and assigns for ever, all singular of a plantation, containing sixty acres front more or less, and with as much land in depth as the survey may give, situated on the left hand side of the Bayou Lafourche, about twenty-three leagues from the Mississippi, and bounded on the upper side by land of Rafael Landry, and the lower side by that of Louis Baube, together with the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in anywise appertaining, with the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents, issues, and profits thereof, and all the estate, right, title, interest, claim or demand whatever, of the said party of the first part, either in law or equity, of, in, or to the above bargained premises, with the said hereditaments and appurtenances, to have and to hold the said premises above particularly mentioned and described to the said party of the second part, his heirs and assigns, to the sole and only use, benefit, and behoof, of the said party of the second part, his heirs and assigns, for ever; and the said party of the first part, for himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, doth covenant, promise, grant, and agree to and with the said party of the second part, his heirs and assigns, the above bargained premises in the quiet and peaceable possession of the said party of the second part, his heirs and assigns, against all and every person or persons, lawfully or equitably claiming, or to claim, the whole or any part thereof, will for ever warrant and defend. In witness whereof, the said parties have hereunto set their hands and seals.

C—No. 191.

To the honorable the Register and Receiver of the Land Office, New Orleans, the petition of Gabriel Villeré, Jules Villeré, Delfin Villeré, Caliste Villeré, Felix Villeré, Anatole Villeré, Marie Adile Villeré, wife of Hugens Lavergue, and by her husband duly authorized, and of Eulalie Léonidie Villeré, relict of Gabriél Cyrile Fagende, all of this State, humbly showeth:

That your petitioners are the children and sole legitimate heirs of the late Jacques Philippe Villeré, their father, who died on the 7th of March, 1830; that your petitioners, as heirs aforesaid, are joint owners for one undivided half, and the said Gabriel Villeré, their brother, for the other undivided half, of a plantation, situated about eight miles below New Orleans, and on the same side of the river, measuring seven arpens and a quarter, or thereabout, front to the river, extending in depth to the lake; bounded, on the upper limit, by land belonging to your petitioners, and on the lower side by land formerly the property of Charles Jumonville de Villiers, and now belonging to Simon Cuculla; that the land or plantation above described is one of the oldest settlements on the Mississippi, and is now a part of the sugar estate belonging jointly to your petitioners, and which, besides said land, is comprised of two other tracts adjoining each other, forming together eleven arpens, twenty-six toises, and eight feet front by eighty arpens in depth, confirmed by Congress. And whereas the tract of seven arpens and a quarter, as above mentioned, has never been registered in the land office, your petitioners respectfully pray that they may be allowed to present their titles to be registered, and adduce, in support of the same, such evidence as the nature of the case admits, and that it may please this honorable board to take their claim into consideration, to order the recording thereof, and report favorably thereon. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

ETAT DE LA LOUISIANE, Paroisse d'Orleans:

Pardevant moi Gallien Preval, juge associé de la cour de cité de la ville de la Nouvelle Orleans, sont comparus Messieurs Honoré Landraux et Manuel Andry, proprietaire demeurant dans la ville et paroisse de la Nouvelle Orleans, agés de plus de soixante ans. Lesquels après avoir été respectivement dument assermentés ont declarés comme verité-notoire qu'ils connaissent parfaitement une habitation de sept arpens et un quart face au fleuve sur toute la profondeur jusqu'au lac, qui a appartenue à feu Monsieur Montrenil et subsequement à feue Madame Patre qui l'a vendue en 1795 à feu Monsieur Antoine d'Orvateur lequel l'a vendue peu de Mois après à Monsieur Joseph Soniat Dupassat, qui la ensuite vendue à Monsieur Bernard Marigny de qui feu Monsieur Jacques Philippe Villeré, l'a achetté conjointement avec son fils ainé Monsieur Gabriel Villeré, par acte du 2 Juillet, 1808, au rapport de Narcisse Broutin alors vivant notaire en cette ville; que cette terre ou habitation qui a éte etablie, cultivée, et habitée dès les premiers tems de l'establissement de la Louisiane, fait aujourd'hui partie de l'habitation sucririe qui appartenait à Messieurs Jacques et Gabriel Villeré, et qui est aujourd'hui la propriété du dit Sieur Gabriel Villeré comme acquereur et a titre de co-heritier avec ses freres et soeurs, du dit Sieur Jacques Philippe Villeré leur pere. Laquelle habitation sucririe est située à environ deux lieues et demi par en bas, et du même coté de la ville de la Nouvelle Orleans, et est bornée par Monsieur Pierre Lacoste du coté de la ville et de l'autre coté par Monsieur Simon Cucullu.

C—No. 198.

To the Register of the Land Office and Receiver of Public Moneys for the southeastern district of Louisiana, at New Orleans, the notice of claim of Sosthene Roman, the syndic of the creditors of Jean Baptiste Degruy, represents:

That in the year 1812, the said Jean Baptiste Degruy surrendered his property before the late superior court of the Territory of Orleans, and that his estate being yet unsettled, this claimant was appointed syndic to the same, by a judgment or decree of the first judicial district court of the State of Louisiana, bearing date January 30, 1832, and homologating the proceeding of the creditors. That among the property surrendered as aforesaid, there is a tract of land, or plantation, situated at Barrataria, in the parish of Jefferson, within this district, at a distance of about four leagues or twelve miles from the Mississippi, measuring 40 arpens front on the Bayou Barrataria, alias the river Oïcha, 10 arpens whereof have a depth of 103 arpens, 10 that of 60, and 20 that of 40, making thus together 2,430 superficial arpens, and which plantation at the time of its surrender, was completely established and in a full state of cultivation, all of which more fully and at large appears from the subjoined transcript of the schedule of the said Jean Baptiste Degruy, and of the proceeding appointing this claimant as syndic to the estate surrendered as aforesaid.

And this claimant further represents, that the said plantation is bounded by land formerly of widow Guerbois, and now Lacoste or De la Ronde on one side, and on the other side by a cypress swamp, formerly of Gravier now of Millandon; and that it is crossed in its full depth by the Bayou des Familles, along which lies the road or highway from the river to the settlement of Barrataria; that it makes part of the grant made by the late Spanish governor to the late Colonel Bouligny, and which were all sold out by him to the said Jean Baptiste Degruy and the late François Mayronne, along with his plantation fronting the river Mississippi, by an act passed before the late Pre. Pedesclaux, notary public, on the 8th of March, 1792, a copy of which is on file in this office.

And the claimant further shows, that the said plantation, or tract of land, was not only inhabited by the said Jean Baptiste Degruy in 1812, when he surrendered it to his creditors, but that there had always been settlements on the same ever since the year 1792, as it more fully appears from the subjoined declaration of Messieurs Louis Bouligny and Robin Delogny, two respectable inhabitants of the parish of Jefferson, sworn to by them before the judge of the same parish on the 17th of June, 1833; and reference to the reports of the supreme court of the State of Louisiana, will show that this tract of land has, for a long time, been the subject of judicial contest between the syndics and some of the insolvent's mortgagee creditors, which has prevented this claimant, in his capacity as syndic, from selling the same. (8 Martin's Reports, old series, 220, Dumford vs. Degruy's syndics and others. 2 Miller's Louisiana Reports, 544, Degruy's syndics vs. Hennen.)

And this claimant further represents, that besides the above tract or plantation, the same insolvent surrendered also to his creditors, two other tracts, as it appears from his schedule, which tracts are likewise undisposed of. 1st. A cypress swamp, situated at one league and a half from the Mississippi, on the left bank of the river Oïcha, containing about 400 superficial arpens, bounded on one side by land belonging to Cazelard, and on the other side by land belonging to Launnoy, and in the rear by the plantations on the lower part of the Mississippi, in the parish of Plaquemine, which tracts also make part of the grants made by the Spanish government to Col. Bouligny, and by him sold to the insolvent by the before recited act of March 8, 1792. 2d. Another tract of land forming an island between the Lake Barrataria and the Bayou St. Dennis, measuring about one league in length, two leagues in breadth, and from five to six leagues in circumference. This island is situated at a distance of about eighteen leagues from New-Orleans, and is bounded on the same side all along by the same Bayou St. Dennis. It was granted to the insolvent by the Spanish governor, Gayoso de Lemos, and the grant will be found among the records of the Spanish grants.

This claimant prays that the title of the insolvent and now the insolvent's creditors to the above three tracts of land be confirmed, so that he may finally dispose of the same to satisfy their just claims and debts.

D. SEGHERS,
For SOSTHENE ROMAN, the Syndic of J. B. Degruy's creditors.

Nous soussignés à la requête de Monsieur Sosthéne Roman, syndic des créanciers de Mr. J. B. Degruy, declarans que nous connassions la terre ou habitation du dit J. B. Degruy, cedée à ses créanciers; quelle est située à Barrataria, à quarante arpens de face au Bayou Barrataria au riviere Oïtha, cette terre est traversée dans sa profondeur par le bayou des familles et est bornée d'un cot épar la terre qui fut de veuve Guerbois, et maintenant de Lacoste ou Lavande, et de l'autre coté par une Cypriére, ci-devant à Granvier, aujourd'hui à Millandon; nous declarons de plus que cette terre etait habitée par Degruy lorsqu'il en fit la cession à ses creanciers en 1812, et qu'il y a toujours en des establissemens depuis 1792, jusqu'à ce jour.

C—Nos. 220 and 221.

To the Register and the Receiver of the Land Office for the southeastern district of Louisiana, at New Orleans:

Antoine Michoud claims, in virtue of purchase, a certain tract of land situate in the parish of Jefferson, and district of Barrataria, containing about twelve hundred and two arpens twenty toises in superficie, and bounded each by other lands belonging to claimant; and on the other side by lands now or formerly vacant, according to a plat of survey thereof executed by A. Trouard, surveyor, on the 10th November, 1809, and now in the possession of claimant.

2dly. Also another tract of land, a few arpens to the east of the above, and situated in the same parish and district, containing about eighteen hundred superficial arpens, and bounded east by a bay called St. Honoré, and west by other lands of claimant, and being principally marsh land.

The said two tracts of land were purchased by claimant from the late Joseph Perillat, who derived them also by purchase from different persons; they are now claimed in virtue of ancient and undisputed possession and of continued habitation and cultivation (so far as the nature of the soil could permit,) for upwards of forty years past. They are also supposed to be derived from concession made by the Spanish government, but whereof the papers have been lost.

In support of all which, claimant produces herewith full and authentic evidence, which he prays may be duly recorded and favorably reported on, pursuant to the provision of the act of Congress, approved 4th July, 1832, for the final adjustment of land claims in the district, &c., &c.

NEW ORLEANS, June 18, 1833.

Aujourd'hui dix septieme jour du mois d'Octobre, de l'année nul huit cent trente et un, et la cinquante sixieme de l'independance des Etats Unis d'Amérique.

Pardevant Louis T. Caire, notaire public, dans et pour la ville et paroisse de la Nouvelle Orleans, dument commissionné et assermenté et en presence des témoins ci-apres nommes et soussignés.

Fut présent Monsieur François Ferillat, demeurant en cette ville, lequel par ces présentes vendu, cédé délaissé et abandonné des maintenant et pour toujours, et s'est obligé á garantir de tous troubles, dons, dettes, hypothèques autres et empéchements generalement quelconques, á Monsieur Antoine Michoud, demeurant en cette ville á ce present et acceptant pour lui ses heritiers et ayans causes, une terre ou habitation située á Barrataria, de l'autre bord de la grand isle, paroisse de Jefferson, en cet état de la Louisiane. Cette terre est désignée au plan dont il va etre parlé et comprend tout ce qui est renfermé entre less lignes peintes en rose servant á désigner les limites de la dite terre au plan signé Lafon que les parties ont représenté et qui á leur requisition est demeuré ci annexé apres qu'elles l'ont en signé et paraphé en présence du notaire et des témoins soussignés. Ainsi que la dite terre se poursuit et comporte et telle quelle appartient au dit vendeur sans aucune exeption ni réserve et dont l'acquereur n'a désiré qu'il fut fait plus ample designation, déclarant l'avoir parcourue et examinée, la bien connaitre avoir comparé le plan ci annexé avec les titres ci apres énoncès en être content êt n'en pas demander davantage.

Il est bien entendu et expressement convenu que tout les bois qui ont été abattus jusqu'á ce jour et qui sont encore sur le bien sont compris dans la présente vente et appartiendront á l'acquéreur étant bien entendu que le vendeur ne se reserve absolument rien.

Cette terre appartient au dit Sieur François Perillat, en sa qualité de seul et unique heritier de feu Mr. Joseph Perillat son pere ainsi qu'il le declare, et de laquelle declaration le dit Sieur Michaud se contente. Et d'après le rapprochement que les parties declarent avoir fait du plan ci annexé et des titres ci après enoncée, cette terre appartient au dit Sieur Joseph Perillat attendu les ventes que le Sieur Jacques Terrebonne lui a faites par deux actes passées, pardevant feu Pierre Pedesclaux, notaire en cette ville, en même jour, vingt-quatre Novembre, mil huit cent huit, savoir: 1. Par l'un de une petite cheniere, située de l'autre bord de la Grande Isle dans la profondeur de la cheniere, appellé de la Caminada, ayant a-peu-près un quart de lieue de large, et un demie lieue de long. 2. Et par l'autre d'une petite cheniere, située de l'autre côté de la Grande Isle, dans la profondeur de la propriété du sieur acquereur ayant a-peu-près trois quarts de lieue de long, et la largeur que se trouverait depuis l'arpentage que se ferait ce la dite terre. Il n'est pas donné plus de detail sur les titres de propriété de la dite terre á la demande du Sieur Michoud, qui declare que d'après les renseignmens qu'il s'est procurés a cet égard, il se contente de la garantie à laquelle s'est ci dessus obligé le Sieur François Perillat, vendeur, pour par le dit Sieur Michoud, ses heritiers ou ayans cause, jouir, faire et disposer de la dite terre, en pleine propriété, et comme de chose leur appartenant au moyen des présentes á compter de ce jour.

La présente vente et faite moyennant la somme de deux mille piastres, sur laquelle le dit Sieur Perillac reconnait avoir reçu celle de mille piastres, du Sieur Michoud, en especes ayant cours de monaie realement comptées et delivrées á la veu du notaire et des témoins soussignés.

Et pour les mille piastres qui forment le complement du dit prix, le dit Sieur Michoud á presentement remis au Sieur Perillat un billet de pareille somme de mille piastres, daté de ce jour, et payable á six mois de sa date, et souscrit par le dit Sieur Michoud, á l'ordre du dit Sieur Perillat, qui renonce en consequence á son droit de vendeur, et par consequent á tous privileges et hypothèques sur la dite terre; c'est pourquoi le dit billet n'a pas été signé et paraphé par le notaire soussigné, n'ayant plus aucun motif pour l'identifier avec los presentes.

Attendu la dit somme payé en espece, et le dit billet remis et accepté comme argent, le dit Sieur Perillat donne quitance entière et sans reserve de la dite somme de deux mille piastres, prix de la presente vente, et de toutes choses à ce sujet.

Au moyen de ce qui précede le Sieur Perillat a presentement mis et subrogé le Sieur Mechoud dans toutes les droits de propriéte, et autres qu'il a ou peut avoir sur la dite terre vendue même dans les droits, et guaranties qui lui sont acquis contre les anciens propriétaires. Ses dessaississant de tous ces dits droits en sa faveur, voulant qu'il en soit saisi, jouissi, et disposé en son lieu et place, et comme de chose lui appartenant au moyen des presentes.

Suivant un certificat daté de ce jour, délivré par Mr. Harang, Juge de Paroisse, exerçant ex officio less fonctions de conservateur des hypothèques dans et pour la paroisse Jefferson, lequel certificat est demeuré ci annexé et constate qu'il n'y a point d'hypothèque enregistrée contre Joseph Perillat, ni contre François Perillat, son fils et seul héritier, sur les propriétés situées dans la paroisse Jefferson.

Dont acte, fait et passé en l'etude á la Nouvelle Orleans les jour, mois, et an que dessus, en présence des Sieurs Charles et André Darcantel, témoins á ci requis, et domiciliés en cette ville, qui ont signés avec les parties et moi Notaire après lecture faites.

La minute est signé François Perillat fils, Anthony Michoud, Charles Darcantel, A. Darcantel, Louis T. Caire, Notaire Public.

Pour copie conforme á l'original resté, deposé, en mon etude pour recours, en foi de quoi j'ai signé le présent, et apposé le sceau de mon office, á la Nouvelle Orleans, le dix neuf Octobre, mil huit cent trente et un.

LOUIS T. CAIRE, Notaire Public.

ETAT DE LA LOUISIANE, Paroisse Jefferson.

Le soussigné, Juge de Paroisse dans et pour la Paroisse Jefferson, certifie que l'acte cidessus et en l'autre part, a été enregistré en mon office, au folio trois cent quarante-neuf du Registre des Alienations, numero deux. Paroisse Jefferson, le trente et un Octobre mil huit cent trente et un.

J. M. HARANG, Juge.

Pardevant moi, J. Bermudez, Juge Associé á la cour de cité de la Nouvelle Orleans, Etat de la Louisiane, furent présents Messieurs Jean Paris et Pierre Dinet, tout deux residents en cette ville, précedemment pecheurs, demeurant á Barrataria, les quels après avoir été assermentés ont déclarés: Monsieur Paris être agé de soixante et un an, et Mr. Dinet soixante ans. Les quels comparaissant sur l'invitation de Monsieur Antoine Michoud, acquéreur des propriété de defunt Joseph Perillat, situées á Barrataria; á l'effet de donner leur déclaration de ce qu'ils savent relativement á une cheniere, située au dit Barrataria, anciènnement habitée et cultivée par Marie Nadal, successivement par Pierre Lartigne qui le 20 Mars, 1804, l'avait vendue á Jacques Terrebonne, et par Terrebonne á Joseph Perillat. Les actes du 24 Novembre, 1808, aux minutes de Pierre Pedesclaux, Notaire Public en cette ville.

Le plan de la dite propriété, dressé le 10 de Novembre, 1809, par Monsieur Trouard delégué de Monsieur Lafan, arpenteur pour le Territoire d'Orleans, lequel donne pour confin au sud-ouest l'habitation du dit Joseph Perillat, á l'est et á l'ouest terres des Etats Unis, ayant été déroulé sur notre bureau et éxaminé, les dits Sieurs Paris et Dinet ont affirmés qu'ils se rappelent que dans les années mil sept cent quatrevingt douze et quatrevingt treize, Marie Nadal, qui plus tard la vendue a Pierre Lartigne, possedait, habitait, et cultivait cette terre pour lors appellée Petite Cheniere. En foi de quoi ils ont signé.

J. BERMUDEZ, Juge.

Pardevant moi J. Bermudez, Juge Associé de la cour de cité de la Nouvelle Orleans, Etat de la Louisiane, furent présents Messieurs Jean Paris et Pierre Dinet, touts deux demeurant en cette ville, anciens pecheurs et habitants de Barrataria, lesquels ont dit Monsieur Paris être agé de soixante et un ans, et Mr. Pierre Dinet être agé de soixante ans. Comparaissant en mon bureau sur l'invitation de Monsieur Antoine Michoud, acquéreur des propriétés de defunt Joseph Perillat, située a Barrataria, a l'effet de declarer ce qu'ils savent relativement à une portion de terre et marécage comprise dans le plan dressé par By. Lafan, arpenteur du Territoire d'Orleans, dont copie est annexé a l'acte de vente du 17 Octobre, 1831, au rapport de Louis T. Caire, Notaire Public, passé au dit Michoud par François Perillat, fils et seul heritier de feu Joseph Perillat, de toutes les propriétes du dit feu Joseph Perillat, située a Barrataria, savoir: La première a la gauche, ayant une démarcation spéciale est l'habitation qu'il avait achetée, et anciennement possédée et cultivée par Marie Nadal, qui l'avait vendue a Pierre Lartigne, au sujet de laquelle ils ont aujourd'hui donnée la déclaration qui précede, La seconde formant le centre du dit plan est la propriété que le dit Joseph Périllat avait achettée de Jacques Terrebonne, quil cultivait, et sur laquelle il résidait, provient d'une concession de Gouverneur Miro, en date du 8 Aout, 1785.

La troisieme formant la droite du dit plan est une propriété que Julienne l'Archevêque, avait eu par heritage de ses ancêtres concessionaries du Gouvernement Espagnol, et dont le titre n'a pu être trouvé parmi les papiers de Defunt Joseph Perillat, mais les déclarans habitués á fréquenter ces lieux et á pêcher dans le lac et les eaux qui bornent ces propriétés, affirment qu'en Aout et Septembre, 1792, ils ont logié près de deux mois dans une maison que St. Yago Dupré Terrebonne, grand pêre de la femme du dit Joseph Perillat, avait fait construire sur la butte de coquilles appeler part blanc autour de laquelle il avait fait un jardin, et planté du mays dans les petites lisières en terres hautes. Ils disent aussi que traversant du part blanc á l'habitation de Jacques Terrebonne, ensuite de Joseph Perillat, par un chemin pratiqué par St. Yago Dupré en la dite année mil sept cent quatre vingt-douze, le dit St. Yago Dupré, leur avait dit qu'elle était á lui, et que les bestiaux qui paissaient dans le marais et les broussailles appellées bois inconnus lui appartenaient aussi.

En foi de quoi ils ont signes,

PIERRE (sa marque) × DINET.
JEAN PARIS.

Signé et assermenté pardevant moi, ci 2 jour de Janvier, 1833.
