STATE OF LOUISIANA, City of New Orleans:

Be it known, that this day, the third day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty-five, before me, Gallien Preval, one of the associate judges of the city of New Orleans, personally came and appeared Jean Joseph Rodrigues, an old inhabitant of Barrataria, and Gaspard Tilano, also an old inhabitant of Barrataria, both residing now in the parish of Orleans, the former aged of sixty years, and the latter of fifty-eight years, who, after being duly sworn, depose and say, that they have carefully examined the plat of survey marked A, hereunto annexed, and certified under the hand of L. Bringier, esq., surveyor general, whereon are figured three certain tracts of land, situate in the district of Barrataria, and now the property of Antoine Michoud, esq.; that the said tracts of land are well known to these deponents; and that it is to their knowledge that they have been constantly and uninterruptedly occupied for various purposes, particularly for pasturing cattle, &c., and also cultivated for the last forty years and upward by the said Michoud, and those under whom he holds by regular purchase; and these deponents further say, that during all the above-mentioned time, the said tracts of land have ever been considered as private property of good titles, and that the same had emanated originally from the Spanish government, while in possession of the territory, and by grants of some description or other, which grants, however, they have been informed, have been lost or mislaid; that, nevertheless, it is within the recollection of these deponents that the said tracts were owned as private property under the said Spanish government, and as such, respected by the said government. These deponents finally state, that but small portions of either of said tracts are at all fit for cultivation, or any thing else; the balance, constituting the greater part, being extremely low and marshy, and of that species of swamp land called "trembling prairie," subject at high tide to inundation.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, at New Orleans, November 3, 1835.

GALLIEN PREVAL, Judge.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of Louisiana:

By Edward D. White, governor of the State of Louisiana. These are to certify that Gallien Préval, whose name is subscribed to the instrument of writing herein annexed, was at the time of signing the same, and is now, one of the associate judges of the city court of New Orleans, and that full faith and credit are due to all his official acts, as such.

Given at New Orleans, under my hand and the seal of the State, this fourth day of November, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-five, and of the independence of the United States the sixtieth.

LAND OFFICE, NEW ORLEANS, December 1, 1835.

SIR: In compliance with the second section of the act of Congress, entitled "An act for the final adjustment of claims to lands in the State of Louisiana, approved 6th February, 1835," we have the honor of transmitting herewith the number of claims presented to us since the passage of the above-mentioned act, and which have been duly recorded in the office of the register.

Our report on those four claims will be very short; a few words will suffice. They are all founded on regular orders of survey, ancient possession, and uninterrupted possession and cultivation.

We remain, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servants,

B. Z. CANONGE, Register.
MAURICE CANNON, Receiver.

HON. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Reports of the Register of the Land office and Receiver of Public Moneys in and for the southeastern district of the State of Louisiana, on the claims of lands filed in the Register's office, in pursuance of an act of Congress, approved on the 6th day of February, 1835, and entitled "An act for the final adjustment of claims to lands in the State of Louisiana.

No. 1.

Narcisse Carmouche claims, by virtue of purchase, a certain tract of land, situate in the parish of Point Coupée, on the eastern bank of the Bayou Grosse-Tête, about fifty leagues above the city of New Orleans, containing ten arpens front on the eastern bank of the said Bayou Grosse-Tête, by the ordinary depth of forty arpens, and bounded above by the lower line of a tract of land, formerly the property of the late Simon Porche, and, on the lower side, by vacant lands.

The said tract of land is the half of a tract of twenty arpens front, formerly owned by one Henry Olivo, fils, who obtained a regular warrant, or order of survey therefor, from Governor Miro, on the 17th November, 1787. Said half is now claimed by virtue of the said order of survey, and of an uninterrupted possession and enjoyment by claimant and those under whom he holds, since the date thereof.

We are therefore of opinion that this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 2.

Julie, Alexandre, and Martin Major claim, by virtue of purchase, a certain tract of land situate in the parish of Point Coupée, on the eastern bank of the Bayou Grosse-Tête, about fifty leagues above the city of New Orleans, containing ten arpens front on the eastern bank of the said Bayou Grosse-Tête, by the ordinary depth of forty arpens, and bounded above by the lower line of a tract of land, formerly the property of the late Simon Porche, and, on the lower side, by vacant lands.

The said tract of land is the half of a tract of twenty arpens front, formerly owned by one Henry Olivo, fils, who obtained a regular warrant, or order of survey therefor, from Governor Miro, on the 17th November, 1787. Said half is now claimed by virtue of the said order of survey, and of an uninterrupted possession and enjoyment by claimants and those under whom they hold, since the date thereof.

We are therefore of opinion that this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 3.

The heirs of Nicholas Bara claim, by virtue of an act of donation, two tracts of land, situate in the parish of Point Coupée, about fifty leagues above the city of New Orleans, viz: the first lot, containing ten arpens front on the channel of the False river, by a depth of twenty-nine arpens six toises on the upper line, and forty arpens twenty-one toises on the lower line; and bounded, on one side, by the land of Jean Ursin Jarreau and the second lot, and, on the other side, by land of Marcelin Sicard.

The second lot, containing ten arpens front on the river Mississippi, by the depth of thirty-six arpens sixteen toises on the lower line, and bounded, on one side, by the channel of False river, and, on the other side, by land of Jean Ursin Jarreau, as it appears by the plat of survey hereunto annexed.

The said tracts of land form part of a larger tract owned by the late Jean Baptiste Bara, in the year 1782, and prior thereto, and at whose death it passed into the possession of his widow, under whom claimants hold, by virtue of a regular act of donation; the portions now claimed have been, moreover, constantly and uninterruptedly inhabited and cultivated by the said claimants and those under whom they hold. (A portion of the same land, owned by the said J. B. Bara, has been confirmed by the Congress to Jean Ursin Jarreau, the 3d March, 1835.)

We are therefore of opinion that this claim ought to be confirmed.

No. 4.

Francis Ménard claims, by virtue of purchase, a certain tract of land, situate in the parish of West Baton Rouge, about forty leagues above the city of New Orleans, containing twenty arpens front on the river Mississippi, by the ordinary depth of forty arpens, and bounded, on the upper side, by land of Jean Pierre Michel, and, on the lower, by those of Louis Molaire.

The said tract of land now claimed is composed of two tracts; one of fifteen arpens, and the other of five arpens front, formerly owned, viz: the fifteen arpens by one Estevan Watts, who obtained a regular warrant, or order of survey therefor, from governor Manuel Gayoso de Lemos, on the 10th December, 1798, and the five arpens by one Louis Molaire, who obtained also, from the same governor Manuel Gayoso de Lemos, on the 23d of January, 1799, a regular warrant, or order of survey, for fifteen arpens. Said twenty arpens are now claimed by virtue of said orders of survey, and of an uninterrupted possession and cultivation by claimant and those under whom he holds, since the date thereof.

We are therefore of opinion that this claim ought to be confirmed.

ON THE RE-ISSUE OF A BOUNTY LAND WARRANT TO AN ASSIGNEE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 14, 1836.

Mr. CHAMBERS, of Pennsylvania, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, made the following report:

That they have considered the petition of John McCarroll, junior, and the documents accompanying the same; by which it appears that a military land warrant was granted to James Wilder, No. 2429, for one hundred acres, for three years' services in the Virginia State line, bearing date the 9th February, 1784, and that in 1802, Spencer Wilder, claiming the same as brother and heir of the said James Wilder, the deceased, transferred and sold his right to said warrant to John Carroll, senior, which said John Carroll, senior, by his deed of transfer, bearing date the 21st October, 1831, did grant and convey to the said John Carroll, junior. No claim has been made by any person to the said warrant under the said James Wilder, as heir or otherwise, other than the said Spencer Wilder, who assigned the same as above stated; and after a lapse of thirty years, it may be well presumed that the said Spencer Wilder was the only heir and representative of the said James. In the opinion of the committee, the petitioner ought to be allowed scrip to be issued on said warrant, to the said John McCarroll, junior, on his giving bond and satisfactory security, as proposed by him, to refund the value thereof, should the heirs or other claimants under said James Wilder show a better claim thereto than the said John McCarroll, junior; and the committee report a bill to that effect.

ON AN EXCHANGE OF LAND UNFIT FOR CULTIVATION FOR OTHER LAND.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 14, 1836.

Mr. MAY, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of James Trumble, reported:

That it appears to your committee that the petitioner was a soldier in the late war between the United States and Great Britain, in Captain Green's company, of the third regiment of infantry, in which capacity he served out the period of his enlistment faithfully, and was honorably discharged. That he received for his services as a soldier a bounty in land, and that he holds a patent from the government for the southwest quarter of section No. 29, in township No. 13 north, in range No. 6 east of the 4th principal meridian, situate in the district of land set apart for military bounties in the State of Illinois. It also appears to your committee that this tract of land possesses little or no value, and is entirely unfit for cultivation, and the petitioner asks for relief by being allowed to surrender to the government the tract of land above described, and to locate another in lieu thereof, upon any of the public lands lying within the limits of the State aforesaid, and not otherwise appropriated.

To a compliance with this request on the part of the petitioner, your committee can see no very forcible objection, especially when it is considered that Congress has, from time to time, passed laws providing for relief in all such cases as the one now presented. It may be urged that the petitioner ought to have availed himself of the opportunity afforded by the enactment of previous laws to obtain the redress he now asks, but this objection ought not, in the opinion of your committee, to have much weight, since a great variety of causes, over which the petitioner could have had no control, and which it is not necessary now to enumerate, may have operated to prevent him. Congress has also, from time to time, enacted laws for the relief of the purchasers of the public lands, by allowing them to charge all erroneous entries made by them, whether the land be valuable or otherwise; and scarcely a session of Congress passes over at which private bills are not passed, authorizing persons who have made purchases of land possessing no value, to change their entries or locations, and to select other lands in lieu thereof. The soldier, then, who, in the hour of difficulty and of danger, has borne the hardships and privations incident to his profession, and who, to defend his country from foreign enemies, has cheerfully obeyed her call, by marching to the tented field, certainly deserves no less at the hands of his country than the citizen whose life and property have been defended by his valor. It were a lasting reproach should his country, in his old age, refuse him a spot of land upon which to obtain a comfortable subsistence, and compel him to take for his services land which is of no value whatever, and which is an incumbrance rather than a benefit. Your committee, therefore, report a bill for his relief.

ON AN EXCHANGE OF LAND UNFIT FOR CULTIVATION FOR OTHER LAND.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 14, 1836.

MR. MAY, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Michael Thornton, reported:

That it appears, from the affidavit of the petitioner, that during the late war with Great Britain, he served as a private soldier in the army of the United States, in Captain Myers's company, of the thirteenth regiment of infantry; that he was honorably discharged from the service, and that he received as a bounty for his services a patent for the southeast quarter of section 12, in township No. 3 north, of range No. 2 west of the 4th principal meridian, situate in the military bounty tract of the State of Illinois. It also appears that the petitioner is still the rightful owner of the land aforesaid, and that he has not suffered it to be encumbered by sale for taxes or otherwise. It is further made to appear to your committee, by the concurrent testimony of witnesses who have personally examined the above tract of land, that it possesses no value, and is entirely unfit for cultivation, and for these reasons the petitioner prays relief, by being allowed to locate upon any of the public lands, in the State aforesaid, one quarter section in lieu of the tract patented to him for his services as aforesaid.

Your committee can entertain no doubt but that it was the intention of the government, in making enlistments for the army, to give to the soldier who should serve out his time faithfully, and receive an honorable discharge, a tract of land; upon which, after enduring the toils and sufferings of war, he could sit down in quiet repose, with the certain prospect of enjoying a competency from the avails of the land earned by his services and his sufferings. And where it is made to appear that this intention on the part of the government has not been fulfilled, justice would seem to require its speedy execution. An obscure but meritorious private soldier is no less an object of his country's justice than the most distinguished and highly favored general officer. Your committee, therefore, report a bill.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 14, 1836.

MR. HUNTSMAN, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition and accompanying documents, of Joseph Neibert, of the State of Louisiana, reported:

That the petitioner alleges that he is the purchaser, or assignee, from Job Bass, of three several lots of land, lying on the Mississippi river, in the parish of Carroll, and State of Louisiana, in the district of lands north of Red river, and offered for sale at Ouachita, being in township No. 20, range thirteen east, by the name and description of lots No. 19 for 160.50; lot No. 20 for 164.25; and lot No. 21 for 163.35: making, in the aggregate, 488.60 acres; which was purchased by said Job Bass, in good faith, by entry at the land office, and he took the Receiver's receipt for the payment in the ordinary way as purchaser, &c.

That very valuable improvements have been made on the lands in building, clearing, and leveeing the bank of the Mississippi. The petitioner further represents, that after some time it was discovered by the receiver, that these lots had been previously laid off for the use of schools, in pursuance of the acts of Congress in such case made and provided; and that the receiver proposed to refund the money. It is furthermore represented, that this proposition could not be acceded to, by reason of the great expense and labor bestowed upon the lands by the purchaser, and by reason of there being other vacant and unappropriated lands adjoining these lots, which the administrators of the school lands are willing to take in place of those lots purchased by the petitioner.

The administrators of the school lands have, in a sufficiently authenticated form, given their assent to the arrangement proposed by the petitioner, and recommend that Congress shall confirm his title as prayed for, and permit them to take lands in lieu thereof (elsewhere in the parish), which belong to the United States, and remain unsold in the above mentioned parish of Carroll. The testimony exhibited is full and satisfactory as to the truth of the allegations set forth in the petition.

Your committee are of opinion that the prayer of the petitioner is reasonable, and ought to be granted, and have reported a bill accordingly.

APPLICATION OF INDIANA FOR AN EXTENSION OF THE ACT GRANTING PRE-EMPTIONS TO ACTUAL SETTLERS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 14, 1836.

A JOINT RESOLUTION relative to pre-emption to settlers on public lands of the United States, within the State of Indiana.

Resolved, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives requested, to use their exertions to continue in force the act of Congress granting pre-emptions to settlers on the lands of the United States, so far as to grant pre-emptions to settlers on any of the lands of the United States which have been in market for the term of three years, and that his excellency, the governor, transmit a copy of this joint resolution to each of our senators and representatives in Congress as soon as practicable.

ON THE CORRECTION OF AN ERROR IN THE ISSUING OF A CONTRACT FOR LAND IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 15, 1836.

Mr. LINCOLN, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of David I. Talbot, praying the correction of an error in the issuing of a patent from the General Land Office, by which he is deprived of his title to a quarter-section of land entered by him in the land office of St. Louis, Missouri, reported:

That it satisfactorily appears, from the papers and evidence in the case, that the petitioner is assignee of his father, Haile Talbot, who, on the 18th day of October, 1818, entered by purchase, with the register of the land office at St. Louis, Missouri, the northwest quarter-section of section twenty-five, township forty-six, north of the base line, and range five west of the fifth principal meridian, in Missouri, and that, upon subsequent application to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, by the said David I. Talbot, for a patent of said quarter-section of land, it was denied to him, upon the ground that the same section had already then been patented to one Robert Wash, upon the New Madrid claim of one Peter Perron. This patent, the committee find, was issued immediately between the date of making the entry by said David I. Talbot, and the time of his application for the patent, upon an erroneous certificate of the surveyor general of the land district, to the recorder of land titles, dated the 20th January, 1820, that the New Madrid certificate of Peter Perron had been located by the before-named Robert Wash, on the before-described quarter-section, now claimed by the petitioner. The original certificate of entry, an authentic copy of which, from the surveyor's office, is furnished by the petitioner, shows that the entry of the before-mentioned New Madrid claim, by the before-named Robert Wash, was of the northeast quarter-section of the section and township aforesaid; and that, by mistake only, in the transcript and certificate of entry, this patent was made to issue and apply to the northwest section, claimed by the petitioner.

A certificate from the before-mentioned Robert Wash, under date of December 17, 1834, among the papers in the case, asserts that his location of the New Madrid claim was on the northeast and not on the northwest quarter-section of the section and township aforesaid, and he expressly disclaims any right to the latter quarter-section, claimed by the petitioner.

A letter from Elijah Hayward, esq., late Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated the 6th February, 1835, fully recognizes the occurrence of this error, and suggests the only mode of correction in an appeal to Congress.

The committee being of opinion that a mistake has occurred, by which the petitioner is injuriously prevented from obtaining his patent to the land to which he is entitled, and believing that the error may be corrected by authorizing the Commissioner of the General Land Office to issue the patent, on the surrender, by the said Robert Wash, of the patent which he disclaims, and, as a substitute for which, for aught appears to the committee, he may yet receive a patent for the northeast quarter of the section entered by him, report a bill.

PAYMENTS CONNECTED WITH THE PURCHASE AND MANAGEMENT OF THE PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 18, 1836.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 16, 1836.

SIR: Since my report on the 13th instant, a further communication has been received from the register on the subject of payments connected with the purchase and management of the public lands.

It is annexed, and shows the payments from the Treasury of $5,956,024 in pursuance of the original act of Congress of April 30, 1802, and others subsequent thereto, applying five per cent. on the sales of land in Ohio and other new States for public roads to and within them, in consideration of their exempting said lands from taxation till five years after their sale.

As these payments are deemed by many to be chargeable to the management of the public lands, the account is herewith submitted to the consideration of the Senate, showing that part paid to the States for roads within them, being three of the above five per cent., and that part paid and advanced for the Cumberland road on account of the other two per cent.; if added to the sum before presented, they would make an aggregate for the purchase and management of the public lands of $63,608,231.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. MARTIN VAN BUREN,
Vice President of the United States, and President of the Senate.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Register's Office, January 15, 1836.

SIR: In my communication of the 11th instant, to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, relative to the cost of the purchase and management of the public lands, the amount of the three per cent. payable to the Western States on the proceeds of sales, and the cost of the Cumberland road, were not stated. The sums are stated below, and are respectfully submitted for your consideration, whether they legitimately come within the scope of the resolution of the Senate of the 5th instant:

Amount of the 3 per cent. payable to the State of Ohio, December 31, 1834	$404,741 09
Amount of the 3 per cent. payable to the State of Indiana, December 31, 1834	238,848 72
Amount of the 3 per cent. payable to the State of Illinois, December 31, 1833	73,441 73
Amount of the 3 per cent. payable to the State of Missouri, December 31, 1833	69,583 21
	$786,616 75

The payments from the Treasury, on account of the Cumberland road, were as follows, viz.:

For the road east of the Ohio	$2,827,506 88
For the road west of the Ohio	2,341,900 88
		$5,169,407 76
		$5,956,024 51

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

T. L. SMITH, Register.

APPLICATION OF ILLINOIS FOR PERMISSION TO RELINQUISH THE SIXTEENTH SECTIONS OF LAND, WHEN VALULESS, AND SELECT OTHER LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 18, 1836.

Resolved, by the general assembly of the State of Illinois, That the senators and representatives in Congress from this State, be requested to use their exertions to procure the passage of a law, authorizing the extinguishment of sections number sixteen, in every township where these sections, upon being offered for sale, will not sell for one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, and the selection of an equal quantity of land, in quarter-sections, in lieu thereof.

APPLICATION OF ILLINOIS FOR THE CORRECTION OF CONFLICTING LOCATIONS OF SURVEYS OF THE PUBLIC LANDS, AND PRIVATE LAND CLAIMS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 18, 1836.

Whereas, by the authority of the several acts of Congress, a number of locations of land warrants was made in the present State of Illinois, previous to the general survey of the lands of the general government, and the lines of said surveys do not correspond with the lines of the public surveys; and, whereas, the said public surveys were connected with said locations, commonly called private surveys, by calculation, assuming as a data the land represented in said surveys, which is found by admeasurement to be incorrect, by which the fractions adjoining said surveys do not contain the acres represented on the plats in the land offices, which fact has, in some instances, prevented the sale of said fractions, and, in other instances, citizens purchasing said fractions have been disappointed in the quantity of land sold them; therefore,

Resolved, by the general assembly of the State of Illinois, That our senators be instructed, and our representatives requested, to use their exertions to procure the passage of a law remedying the above-named grievance.

And be it further resolved, That the governor be requested to transmit to each of our senators and representatives a copy of the foregoing resolutions.

JAMES SEMPLE, Speaker of the House of Representatives.
A. M. JENKINS, Speaker of the Senate.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 27, 1836.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of this date, covering a memorial of the legislature of the State of Illinois, stating, in substance, that the surveys of the private claims were executed previous to those of the public lands, which, being connected with the lines of the private claim surveys, by calculation, are erroneous in consequence of incorrectness in such surveys, and that the contents of the fractions adjoining such claims are consequently incorrect. Upon reference to the plats in this office, it appears in every instance, so far as an examination has been made, that the lines of the public surveys were actually run to, and connected with, the lines of the private claims, by measurement on the ground, and that wherever the public surveys, thus closed upon the lines of the public claims, corners were established thereon, and the present memorial conveys the first intimation, so far as is recollected, that those surveys are generally incorrect.

There may be, perhaps, some cases of erroneous connection, but of which this office is unapprized at present, and which, if pointed out, the office would, even under the existing laws, assume the responsibility of having corrected, by resurveys, as has been done in other States.

The statements in the memorial go to show, however, the expediency of some legislative action on the subject generally, by which the office would be authorized, whenever the circumstances of the case rendered it necessary, to employ an agent, under the direction of the surveyer general, to make a personal examination on the ground, with a view of ascertaining the nature and extent of such alleged errors, and to have them corrected; particularly in those cases where, from the limited quantity of the work to be performed, it is found impracticable to procure a competent deputy to undertake it for the present maximum allowance.

The memorial is herewith returned.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1392. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 19, 1836.

Mr. HUNTSMAN, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom were referred the petition and documents of George Fead, reported:

That the documents accompanying the petition show, that on the 3d day of April, 1770, a grant upon quit-rent seems to have issued to George Fead, for 2,000 acres, situated "Northeast about fifty-eight miles above Mobile town, on the east end of Alabama river." It seems, from an inspection of the grant, that no other consideration was given than that of quit-rent, and it emanated from the crown of England. The treaty of the 10th of September, 1763, between Great Britain and Spain, signed at Paris, transferred the Florida country, east and west, to Great Britain, which was taken possession of by the latter power, and so held until its retrocession, in 1783.

There is no evidence to show that the grantee ever took possession of the property, in order to fulfil the conditions of the grant, or pay the rents, or whether he died with or without heirs; if the former, whether they are or were foreigners, natives, denizens, or ever became inhabitants or citizens of this country, or to what country they belong. A statement of these facts, supported by even presumptive testimony, would have enabled your committee to have entered into the examination with more light than it is possible for them to possess, but the petition carefully abstains from giving any information upon those points. If there was no other objection to this grant, your committee believe it is a bad precedent, and one which should not be followed, to confirm grants to the heirs of the grantee, unless there is some proof that he had heirs. It opens the door for much speculation at the expense of the government, by enabling speculators to have the land sold for taxes, and acquire a title by purchase at tax sales, when perhaps there are no heirs to the grantee, or if there be any, they are foreigners who never heard of the claim. That some frauds of this description have been practised upon the government, your committee verily believe.

But these are not the most decisive objections to the confirmation of this grant. When the Floridas were retroceded by the treaty of 1783, from Great Britain to Spain, the 5th article contains the following stipulations: "His Britannic Majesty likewise cedes and guarantees in full right to his Catholic Majesty, East and also West Florida. His Catholic Majesty agrees that the British inhabitants, or others who may have been subjects of Great Britain in the said country, may retire in full security and liberty, when they shall think proper, and may sell their estates and remove their effects, as well as their persons, without being restrained in their emigration, except on account of debts or criminal prosecutions, the term limited for this emigration being fixed to the space of eighteen months, to be computed from the day of the exchange of ratifications of the present treaty. But if, from the value of the possessions of the English proprietors, they shall not be able to dispose of them within the said term, then his Catholic Majesty shall grant them a prolongation proportionate to that end."

This treaty bears date the 3d of September, 1783. The policy of the Spanish government, with respect to its colonial possessions, was to exclude, as far as practicable, all persons who were not Spaniards, or who did not profess the Roman Catholic religion. The subjects of Great Britain, professing almost universally the Protestant religion, were excluded from a residence in the country, retroceded in this instance entirely. They were left at liberty by the treaty to either sell their possessions or abandon them.

The presumption is, that those possessing any value were sold because there was no application, as is believed, by either the British government or its subjects to extend the term limited for the sale of those lands in the treaty. If the British subjects were injured by this regulation, their own government was bound, and no doubt did make remuneration therefor. The Spanish government held and possessed the country from the treaty of 1783, for nearly forty years, until the 22d February, 1819, when it was ceded to the United States. During all this time the Spanish government never considered this title valid; but, on the contrary, it was considered null and void by that government, and perhaps it was an abandonment in any government. It is a circumstance somewhat remarkable, that no application was made to the Spanish authorities for the space of near forty years after the issuance of this grant for its confirmation. This is a circumstance, when taken in connection with the 5th article of the treaty, to show that the grantee, or his heirs, did not believe that the grant was legal, or that they retained any property in it, and that it had become void. Is the United States under any other, or further obligation to confirm this grant than Spain would have been if the country had still remained under her dominion? It is believed that the 8th article of the treaty between the United States and Spain, dated the 22d of February, 1819, at Washington, reads as follows: "All the lands made before the 24th of January, 1818, by his Catholic Majesty, or by his lawful authority, in the said territories ceded by his Majesty to the United States, shall be ratified and confirmed to the persons in possession of those lands, to the same extent that the same grants would be valid if the territories had remained under the dominion of his Catholic Majesty. But the owners in possession of said lands, who by reason of recent circumstances of the Spanish nation, and by the revolution in Europe, have been prevented from fulfilling the conditions of their grants, shall complete them within the terms limited in the same, respectively, from the date of this treaty, in default of which, the said grants shall be null and void." This article imposes no obligation upon the United States whatever, for two reasons. First, it only provides for the owners who were then in the actual possession of the lands claimed by them. Secondly, it only provides for such grants as had been made before the 24th of January, 1818, by the King of Spain or by his competent authority, and it has no relation to British grants whatever, which is a further proof that his Catholic Majesty considered that all such grants of land made by the British authorities, and which had not been sold, was null and void by the treaty of 1783.

The committee are of opinion that this claim does not come within the provision of any treaty or act of Congress, by way of establishing its validity. On the 8th of May, 1822, Congress passed an act (Land Laws, page 825) establishing a board of commissioners to examine all Florida claims that the United States were in any way bound to provide for, according to the treaty with Spain of 1819. By the provisions of that act, the claims were to be filed by the 1st of May, 1823, or they were declared void. The act of February, 1824, extended the term until the 1st of September thereafter, and if not filed, they were declared void. By the act of March, 1825, the last provision for filing these claims with the board of commissioners was extended to the 1st of January, 1826, shortly after which, the commission was closed. It is presumed that this claim never was laid before the board, or if so, that it must have been rejected. The petition is silent upon the subject. The only reason assigned in the petition in favor of the grant, is that Congress have confirmed some in the same situation. The reason should admonish us, that if Congress have incautiously permitted the United States to be deprived of its domain, without either consideration or obligation on her part, that the representatives should double their vigilance for the future in detecting claims which are entirely without foundation. Your committee are of opinion that the prayer of the petitioner is unreasonable, and ought not to be granted.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1393. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 19, 1836.

Mr. HUNTSMAN, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of the heirs of Charles Stewart, reported:

That the claim appears to be founded upon various grants from the British government to Charles Stewart, for six several tracts of land in Florida Territory, to wit: 150, granted July 24, 1770; 1261½, granted April 7, 1773; 1000, granted May 16, 1775; 1000, granted May 16, 1775; 1000, granted May 16, 1775; 1000, granted May 16, 1775. Your committee having bestowed a full consideration upon the subject of these grants, are of opinion that they are subject to all the objections which exist to the claim of George Fead, and the House is respectfully referred to the report made in that case for further information upon the subject. The committee consider that the prayer of the petitioner is unreasonable, and ought not to be granted.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1394. [1ST SESSION.

FOR THE RECOGNITION OF THE TITLE OF THE HEIRS OF JULIEN DUBUQUE TO LAND IN IOWA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 20, 1836.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

The heirs of Auguste Chouteau and John Mullanphy, late of the city of St. Louis, in the State of Missouri, now deceased, respectfully represent, That on the 10th of November, 1796, the Baron de Carondelet, then intendant and governor general of the Spanish government in Louisiana, granted in full property to one Julien Dubuque, a subject of that government, a tract of land called "The Spanish Mines," lying on the west bank of, and extending up, the river Mississippi, from the upper hills of the little river Maquanquitais, to the hills of Mesquabinongues, being about seven leagues on the western bank of the Mississippi by three leagues in depth, which the Fox Indians, then in possession of the country, had granted to the said Julien Dubuque, in full council, on the 22d of September, 1788; and that at the treaty made by General Harrison with the Sac and Fox tribes of Indians, at St. Louis, on the 3d of November, 1804, an additional article was added, expressly reserving and recognising the grant to Dubuque, lest it should be considered as retroceded by the general terms of the treaty. The petitioners refer to the assent of the Indians only to show the fairness of the grant to Dubuque as it respected the Indians, and not as affecting the validity of the grant as between the grantor and grantee, for Spain never regarded the Indian title in making grants of land. All question of Indian title is now at an end as to the country in dispute between the claimants and the United States. This grant was afterward, about the year 1806, laid before the board of commissioners appointed by the United States to adjust private land claims in Louisiana, and by that board held to be a complete title, that required no adjudication by them, under the laws of the United States.

On the 20th of October, 1804, the said Julien Dubuque, for the sum of ten thousand eight hundred and forty-eight dollars and sixty cents, paid him by Auguste Chouteau, late of St. Louis, deceased, sold and conveyed to him seventy-two thousand three hundred and twenty-four arpens of said land, to be taken off the lower or southern end of the tract; and on the 10th of April, 1807, the said Auguste Chouteau, for the sum of fifteen thousand dollars, sold and conveyed to John Mullanphy, late of St. Louis, now deceased, the undivided half, or thirty-six thousand one hundred and sixty-two arpens of the tract so bought of Dubuque.

Dubuque continued in possession of the land from the time of the grant until his death, about the year 1810, after which the residue of the grant was sold under the laws of the Territory of Louisiana, to divers persons, for the payment of his debts. Some of the assignees of Dubuque have continued in possession of the land from that day, so far as our relations with the Indians would permit, until they were dispossessed by the United States. After the last treaty of cession from the Sacs and Foxes to the United States, including Dubuque's mines, the executive officers of the United States, supposing the grant from Spain to Dubuque to be of no avail, without any judicial investigation or decision of the validity of the title of the claimants, or any of the forms of law, dispossessed the claimants by military force, and proceeded to lease their lands under a supposed authority to lease the public lead mines, and continue to hold the possession by superior force, and have caused great waste and damage to the claimants, by destroying their timber, digging up their soil, and carrying away their lead ore.

The petitioners insist that, independently of the assent of the Indians, which Spain never regarded in such grants, the grant to Dubuque, by the intendant general, possessing full power to make it, was valid and binding between Spain and the grantee; that it was made for valuable consideration of services rendered by Dubuque to the Spanish crown in exploring the country, and discovering and developing its resources; and that under the treaty ceding Louisiana to the United States, and the principles recognised by the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of United States vs. Arredondo and others, at January term, 1832, and in other cases, the claimants are entitled to the land and the peaceable possession under the grant to Dubuque, and their mesne conveyance from him. No jurisdiction over this case was given to the last board of commissioners. Heretofore there has been no adequate judicial tribunal in the country of Dubuque's mines to grant redress in the premises, and the petitioners are apprehensive that the United States will proceed to sell the country, including Dubuque's grant, as public lands of the United States, and by so doing, involve the claimants in ruinous litigation with great numbers of purchasers, and array the interests and passions of a whole country against their title; they therefore pray Congress to take their case into immediate consideration, and either to relinquish the pretensions of the United States to the lands granted to Dubuque, or, at least, suspend them from public sale, until the title can be adjudicated according to the constitutional rights of the claimants; and, in the meantime, that they be restored to their possessions, until the title shall be decided according to the laws of the land.

LOCATION OF CLAIMS AND RESERVATIONS OF THE CHOCTAW INDIANS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 20, 1836.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 20, 1836.

SIR: In compliance with a resolution of the Senate, dated the 11th instant, I have the honor to transmit a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, accompanied by documents numbered from 1 to 18, and which are believed to contain all the information in this department on the subject of the resolution.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 18, 1836.

SIR: In compliance with your reference to this office of the resolution of the Senate of the United States of the 11th instant, in the following words: "Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury communicate to the senate the instructions given to the agent for the location of the Choctaw claims, and the registers and receivers of public moneys of the different land offices in Mississippi, in relation to the location of the reservations and claims of the Choctaw Indians under the treaty made at Dancing Rabbit creek, on the 27th of September, 1830; and also if any, and what claims, under the fourteenth article of the treaty, have been presented since the removal of the Choctaw Indians west of the Mississippi river, and the amount of land so claimed; and whether any and what quantity of land has been reserved at the late sales proclaimed in Mississippi for the satisfaction of these claims; also, whether any claim has been sanctioned by the department, under the fourteenth article of the treaty, when the claimant's name was not found registered by the agent, as signifying his intention to remain and become a citizen of the State of Mississippi or Alabama," I beg leave to report, in reply to the first clause of the resolution, that the "agent" referred to was appointed by, and has acted under the directions of the War Department, and that the instructions given by this office to the land officers, in relation to the locations under the provisions of the Choctaw treaty of 1830, with the correspondence upon which those instructions were predicated, are contained in the accompanying papers, numbered 1 to 12, inclusive. And in reply to the inquiries in the second clause of the resolution, I have to state that the only information which has been communicated to this office by the land officers in relation to the lately alleged claims under the fourteenth article of that treaty, is contained in the papers numbered 13 to 18, inclusive. Copies of the last three have been furnished to the Secretary of War for his information.

All which is respectfully submitted.

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

No. 1.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, Office Indian Affairs, June 8, 1833.

SIR: Colonel George W. Martin has been selected by this department to locate reservations under the nineteenth article of the treaty with the Choctaws of September 27, 1830.

I have to request that you will direct copies of the plats of the one hundred and twelve townships and fractional townships which have been surveyed, to be prepared and forwarded to Colonel Martin. As the department is not informed of the post-office nearest to him, you are requested to enclose them to General John Coffee, Florence, Alabama.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ELBERT HERRING.

No. 2.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, June 17, 1833.

SIR: Your letter to the Commissioner, of the 8th instant, has been duly received, wherein you state that Colonel George W. Martin has been appointed by the department to locate reservations under the nineteenth article of the treaty with the Choctaws of September 27, 1830, and request that the Commissioner would direct copies of the plats of the one hundred and twelve townships and fractional townships which have been surveyed, to be prepared and forwarded to Colonel Martin.

It devolves upon me to advise you that, with the present force at the disposal of this office, it will be impracticable to comply with your request, and that the surveyor general of Mississippi will not be enabled to furnish such extra copies within any reasonable time. The surveyor is already required to prepare triplicate plats of the public surveys, and until such triplicates are completed, a fourth set cannot be ordered.

Under these circumstances it will be advisable, and indeed indispensably necessary, for Colonel Martin to make references to the plats in the office of the surveyor general at Washington, Mississippi, (which office is directed by a law of the last session of Congress to be removed to Jackson,) or to the land officers of the northeastern or northwestern district. The President has designated a town recently established on the Yellow Bushe (a stream tributary to the Yazoo), which is situate within about three miles of the old missionary establishment at Elliott, as the seat of the land office for the northwestern district. The town is, I believe, named Tuscahomo. He has designated the town of Columbus, on the Tombeckbee, as the seat of the land office for the northeastern district.

The necessary instructions preparatory to the opening of those offices have been given. The officers have not as yet received the late advice of the President's designation of the sites of those offices.

The first step to be observed by the officers will be to obtain the township plats from the surveyor general. Colonel Martin may, in the mean time, decide whether it would be more convenient to make reference to the office of the surveyor general or at the district land offices.

I would further remark that, in the location of the numerous reservations under various Indian treaties heretofore made, it has never been customary to furnish copies of the plats to the Indian agents. They have always obtained the information to be afforded by the plats, by reference either to the surveyor's office or the district land office.

I have to request that you will have the goodness to furnish this office with a copy of the instructions to Colonel Martin, as soon as your convenience will admit.

I am, very respectfully, &c.

JOHN M. MOORE, Acting Commissioner.

ELBERT HERRING, Esq., Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

No. 3.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, Office Indian Affairs, July 1, 1833.

SIR: I enclose, herewith, a copy of the instructions to George W. Martin, esq., the agent appointed to make the selections of the locations of the tracts of land granted to the Choctaws by the treaty of September 27, 1830.

Owing to the difficulty of obtaining copies of the plats, as stated in your letter of the 17th ultimo, I have this day written to Mr. Martin, directing him to make reference to the plats in the office of the surveyor general of Mississippi, so far as may be necessary to the accomplishment of his duties, and have informed him that such instructions would be given by you to the land officers as would insure him every facility in the prosecution of his labors.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ELBERT HERRING.

JOHN M. MOORE, Esq., Acting Commissioner General Land Office.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, June 26, 1833.

SIR: You are hereby appointed to make the selections of the locations of the tracts of land granted to the Choctaws by the fourteenth, fifteenth, and nineteenth articles of the treaty of September 27, 1830, concluded at Dancing Rabbit creek. Your compensation will be five dollars per day, to include services and expenses while engaged in this duty; and you are authorized to employ an interpreter, if necessary, and if one attached to the agency cannot be detailed to attend you, and to allow him two dollars and a half per day, in full for his expenses and services. These claims will be paid upon accounts certified by both yourself and the interpreter.

The department is informed that plats of the surveys of one hundred and twelve townships have been received at the General Land Office, and that the exterior lines of (one) one hundred and seventy-six townships have been run, the sectioning of a majority of which is in progress. Copies of the plats received here will be forwarded for you, from the Land Office, to the care of General Coffee. You will please to apprize the department of your address, that copies of the other plats may be sent to you direct.

Upon application to Colonel Ward, or William Armstrong, esq., at the agency, you will be furnished with copies of registers of the different classes of reservees in the three districts, and may obtain all the information you will require in the fulfilment of this duty. These registers are supposed to be complete, and you will be governed by them in the location and assignment of reservations in all cases, unless otherwise directed by this department.

The general provisions of the treaty are, that the reservations shall be bounded by sectional or quarter-sectional lines of survey, and include the improvements of the reservees. An exception to this rule occurs in the fifteenth article, and in the first clause of the nineteenth, by which two of the four sections granted to the three chiefs and to Colonel Folsom are to be located "on unoccupied, unimproved land." You will consult the wishes of these persons in locating their sections, taking care not to interfere with the possessory rights of any other Indian. The half sections and quarter sections allowed to heads of families, in the fourteenth article, for their children, will adjoin the location of the parents.

The number of reservees provided for in the third and fourth clauses of the nineteenth article is limited, and the extent of their respective reservations is proportioned to the number of acres in cultivation. You will learn from the registers the names of the persons entitled to land under the several classes. In locating the three quarter sections granted to those who shall have cultivated thirty acres or more, you will observe that the treaty provides they shall be "contiguous and adjoining." The reservations allowed under these two clauses are also to be located so as to include that part of the improvements which contains the dwelling-house. If the contingency should happen, contemplated in the latter part of the fourth clause, that the number of reservees should exceed the number stipulated for, you will call upon one or more of the chiefs of the district to which they belong to decide who shall be excluded. For instance, one half section is granted to the cultivators of from twenty to thirty acres, the number not to exceed four hundred. If there should be four hundred and fifty claimants, the chiefs are to decide upon the fifty whose claims must be rejected.

The fifth clause provides for the assignment to the captains whose cultivated possessions may entitle them, under the previous clauses, to less than a section of an additional half section. The half section must adjoin the tract which includes their improvements and dwelling-house. The registers also will show you the names and number of the orphans entitled to reservations.

If any of the Choctaws have no improvements, or if the location of a tract would include the improvements of more than one of them, in that case you must exercise a sound discretion respecting the person to whom such tract shall be assigned. It is desirable that the parties interested should decide for themselves, or agree to submit to the determination of their chief. But if they will not do either, the best method will be to draw lots in their presence. It is also desirable that the reservees of each district should be located together, and as near to each other as the preservation to each of them of his improvements will permit.

You will establish such permanent marks upon each reservation as will show its extent and boundaries. You will also open a new register, and enter upon it the names of the reservees, and the number of the sections, half-sections, or quarter-sections, as marked on the plats of survey assigned to them respectively. The originals of this register you will leave with the sub-agent, William Armstrong, esq.: a copy you will forward to this department.

The department relies upon your zeal and exertions to execute any part of your duty under these instructions in a manner accordant with the obligations of the government, and satisfactory to the Indians.

I enclose a copy of the treaty.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN ROBB, Acting Secretary of War.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, July 5, 1833.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 1st instant, covering a copy of the instructions given by the War Department to George W. Martin, esq., in relation to the location of the reservations granted to individuals by the Choctaw treaty of 1830. Perceiving that those instructions are silent upon several points which have already been brought before this office for decision, I beg leave to enclose copies of the letters containing those decisions, for your information, with a request that they may be made the basis of additional instructions to Mr. Martin.

Copies of the letter to Mr. Armstrong have been furnished to several persons interested in the subject, as explanatory of the manner in which the locations would have to be made.

I am, &c.,

JOHN M. MOORE, Acting Commissioner.

Hon. E. HERRING, Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, April 28, 1832.

SIR: Your letter of the 23d instant to the Secretary of War having been referred to this office, I have to give the following answers to your several questions, viz.:

"First. How will the reservations be located where there are two or more neighbors living so near to each other that their houses fall within one reservation? Will they be bound to locate adjoining, or will they be entitled to floats? If so, who will have the preference; will they draw for choice, or will the oldest settler be bound to take the reservation including his own dwelling?"

Answer. The reservations may be located by taking such legal subdivisions of adjacent sections as will give to the reserve as square a form as practicable. Thus, if different improvements are so situated upon the same section, or subdivision of a section, as to allow the parties, by taking legal subdivisions, to obtain their respective improvements, they will have to take such legal subdivisions, together with such adjacent tracts as may be necessary to give the required shape and contents to the reservations.

If, however, two or more reservees have settled upon and improved the smallest legal subdivision of a section, and thus rendered it impracticable to make a division of the improvements by the selection of legal subdivisions, they will have to make an arrangement among themselves as to the manner in which the reservations are to be located.

"Secondly. Where a reservation falls in a fraction, as is often the case on the river, and the fraction falls short of the complement of acres, can the reservation be completed from the adjoining fraction?"

Answer. Yes, in cases including and based upon actual improvement, taking care, however, that the subdivisions which may be located to complete the quantity be so designated as to give the entire reserve a square form; but where a floating right is located on a fractional section, such fraction must be taken in full satisfaction of the quantity granted by the treaty.

"Thirdly. Where a reservation is granted to an individual by name in the treaty, for a certain number of acres, to include his improvement, and it turns out that he never had any in cultivation, where will his location be made—will he be entitled to a float, or is he deprived entirely of his reservation?"

Answer. The reservation having been granted in consequence of a supposed improvement by the individual named in the treaty, if it should appear that such individual had no improvement, he is not entitled to a reservation.

"Fourthly. Where a reservation has been positively granted in the treaty for a certain number of acres, and afterward the individual wishes to receive the benefits allowed citizens, and has given the notice within the six months after the ratification of the treaty, that he wishes to become a citizen, and hold his land accordingly, can he do so, or will he be held to his agreement set forth in the treaty, which he, of course, solicited when the same was made?"

The question is, can he abandon the treaty stipulation and receive a greater quantity of land from the government?

Answer. No. The claimant is only entitled to the quantity specially designated for him by the treaty.

I am, &c.

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

F. W. ARMSTRONG, Esq., Indian Agent, &c., Present.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, July 3, 1832.

SIR: I return the letter of Messrs. Cook and Ellis, enclosed in your note of this date, respecting the location of the reservation secured to Colonel David Fulsom, by the Choctaw treaty of 27th September, 1830.

The provision respecting Colonel F. is in the following words: "To Colonel David Fulsom, four sections, of which two shall include his present improvement, and two may be located elsewhere on unoccupied unimproved land." The two sections to include his present improvement must be located in one body, and include the improvement on which he then resided, and the floating sections must also be located in one body, and so far from being made to "cover the improvements in different parts of the nation," as desired by Messrs. Cook and Ellis, must, agreeably to the expressed words of the treaty, be located on "unoccupied, unimproved land." The reservation will have to be made by sections.

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

Hon. W. R. KING, Senate.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, August 15, 1832.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 27th ultimo, inquiring whether "floating claims for lands in the Choctaw purchase cannot be located on the different mission stations," I have to state, that it is expressly provided by the Choctaw treaty of September, 1830, that all the floating reservations should be located upon unoccupied and uncultivated lands. No location of a missionary station can, therefore, be sanctioned.

I am, &c.,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

W. S. COLQUHOUN, Columbus, Ohio.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 25, 1833.

SIR: I have the honor to return the letter enclosed in yours of the 22d instant, and, in answer thereto, have to state that a strict construction of the Choctaw treaty of September, 1830, would have prevented fractional sections from being located by the floating claims of half and quarter sections; but that, with a view of giving the most enlarged construction to it, for the benefit of the holders of these floating rights, the Indian agent was informed, on the 28th of April last, that a floating right might be located upon a fractional section, provided that the party making such location would take the fraction in full satisfaction of the whole quantity granted by the treaty. Mr. Murrell's wish to locate a floating claim upon two fractions cannot be acceded to.

An extract of so much of the letter to Mr. Armstrong as relates to the location of fractions is enclosed.

I am, very respectfully,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

Hon. GAB. MOORE, Senate.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 28, 1833.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 6th instant; and the subject of your proposed location of two fractional sections by a floating Choctaw reservation having been brought before this office by the Hon. Mr. Moore, I enclose herewith a copy of my letter to that gentleman of the 25th ultimo, stating that the location of a floating claim upon two fractions could not be sanctioned.

I am, very respectfully, &c.

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

WM. MURRELL, Esq., Coffeeville, Clarke county, Alabama.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 19, 1833.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 26th ultimo.

The second article of the supplementary treaty with the Choctaws having granted to Mr. Tuzan, among others, "half a section of land," in issuing the instructions it became necessary to say what tracts could be located under those words. "Half a section of land" is a description purely technical, and no other meaning could strictly be given to it, than that it was to be the half of a regular section, (a tract of a mile square,) agreeably to the public surveys; but as the treaty was to be liberally construed, and as a close adherence to the technical meaning of those words would have precluded the location of any tract made fractional by a water-course or other causes, it was deemed advisable to allow the holder of such a floating grant, the option of taking either a regular half section or a fractional section in lieu thereof. This construction is liberal, and can furnish no well-grounded cause of complaint, for if the holder of a reserve is not satisfied with the privilege of locating one fraction, he is not compelled to make such a location, but may conform to the words of the treaty and take a regular half section, it being entirely optional with him to take whichever location he may deem most advisable. I have, therefore, to repeat the decision heretofore communicated to you, that your location of a floating claim to "half a section of land" upon two fractions cannot be sanctioned.

I am, &c.

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

Mr. W. MURRELL, Coffeeville, Clarke county, Alabama.

No. 5.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, August 6, 1833.

SIR: Your letter of the 8th ultimo, with a newspaper copy of your publication in relation to the Choctaw reservations, has been received.

George W. Martin, esq., having been appointed agent to locate the reservations granted by the Choctaw treaty, your duties in relation thereto will be confined to entering, as reserved, upon the books and maps of your office, such tracts as Mr. Martin may designate as reservations, and you are to exercise no agency of any other kind in relation to those reservations, without special instructions from this office.

The President has not decided upon the forms which will have to be observed in the execution and acknowledgment of the conveyances of those reservations, in order that they may receive his approval; but, so soon as he does, the necessary instructions will be made out, and transmitted for the information and government of the persons interested.

I am, very respectfully, &c.

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

SAM'L GWINN, Esq., Register of the N. W. District, now at Clinton, Mississippi.

No. 6.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, August 20, 1833.

SIR: The Secretary of War having advised the Treasury Department, "that Colonel George W. Martin has been appointed to locate the reservations provided for in the treaty with the Choctaws of September 27, 1830, with the exception of those four orphans, the location of which has been assigned to Wm. Trahern, esq.," and that those gentlemen have been directed to make duplicate returns of their proceedings to the proper land offices,

I am instructed to require you to withhold from sale all lands which may be reported to you by either of those gentlemen, as Indian reservations under the aforesaid treaty. These tracts must be marked upon your plats and tract books, as being reserved for the respective reservees; and, at the close of each month, you will forward to this office one of the duplicate returns with which you will be furnished by the agents. Upon this return, you will certify that the lands therein mentioned have been marked upon your plats and tract books.

Should you discover any errors in those returns, or be apprized of any facts which should be made known to the executive before the reservations are finally acted upon, you will accompany the return by such a statement thereof as may be necessary.

I am, very respectfully, ELIJAH HAYWARD.

To the REGISTERS at Mount Salus, Chocchuma, Columbus, and Augusta, Mississippi.

No. 7.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, September 5, 1833.

SIR: By a proclamation of the President, of August 12, 1833, the lands ceded to the United States by the Choctaw Indians in the State of Mississippi, are required to be offered at public sale in the month of October or November next. By the treaty of cession, certain reservations are to be made in favor of individuals of the Choctaw tribe, and these reservations must be necessarily located before the lands are sold.

By a letter recently received from the locating agent there is reason to fear that this work cannot be completed before the time fixed for these sales, and I have therefore to request that instructions may be given to the proper registers and receivers to postpone the sales, upon the requisition of Colonel Martin, the agent, of such parts of the land as may be necessary, in order to carry into effect the stipulations of the treaty.

I have submitted this subject to the President, and it is with his approbation this letter is addressed to you.

Very respectfully, I am, &c.,

LEWIS CASS.

Hon. WM. J. DUANE, Secretary of the Treasury.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, September 10, 1833.

SIR: From representations recently received by the President of the United States, there is reason to apprehend that all the locations of lands stipulated to be reserved for the benefit of certain individuals of the Choctaw tribe of Indians, by treaty between the United States and the said tribe, concluded at Dancing Rabbit creek, on the 27th day of September, 1830, may not be duly perfected and made known, at the proper land offices, on or before the respective periods for the opening of the sales, as designated and prescribed in the proclamation bearing date the 12th August last; in consequence whereof I am charged by the President to authorize and direct you to withhold from public sale such tracts or portions of the land so proclaimed to be sold at your office, as the United States agents for locating the reservations on behalf of the Choctaws shall indicate to you as necessary and proper to be withheld from sale, in order fully to carry into effect the intentions of the treaty.

In order that this instruction may not have any prejudicial effect on the public sales, it is requested that you will regard it as confidential until the day of sale.

I am, very respectfully, &c. JNO. M. MOORE, Acting Commissioner.

P. S. George W. Martin is the general agent, and Col. Wm. Trahern the agent for locating the orphan reserves.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, September 28, 1833.

SIR: I transmit the copy of a letter addressed to the locating agent under the Choctaw treaty, and would suggest the propriety of your giving corresponding instructions to the proper registers and receivers. I would also suggest whether it would not be well to remove the injunction, heretofore laid upon those officers, to keep secret the fact of the necessity of withholding from sale, should such necessity be found to exist, any tracts required for the location of the Choctaw reservations, and where that duty cannot be performed before the day fixed for the sale.

Very respectfully, I am, sir, your obedient servant,

LEWIS CASS.

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office, Washington.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, September 27, 1833.

SIR: I regret to learn, that owing to some misunderstanding, the copy of the register of the names of the Choctaw Indians entitled to reservations, which is in the possession of Major Armstrong, has not been received by you. Another copy is preparing here, which will be ready for transmission in a day or two: but, in the meantime, I am apprehensive that this circumstance will delay the sale of at least a portion of the lands ceded by the Choctaws.

I am desirous that the inconvenience should be as little as possible, and I would therefore suggest to you the expediency (as you cannot now possibly complete the locations prior to the day appointed for the sale of the land) to fix upon such a district of country for the locations as will enable you to do justice to the Indians, and that the residue of the ceded territory be offered for sale, agreeably to the proclamation.

I do not myself see any objection to this course, and I think it will be promoting the public interest. Still, as it is possible there may be difficulties attending it of which I am not aware, I must refer the subject to your discretion. Be pleased to communicate with the surveyor general, and registers, and receivers on this subject.

Very respectfully,

LEWIS CASS.

Col. GEORGE W. MARTIN.

No. 10.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, September 30, 1833.

GENTLEMEN: On the 10th instant, instructions were issued to you, to withhold from the approaching sales of public lands in your district, such tracts or portions of the lands proclaimed to be sold, "as the United States agent for locating the reservations on the behalf of the Choctaws, shall designate to you as necessary and proper to be withheld from sale, in order fully to carry into effect the intentions of the treaty."

I am directed by the President to enclose for your information a copy of an instruction from the War Department, to the locating agent, George W. Martin, dated 27th instant, from which you will perceive that, owing to some misunderstanding, the copy of the register of names of the Choctaw Indians entitled to reservations, has not been received by the agent, and that another copy is preparing, to be transmitted.

Inasmuch as from the circumstance stated, the locating agent may find it necessary to withhold from sale a greater body of land than was first supposed to be necessary, I am charged by the President to say to you, that you are authorized to withhold from public sale as many townships or fractional townships, in contiguous bodies or otherwise, of the land proclaimed, as the agent may designate as necessary to accomplish the intentions of the treaty. You are requested to give public notice accordingly.

I am, very respectfully, &c.

JOHN M. MOORE, Acting Commissioner.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, October 14, 1834.

SIR: Herewith you will receive a copy of a letter from the Department of War, addressed to George W. Martin, esq., and dated the 11th instant, from which you will perceive that the President has modified the order precluding the agent from making locations under the 14th article of the Choctaw treaty, in behalf of persons who have not been registered, so far as to permit them to exhibit the evidence of their claims, and to authorize contingent locations in such cases as the agent may believe are embraced by the requisitions of the 14th article, and where the evidence establishes the fact that the omission of their names on the register was caused by the mistake or neglect of the agent: and, also directed, that the lands thus located be suspended from sale until the views of Congress in regard to them can be ascertained. I have, therefore, to request, that the necessary instructions may be issued without delay to the proper land officers, requiring them to suspend the lands from sale, according to the President's directions.

I am, respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

COMMISSIONER of the General Land Office.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, October 11, 1834.

SIR: The applications that have from time to time been presented to this department, by persons claiming reservations under the 14th article of the Choctaw treaty, that the sales of the sections they claim may be suspended, have been submitted to the President, who has directed the following instructions to be communicated to you.

In the cases that have been brought to the notice of this department, it has appeared from the evidence exhibited, that the names of the claimants were registered, and the record has been lost; or that the record was made on separate slips of paper, that cannot now be found; or that they applied verbally, and were led by the agent to believe that this was a compliance with the treaty; or that their application to be registered was refused without sufficient reason.

There has also been evidence exhibited to show that the agent certified that persons "caused their names to be registered," whose names are not upon the register returned by him. In this state of things, the President deems it to be his duty to modify the order that precluded you from locating sections for persons not upon this register, in order that the parties may have an opportunity to obtain the action of Congress upon their claims.

You will therefore give public notice, that persons who consider themselves entitled to reservations under the 14th article, and whose names are not upon the register of Colonel Ward, will exhibit to you the evidence in support of their claims. This evidence must show that they were citizens of the Choctaw nation, heads of families, and did signify their intention to become citizens within the time prescribed by the treaty. It must also show the time of their application to be registered, and the conversation and circumstances relating to it.

If they bring themselves within the requisition of the 14th article, and the evidence of credible and intelligent witnesses induces you to believe that the omission of their names on the register was caused by the mistake or neglect of the agent, you will make locations for them, in the manner pointed out in the instructions heretofore given to you. These locations, it must be understood, are contingent, and will be complete only in the event of their being confirmed by Congress.

If the whole or a part of any reservations that may be claimed have been sold, you will designate upon the plats tracts of equal dimensions, and of as nearly equal value as practicable.

The register and receiver of the proper land offices will be instructed to reserve from sale the reservations you may locate under this order, until the views of Congress are ascertained.

The President specially directs that you transmit, in season for the action of Congress at its next session, detailed reports, showing the names, standing, and credibility of the witnesses, and all the circumstances in each case, with copies of the papers presented to you, and your communications to the land offices upon this subject.

The execution of these instructions will require your prompt and vigilant attention, that justice may be done to the Indians and the government.

I am, &c.

MAHLON DICKERSON, Acting Secretary of War.

WASHINGTON, October 13, 1834.

The requisite instructions will be given by the proper departments, for the location and suspension from sale of reservations of land in the Choctaw country, whenever persons claiming reservations under the 14th article of the treaty with the Choctaws of the 27th of September, 1830, shall exhibit to Colonel George W. Martin, the locating agent, probable evidence of credible witnesses of their rights under the provisions of said article, and that their failure to obtain such reservations has been caused by the mistake or neglect of the agent appointed to make a list of reservees.

These locations will be contingent, and will be complete only in the event of their being sanctioned by Congress. Until that decision is obtained, the tracts located under this order will be reserved from sale.

If the tracts to which any claimants were entitled have been sold, in whole or in part, the locating agent will designate upon the plats tracts of equal dimensions, and of as nearly equal value as practicable, and these also will be reserved from sale.

In all cases, the locating agent will make special reports of the names of the witnesses, and of the facts and circumstances submitted' to him; and these reports will be transmitted in season for the action of Congress, at its next session.

ANDREW JACKSON.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, October 16, 1834.

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed you have a copy of a letter, dated the 14th instant, from the Secretary of the Treasury, covering a copy of a letter from the Secretary of War to Col. George W. Martin, of the 11th instant, and a copy of the President's instructions of the 13th instant, directing that conditional reservations should be made for certain individuals, under the 14th article of the Choctaw treaty; and you will accordingly withhold from sale any lands which Col. Martin may designate under those instructions.

At the close of each month, you will forward to this office an abstract of all the tracts thus designated by the locating agent during the month. Very, &c.,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

"I might also state that this delay of bringing the public lands, in the Choctaw purchase, into market, is the hot-bed that will bring forth thousands of fraudulent claims under the treaty; and you need not be surprised if it does not forever supersede another public sale, by sweeping off some six or seven hundred sections of the choicest lands, by claims coined to suit the times. By pushing the lands into market, they are prevented from maturing their plans, and carrying them into effect. But here is time given them to gather a head of water, and it will not be lost to them."

Extract of a letter from Samuel Gwin, register, to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated Chocchuma, May 7, 1835.

"I would also recommend that all the lands conditionally reserved from sale at the last land sales in townships 24, range 7, W., be also offered to sale at the above period. These claims are not just; Congress has failed to act on the subject, as was expected, and there is no good reason why the government should not have the disposal of her domain, until these claims are sustained by an act of Congress. They are held by speculators and not by Indians—have been purchased at reduced prices, and the assignees were, at the last session, lobby members in Washington; and if there is not some stimulant to such claimants to make good their claims, it will create incalculable difficulties in your office. If the government is a debtor to these claimants, let them make them good, but not before she is in justice bound to pay them. Again; these lands are worth fifty times as much as the lands the Indians pretendedly lived on. Those that had settlements (and they are not one in a hundred) lived on very poor land; and if a strict examination was had, the very same lands, or lands of similar quality, could be had in their immediate vicinity; and if they must have them, let them be taken there. There is no justice in their floating from the poor pine lands, east of the Yala Busha, to the richest river lands on the Mississippi. There are plenty of lands yet to be sold in that section to satisfy all just claims; but I query very much, if you keep the door open, whether there will be, in a short time, enough in the Choctaw purchase, to satisfy the real and fictitious claims. I do hope that you will confer with the Secretary of War, and let him direct the locating agent to examine personally the lands where the Indians lived, and where they wish their location made. If the officers of the government will close their eyes on this matter, then may you give up the idea of ever having another sale in the Choctaw purchase. I have seen enough to know that anything can be proved where rich river lands are in view. In recommending the above, I have discharged my duty, and let the result be as it may, I shall hereafter look on in indifference, as I have, unfortunately, heretofore fallen between two fires, the speculators, the government, and vile slanderers. The lands above alluded to are the whole of sections 15 and 16; north half 21; north half 22; west half northwest quarter 23; whole of sections 17, 19, and 20; north fractional south half, and east half northeast quarter 18; lots 1 to 24, inclusive, of section 4; lots 25 to 40, inclusive, of section 3; lots 17, 18, 23, 24, 25, 32, 33, and 40, of section 5; east half section 8; whole of section 9; whole of sections 10 and 11; and lots 25 to 40, inclusive, in section 2; whole of sections 12 and 14; north half 13; and lots 35, 36, 37, and 38, of section 1, all in townships 24, range 7, west, making about 11,630.04 acres.

"List of lands reserved under the 14th article, from sale in December, 1834, until the action of Congress could be had thereon, which I recommend to be proclaimed for the reasons in my letter to you of the 7th May last:

"Lots 35, 36, 37, in section 1.

Lots 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, and 40, in section 2.

Lots 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, and 40, in section 3.

Lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, in section 4.

Lots 17, 18, 23, 24, 25, 32, 33, and 40, in section 5.

East half section 8, whole section, 9, 10, 11, and 12, north half 13, whole of 14, 15, 16, 17.

South half and east half northeast quarter section 18, whole of 19 and 20, north half 21, north half 22.

West half northwest quarter 23, and north half 30, all in township 24, range 7, west.

Under the eighth paragraph of the supplemental treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, there is a reservation in favor of Peggy Trihan and her two fatherless children, and Delila and her five fatherless children, of a quarter section to each of the mothers and children, to be located under the direction of the President of the United States.

Under this clause the following lands have been reserved from sale; and that the orphans may have the full benefit of the donation, I recommend that the lands be sold at public sale, and the money paid over to them, or otherwise disposed of for their use, as may be deemed best by the President of the United States.

Sarah, one of Delila's children, lots 11 and 12, section 19, township 22, range 3, east.

Joseph, one of Delila's children, lots 1 and 2, section 14, township 22, range 9, west.

Betsey, one of Delila's children, southwest quarter section 19, township 24, range 6, east.

Peggy Trian, lots 1, 6, and 7, section 7, township 22, range 5, east.

Same, Lots 8, 9, 14, aud 15, section 7, township 21, range 5 east.

These last two are believed to be the children of Peggy Trihan; for Governor Runnels purchased the mother's claim, if I mistake not.

It has been represented that frauds had been practised on these orphans by a person having himself appointed their guardian, ordering the land to be sold, and he himself becoming the purchaser, for little or nothing. From the whole tenor of the treaty, I think it may rationally be concluded that the President is, by it, the guardian of these orphans, and for their use the lands ought to bring as much as they are worth."

LAND OFFICE AT AUGUSTA, Mississippi, October 20, 1835.

SIR: Enclosed I hand a copy of an advertisement of John Johnson, sr., who styles himself the "agent and attorney in fact of the Choctaw claimants."

The course pursued by this individual in relation to the straggling Indians who have remained in or returned to the country which has been ceded to the United States, will, I apprehend, have a prejudicial effect on the sales of the lands in the townships enumerated in his advertisement. He has, as I have been informed, taken testimony in favor of the claims of one hundred or more Indians, who have attempted to prove that they did apply to the proper agent within six months after the ratification of the treaty to have their names registered as claimants under the 14th article of said treaty.

I am induced to believe that most of this testimony is of a suspicious character, at least so far as it relates to individuals who did not attend, agreeably to the notice of the locating agent, to have their reservations located. This, I think, they would have done, had they believed their names were registered, and their neglecting to do so, raises a violent presumption that they did not, at that time, believe themselves entitled. I have further heard it suggested, that the principal witnesses used on this occasion were persons not to be depended upon as to the truth of their statements, and that the certifying magistrate was not, at the time of making his certificates, in commission.

Under these circumstances, I have given to the purchasers, as my opinion, that the government would not interfere with their purchases, should they be disposed to extend their liberality to the Indians, and especially in those cases where the individual did not apply to have their claims located previous to the sale of the townships in which their claims may be situated.

I respectfully request your opinion on this subject, which will quiet the apprehensions of the purchasers, and satisfy the doubts of those who may wish to purchase.

With, &c. WM. HOWZE.

ETHAN A. BROWN, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office, Washington City.

NOTICE.

All persons are cautioned against purchasing any lands lying in township No. 3, in range No. 12, east; also, township No. 4, in ranges Nos. 10, 11, 12, and 13, east; also, townships Nos. 5 and 6, in ranges Nos. 9, 10, and 11, east; to which the Choctaws may be entitled to reservations under and by virtue of the provisions of the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek of the 17th day of December, 1830.

JOHN JOHNSON, SR.,
Agent and Attorney in fact for Choctaw claimants.

No. 17.

REGISTER'S OFFICE, Choccluma, November 24, 1835.

SIR: I am now more than ever satisfied that it is the settled purpose and determination of a set of speculators to sweep the balance of the Choctaw country, under the pretended claims arising under the 14th article of the treaty. As was anticipated or expected by the President, when he gave the order for a conditional reservation to satisfy these claims, there were a few cases of merit that had, by some means unknown, been overlooked, and their rights neglected, and that justice might be done them, a suspension of certain lands for their use was ordered. But, as appears on the face of the order, they were entirely contingent, and looked alone to the next session of Congress for the expected relief; for he states, "in all cases the locating agent will make special reports of the names of the witnesses, and of the facts and circumstances submitted to him, and these reports will be transmitted in season for the action of Congress at its next session." The conclusion is, I think, fair, that they were limited in their nature and operation to the then ensuing session of Congress, which was the last session. In pursuance of them, before the land sales closed at this place in last December, I forwarded the reservations and orders to me on the subject, which was received in time, and published in document No. —. I then believed the cases intended to be met by the President with relief, were fairly before Congress. But advantage has been taken, and this order, limited as it is on its face to the last Congress, is held up as authority for sweeping every acre of the remaining country, under circumstances much more aggravated than the grand Yazoo speculation, some thirty-five years ago. Hordes of Indians, who have all plain cases, are now conjured up, and, under pretended purchases, a set of ravenous speculators are carrying everything before them.

Already have they blown up the sales at Columbus, and, after devouring that carcase, they have commenced here; and I was told this evening that they would take all the valuable land in this district.

I have reflected but little on the subject, but that little has brought me to the conclusion to go on and offer the land as ordered in the proclamation. If I do finally adopt this course, I will fully and explicitly give my reasons, and I am fully satisfied they will at least satisfy you that I am solely governed by the public good.

I feel much embarrassed on this subject. Many of my warm friends are interested in them; some few (comparatively) of the claims themselves are good, and in an attempt to stem this current, the odds are against me on every score but public duty; and, if I am not sustained in my course, I hope at least that my motives may not be misunderstood by you.

The subject deserves the serious consideration of Congress, as several of that body are either directly or indirectly interested in these claims, whose influence, with the perseverence and importunities of the claimants as lobby members, will, I fear, have the effect of forcing them through without reflection or a strict regard to the interests of the United States.

For the present, I would refer you to my letters of 7th May, 4th May, and 26th August, last past.

The mail is expected every hour, and I must close. I will give you my views fully on this subject, for I am resolved, whether I reserve the land from the next sales or not, that you, and through you, the committee shall not act ignorantly on the claims; for it is apparent that, under a very few good cases, one of the grandest schemes of fraud is now in progress and near consummation, that has ever been started in this country.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

SAM'L GWIN, Register N. W. Land District, Mississippi.

LAND OFFICE, Mount Salus, Mississippi, December 11, 1835.

SIR: I am informed that an immense quantity of the public lands has been located as Indian reservations under the 14th article of the Choctaw treaty. I have received orders from George W. Martin, the locating agent, for the suspension from sale of a few sections, and have been informed that nearly all the valuable land that is proclaimed to be sold at this office, on the 21st instant, is located, and orders are expected from the locating agent to withhold the same from sale. It is the prevailing opinion among those with whom I have conversed on the subject, that those claims are nearly all fraudulent.

I am induced, from the reports I have heard, to believe that about three millions of dollars of the public domain are at stake and dependent on the action of Congress with regard to these floats; and I deem it very expedient that proper information be laid before the Executive and before Congress, before any action is had thereon. I am informed that the common course of procedure with those floats is to submit the testimony of the claimant and his witnesses to the locating agent upon which the location is made, thereby leaving it possible, and even probable, that neither the applicant nor his witnesses are known to the agent; and perhaps the person producing the papers is also unknown to him. However, I hope Col. Martin has given the necessary information on that point.

The report of these locations has latterly taken such a wide spread, that I fear the public must suffer much for want of bidders; numbers deeming it unnecessary to attend, being unwilling to purchase the refuse and back lands after all the valuable fronts are reserved.

I should have communicated with that office on this subject before the present time, but I was not aware, until very lately, of the extent to which the speculators had pushed the project.

Very respectfully, your humble servant,

T. S. SUMRALL, Register.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1396. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN ALABAMA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 20, 1836.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of William Walker, of Jackson county, Alabama, reported:

That the petitioner states he attended the sale of the United States lands, in the Huntsville land district, in 1830, for the purpose of purchasing a half quarter-section of land adjoining his plantation, and when, as he understood, the land he wanted was offered, he bid it off, and paid the price, before he ascertained that he was mistaken in supposing it was the land he intended to buy, but another half quarter of no value, and situated on the mountain. He also states that he was led into this error by the haste with which the sale was conducted; that the land he intended to buy was fertile. These facts appear by the affidavit of the petitioner, whose good character is sustained, as well as most of the material facts, by the testimony of other witnesses. Your committee, acting upon the principle that mistakes, when clearly made out, ought to be relieved against; and believing the proof in this case as strong as the nature of the transaction would permit, recommend the relief prayed for, and report a bill accordingly.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1397. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN ALABAMA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 20, 1836.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Abraham Woodall, of St. Clair county, Alabama, reported:

That the petitioner (who states himself to be perfectly illiterate) procured the services of one who professed to understand the mode of taking the numbers of land, to inform him as to the number of a small tract within the Huntsville land district, in order to make an entry. That this individual, instead of the number and designation of the land petitioner pointed out to him, gave the number of another forty-acre tract, altogether different, and which proved to be valueless. Petitioner made the entry under this mistake, and paid the government price, which he asks may be allowed him on his surrendering the certificate, in payment of another tract. These facts appear by an affidavit of the individual who furnished the petitioner with the number upon which he made the entry. Your committee believe the entry was made under a mistake, and therefore that the relief ought to be granted, and report a bill for this purpose.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1398. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 20, 1836.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom were referred the papers relating to the application in behalf of the widow and children of the late Samuel Brown, reported:

That it appears by the letter of the register of the land office at Palmyra to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and the affidavits accompanying it, that in the year 1830 said Samuel Brown, then residing in Kentucky, visited the State of Missouri to purchase a tract of land, as a residence for himself and family. That after he had examined a quarter-section of government land, with which he was well pleased, he determined to enter it at the land office; but being himself a stranger in the country, and unacquainted with the numbers, he took the precaution to obtain information from an individual who lived near, and possessed a knowledge of the country; that this individual, with a knowledge of the land Brown really wanted, by a mistake in making out the number, gave him the number of a quarter-section altogether different from the one he examined, and of little or no value. From this improper number Brown made the entry, and soon after returned to Kentucky without having discovered the mistake; nor was it observed until after the time had expired within which such mistakes might, according to the existing law, be corrected at the office where the entry was made. Evidence was afterward taken and filed with the register, who forwarded it to the General Land Office. Samuel Brown died before he could make the necessary proofs to show the mistake, and his widow has done so since, all of which is on file.

From this state of facts your committee believe that the applicants are entitled to relief, at least so far as to authorize the relinquishment of the land erroneously entered, and the entry of an equal quantity in that land district in lieu of it; and for this purpose report a bill.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1399. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN ARKANSAS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 21, 1836.

Mr. HARRISON, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Joseph Henderson, reported:

The petitioner, Joseph Henderson, sets forth that he had a pre-emption granted to him by the register and receiver of the land office at Batesville, in Arkansas Territory, to the southwest quarter of section one, township one north, in range twelve west, of the fifth principal meridian; that the said quarter-section of land was included within the location made by the governor of the Territory of Arkansas, under an act of Congress, approved the 15th June, 1832, entitled "an act granting to the Territory of Arkansas one thousand acres of land for the erection of a court-house and jail at Little Rock;" and that he was thus deprived of his pre-emption right to the said tract of land. The petitioner, therefore, prays for such relief as Congress may deem just and equitable. The committee are of the opinion that the petitioner is entitled to relief; and they have, therefore, reported a bill, giving to the said petitioner, Joseph Henderson, the right to enter and locate, in lieu of his said tract, a quarter section of any unappropriated land in said Territory.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1400. [1ST SESSION.

ON A DONATION OF LAND TO KEZIAH SHIELDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 21, 1836.

Mr. LINCOLN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of sundry citizens of Cumberland county, Kentucky, in behalf of the widow and children of Christian Shields, lately deceased, reported:

That the object of the petition appears to be the procurement of a grant by Congress, of some portion of the public lands to Keziah Shields, the widow of Christian Shields, and to her three infant sons, born at one period of birth, in the lifetime of their father. Mrs. Shields is also the mother of two other and older children, and is represented by the petitioners to have been left, on the death of her husband, in 1835, in very narrow circumstances. These are the only grounds of the application to Congress, and, however strongly the circumstances of her situation might be addressed to the sympathy of the benevolent, and the charity of the liberal, yet the committee can find no warrant for extending the hand of beneficence, at the expense of the nation, and by the application of public property, held only in trust for the benefit of the country, to the relief of cases of private and individual need, disconnected from all claims upon the public justice. The committee, therefore, are of opinion that the prayer of the petition ought not to be granted.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1401. [1ST SESSION.

ON MAKING DONATIONS OF LAND AS INDEMNITY TO PERSONS FOR IMPROVEMENTS WEST OF ARKANSAS, WHICH WERE CEDED TO THE CHOCTAW INDIANS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 23, 1836.

Mr. CASEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the memorial of the legislature of the Territory of Arkansas, praying for a donation of one quarter-section of the unappropriated public land to each head of a family who resided west of the present western boundary of the Territory of Arkansas, as an indemnity for the loss of certain improvements which were ceded to the Choctaws by the government, reported:

That prior to the treaty of 1821, between the United States and the Choctaw Indians, the settlements in Arkansas extended some forty or fifty miles further west than they do at present. That in that section of the country, at that time, there were organized counties, in which, for several years, courts of justice had been regularly held, and from which members of the legislature had been regularly sent to the legislature, and in which all the rights and privileges, common to any other portion of Arkansas, were fully exercised; and without the knowledge or consent of these people, this country, including them, was transferred to the Choctaw Indians, and the inhabitants ordered off for the settlement of the Indians. Many of the settlers promptly obeyed the order of the government, and moved away, while the greater part of them refused to comply with the request of the government, but held on to the possession of their improvement, in open resistance, until the spring of 1828, when Congress passed an act, granting to each settler then residing upon the ceded country, a section of 320 acres of the unappropriated land, as an indemnity to them for the loss of their improvement, and as an inducement to them to remove away. After the passage of the act of 1828, the country was peaceably surrendered to the Indians, and upon it they now reside. The legislature of Arkansas now ask, as they have done on several former occasions, an indemnity of one hundred and sixty acres of the unappropriated land to each head of a family, who, in obeying the order of the government, by removing from their possessions, lost, by their non-residence upon their improvements in the ceded country, at the time of the passage of the act of 1828, the benefit of that act. To place them upon something like an equal footing with those who have been compensated for their losses, seems to the committee but reasonable and just, and therefore they report a bill.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, December 24, 1835.

SIR: I am directed by the Committee on the Public Lands, to ask of you to furnish the committee, at your earliest convenience, the amount of donation claims which have been allowed in Arkansas, to those who lost their improvements by virtue of Indian treaties. And also to state the probable number, if you have any data in your possession on which you can ground an opinion, that have not been provided for by the donation act; that is, the number of those who lost their improvements by the Choctaw treaty, but who did not reside in the ceded country at the passage of the act of 1828.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

Z. CASEY.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 14, 1836.

SIR: I should have been gratified to have afforded on earlier answer to your inquiry of the 24th ultimo, "as to the amount of donation claims which have been already obtained in Arkansas by those who lost their improvements by virtue of Indian treaties," but have been prevented from so doing by the multiplicity of official calls and engagements, which have incessantly occupied my attention.

You also request to know from any data possessed by the office on which an opinion may be grounded, "the probable number that have not been provided for by the donation act—that is, the number of those who lost their improvements by the Choctaw treaty, but who did not reside on the ceded country at the passage of the act of 1828."

The only official information that can be afforded to the committee by this office, in reference to the subject of inquiry, is, that there have been issued three hundred and sixty-seven "donation patents," under the act of 1828, fourteen of which, however, are yet in this office, held under suspension. And on the 12th ultimo it was ascertained that the number of Arkansas donation patent certificates to claimants, granted by the registers of land offices in that Territory, on which the issuing of patents was suspended, amounted in number to sixty-eight. The number of those who lost their improvements by the treaty referred to, is not officially known, nor is it apparent how that fact can be satisfactorily ascertained.

The idea strongly suggests itself, that it would have been a wise and safe policy, had the act of 1828 ordered that a census be taken as to the individuals intended to be benefited by the act, and not left the subject in that state of uncertainty which appears to have been the fruitful cause of all the subsequent alleged frauds and misdemeanors in relation to the establishment of claims under that act.

Although in your letter of the 24th ultimo it is not stated that the committee have been pleased to call for such information as the files of this office may afford in relation to alleged frauds under the act aforesaid, I nevertheless deem it my bounden duty on this occasion, to submit for its information such allegations touching that subject as are on file, and which are herewith transmitted, papers numbered one to nineteen inclusive; from which you will perceive, that the President has ordered the further issuing of patents to be suspended, and the suspected cases to be reported to the district attorney for the Territory, in order that proper proceedings may be instituted in prosecution of the offenders against the law.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. ZADOK CASEY, House of Representatives.

LAND OFFICE AT LITTLE ROCK, June 3, 1835.

SIR: We conceive it to be our duty to state to you, that we have been credibly informed, that donation claims, under the act of May 25, 1828, and the subsequent acts of Congress in relation thereto, which were rejected at this office, have been adjudicated and established at the land office at Helena, in this Territory.

Since we have learned (though unofficially) that claims under the above acts, to donations of land, were adjudicated at that office, we have transmitted to the officers thereof, a list of the adjudications made at this office.

We have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servants,

B. SMITH,
P. T. CRUTCHFIELD.

LITTLE ROCK, June 9, 1835.

DEAR SIR: I have not had any business in your office, therefore am unknown; but I, as one of the citizens of Arkansas and of the United States, have the right to detect error in the officers of the government of this republic. You will discover, from an examination in the General Land Office, two claims proven up as donation claims at the land office at Little Rock, in February or March, 1833, I think, or perhaps one of those months, 1834, in the name of ——— Campbell, who claimed themselves as citizens and settlers in the county of Miller, at the cession of that country to the Indians; which claims, after proof had been made in the office, I went to the officer (receiver) Chambers, and informed him they were fraudulently obtained; and I now pledge myself to produce ten respectable men of the county and adjoining counties, who will swear that those men, Campbells, had never lived, for ten years previous to the passage of the donation law, within two hundred miles of the ceded country. I, at the time the objection was made, produced a letter from men that would swear the facts above stated, and desired it to be filed with the papers, that is, the testimony taken in the case. The testimony would be that those men forged their given names, and after the fact of their having proven up claims was known in the neighborhood, they ran away. And, sir, if there has not been one third of the claims proven spurious, I am deceived; they are going on now here bringing in men and proving claims that we know nothing of. If the poor or needy of the country were to profit by it, it would not be so much be looked at; but only a few speculators, who are making fortunes out of the government, to the exclusion of the mass of the people. If the government, at the passage of the law, had appointed (or would now) agents besides the officers of the land office, who were the civil officers of the counties at the time of the cession, much fraud would have been prevented. I have never been directly or indirectly engaged in any of the claims, but have been the sheriff of this county for five years, and have noticed how things have been conducted; and, therefore, respectfully submit the facts to you who have the control on this subject until Congress shall meet, and then have the facts represented fairly. Do you suppose for a moment that any man who had a claim to land (320 acres) would have been silent ever since 1828 until now, if he had a good claim? No; for the longer the thing was postponed, the more likely the witnesses would be to be dead or out of the way, &c.

Yours, respectfully,

JOHN K. TAYLOR.

SECRETARY of the Treasury.

LITTLE ROCK, A. T., June 15, 1835.

SIR: I feel it my duty to apprise you (as I am informed from a source I can rely upon) that the claim of Daniel Phillips, (a Lovely claim,) proven up and confirmed at the Little Rock land office, February 2, 1833, and located on the northeast quarter of section 17 and southeast quarter of section 18, in township 19 south, range one west of the 5th principal meridian, was fraudulently obtained. I have the names of three respectable witnesses to prove the fact; and, sir, there is a species of fraud and speculation going on, with regard to those claims, perhaps not equalled. There is, I have no doubt, men hired to ride through the remote parts of the Territory to hire men to come and prove claims who never saw the ceded country; and if some persons were appointed to re-examine the claims that have been allowed, there is but little doubt there would be a saving to the government perhaps of half a million dollars. (Consider the immense value of the Mississippi lands at present in this Territory.) I have no doubt there have also been more pre-emption floats proven up at Helena land office than the Territory is entitled to. A review is necessary.

I have no interest, only as a citizen of one of the best governments ever known to man.

Yours, respectfully,

JOHN K. TAYLOR.

SECRETARY of the Treasury of the United States.

P. S.—I wrote you some days since about some other claims, and could about many more.

Yours,

JOHN K. TAYLOR.

N. B.—Please answer me what action can be had at your department.

LAND OFFICE, Helena, June 22, 1835.

SIR: The very high value which at this time obtains for land situate on the margin of the Mississippi river and the adjoining lakes and bayous, in every part of the alluvial region where the cotton plant flourishes, has induced the speculators and land dealers to resort to every expedient which ingenuity can suggest, to acquire a title to land situate in the above-described locations. To accomplish this object in a summary manner, a great number of individuals, from the most remote parts of the Territory, have recently visited this office for the purpose of establishing donation claims. The abstract of claims under this title, herewith forwarded to the department, shows the whole number confirmed at this office since it was first established. There is, at this time, proof on file in relation to at least thirty additional claims, upon which I have refused to act, solely on the ground that the claimants ought to apply for relief at the land office situate in the district of country wherein they reside. On this point I respectfully solicit instructions from the department.

Should this question be decided affirmatively, the motives for moving up these claims would be greatly diminished, and the temptations now held out to many individuals to commit the crime of perjury almost entirely removed. And it may be, that in the claims now suspended on the ground above stated, there are several cases of actual bonafide sufferers, for whose relief the government has made such ample provision: if so, I am positively certain, that a large number of fraudulent claims have been confirmed, although the testimony might have been conclusive in every point required in the instructions.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN T. CABEA.

No. 5.

MARSHAL'S OFFICE, Little Rock, A. T., July 6, 1835.

SIR: From recent information, I am induced to make to your department some suggestions relative to what are called in this country donation land claims. By the act of Congress of 1828, there was allowed to the citizens residing in what was termed Lovely county, a donation of 320 acres of land, to be located on any unappropriated lands in this Territory, the time given by this act for claimants to prove up their claims, was, by subsequent acts of Congress, extended to some four or five years from the passage of the last act; at the time of the passage of the first act of the treaty with the Cherokee Indians, the number of persons residing in the ceded country, who were supposed legitimately entitled to the benefits of the act, were not more than four hundred.

From the best information I can get, I am inclined to think that some seven or eight hundred claims have been proven up and allowed, at different land offices in this Territory, at all events a number largely over the correct estimate of inhabitants or heads of families entitled to claims. Within the last few months, I am inclined to believe that a number of claims have been procured, presented, and passed, or confirmed, by fraud, perjury, and subornation of perjury, and the most valuable lands of the United States applied to their satisfaction; as an evidence of this fact, several claims were presented at the land office in this place, and the fraud detected, and prosecutions instituted without the interposition of the United States attorney.

There is also a species of claims called floating pre-emptions, allowed and passed, as I am informed, at the land office at Helena, which were never designed by the spirit or meaning of the act granting pre-emption rights, or by the instructions of the officer at the head of the land department. The high estimation in which the cotton lands of the country are held, has been a great inducement to men to procure those claims by the most profligate and abandoned course, with a view to speculation; a rigid investigation of all the claims passed and confirmed during the last twelve or eighteen months would no doubt save to the government a large quantity of valuable cotton land, and bring before the public, for retributive punishment, the conspirators in the scheme of peculation and fraud. This action would necessarily have to be in the United States court, to avail the government of all the evidence which can and will be adduced.

Colonel Rutherford, the deputy marshal, and myself, have been absent for some time on official business, or I would have noticed this business sooner. The governor of the Territory has just informed me that he had or would represent the same matter to the heads of departments.

I am, dear sir, your obedient servant,

ELIAS RECTOR, Marshal Arkansas Territory.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

No. 6.

LITTLE ROCK, July 21, 1835.

SIR: I have sat down to inform you of some of the greatest frauds ever practised on the government of the United States since the Yazoo speculations. When I speak of fraud and speculation in Arkansas, it is with regard to the Lovely and Miller donation. You will recollect the law passed 24th May, 1828, giving donations to sufferers, and yet, after the lapse of from that to this time, there have been more claims proven up in the last twelve or eighteen months than all the five or six years previous, which is of itself sufficient evidence to show the fraud. I, sir, have no personal acquaintance with you myself, but can refer you to gentlemen of the first respectability of the country for the truth of what I shall say to you about the matter intended to be represented. If we had a good prosecuting attorney for the government, there could be no doubt of success on the part of the government, in matters pending before the United States court now sitting at this place: there have been many persons presented for fraud at this court, that could be convicted, without doubt, but for the former reason, and the thing has just commenced, and you may be assured it will be prosecuted with effect, if such a thing can be done, by some few honest men yet left in Arkansas. We have a clue to some ten or twelve of these fraudulent claims, and this court will unravel many others; as to my assertion to the incompetency of the district attorney, (having no ill-will toward him,) I will refer you to Hon. A. Yell, Major F. W. Armstrong, Hon. Benjamin Johnson, Elias Rector, marshal, and Colonel Wharton Rector. I write you solely for the good of my country, without ill-will or malice to any individual. I have been the acting sheriff of this county for the last five years, and have seen enough to convince any honest man of what I now inform you. Much more could be said—this is sufficient.

Your humble and obedient servant,

JOHN K. TAYLOR.

SIR: I was anxious to have a good deal of conversation with you when recently in Washington, in relation to the affairs of the land office at Helena, Arkansas; but you were, unfortunately, too unwell to admit of it.

I now beg to say to you, that the only way for the government to defeat the frauds growing out of the floating pre-emption law of 1834, will be to suspend every entry under that law made at Helena. You will have ample apology for doing so, from the fact that not one case in a hundred has been proven up according to law, nor is there one case in that number that is genuine. To give you an example, in many cases the husband and wife have been allowed floats. The testimony in relation to floats has almost in every case been taken before magistrates in the county, when your instructions only contemplate that the testimony should be so taken in special cases.

I beg to furnish your department with the names of the individuals who have been active in committing these frauds upon the government. Their names follow: Edwin T. Clark, Robert Burton, Wm. B. R. Horner, Wright W. Elliott, and John J. Bowie. Wm. D. Ferguson is also suspected for having proved up some spurious cases.

I am, sir, with great respect, your obedient humble servant, THOMAS P. ESKRIDGE.

JUDGE HAYWARD, Washington City.

No. 8.

HELENA, ARKANSAS TERRITORY, July 29, 1835.

SIR: I take the liberty to inform you that Littleberry Hawkins, the receiver of public moneys at this place, is guilty of the following charges, viz.:

First. Of acting as agent for others in the purchase of public land to a very large amount. The grievance or impropriety of which arises from the advantage which he possesses over all others; he being one of the public officers, should not be interested directly or indirectly in the purchase of land, that all might expect an impartial and correct course to be pursued by him, being entirely uninfluenced by any selfish interest.

Second. He has left the office for so long a time at once, without any person knowing where he was gone, and that, too, immediately after his return from below to make the deposits, that almost every person (from Hawkins's broken condition,) believed that he had run away, and it was so reported throughout the whole western country. In this long absence many persons had to suffer, as some branches of the land business could not be acted upon in his absence, whereby many remained till his return, and many left to return again.

Third. He has privately contracted for Lovely claims before they were adjudicated, from which it is reasonable to believe that the same influenced his decision, and that he is no guard or watch over the rights of individuals, or the interests of his country.

Fourth. He refused to give up certain papers relative to the establishment of certain Lovely claims, (which he had purchased,) to Dr. Cabean, the register at this office, who was summoned to appear forthwith at Little Rock, before the superior court, now in session, for the purpose of establishing certain facts in regard to certain Lovely claims. The register was compelled to go without the papers. It is well known that there are a great many spurious Lovely claims; and when such a disposition is evinced in one of our land offices, it is not to be wondered at.

Fifth. He has formed a partnership with the notorious John J. Bowie. This man is well known throughout the western States, being the same who presented so many spurious Spanish claims to our court for confirmation; those rejected claims are now known by the name of the Bowie claims.

Sixth. He has used false keys to the register's office, thought for the purpose of marking many quarter-sections as having been entered; all for speculation and advantage in different ways.

Seventh. He has frequently carried into his books entries and locations of pre-emption floats, without application at the register's office. One circumstance I will name. Benjamin Desha, formerly receiver of public moneys at Little Rock, came to Helena to locate one Lovely claim, which he wished to locate on the north half of section four, township six south, range two east. The map of said township arriving at the register's office by express, at this time, Hawkins, to obtain this half-section, carried the entry, by pre-emption floats, into his books, without ever having made the application at the office of the register. But Desha was not to be swindled in that way; he knew too much of the business for that. He threatened Hawkins that he would inform the department of his conduct, by which Hawkins became alarmed, and gave Desha three thousand dollars for a compromise. At this same time he located a pre-emption float on the widow Tucker's place in the same township, although informed that it was a good pre-emption right, and obtained his certificate from the register by stating what was false, saying that he had purchased.

Eighth. He speculates upon the public funds; buys drafts at a great discount.

Ninth. He purchases pre-emption claims and pre-emption floats before his adjudication of them; and is guilty of various other mal-practices in office, too tedious to mention; but all the specified charges can be substantially proven by any amount of testimony.

With much respect, your obedient humble servant, JOHN C. D. THORNTON.

SIR: By request of Doctor J. T. Cabean, I have the honor herewith to enclose a copy of a subpœna executed by the marshal of the Territory on the 25th instant.

The mandate of the court required the Doctor's immediate presence before the judges now in session at Little Rock; and on the day after the service of the writ, he left this place, leaving his office under my charge. He requested me to state that he will return with the least possible delay.

TERRITORY OF ARKANSAS, } ss.
UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, }

To the Marshal of Arkansas Territory, greeting:

You are hereby commanded to summon John T. Cabean, register of the land office at Helena, if he be found within your bailiwick, to appear before the judges of our superior court, at the court-house, in the town of Little Rock, forthwith, at our present July term, then and there to give evidence to the grand jury of the United States; and to bring with him, for the inspection of the grand jury, the depositions of George W. Thorn, George Jay, and Benjamin Boswell, proving up donation claims, and all the papers relating to the same on file in the land office at Helena; and that you make due return of this writ to our said court.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand as clerk, and affixed the seal of office, this 21st day of July, 1835, and of the Independence of the United States the sixtieth. [L. S.]

I do certify that the above is a true copy of the original. Given this 25th of July, 1835.

SIR: The supreme court of Arkansas have been in session for the last four weeks; during that time some forty or fifty indictments have been found against individuals for perjury in proving up spurious Lovely donation claims; and I have but little doubt there will be as many or more found at the next term of the court. This information I have thought it my duty to give, that the proper department might look to the propriety of further investigation of the subject. Nearly all these fraudulent claims have been purchased by speculators, who now hold them. The government has been swindled out of some thousands of acres of the best Mississippi land, some of it worth at this time from $20 to $40 per acre!

I presume Gov. Fulton has written to the proper department on the subject. I believed it my duty to give the information, that the system of swindling may be brought to a close; and at this time I am happy to believe that public opinion will aid us in a full and fair investigation of the subject, &c.

I am, as ever, your friend,

NASHVILLE, TENN., August 8, 1835.

SIR: We have settled some lands in Arkansas, in township six south, range seven west, south of the Arkansas river. The lands in this township have been surveyed seven or eight years ago, and have not as yet been offered for sale, nor has the plat been returned (though it has been received) to the office.

A considerable portion of the lands in this, as well as the adjoining townships, are held by Lovely claims, which is the case with the lands we claim. We are very desirous to get the title perfected to our lands, and to extend our purchases, which we are deferred from doing, from the above circumstance. The government heretofore has not been called on to offer these lands, from the circumstance of a few land speculators wishing to cover them with those forged claims, and delay gives time to make more of them; and further, there are thousands of acres held at this time, simply by the filing an application at the office, for lands to be covered by Lovely claims, (but no claim filed,) and it appears not necessary to file the claim or purchase them to file, until the lands are offered by the government for sale; and thereby these few individuals are enabled to hold large bodies of land without paying a dollar for them. When an opportunity offers to make a sale at a high price, then it is, and not until then, a claim is filed. This you see enables them with a few claims in their pocket, to hold large bodies of lands, to the prejudice of those disposed to settle and cultivate the soil.

We ask the sale of the abovenamed township to be as soon as convenient, as we are not only anxious to get titles to our lands, and extend our purchases, but get neighbors about us; all of which is prevented from the abovenamed circumstance.

Yours, very truly,

H. R. W. HILL,
JOHN WATERS.

LITTLE ROCK, August 14, 1835.

DEAR SIR: I have again sat down to trouble you with some accounts from Arkansas, and would not do so, but know no other source to apply to for redress of wrongs done to the government under which we live. The superior court of the Territory adjourned its July session on the 10th instant. The grand jury adjourned on the 8th instant, nine o'clock, P. M., which body brought to light some of the most glaring frauds ever practised upon this government, the Bowie and Yazoo claims not excepted. Sir, it was clear to the mind of every juror, that men had gone to the different land offices, and proven up Lovely donation claims, and for which patents have in many instances issued, when, in fact, such individuals never saw the country ceded to the Indians. The jury above alluded to have, from proof in their deliberations, found some twenty-five or thirty bills of indictment against persons for perjury and subornation of perjury, one of which individuals we caught and had upon trial, and his only means of acquittal was to claim the statute of limitation. (See Gordon's Digest.) It says that no man shall be convicted of a crime, (not capital, unless he flies from justice,) that shall have been committed two years previous to the finding the indictment; and many others will get off on the same grounds. The next grand jury, I have no doubt, will have evidence sufficient before them, to find bills against many persons who have gone to the different land offices, and changed their names and proven up claims. It has also been lately discovered, that some of the speculators have had influence enough over some of the land officers, to have the plats marked as if entries had been made, then let them have time to go and examine before the land was certainly entered; which course of conduct is calculated to deceive those who might wish to enter. To give some knowledge of the extent of the frauds committed, at the cession of Lovely and Miller counties to the Indians, I have been informed, that at the extent, not more than five hundred persons were entitled to claims, and also understand eight or nine hundred have proven up. I do not know what course government will take, (if any,) but if there would be a board of three or five vigilant persons, sent with authority to the border of each of those counties, with power sufficient to compel persons and papers to come before them, every man could be identified who lived there at the cession. The sheriffs and clerks are yet living, I believe; also, the tax lists perhaps can be found. Indeed, I have understood that the old clerk of Lovely county has the tax list of 1828, which year the law giving donations passed, &c. I, sir, have no interest in making those developments, but think it a duty due to my country. I am, and have been sheriff of this county for five years, and am now deputy marshal, and as such, think I would not be doing my country justice in standing by and seeing such fraud and peculation, and say nothing.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

JOHN K. TAYLOR.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, August 28, 1835.

SIR: I refer to you a letter from the honorable A. Yell, on the subject of certain frauds committed at the land offices in Arkansas. You will perceive, from the endorsement, that the President has directed that no patents issue from the land office where frauds are suspected, in the particular class of cases named, until investigation can be had; and, in the meantime, that you be directed to instruct the land officers to report to the district attorney of the United States all suspected cases, and to request the attorney to institute proper prosecutions.

I am, respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

No. 15.

To the Honorable the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States:

The undersigned, composing the grand jury, to the July term, 1835, of the superior court for the Territory of Arkansas, beg leave to present to your consideration the following matters which have transpired during their recent session. Among the various matters which they have been called upon to investigate, the subject of the validity of donation claims to land, under the treaty with the Cherokee Indians, (commonly known in this country as the Lovely claims,) has engaged their most serious attention.

This investigation, which has been continued for several weeks, has resulted in a firm conviction upon the minds of the undersigned, that a large proportion, if not a majority, of those claims, have been procured by the basest fraud and perjury. One of the land officers, and a great many witnesses, summoned from the section of country where those claims are pretended to have originated, have undergone a patient and thorough examination before the grand jurors, which has resulted in the finding of many bills of indictment for perjury, against the principals in the claims; and the witnesses, besides the jury, are fully satisfied that many more claims, upon which they could not act, from the difficulty of procuring sufficient legal testimony, are spurious—inasmuch as the validity of many of these claims will be tested at the next term of our court, we have thought it not only proper, but our duty, respectfully to suggest to the department the propriety of suspending the further issuance of patents upon such claims, until their validity shall have been fully examined into, and substantiated.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

DEAR SIR: I have this moment received yours of the 26th ult., saying you had forwarded copies of my letters, wrote to your department, on the subject of the Campbell and Phillips claims; you might have added the claim of Hudson; in the case of Hudson and the Campbells, I pledged myself to prove false, which I did, and the grand jury, at the July session of the superior court, found bills of indictment vs. the Campbells and Hudson. Nor is this all; they found against thirty for perjury and subornation of perjury, and how many the next jury may find is yet to be seen.

Yours respectfully,

JOHN K. TAYLOR.

In any case I pledge myself in, my name need not be concealed; some of the speculators will now not speak to me.

LAND OFFICE, Helena, September 17, 1835.

SIR: The very great extent of the operations at this office in pre-emption claims, where floating rights accrue, will, I have no doubt, excite the suspicion and rigid scrutiny of the department, when the claims are presented for final adjudication.

The very high value of Mississippi land, and there being no opportunity at this time of obtaining it at private entry, has compelled the speculators to resort to these claims as one of the methods to obtain title and possession to land which has not been offered at public sale. Almost in every case, the transfer of floating claims, the acknowledgment before the magistrate, and the certificate of magistracy, are all perfected long before the claim has been confirmed, or even any evidence of intention to enter the land. Artful and designing men can establish almost as many pre-emption claims of this class as they please; and, while floating claims command such a high price, and meet with such a ready sale as now obtains at this office, there is no calculating how many claims can, or will, be established before the expiration of the present law.

I respectfully submit these facts to the consideration of the department, and solicit additional instructions, which will require the pre-emptors in all cases to establish their claims in the presence of the land officers.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN T. CABEAN.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, August 26, 1835.

GENTLEMEN: Herewith I enclose to you copies of two letters, dated the 9th and 15th June last, to the Secretary of the Treasury, alleging that the donation claim which has been confirmed to Daniel Phillips, and two claims "in the name of Campbell," have been fraudulently obtained. The No. of the donation certificate in favor of Daniel Phillips is 216; No. of the claim, 284. There are two certificates in the name of Campbell. No. 223 in the name of William Campbell; claim No. 299. No. 237, in the name of Jeremiah Campbell; No. of claim, 309. If the register is in possession of the patents for the claims in question, (which have been sent to his office,) he will be pleased to return them to this office immediately. You are requested to inquire into the truth of the charges preferred in the enclosed, and make a report in relation to the same, accompanied by such explanations in reference to the confirmation of the claims in question, as the papers on file in your office may enable you to give.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN M. MOORE, Acting Commissioner.

LAND OFFICE, Little Rock, November 17, 1835.

SIR: In responding to the letter of the acting Commissioner of the 26th August last, enclosing to us "copies of two letters, dated the 9th and 15th of June last," addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury, which alleged, "that the donation claim which has been confirmed to Daniel Phillips, and two claims in the name of Campbell, have been fraudulently obtained," we have the honor to state, that, agreeably to the request of the acting Commissioner's letter, we have inquired into the truth of the charges preferred in those letters. We herewith enclose to you copies of the testimony in each case, on which the claims of Daniel Phillips, William Campbell, and Jeremiah Campbell, were adjudicated, which correspond with the numbers of the claims indicated in the letter of the acting Commissioner. The patent to William Campbell is herewith enclosed. The patents issued to Daniel Phillips and Jeremiah Campbell are not in the register's office, having been delivered to those claiming them. We have ascertained from the clerk of the superior court of this Territory, that Jeremiah Campbell has been indicted, in that court, for perjury, in the several cases, jointly with Enoch Campbell and Jonathan Hudson. One of the indictments is for perjury, committed in the proof of the claim of the said Jeremiah Campbell, the copy of which is herewith transmitted, as above mentioned, wherein it will appear, that Enoch Campbell and Jonathan Hudson are witnesses. The other two indictments against said Jeremiah Campbell, jointly with Enoch Campbell and Jonathan Hudson, are, as we understand from the clerk, for perjury committed in the proof of the respective claims of Enoch Campbell and Jonathan Hudson. We are informed that the said persons, so indicted, have absconded. We have not been able to ascertain anything by which the claims of Daniel Phillips and William Campbell are impeached. The aforementioned copies of the testimony in each of those claims, together with the adjudication endorsed on each, herewith transmitted, contain all the information we are enabled to impart concerning them, except what we have herein before stated.

We are, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servants,

COST OF PURCHASE AND MANAGEMENT OF THE PUBLIC LANDS, THE QUANTITY SURVEYED AND SOLD, AND THE AMOUNT RECEIVED THEREFOR.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 25, 1836.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 13, 1836.

SIR: In compliance with a resolution of the Senate, passed the 5th instant, on the subject of public lands, I have the honor to submit the annexed report and accompanying documents from the General Land Office.

The returns received do not enable the department now to answer the inquiry fully to a later period than the 30th September last; but as soon as the returns to the close of the year 1835 are all received, a further report will be made as to the last quarter.

From these documents, it appears that the whole cost attending the purchase and management of the public lands to the 30th September, 1835, is computed at $57,652,207; that the whole quantity of land surveyed and offered for sale to that date, was 166,897,082 acres, of which only 44,499,620 acres have been sold, and that the net proceeds or receipts into the Treasury therefor had been $58,619,528.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 13, 1836.

SIR: In obedience to a resolution of the Senate of the United States of the 5th instant, in the words following: "Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to inform the Senate what has been the whole cost attending the purchase and management of the public lands up to the 1st day of January, 1836, designating the amount of each of the various heads of expenditure; also, that he inform the Senate what amount of land has been surveyed and offered for sale in each of the States and Territories; the amount which has been sold in each, and the net proceeds of such sales to the 1st day of January, 1836," which you have referred to this office, I have the honor to inform you, that the information sought for in the first clause of the resolution has been prepared by the Register of the Treasury, whose statement, paper marked A, is herewith transmitted, together with statement marked B, prepared at this office, to afford the information required in the second clause of the resolution.

The information is required to be brought down to the 1st instant, but in consequence of the delay that would occur in affording it to a later period than has already been observed in the statistical tables of this office, I have concluded that it would be better to make up the report to the 30th September last, and be more acceptable to the Senate, than to withhold it until the fourth quarter can be prepared, inasmuch as a great portion of the heaviest returns for that quarter has not been received.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, General Land Office, January 12, 1836.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1403. [1ST SESSION.

ON THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE PROCEEDS OF THE SALES OF THE PUBLIC LANDS AND GRANTING LANDS TO CERTAIN STATES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 27, 1836.

Mr. EWING, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred a bill to appropriate, for a limited time, the proceeds of the sales of the Public Lands of the United States, and for granting lands to certain States, reported:

That they look upon the leading measure proposed by the bill as one of great national importance. The gradual operation of a system, devised in the early history of our government, for the support of the public credit, and for reducing the public debt, has, within a short time past, produced its full and final effect. The public debt is discharged, and existing commercial regulations, which the condition of our country renders indispensable, together with the sales of the public lands, bring yearly a large surplus fund into the Treasury. This fund, which is no longer taken up in the payment of a national debt, and which still remains unappropriated, has already arisen to the amount of about twenty-four millions of dollars; and as it does not arise from transient causes, it goes on increasing, and must continue to increase. This state of things is not at all desirable. Its natural tendency is to produce extravagance in the appropriation and wastefulness in the expenditure of public money. Indeed, it seems to be conceded by all, that this large surplus ought not to remain and accumulate in the public Treasury; and there have been suggested, as means of lessening the amount and preventing a future accumulation—

First. The reduction of the customs;

Second. Increased expenditures in the navy and fortifications;

Third. A reduction of the price of public lands, and the surrender of large portions of them to the States in which they lie; and,

Lastly. This bill, which proposes to distribute the proceeds of the public lands among the several States, leaving the receipts from customs to defray the ordinary expenses of government in time of peace.

The first-named measure—a reduction of the customs—cannot be resorted to without awakening feeling dangerous to the peace and harmony of the country. The tariff law now in force, is the result of a compromise of the opinions of the citizens of different sections of the Union, and ought not to be disturbed, unless a strong political necessity call for its modification. Under this law, or, indeed, any law, keeping up such duties as are necessary for the proper regulation of commerce, it is believed that the customs will produce a revenue, at least equal to the ordinary wants of the government. The surplus, therefore, cannot be reduced by lessening the amount of the customs.

The next measure proposed, is a large increase of appropriations upon our fortifications and navy, so as to absorb the surplus revenue, and at the same time put the country in an attitude of defence in the event of a foreign war. Such increased appropriation, to some extent, is, in the opinion of your committee, necessary and proper. There ought to be dealt out, with a liberal hand, all that can be well applied to render the seaboard safe from foreign aggression; but the amount asked by the Executive for both these purposes, does not, with the other current expenses of government, exceed the probable receipts from customs for the ensuing year, if the country be not involved in war. And it is not, in the opinion of your committee, proper that an expenditure should be made in the construction of fortifications or naval armaments for the purpose of exhausting the surplus revenue. If it be, the expenditure of money is made at once the primary object, and the improvement of the national defences but subordinate and auxiliary thereto. This would be true in fact, as well as in form. If much money were expended, it would necessarily be applied to little purpose. We might on a sudden emergency, in a short time, by large expenditure, prepare fortifications which would serve the purpose of a temporary defence; but all those substantial works, which are to stand as our future and permanent fortresses, require time, a selection of materials, and skilful engineers, which it is not in our power to supply much beyond what is necessary in expending judiciously and skilfully our ordinary appropriations. So, also, with respect to the navy.

But to this project there is another and a serious objection. The expenditures in support of the government are, much the larger portion of them, upon our seacoast and in our great commercial cities. This proposed extraordinary expenditure would very much increase that amount, and draw to the seacoast other large sums of money which ought properly to have a general distribution over the whole United States. Nor could we expect such a system, if once adopted, to cease, or even to diminish, for ages. No nation was yet ever known voluntarily to lessen its expenditures. If we commence a system of fortifications for the purpose of expending money, chiefly, and but in a secondary degree only, for defences, there will be no limit or end to the means it will furnish us of exhausting our national resources. Hundreds of millions may be expended with a tolerable show of public necessity or convenience, when it is not, on the other hand, deemed necessary to guard and to save the public treasure. It appears clear to your committee, therefore, that an amount of money large enough to exhaust the surplus revenue, could not at present be expended in this manner advantageously to the country.

The reducing of the price of the public lands, and ceding them to the States in which they lie, is another mode proposed to lessen the receipts into the Treasury, and thus prevent the influx of a surplus revenue.

Propositions such as these were referred to the Committee on Manufactures, at the first session of the twenty-second Congress, and on the sixteenth of April, eighteen hundred and thirty-two, they presented a detailed report to the Senate, in the general views and reasoning of which, your committee concur; and they herewith present the same, and make it a part of their report. That paper, in the opinion of your committee, demonstrates the injustice and impolicy of such a disposition of the national domain; and subsequent experience has confirmed their reasoning.

But other similar propositions, varying from those considered in that report, in some of their features, have been referred to your committee. Among these are—

A proposition to graduate the price of the public lands according to quality; and

To grant the lands to the States in which they lie, after they shall have been offered for sale for a given time.

To each of these your committee have given a careful consideration.

These propositions appear to be suggested for the benefit of the States in which the public lands are situated, for it is easy to prove that the interests of the United States, as the great landed proprietor, would not be subserved by either of them. The graduation of the price of the public lands is in no wise necessary or expedient, as a measure to effect their sale. Lands which have been long in market become surrounded by settlements. If they be hilly, they become valuable for their timber and stone, and other mineral productions. If swampy, or barren, they form a convenient appendage to neighboring farms for pasturage; and if not worth entering at the minimum price for any of these purposes, the public suffers no loss in permitting them to remain open and unappropriated.

Experience has fully shown, that the rise in the value of the public lands increases in proportion to the time that it is in market, or rather, to the number of the sales and density of the settlement near and around it. This fact is strongly illustrated by a reference to the sales of the public lands at the several land offices for a series of years. By this it will be seen that a larger per-centum of the lands actually in market at private sale, has generally sold at the old than at the new offices, and that per-centum has generally increased in proportion to the time the lands have been in market. It is a remarkable fact, bearing upon this proposition, that in no State or Territory, has the sales of public lands at private sale been so great in proportion to the quantity in market within the last five years, as in Ohio, in which State the public lands have been longest exposed to sale.

Your committee are also of opinion, that such graduation or reduction in the price of the public lands would operate to the injury, and not the benefit of the section of country in which such lands lie. If the amount of public land, the price of which was thus reduced, be great, its first and immediate effect would be to reduce the value of all the lands in its vicinity, pro rata, with the reduction of the public lands. To those who were full handed, and able to make large purchases, it might open a fine field for speculation, and profitable investment of capital, and if the price were reduced low, so as to make it an object with the capitalist, the public lands would be purchased up at once, on speculation, and retailed at an advanced price. It would thus cause a fluctuation in the value of land, a fall and a rise in its price, which is ever favorable to the sharp-sighted and sagacious speculator, but inimical to the interests of the agricultural portion of the community. Your committee, therefore, think that no interest which ought to be cherished and protected by the government, requires the graduation of the price of the public lands.

The proposition to cede the public lands to the States in which they lie, after they shall have been offered for sale a given number of years, is liable to many and serious objections. This project is, no doubt, well calculated to meet with favor in those States in which there is yet much public land unsold, as it holds out to them an apparent prospect of a vast accession to their resources. But it is, in the opinion of your committee, entirely delusive. The several States which form parties to the national compact have all an equal right to, and an equal interest in, the national domain, and such an application of it to the use of some of the States, which is not just to all, cannot be expected to meet with general favor.

Such a disposition of the public lands would be, indeed, a violation of a solemn contract which was adopted by, and made binding under the Constitution of the United States. The deed of cession of Virginia, by virtue of which we hold by far the largest and most valuable portion of our territory east of the Mississippi river, contains a clause, common to all the cessions of the several States, which provides that, after certain reservations shall have been made, and certain bounties satisfied, that the lands so ceded "shall be considered a common fund for the use and benefit of all the United States, members of the federal alliance," "and shall be faithfully and bona fide disposed of for that purpose, and for no other use or purpose whatsoever." This deed of cession was made by Virginia and accepted by Congress prior to the adoption of the Constitution. It, therefore, became and was a compact before the adoption of the Constitution, and is referred to and made binding by the first section of the fifth article of that instrument. It is, in the opinion of your committee, too clear to require an argument, that the giving of all the residue of these lands to the States in which they lie, after they shall have been offered for sale for a period of years, will not, if any lands of value remain unsold, be disposing of them bona fide, for the benefit of all the States, according to the requisition of this solemn compact. The principle on which grants of land have been made to the several States in which the public lands lie, for public works of any kind, is, that the United States being a large landholder, have, in the management of that property, a right to do what any other landholder, who consulted his own interest, would do—appropriate a portion of his lands, or their proceeds, to open roads and canals, and to construct public works in their neighborhood, so as to enhance their value or bring them sooner to a market. But this proposed gift or cession of the residue of the lands, after they shall have been in market five or ten years, cannot be sustained on that ground. A gift or conveyance of a part, on condition that it be so applied as to make the residue more valuable than the whole would otherwise have been, is a bona fide disposition of such part of the fund for the use of all those who are entitled to share in it; but if we give away the whole residue at any time, when that residue possesses value, we as certainly misapply the fund and abuse the trust; for, in that state of things, nothing remains to be enhanced in value, and the gift is to one State or to a few States—whereas, the trust is for all, and Congress is required to dispose of the land bona fide for the benefit of all.

But, if Congress had the right to give the residue of the lands, after they should have been offered for sale five or ten years and still remain unsold, to the States in which they lie, such a disposition of them would be unequal among themselves, and therefore unjust. It would not give them lands in proportion to the population of each, or to the amount that each, or the citizens of each, had paid for lands into the public Treasury. The State of Ohio would receive, on this proposition, certainly less than four millions of acres (the amount depending upon the time the land should be in market before it be surrendered), that is, about four acres to each individual in the State, while the public lands in the State of Ohio have brought into the Treasury about seventeen millions of dollars, besides satisfying, to a large amount, the debts of the government.

Missouri, upon a like mode of distribution or surrender, would have not less than twenty-five millions of acres, or about one hundred and sixty acres to each individual, black and white, according to the census of 1830. Thus, one inhabitant of Missouri would receive a quantity of land equal to what would be received by forty inhabitants of Ohio; and while the lands in Ohio have brought seventeen millions into the public Treasury, the lands in Missouri have brought in less than three millions. This disparity, therefore, would be very unjust to Ohio, but still more so to the other States of the Union having equal rights, and which, on this principle of surrender, would receive nothing. It cannot, therefore, be expected by any one, however strongly solicitous he may feel for the advancement of the new States, that such a measure will be adopted. Something more equal and more just must be thought of by those who wish to promote their interests and add to their prosperity.

There are other measures proposed which, if adopted, would affect, more or less, the interest of the United States in the public land, by lessening its general value and rendering its management more complicated and difficult. One of the first, and not the least important of these, is the law granting pre-emptions to actual settlers, which was first passed on the 29th day of May, 1830, and which, with some modifications, is still in force. The intent of this law was that of kindness and benevolence. It was enacted for the benefit of the poorer class of citizens, who, having pushed forward beyond the lands offered for sale, settled and improved the public lands, and made themselves a home, with some comforts around them, and had become able, by their industry, to pay for these lands at the minimum price. It seemed hard that these pioneers, who had thus improved the lands by their labor, should be compelled to enter into competition with new adventurers at the sales, and thus pay for improvements which they themselves had made. Such appear to have been the reasons for the enactment of these laws. They provided that, when two individuals cultivated one quarter section of land, each should be entitled to the pre-emption of half the tract so jointly cultivated, and each, also, to a pre-emption of eighty acres anywhere in the same land district; and, by a supplementary law, the claims were made assignable.

Your committee have satisfactory information that these laws have been the cause of frauds and perjuries, to an amount and number almost incredible. Thousands of pre-emptions have been proved under them, and certificates granted, when the whole case was without the least shadow of foundation. In other cases, the cutting down of a single tree, the marking it with a hatchet, or encamping for the night, has been made the ground of pre-emption claims. In most of the last-named cases, two individuals would together cut down their sapling, or tie each his horse upon the same quarter section of land; this, with the oath founded upon it, which appears to be always according to form, would get for each of the individuals a certificate or warrant, now familiarly called a "float," which they might lay on any of the lands of the United States which were surveyed, and not offered for sale; thus taking, at the minimum price of $1 25 per acre, lands worth, in many instances, more than twenty times that sum. Large companies, it is believed, have been formed, who procure affidavits of improvements to be made, get the warrants issued upon them, and whenever a good tract of land is ready for sale, cover it over with their floats, and thus put down competition. The frauds upon the public within the past year, from this single source, have arisen to many millions of dollars.

Your committee believe that a great error was committed by the passsge of these laws, and that no amendment or modification will guard against the mischiefs which they have heretofore produced. Claims of this kind cannot, in the very nature of things, be subjected to judicial investigation; or, if they were, the means of eliciting truth, the confronting witness against witness by parties who are stimulated on both sides to the uttermost to rebut and repel, cannot be brought to bear upon the examination of these claims. Hence, a few individuals, whose evidence can be purchased with a price, and who can appear under different names at pleasure, may, under the auspices of these laws, divert millions of money from the public Treasury into the coffers of their employers.

The system early adopted for the disposition of the public lands of the United States is admirable, and, in the opinion of your committee, ought not to be broken in upon or departed from. The pre-emption laws have, more than any other cause, tended to unsettle and derange them, and they have thrown upon the General Land Office a mass of labor, most unpleasant in its character, and difficult to be performed. The good which they do bears no comparison to the evil, for every dollar which the poorer settlers save by them, hundreds are lost by the government, and fraud, and perjury, and unlawful combination, and lawless violence, to put down competition at public sales, have arisen out of their provisions. In the opinion of your committee, they ought to cease.

There are also connected in some measure with this subject, several bills and memorials referred to your committee, proposing or praying for grants of land for seminaries of learning, for public education, or to aid in constructing works of internal improvement. These are all meritorious objects, and your committee are disposed to give them the most favorable consideration. But there are many difficulties attending the action of Congress on these special subjects. The very great extent of our country, the general feeling that all parts of it have equal rights to the munificence of Congress, the impossibility of determining which, among many institutions in the same State, ought to have such bounty as Congress might be disposed to bestow on objects of this kind, all lead to the conclusion that it were better to put it in the power of the several States to confer these bounties, and select the most worthy objects, than to attempt here to perform that office.

The rapidity with which the public lands now sell, the ease with which they are converted into money, the abundance of money now in the Treasury, and the moral certainty that there will be, for a long time, enough, and more than enough, to meet the current expenses of the government, have impressed strongly upon your committee the opinion, that it is impolitic and inexpedient to make a donation of land for any object, where a donation of money may be as lawfully made, and will effect the same end. These donations or transfers of land are liable to the objection that they tend more or less to confuse and complicate the land system. They all add something to the duties of the officers of the United States who have charge of the public lands, and they serve to embarrass the purchaser, who has not, as he would without them have, one set, and one only, of land offices to whom he is to resort for the entry of lands. There is another objection. Though it be the fact, that a donation of land by law is equivalent to a donation of money, yet we do not always feel it exactly so. There is a natural tendency to consider it more highly than it deserves, and to treat it too highly in legislation.

Your committee, on the whole, believe that it is better, if Congress have the constitutional power, to distribute among the several States, according to their respective rights, the proceeds of the sales of the public lands, allowing the States to use it for any or all of the purposes set forth and recommended in these bills and memorials. But that the lands themselves should not be assigned over, given away, or granted by Congress; that the ancient system of sales should be carefully preserved, and that all the deviations from it, which have caused much waste and confusion, should, as soon as possible, be corrected, and the former order of things fully restored.

The question of constitutional power has occupied the careful and sedulous attention of the committee; and they here present to the Senate the course of reasoning on that subject which they consider sound and just, and which has led them to the conclusion that Congress possesses the power to distribute the proceeds of the public lands according to the principles of this bill.

At the time the deed of cession from Virginia was made and accepted, the Union was held together by the Articles of Confederation of 1778, which, in its 8th article, provides "that all charges of war and other expenses that shall be incurred for the common defence, or general welfare, and allowed by the United States in Congress assembled, shall be defrayed out of a common treasury, which shall be supplied by the several States."

The mode of determining the proportion which each of the States shall bear of the public charges, is particularly pointed out, and it is there provided that "the taxes for paying that proportion shall be laid and levied by the authority and direction of the several States." To this state of things, existing at the time of the delivery of the Virginia deed of cession, its provisions must necessarily apply. It was to a confederacy of independent States, who kept up a common treasury out of contributions from each of its several members, according to a determinate regulation, that this deed was made, and after making certain reservations, specially set forth, it declares the trust in the following distinct and unequivocal terms: "That all the lands within the Territory so ceded to the United States, and not reserved for, or appropriated to any of the before-mentioned purposes, or disposed of in bounties to the officers and soldiers of the American army, shall be considered as a common fund for the use and benefit of such of the United States as have become, or shall become, members of the confederation, Virginia inclusive, according to their usual respective proportions in the general charge and expenditures, and shall be faithfully and bona fide disposed of for that purpose, and for no other use or purpose whatsoever." If, then, we had still continued, down to the present time, a confederation of States, bound together by the articles of 1778, and if, as is now the case, the public debt were discharged, the public expenses borne by revenues from other quarters, and the public land pouring its millions into the Treasury, what ought Congress, as the trustee of that common fund, to do with it? It is a trust fund, placed in the hands of Congress "for the use and benefit of the several States," and it is to be disposed of "bona fide" for that purpose, "and for no other use or purpose whatsoever." So long as there was a public debt to be paid, this fund was well applied for the common benefit in the payment of that debt, as the debt was a common charge upon all, "according to their usual respective proportions in the public expenditures." And so long as it was necessary for the support of government, its application to that purpose was right, for the same reason, but when this state of things has ceased, when the proceeds of the public lands are no longer necessary for either of these purposes, what is it the duty of the trustee to do with it, according to the letter and spirit of the deed of trust? And what, were it a case between individuals, would a court of equity compel him to do? The answer is plain and obvious. He not only might pay it, but he would be bound to pay it over to those for whose benefit he held it. If it were not necessary to disburse it for them, he must restore it to them. This, as between individuals, would be a plain case, and your committee cannot perceive how it is varied when applied between States and nations. If, then, we had remained, as we were, members of the old confederation; if the Constitution had not intervened, to change, in anywise, the relations of the States to each other, or to the whole, it would have been not only the right, but the duty of Congress, pursuant to the spirit of that deed of cession, to have distributed among the several States the proceeds of the sales of the lands contained within the bounds of that grant. The delivery and acceptance of this deed amounted to a contract, and the above is, according to the opinion of your committee, the just construction of that contract.

But the rights and duties of the United States as a contracting party, are not all changed by the adoption of the Constitution. The 1st section of the 6th article of that instrument, provides "that all debts contracted, and engagements entered into, before the adoption of this Constitution, shall be as valid against the United States under this Constitution as under the confederation;" so that our rights, and our duties, with regard to this trust, are the same precisely that they would have been under the old confederation. All that has been said relative to the deed of cession from Virginia, applies equally to the cessions from the other States, except Georgia, whose deed bears date after the adoption of the federal Constitution; but, with this exception, it is in tenor and spirit the same with the deed above considered.

Your committee are hence led to the conclusion, that with respect to the proceeds of all the lands north of the 31st degree of latitude, and east of the Mississippi river, Congress not only has the constitutional power to make the proposed distribution, but it is a duty enjoined on them by a contract which is recognized and adopted by the Constitution.

As to the land lying within the bounds of the original purchase of Louisiana and Florida, our right so to apply it rests upon less satisfactory grounds. We have no compact concerning it; no constitutional provision, or any agreement recognized by the Constitution, which expressly authorized the purchase of this additional territory, or which places the land so purchased in the same situation with that which was originally transferred to Congress by the States. But the right to acquire the additional territory is no longer an open question. It has been settled, and by virtue of its adjustment we have already received into the Union two States, and the prosperity of the whole country has been thereby greatly enhanced. It would seem that when a large extent of territory was added to that which heretofore belonged to the United States, it ought to be subjected to the same constitutional and legal principles which governed in the disposition and management of the lands which we held at the time of the formation of the Constitution. It has been so, strictly, in all things, so far as it related to jurisdiction: it would seem just and reasonable that it should be so as to soil also.

But in every estimate which has been as yet presented of the costs and the proceeds of the public lands, whether by the Secretary of the Treasury or by committees of Congress, the money paid for Louisiana and Florida has been charged to this fund, and it continues to be so down to the last report of the Secretary of the Treasury of the 8th of December, 1835. If this be correct, if the public lands have been made the fund out of which this large purchase has been paid, it is in truth but a conversion of the receipts for land into other lands, which would, as a necessary consequence, follow the same law of distribution which applied to the original subject out of which the payments were made. The fact that other great and important advantages were derived to the Union from the purchase of these two territories does not at all weaken the force of the argument, but leaves it, in this particular instance, precisely as it would have stood if there had been a purchase of land merely out of the funds arising from the sales of lands; and by the well-known principles of equity the trust attends the fund, whensoever invested.

Your committee have not taken into consideration the question whether Congress have power, under the Constitution, to distribute a portion of the general revenue among the several States, but have chosen to rest the measure proposed by this bill on its own special grounds

The expediency of this measure appears from considerations heretofore suggested, nor those alone. The distribution of the proceeds of the public lands among the several States would cause a watchful censorship over this branch of the public revenues, which has fallen into confusion by past negligence and inattention. The representatives in Congress from the several States would be induced, by the interest which their immediate constituents must feel in the subject, to prevent the waste of the public lands, as well as of public money, and to watch over the national domain, as a matter in which those to whom they are responsible have a direct and immediate interest.

It would withdraw from the Treasury of the United States the surplus revenue, without infringing on the Constitution, or touching any of its provisions. The money so withdrawn will be, in effect, restored to the pockets of the people, as it will thus enable the several States to exempt their citizens from a direct and burdensome taxation, which they now of necessity impose to effect those public improvements which the situation of the whole country demands, and which are requisite to the prosperity and advancement of each particular State. So long as the law may be continued in force, it will be a steady, regular, and certain resource for these and like purposes to the several States, nor ought they, nor will they feel that it is a gift gratuitously given and submissively received. If our views of the subject be just, it is, in the present state of the Treasury, their own as a matter of equity, not of mere favor; and State pride would not be humbled, or State independence endangered by receiving it.

By a provision of the Constitution of the United States, the several States are denied the right of laying imposts upon commerce—that easy and indirect mode of raising a revenue which is hardly felt by a people. They are, therefore, generally compelled to resort to direct taxes upon land and goods, and, in the Western States, on land especially, to provide for the wants of government, and to construct such works of internal improvement as their wants and welfare may require; and in some of the States those taxes have borne heavily upon the people. That burden, by the distribution proposed by this bill, would be lightened, and a large annual fund placed in the hands of the several States, which would enable them to extend the benefit of their improvements as fast and as far as the general interests might require.

Your committee entertain no doubt that if our country continues in a state of peace, and if no unforeseen calamity should visit it and mar its prosperity, that the receipts from customs, brought down to the lowest standard that existing laws contemplate, will still be amply sufficient for all the current expenses of the government, economically administered. The estimates which are sent us from the Secretary of the Treasury of those probable receipts, have not for some time past approached very nearly to accuracy; they, therefore, cannot be received as a basis of an estimate.

The increased population and business of the country, the very force of circumstances, which none can control, pours into the Treasury millions upon millions, which its officers were not led to anticipate, and which they hardly seem yet to realize. In the report of the Secretary of the Treasury of the 8th of December, 1835, he estimates the revenue of the last quarter of that year at $4,950,000. But, in answer to a resolution of the Senate of the 5th of the present month, he shows that the actual receipts for the same quarter have in fact amounted to about $11,149,000, exceeding the amount of the estimate by about $6,200,000, while the whole receipts of the year 1835 have exceeded his estimate by about $14,629,000.

Having formed the opinion that it is within the constitutional power of Congress to pass this measure; that the finances of the nation will not be too much diminished, or at all deranged by it; and that the general prosperity of the country would be increased by its adoption, your committee have thought it within the range of their duty to estimate, as nearly as may be from the data within their power, the probable annual amount which will arise from the sales of the public lands, and be subject to distribution, should this bill become a law.

In looking into the future of human affairs, and judging of them from the past, we are constantly liable to error, arising from the difficulty of estimating all the disturbing causes which may intervene to produce a fluctuation in the course and current of events. On this subject, however, there are more stable and constant elements, which go to make up the data of our calculations than generally enter into financial estimates.

The sales of the public lands rest essentially on the wants of the husbandman, and are limited to a quantity little exceeding those wants. It is true, when the price is much below its actual value, it may become a subject of extensive speculation, but even then the amount of sales resolves itself into the same element, and speculation merely goes in advance of the farmer, who purchases for actual occupation, without increasing the aggregate of sales in a series of years. The principles of population which have developed themselves in the United States in the last forty years, will not, probably, change materially in a like period to come, for within that time none of those causes which operate as checks upon population can, in the ordinary course of things, have existence here; nor is it probable that the pursuits of the great body of the people will essentially change; for the same causes which have made us an agricultural community are likely to continue without diminution, so long as the means of subsistence remain, as now, abundant and easy to be procured, and so long as there is a wide public domain parcelled out and ready for sale on moderate terms, placing a home and a freehold in the power of all that have the wish to possess them. The population of our country is, therefore, likely to continue its ratio of increase, and the habits and pursuits of our people to remain the same. Hence the investments in land for the use of the agriculturists will increase in like ratio as heretofore with the increase of our population.

Prior to the year 1800, but little land had been sold by the United States, and there was at that time, of wild and uncultivated land within the bounds of the now States of Maine, Vermont, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, and Ohio, belonging to the States and individnals, a very large quantity, the amount of which cannot be very accurately ascertained, but it is safe to say that it exceeded one hundred millions of acres This has all, or nearly all, since passed into the hands of actual settlers; and there has been sold and granted of the lands of the United States, within that period, about fifty millions of acres. Thus it appears there have been taken up and converted to the use of the husbandman, within the last thirty-five years, about one hundred and fifty millions of acres of wild land; and in the mean time, little or none heretofore cultivated, has been abandoned. The population of the United States in 1800, was four millions, nearly; at this time it is about fourteen millions five hundred thousand; and as the increase upon four millions has, in thirty-five years, required one hundred and fifty million acres of new land, it follows that a like increase upon fourteen million five hundred thousand will, in a like period, require about five hundred and forty millions of acres, rising from the beginning to the end of the period in a ratio of progression; the average amount being about fifteen millions per year.

From the above data, your committee estimate the average receipts from the sales of the public lands for the next ten years, if the country continue in peace, if the land system be faithfully preserved, and if the sales be guarded from combination and fraud, at an average of something more than $10,000,000 per annum. There is already in hand, to be divided by the terms of this bill, $20,571,125 75; of this, the several States will be entitled to receive the sums shown by the annexed table, and of the receipts of each succeeding year, until the next census, in nearly the same proportions.

Your committee report the bill back, with amendments, and recommend its passage.

April 16, 1832.

Mr. CLAY, from the Committee on Manufactures, made, to the Senate, the following report:

The Committee on Manufactures have been instructed by the Senate to inquire into the expediency of reducing the price of public lands, and of ceding them to the several States within which they are situated, on reasonable terms. Far from desiring to assume the duty involved in this important inquiry, it is known to the Senate that a majority of the committee was desirous that the subject should have been referred to some other committee. But, as the Senate took a different view of the matter, the Committee on Manufactures have felt bound to acquiesce in its decisions; and, having bestowed on the whole subject the best consideration in their power, now beg leave to submit to the Senate the result of their inquiries and reflections.

The public lands belonging to the general government are situated, first, within the limits of the United States, as defined by the treaty of peace which terminated the Revolutionary war; and secondly, within the boundaries of Louisiana and Florida, as ceded by France and Spain, respectively, to the United States.

1st. At the commencement of the Revolutionary war, there were, in some of the States, large bodies of waste and unappropriated lands, principally west of the Allegany mountains, and in the southern or south-western quarters of the Union, while in others, of more circumscribed or better-defined limits, no such resource existed. During the progress of that war, the question was agitated, what should be done with these lands in the event of its successful termination? That question was likely to lead to paralyzing divisions and jealousies. The States not containing any considerable quantity of waste lands, contended that, as the war was waged with united means, with equal sacrifices, and at the common expense, the waste lands ought to be considered as a common property, and not be exclusively appropriated to the benefit of the particular States within which they happen to be situated. These, however, resisted the claim, upon the ground that each State was entitled to the whole of the territory, whether waste or cultivated, included within its chartered limits. To check the progress of discontent, and arrest the serious consequences to which the agitation of this question might lead, Congress recommended to the States to make liberal cessions of the waste and unseated lands to the United States; and, on the 10th day of October, 1780, "Resolved, That the unappropriated lands that may be ceded or relinquished to the United States by any particular State, pursuant to the recommendation of Congress of the 6th of September last, shall be disposed of for the common benefit of the United States," &c.

In conformity with the recommendation of Congress, the several States containing waste and uncultivated lands made cessions of them to the United States. The declared object having been substantially the same in all of these cessions, it is only necessary to advert to the terms of some of them. The first in order of time was that of New-York, made on the first day of March, 1781, by its delegation in Congress, in pursuance of an act of the legislature of the State, and the terms of the deed of cession expressly provide that the ceded lands and territories were to be held "to and for the only use and benefit of such of the States as are, or shall become, parties to the Articles of Confederation." That of Virginia was the next in date, but by far the most important of all the cessions made by the different States, both as respects the extent and value of the country ceded. It comprehended the right of that commonwealth to the vast territory northwest of the river Ohio, embracing, but not confined to the limits of, the present States of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois. The deed of cession was executed by the delegation of Virginia in Congress, in 1784, agreeably to an act of the legislature passed in 1783; and, among other conditions, the deed explicitly declares "that all the lands within the territory so ceded to the United States, and not reserved for, or appropriated to, any of the before-mentioned purposes, or disposed of in bounties to the officers and soldiers of the American army, shall be considered a common fund for the use and benefit of such of the United States as have become, or shall become, members of the confederation or federal alliance of the said States, Virginia inclusive, according to their usual respective proportions in the general charge and expenditure, and shall be faithfully and bona fide disposed of for that purpose, and for no other use or purpose whatsoever." Passing by the cessions which other States, prompted by a magnanimous spirit of union and patriotism, successively made, we come to the last in the series, that of the State of Georgia, in 1802. The articles of agreement and cession entered into between that State and the United States, among various other conditions, contain the unequivocal declaration, "that all the lands ceded by this agreement, to the United States shall, after satisfying the above-mentioned payment of one million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars to the State of Georgia, and the grants recognized by the preceding conditions, be considered as a common fund for the use and benefit of the United States, Georgia included, and shall be faithfully disposed of for that purpose, and for no other use or purpose whatever."

Thus, by the clear and positive terms of these acts of cession, was a great public national trust created and assumed by the general government. It became solemnly bound to hold and administer the lands ceded, as a common fund for the use and benefit of all the States, and for no other use or purpose whatever. To waste or misapply this fund, or to divert it from the common benefit for which it was conveyed, would be a violation of the trust. The general government has no more power, rightfully, to cede the lands thus acquired to one of the new States, without a fair equivalent, than it could retrocede them to the State or States from which they were originally obtained. There would, indeed, be much more equity in the latter than in the former case. Nor is the moral responsibility of the general government at all weakened by the consideration that, if it were so unmindful of its duty as to disregard the sacred character of the trust, there might be no competent power, peacefully applied, which could coerce its faithful execution.

2d. The other source whence the public lands of the United States have been acquired, are, first, the treaty of Louisiana, concluded in 1803; and, secondly, the treaty of Florida, signed in 1819. By the first, all the country west of the Mississippi, and extending to the Pacific ocean, known as Louisiana, which had successively belonged to France, Spain, and France again, including the island of New Orleans, and stretching east of the Mississippi to the Perdido, was transferred to the United States, in consideration of the sum of fifteen millions of dollars, which they stipulated to pay, and have since punctually paid, to France, besides other conditions deemed favorable and important to her interests. By the treaty of Florida, both the provinces of east and west Florida, whether any portion of them was or was not actually comprehended within the true limits of Louisiana, were ceded to the United States, in consideration, besides other things, of the payment of five millions of dollars, which they agreed to pay, and have since accordingly paid.

The large pecuniary considerations thus paid to these two foreign powers were drawn from the Treasury of the people of the United States; and, consequently, the countries for which they formed the equivalents ought to be held and deemed for the common benefit of all the people of the United States. To divert the lands from that general object; to misapply or sacrifice them; to squander or improvidently cast them away, would be alike subversive of the interests of the people of the United States, and contrary to the plain dictates of the duty by which the general government stands bound to the States and to the whole people.

Prior to the treaties of Louisiana and Florida, Congress had adopted a system for surveying and selling the public lands, devised with much care and great deliberation, the advantages of which having been fully tested by experience, it was subsequently applied to the countries acquired by those treaties. According to that system, all public lands offered for sale are previously accurately surveyed, by skilful surveyors, in ranges of townships of six miles square each, which townships are subdivided into thirty-six equal divisions or square miles, called sections, by lines crossings each other at right angles, and generally containing 640 acres. These sections are again divided into quarters, and prior to the year 1820, no person could purchase a less quantity than a quarter. In that year, provision was made for the further division of the sections into eighths, thereby allowing a purchaser to buy only eighty acres, if he wished to purchase no more. During the present session of Congress, further to extend accommodation to purchasers of the public lands, and especially to the poorer classes, the sections have been again divided into sixteenths, admitting a purchase of only forty acres.

This uniform system of surveying and dividing the public lands applies to all the States and territories within which they are situated. Its great advantages are manifest. It insures perfect security of title and certainty of boundary, and consequently avoids those perplexing land disputes, the worst of all species of litigation, the distressing effects of which have been fatally experienced in some of the Western States. But these are not the only advantages, great as they unquestionably are. The system lays the foundation of useful civil institutions, the benefit of which is not confined to the present generation, but will be transmitted to posterity.

Under the operation of the system thus briefly sketched, the progress of the settlement and population of the public domain of the United States has been altogether unexampled. Views which the committee will hereafter present, conclusively demonstrate that, while the spirit of free emigration should not be checked or counteracted, it stands in no need of any fresh stimulus.

Before proceeding to perform the specific duty assigned to the committee by the Senate, they had thought it desirable to exhibit some general views of this great national resource. For that purpose, a call, through the Senate, for information, has been made upon the executive branch of the government. A report has not yet been made; but, as the committee are desirous of avoiding any delay, not altogether indispensable, they have availed themselves of the report from the Secretary of the Treasury to the House of Representatives, under date the 6th April, 1832, hereto annexed, marked A, and of such other information as was accessible to them.

From that report, it appears that the aggregate of all sums of money which have been expended by the United States in the acquisition of the public lands, including interest on account of the purchases of Louisiana and Florida up to the 30th day of September, 1831, and including also expenses in their sale and management, is $48,077,551 40; and that the amount of money received at the Treasury for proceeds of the sales of the public lands to the 30th of September, 1831, is $37,272,713 31. The government, therefore, has not been reimbursed by $10,804,838 90. According to the same report, it appears that the estimated amount of unsold lands, on which the foreign and Indian titles have been extinguished, is 227,293,884 acres, within the limits of the new States and Territories; and that the Indian title remains on 113,577,869 acres within the same limits. That there have been granted to Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Alabama, for internal improvements, 2,187,665 acres; for colleges, academies, and universities in the new States and Territories, the quantity of 508,009; for education, being the thirty-sixth part of the public lands appropriated for common schools, the amount of 7,952,538 acres; and for seats of government in some of the new States and Territories, 21,589 acres. By a report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, communicated to Congress with the annual message of the President of the United States, in December, 1827, the total quantity of the public lands, beyond the boundaries of the new States and Territories, was estimated to be 750,000,000 acres. The aggregate, therefore, of all the unsold and unappropriated public lands of the United States, surveyed and unsurveyed, on which the Indian title remains or has been extinguished, lying within and without the boundaries of the new States and Territories, agreeably to the two reports now referred to, is 1,090,871,753 acres. There had been 138,988,224 acres surveyed, and the quantity only of 19,239,412 acres sold up to the 1st January, 1826. When the information called for shall be received, the subsequent surveys and sales up to the present period will be ascertained.

The committee are instructed by the Senate to inquire into the expediency of reducing the price of the public lands, and also of ceding them to the several States in which they are situated, on reasonable terms. The committee will proceed to examine these two subjects of inquiry distinctly, beginning first with that which relates to a reduction of price.

I. According to the existing mode of selling the public lands they are first offered at public auction for what they will bring in a free and fair competition among the purchasers; when the public sales cease, the lands remaining unsold may be bought, from time to time, at the established rate of one dollar and a quarter per acre. The price was reduced to that sum in 1820, from $2 per acre, at which it had previously stood from the first establishment of the present system of selling public lands. A leading consideration with Congress in the reduction of the price, was that of substituting cash sales for the credits which had been before allowed, and which, on many accounts, it was deemed expedient to abolish. A further reduction of the price, if called for by the public interests, must be required, either, 1st, Because the government now demands more than a fair price for the public lands; or, 2dly, Because the existing price retards, injuriously, the settlement and population of the new States and Territories. These suggestions deserve separate and serious considerations.

The committee possess no means of determining the exact value of all the public lands now in market; nor is it material, at the present time, that the precise worth of each township or section should be accurately known. It is presumable that a considerable portion of the immense quantity offered to sale, or held by the United States, would not now command, and may not be intrinsically worth the minimum price fixed by law; on the other hand, it is certain that a large part is worth more. If there could be a discrimination made, and the government had any motive to hasten the sales beyond the regular demands of the population, it might be proper to establish different rates, according to the classes of land; but the government having no inducement to such acceleration, has hitherto proceeded on the liberal policy of establishing a moderate price, and by subdivisions of the sections, so as to accommodate the poorer citizens, has placed the acquisition of a home within the reach of every industrious man. For $100 any one may now purchase eighty, or for $50, forty acres of first-rate land, yielding, with proper cultivation, from fifty to eighty bushels of Indian corn per acre, or other equivalent crops.

There is no more satisfactory criterion of the fairness of the price of an article than that arising from the briskness of sales when it is offered in the market. On applying this rule, the conclusion would seem to be irresistible, that the established price is not too high. The amount of the sales in the year 1828, was $1,018,308 75; in 1829, $1,517,175 13; in 1830, $2,329,356 14; and, during the year 1831, $3,000,000. And the Secretary of the Treasury observes, in his annual report, at the commencement of this session, that "the receipts from the public lands, during the present year, it will be perceived, have likewise exceeded the estimates, and indeed have gone beyond all former example. It is believed that, notwithstanding the large amount of scrip and forfeited land stock that may still be absorbed in payment for lands, yet if the surveys now projected be completed, the receipts from this source of revenue will not fall greatly below those of the present year." And he estimates the receipts during the current year, from this source, at three millions of dollars. It is incredible to suppose that the amount of sales would have risen to so large a sum if the price had been unreasonably high. The committee are aware that the annual receipts may be expected to fluctuate, as fresh lands, in favorite districts, are brought into market, and according to the activity or sluggishness of emigration in different years.

Against any considerable reduction of the price of the public lands, unless it be necessary to a more rapid population of the new States, which will be hereafter examined, there are weighty, if not decisive considerations.

1. The government is the proprietor of much the largest quantity of the unseated lands of the United States. What it has in market bears a large proportion to the whole of the occupied lands within their limits. If a considerable quantity of any article, land, or any commodity whatever, is in market, the price at which it is sold will affect, in some degree, the value of the whole of that article, whether exposed to sale or not. The influence of a reduction of the price of the public lands would probably be felt throughout the Union; certainly in all the Western States, and most in those which contain, or are nearest to the public lands. There ought to be the most cogent and conclusive reasons for adopting a measure which might seriously impair the value of the property of the yeomanry of the country. While it is decidedly the most important class in the community, most patient, patriotic, and acquiescent in whatever public policy is pursued, it is unable or unwilling to resort to those means of union and concert which other interests employ to make themselves heard and respected. Government should, therefore, feel itself constantly bound to guard, with sedulous care, the rights and welfare of the great body of our yeomanry. Would it be just toward those who have hitherto purchased public lands at higher prices, to say nothing as to the residue of the agricultural interest of the United States, to make such a reduction, and thereby impair the value of their property? Ought not any such plan of reduction, if adopted, to be accompanied with compensation for the injury which they would inevitably sustain?

2. A material reduction of price would excite and stimulate the spirit of speculation, now dormant, and probably lead to a transfer of vast quantities of the public domain from the control of government to the hands of the speculator. At the existing price, and with such extensive districts as the public constantly offers in the market, there is no great temptation to speculation. The demand is regular, keeping pace with the progress of emigration, and is supplied on known and moderate terms. If the price were much reduced, the strongest incentives to engrossment of the better lands would be presented to large capitalists; and the emigrant, instead of being able to purchase from his own government upon uniform and established conditions, might be compelled to give much higher and more fluctuating prices to the speculator. An illustration of this effect is afforded by the military bounty lands granted during the late war. Thrown into market at prices below the government rate, they notoriously became an object of speculation, and have principally fallen into the hands of speculators, retarding the settlement of the districts which include them.

3. The greatest emigration that is believed now to take place from any of the States, is from Ohio, Kentucky, and Tennessee. The effects of a material reduction in the price of the public lands would be, 1st, To lessen the value of real estate in those three States; 2d, To diminish their interest in the public domain, as a common fund for the benefit of all the States; and, 3d, To offer what would operate as a bounty to further emigration from those States, occasioning more and more lands situated within them to be thrown into the market, thereby not only lessening the value of their lands, but draining them of both their population and currency.

And, lastly, Congress has, within a few years, made large and liberal grants of the public lands to several States. To Ohio, 922,937 acres; to Indiana, 384,728 acres; to Illinois, 480,000 acres; and to Alabama, 400,000 acres; amounting together to 2,187,665 acres. Considerable portions of these lands yet remain unsold. The reduction of the price of the public lands, generally, would impair the value of those grants, as well as injuriously affect that of the lands which have been sold in virtue of them.

On the other hand, it is inferred and contended, from the large amount of public land remaining unsold, after having been so long exposed to sale, that the price at which it is held is too high. But this apparent tardiness is satisfactorily explained by the immense quantity of public lands which have been put into the market by government. It is well known that the new States have constantly and urgently pressed the extinction of the Indian title upon lands within their respective limits, and, after its extinction, that they should be brought into market as rapidly as practicable. The liberal policy of the general government, coinciding with the wishes of the new States, has prompted it to satisfy the wants of emigrants from every part of the Union, by exhibiting vast districts of land for sale in all the States and Territories, thus offering every variety of climate and situation to the free choice of settlers. From these causes, it has resulted that the power of emigration has been totally incompetent to absorb the immense bodies of waste lands offered in the market. For the capacity to purchase is, after all, limited by the emigration, and the progressive increase of population. If the quantity thrown into the market had been quadrupled, the probability is that there would not have been much more annually sold than actually has been. With such extensive fields for selection before them, purchasers, embarrassed as to the choice which they would make, are sometimes probably influenced by caprice or accidental causes. While the better lands remain, those of secondary value will not be purchased. A judicious farmer or planter would sooner give one dollar and a quarter per acre for first-rate land, than receive as a donation land of inferior quality, if he were compelled to settle upon it.

It is also contended that the price of the public land is a tax; and that at a period when, in consequence of the payment of the public debt and the financial prosperity of the United States, the government is enabled to dispense with revenue, that tax ought to be reduced, and the revenue arising from the sales be thereby diminished. In the first place, it is to be observed that if, as has been before stated, the reduction of the price of the public lands should stimulate speculation, the consequence would probably be, at least for some years, an augmentation of the revenue from that source. Should it have the effect of speculation supposed, it would probably also retard the settlement of the new States, by placing the lands engrossed by speculators, in anticipation of increased value, beyond the reach of emigrants. If it were true that the price demanded by government operated as a tax, the question would still remain whether that price exceeded the fair value of the land which emigrants are in the habit of purchasing; and, if it did not, there would be no just ground for its reduction. And assuming it to be a tax, it might be proper to inquire who pays the tax: the new or the old States—the States that send out or the States that receive the emigrants? In the next place, regarded as a tax, those who have heretofore made purchases at the higher rate have already paid the tax, and are as much deserving the equitable consideration of the government as those who might hereafter be disposed to purchase at the reduced rate. It is proper to add that, by the repeal and reduction contemplated of duties upon articles of foreign import, subsequent purchasers of the public lands, as far as they are consumers of those articles, will share in the general relief, and will consequently be enabled to apply more of their means to the purchase of land.

But in no reasonable sense can the sale of the public lands be considered as the imposition of a tax. The government, in their disposal, acts as a trustee for the whole people of the United States, and, in that character, holds and offers them in the market. Those who want them buy them, because it is their inclination to buy them. There is no compulsion in the case. The purchase is perfectly voluntary, like that of any other article which is offered in the market. In making it, the purchaser looks exclusively to his own interest. The motive of augmenting the public revenue, or any other motive than that of his own advantage, never enters into his consideration. The government, therefore, stands to the purchaser in the relation merely of the vendor of a subject which the purchaser's own welfare prompts him to acquire; and, in this respect, does not vary from the relation which exists between any private vendor of waste lands and the purchaser from him. Nor does the use to which the government may think proper to apply the proceeds of the sale of the public lands give the smallest strength to the idea that the purchase of them is tantamount to the payment of a tax. The government may employ those proceeds as a part of its ordinary revenue, or it may apply them in any other manner, consistent with the Constitution, which it deems proper. Revenue and taxation are not always relative terms. There may be revenue without taxation. There may be taxation without revenue. There may be sources of established revenue which not only do not imply, but which supersede taxation. Is the consideration paid for land to a private individual to be deemed a tax, because that individual may happen to use it as a part of his income?

2. Is the reduction of the price of the public lands necessary to accelerate the settlement and population of the States within which they are situated? Those States are Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana. If their growth has been unreasonably slow and tardy, we may conclude that some fresh impulse, such as that under consideration, is needed. Prior to the treaty of Greenville, concluded in 1795, there were but few settlements within the limits of the present State of Ohio. Principally since that period, that is, within a term of about forty years, that State, from a wilderness, the haunt of savages and wild beasts, has risen into a powerful commonwealth, containing, at this time, a population of a million of souls, and holding the third or fourth rank among the largest States in the Union. During the greater part of that term, the minimum price of the public lands was two dollars per acre; and of the large quantity with which the settlement of that State commenced, there only remain to be sold 5,586,834 acres.

The aggregate population of the United States, exclusive of the territories, increased from the year 1820 to 1830, from 9,579,873 to 12,716,697. The rate of the increase, during the whole term of ten years, including a fraction, may be stated at thirty-three per cent. The principle of population is presumed to have full scope generally in all parts of the United States. Any State, therefore, which has exceeded or fallen short of that rate, may be fairly assumed to have gained or lost by emigration nearly to the extent of the excess or deficiency. From a table accompanying this report, (marked B,) the Senate will see presented various interested views of the progress of population in the several States. In that table, it will be seen that each of eleven States exceeded, and each of thirteen fell short of an increase at the average rate of thirty-three per cent. The greatest increase, during the term, was in the State of Illinois, where it was one hundred and eighty-five per cent., or at the rate of 18½ per cent. per annum; and the least was in Delaware, where it was less than six per cent. The seven States embracing the public lands had a population, in 1820, of 1,207,165, and, in 1830, 2,238,802, exhibiting an average increase of 85 per cent. The seventeen States containing no part of the public lands had a population, in 1820, of 8,372,707, and, in 1830, of 10,477,895, presenting an average increase of only 25 per cent. The thirteen States, whose increase, according to the table, was below 33 per cent., contained, in 1820, a population of 5,939,759, and, in 1830, of 6,966,600, exhibiting an average increase of only seventeen per cent. The increase of the seven new States upon a capital which, at the commencement of the term, was 1,207,165, has been greater than that of the thirteen whose capital then was 5,939,759. In three of the eleven States, (Tennessee, Georgia, and Maine,) whose population exceeded the average increase of 33 per cent., there were public lands belonging to those States; and in the fourth, (New York,) the excess is probably attributable to the rapid growth of the city of New York, to waste lands in the western part of that State, and to the great development of its vast resources by means of extensive internal improvements.

These authentic views of the progress of population in the seven new States, demonstrate that it is most rapid and gratifying; that it needs no such additional stimulus as a farther reduction in the price of the public lands; and that, by preserving and persevering in the established system for selling them, the day is near at hand when those States, now respectable, may become great and powerful members of the confederacy.

Complaints exist in the new States, that large bodies of lands in their respective territories, being owned by the general government, are exempt from taxation to meet the ordinary expenses of the State governments, and other local charges; that this exemption continues for five years after the sale of any particular tract; and that land, being the principal source of the revenue of those States, an undue share of the burden of sustaining the expenses of the State governments falls upon the resident population. To all these complaints it may be answered that, by voluntary compacts between the new States, respectively, and the general government, five per cent. of the net proceeds of all the sales of the public lands included within their limits are appropriated for internal improvements leading to or within those States; that a section of land in each township, or one thirty-sixth part of the whole of the public lands embraced within their respective boundaries, has been reserved for purposes of education; and that the policy of the general government has been uniformly marked by great liberality toward the new States, in making various, and some very extensive grants of the public lands for local purposes. But, in accordance with the same spirit of liberality, the committee would recommend an appropriation to each of the seven States referred to of a further sum of ten per cent. on the net proceeds of the sales of that part of the public land which lies within it, for objects of internal improvement in their respective limits. The tendency of such an appropriation will be not only to benefit those States, but to enhance the value of the public lands remaining to be sold.

II. The committee have now to proceed to the other branch of the inquiry which they were required to make, that of the expediency of ceding the public lands to the several States in which they are situated, on reasonable terms. The inquiry comprehends, in its consequences, a cession of the whole public domain of the United States, whether lying within or beyond the limits of the present States and Territories. For, although in the terms of the inquiry it is limited to the new States, cessions to them would certainly be followed by similar cessions to other new States, as they may, from time to time, be admitted into the Union. Three of the present Territories have nearly attained the requisite population entitling them to be received as members of the confederacy, and they shortly will be admitted. Congress could not consistently avoid ceding to them the public lands within their limits, after having made such cessions to the other States. The compact with the State of Ohio formed the model of compacts with all the other new States, as they were successively admitted.

Whether the question of a transfer of the public lands be considered in the limited, or more extensive view of it which has been stated, it is one of the highest importance, and demanding the most deliberate consideration. From the statements, founded on official reports, made in the preceding part of this report, it has been seen that the quantity of unsold and unappropriated lands lying within the limits of the new States and Territories, is 340,871,753 acres, and the quantity beyond those limits is 750,000,000, presenting an aggregate of 1,090,871,753 acres. It is difficult to conceive a question of greater magnitude than that of relinquishing this immense amount of national property. Estimating its value according to the minimum price, it presents the enormous sum of $1,363,589,691. If it be said that a large portion of it will never command that price, it is to be observed, on the other hand, that, as fresh lands are brought into market, and exposed to sale at public auction, many of them sell at prices exceeding one dollar and a quarter per acre. Supposing the public lands to be worth, on the average, one half of the minimum price, they would still present the immense sum of $681,794,845. The least favorable view which can be taken of them, is that of considering them a capital yielding at present an income of three millions of dollars annually. Assuming the ordinary rate of six per cent. interest per annum, as the standard to ascertain the amount of that capital, it would be fifty millions of dollars. But this income has been progressively increasing. The average increase during the last six years has been at the rate of twenty-three per cent. per annum. Supposing it to continue in the same ratio—at the end of a little more than four years the income would be double, and make the capital one hundred millions of dollars. While the population of the United States increases only three per cent. per annum, the increase of the demand for the public lands is at the rate of twenty-three per cent., furnishing another evidence that the progress of emigration, and the activity of sales, have not been checked by the price demanded by government.

In whatever light, therefore, this great subject is viewed, the transfer of the public lands from the whole people of the United States, for whose benefit they are now held, to the people inhabiting the new States, must be regarded as the most momentous measure ever presented to the consideration of Congress. If such a measure could find any justification, it must arise out of some radical and incurable defect in the construction of the general government properly to administer the public domain. But the existence of any such defect is contradicted by the most successful experience. No branch of the public service has evinced more system, uniformity, and wisdom, or given more general satisfaction, than that of the administration of the public lands.

If the proposed cession to the new States were to be made at a fair price, such as the general government could obtain from individual purchasers under the present system, there would be no motive for it unless the new States are more competent to dispose of the public lands than the common government. They are now sold under one uniform plan, regulated and controlled by a single legislative authority, and the practical operation is perfectly understood. If they were transferred to the new States, the subsequent disposition would be according to laws emanating from various legislative sources. Competition would probably arise between the new States in the terms which they would offer to purchasers. Each State would be desirous of inviting the greatest number of emigrants, not only for the laudable purpose of populating rapidly its own territories, but with the view to the acquisition of funds to enable it to fulfil its engagements to the general government. Collisions between the States would probably arise, and their injurious consequences may be imagined. A spirit of hazardous speculation would be engendered. Various schemes in the new States would be put afloat to sell or divide the public lands. Companies and combinations would be formed in this country, if not in foreign countries, presenting gigantic and tempting, but delusive projects; and the history of legislation, in some of the States of the Union, admonishes us that a too ready ear is sometimes given by a majority, in a legislative assembly, to such projects.

A decisive objection to such a transfer for a fair equivalent, is, that it would establish a new and dangerous relation between the general government and the new States. In abolishing the credit which had been allowed to purchasers of the public lands, prior to the year 1820, Congress was principally governed by the consideration of the expediency and hazard of accumulating a large amount of debt in the new States, all bordering on each other. Such an accumulation was deemed unwise and unsafe. It presented a new bond of interest, of sympathy, and of union, partially operating to the possible prejudice of the common bond of the whole Union. But that debt was a debt due from individuals, and it was attended with this encouraging security, that purchasers, as they successively completed the payments for their lands, would naturally be disposed to aid the government in enforcing payment from delinquents. The project which the committee are now considering, is, to sell to the States, in their sovereign character, and, consequently, to render them public debtors to the general government to an immense amount. This would inevitably create between the debtor States a common feeling, and a common interest, distinct from the rest of the Union. These States are all in the western and southwestern quarter of the Union, remotest from the centre of federal power. The debt would be felt as a load from which they would constantly be desirous to relieve themselves; and it would operate as a strong temptation, weakening, if not dangerous, to the existing confederacy. The committee have the most animating hopes and the greatest confidence in the strength, and power, and durability of our happy Union; and the attachment and warm affection of every member of the confederacy cannot be doubted: but we have authority, higher than human, for the instruction, that it is wise to avoid all temptation.

In the State of Illinois, with a population, at the last census, of 157,445, there are 31,395,669 acres of public land, including that part on which the Indian title remains to be extinguished. If we suppose it to be worth only half the minimum price, it would amount to $19,622,480. How would that State be able to pay such an enormous debt? How could it pay even the annual interest upon it?

Supposing the debtor States fail to comply with their engagements, in what mode could they be enforced by the general government? In treaties between independent nations, the ultimate remedy is well known. The apprehension of an appeal to that remedy, seconding the sense of justice, and the regard for character which prevail among Christian and civilized nations, constitutes, generally, adequate security for the performance of national compacts. But this last remedy would be totally inadmissible in case of delinquency on the part of the debtor States. The relations between the general government and the members of the confederacy, are happily those of peace, friendship, and fraternity, and exclude all idea of force and war. Could the judiciary coerce the debtor States? On what could their process operate? Could the property of innocent citizens, residing within the limits of those States, be justly seized by the general government, and held responsible for debts contracted by the States themselves in their sovereign character? If a mortgage upon the lands ceded were retained, that mortgage would prevent or retard subsequent sales by the States; and if individuals bought, subject to the encumbrance, a parental government could never resort to the painful measure of disturbing them in their possessions.

Delinquency on the part of the debtor States would be inevitable, and there would be no effectual remedy for the delinquency. They would come again and again to Congress, soliciting time and indulgence, until, finding the weight of the debt intolerable, Congress, wearied by reiterated applications for relief, would finally resolve to sponge the debt; or, if Congress attempted to enforce its payment, another and a worse alternative would be embraced.

If the proposed cession be made for a price merely nominal, it would be contrary to the express conditions of the original cessions from primitive States to Congress, and contrary to the obligations which the general government stands under to the whole people of these United States, arising out of the fact that the acquisitions of Louisiana and Florida, and from Georgia, were obtained at a great expense, borne from the common treasure, and incurred for the common benefit. Such a gratuitous cession could not be made without a positive violation of a solemn trust, and without manifest injustice to the old States. And its inequality among the new States would be as marked as its injustice to the old would be indefensible. Thus, Missouri, with a population of 140,455, would acquire 38,292,151 acres; and the State of Ohio, with a population of 935,884, would obtain only 5,586,834 acres. Supposing a division of the land among the citizens of those two States respectively, the citizen of Ohio would obtain less than six acres for his share, and the citizen of Missouri upwards of two hundred and seventy-two acres as his proportion.

Upon full and thorough consideration, the committee have come to the conclusion that it is inexpedient either to reduce the price of the public lands, or to cede them to the new States. They believe, on the contrary, that sound policy coincides with the duty which has devolved on the general government to the whole of the States, and the whole of the people of the Union, and enjoins the preservation of the existing system as having been tried and approved after long and triumphant experience. But, in consequence of the extraordinary financial prosperity which the United States enjoy, the question merits examination, whether, while the general government steadily retains the control of this great national resource in its own hands, after the payment of the public debt, the proceeds of the sales of the public lands, no longer needed to meet the ordinary expenses of government, may not be beneficially appropriated to some other objects for a limited time?

Governments, no more than individuals, should be seduced or intoxicated by prosperity, however flattering or great it may be. The country now happily enjoys it in a most unexampled degree. We have abundant reason to be grateful for the blessings of peace and plenty, and freedom from debt. But we must be forgetful of all history and experience if we indulge the delusive hope that we shall always be exempt from calamity and reverses. Seasons of national adversity, of suffering, and of war, will assuredly come. A wise government should expect, and provide for them. Instead of wasting or squandering its resources in a period of general prosperity, it should husband and cherish them for those times of trial and difficulty which, in the dispensations of Providence, may be certainly anticipated. Entertaining these views, and, as the proceeds of the sales of the public lands are not wanted for ordinary revenue, which will be abundantly supplied from the imposts, the committee respectfully recommend that an appropriation of them be made to some other purpose, for a limited time, subject to be resumed in the contingency of war. Should such an event unfortunately occur, the fund may be withdrawn from its peaceful destination, and applied in aid of other means, to the vigorous prosecution of the war, and, afterward, to the payment of any debt which may be contracted in consequence of its existence. And, when peace shall be again restored, and the debt of the new war shall have been extinguished, the fund may be again appropriated to some fit object other than that of the ordinary expenses of government. Thus may this great resurce be preserved, and rendered subservient, in peace and in war, to the common benefit of all the States composing the Union.

The inquiry remains, what ought to be the specific application of the fund under the restriction stated? After deducting the ten per cent. proposed to be set apart for the new States, a portion of the committee would have preferred that the residue should be applied to the objects of internal improvement, and colonizing the free blacks, under the direction of the general government. But a majority of the committee believe it better, as an alternative for the scheme of cession to the new States, and as being most likely to give general satisfaction, that the residue be divided among the twenty-four States, according to their federal representative population, to be applied to education, internal improvement, or colonization, or to the redemption of any existing debt contracted for internal improvements, as each State, judging for itself, shall deem most conformable with its own interests and policy. Assuming the annual product of the sales of the public lands to be three millions of dollars, the table hereto annexed, marked C, shows what each State would be entitled to receive, according to the principle of division which has been stated. In order that the propriety of the proposed appropriation should again, at a day not very far distant, be brought under the review of Congress, the committee would recommend that it be limited to a period of five years, subject to the condition of war not breaking out in the mean time. By an appropriation so restricted as to time, each State will be enabled to estimate the probable extent of its proportion, and to adapt its measures of education, improvement, or colonization, or extinction of existing debt accordingly.

In conformity with the views and principles which the committee have now submitted, they beg leave to report the accompanying bill, entitled "An act to appropriate, for a limited time, the proceeds of the sales of the public lands of the United States."

Letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting reports as to the quantity of public lands unsold; the quantity granted for internal improvements, education, and to charitable institutions; the amount paid for title to public lands; the expenses incurred in the sale of the public lands, and in settling titles of claimants, and the amount received for lands sold.

Statement rendered in pursuance of a resolution of the House of Representatives of 25th January, 1832.

Statement of the amount of money which has been paid by the United States for the title to the public lands, including the payments made under the Louisiana and Florida treaties; the compact with Georgia; the settlement with the Yazoo claimants; the contracts with the several Indian tribes; and the expenditures for compensation to commissioners, clerks, surveyors, and other officers, employed by the United States for the management and sale of the Western domain; also, the gross amount of money received at the public Treasury, as the proceeds of sales of public lands, stated in pursuance of the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 25th of January, 1832.

(For this statement, see vol. 6, No. 1053, p. 449.)

B.

A statement exhibiting various comparative views of the progress of the population of the United States, and in different States, derived from the census of 1820, and the census of 1830.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 28, 1836.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 23d inst., propounding various inquiries as to the practical operation of the pre-emption laws: whether any frauds have been practised upon the government under the color of those laws, and, if so, of what nature, and to what extent; whether, in my opinion, it is practicable to guard against their repetition, if those laws continue in force, &c., and have to state that, in the midst of my accumu'ated duties, I cannot probably better answer those inquiries than by transmitting the enclosed copy of a letter of this date to the Secretary of the Treasury, on a call from the Committee on Public Lands in the House of Representatives.

As all the documents which it is intended to send with that report cannot be copied to-day, I have concluded to send the enclosed without delay, and the copies hereafter.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 28, 1836.

SIR: You have been pleased to refer to me a letter from the Hon. A. G. Harrison, accompanied by a resolution of the Committee on Public Lands: the letter advising you that a bill granting pre-emption to actual settlers, then before the committee, had been drawn with an eye particularly directed to the frauds alleged to have been committed, and expressing that the great desire of the committee to adopt such provisions as will prevent the future possibility of such frauds, had led to the communication, believing that you may have it in your power to give additional light on the subject; the resolution of the committee aforesaid being in these words: "Resolved, That the resolution of the House, instructing the committee 'to inquire into the expediency of modifying the different acts of Congress granting pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands, so as to protect the rights of settlers and prevent frauds against the United States,' be referred to the Secretary of the Treasury, and that he be requested to furnish the committee with the best plan which occurs to him, of securing the right of pre-emption to actual settlers, and of preventing said frauds." I have attentively considered the said letter and resolution, and have the honor to report:

The Committee on Public Lands apply to you, sir, for "all the information in your department concerning the alleged frauds."

Most of the knowledge possessed by the General Land Office concerning frauds practised in relation to pre-emptions, of which I am now able to speak, consists of uncontradicted general reports, in general currency and credit; of oral communications to me, and letters to me and others, from persons in high standing; most of the writers, either requesting that their names may not be published, or not giving authority for such publication. The terms of these communications are rarely sufficiently specific and tangible to fix particular instances, except in the cases of interested correspondents, some of whose representations have been verified, others not; while want of time and opportunity have delayed an investigation of the greater part of this last class.

The requisition of the committee above-mentioned, is sufficiently comprehensive in terms to include every case and its circumstances, as well as the general representations that have reached this office. I must take the liberty to observe that a literal compliance with the requisition cannot be speedily yielded. It would render the report very voluminous, and require to search the files of an immense correspondence, and the investigation of many tens of thousands of pre-emption cases reported, which we have not yet been able to take up for examination. To particularize every exceptionable case, even of those that have attracted attention since the act of 1834 has been in operation, would require more time in the revision and narration than would seem to comport with the desire of the committee to act soon upon the bill alluded to by Mr. Harrison; and, therefore, with your permission, I will confine myself, on this occasion, to the imputations, currently believed, and general heads of impositions attempted and practised, which have been detected in some of the contested cases examined, or which common fame has represented as having been but too common, in some quarters; and without comment on the conspicuous cases of the military reservations at Chicago, and the missionary stations in Mississippi, I proceed to remark that the loudest and most numerous complaints, arising from the pre-emption policy, that have reached the General Land Office, have been against the alleged abuse of the privilege commonly called floating claims. Some who claim to be bonafide cultivators and occupiers under the act of 1834, complain of being vexed and disturbed by these "floats." A more numerous class, not comprised in the provisions of the act, are said not to be the less clamorous because the floats have beeen lawfully located on their chosen spots; but chiefly the virtuous and patriotic citizens of Louisiana have been disgusted and alarmed by the extent to which fraud and perjury is asserted to have been carried in the manufacture of such claims within that interesting State, threatening to cover a large portion of the most valuable lands that have been surveyed. These representations are made by individuals in highly respectable standing, besides our own officers. And it is said, on creditable authority, that preparations appear to be making, in hopes of a pre-emption act at this session of Congress, to acquire, by such means, at minimum cost, a great part of the precious lands on Red river. No particular instance of these practices has been indicated to me, but the opinion is prevalent that they are transacted. It is believed that the number of bonafide pre-emptions in Louisiana is comparatively small, as information derived from persons distinguished by public confidence in that State, represents a belief that a claim to pre-emption was not often heard of on the island of New Orleans, nor west of the Mississippi, before this multiplication of "floats" was devised to be laid on the finest vacant lands.

This iniquitous scheme appears to be of late date in that region, as the first intelligence of it seems to have been communicated to the General Land Office some time after it was placed in my charge. Agreeably to your direction, sir, circumspection and vigilance were recommended to the land officers in Louisiana, in order to guard against imposition; and I ventured to direct the surveyor general to retain the plats in his hands which were destined for the land offices, until further orders. Other steps have recently been taken at this office, to put in train a rigorous scrutiny into the legitimacy of the floating pretensions in that State. Letters and copies of letters on this subject, Nos. — to —, are herewith transmitted. Contrivances have been brought to light in other places, showing where a family occupying the same tenement, where father and son, and mother and son, dwelling together, have set up the pretence of separate cultivation and occupancy, to divide a quarter-section, and obtain a float for each half.

Claimants of another reprehensible description are they whose pretensions are founded on depositions in general terms, or wearing the appearance of being artfully worded, admitting a subterfuge in the attempt to give a legal coloring to their proceedings, by construing the statute to suit their purposes. The law, as its title imports, is in favor of settlers; but pretensions have been set up by persons dwelling in town with their families, and there following mercantile or other pursuits, while they caused a little show of improvement, that scarce deserved the name, to be made for them by others; no proof being produced of their personal superintendence or direction on the spot. Cultivation by slaves or hirelings in 1833, and one or the other, or a growing crop, on the place on the following 19th of June, have been assumed as fulfilling the required conditions.

Among the pretences to cultivation there have been disclosures as follows, viz.: where the cutting and burning a small patch of cane; where an enclosure, not entitled to be called a fence, around a space only large enough for a very small garden, and the planting a few culinary vegetables; and where scattering an undefined quantity of turnip or grass seeds; and, in one case, planting a few turnips or onions—have been claimed as cultivation, to meet this condition. Further remarks upon constructive possession may be dispensed with.

The registers and receivers are made judges of the credibility and sufficiency of the proofs, except in contested cases, which are required to be sent to the Commissioner for decision.

My predecessor ordered the evidence in every case to be forwarded; but during near five months of my superintendence, it has been quite impossible to scrutinize the proof in about sixteen hundred of the former class, without neglecting duties that appeared more pressing and imperative. In those examined, contradictions, prevarications, and other circumstances, have occasionally placed parties and witnesses in no favorable point of view.

In the contested class, the land offices must be presumed, prima facie, to have acted correctly. If honest, they would not knowingly pass a fraudulent claim; if conniving, they will hardly be expected to expose themselves voluntarily. The necessary quantum of evidence can hardly be prescribed, the same proof being more or less convincing to the different persons.

The bill mentioned by Mr. Harrison as having for its subject the granting of pre-emptions to actual settlers, and to prevent the future possibility of such frauds as are alleged to have been committed, forms no part of your reference; and it would, perhaps, be improper to allude to it in this place, if the letter did not seem to indicate an intention on the part of the writer, and of the committee to which he belongs, to extend the grants of pre-emption to others than those who come within the provisions of the act of 1834. Believing such a disposition to be implied, and that a new law to that effect will go far to form the pre-emption policy into a durable system, involving considerations of great importance to the Treasury, and materially affecting the land establishment under my particular charge, I hope it will not be considered officious or impertinent to submit a few remarks, though not expressly called for, upon the hypothesis that such an extension of the pre-emption privilege is contemplated.

The pre-emption laws originated and bestowed rights, but recognized none in the settlers as previously existing. I conceive they have no other rights in this respect than what the law confers; and that the pre-emption privilege may be considered little else than a mere benevolence, enabling the adventurer to appropriate to himself the choicest lands, most valuable mill-sites, and localities for towns, at a vast cost to the public; or, in other words, preventing the receipt of vast sums into the Treasury. It is confidently believed that these privileges, covering at least four millions of acres of land, joined with outrageous combinations to intimidate purchasers, and other unjustifiable confederacies, have diminished the receipts for public lands, in the year 1835, full three millions of dollars, at a moderate estimate, below what they would have brought in fair competition. If frauds in pre-emptions were unknown; if no one obtained a pre-emption but upon a faithful compliance with the conditions prescribed; still, the selections of the most valuable lands and most desirable situations, at the minimum price, would produce an effect upon the revenue too considerable to be overlooked by the financier. I should step out of my province as commissioner by arguing officially the questions, whether other considerations of public policy counterbalance this cost, or whether the settlers have extraordinary merits transcending this calculation, and accordingly abstain from the discussion.

If the propriety were conceded of making the pre-emption policy a part of our land system, there would be still no evident fitness in extending the concession to a full quarter-section of land. An allowance of half that quantity of the very best land is surely munificent; and if presumed poverty be one of the considerations for the grant, it may be observed that many a good farm in the West contains no more than an eighth of a section.

The committee request you, sir, to furnish them with the best plan which occurs to you, of securing the right of pre-emption to actual settlers, and of preventing said frauds, viz.: against the United States.

In relation to the first branch of this request, I have to observe, that the act of 1834, and the precautions already taken by the Commissioner, with the advice and approbation of the Secretary of the Treasury, appear to have provided sufficiently for the fair claimants under the present law.

The resolution is silent respecting the nature and extent of any future grants of this kind that may be contemplated, and the difficulty of devising a plan for their protection, under such circumstances, must be apparent.

The second part of the request presents a difficulty extraordinary. The temptation to abuse the charity of the legislature is so radically intermixed, and so inextricably interwoven with the operation of the pre-emption laws, that I should despair of laying before you a plan altogether effectual for the prevention of fraud on the part of claimants. It seems to me a hopeless task to project any modification of existing enactments, that shall silence perjury and defeat the devices of sagacious speculators, so long as their ingenuity shall be sharpened and stimulated by the prospect of an immense gain attending their success. The conscientious will resort to no dishonest tricks, but the contagion of speculation is proverbial; and when an expectation may be entertained of obtaining, by indirection, for the lowest price, land worth from five to forty dollars per acre in the market, the inducement to perjury and fraudulent shifts will be too strong to be resisted by many of weaker morality. A scheme of extreme liberality toward the settlers might diminish the number of fraudulent cases, by partially removing the motive to such practices; but I do not imagine any project to defeat them altogether, so long as there remain legal restrictions upon the invasion of the public property by unlicensed intruders, who, by a statute unrepealed, are considered as trespassers, liable to be prosecuted as such, and to be forcibly removed, at the discretion of the President, as has heretofore been done. It will be seen in the preceding remarks, that protection of the rights bestowed by the pre-emption act of 1834, is considered to be well provided for by that act, and by the liberal construction it has received, in instructions that have emanated under your sanction; and that similar provisions will suffice for similar cases, in future concessions of the pre-emption privilege.

The practices by which the United States have been most defrauded in claims of this nature, are believed to consist, principally, of the misstatements or improper coloring of acts, and the evasions and prevarications of parties and witnesses. To obviate such iniquitous proceedings, it will be proper to provide a mode of subjecting the deponents to the test of a rigorous interrogation and cross-examination. I ask leave, however, to suggest that the interest of the Treasury seems to demand a guard against force as well as fraud. I allude to that system of terror that threatens the competitor for the purchase of public land with the vengeance of the settler with whose usurpation he may interfere. In some quarters, this state of things is become formidable; probably finding its origin, in a great measure, in the pre-emption laws, whose repeated enactment may have led the settlers to the erroneous persuasion that they have acquired rights not given by law. Be this as it may, experience has shown that by mutual support and open menace, they have succeeded in deterring others from bidding against them at the public sales; and it is evident that the prospect for the future is not less threatening. The injurious effect of the continuance of such acts upon the Treasury will be obvious to you.

Respectfully submitted.

E. A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1404. [1ST SESSION

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN MICHIGAN.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JANUARY 27, 1836.

Mr. RUGGLES, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Arthur Bronson, respectfully reported:

That, by the treaty between the United States and the Ottawa, Chippewa, and Pottawatamie tribes of Indians, of the 29th of August, 1821, and ratified on the 25th of March, 1822, there was reserved to Charles Beaubien and to Medart Beaubien, sons of Man-na-ben-a-qua, each one half-section of land, at or near the village of Ke-wi-go-shkeem, on the Washtenaw or Grand river, in Michigan Territory. It appears that at the sales of public lands in the vicinity of said village, in 1832, fractional sections numbers 27 and 34, of township No. 7, north, of range No. 10, west, containing in the whole 660.82 acres, (being the nearest approximation to the number of acres in an entire section, attainable by the combination of fractions,) were reserved from sale by the register and receiver, and set apart for the said Charles and Medart Beaubien, under the treaty. The petitioner sets forth that he was informed by those officers, in August, 1833, of the fact and purpose of the reservation, and that, not doubting that the government would sanction their acts, he purchased those fractional sections of the Beaubiens, and paid therefor $1,200, which was deemed an adequate consideration, and received deeds of conveyance. But it appears that when those deeds were submitted to the President, on the 24th of August last, for his approval, he confined and restricted the location of their reservations, under a general rule of the Land Office, within the limits of fractional section No. 34, containing 559.22 acres. The petitioner has, therefore, failed to obtain an approval and confirmation of his title to fractional section No. 27, containing 101.66 acres, which he alleges to be the best part of the reservation purchased by him, without which the remainder was scarcely worth possessing, and on which he has recently made and is still prosecuting valuable improvements on the faith of his purchase.

He presents, also, what he alleges to be the original map drawn by the register, identifying within colored lines the lands reserved from sale for the Beaubiens, which he states was handed to him by the register at the time and before he negotiated for the purchase.

On these facts the petitioner prays a confirmation to him of fractional section No. 27; or, if that shall not be granted, that he may have secured to him the right of pre-emption to the same, by paying therefor $1 25 per acre.

The committee have not undertaken to decide how far the general rule of the Land Office, that fractional sections shall be received in lieu of entire sections, is justly applicable to the case of the two Beaubiens, who did not themselves make the selection, the two sections having been reserved and set apart for them by the officers of the Land Office. Had they been left to make their own selection and location, and had taken a fractional section when they might have taken an entire section, they would be held to abide by the rule. But the committee consider the act of the register and receiver unauthorized, though it may have been, as giving to the petitioner, Bronson, who purchased and paid for both sections on the faith he reposed in their doings, a just claim, if not to a grant or confirmation of title, yet at least to the right of pre-emption of fractional section No. 27, at the usual minimum price of $1 25, especially as that section embraces some of the valuable improvements he has been prosecuting.

The committee therefore present a bill in accordance with this opinion.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1405. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN ARKANSAS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 27, 1836.

Mr. DUNLAP, from the Committee on the Public lands to whom was referred the petition of Mary Tucker, made the following report:

The petitioner sets forth in her petition, and proves the facts to be true by several citizens, that, in the year 1822, her husband, William Tucker, settled on the west bank of the Mississippi river, in the county of Philips, and Territory of Arkansas. He continued to reside thereon, and made considerable improvements, until his death, the 16th of July, 1834; that, when her husband first settled on said land, it was not surveyed, and when the country was surveyed, the improvement aforesaid was on the 16th section of the township.

The petitioner prays that she may be permitted to enter the land she resides on as a preëmption right under the different acts of Congress, securing to the settlers on public lands a preference of entering their improvements, &c. The petitioner refers to several cases where Congress has extended the like privilege to other citizens.

The committee fully acknowledge the principle, that whosoever soweth should be permitted to reap; but they deny the principle, that if Congress has once erred, that it is right to continue in error. The committee, in examining into the grants of the United States, of the sixteenth section in each township of the public lands, have come to the following conclusion: That all said grants of the sixteenth section are given to the township for common schools for the instruction of children forever.

Your committee believe there is a vested right in the township for a particular specified purpose, and that neither Congress, the State or Territory in which the land lies, nor the citizens of the township, can appropriate said sixteenth section to any other purpose than that specified in the grant.

Your committee believe that it would be but justice to the petitioner and her children, to permit her to enter a quarter-section of other land in lieu of the land she resides on; and therefore report a bill.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1406. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN ALABAMA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 27, 1836.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of John Jeffers, reported:

That the petitioner represents, that, in the year 1830, not long before the day on which lands sold under the credit system and not paid for became forfeited, by the act of Congress provided in such cases, he purchased from one Dixon Stanback, as the administrator of Stephen Heard, deceased, a certificate of further credit, for the northwest quarter of section twenty-eight, township six, range two, west, of the lands sold at the Huntsville land district, in Alabama; that he paid to said administrator a full consideration in cash for said certificate, and said administrator duly assigned it over. Petitioner states further, that after said assignment, he applied to the register and receiver of said land office, to pay the balance due by the terms of purchase for said land, but that said register and receiver refused to receive it, on the grounds that the transfer had not been made to petitioner in conformity with the provisions of the law of Alabama, regulating the sale of real estate of deceased persons; that the purchase of this certificate was made so lately before the day of forfeiture, that the time was not sufficient to observe the forms required to effect a legal transfer. Petitioner also states, that the land became forfeited, and was afterward sold by the government. He also asserts, that the full consideration paid by him to said administrator, was accounted for by him in his settlement of the estate of Heard; and that the widow and heirs of Heard have all removed out of the United States. Petitioner also sets forth, that he applied at the land office at Huntsville after said land became forfeited and was sold, to procure scrip, to the amount actually paid on the said tract of land, under the provisions of the act of Congress in such cases provided; but that this was also refused on the same grounds.

Under this state of facts, of the truth of which your committee are sufficiently satisfied, they believe the petitioner was prevented, without any fault of his own, from availing himself, not only of the benefits of the original contract for the said land, but also of the advantages granted to the legal holders of forfeited certificates, to the amount paid thereon; that he comes within the reason and spirit of the law, and has been only deprived of the benefits by a want of some formalities in the transfer of the certificate. They therefore report a bill for his relief.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1407. [1ST SESSION.

ON THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A LAND OFFICE IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 27, 1836.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of a number of citizens of the western land district, in Louisiana, praying for the establishment of another land district, so as to include the parishes of Natchitoches, Rapides, and Claiborne, and for the location of such land office at the town of Natchitoches, reported:

That, from an examination of the subject, aided by information received from the Hon. Commissioner of the General Land Office, contained in his letter of the 18th inst., they are urged to the conclusion, that the public interests, as well as the convenience of the citizens in that part of the country, require, that the prayer of the petitioners should be granted, and report a bill accordingly.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 18, 1836.

SIR: Having attentively considered the subject of the memorial of certain inhabitants of the western land district in Louisiana, praying for the establishment of a new land district in that State, which may include the parishes of Natchitoches, Rapides, and Claiborne, the seat of the land office to be at Natchitoches, and which you were pleased to refer to this office by letter dated 31st ultimo, by authority of the Committee on the Public Lands, for such views, as to the policy of the measure, as my means of information might justify and render proper, I now have the honor to report, that the creation of a new land district in the northwestern section of Louisiana, is believed by this office to be loudly called for by the present exingency; and it is also believed that Natchitoches would be the proper site for such district.

I beg leave to submit herewith a diagram, prepared from such sources of information as are within my reach, exhibiting the relative positions and boundaries of the three parishes above named; and to suggest that (as far as my means of information will justify an opinion) the following boundaries for a new district would probably afford a greater amount of public accommodation than any others that now suggest themselves:

Beginning at a point on the Sabine river, where the 31st degree of latitude, being the base line of the public surveys, strikes said river; thence up said river to the Mexican line; thence with the Mexican line to the north boundary of the State; thence east with the northern boundary *to the dividing line between ranges five and six, west of the meridian: (viz. from A to O in the diagram) to the southwest corner of township fourteen of range five west; thence east with the dividing line between township thirteen and fourteen to the meridian; then south with the meridian to the base line, or 31st degree of latitude; thence with the said line west to the beginning.

If, however, the committee should be of opinion that the line B O, in the diagram, would be a better boundary, then the description would be as follows: following the word boundary as above: *to the dividing line between ranges three and four west of the meridian, (viz., from B to O as in the diagram,) to the southwest corner of township fourteen, of range three west; thence as above.

As it would appear to be more convenient for the settlers east of the line A O, to travel to Ouachita, I should think it preferable to restrict the district to that line. As thus arranged, the western district, and the district north of the Red river could readily be subdivided, to suit future exingencies, by an east or west line. The memorial is herewith returned.

With great respect, your obedient servant, ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioncr.

Hon. R. CHAPMAN, House of Representatives.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1408. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 28, 1836.

Mr. CARR, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of John Eloy Rachal, reported:

That the petitioner resided on, and cultivated a certain tract of land, situated on the right or southwest bank of Red river, in the parish of Natchitoches, State of Louisiana, about twenty-three miles above the town of Natchitoches, being the —— quarter of section sixteen, in township four, of range nine, containing one hundred and sixty acres; that he was entitled to a pre-emption under the act of Congress passed the 29th day of May, 1830; that about one half the quarter-section, embracing a part of his farm and buildings, is included within the sixteenth section, reserved by law for the use of schools.

The committee are of opinion that, as the applicant could not have known, when he made his settlement, the place which he had selected would be included within the sixteenth section, the lands not then having been surveyed, he is entitled to the right of pre-emption, and have reported a bill for his relief; and, also, the selection of another quarter-section in the same township for the use of schools.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1409. [1ST SESSION.

ON PERMISSION TO SURRENDER A PENSION AND ENTER LAND IN LIEU THEREOF.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 28, 1836.

Mr. SLADE, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of William Gann, reported:

That, on the 4th of September, 1814, the petitioner lost his right arm by a shot from the enemy, while engaged in an attack on the enemy's pickets before Fort Erie; that the petitioner was a private soldier in the fifteenth regiment of the United States army, at the time he received the aforesaid wound; that he was placed on the pension roll at eight dollars per month. The petitioner is about forty-two years of age, and alleges that he is poor, and has a wife and nine children dependent on him for support. He prays that he may be permitted to surrender his pension, and that the United States give to him land in lieu thereof, to enable him to raise his family. Your committee believe the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted, and report the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1410. [1ST SESSION.

ON PERMISSION TO CHANGE THE LOCATION OF A BOUNTY LAND WARRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 28, 1836.

Mr. LEWIS WILLIAMS, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Simon Wright, of New York, reported:

The petitioner represents that by his services during the late war he became entitled to bounty land in Arkansas; that, in consequence of having lived in a Northern climate, he cannot move to and settle on the land he has obtained from government, and he therefore prays Congress to allow him the same quantity of land in the State of Illinois.

The committee are of opinion that it would not be expedient to grant the request of the petitioner, and therefore submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the petition of Simon Wright ought to be rejected.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 29, 1836.

Mr. LAWLER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Bernard Rogan, reported:

The petitioner states that he was by law entitled to six hundred and forty acres of land in the then county of St. Genevieve and Territory of Louisiana, but now county of Washington, in the State of Missouri. It appears that the said Rogan applied for 137.22 acres only, which was granted to him. In the fourth section of the act of the 3d March, 1813, it is provided, "That in no case shall the grant be for more land than was claimed by the party in his notice of claim." The committee are of opinion that the relief prayed for should not be granted.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1412. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN ALABAMA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 30, 1836.

Mr. HUNTSMAN, from the Committee on Public Claims, to whom were referred the petition and the accompanying documents of the heirs of Lewis Durett, deceased, reported:

That it appears from documents, depositions, &c., that Lewis Durett, the immediate ancestor of the petitioners, as well as the petitioners themselves, are free persons of color. That antecedent to the time the British government took possession of the Floridas, under the treaty of 1763, the said Lewis Durett was, and had been, in the peaceable possession and actual cultivation of a small lot of land, containing about sixty arpens, adjoining the town of Mobile, the metes and bounds of which are described to lay below where the town of Mobile then stood, on a bayou or creek called Bayou Duran, which is not far from the south boundary of said land, the same being bounded, in part, by a line extending westwardly from a point at which a street is now laid out at right angles with the river Mobile, called Madison street, and on the south by a line extending westwardly from a point not far south of said Bayou Duran, on the said river Mobile, and adjoining which is called the Tavre tract, extending westwardly and northwardly by a uniform width, forming an area, containing about sixty arpens, more or less. That the said Lewis Durett died seized and possessed of the lands, upward of fifty years ago. That the widow of Durett, and children, kept possession until the death of said widow, upward of forty years ago. That houses and out-houses were built by said Durett, in his lifetime, and a quantity of the ground put into cultivation for the support of his family. The petitioners, after the death of their parent, continued in the habitation and cultivation of the premises until after the 15th of April, 1813, and until after the government of the United States took possession of the country; and that the whole time that they and their ancestors had it in possession was seventy-five years. It is alleged that their ancestor first took possession under a permit, &c. It is furthermore represented that they have sold this piece of land many years ago for $2,000. It is furthermore alleged that they were uneducated, and did not understand the English language, and never understood that it was necessary, for a considerable time, to lay this claim before the board of commissioners, appointed to settle and adjudicate those claims; but, at length, when they ascertained the necessity thereof, they employed another person (being incapable themselves) who neglected it, and that it was not acted upon, or did not pass for confirmation, until the time expired for the commissioners to act. That they, and their ancestor, and those to whom they have sold, always have had, and continues yet to have, the full possession of the premises. It is furthermore alleged, that a certain man, by the name of Eslaver, by some pretended claim or permits, obtained by fraud or perjury, and which was laid before the commissioners, and promptly rejected by them, tried to defraud them of their ancient title. Said Eslaver then tried to appropriate the same by a description of claim called a float, to effect his object in another way.

The prayer of the petitioners is, that Congress will relinquish the title of the United States to them, without any responsiblity on the part of the government, and let them and others contest the claim.

The proof is not only full but conclusive, that the petitioners and their ancestor were the peaceable occupants and cultivators of this piece of land for three-fourths of a century. That the United States is not to be benefited by their eviction from it, as another claim, spurious or otherwise, is attempted to be set up for the appropriation of it; and that a relinquishment, on the part of the government, to either of those parties, cannot involve the government in any future difficulty in regard to it, and from the proof submitted to the committee, they are of opinion that the prayer of the petitioners is reasonable and should be granted, and beg leave to report a bill accordingly.

Lacy, Joel Johnson, De La F. Roysdon, Frederick Notrèbe, of Arkansas Territory; William McD. Pettit, of Arkansas; James Woods, of the State of Tennessee; Isaac Thomas, of the State of Louisiana; Daniel W. Wright, H. G. Runnels, Passmore Hoopes, Alfred C. Downs, and James B. Robinson, of the State of Mississippi, beg leave to represent to your honorable bodies, that a large body of country, lying south of the Arkansas, and west of the Mississippi river, is subject to annual inundation; that from the best estimate that can be made by your petitioners, more than eight millions of acres of the best cotton land are more or less affected by the overflows of these two rivers lying between the Pine Bluffs, on the Arkansas, the mouth of the Arkansas, the Mississippi, the mouth of Red river, and the Ouachita river; that a large quantity of land within the region mentioned, has already been returned by the surveyor of the general government, as drowned land, and unfit for survey; that, in the opinion of your petitioners, much the larger portion of the country above mentioned will not, indeed, and cannot, be sold or settled, until the south bank of the Arkansas river, beginning at the first lowlands below the Pine Bluffs, shall be leveed to the mouth: for although the banks of the Mississippi river may, and will in a few years, be leveed, by the several individual owners of the lands on its margin, still much the larger quantity of the lands above described, will be left in their present useless condition, on account of the overflows of the Arkansas river. Your petitioners would further represent to your honorable bodies, that a levee of sufficient height, commencing at the termination of the hills on the south side of the Arkansas, below the Pine Bluffs, and continuing to the mouth of said river, would, when the bank of the Mississippi shall be leveed, reclaim all the lands mentioned in the above region. Your petitioners would further represent to your honorable bodies, that the south bank of the Arkansas will not, in all probability, on account of the height to which the levee must be thrown, the great length thereof, and the now entire uselessness of the lands, be leveed in the next century by individual enterprise.

The premises considered, your petitioners propose to your honorable bodies, that, if you will pass an act of Congress, granting to your petitioners a pre-emption right to one million of acres of land, to be selected in quantities of not less than one section, out of any of the unappropriated lands, at the time of the passage of the act, lying in the area of country, between the Pine Bluffs on the Arkansas river, the mouth of the Arkansas river, the Mississippi to the mouth of Red river, and the mouth of the Ouachita river, that they will, in four years from the passage of the act, levee the south bank of the Arkansas river, from the commencement of the first lowlands, below the Pine Bluffs, to the mouth of the Arkansas, and that the levee so to be made by them, shall be of sufficient height and strength, to prevent the overflow of the Arkansas at all seasons of the year; and your petitioners here offer to give such bond and security for the performance of their contract, as your honorable bodies shall require by the act

Your petitioners, therefore, pray the passage of an act, in conformity with the above proposition, and, in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1414. [1ST SESSION.

ADVERSE TO THE LOCATION OF THE RESERVATIONS OF THE CHOCTAW INDIANS IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 1, 1836.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled:

The undersigned citizens of the State of Mississippi, and of other States, now attending the land sales with a view of purchasing from the government, respectfully represent:

That by the provisions of the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, there was "granted" to each Choctaw head of a family one section of land, and to all children over ten years one half-section of land, and to those under ten years of age one quarter-section of land; to carry which article into effect, by securing on the one hand, the rights of the Indians, who truly desired to become citizens of the State, and on the other, to protect the government from fraud and imposture, the President of the United States, at a very early period, ordered the Indian agent, Colonel William Ward, to enrol in a proper register the names of the heads of families and their children, who should signify their intention to avail themselves of the benefits held forth by said article.

At a later period, but before the commencement of the first land sales, the executive appointed George W. Martin, esq., special locating agent, with instructions to locate all Indian claims, following for his guide the provisions of the fourteenth article of the treaty, and the register of the said William Ward. While in the discharge of his duties, a number of applications were made to Mr. Martin, the locating agent, for reservations which he felt bound to reject, for the reason that their names were not to be found on the said register. Some of the applicants thus rejected, applied to the Department of War for relief, enclosing testimony of a compliance so far as depended on their own acts, with the several conditions of the grant offered by said 14th article; and praying that other lands might be reserved from sale; and where sold, that other lands might be set apart for them, so as to save them from the delay, vexation, and expense, so inseparable from a trial of their rights to the particular tracts in a court of law, and which they were so illy prepared to encounter.

On mature consideration of the evidence submitted, the President thought proper to issue an order to the proper departments, directing instructions to be given to the locating agent, and the registers of the land offices, to reserve from sale lands of similar value, and equal quality, subject to the future action of Congress, in the name of each Indian claimant, who could adduce satisfactory evidence of being the head of a Choctaw family; 2d, of application to the agent for registration within six months after the ratification of the treaty; 3d, failure or refusal by the Indian agent to record, or of loss of the record when registered. These instructions were general in their terms, though predicated on the particular cases above referred to.

A few active, enterprising, and intelligent speculators, discovering the opening which was thus presented for the acquisition of large fortunes, have, by agents beyond the Mississippi, and at home, produced documents purporting to be powers of attorney from Indians to select lands, and transfer their rights to lands selected and supported by exparte testimony on the above-named points, suggested in the President's order, and the instructions from the Departments of the Treasury and of War, and by those papers have caused to be set apart for them the choicest lands in the country; sweeping over large districts inhabited and cultivated by persons who settled the public lands on the faith of the policy of the government, indicated by the passage and renewal of pre-emption laws at almost every session of Congress, that their homes would be given them at a reasonable price, unexposed to the heartless grasp of the voracious speculator. To the alarm of your memorialists, these claims have now amounted, as they are informed. to upward of three thousand, which, at an average of 1,280 acres each, amount to the enormous aggregate of three millions eight hundred and forty thousand acres; and the said speculators, availing themselves of the panic which these operations have produced, are now selling out, receiving a portion of the price in ready money, which they refuse to become bound to refund, in the event that the title is not confirmed, thus securing to themselves large fortunes, without having advanced to the Indians one cent, so far as your memorialists are informed and believe.

Your memorialists are persuaded that not more than one out of twenty claims are founded in justice and equity, and if scrutinized by a tribunal sitting in the vicinity of the land offices, with competent powers to reject or confirm, and to compel the attendance of witnesses, those honestly claiming would be secured in their rights, and a most stupendous system of fraud on the government would be exposed and defeated; the settlers relieved from the embarrassments thus brought on them; and Congress saved from the teasing and vexatious applications of false claimants for a series of years to come. A compliance with the above suggestion, by the passage of a proper law, your memorialists most respectfully solicit. They also pray, in behalf of actual settlers, an extension of the privileges of the pre-emption law.

APPLICATION FOR INDEMNITY, FOR BEING DEPRIVED BY SETTLERS OF RESERVATIONS OF THE CHOCTAW INDIANS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 1, 1836.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

Your memorialists, Moontubbee Annouchi, Hopah-cha-nubbee, Halah-ah-shiletah, Levi Jones, Tobias Ward, Robert Cole, Parbebbee, Joseph Perry, Little Leader, Red Post Oak, Toby Chubbee, for themselves and other citizens of the States, and late members of the tribe of the Choctaw nation, beg leave most respectfully to represent to you, that, by virtue of the treaty made at Dancing Rabbit creek, on the 27th day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty, between the United States of one part, and the Choctaw tribe of Indians of the other part, it was, by the 14th article of said treaty, agreed and stipulated that "each Choctaw head of a family desirous to remain and become a citizen of the States, shall be permitted to do so by signifying his or her intention to the agent within six months after the ratification of this treaty; and he or she shall thereupon be entitled to a reservation of 640 acres of land, to be bounded by sectional lines of survey; and in like manner shall be entitled to one half that quantity for each unmarried child living with him over ten years of age, and a quarter-section to such child as may be under ten years of age, to adjoin the location of the parent, if they reside upon such lands, intending to become citizens of the United States, for the space of five years after the ratification of said treaty; in that case a grant in fee simple shall issue. Said reservation shall include the present improvement of the head of the family, or a portion of it. Persons claiming under this article not to lose the privilege of a Choctaw citizen; but if they ever remove, lose all claim to the Choctaw annuity."

Your memorialists further state, that a certain William Ward was the agent of the government for the Choctaws, and was instructed to receive the declaration of such Choctaw heads of families as wished to become citizens of the United States, to record such declarations, and to transmit a list of the names of such Indians as should make such declarations, or might be entitled to reservations under the 14th article of said treaty, to the Secretary of War.

These instructions were given to the said agent, that the said reservations might be marked upon the maps of survey to prevent their sale at the sale of public lands, that the government might in good faith comply with the said treaty, do justice to the Indians, avoid collisions with her own citizens, and prevent disquiet and contentions between the Indians and the purchasers at the land sales.

Your memorialists further state, that, prompted by a desire to remain in the land of their forefathers, and feeling the necessity of obtaining the said reservations, they lost no time in doing all that was required to secure to themselves all the benefits provided for them in said treaty. That your honorable body may be fully satisfied that your memorialists have not forfeited any just claims stipulated by the said treaty through negligence, or by a waiver of their rights, they beg leave to state that, on one occasion, within six months after the ratification of the said treaty, a number of your memorialists living on the Suckinatche, went forward to the said agent at the Old Factory, to signify their intention to become citizens of the United States, and did duly and formally have their names entered in the agent's book kept for that purpose; yet few, if any, of the names so entered in said book have been reported to the War Department by said agent.

Your memorialists further state, that there are many instances where individuals of the nation had caused their names to be entered in the book of registration, and yet their names were afterward erased or blotted out by (possibly) those who had free access to the books of the agent. These erasions and obliterations were made most certainly without your memorialists' knowledge or consent, and without the consent of any other person entitled to the benefit of said entries.

Your memorialists further state, that, in the month of June, 1831, being within six months after the ratification of said treaty, a large body of Choctaw Indians attended at the council house to have their names registered for the purpose of obtaining citizenship, and securing the reservations, according to the custom of the Indians. Unacquainted with the English language, they presented to the agent a number of sticks of various lengths, indicating how many were present, and the quantities of land to which they were severally entitled; but the agent threw down the sticks. They then selected two or three head men to speak for them, and these headmen, by means of an interpreter, told the agent their number, ages, and names, and demanded registration; but the agent would not register them, and told them that there were too many—that they must or should go beyond the Mississippi. Many of these Indians, ignorantly despairing of the justice of the United States, have reluctantly removed beyond the Mississippi; they are not now among the applicants for reservations, but your memorialists think it right to furnish your honorable body with this information, that you may provide such relief as may be worthy of a great nation.

Your memorialists state that a number of Indians appeared at Ben Leflore's, within six months after the ratification of said treaty, (when the Choctaw Indians intending to remove west met to receive their annuities,) with their names written on scraps of paper, according to the advice of the said Ward, and presented the same to him, that their names might be registered, a part of which he received, and a part of which he refused to receive, and of those which he received, many names were registered, which registration has never been returned to the War Department.

Your memorialists further state, that about the 1st of June, 1831, a number of Indians at the house of one John Perry, collected at a council for registering their names, made out a list of the heads of families and the numbers thereof; they delegated one Garret Nelson to have their names placed upon the agent's book, and that the said Garret Nelson did give the said list to the said Ward, and that the said Ward did register a part or all of said names; but the names of these Indians are not upon the register as returned to the War Department by the said agent.

Your memorialists further state, that individuals singly and in small bodies of the Choctaw nation have repeatedly applied for registration and failed; or, if their names were registered, the agent has not made a return thereof to the War Department.

Your memorialists further state, that when their lands were surveyed, hearing for the first time that they were not secured to them, they applied to the locating agent to have them secured; but the locating agent informed them that the Secretary of War had instructed him to reserve from sale the lands of those Indians only, whose names were on the register returned to the War Department, and that in consequence of this instruction, the lands of many of your memorialists have been wrongfully sold at the public sales, and the lands of others hereafter liable to be sold.

Your memorialists further state, that they have remained in the ancient territory of the Choctaws ever since the ratification of the said treaty, and there expect to remain, and in consequence thereof, have forfeited their rights to the Choctaw annuity, which accrued to those who moved west of the Mississippi.

Your memorialists further state, that, in consequence of the grievances herein set forth, a considerable portion of the lands intended to be set apart for the Indians who wish to remain on the east side of the Mississippi, has been sold by the government; and that many of your memorialists have been forcibly driven out of their houses and dispossessed of their lands, by the settlers in the Choctaw country, and the purchasers at the public sales; and many of your memorialists, but for the timely and humane interposition of the Secretary of War, must have met the like fate; and if Congress should not, without delay, interpose in their behalf, your memorialists are doomed to sudden and inevitable ruin.

Your memorialists further state, that, as the object of the United States, in making the treaty of Dancing Rabbit, was to acquire the complete sovereignty of the Choctaw country for commercial and social purposes, your memorialists do not cherish a suspicion that the government, in acquiring their country, were influenced by the sordid motive of speculating in their soil; they therefore confidently trust, that no obstacle can present itself to their obtaining justice.

Your memorialists further state, that, although they would infinitely prefer having their original homes, as secured by the treaty, yet, as many of these homes can only be obtained by a tedious and expensive judicial proceeding, which would be ruinous to your memorialists, it is respectfully proposed to take unappropriated lands of equal value in the Choctaw nation, in lieu of those of which they have been wrongfully deprived, and that Congress will confirm the title of such reservations as have been made under instructions from the War Department, and grant such other and further relief as may be consistent with justice, and, as in duty bound, shall and will ever pray, &c.

ANDREW HAYS, Agent for the Memorialists.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1416. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 1, 1836.

Mr. KING, of Georgia, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred a bill for the relief of Duncan L. Clinch, praying for the confirmation of certain land in the Territory of Florida, reported:

That it appears by the petition, deed, record, and judgment of the Supreme Court, that, on the 6th of April, 1816, Don Jose Coppinger, the governor of East Florida, granted to Don George J. F. Clarke sixteen thousand acres of land in that province, to be surveyed at a place called White spring, above Black creek, on the west side of the St. John's river.

Before the ratification of the treaty with Spain, and while Florida was still the undisputed property, and under the dominion of Spain, viz., on the 25th of February, 1819, Clarke set forth in a petition to the governor that, having examined the lands at White spring and finding their extension back in nowise adequate to his expectations, or the purposes for which they were granted to him, prayed permission to locate parts of the grant on other vacant land. An order in writing, allowing him to do so, was given by the governor the same day.

Accordingly, Clarke's grant for sixteen thousand acres was ultimately thus located:

Eight thousand acres at the mouth of Buckley's creek, below White spring, west of the St. John's river; surveyed on the 24th February, 1819. Five thousand acres at a place called Largo hummock; surveyed the 10th of March, 1819. The remaining three thousand acres at a place called Cones' hummock.

It further appears that the petitioner, Clinch, and John H. McIntosh, purchased of Clarke, and settled and improved, relying on the validity of the grant, which bore date, as already stated, in 1816. The grant has, in fact, been adjudged by the Supreme Court a good and valid grant under the treaty, being made by competent authority, and before the 24th January, 1818. But, though the original grant of 1816 is valid, the surveys of 1819, made by the governor's order, which may be considered in the nature of a removed warrant, are affected by the retrospective or ex-post-facto provision of the treaty; and the court, doubting their power to confirm a survey made after the 24th of January, 1818, decreed in favor of the grant, but ordered the land to be surveyed in the place originally designated. The right of the petitioner to the quantity of land he claims is, therefore, undoubted. The question is between assigning it to him in the one place or the other. Inasmuch as an actual settlement has been made under a valid grant, and a survey took place before the ratification of the treaty, and is affected only by relation back to the date fixed therein, and the land actually settled is still unsold, the committee would not consider it a departure from the spirit of the treaty to place the petitioner in the same condition that he would have been in had Spain retained possession of the country. The eighth article confirms the titles of the inhabitants to the same extent that the same grants would be valid if the territories had remained under the dominion of his Catholic Majesty. Had Spain continued in possession, the validity of the surveys of 1819 would never have been doubted. The committee, under the circumstances, consider the case a very strong one for relief; and as the most simple mode of relief, and one with which they believe the petitioner would be content, they report the bill referred to them, with an amendment, giving a right of pre-emption to the three-thousand-acre tract actually settled.

APPLICATION OF INDIANA FOR PERMISSION TO PURCHASE CERTAIN LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 5, 1836.

A MEMORIAL and JOINT RESOLUTION on the subject of a purchase of a tract of land of the United States, for the purpose of constructing a canal from Fort Wayne to Munceytown.

The memorial of the general assembly of the State of Indiana respectfully represents, That a large portion of public land which lies between Munceytown, Delaware county, and Fort Wayne, Allen county, has been in market for twelve years, and remains unsold, and of little value to the United States, and most of it so remote from navigable streams that it would enable the agriculturist to convey his produce to market, that there is but little inducement for emigrants to settle in this region of country; and, as it is the interest and correct policy of this State to encourage the settlement of her whole territory with an industrious and enterprising agricultural people, that it would be a great inducement to the immediate settlement of the country, and afford great facilities to the citizens of this State to construct a railroad from where the Whitewater canal crosses the national road, by way of Newcastle, in Henry county, and Munceytown, in Delaware county, to Fort Wayne; and, as by the construction of said road, it would at once enhance the value of the lands through which said road would pass, and those lying contiguous thereto, to an amount, it is believed, sufficient to defray the expenses of constructing said road, and would be alike advantageous to the United States and the State; therefore,

Resolved, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives requested to use their exertions to procure the passage of a law giving Indiana the right to purchase, by an agent she may appoint for that purpose, of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, on a credit of not less than five years, at such reduced and reasonable price as Congress may fix, having due regard to the large quantity of unsaleable land in the purchase, a strip of land equal to ten sections for each mile of said road, the proceeds of the sale of said lands, after paying the costs, to be applied to the construction of a railroad on said route: Provided, That the general assembly of Indiana shall hereafter ratify such purchase, thereby reserving to her the right to do so, or to dissent therefrom.

Resolved, That the President of the United States be requested to suspend from sale a strip of land ten miles in width on a line from Munceytown to Fort Wayne.

Resolved, That the governor transmit, &c.

CALEB B. SMITH, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Approved, January 23, 1836.

REMONSTRANCE OF ALABAMA AGAINST THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE PROCEEDS OF THE PUBLIC LANDS, AND IN FAVOR OF THE EXTENSION OF THE PRE-EMPTION LAWS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 5, 1836.

JOINT MEMORIAL to the Congress of the United States.

The memorial of the senate and house of representatives of the State of Alabama respectfully represents to your honorable body, That, in addressing your honorable body on the subject of the present memorial, they are inspired with a confidence in the justice of the cause which they design to advocate, and, therefore, respectfully present their claims for consideration. At a past session of Congress "a bill to appropriate for a limited time the proceeds of the sales of the public lands of the United States, and for granting lands to certain States," passed both Houses, and would have become a law, had not the President of the United States, with that fearless course and clear-sighted policy for which his whole life has been marked with such peculiar distinction, refused it his sanction. Your memorialists look forward with almost an absolute certainty, that other attempts will be made by the friends of this measure to force upon the country a system, so serious to the citizens of the new States, and so destitute of interest to the general government. The advocates of this measure contend that no reduction ought to be made in the price of the public lands, and that the moneys hereafter to be received for them should be distributed among the States for the purpose of education, internal improvement, and colonization of free persons of color upon the western coast of Africa. Your memorialists will not discuss the power of the general government to grant to the States the proceeds of the public lands; but it is obvious, if the moneys of the United States, arising from the sales of the public lands, can be granted to the States for the purposes of internal improvement and colonization of free persons of color, they can be granted for any other purpose, or to effect any other object; hence, the most dangerous powers would be given by construction to the general government—a construction, against which the republicans have contended from the first formation of the Constitution of the United States; and which, if sanctioned, will destroy the rights of the States, and will make the United States one great consolidated government. The States in which the lands lie, are to reserve ten per-centum, upon the amount of sales, and the balance is to be distributed among the several States, in the ratio of their federal representative population. Your memorialists believe that this system is founded in error and injustice. Should a policy be adopted, which gives the proceeds of the public lands to the different States, the prices will never be reduced, and it will be the interest of the States, as they are to receive the proceeds, to wring from the persevering and meritorious emigrant the last dollar, without the prospect of relief.

The public domain of the United States was acquired from two sources, donation by patriotic States and by purchase from foreign powers. They are all equally the property of the United States, and subject to the disposition of Congress. The lands belonging to the general government cost about $50,000,000; from which we may deduct the sum of $45,000,000, for proceeds of land sold, leaving a balance of $5,000,000 yet due the government on this account. Your memorialists further represent to your honorable body, that they are opposed to the whole plan of keeping accounts between the government of the United States and the federal domain. The government of the United States assumes the lofty attitude of being the guardian over the people, and she ought not, she will not descend from the elevated and dignified station which she occupies, to the grade of a speculator in lands. Our citizens are children of a country which they love and cherish; when danger surrounds our country, and we are threatened by a public enemy, they are ready to surrender up life and property for the protection of the country. All good governments will set down to the credit of their citizens the full value of their generous devotion to their country; and they will endeavor to increase the number of their people, ameliorate their condition, extend the means of their happiness, and excite their love of country. The inhabitants of a government, the proceeds of their labor, and the taxes which they pay, all stand against the value of the lands which they cultivate. The citizens of a State, their wealth, love of country, intellectual and moral worth, constitute the price of lands—a price which no pecuniary consideration can in any manner equal. How insignificant is the money which has been paid for the lands, compared with the population residing upon them; their value in the political and social system, their power in the field, the taxes they pay to their country, and the long line of posterity which is to succeed them! Lands are not suitable property to be owned by the United States; they are better adapted to the people; in the hands of the general government they are useless; in the possession and occupation of the citizen, they constitute the principal wealth of the State. The inutility of the sales of the public lands, and the fallacy of large calculations, are manifested by the history of the public lands of the United States. When they were first acquired, it was calculated that their proceeds would pay off the public debt immediately, supply the revenue of the general government, and that large sums would be distributed among the several States. A thousand millions of dollars was considered less than their value, and the Secretary of the Treasury was considered as having abandoned the interest of his country, for the views contained in his report on this subject in 1791, in which those exorbitant calculations are exposed, and the value of the lands stated to be no more than twenty cents per acre. Fifty years' experience in the sales of the public lands have shown, conclusively, that there is nothing to be made by the system, and the proceeds of their cultivation have furnished wealth to the country, paid for the lands themselves, and produced a treasury which has supported the government in a style of expenditure never anticipated by the economists who founded it. Since the foundation of our government the lands have produced about $45,000,000, while the revenue of the country, arising from the industry of its citizens, amounts to $150,000,000, which arises from the cultivation of the soil in the hands of the agriculturists. Goods are imported upon which the government of the United States receives duties which constitute revenues; exports are given in exchange for the goods, and exports are the products of the farms. But this is not all: the cultivation of the soil affords immense exports, upon which the commerce and navigation of our country are founded, supplying all trades and professions connected with these branches of industry. Selling the land produces very little—it aids no useful employment, and it cripples the young States by draining them of money. There is a vast difference between the sales and the cultivation of the soil. The sale takes place but once, while the revenue arising from cultivation is perpetually increasing with population, and resuscitation and amelioration of soils, by improvements in the science of agriculture. Your memorialists further represent, that our citizens who reside upon the public lands in the States, are a poor, but meritorious class of people. They cut down the forest, make roads, and furnish accommodations for those who come after them; their poverty prevents them from purchasing lands at the present prices, and having no settled residence which they can call their own, they cannot improve the land and accumulate property as they could were they the owners of the soil. By reducing the price of the public lands according to their intrinsic value, and granting pre-emptions to actual settlers, population in the new States would rapidly increase, and thousands in the northern, middle, and eastern States would remove and find homes in a rich and plentiful country, and greatly increase the wealth and strength of the Union, by cultivating the soil, paying taxes, and increasing numbers. Your memorialists therefore pray your honorable body to prevent the passage of any bill having for its object the distribution of the proceeds of the public lands among the several States, and to reduce the price of said lands according to their intrinsic value, and to grant pre-emptions to actual settlers; and where lands have been offered for sale for the term of five years, and have not been sold, your memorialists respectfully represent that each person who may settle upon the same may be permitted to enter, at the proper land office, one quarter section free of charge.

Your memorialists would respectfully call the attention of Congress to a class of citizens who, although entitled to pre-emption rights in that part of the Choctaw nation within the limits of Alabama, the Indian title to which was extinguished by the last treaty with that tribe, have been deprived of the benefits secured to them by the pre-emption law, in consequence of the land, on which they reside, having been taken by Indian floats or reservations; they pray that a law may be passed giving all persons who were entitled to pre-emption rights within the limits of the said Choctaw nation, and whose lands were taken by floats or reservations, a right to enter other lands, within any land district within this State or the State of Mississippi. There is within the limits of Alabama, a small portion of the Chickasaw lands, which has been settled with an industrious population; they are likely to become a prey to the rapacity of land speculators, who, invited by the provisions of the Chickasaw treaty, have embarked in land speculation on a scale and with a capital sufficient to swallow up the whole of the Chickasaw nation. The citizens of Alabama, living on the Chickasaw lands, are willing to give for their homes more than the Indians will get from the great land speculators; and your memorialists would represent them as worthy of the protection of Congress, and in a condition that requires and demands of Congress, and the executive, protection from a class of men that have acquired great wealth by speculating in Indian lands; and who, by the provisions of the late Indian treaties, are likely to become the owners and sellers of all the lands within the limits of the Indian territory.

Resolved, therefore, That our senators be instructed, and our representatives requested, to use their best exertions to procure the relief requested by the foregoing memorial.

And be it further resolved, That his excellency, the governor, be requested to forward a copy of this memorial to each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1419. [1st SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 5, 1836.

Mr. DUNLAP, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Green Pryor, reported:

The petitioner states that in July, 1818, he purchased for himself and Peter Pryor, now deceased, a certain tract of land in the State of Mississippi. Claiborne county, fractional section 2, township 14, range 5, east, which was said to contain four hundred and forty acres, from Mr. Isham Arthur, who had entered the same at two dollars per acre, and had paid one fourth of the purchase money when the petitioner purchased Arthur's right at an advance of one thousand two hundred dollars. In 1822, he completed the payment to the government for four hundred and forty acres, and now prays that a patent be issued to him and the heirs of Peter Pryor, for said fractional section 2, township 14, range 5, east, be the quantity more or less. The document marked E, accompanying this report, shows the payment as alleged in the petition. The extract of a letter from Mr. Wailes, late surveyor of public lands south of Tennessee, to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated 19th July, 1823, marked A, and a diagram of part of township 14, range 5, east, marked B, shows that the deputy surveyor made a false return of the quantity of land contained in said township, and of the fractional sections 1 and 2. Mr. Wailes, in said letter, says: "So far as I have had an opportunity of investigatiug the first surveys made in this State, they have been found to be very incorrect, or rather falsely returned. The enclosed township map, (referring to document marked B,) exhibits an extraordinary departure from accuracy, which can only have resulted from a dereliction of duty on the part of the deputy surveyor who made the false return." And, in the concluding part of his letter, he says: "This, though an extreme case, is by no means a solitary one."

The documents A and B, show that a resurvey was made after the purchase money was all paid for the four hundred and forty acres, and that there is six hundred and eighty-nine and a half acres in section 2, instead of four hundred and forty, as represented by the original survey.

The document marked C, shows the great anxiety of the Commissioner of the General Land Office to ascertain whether the purchasers of sections 1 and 2 expected to get more land than that mentioned in the original survey. The petitioner in his petition states, that he was on the land before he purchased it, and knew the survey contained more than four hundred and forty arcres, and that was the inducement to give Mr. Arthur the high price of one thousand two hundred dollars for his bargain, never having known or heard of the government having its lands resurveyed after they were sold according to the original survey.

The only question presented for the consideration of the committee in this case is, how far the acts of the public officers are obligatory on the government. There is no doubt but the deputy surveyor, from incapacity, or some other cause, made a false and incorrect return of the true quantity of land contained in said fractional section No. 2, and it is equally clear, from document A, that similar errors have been committed in almost all the first surveys made in the State of Mississippi. The committee are of opinion that it is the duty of the government to employ men honest and well qualified to survey her public lands, and if she does not, the government should be the loser, and not the citizen who purchases under the false surveys; to establish a different principle, would almost amount to a suspension of the sales of all her lands, for no one would purchase until he had first had the land resurveyed; otherwise he would not know at what time the government might order a resurvey, and he be turned out of possession or compelled to pay for any surplus that may be in the section which he has purchased. It should be the object of all governments to quiet the title of her citizens to their lands, and if the principle is once established that the government has the right to resurvey the lands she has sold and received pay for, where is the inducement any citizen has to improve his land? The government may send the second time an incompetent surveyor, who would make as great a mistake against the citizen as was made against the government. The courts in North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, and the Supreme Court of the United States, have uniformly decided that a grant must hold to its metes and bounds, although it may contain ten times the amount called for on its face. The same courts, and particularly the Supreme Court of the United States, have decided that you must depart from course and distance to get the land intended to be granted, and that intention to be ascertained by the plat of survey annexed to the grant.

The committee believe that the government should act upon the legal maxim of caveat emptor in relation to her purchasers; if a different principle is established, your tables will be loaded with petitions from purchasers asking money to be refunded for the deficit in the lands purchased by them according to the original surveys.

The committee report a bill granting the relief prayed for.

WEST MONTICELLO, December 27, 1827.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress convened:

GENTLEMEN: Your memorialist, Green Pryor, a citizen and farmer of the State of Tennessee, Hardeman county, having, in July, A. D. 1818, purchased for himself and Peter Pryor, now deceased, a certain tract of land in the State of Mississippi, Claiborne county, viz.: fractional section 2, township 14, range 5, east, which was said to contain 440 acres, from a Mr. Isham Arthur, who had entered the same under the laws of his country at two dollars per acre, and had paid one fourth of the money when I purchased his claim. Believing at the time I made the purchase that government was bound to make a title to the whole of said land, I gave Mr. Arthur a considerable advance for his claim to it, viz., $1,200; relying on the faith of that government under which I have been raised, and which I have aided to support, in the year 1822, March 22, I caused to be paid the whole amount demanded by the receiver of public moneys at Washington, Mississippi. My friend directed to have a patent sent on in the usual way, as soon as practicable. I waited some years; not knowing the cause why the patent was not issued, requested the Hon. A. R. Alexander, at the last session of Congress, to inquire into the cause of the delay of the title of said land; have received information from Geo. Graham, esq., per letter directed to the Hon. A. R. Alexander and Isham Arthur, associated with the United States, (which I submit to the examination of your honorable body,) which shows the said fraction contains too much. Your memorialist was an innocent purchaser, and confidently relied on the faith of government to issue a patent to him and the heirs of Peter Pryor, deceased; which, from Mr. Graham's report, will not be done unless a part is relinquished, or the overplus paid for. But your humble memorialist, now relying on the goodness, wisdom, and justice of your honorable body, prayeth that you would take the premises into consideration, and cause a patent to be issued to your memorialist and the heirs of Peter Pryor, deceased, for the whole of the above-mentioned fraction of land, containing 440 acres, more or less: for which your memorialist ever prayeth.

GREEN PRYOR.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 26, 1827.

SIR: Enclosed is a statement from the books of this office, showing a balance due on fractional section 2, township 14, of range 5, east, of $499, which can be discharged, under the provisions of the act of May last, by the payment of $311 87½, in cash, including the discount, or the purchaser may relinquish a part, and a patent will issue for the residue.

The letter of Green Pryor is returned.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. GRAHAM.

VINTAGE HILL, NEAR BOLIVAR, TENNESSEE, January 26, 1832.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress convened:

GENTLEMEN: I deem it my duty, yes, an incumbent duty, I owe to myself, family, and the representatives of my deceased brother, again to call your attention to the consideration of our claim on the government of the United States. In justification of this, my second importunity, I beg leave to quote a sentence from the President's last message:

"In my message at the opening of the last session of Congress, I expressed a confident hope that the justice of our claims upon France, urged as they were with perseverance and signal ability by our minister there, would finally be acknowledged.

"This hope has been realized." May I, as an individual, hope? Yes, sirs, I do hope that my petition, bearing date December 27, 1827, or this, will be granted by your honorable body. Therefore, I lay it again before you in substance, viz.: Your memorialist, Green Pryor, a citizen and planter in the State of Tennessee, having, in July, 1818, purchased for himself and Peter Pryor, now deceased, a certain fractional section of land in the State of Mississippi, Claiborne county, viz.: fractional section 2, township 14, range 5 east, which was said to contain four hundred and forty acres, in a bend of the Big Black river, from a Mr. Isham Arthur, who had entered the same under the laws of his country, at $2 per acre, and had paid one fourth of the money when I purchased his claim; believing, at the time I made the purchase, that the government was bound to make a title to the whole of said fraction when paid for, I, your memorialist, gave Mr. Arthur twelve hundred dollars for his claim to said fractional section of land, containing four hundred and forty acres. Relying on the fidelity of that government under which I have been raised and protected, and which I have in peace and war aided to support, in the year 1822, March 22, I caused to be paid the full amount demanded by the receiver of public moneys, at Washington, Mississippi, for the said fraction of land. My friend directed a patent to issue in the usual way, which was not done, but which your memorialists believes, in good conscience, ought to have been done, and humbly prayeth may yet be ordered to be executed to your petitioner, and the heirs of Peter Pryor, deceased, as soon as practicable. Your petitioner here begs leave to state to you the actual amount of moneys he has paid an individual and the government on said fraction of land:

July, 1818, paid to Isham Arthur	$1,200 00
Thirteen years' interest on $1,200, at 6 per cent., is	936 00
1821, paid to the public receiver, at Washington, Mississippi, and in March, 1822, principal and interest to this date, 1822	661 88
Ten years' interest on $661 88, at 6 per cent., is	397 12
Which, after leaving out nearly one year's interest on the first sum paid, make an aggregate of principal and interest, of	$3,195 00

In the purchase of the above-mentioned tract of land, your memorialists is an innocent purchaser, as said fraction had been surveyed by a governmental officer, and was entered as being a correct survey, authorized by Congress.

Your memorialist's place of residence, in 1818, was in the State of Tennessee, but was on and examined the land petitioned for before he purchased it, and confidently believed that a patent would issue as soon as government was paid. He was also apprised or believed the said fraction contained more acres than was represented by the surveyor, otherwise he would not have given such an enormous price for it, believing the survey would stand good which was then made by a legal constituted officer. Your memorialist had never known or heard of any of the public lands, after having been surveyed and disposed of, to again be re-surveyed and ordered to be disposed of, as has been done in this case, which fact you may ascertain by reference to the report of the land committee, made December 29, 1830; the 2d clause thereof, and relevant to the fraction above named, reads thus: "By a survey of said township, made by order of the department several years after said purchase, it was ascertained that the original plot of survey was incorrect, and perhaps fraudulently made," &c.

Now your memorialist insists and alleges that he had nothing to do in the matter previous to the time of his purchase from Mr. Arthur.

I, as an innocent purchaser for myself and brother, who is since dead, believe we ought in good faith get a title to said fraction of land, or the full amount of the moneys which we have expended for the same, with legal interest from the date of the several payments up to the present date. Therefore your humble petitioner, relying on the goodness, liberality, wisdom, and justice of your honorable body, prayeth that you would take the premises into consideration, and cause a patent to issue to Green Pryor and the heirs of Peter Pryor, deceased, for the full fraction of four hundred and forty acres, more or less; or, if consistent with law and equity, to cause the full amount of money which we have expended, with legal interest on the same, from the dates of the payments thereof to the present date, to be refunded to us. For which your memorialists ever prayeth, and which is respectfully submitted by

GREEN PRYOR.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 29, 1833.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 25th instant, and in reference to the subject thereof have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of a communication, dated 18th January, 1830, from this office to the Honorable J. Hunt, with copies of the papers marked A and B, therein alluded to, which, it is believed, fully present the facts in relation to the purchase of fractional section 2, township 14, range 5, E, in the Washington district, by Isham Arthur. I have, however, to state, that it appears from certain documents in this office, that the right of Mr. Arthur to the above-mentioned tract has been assigned to Peter and Green Pryor.

I am, sir, with great respect, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

Hon. C. JOHNSON, C. Committee of P. L. Claims, House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 18, 1830.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 13th instant, I have the honor to state, that the books of this office show that Isham Arthur, on the 16th of October, 1816, became the purchaser of fractional section 2, 14, 5 east, situate in the land district west of Pearl river, in Mississippi, and which, agreeably to a plat of survey, which has been discovered to be false and fraudulent, purported to contain 440 acres, for which payment has been made. The issuing of a patent has been suspended on the ground that the survey is false and frauduleut, as the enclosed extract from the correspondence between this office and the surveyor of public lands will show; paper marked A.

It appears from the true survey of the fractional township, which was made by orders from this office, that the correct quantity of the fractional section, alluded to, is 689.50 acres, 249.50 of which remain to be paid for.

The accompanying diagram, paper marked B, will serve to explain the mode in which the falsity of the survey consisted.

The Big Black river, laid down by the line shaded yellow, is the true traverse of that stream, whereas, the line shaded red denotes the false traverse, as it was exhibited in the original fraudulent survey.

You will readily perceive, that both the fractional sections, No. 1 and No. 2, are greatly increased in quantity by the correct survey, and that if the calls of those fractional sections were to abut on the river, they would be so far extended from the position indicated by the original survey as to contain at least three times the quantity of land for which they were sold under the fraudulent survey.

Under these circumstances I was desirous (as will be perceived from the correspondence) of obtaining information as to what were the views of the purchasers of the fractions, Nos. 1 and 2, when they made their entries.

Did they expect they were purchasing land bounded by the Big Black river on the north, and what did they understand to be the southern boundary of their purchases? No information on these points has, however, been received.

If their intention were to purchase fractions bounded by the river on the north, then the fractions Nos. 1 and 2, in the original false survey, would be fractions Nos. 10 and 12, respectively, on the true survey, which would give to Mr. Arthur a tract of land containing 455.75 acres, being 15.55 acres more than he has paid for.

But if their intention in purchasing had reference to the lands south of them, then it would seem proper to restrict them to the quantity of land for which they have paid, and grant them patents therefor, or require each party to pay the surplus.

It appears to me, that proof of Mr. Arthur's intention at the time of purchase, is an all-important prerequisite to any legislative interference in his behalf.

As no field notes of the township alluded to have been found on the files of the surveyor's office at Washington, Mississippi, it is possible that what appears to be the original plat of survey was merely a sketch of the country, left in the office of the present deputy surveyor, or Mr. Briggs, by one of his deputies; and that his successor, mistaking the same for a genuine survey, without due examination, returned a certified copy of it, as such, to the register at Washington, to regulate the sales.

I am, &c., &c., &c.

GEORGE GRAHAM.

Hon. JONATHAN HUNT, House of Representatives.

A.

Extract of a letter from Levin Wailes, Esq., (late) Surveyor of Public Lands south of Tennessee, to the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

July 19, 1823.

"So far as I have had an opportunity of investigating the first surveys made in this State, they have been found to be very incorrect, or rather falsely returned.

"The enclosed township map exhibits an extraordinary departure from accuracy, which can only have resulted from a dereliction of duty on the part of the deputy surveyor, who made the false return. In this case the register has been selling by the lines shaded with red, as comprising the whole of the fractional township No. 14, in range No. 5, east, in the old work; whereas, from survey made of the residue of the township falling within the Choctaw district, and the traverse of Big Black river, by a deputy surveyor, in whose accuracy and integrity I have full confidence, it is established that the fractional township 14, in range 5, ought to have included all the lands represented on this map, by the lines shaded with yellow. This, though an extreme case, is by no means a solitary one."

Extract from the Commissioner's reply to the foregoing, dated August 15, 1823.

"Fraction No. 2, containing 440 acres, was sold to Isham Arthur, on the 16th October, 1816, and has been completely paid for under the provisions of the act of 2d March, 1821. No patent has, however, yet been issued. As there has evidently been a fraud committed on the government by the deputy surveyor, who surveyed the township originally, and the purchasers of the two fractions, created by the supposed course of the Big Black river, may set up a pretended claim to the land contained in what will now be the fractions, agreeably to the resurvey extended by the river, I am desirous, if possible, of ascertaining what were the views of the purchasers as to the boundaries of the fractions on the south side, at the time of purchase. Were they aware that the Big Black river was considerably north of the position as laid down in the original false survey, and did they suppose, from this circumstance, that the purchase of what was represented to be the quantities contained in these fractions, would give them any title to all the land, as represented by the actual survey?

If you can conveniently have access to the purchasers, I will thank you to make some inquiry into these particulars, and to explain to Mr. Grayson, the register, who will probaby be enabled to aid you. There is evidently something strangely wrong in this business, and the truth should be thoroughly inquired into."

From Mr. Wailes, in reply to the foregoing extract, October 22, 1823.

"I have had the honor to receive your letter of the 15th of August, on the subject of the false survey of township No. 14, range No. 5, east, in the district west of Pearl river; and in consequence of the authority which you have given me, I have instructed William Davis, a deputy surveyor, in whom I have great confidence, to make a resurvey of that township. I have also requested him to endeavor to procure the information which you desire, in relation to the views of the purchasers of the fractional sections Nos. 1 and 2 in said township.

"Two persons, by the names of Scarlet and Downs, were associated under Mr. Briggs, in surveying the land in the northern part of this district. The township in question was surveyed by one of them, but I cannot ascertain by which, as neither of them have signed it, and I can find no field notes from which I can ascertain. Both of these persons are dead, and it is said they have both died insolvent."

VINTAGE HILL, NEAR BOLIVAR, TENN., November 12, 1833.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress convened:

GENTLEMEN: Once more under the protection, and I trust under the guidance of a kind Providence, I am permitted and have set down, for the purpose of memorializing your honorable body, to grant to myself and the heirs of my deceased brother Peter Pryor, that, sirs, which is justly due unto us, and which was, in my humble conception, your incumbent and bounden duty to have granted long since.

Yes, sirs, I am an individual belonging to your government; I have a claim on you as the guardians of the people of these United States. That which I have asked you to administer to myself, and the heirs of my deceased brother, is in all good conscience due us. Having, under the laws of our country, purchased and paid for a certain fractional section of land, viz.: fractional section 2, township 14, range 5 east, lying in Claiborne county, State of Mississippi, we request you to have said fractional section of land patented to us.

The purchase of and payment for the abovementioned land, (as I conceive,) is acknowledged by report of the land committee, made December 29, 1830. Which report I wish you to examine, and also refer you to my petitions, bearing date December 27, 1827, and also the one of January 26, 1832.

Gentlemen, with due respect to the committee who made the report mentioned above, I would hope—yea, I do yet hope—that your honorable body will correct their error, and dissolve their unjust resolve, though made in the honesty of their hearts. (For, sirs, the best of men do err.) That they have committed an error, I have no doubt you will discover, by examining their report, made December 29, 1830, for in the first clause they acknowledge the purchase.

2d. They acknowledge a resurvey of the fractional section of land, several years after the purchase was made. (Is not this ex-post-facto proceeding?)

3d clause. They acknowledge that "the petitioner has paid for 440 acres. (Which was the full amount reported by the surveyor.)

4th. They refer to statement of facts, to papers marked A, B, C, and D. (I know not what these papers are.)

5th. (They) Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted. (Is this just?)

Thereby, gentlemen, unless you reconsider the matter, and grant us a patent to the lands we have purchased and paid full value, we are resolved out of what we have honestly purchased and long since made payment in full.

Gentlemen, the committee might have gone farther in their report, and (if I be not mistaken) should have said "several years after the purchase (and payment) was made, it was ascertained," &c.

You, I trust, will indulge me a little, if I intrude on your time and patience. I feel I am contending for my rights; I believe my cause a good one, and ought to prevail. I here beg leave to state a case to illustrate my claim, viz.: two gentlemen, citizens of the State of Alabama, Messrs. C. and J., purchased a fractional section of land, (from the general government,) lying on the Tennessee river, and paid for it according to contract. It has been several years since this transaction took place, and Mr. C. is also since dead.

Now, gentlemen, if the report of the land committee, above spoken of, be a correct one, and founded on justice, and "the department" has the right to order a resurvey of the fractional section of land, purchased by Messrs. C. and J., it is now high time for "the department," to order a resurvey; and if it is found "incorrect," and contains more acres than was reported by the surveyor, (first authorized to survey it,) government should withhold the patent from the heirs of Mr. C., and also from Mr. J., until they pay for the overplus ascertained, "under the second and correct survey."

I trust, gentlemen, you will join with me in pronouncing such proceeding of "the department" unjust and oppressive, and calculated to injure, if not destroy, the property of many of the good citizens of these United States.

Viewing our claim a just one, therefore, your humble petitioner, relying on the goodness, liberality and wisdom of your honorable body, prayeth that you would take the premises into consideration, and cause a patent to issue to Green Pryor, and the heirs of Peter Pryor, deceased, for the full fraction of 440 acres, more or less, for which your memorialist ever prayeth, and which is respectfully submitted.

GREEN PRYOR.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1420. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CORRECTION OF AN ERROR IN A LAND ENTRY IN ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 5, 1836.

Mr. CASEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Samuel Dickerson, praying the passage of a law authorizing him to change an erroneous land entry, reported:

The petitioner sets forth, that on the 20th day of April, 1831, he entered, at the land office at Springfield, Illinois, by mistake, the east half of the northwest quarter of section eighteen, township sixteen north, range one west, when it was his intention to have entered the west half of the southwest quarter of section nineteen, township sixteen north, range one west.

The petitioner states that at the time of making the entry, he had not the means of ascertaining correctly the tract of land he desired to purchase, as the original marks of the surveyor, made upon the corner trees, had become so much obliterated by time, that it was impossible for him to distinguish the numbers. That under these circumstances, he was induced to make his entry by the entries of others, previously made; and knowing that the land he wished to have entered was bounded on the north by an entry of Simeon Strickland, he made his application accordingly. He thinks, that in the hurry of the moment, the clerk in the land office mistook the name of Simeon Strickland for Clement Strickland, and was governed by the entry of the said Clement Strickland. He discovered the error in a few days, and lost no time in endeavoring to have it corrected, but failed. He prays Congress to pass a law authorizing him to surrender to the government the tract entered by mistake, and that he be permitted to enter a like quantity of land elsewhere in the State of Illinois.

The facts being proved to the satisfaction of the committee, and the case in their opinion requiring it, they report a bill.

FRAUDS PRACTISED IN RELATION TO PRE-EMPTION CLAIMS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 5, 1836.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 29, 1836.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose a communication from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, on the subject to which your letter of the 16th instant relates; and to inform you that the documents referred to in the Commissioner's letter will be transmitted as soon as they are prepared.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. A. G. HARRISON, of the Committee on Public Lands, House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 28, 1836.

SIR: You have been pleased to refer to me a letter from the Hon. A. G. Harrison, accompanied by a resolution of the Committee on Public Lands; the letter advising you that a bill granting pre-emption to actual settlers, then before the committee, had been drawn with an eye particularly directed to the frauds alleged to have been committed, and expressing that the great desire of the committee, to adopt such provisions as will prevent the future possibility of such frauds, had led to the communication, believing that you may have it in your power to give additional light on the subject. The resolution of the committee aforesaid being in these words: "Resolved, That the resolution of the House, instructing the committee 'to inquire into the expediency of modifying the different acts of Congress, granting pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands, so as to protect the rights of settlers, and prevent frauds against the United States,' be referred to the Secretary of the Treasury; and that he be requested to furnish the committee with the best plan which occurs to him, of securing the right of pre-emption to actual settlers, and of preventing said frauds." I have attentively considered the said letter and resolution, and have the honor to report:

The Committee on Public Lands apply to you, sir, for "all the information in your department, concerning the alleged frauds."

Most of the knowledge possessed by the General Land Office, concerning frauds practised in relation to pre-emptions, of which I am now able to speak, consists of uncontradicted reports, in general currency and credit; of oral communications to me, and letters to me and others, from persons in high standing; most of the writers either requesting that their names may not be published, or not giving authority for such publication. The terms of these communications are rarely sufficiently specific and tangible to fix peculiar instances, except in the cases of interested correspondents; some of whose representations have been verified, others not; while want of time and opportunity have delayed an investigation of the greater part of this last class.

The requisition of the committee, above mentioned, is sufficiently comprehensive in terms to include every case and its circumstances, as well as the general representations that have reached this office. I must take the liberty to observe, that a literal compliance with the requisition cannot be speedily yielded. It would render the report very voluminous, and require to search the files of an immense correspondence, and the investigation of many tens of thousands of pre-emption cases reported, which we have not yet been able to take up for examination. To particularize every exceptionable case, even of those that have attracted attention since the act of 1834 has been in operation, would require more time in the revision and narration, than would seem to comport with the desire of the committee, to act soon upon the bill alluded to by Mr. Harrison: and therefore, with your permission, I will confine myself, on this occasion, to the imputations currently believed, and general heads of impositions attempted and practised, which have been detected in some of the contested cases examined, or which common fame has represented as having been but too common in some quarters; and without comment on the conspicuous cases of the military reservation at Chicago, and the missionary stations in Mississippi, I proceed to remark that the loudest and most numerous complaints arising from the pre-emption policy, that have reached the General Land Office, have been against the alleged abuse of the privilege commonly called floating claims. Some who claim to be the bonafide cultivators and occupiers under the act of 1834, complain of being vexed and disturbed by these "floats." A more numerous class, not comprised in the provisions of the act, are said not to be the less clamorous, because the floats have been lawfully located on their chosen spots; but chiefly the virtuous and patriotic citizens of Louisiana have been disgusted and alarmed by the extent to which fraud and perjury are asserted to have been carried, in the manufacture of such claims within that interesting State, threatening to cover a large portion of the most valuable lands that have been surveyed. These representations are made by individuals in highly respectable standing, besides our own officers; and it is said, on credible authority, that preparations appear to be making, in hopes of a pre-emption act at this session of Congress, to acquire at a minimum cost a great part of the precious lands on Red river. No particular instance of these practices has been indicated to me, but the opinion is prevalent that they are transacted. It is believed that the number of bonafide pre-emptions in Louisiana is comparatively small, as information derived from persons distinguished by public confidence in that State, represents a belief that a claim to pre-emption was not often heard of on the island of New Orleans, nor west of the Mississippi, before this multiplication of "floats" was devised to be laid on the finest vacant lands.

This iniquitous scheme appears to be of late date in that region, as the first intelligence of it seems to have been communicated to the General Land Office, some time after it was placed in my charge. Agreeably to your direction, sir, circumspection and vigilance were recommended to the land officers in Louisiana, in order to guard against impositions; and I ventured to direct the surveyor general to retain the plats in his hands, which were destined for the land offices, until further orders. Other steps have recently been taken at this office, to put in train a rigorous scrutiny into the legitimacy of the floating pretensions in that State. Letters and copies of letters on this subject, Nos. — to —, are herewith transmitted. Contrivances have been brought to light in other places, showing where a family occupying the same tenement, where father and son, and mother and son dwelling together, have set up the pretence of separate cultivation and occupancy, to divide a quarter-section and obtain a float for each half.

Claimants of another reprehensible description are they whose pretensions are founded on depositions in general terms, or wearing the appearance of being artfully worded, admitting a subterfuge in the attempt to give a legal coloring to their proceedings, by construing the statute to suit their purposes. The law, as its title imports, is in favor of settlers; but pretensions have been set up by persons dwelling in town with their families, and there following mercantile or other pursuits, while they caused a little show of improvement, that scarce deserved the name, to be made for them by others; no proof being produced of their personal superintendence or direction on the spot. Cultivation by slaves or hirelings in 1833, and one or the other, or a growing crop on the place on the following 19th of June, have been assumed as fulfilling the required conditions.

Among the pretences to cultivation, there have been disclosures as follows, viz.: where the cutting and burning a small patch of cane—where an inclosure, not entitled to be called a fence, around a space only large enough for a very small garden, and the planting of a few culinary vegetables—and where scattering an undefined quantity of turnip or grass seeds—and in one case, planting a few turnips or onions—have been claimed as cultivation, to meet this condition. Further remark upon constructive possession may be dispensed with.

The registers and receivers are made judges of the credibility and sufficiency of the proof, except in contested cases, which are required to be sent to the commissioner for decision. My predecessor ordered the evidence in every case to be forwarded; but during near five months of my superintendence, it has been quite impossible to scrutinize the proof in about sixteen hundred of the former class, without neglecting duties that appeared more pressing and imperative. In those examined, contradictions, prevarications, and other circumstances, have occasionally placed parties and witnesses in no favorable point of view. In the contested class, the land officers must be presumed, prima facie, to have acted correctly. If honest, they would not knowingly pass a fraudulent claim; if conniving, they will hardly be expected to expose themselves voluntarily. The necessary quantum of evidence can hardly be prescribed, the same proof being more or less convincing to different persons.

The bill mentioned by Mr. Harrison as having for subject the granting of pre-emptions to actual settlers, and to prevent the future possibility of such frauds as are alleged to have been committed,forms no part of your reference; and it would perhaps be improper to allude to it in this place, if the letter did not seem to indicate an intention on the part of the writer, and of the committee to which he belongs, to extend the grants of pre-emption to others than those who come within the provisions of the act of 1834. Believing such a disposition to be implied, and that a new law to that effect will go far to form the pre-emption policy into a durable system, involving considerations of great importance to the Treasury, and materially affecting the land establishment under my particular charge, I hope it will not be considered officious or impertinent to submit a few remarks, though not expressly called for, upon the hypothesis that such an extension of the pre-emption privilege is contemplated.

The pre-emption laws originated and bestowed rights, but recognised none in the settlers as previously existing. I conceive they have no other rights, in this respect, than what the law confers; and that the pre-emption privilege may be considered little else than a mere benevolence, enabling the adventurer to appropriate to himself the choicest lands, most valuable mill-sites, and localities for towns, at a vast cost to the public; or in other words, preventing the receipts of vast sums into the Treasury. It is confidently believed that these privileges, covering at least four millions of acres of land, joined with outrageous combinations to intimidate purchasers, and other unjustifiable confederacies, have diminished the receipts for public lands, in the year 1835, full three millions of dollars, at a moderate estimate, below what they would have brought in fair competition. If frauds in pre-emptions were unknown; if no one obtained a pre-emption but upon a faithful compliance with the conditions prescribed; still the selections of the most valuable lands, and most desirable situations, at the minimum price, would produce an effect upon the revenue too considerable to be overlooked by the financier. I should step out of my province, as Commissioner, by arguing officially the questions, whether other considerations of public policy counterbalance this cost, or whether the settlers have extraordinary merits transcending this calculation, and accordingly abstain from the discussion.

If the propriety were conceded of making the pre-emption policy a part of our land system, there would be still no evident fitness in extending the concession to a full quarter-section of land. An allowance of half that quantity of the very best land is surely munificent, and if presumed poverty be one of the considerations for the grant, it may be observed that many a good farm in the West contains no more than an eighth of a section.

The committee request you, sir, to furnish them with the best plan which occurs to you, of securing the right of pre-emption to actual settlers, and of preventing said frauds, viz.: against the United States.

In relation to the first branch of this request, I have to observe that the act of 1834, and the precautions already taken by the Commissioner, with the advice of the Secretary of the Treasury, appear to have provided sufficiently for the fair claimants under the present law. The resolution is silent respecting the nature and extent of any future grants of this kind that may be contemplated; and the difficulty of devising a plan for their protection under such circumstances must be apparent.

The second part of the request presents a difficulty extraordinary. The temptation to abuse the charity of the legislature is so radically intermixed and so inextricably interwoven with the operation of the pre-emption laws, that I should despair of laying before you a plan altogether effectual for the prevention of fraud on the part of claimants. It seems to me a hopeless task to project any modification of existing enactments that shall silence perjury and defeat the vices of sagacious speculators, so long as their ingenuity shall be sharpened and stimulated by the prospect of an immense gain attending their success. The conscientious will resort to no dishonest tricks, but the contagion of speculation is proverbial; and when an expectation may be entertained of obtaining, by indirection, for the lowest price, land worth from five to forty dollars per acre in the market, the inducement to perjury and fraudulent shifts will be too strong to be resisted, by many of weaker morality. A scheme of extreme liberality toward the settlers might diminish the number of fraudulent cases by partially removing the motive to such practices; but I do not imagine any project to defeat them altogether, so long as there remain legal restrictions upon the invasion of the public property by unlicensed intruders, who, by a statute unrepealed, are considered as trespassers—liable to be prosecuted as such, and to be forcibly removed at the discretion of the President, as has heretofore been done.

It will be seen in the preceding remarks, that protection of the rights bestowed by the pre-emption act of 1834, is considered to be well provided for by that act, and by the liberal construction it has received in instructions that have emanated under your sanction; and that similar provisions will suffice for similar cases, in future concessions of the pre-emption privilege.

The practices by which the United States have been most defrauded in claims of this nature, are believed to consist principally of the misstatements or improper coloring of facts, and the evasions and prevarications of parties and witnesses. To obviate such iniquitous proceedings, it will be proper to provide a mode of subjecting the deponents to the test of a rigorous interrogation and cross-examination. I ask leave, however, to suggest that the interest of the Treasury seems to demand a guard against force as well as fraud. I allude to that system of terror that threatens the competitor for the purchase of public land with the vengeance of the settler with whose usurpation he may interfere. In some quarters, this state of things is become formidable; probably finding its origin, in a great measure, in the pre-emption laws, whose repeated enactment may have led the settlers to the erroneous persuasion, that they have acquired rights not given by law. Be this as it may, experience has shown, that by mutual support and open menace, they have succeeded in deterring others from bidding against them at the public sales, and it is evident that the prospect for the future is not less threatening. The injurious effect of the continuance of such acts upon the Treasury will be obvious to you.

Respectfully submitted.

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 4, 1836.

SIR: I enclose a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with certain documents referred to in his letter of the 28th ultimo, in answer to the inquiries made in your letter of the 14th ultimo.

I am, respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. A. G. HARRISON, of the Committee on Public Lands, House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 3, 1836.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith copies of certain documents, numbered 1 to 13, inclusive, on the subject of frauds and embarrassments consequent on the pre-emption law of the 19th June, 1834, which could not be prepared in time to accompany my report to you of the 28th ultimo, and I request that you will have the goodness to regard them as connected with such report, and to dispose of them accordingly.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

WASHINGTON CITY, August 25, 1835.

To ANDREW JACKSON, President of the United States:

By an act of Congress, dated 29th of May, 1830, giving to actual settlers and occupants on the public domain, the right of pre-emption, according to the requisites stated in said act, and by subsequent acts continuing in force the act of 1830, a new era was introduced on the subject of land claims, to the citizens of Western Louisiana, although the legislation of Congress, on the subject of public lands, is as mild and beneficent as any system on earth, since the government tolerates, in the first instance, a trespass in the citizen, which subsequently perfects a title in himself, yet amidst this mild and merciful legislation, persons are found perverting the designs of these acts to selfish and corrupt purposes. I will call your attention to a part of these acts, in order more fully to understand my subsequent statement. By the act of Congress of 1830, where two persons live on the same quarter-section, cultivate and improve it, the register and receiver are required, upon due proof exhibited to their satisfaction, to divide the quarter-section between the occupants. Independent of this, the law accords to each of them, what is called a pre-emption float of eighty acres each, to be located on any unappropriated lands of the government. It will be supposed for a moment, that two pre-emption floats are located, as required by law. The rights of the occupants on the first quarter-section, according to the construction of the law which prevailed at the land office at Opelousas, Louisiana, have not yet ceased. The moment they make the location of their pre-emption floats, they are entitled to what is called a back concession, which is the same quantity of lands as the pre-emption float itself; these two occupants of a quarter-section have that quarter-section divided equally between them; they acquire, by the accident of occupancy, a right to 320 acres each; in addition to this view of the question, if men were strictly honest, it would present no avenues for imposition, frauds, or perjuries.

I regret to say, because I religiously believe, that the most shameful frauds, impositions, and perjuries, have been practised upon the land office at Opelousas, Louisiana. I make no imputation upon the official conduct of Mr. King, the late register at Opelousas, nor upon the present receiver. But from my statement it will appear that they must have been most grossly imposed upon, and should have put them more completely upon their guard, so as to have guarded themselves against the wiles of notorious land speculators. I will here mention a construction of the law which was adopted by the officers at Opelousas, and most of the pre-emption floats have been admitted under that construction. Two persons living on a quarter-section, or who pretend that they do, on lands not worth a cent an acre, men who can neither read nor write, men who have never seen a survey made, and know nothing about sections or quarter-sections of land, and who, in point of fact, live five, ten, and in many instances twenty miles apart, go before a justice of the peace as ignorant as themselves, and swear to all the facts required by law, to make their entry; this, too, in a section of country never surveyed by the authority of the government, nor any competent officer thereof. Would it be believed that any officer of the government would admit an entry, under circumstances like these, upon the oaths alone of the parties interested in making them, and upon lands not surveyed, approved, and returned by higher authority? Can it be possible that an entry of that kind can be in conformity either with law, justice, or right? I state of my own knowledge, that many of these pre-emption floats are precisely in the situation above detailed. I am authorized to name Colonel Robert A. Crane, of Louisiana, who states positively he knows many of them to be founded upon the same corrupt perjury; persons swearing that they lived on the same quarter-section, when in truth and in fact they never had lived so near each other as five miles. It is not believed that there are thirty honest pre-emption floats in the whole western district of Louisiana; and yet, since the first of January, 1835, up to the 27th of May, there have passed at the land office at Opelousas, at least 350. And who are the owners of these floats principally? To one and not more than three speculators, since the first of January, of this year, up to the 27th of May, day after day, week after week, I might say months after months, a notorious speculator, and who must have been known as such to the officers of the land office at Opelousas, was seen occupying that office to the almost total exclusion of everybody else; no other person appeared to understand how to get pre-emption floats through, and no one did succeed until an event which will be stated below. He could be seen followed to and from the land office by crowds of free negroes, Indians, and Spaniards, and the very lowest dregs of society, in the counties of Opelousas and Rapides, with their affidavits already prepared by himself, and sworn to by them, before some justice of the peace in some remote part of the country. These claims, to an immense extent, are presented and allowed, and upon what evidence? Simply upon the evidence of the parties themselves who desire to make the entry. And would it be believed, that the lands where these quarter-sections purported to be located, from the affidavit of the applicants, had never been surveyed by the government, nor any competent officer thereof, nor approved nor returned surveyed? I further state that there was not even a private survey made. These facts I know; I have been in the office when the entries were made, and have examined the evidence, which was precisely what I have stated above. This state of things had gone on from the first of January until about the middle of April or first of May, of the present year, when it was suddenly announced a more rigid rule would thereafter be adopted, which was this: that a sworn deputy surveyor of the United States should in all cases make the survey, in order to ascertain if the parties were on the same quarter-section, and to testify before the register that such was the fact. Besides this, they required the applicants to produce very satisfactory evidence from their neighbors that they had cultivated and improved, as stated in their notice. Pre-emption floats, when tested by this rule, were found to be very few indeed. Governments, like corporations, are considered without souls, and according to the code of some people's morality, should be swindled and cheated on every occasion. Whether such a distinction can be reconciled to either morality or law, one thing is certain, that equal protection and advantages are not afforded to all. I would further suggest to your excellency to withhold your signature from all patents when entries have been made, and consequent pre-emption floats have resulted, since the first of June, 1834, to the first of July, 1835; that James Ray, lately appointed register of the land office at Opelousas, Louisiana, and some other competent person, be appointed a board of commissioners to examine all the entries from which pre-emption floats have resulted during the above period; that the said board of commissioners have the power to administer an oath to all persons who may appear before them desiring to make entries of land; that some qualified attorney be appointed to appear before the said commissioners to represent the interest of the government, to put cross-interrogatories to elicit the facts, whether true or false, in regard to the validity or illegality of said claims; that this said board of commissioners shall, under the supervision of said attorney, take down the evidence in each entry, with its consequent pre-emption floats, shall file the same with them, shall give their opinions upon each respectively in writing, with reference to the evidence and law, and shall forward the same to the Commissioner of the General Land Office; that if the said board, upon the examination of any pre-emption claims or floats which hitherto have been allowed, are satisfied that they were passed upon the affidavit of the parties alone, without other and corroborating evidence, and if they are further satisfied that the land proposed to be entered has not been surveyed by a competent officer of the government, approved, and returned to the Land Office, they shall unconditionally reject the said claims, with their consequent pre-emption floats. These suggestions are made, not with the belief that they may be adopted in the investigation that may be ordered, but simply with a hope that they might afford some aid in laying down the rules of that investigation. It may not prove so extensive a fraud, and show such gross impositions upon the officers of the government, and such glaring perjury, as did the Arkansas land speculation; yet the investigation will show enough of each to entitle this administration to the lasting gratitude and approbation of its friends in Western Louisiana, as well as the majority of its political opponents.

I am with great respect, sir, your obedient humble servant,

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, September 29, 1835.

SIR: I enclose you a copy of a communication addressed to the President of the United States by B. F. Linton, esq., upon the subject of the pre-emption claims heretofore awarded at the land office at Opelousas. In consequence of that communication, all patents for pre-emption claims in your district will be suspended until the merits of the claim have been re-examined and fully investigated. This examination will be made in the first instance by yourself, in conjunction with the receiver; and I have to request that you will, immediately upon the receipt of this, give public notice, and proceed anew to the examination of the claimants themselves, and of such witnesses in support of the claims as may present themselves before you for that purpose. Those claims which may be sustained by you will also be re-examined here, and those heretofore admitted which shall not be sustained upon your revision, will be regarded as definitely rejected. I enclose you a form of interrogatories calculated to elicit the truth in relation to the validity of each claim, which you will propound, together with such other questions as may be suggested to you by the peculiar circumstances developed in the examination of each particular case. As soon as the examination shall have been completed, I will thank you to forward a report, together with all the testimony, to this office, and have to request that in the admission of new cases the utmost caution may be observed, and the instructions with which you have been furnished strictly adhered to. While upon this subject, I deem it important to call your particular attention to one of the allegations of Mr. Linton, viz.: that in addition to the pre-emption granted by the act itself, the claimants have been permitted to enter a back pre-emption equal in quantity to the tract first granted: the act of 19th June, 1834, and that of 29th May, 1830, which restrict the quantity of land to be acquired under their provisions to 160 acres, would of themselves preclude any such construction, and I am at a loss to conceive how the land officers could so far have misconceived the terms of the act of 15th June, 1832, granting these back pre-emptions, as to have given to that act a prospective effect, when its provisions are specially restricted to those individuals who were then in possession under one of the descriptions of title stipulated by the act itself.

I am, &c.

E. A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Interrogatories to be propounded to the pre-emption claimants, and, with the necessary modifications, to the witnesses produced by them in support of their claims:

1. What is the description of the tract claimed by you?
2. Did you cultivate the tract described in 1833? If not, state what tract was cultivated by you in that year.
3. State the nature, extent, and manner of such cultivation.

4. Were you in possession of the tract claimed, on the 19th June, 1834?
5. Had you a dwelling-house upon the tract claimed, and were you residing therein on the 19th June, 1834? If not, state whether you resided upon public land, and describe the tract upon which you resided.
6. If you were not residing upon the tract claimed, in what did your possession consist?
7. Did any other person cultivate the tract claimed in 1833?
8. Was any other person in possession of the same on the 19th June, 1834?
9. To what extent did he cultivate, and what was the manner of his possession?

The REGISTER at Opelousas.

Extract of a Letter from —— Morgan to Henry H. Johnson, Esq. dated October 6, 1835.

"It is stated, and very generally believed, and the receiver's books of public lands will show that the fact of the case, if it is one, that spurious claims have covered all the Atchafalaya railroad; all the lands on the Granfete bayou, Marceigin, Fordouche, Achafilia, Latanache bayous, something like 154 miles in front, with one half mile deep, have been located within ninety days by different companies, and different men. It may be that the law warrants such locations. There are many things that make me think there is something wrong. As to improvements, none was ever made. On not over 15, are all the 150 or 160 miles front; and only a few surveyors and bears ever passed over them. If you believe the information worth the attention of the Patent or Land Office, you are at liberty to communicate the fact: the books, names, and surveys, can easily be examined. If the companies and individuals are acting correctly, this information can do them no harm; if incorrectly, they ought to be stopped at once. I write you this information, as there are big fish engaged in this traffic, though little ones do the business. How it is done, as yet I have not been able to learn, except by law construing and foul swearing.

"There are yet many small claims, been investigated for twenty years, not approved of, and the claimants entitled to them, while a set of speculators are getting titles by proving pre-emptions, by hundreds, where it never was. If it is law, it is unjust."

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 17, 1835.

GENTLEMEN: It has been represented to the department that associations of men are engaged in speculating in the purchase of floating rights, under the late pre-emption law; and by means of facilities afforded by deputy surveyors, acting as agents in their location, much valuable land in Louisiana is thus engrossed; and that these rights are multiplied by the recognition of separate pre-emption rights, in the parents, children, and hired men of each family, and fictitious persons.

The Secretary of the Treasury has directed that the most prompt and energetic measures be taken to detect and arrest frauds of the character alluded to; and, with this view, I have to require of you to enter into the most rigid scrutiny of all pre-emption claims and floats alleged in your district; and resort to such means and sources of information within your reach, as will lead to a faithful and satisfactory result in the ascertainment of whatever may be the facts.

Your immediate attention to this important matter, with a view to a report on the subject at the earliest possible date, is strictly required. To guard against imposition, the closest adherence, on your part, is required to the principles of the law, and those laid down in the printed letters of instruction, bearing date 22d July and 23d October, 1834.

I am, &c. ETHAN A. BROWN.

P. S. You are required by the Secretary of the Treasury to institute, forthwith, such inquiries as will enable you to report an opinion on the subject of the rumors and representations which have been the occasion of this communication, so as to enable the department to form something of a definite and adequate idea as to the extent to which the evils exist in the premises.

In case your inquiries should lead you to suspect the existence of frauds, the Secretary requires that, without loss of time in writing for further orders after your report herein to the department, you will forthwith proceed to take such testimony in support of the facts in the alleged abuses which you shall have ascertained; and should you find yourself at any loss in the progress of the investigation, the Secretary directs that you will promptly call to your aid the advice of the district attorney, whom you are to address on the subject.

I am, &c.

E. A. BROWN.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 19, 1835.

SIR: I herewith enclose to you a copy of a letter addressed to the registers and receivers of the United States, on the subject of fraudulent practices alleged to exist in the proving of pre-emption rights, and obtaining what are called "floats" under the act of 19th June, 1834.

You are hereby directed to furnish to the district land officers no more plats of surveys, until you shall have received further directions. You are requested, however, to transmit the plats to this office as fast as they can be prepared.

I am, &c. ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

H. T. WILLIAMS, Esq., Surveyor General, Donaldsonville, Louisiana.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 21, 1835.

GENTLEMEN: In relation to the subject of pre-emption rights, concerning which I addressed you on the 17th instant, you are particularly required to keep in view the following general principles, in fulfilment of the meaning and intent of the act of the 19th June, 1834, and of the instructions heretofore issued by the department:

1st. In cases where two or more persons are settled on the same quarter-section, the first two actual settlers, (and they only,) who cultivated in 1833, and had possession on the 19th June, 1834, are entitled to the right of pre-emption. If an equal division of such quarter, by a north and south, or east and west line, will not secure to each party his improvements, they must become joint purchasers or patentees of the entire quarter-section; if otherwise, it will be divided so as to secure to the parties respectively their improvements; in either case the said first two actual settlers, who obtain the right of pre-emption to the quarter-section, and none others, are entitled each to a pre-emption of eighty acres elsewhere in the same land district, to be located so as not to interfere with other settlers having a right to pre-emption. This right to locate eighty acres elsewhere, usually called a floating right, must be located and determined at the time the quarter-section is paid for on which the right accrues.

2d. Only one pre-emption, to the maximum quantity of one hundred and sixty acres, is allowed to a family when cultivation is in common, or for common benefit; and no floating right is allowable under such circumstances.

3d. No one employed by another as a laborer on his improvements, can be admitted to a pre-emption right.

By a careful attention to the act and the instructions, you will save to yourselves, as well as the department, much trouble and embarrassment in finally determining rights accruing under the law.

I am, &c.

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

The REGISTER and RECEIVER at New Orleans, Opelousas, Ouachita, and St. Helena, Louisiana.

QUINCY, MONROE CO., MISSISSIPPI, December 28, 1835.

DEAR SIR: I hope you will excuse me for the liberty I have taken, and should not have troubled you with this communication but for an injury done myself, and a fraud practised on the government, which I hope I have proved to the satisfaction of the department: I speak with regard to a pre-emption and float that was obtained at the land office, in Columbus, by John and William Purser. I have forwarded an affidavit to Major William Dowsing, register of the land office at Columbus, showing that said Pursers had no shadow of a claim to the land on which they got a pre-emption and float until after the 16th of October, 1834, and also proving that I bought the improvement of John Purser in August, 1835. John Purser was residing on the land since he first purchased the land, but William Purser has never resided on the land, and never had any kind of claim to the same. I have sent the affidavit to Major Dowsing for the purpose of having it sent to the General Land Office; I have got several of my neighbors' names to the affidavit, and can give any recommendation in this county; and although I am not personally acquainted with Major Dowsing, I can refer you to him for my character. It is probable that the persons that have bought the floats may try to make some exertions in behalf of the Pursers; but I am certain that they cannot get a witness of respectability to strengthen their claim. I have omitted to give the numbers of the land above: they are as follows: southeast quarter of section nineteen, in township twelve, range sixteen, west.

You will have the goodness to inform me if I have taken the proper course to defeat said claimants, and whether or not they can have a pre-emption under the above circumstances.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JEREMIAH RIGGINS.

AUBURN, HINDS CO., MISSISSIPPI, December 7, 1835.

DEAR SIR: Permit me, as one of your constituents, to call your attention to a case in the General Land Office, in which I am immediately concerned. On the 30th of June last, I purchased at the land office, Mount Salus, (Clinton,) in this State, the northeast quarter of section twenty-seven, township four, of range four, west, for which I had a receipt in these words, to wit:

"No. 22,184. "RECEIVER'S OFFICE, Mount Salus, Miss., June 30, 1835.

"Received of Reuben Collins, of Hinds county, Mississippi, the sum of one hundred and ninety-nine dollars, fifty-six cents, being in full for the northeast quarter of section twenty-seven, township number four, of range number four, west, containing 159.65 acres, at the rate of $1 25 per acre.

"$199 56. "S. W. DICKSON, Receiver."

I now understand that one Uriah H. McManis, and his brother, Archibald McManis, have set up a claim, and, that they, having failed to establish any color of claim by a pre-emption in the land office here, have petitioned the General Land Office, or the department thereof, for said land. Of this I knew nothing until a few days since, and on Saturday last I applied to the land office to know if such were the facts, and was informed by the register that they had petitioned both for a pre-emption, and that Archibald McManis had sworn that he had paid the money into the land office some two years since for the land which Uriah now wishes to claim by pre-emption. Well, sir, if the department of the General Land Office thinks their claim has any color of law or equity, I only ask to be informed of the same, and I fear not the result if I can be allowed to confront them with testimony. The fact is this: U. H. McManis, in the year 1822, bargained with one Cooper for his claim or improvement on the west half of the quarter-section above-mentioned, and shortly afterward reported that he had paid for the quarter-section. As one William Spinks, a poor but industrious man, with a large family, was improving the east half of the said quarter-section; Spinks removed, and McManis rented the land to Cooper, from whom he had purchased the claim, and got rent for it of him (Cooper) in 1833. In 1834, Mark Snow, by his negroes and overseer, one Matthews, cultivated the land, and paid McManis rent; and this year, 1835, Richard J. Mallet raised a cotton crop, and has promised rent. In the meantime, Uriah and Archibald McManis were merchandising, one in the town of Raymond, the other in Clinton; neither of them ever occupied the land, and how they can expect to come in under the pre-emption law I know not; and as to having paid for the land long since, is to my mind strange, when they can neither produce a receipt, nor make a showing of the records to that effect. In the absence of all this, is it possible that they can have any legal claim? I stand ready to prove the statements which I have made. I can prove, by unimpeachable testimony, that Archibald McManis has said, since I paid for the land, that he applied to pay for the land, and that he was told that there was a pre-emption upon it. How does this look beside his oath that he has actually paid for the land? No, sir; he never paid for the land; it is true that the map was marked, with a pencil, with the letter S, the usual mark for sold, and when I paid for some of my lands, two years ago, it was marked S. Now, the question is, who marked it? Why, I will tell you what I think: it was some one interested, that it should not be known that it was unsold. It is a well-known fact, that while Mr. Gwinn was register, the map was frequently marked S, and the land was still unsold; and many accused him and his particular friends of corruption and speculation; but I am inclined to the belief that others marked the map, by getting permission to examine it while the register was otherwise engaged, and had no idea that such was the design of those who practised the fraud.

In conclusion, let me ask you to be so kind as to lay this letter before the department of the General Land Office, and request for me a hearing, if, as I have before remarked, the case presented shall seem to require it.

I remain, your obedient servant,

REUBEN COLLINS.

Hon. JOHN BLACK.

SURVEYOR GENERAL'S OFFICE, Donaldsonville, January 9, 1836.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 19th ultimo, enclosing a copy of one directed to the register and receiver of the different land offices in Louisiana.

I assure you it was a great relief to me, as the demand for speedy returns had become almost intolerable; and my aversion to a compliance was produced by the fear that many frauds were practised under the late pre-emption law.

So far as relates to the deputy surveyors, I have uniformly discountenanced any participation in the speculation, and when they have been known to be concerned, I have suspended their functions; but the sacrifice they make is so inconsiderable, that while the temptation exists there seems to be but little prospect of correcting the evil. I am pleased, however, to say that I have not heard of one unlawful claim that has passed through the hands of a deputy, and that, excepting one or two cases, of a disposition manifested to locate them, so as to interfere with the rights of other persons, (which has been counteracted,) they are free from censure, nor am I in any other respect entitled to the compliment gratuitously conferred on me in some of the newspapers.

I have no doubt but the wealth and influence of this country are embarked in this immense tide of speculation, but I fear that but little can be done to arrest it, unless it should be in the power of Congress to repeal the act of the 14th July, 1832, supplemental to the act granting the right of pre-emption, etc., or to limit the operation of the law, so that the settler would be required to take the vacant land next adjacent to the settlement; beyond this, the only remaining hope is to bring the public land into market as expeditiously as possible.

I am decidedly of opinion that there are not more than three or four private, unlocated claims in the townships included in the list enclosed in my letter of the 6th of November, and the enclosed list may now be added to the number.

I do not think it would be proper to have a sale in this State between the middle of May and the 1st of November, but it is earnestly urged by the inhabitants; and if it could be effected before May, I think it would be advantageous to the government.

With great respect, sir, your obedient servant,

H. T. WILLIAMS, Surveyor General, Louisiana.

LAND OFFICE, New Orleans, January 9, 1836.

SIR: In reply to your letter of 17th December last, we beg to state that all applications that have been made to us for entries of lands in this district, were accepted by us, after having been found in conformity with law and your letters of instruction of the 22d July and 23d October, 1834. But, inasmuch as it could be possible that among those that have been presented from the different parishes, (for the law permits the settlers, who cannot bring forward their witnesses to this office, to make affidavit, supported by the corroborative testimony of two persons, in presence of one of the judges of the parish wherein he resides,) there might be some not altogether legal; yet, we would observe, that however great the fraud might have been represented to you, we nevertheless think that the mischief is not so great as you seem to suppose.

In order, however, to remedy, as far as in our power lies, the evils which may have crept into the present system, we have deemed it our duty to enter into the following arrangements with the surveyor general, which will have a tendency to lessen frauds, if not to stop them altogether:

That every time an application will appear suspicious to us, a copy of the same shall be sent to him, and he will forthwith send a qualified person on the premises in order to ascertain the validity of the claim.

We request of you, sir, to bear in mind that we shall do all in our power to deserve a continuance of confidence from the government, and that if we discover any frauds we shall immediately communicate the same to you, and have the offender prosecuted by the district attorney.

We remain, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servants,

B. Z. CANONGE, Register.
MAURICE CANNON, Receiver.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1422. [1ST SESSION.

ON THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A NEW LAND OFFICE IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 5, 1836.

Mr. HARRISON, of Missouri, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the memorial of the legislature of Missouri asking for an additional land office, and also the petitions of sundry citizens, praying for the establishment of the said additional land office at the city of Jefferson, the seat of government for the State of Missouri, reported:

The memorialists, as well as the petitioners, who pray for an additional land office at the city of Jefferson, the seat of government for the State of Missouri, represent that much inconvenience is felt by a great number of citizens for the want of an additional land office, as the present offices are so remotely situated from each other, that the purchasers have to undergo considerable expense and trouble in entering land. And the petitioners further represent, that from the city of Jefferson, by the ordinary route, to the nearest land office southwardly, is about one hundred and seventy miles; to the nearest one northwardly, about one hundred and ten miles; to the nearest one eastwardly, one hundred and twenty miles; and to the nearest one westwardly, about sixty miles; that the expenses of a special journey to a distant land office frequently costs nearly half as much as the land, where the purchases are in small parcels, thus bearing peculiarly hard upon this class of purchasers.

Your committee are of opinion that the general government should adopt such a course in the disposal of its public lands, as will best suit the convenience of the people, without, at the same time, injuring its own interests. Where land districts are large, the people are necessarily compelled to travel a long distance to enter their lands. The expenses incurred in making the journey operate as a tax upon purchasers, and as a very grievous one upon such as make small entries. Where land offices are convenient to the people, a greater proportion of land will be entered, than where the people have to travel a long distance to get to them. This deters them from doing so. Besides, the States in which the public lands lie are increasing in population with such rapidity, that a land district which but a year or two ago had only a small population, may in a short time afterward have a large one. And it seems to your committee that nothing is more proper than that legislation should be such as to suit the circumstances and condition of the country. The State of Missouri contains a much larger extent of territory than any of the States in which the public lands are situated, and yet she has but six land offices, while others have from eight to ten.

Your committee, without entering more into detail, are induced, from the above considerations, to concur with the petitioners in the propriety of establishing an additional land office in the State of Missouri, and have accordingly reported the following bill.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1423. [1ST SESSION.

ON GRANTING PRE-EMPTION RIGHTS TO ACTUAL SETTLERS ON THE PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 5, 1836.

Mr. HARRISON, of Missouri, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the memorial of the legislature of the State of Missouri, on the subject of the right of pre-emption to the public lands, reported:

The memorialists "present for the consideration of Congress, the propriety of further extending the laws relative to pre-emption rights, so as to include all persons who have settled, or may hereafter settle, on any unappropriated lands of the United States; and they further pray, that such settlers be allowed the indulgence of five years, from and after the time of making such settlements on the public lands, to enter the same, in any quantity not exceeding one quarter section each, upon the condition that if, in that time, such person should not enter the same, that the lands so settled upon, together with the improvements which may have been made, shall be liable to entry as other public lands."

Your committee have bestowed upon the subject that careful attention which is always due as well to the subject-matter submitted for consideratiou, as to the source whence it emanates. The latter proposition, embraced in the memorial, your committee conceive, cannot be regarded, at this time, as a measure of even doubtful expediency. Experience has shown that the credit system is liable to be attended with injurious effects, both to those to whom it may be extended, and to the government itself, as it creates the necessity for vexatious legislation in extending further time to make the stipulated payments. Prompt payments lead to prompt and efficient measures on the part of the indebted, and at once cuts off the hope, so apt to be cherished, that further indulgence will be given, where the parties are not prepared to meet the engagements they have entered into. As the tendency of this system, therefore, is to create an indifference to that punctuality which is so necessary in all transactions, and to bring on a long course of detached and irregular legislation upon petitions praying for further indulgence, your committee are compelled, from these considerations, to report against this part of the memorial as inexpedient.

As regards the other branch of the subject-matter contained in the memorial, which prays that a further extension of the laws relative to pre-emptions may be made, so as to include all persons who have settled, or may have settled, on any of the unappropriated public lands, your committee concur with the memorialists in the justice of such a measure. Considerations, as they believe, of justice to the inhabitants of the new States, and of a liberal, comprehensive, and enlightened policy in relation to the public lands, demand its adoption. It is a measure of such becoming propriety, so suitable to the genius of our republican institutions, and compatible with the principle upon which they are established; so comprehensive in its range, and beneficial in its effects; and comporting so well with all the interests, both proximate and remote, of the country and the people, whether it be looked at in detail as a means of special benefit to the people, or viewed in its general results as embodying in the government a self-preserving principle of virtue and independence, that your committee cannot conceive how it is possible there should be, in a country like this, one dissenting voice on the subject. The happy and practical illustration which our government affords of the operation of the principle that the people are the rightful source of power, fully competent to the task of self-government, and that governments are instituted solely for their benefit, and are only a means by which the greatest amount of happiness to all may be attained, gives to the subject under consideration a latitude of thought, and presses itself upon our attention with such a cogency of argument, that the question of expediency becomes at once resolved into a measure of absolute propriety. While doubtful expedients are ordinarily resorted to in other countries, to meliorate the condition of man, here, in our own, we have the ample and certain means of not only improving the condition of the people, but of elevating them to that standard of dignity and respect which, as members of the political body, they are entitled to occupy. The condition of a freeholder has a two-fold influence which is dispensed upon the community in which he lives. It not only makes him independent, and affords him the means of bringing up his children in the walks of virtue and propriety, but reflects upon society the benign influence of the virtues he cultivates, and the precepts of morality which he is led to practise, from the station he occupies. Another consideration, too, of vast importance, attends the subject under investigation. It has a direct tendency to equalize the condition of the people, by smoothing down those inequalities in society, so baneful to the principles of republican institutions, which are apt to grow up from great wealth and extreme poverty; and, in this way, to implant into the bosom a proud and independent feeling that raises him, at once, from the consciousness of self-abasement, to the conviction of his own importance. Although the history of all ages and countries forces upon our minds the truth that there has been, and perhaps will be, in all communities, as great inequality in the circumstances of the people as there is, probably, in the minds of men, arising from causes which operate slowly, but certainly, in their effects, yet the duty which devolves upon the statesman to provide against such tendencies, and preserve a just balance, is not the less imperious on that account. And more particularly should we be governed by such considerations of duty in this country, where, from the structure of the government, each individual occupies a position of such essential importance; and we cannot imagine that a better plan can be devised to accomplish this end, than to allow, upon favorable terms, the settlers upon the public and unappropriated lands the right of pre-emption.

Congress has sanctioned for such a length of time the principle of granting pre-emptions, and the numerous laws passed upon the subject have so grown and ripened into a system, as to induce the people to regard it not only as an act of necessary consequence, but has invited them to look upon it as a measure of settled policy with the government. Many, no doubt, have been led to settle upon the public lands from considerations of this character, and also, as the memorialists very justly say, from a belief that they were embraced in the provisions of former pre-emption laws. Governed by these views, many have made valuable and lasting improvements upon the public lands, which they could not lose without its being almost a total loss of their labor and means of subsistence, and to secure which, it is but necessary for Congress to extend to them the right of pre-emption. Nor are these the only reasons which have induced people to settle upon the public lands. The proportion of the surveyed to the unsurveyed lands is so great, and those that have been surveyed have been so often culled and picked, leaving none but of a poor and inferior quality untouched, that persons have been obliged to settle upon those of a more choice and inviting character. Influenced by these facts, your committee do not hesitate to recommend the passage of a law conformably to the prayer of your memorialists; for they cannot perceive the necessity of a change in the policy which has, in many instances, been heretofore adopted, nor can they admit the propriety of a rigid proprietorship over the public lands on the part of the general government, when so many inducements exist to provide the people of this great republic with independent homes, and so many arguments combined to give the new States that unrestricted sovereignty over the soil which is the justly proud inheritance of the older members of the confederacy.

Your committee are aware, that objections, probably just, exist against laws granting the right of pre-emption. It is alleged that great abuses have grown out of such laws, and that the liberal intentions of Congress have been grossly perverted to purposes of fraud and corruption, by reckless speculation. Admitting this to be the fact, the argument goes too far, if it be intended to prove that the abuse of a good, is a sufficient reason for dispensing with it altogether. How few of the many blessings which surround us should we have the privilege of enjoying, if this principle were to be applied to all the relations of life! When such difficulties encompass us, or beset a good undertaking, we should gather lessons of wisdom from the fruits of the past, and provide against the possibility of their recurrence. Your committee do not for a moment doubt, that a well-guarded law, securing to the actual and bonafide settler the right of pre-emption, may be passed, which will obviate such objections, and protect both the settler and the government from future impositions. Fully impressed with the justice of these views, the committee beg leave to report the accompanying bill.

QUANTITY OF LEAD MADE AT THE MINES IN MISSOURI, FROM 1821 TO 1831.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 8, 1836.

WAR DEPARTMENT, February 6, 1836.

SIR: In compliance with the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 18th ultimo, I have the honor to transmit a report of the colonel of ordnance, in relation to the mineral lands in the State of Missouri.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEWIS CASS.

Hon. JAMES K. POLK, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

ORDNANCE OFFICE, Washington, February 4, 1836.

SIR: In compliance with that part of the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 18th ultimo, which relates to the lead mines in Missouri, I have to state, that the whole amount of lead made at these mines from the year 1821, when their superintendence was transferred from the Treasury to the War Department, to September, 1831, when their operations ceased, was..... 5,151,252 lbs.

The amount accruing to the United States as rent lead for that period, was..... 423,329 lbs.

The expenses incurred in conducting the operations at the mines, for the same period, as appears by a statement from the second auditor's office, amounted to..... $14,184 26

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

GEORGE BOMFORD, Colonel of Ordnance.

APPLICATION OF ALABAMA FOR THE EXTENSION OF PRE-EMPTION RIGHTS, AND GRANTING OF FLOATING CLAIMS TO SETTLERS WHO HAVE BEEN DEPRIVED OF LANDS BY INDIAN RESERVATIONS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 8, 1836.

JOINT MEMORIAL of the general assembly of the State of Alabama, to the Congress of the United States.

Your memorialists represent to your honorable body, that, by an act to revive an act entitled "An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on public lands," approved May 29, 1830, passed by the Congress of the United States, and approved, June 29, 1834, every settler or occupant of the public lands, prior to the passage of the said act, who was then in possession, and cultivated any part thereof, in the year 1833, and held possession of the same in the year 1834, should be entitled to all the benefits and privileges provided by the act entitled "An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands," approved, May 29, 1830. Your memorialists further represent, that many of the settlers upon the Creek lands, purchased by the treaty of the 24th March, 1832, who were in possession, and cultivated the same, in the year 1833, were prevented from receiving any advantages from the laws, as they had settled and occupied lands which were taken by Indian reservations, under the authority of the treaty aforesaid: Wherefore, your memorialists pray your honorable body to grant to all such settlers, who have been prevented receiving pre-emptions, as above stated, the right of a floating claim of one quarter-section each, which they may locate upon any other public lands of the United States, not sold or otherwise disposed of, or give them such other relief as may be found proper.

Therefore, be it resolved, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives requested, to use their best exertions to procure the passage of a law to forward the object of this memorial.

Resolved, further, That the executive of this State cause a copy of this memorial and resolutions to be forwarded to each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

APPLICATION OF ALABAMA FOR THE EXCHANGE OF THE SIXTEENTH SECTIONS WHEN VALUELESS, OR TAKEN UP BY INDIAN RESERVATIONS, FOR OTHER LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 8, 1836.

JOINT MEMORIAL to the Congress of the United States, requesting a grant of land for each township wherein the sixteenth sections have proved valueless, or been taken up by Indian reservations.

The memorial of the legislature of the State of Alabama to the Congress of the United States, respectfully represents to your honorable body, that there is a large portion of the citizens of their state entirely deprived of the benefits of an act of Congress granting the sixteenth section of each township to the use of the inhabitants of the same for literary purposes, in consequence of the sixteenth section proving entirely valueless, and that, generally, in the poorer parts of the State, where the inhabitants stand most in need of donation. And, whereas, also, in that portion of territory recently, by treaties with the Creek and Choctaw Indians, many of the sixteenth sections thus appropriated, have been taken by reservations allotted to the Indians by the said treaty, and thus many townships in the State deprived of the benefits of said act:

Your memorialists, therefore, respectfully represent to your honorable body the justice and propriety of allowing the inhabitants in each and every township in this State, where the sixteenth sections have proved valueless, or been taken by Indian reservations, to relinquish the same, and in lieu thereof, select one other section from any unappropriated lands in this State, to be applied to the specific object of literary instruction in the township for which the selection was made; and, as in duty bound, your memorialists will ever pray.

Resolved, That our senators and representatives in Congress be requested to use their best endeavors to procure the passage of a law of Congress embracing the object of the foregoing memorial.

Resolved, That the governor of this State be requested to forward a copy of this memorial and resolutions to each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

APPLICATION OF INDIANA FOR A GRANT OF LAND TO MARGARET NATION AND HER CHILDREN.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 8, 1836.

A JOINT RESOLUTION and MEMORIAL for the relief of Margaret Nation and others.

Whereas, it is represented to this general assembly that Margaret Nation is a very aged woman, who is encumbered with a large family of deaf and dumb children, whom she is unable to support, and who are unable, on account of the aforesaid affliction, to support themselves: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the general assembly of the State of Indiana, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives requested, to use their best exertions to procure the passage of a law by Congress, donating one quarter section of land to each of said individuals, to wit, to the said Margaret Nation and her said children, William Nation, Christopher Nation, Elias Nation, Jane Nation, Elizabeth Nation, and Anna Nation, in some section of Indiana, where the lands are yet vacant.

Be it further resolved, That the governor transmit copies, &c.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 9, 1836.

Mr. PORTER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Eloy Segura and others, reported:

The petitioners state that they were placed in possession of certain portions of land in Louisiana, by the Spanish government, with privileges annexed to that possession, and that they have been deprived of the enjoyment of the latter by the United States. They pray for such compensation as to the wisdom of Congress may seem just and equitable.

This demand takes its rise in a deviation, in this instance, from the usual practice pursued by the French and Spanish governments in conceding lands in the province of Louisiana to individuals. With the exception of the ancestors of the present petitioners, and some others which will be hereafter noticed, all grants of land in the colony were evidenced by writing; if complete, by an instrument to which the seal of the governor was annexed; if perfect, or inchoate, either by an order of survey, or a request to the commandant for permission to settle on the domain of the King, accompanied by his permission to do so annexed to the requette.

But, from some cause or other, now not clearly ascertained, a different system was pursued in regard to bodies of colonists which were transported in considerable numbers at a time from other parts of the King of Spain's dominions, in pursuance of a policy which deemed it necessary to place in different portions of the colony Spanish settlers, as a balance against the population of French origin. Those who have traditional knowledge of the subject, attribute the settlements thus made to a jealousy then entertained by the government of the latter; and several facts attending the early history of the Spanish dominion in Louisiana confirm the truth of this suggestion.

In pursuance of this policy, it appears that, at different times, but none later than between fifty or sixty years ago, numerous Spanish settlers were brought over to Louisiana at the expense of the King's government, and placed in different parts of the colony. A very considerable number were located on Terre à Bœuf, some distance below New Orleans; another portion on the La Fourche, eighty miles above it; another at Galvestown; and the remainder and smallest portion near New Iberia, a town directed to be established by the Spanish authorities. All these places, as it is known by persons well acquainted with the topography of the State, are positions which might become, in case of domestic insurrection or foreign invasion, important as military positions, and there can be little doubt they were chosen in reference to that object.

From certain causes (as has been already stated) it cannot now be known why a different course was pursued in regard to these colonists in relation to the lands given to them, from that adopted toward other settlers. It may, perhaps, find something like a satisfactory explanation in the different circumstances in which they came into the country, and in the inveterate indolence of the Spanish authorities, who never moved in public matters, unless under the orders of their government, or the promptings of individual interest. Be that, however, as it may, the officers to whom the duty was intrusted of placing them on the public land, instead of resorting to the regular and somewhat tedious formalities of making grants, proceeded at once to allot them certain portions of land, and to put them in possession of the portions so allotted.

The colonists, who were generally, almost all, ignorant and uninformed of the usages and laws of Spain, never took any steps to perfect their titles. They had been brought by the government from their homes in another country, without their consent, and placed in their new position without their will being consulted. They believed, it appears, implicitly, that the same public policy or parental solicitude, which had given them a new country for a residence, would take care that they should not be disturbed in it.

And that confidence, it appears, was not ill founded, so long as the Spanish government retained possession of Louisiana. It is in evidence that they occupied and cultivated the land given to them—that it passed by sale, and direction, and inheritance, like any other of the lands regularly conceded, and all this by the consent of the government authorities in the respective districts where these transactions took place.

When Louisiana passed from the dominion of Spain, under that of the United States, the same confidence in the protecting care of the new government which had guided them in relation to that which preceded it, and ignorance of the necessity of obtaining any express recognition of their titles, prevented the colonists from taking any steps to secure them. For nearly twenty years no danger seemed to flow fom this inaction. But time, which was lengthening their possession and strengthening the inference which flows from it, was weakening the evidence by which their title could be sustained. And the value of their property exciting cupidity, they found themselves disturbed in various ways in their possessions, and their rights denied.

The validity of the title of the La Fouche settlers was brought before the supreme court of Louisiana, and by them recognized. A full and severe examination of the laws of Spain in the case tried, showed that writing was not indispensable to a grant from the sovereign—that in his double capacity of owner and legislator, he could parcel out the domain as he thought fit. The settlers on Terre aux Bœuf, who were numerous, and occupied a large section of country, applied to Congress for a confirmation, and a bill passed, by which their title was confirmed.

The petitioners, who are the descendants of the colony placed on lands near New Iberia, experienced no interruption in their possession, until a very recent period.

It appears in evidence that the lands assigned to them were in an open prairie, in which no wood exists, and that the lands themselves were of no value for settlement, indeed were, to a great degree, uninhabitable, unless that article, so indispensable for firewood and building material, had been granted with them. Accordingly, a small portion of wood-land, called the Trois isles, was given to the colonists for fire-wood; and a cypress swamp contiguous to their settlement, was specially set apart for their use, in order that they might have the means of fencing their prairie lands, and procuring timber for building their houses.

The exclusive enjoyment to the property during a period of forty years by the petitioners or their ancestors, is established by the most irrefragable testimony. So much, indeed, was it respected, that it is in evidence that, during the dominion of Spain, officers high in the government of that country applied for and obtained permission of the colonists to have the liberty of cutting wood in the cypress swamp which had been assigned to them.

But, in the year 1821, certain persons who had titles to land adjoining this swamp, applied to the officers of the United States government to purchase it, under an act of Congress which gave pre-emptions to front proprietors to acquire the land immediately behind their concessions. This application was sustained, and a sale of it made. The colonists, however, acting under the belief of right and title produced by a possession of nearly half a century, continued as before to take the timber necessary for their plantations. An action at law was accordingly commenced against them, and by a decision of the supreme court of Louisiana, the sale by the United States was declared valid, and the petitioners mulcted in heavy damages for a trespass. The decision was based on two grounds: first, a defect in the legal proof that they had been put in possession; and second, upon a principle in the Louisiana laws, that a right, such as the petitioners claimed in this wood-land, could not be acquired by prescription.

Under these circumstances, the petitioners have applied to Congress for relief, and in the opinion of the committee, they are entitled to it. The land originally conceded to them was of little or no value without timber. Their settlement could not have been made without it, and being taken away, cannot now be maintained. The government of the United States, which succeeded to all the rights and all the advantages which Spain had in Louisiana, succeeded also to all her obligations and all her duties. If the nature of our government, and the principles which have guided her in the distribution of her public domain, prevent her from giving lands without compensation to the inhabitants, the obligation is imperative on her not to deprive them of anything which they enjoyed from the bounty or the policy of the sovereign who preceded them in the possession of the country. And, in the opinion of the committee, it makes no difference whether the benefit so conferred was in the shape of a complete title to the land, or a perpetual usufruct in it. Both invoke with equal force the protection of the principle to which allusion has just been made.

The matter to which the attention of the committee has been called, has been already before the House of Representatives, and favorably considered there, though not finally acted on. The committee beg leave to report a bill similar to that prepared by the committee which had the matter under consideration in the other house.

APPLICATION OF CITIZENS OF ALABAMA FOR THE REPEAL OF THE ACT OF MARCH 2, 1829, RELATING TO LAND CLAIMS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 9, 1836.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

The petition of the subscribers, citizens of Mobile, in the State of Alabama, respectfully represents: That, agreeably to provisions made by Congress, a board of commission was organized, and continued in existence nearly a year, in 1814 and part of 1815, for the adjustment of private land claims in this district, held under grants from the Spanish, French, and British governments; that the commissioner so appointed, after a very able, laborious, and patient investigation, made a report to Congress, recommending great numbers of claims for confirmation as just and equitable, and rejecting others as fraudulent, antedated, or void, in consequence of non-compliance with the conditions of the grants, which report was confirmed, without any alteration or reservation, by Congress. Subsequently, say some time in 1827, the register and receiver of the land office at St. Stephen's were appointed commissioners, and examined all claims presented to them, and recommended all that were entitled to it to confirmation; and their report was likewise confirmed by act of Congress, without any reservation. Both these reports were made upon the exparte statements of the claimants themselves, and every facility granted to establish their claims without opposition. The remaining part of the public domain in this district was offered for sale by the United States, and much of it has been entered, or taken up under the late pre-emption laws, the purchasers of which have in good faith and believed security made improvements and rendered the land valuable, as also those have done who held under Spanish, French, and British grants that were confirmed. Your petitioners now understand that a great many claims to lands and lots, rejected as fraudulent or void, are now about to be revived under the act of 2d March, 1829, which directs the register and receiver of this district to recommend for confirmation claims heretofore rejected, where the parties can prove possession at the time of the change of government, and for ten consecutive years previous thereto, which your petitioners respectfully but earnestly represent would create innumerable difficulties, and inevitably lead to much perjury and fraud. Many of the claims now attempted to be set up will cover land already confirmed by act of Congress, and held under honest and undoubted grants made by the former governments, as also land sold by the United States, and improved by the purchasers and holders in good faith. Any subsequent confirmation by Congress of lands heretofore confirmed or sold by the United States, would either lead to much litigation, or subject the present occupants to a severe pecuniary sacrifice to avoid it. Your petitioners firmly believe that said act of 2d March, 1829, will be likely to lead to very pernicious results, and they respectfully ask its repeal, or, if that cannot be had, they earnestly entreat that your honorable body will take no action under said act, unless it be clearly shown that the parties now holding the lands, under confirmed grants or sales by the United States, shall have been timely notified of application being made to Congress for confirmation of previously rejected claims to said lands. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 10, 1836.

Mr. HARRISON, of Missouri, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of John Wiley and Jefferson Greer, reported:

The petitioners represent, each for himself, that they purchased of the government, at the land office in St. Louis, Missouri, a half quarter-section each, for which they paid the government price, and took the certificate of the receiver for the same. The said Wiley states his is the northeast quarter of section five, township forty-six north, in range ten west, containing 90.89 acres, which he entered in April, 1832. The said Greer states that his is the northeast quarter of section five, township forty-six north, range ten west, containing 80 acres, which he entered in August, 1831. The petitioners both state, that some time in the spring of 1835, they each received from the register at St. Louis a letter, informing them that the land above mentioned, which they had each purchased of the government, had been previously sold some years before, to other individuals, and that they, the petitioners, must give up their land, and take back the money which they had paid for it. The petitioners represent that the land above mentioned, when purchased, was wholly unimproved, in its rude state of nature; that from the time the purchase was made to the period of receiving the before-mentioned letters from the register, under the full persuasion that the government had sold them a good title, they had each gone on to make valuable and lasting improvements on the land, in the erection of dwelling-houses and out-houses, and clearing and enclosing ground for cultivation; they show that each had cleared and fenced about fifty acres, and erected many of the necessary buildings for a farm, designing that their purchases should be a home for life. They represent that they are poor, and unable to bear the loss which they must suffer if compelled to give up their homes and the labor of three and four years bestowed upon them, without some equivalent, which they think they are entitled to from the government, because the fault is not with them, nor can any blame be attached to them; that at the time of making the purchases, they did not know, nor was it possible for them to anticipate, that the government had no title to the land which it sold to them. The petitioners, therefore, pray for such relief as a sense of justice on the part of Congress may think them entitled to.

Your committee being perfectly satisfied that the petitioners have a just and rightful claim upon the justice of the government, have reported the following bill for their relief.

ON GRANTING LAND TO THE HEIRS OF CERTAIN PERSONS KILLED BY THE SAC AND FOX INDIANS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 10, 1836.

Mr. CHAMBERS, of Pennsylvania, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Jane Scammakon, Susan Hazleton, and others, reported:

That they have considered the said petition, in which it is alleged that the individuals of the petitioners were killed by the Sacs and Fox Indians in the late war with those nations, and the father of Rachel Sylvia Hall was also killed in the same war by the said tribes of Indians; and it is requested by the petitioners that Congress should make to each of them the donation of a section of land in the State of Illinois.

The committee are not informed by any evidence under what circumstances the said individuals were killed, and can discover no reason to distinguish the cases of the petitioners from others who have had their husbands or parents killed in a war or otherwise by the numerous tribes of savages that dwell on our Northern and Western frontier. To extend the bounty of government by a donation of a tract of land to each of the petitioners or relatives of the deceased, who are said to have been killed in the war with those tribes of Indians, ought to be done only by a general law embracing all others who had experienced like misfortunes, the propriety or policy of such a provision the committee are not disposed to approbate. They therefore report that the petitioners are not entitled to the relief or bounty for which they have petitioned.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN INDIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 10, 1836.

Mr. HUNTSMAN, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Zebulon Sheets, of the county of White, and State of Indiana, reported:

That it appears from the allegations in the petition, which is supported by the accompanying proof, that on the 11th day of November, 1834, the petitioner entered 47.02 acres of land, at the land office in Crawfordsville in said State, in the northeast quarter of the northeast quarter of section number six, in township number twenty-six north, range number four west; that he was ignorant of those technicalities and forms in calling for the sections, ranges, townships, &c., which is requisite in making entries at the land offices; that he employed some persons whom he supposed were better skilled in such matters than himself, and that, by some mistake, they, in laying down his entry, called for the wrong range, by which his land was thrown six miles west of the land intended to be entered, and into a pond of water entirely valueless. The prayer of the petitioner is to be permitted to withdraw his entry, and to have the privilege of entering as much land elsewhere in said State which is subject to entry. The committee are of opinion, that the prayer of the petitioner is reasonable and ought to be granted, and have reported a bill accordingly.

ON A CLAIM FOR SURVEYING PUBLIC LANDS IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 12, 1836.

Mr. DUNLAP, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Wm. L. S. Dearing, reported:

The petitioner states that he was employed as deputy surveyor to survey the public lands in the State of Louisiana, and that he had surveyed his contract, amounting to about four thousand dollars, and on his return to make his return to the surveyor general, in crossing a river, his horse leaped out of the boat into the river, with the pack on him containing all his field notes, and that all exertions were made by him to save his papers, &c., but he was unable to save any of them; that he was compelled to return and resurvey all the country, at very great expense. He asks Congress to give to him a section of land in the section of country he surveyed. The committee cannot, upon any principle of policy, believe the relief ought to be granted; there are like or worse misfortunes happening to the citizens of the United States every day; and if they were once to establish the policy of granting relief in such cases, there would be no end to the applications. The committee recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted.

ON THE APPLICATION OF INDIANA TO WITHHOLD FROM SALE CERTAIN LAND IN THAT STATE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 12, 1836.

To the Senate of the United States:

I herewith return to the Senate the resolution of the legislature of the State of Indiana, requesting the President to suspend from sale a strip of land ten miles in width, on a line from Munceytown to Fort Wayne, which resolution was referred to me on the 5th instant.

It appears from the memorial to which the resolution is subjoined, that the lands embraced therein have been in market for several years past; that the legislature of the State of Indiana have applied to Congress for the passage of a law giving that State the right to purchase at such reduced prices as Congress may fix; and that their suspension from sale is requested as auxiliary to this application.

By the acts of Congress now in force, all persons who may choose to make entries for these lands, in the manner prescribed by law, are entitled to purchase the same; and as the President possesses no dispensing power, it will be obvious to the Senate that, until authorized by law, he cannot rightfully act on the subject referred to him.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 15, 1836.

A JOINT RESOLUTION relating to the Michigan road lands.

Whereas it does appear to this general assembly that the proper selections of Michigan road lands do not appear on the books of the General Land Office in Washington city; and whereas many tracts of these selected lands have been sold, by authority of the State of Indiana, to individuals:

Therefore, for the perfecting of the road grant to all parties concerned,

Resolved, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives requested, to use their exertions to procure to have made on the books of the General Land Office the proper entries of all tracts of lands granted and set apart as Michigan road lands; and obtain, and cause to be forwarded to the office of Secretary of State, the proper certificate of all lands set apart in the books of the General Land Office as Michigan road lands.

Resolved, That his excellency the governor be requested to forward a copy hereof to each of our senators and representatives in Congress; also, a copy to the Commissioner of the General Land Office in Washington city.

APPLICATION OF INDIANA FOR A GRANT OF LAND FOR A TURNPIKE ROAD FROM FORT WAYNE TO RICHMOND.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 15, 1836.

A JOINT MEMORIAL and RESOLUTION to the Congress of the United States.

To the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the general assembly of the State of Indiana, respectfully represent: That, between Fort Wayne, on the Wabash and Erie canal, and Richmond, in Wayne county, there is a great tract of fertile soil, intersected by no navigable stream, and without roads or other facilities of communication; that the country, for about half the distance, is but thinly inhabited, and that the lands belong chiefly to the general government, and, unless the means of intercourse are furnished, must remain unsold and unsettled for many years to come; therefore, your memorialists are of opinion that it would conduce no less to the advantage of the general government than to this State, to make to the State of Indiana a liberal donation in lands to aid in the construction of a turnpike road to connect the above-named points.

Resolved, That our senators and representatives in Congress be respectfully requested to use their exertions to obtain the object of the above memorial.

APPLICATION OF INDIANA FOR BOUNTY LAND TO THE MILITIA WHO SERVED DURING THE WAR OF 1812-'15.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 16, 1836.

A MEMORIAL and JOINT RESOLUTION of the State of Indiana to Congress, on the subject of granting a bounty in land to the organized militiamen, mounted militiamen, and rangers, of the last war.

Your memorialists, the general assembly of the State of Indiana, would respectfully represent: That justice to the organized militiamen, mounted militiamen, and rangers, who so successfully protected the frontiers of Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri, during the last war with Great Britain, demands from the general government some additional remuneration to the small pittance allowed them in the act under which they patriotically enrolled themselves. Your memorialists are aware that this subject has been brought before your honorable body during the last session of Congress by the State of Illinois. With the views expressed by that State, in her memorial, your memorialists most fully accord. We, therefore, ask for the passage of an act providing that each commissioned officer, non-commissioned officer, and soldier, of the organized militiamen, mounted militiamen, and rangers, who entered the service of the United States under the several acts of Congress, providing for the defence of the frontier during the late war with Great Britain, and who was regularly discharged, shall be allowed, under such regulations as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, 160 acres of land, as a bounty from the United States; the said land to be entered at the land office, and selected out of any of the unappropriated land of the United States which may be subject to sale at private entry; and providing, also, that the legal representatives of such soldier or officer, who may not be living at the passage of the law, shall be entitled to the same number of acres.

ON THE IMPROVEMENT OF THE NAVIGATION OF THE WABASH RIVER, AND IN RELATION TO THE WABASH AND ERIE CANAL.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 16, 1836.

Mr. CASEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred a joint resolution of the State of Illinois, asking an appropriation in land for the improvement of the navigation of the Great Wabash river, reported:

That, in 1823, an examination of this river was made by commissioners appointed by the States of Illinois and Indiana, and a report of that examination was made to the executives of those States. Various modes of improving the navigation were then submitted, such as opening and deepening the channel, locking and canalling around the obstructions, &c. But the estimates for the proposed improvements were considered beyond the means of the State, and no further proceedings were then had in relation to the matter.

In 1828, Congress passed an act making an appropriation for the survey of the Wabash river, and in April, 1829, Captain Smith, of the United States corps of engineers, was ordered to make the survey, and in February, 1831, a report of this survey was made by him to the engineer department. Minute surveys were made under the direction of Captain Smith, and the whole improvement believed to be necessary was estimated at sixty-five thousand and ninety-four dollars and twenty-nine cents.

The States of Illinois and Indiana having appropriated twenty thousand dollars each, the commissioners of this fund caused a survey of the obstructions to the navigation of the Wabash river to be made, with an estimate of the probable cost of the proposed improvements. In December, 1834, Edward Smith, esq., the engineer appointed by the commissioners, made his report, in which he says, "Having progressed with the survey of the obstructions to the navigation of the Wabash river, so far as to enable me to make a minute estimate of the cost of removing or overcoming such of the obstructions as were directed to be surveyed, lying below the Hanging Rock ripple, and such an approximate of the cost of those which occur above that point, as to place it within your power to judge of the expediency of letting contracts for the execution of the several jobs of work," &c. The estimated cost of removing the obstructions to the navigation of the river, in this report, is forty-two thousand nine hundred and seventy-two dollars and sixty eight cents. But it must be borne in mind that this survey was made only of the greatest obstructions to the navigation, and with a view to the expenditure of only forty thousand dollars, the sum appropriated by the two States for that purpose.

At the last session of the Indiana legislature, it is understood that they made a further appropriation for the improvement of this river; and when it is recollected that seven flourishing counties in Illinois border on this river, and that a large portion of her citizens are deeply interested in this improvement, no doubt is entertained but that she will, as far as her means will justify, make appropriations for the same object; but the means of these States are not such as to enable them to make the improvements complete. The completion of the improvement is essential to render the Wabash and Erie canal of extended and permanent utility, and it should be viewed as a continuation of the same work.

By an act of Congress, passed the 26th day of May, 1824, the State of Indiana was authorized to survey and mark, through the public lands of the United States, the route of a canal to connect at navigable points the waters of the Wabash river with those of Lake Erie. By an act of the 2d of March, 1827, there was granted to the State of Indiana, for the purpose of aiding her in opening said canal, after the line thereof had been surveyed, a quantity of land equal to one half of five sections in width, on each side of said canal, from one end thereof to the other, with a provision that the same, when completed, should be and forever remain, a public highway for the use of the government of the United States, free from any toll or other charge for property of the United States, or persons in their service, passing through the same, and a further provision that the said canal should be commenced within five, and completed within twenty years.

By a report made to the Senate of the United States on the 12th of March, 1834, from the Committee of Roads and Canals, it is shown that the Wabash and Erie canal was then in a state of rapid progress, the summit level section was nearly completed, and other sections were soon to be put under contract. This work, within the State of Indiana, and under the auspices of her legislature, it was stated, would advance with great rapidity, and it was expected to be completed in the course of the year 1836.

This canal, when completed, will unite with the navigable waters of the Wabash with Lake Erie, opening at once an inland navigation from New York to New Orleans, two of the largest and most commercial cities in the United States, through one of the richest countries of the same extent, on the globe, and by the nearest possible route in which an inland water communication can be constructed.

This canal has progressed rapidly during the last year. The union of the waters of the great lakes with those of the Gulf of Mexico has been effected; a very speedy completion of the entire canal from the Maumee bay to the mouth of the Tippecanoe river on the Wabash is now confidently expected.

From the message of the governor of Indiana, of the 8th December, 1835, it is shown that the operations on the line of this canal have been directed the past season with energy and great success; the middle division, extending from the St. Joseph dam, to the forks of the Wabash, about thirty-two miles, has been completed for about two hundred and thirty-two thousand dollars, including all repairs to that time, being something less than the estimated cost. Upon this portion of the line, the navigation was opened on the 4th day of July last, on which day the citizens of Indiana, in assembled thousands, witnessed the waters of the St. Joseph mingling with those of the Wabash, uniting the waters of the lakes in the north, with those of the gulf of Mexico in the south.

When this canal shall be entirely completed, the obstructions in the Wabash river will be the only obstructions to be found in this extensive and important navigation reaching from New York to New Orleans.

From the mouth of the Wabash to the mouth of the Tippecanoe, which is considered the head of steamboat navigation, by the river, is a distance of more than five hundred miles; no river of the west is connected with a country more generally, or more extensively fertile; indeed, in this it is believed to have the advantage over all others. Its lands are of the richest quality, the towns and villages on its banks have already become large and prosperous, the quantity of produce borne upon its bosom to the New Orleans market, considering the newness of the country, is beyond example.

The trade of this river may be estimated from the fact, that in the year 1828, between twelve and fifteen hundred flat-boats descended it, all bound for a southern market; and the annual increase of this trade has been in an equal ratio with the increase of population in the upper Wabash country in Indiana, and that part of Illinois bordering on the Wabash river, which is astonishing and unparalleled.

Under this state of things, the legislature of Illinois have asked an appropriation in land, for the improvement of the navigation of this river.

From an estimate furnished the Committee on the Public Lands, by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, it appears that the quantity of land surveyed and offered for sale in the State of Indiana, on the 30th September, 1835, was eighteen millions six hundred and ninety thousand four hundred and forty-seven acres. The quantity that had been sold, eight millions three hundred and ninety thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight acres. The quantity remaining unsold, and at the disposal of the government, ten millions two hundred and ninety-nine thousand six hundred and eight acres.

By the same estimates, it is shown that the quantity of land surveyed and offered for sale in the State of Illinois, on the 30th day of September, 1835, was thirty-two millions three hundred and twenty-one thousand nine hundred and forty-seven acres. The quantity that had been sold, four millions three hundred and forty thousand five hundred and eighty-one acres. The quantity remaining unsold, and at the disposal of the government, seventeen millions two hundred and thirty-five thousand and fourteen acres.

There are then, in the States of Indiana and Illinois, thirty-seven millions five hundred and thirty-four thousand six hundred and twenty-two acres of public land, which have been offered at public sale, remain unsold, and is now subject to entry at private sale. Now, when it is remembered that a large portion of the lands bordering on this river belongs to the government, and that the improvement of its navigation would greatly enhance the value of those lands, it is believed that by an appropriation of a quantity sufficient to remove all the obstructions to the navigation of this river, not only the very best interests of the people of Indiana and Illinois, bordering on the river, would be greatly promoted, but that the rapid sales and enhanced value thereby given to the remaining lands belonging to the government, would more than repay, by the moneys which it would bring into the Treasury of the United States, and by the general prosperity of the country, the amount of land thus appropriated.

The committee, therefore, propose to make an appropriation to the States of Indiana and Illinois, each respectively, of twenty-five thousand and six hundred acres, or forty sections of the public lands, to be selected under the direction of the executives of the two States, and disposed of as their respective legislatures shall direct, and the avails thereof applied jointly to the improvement of the navigation of the Wabash river.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, February 10, 1836.

SIR: There has been referred to the Committee on the Public Lands of the House of Representatives, a joint resolution of the legislature of Illinois, asking an appropriation in land for the improvement of the navigation of the Great Wabash river, and for the appointment of competent engineers of the United States corps to make a survey of said river, and to ascertain the probable amount that will be necessary to remove the obstructions to the navigation thereof. As this is a subject of great interest to the people in that section of the country, and an improvement that I am exceedingly anxious to see accomplished, I take the liberty of earnestly soliciting the appointment of the engineers asked for by the Illinois legislature, and that the survey be made at the earliest practicable period.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your most obedient servant,

Z. CASEY.

WAR DEPARTMENT, February 13, 1836.

SIR: I transmit a report from the Topographical Bureau, in reply to your letter of the 10th instant, on the subject of a survey of the Wabash river.

Very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

LEWIS CASS.

Hon. Z. CASEY, Committee on the Public Lands, House of Representatives.

TOPOGRAPHICAL BUREAU, Washington, February 12, 1836.

SIR: The letter from the honorable Mr. Casey, of the 10th instant, is an application for an engineer to superintend a survey of the river Wabash, with a view to the improvement of its navigation.

The present disorganization of the topographical engineer service, by the necessary withdrawal of the greater part of its assistants, in order to join their respective companies engaged in suppressing the disturbances in Florida, together with the rule of awaiting until it can be ascertained what duties will be required of this bureau, by resolutions and laws of Congress, render it out of my power to encourage the expectation that the engineer applied for can be obtained.

Should, however, the bill for the better organization of the corps of topographical engineers, (the leading feature of which is to attach its assistants permanently to the corps) which has passed the Senate, and is now before the House of Representatives, become a law, it is highly probable that an officer may be spared in compliance with the application now made.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN J. ABERT, Lieutenant Colonel of the Topographical Engineers.

Hon. LEWIS CASS, Secretary of War.

ON THE SELECTION AND LOCATION OF LANDS GRANTED FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE WABASH AND ERIE CANAL, IN INDIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JUNE 6, 1834.

[This document not being in place to be inserted in chronological order, is now inserted to follow the preceding report upon the subject of the Wabash.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, June 4, 1834.

SIR: In obedience to the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 10th of April last, directing the Secretary of the Treasury "to communicate to the House the correspondence between his department and the executive authority of the State of Indiana, on the subject of locating and selecting Wabash and Erie canal lands, together with the correspondence relative thereto between the Commissioner of the General Land Office and the canal commissioners of said State or their authorized agents;" also, "the correspondence of any engineer or engineers appointed by the Secretary of War to survey the line of the Wabash and Erie canal;" also, "a map within five miles of either side of the Maumee river, between the line of Indiana and the termination of the canal line, at the foot of the rapids of said river; together with information of the period or periods when said lands were brought into market, and copies of the instructions to land officers under which they have been sold; also a statement of the amount of the purchase money, the names and residence of the purchasers, designating the portion of such lands which have been located for public use, as well as those which have been taken at private and public sale"—I have the honor herewith to transmit copies of the correspondence between this department and the governor of Indiana; also a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with a map and sundry documents, which contain all the information called for that the files of the department enable me to furnish.

I have the honor to remain, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. B. TANEY, Secretary of the Treasury.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, May 31, 1834.

SIR: I have the honor to state, in reply to your reference of the 15th ultimo, for a report thereon, of the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 10th ultimo, in the following words, to wit:

"Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to communicate to this House the correspondence between his department and the executive authority of the State of Indiana, on the subject of locating and selecting Wabash and Erie canal lands, together with the correspondence relative thereto, between the Commissioner of the General Land Office and the canal commissioners of said State or their authorized agent;

"2d. That he communicate, if any, the correspondence of any engineer or engineers appointed by the Secretary of War to survey the line of the Wabash and Erie canal;

"3d. That he communicate, also, a map within five miles of either side of the Maumee river, between the line of Indiana and the termination of the canal line, at the foot of the rapids of said river; together with information of the period or periods when said lands were brought into market, and copies of the instructions to land officers under which they have been sold; also, a statement of the amount of the purchase money, the names and residences of the purchasers, designating the portion of such lands which have been located for public use, as well as those which have been taken at private and public sale,"—that the accompanying papers, marked No. 1 to No. 9, inclusive, contain the correspondence between this office and the executive authorities of the State of Indiana, and the canal commissioners of said State and their authorized agents.

In reference to the second clause of the resolution, I have to state that this office is not in possession of any of "the correspondence of any engineer or engineers appointed by the Secretary of War to survey the line of the Wabash and Erie canal."

In compliance with the third clause of the resolution, I enclose a map, marked A, showing the surveys within five miles of either side of the Maumee river, between the line of Indiana and the termination of the canal line, at the foot of the rapids of said river."

The paper marked B shows the periods when those lands were proclaimed for sale. No particular instructions were ever given respecting the lands designated in the proclamations issued prior to 1833. At the time when those lands were offered for sale, no circumstances connected with them rendered any special instructions necessary; but, by reference to the papers marked 10 and 11, it will be seen that, on the 17th June last, the land officers were directed to withhold from private entry all lands within five miles of the Maumee river, and the papers numbered 12, 13, 14, and 15, contain the correspondence between your department and this office, and my instructions to the land officers, directing them to withhold from sale all such lands embraced by the proclamation of the 3d September, 1833, as are situate within five miles of the Miami river.

The abstracts numbered 16, 17, 18, and 19, show the particular tracts within five miles on each side of the Miami, which have been sold by the United States; the names and residences of the purchasers, and the amount of purchase money paid for each tract. It is impracticable, from the returns, to make a more accurate discrimination between the lands purchased at public and private sale, than that afforded by the designation of the tracts which were sold at more than the minimum price per acre. I know of none of those lands having been located for public use.

By the abstracts furnished, it appears that up to the first day of April last, 70,785.62 acres have been sold within five miles on each side of the Maumee river, and that the purchase money thereof was $115,259 37; but what portion of the land thus sold may be within the alternate sections which are to be granted on account of the canal, cannot be ascertained until these sections are designated.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, sir, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

Hon. R. B. TANEY, Secretary of the Treasury.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, Indianapolis, Indiana, May 18, 1833.

SIR: It is with some reluctance that I claim your attention to a subject of some importance to Indiana, knowing you have much to employ your time; but fidelity to the State, and the interest of our canal, call for an effort to prevent a diminution in the proceeds of the lands granted the State for canal purposes. You will recollect that by the act of Congress of the 2d of March, 1827, an alternate section, five miles in width, on each side of the line, was granted to Indiana for the construction of the Wabash and Erie canal. That we might avail ourselves of the benefit of the donation, and to afford time and opportunity to ascertain the intersection of the route with the section lines, to make and report the selections of the lands, application was made for a suspension of the sales on that part of the line within this State; in compliance with which, instructions were issued, withdrawing the lands from market. And, in accordance with the spirit of the act, the State is now enjoying the benefit of this grant, while the Treasury of the United States, owing to the rise of the lands, must have been enriched some thousands of dollars by the delay.

The late deliberations of the legislature of the State of Ohio, since the adjournment of the general assembly of this State, have settled the question as to the extension of the work from our dividing line to the lake; and this State is invited to make selection of the lands granted within the Territory of Ohio. The recent adjustment of the subject with that state, and the consequent removal of all doubts as to the extension of the work beyond our line to the lake, have given to these lands a new and high character; and knowing they would now be sought for with avidity, an application was made to the Commissioner of the General Land Office for a suspension of the sales on the route in Ohio, until the agents of the State can determine the intersection of the route with the section lines, make the selections of the lands granted, and report thereon. In his final answer to the request referred to, the Commissioner, by letter of the 18th of April, has refused to withdraw the lands from entry, on the ground that he knows of no law authorizing him to do so. It is admitted there is no law enjoining as a duty the suspension of sales, but we have a law of the Congress of the United States, making the grant; and why it is that we are now to be deprived of time and opportunity to have the identical lands granted, set apart as upon the former occasion, and as other States have done, I can perceive no good reason.

These lands constitute an important item in our means for the completion of the work, and if classed and disposed of as we sold those on this side of the State line, will yield us from one dollar and fifty cents per acre to four dollars; consequently, if the sales are persisted in, you will strip us of our resources, in the same proportion that those prices bear to the Congress price; while on the other hand, if you permit us to use the lands named in the grant, the value of the donation will not only remain unimpaired, but the lands falling to the United States, within the grant, if sold at public auction twelve or eighteen months hence, will bring to the Treasury from fifty to one hundred thousand dollars more than they will now command at private entry.

Satisfied that the Commissioner, in depriving us of an opportunity to secure the lands, has reversed the course of the officers of the general government upon similar occasions, and finding from his letter, that the subject has not been submitted to the President or to yourself, application is now made to you, with a request that the lands donated to the State, beyond the Ohio line, may be withdrawn from entry until the authorities and agents of this State can be permitted to take such steps as will secure the value of the grant.

With unimpaired esteem for you personally, as well as for your public character, I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

N. NOBLE.

Hon. LOUIS MCLANE.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, June 14, 1833.

SIR: I have had the honor to receive your excellency's letter of the 18th ult., addressed to my predecessor, and have carefully examined the correspondence which had previously taken place between you and the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and the canal commissioners of the State and others, on the same subject. From these it appears that the route of the canal within the State of Ohio has not yet been located and agreed upon; and therefore the lands to which the State of Indiana will be entitled cannot be ascertained. It appears, however, that the probable route will be that marked out by Mr. Stanbury, one of the United States engineers, in 1829, a copy of which is represented to have been deposited in the office of the Secretary of State at Indianapolis, and in the War Department at Washington. As there is good reason to believe, that, unless the lands on the probable route be withheld from sale, the aid which Congress intended to afford the canal will not be realized; and as such arrangement was adopted on former occasions, both with respect to lands granted to Indiana and Ohio, I have requested the Commissioner of the General Land Office to instruct the officers of the land districts through which the line marked out by Mr. Stanbury would pass, to withhold from public sale and private entry the lands within five miles on each side of that line, the instruction, however, not to be understood as interfering with the pre-emption rights within that limit.

In communicating this result, allow me to express a hope that by an early location of the canal the subject may be relieved from all further difficulty. It affords me great satisfaction to be able to gratify your excellency's wishes in this matter, and I avail myself of this occasion to assure you of the respect with which I am your obedient servant,

W. J. DUANE, Secretary of the Treasury.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, Indianapolis, Indiana, October 10, 1833.

SIR: My official situation imposes upon me the duty of again addressing the Secretary of the Treasury on a subject involving, in no small degree, the interests of this State. I allude to that part of the grant of public lands made to Indiana to enable her to construct the Wabash and Erie canal, connecting the waters of the Wabash with those of Lake Erie, situated within the territory of the State of Ohio. That State, at the last session of her legislature, pledged herself either to extend this work through her territory to the lake or suffer Indiana to do it. All doubt as to the final completion of the work being therefore removed, the public lands along the line attracted the immediate notice of speculators, and of the public generally.

From a knowledge of these facts I was induced, without delay, to call on the Commissioner of the General Land Office, to withdraw from sale the lands within the grant, as had been the practice of the government on similar occasions. The application thus made, was rejected without consulting, as was supposed, either the Secretary of the Treasury or the President, and an appeal was taken, by a reference of the subject to Mr. Secretary

McLane. About the period of the date of my letter to that gentleman, he was transferred to the State Department. His successor, Mr. Duane, upon his induction into office, took up the matter, and by his letter of June 14, directed the Commissioner to instruct the land officers in Ohio "to reserve from both public sale and private entry the lands within five miles of that line" (the Maumee river). Of his decision and of these proceedings, the governor of this State has the honor of being fully advised by the letter of Mr. Duane of June last.

After receiving the unequivocal letter, above alluded to, from Mr. Duane, it was believed that we would be permitted to enjoy the grant from the general government, without having it further shorn of its value; but the public journals have recently thrown upon us the President's proclamation of September 3, directing a sale, at the land offices at Bucyrus and Wapaukonetta, of the most valuable lands on the canal line. The reasons assigned by the land officers to our canal commissioners, for this step, are such as not to entitle them to a place in this communication, and cannot be such as induced the measure.

I have, therefore, respectfully to request that you will lay this communication before the President, and in behalf of the good people of Indiana, urge him to delay the sales of these lands, so that the legislature of this State may have an opportunity of bringing the subject before the next Congress, whose session will commence on the same day with the commencement of the sales of these lands.

It is confidently believed that, when the President shall have given to this subject that consideration to which its importance to Indiana, at least, entitles it, he cannot but see the justice of suffering the decision of Mr. Duane, in our favor, to be carried into effect.

If Indiana is not to be permitted to avail herself of the advantages which would result to her by a selection of the lands in question, immediately on the line of the canal, as contemplated by the grant, her means for the completion of the work will be greatly diminished. Already the general government has disposed of nearly eighty thousand acres within the limits of the grant, and if Indiana should ever be permitted hereafter to select other lands in lieu thereof, she must do it from the refuse lands of the United States of far less value.

Besides this view of our loss, I might also advert to the heavy expense in damages for way, stone, timber, &c., chargeable to the work, in consequence of those lands falling into the hands of individuals. I will be glad to receive, at as early a date as practicable, such intelligence as you may have to give in relation to the fate of this application.

I am, with respect, your obedient and humble servant, N. NOBLE.

Hon. R B. TANEY, Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, October 29, 1833.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 10th inst., on the subject of the suspension from sale of the public lands bordering on the line of the proposed canal, connecting the waters of the Wabash with those of Lake Erie, and, with the approbation of the President, the Commissioner of the General Land Office has been directed to cause the lands referred to, to be withheld from sale or entry, according to the decision of my predecessor, heretofore communicated to you.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. B. TANEY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Statement, showing the periods when the lands within five miles of the Miami river were proclaimed for sale.

By the President's proclamation of the 16th May, 1822; townships 2, 3, and 4, of ranges 1 and 2—and townships 3, 4, and 5, of ranges 3 and 4, were to be offered in August, 1822; townships 3, 4, and 5, of ranges 5 and 6—and townships 4 and 5, of ranges 7 and 8 east, were to be offered in September, 1822; townships 6, of ranges 6, 7, and 8, were to be offered in October, 1822; townships 4, 5, 6, and 7, of range 9; townships 5, 6, and 7, of range 10—and township 6, of range 11, were to be offered in September, 1822.

By the President's proclamation, of the 15th of April, 1817, the lands in the reserve of twelve miles square, were to be offered in July, 1817.

By the President's proclamation, of the 3d of September, 1833, the late Ottawa reservations on the north side of the Miami were to be offered in December, 1833.

No. 1.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF CANAL COMMISSIONERS OF THE WABASH AND ERIE CANAL, Fort Wayne, Ind., March 8, 1833.

SIR: The act of Congress of March 2, 1827, granted to the State of Indiana a quantity of lands equal to one half of five miles in width, on each side of a canal route, to connect, at navigable points, the waters of the Wabash river with those of Lake Erie, under the contingencies, that the State should accept the terms of the grants, to commence the canal previous to the 2d of March, 1832, and finish the same in 1847. The acceptance of the grant was early made by the State of Indiana; which, by the provisions of its legislative acts, adopted the location of the route made by the corps of United States engineers, as the same was returned to the office of the secretary of this State. In accordance with the provisions of the same acts, and with the approbation of the Commissioner of the General Land Office and the President of the United States, the canal lands accruing to the State, for that part of the route within its limits, from near the mouth of the Tippecanoe river to the Ohio State line, were selected and set apart for the use of the State—a portion of which has been sold by its authority, and a part of the canal line been put under contract for construction, as far back as the 1st of March, 1832; so that compliance on the part of Indiana has been fully made with the conditions of the aforesaid grant of lands by the act of Congress of the 2d March, 1827.

A navigable point on the Maumee river could not be reached within the limits of Indiana, and the route of the canal was located, by the United States engineers, to the Maumee bay, a distance of seventy-eight miles, in Ohio: for this part of the canal grant no selection of the lands, accruing to the State of Indiana, has been made, owing to the courtesy which was felt due to the State of Ohio, not to locate the canal in her jurisdiction, or select the lands without her consent, although the subject has always excited a deep interest in the State of Indiana. It was with these views, and also in conformity to the 4th section of the act of Congress of May 24, 1828, entitled, "An act to aid the State of Ohio in extending the Miami canal from Dayton to Lake Erie, and to grant a quantity of land to said State to aid in the construction of the canals authorized by law, and for making donations of land to certain persons in Arkansas Territory," that a commissioner was appointed, in 1829, and a compact entered into by Indiana with Ohio, for the cession of the canal lands on the Maumee to the latter State. But, in consequence of the magnitude of the works of internal improvements, which were then in an unfinished state, involving her resources to a considerable extent, Ohio did not accede to the provisions of the compact. The subject, however, has never been lost sight of, and was renewed this last winter, at the instance of the legislature of Indiana, by a correspondence from the governor of this State to the executive of Ohio, which has resulted in a joint resolution of the general assembly of Ohio, requesting the State of Indiana to have the Maumee lands selected and set apart for the use of the canal, Ohio declaring her intention, that if she should ultimately decline to receive the lands aforesaid, and undertake, either by herself, or through the agency of an incorporated company, the construction of that part of the Wabash and Erie canal, within her limits, before the time fixed by the act of Congress for the completion of the same, she will enable Indiana to avail herself of the benefits of said lands, by authorizing her to invest the proceeds of the sales thereof in the stock of a company to be incorporated for the construction of that part of the canal, and that she will give the State of Indiana notice of her determination, on or before the first day of January, 1838.

This expression of Ohio determines the question of the ultimate extension of the Wabash and Erie canal, from the Ohio State line to the Maumee bay, and will soon cause all the unsold lands in the vicinity of the Maumee river to be entered at the land offices in which they are situated, and which would be very detrimental to the interests of the canal, whether that part of the line shall be constructed by Ohio or Indiana, as may be hereafter agreed by the two States, and would in great measure defeat the intentions of Congress in making the canal grant. It is, therefore, of much importance to have the selection of the lands made as early as can be conveniently done. It is supposed that Indiana having complied with the conditions of the act of Congress of March 2, 1827, in accepting the grant, commencing the canal within the time specified—and by being bound also to complete the whole line by 1847—is vested with a clear title to the lands in question; and that, since all the objections which might have grown out of conflicting jurisdictions between the States that have had the causes removed, which might have produced them, by the late resolutions of the general assembly of Ohio invitirg Indians to select the lands, that the permission of the Commissioner of the General Land Office and the Executive of the United States, will be readily obtained for that purpose.

As it is reasonable to suppose that the Maumee lands will be entered rapidly by purchasers, which if not prevented, will be injurious to the interests of the canal, it is an object very desirable, as well, perhaps, as a matter of justice to the States of Indiana and Ohio, that the sales should be suspended for five miles in width on each side of the Maumee river, until the selection can be made; and if a law has passed Congress, allowing settlers a pre-emption right to purchase lands on which they may have made improvements, at the minimum price per acre, it is respectfully submitted whether the grant of Congress for the canal donation, having been made prior to the passage of such act, its conditions having been complied with by the State of Indiana, does not vest in her the title to these lands so fully, that it could not be defeated by a subsequent act, and that the canal grant, for that reason, forms an exception to the operation of such law.

The resolutions of Ohio which have been referred to, passed their general assembly since the adjournment of the legislature of this State, and of course, there has been no correspondent legislative provisions made in relation to this subject by Indiana, nor is there any particular act expressly adopting the canal route in the State of Ohio: but the 4th section of the act of our State legislature, entitled, "An act providing means to construct the portion of the Wabash and Erie canal which lies within the State of Indiana," approved January 28, 1830, directs and authorizes the board of canal commissioners to finally adjust with the general government the lands accruing to the State under the provisions of the act of Congress of the 2d of March, 1827; and under this general provision the board supposed the power incidentally granted them, to execute any reasonable measures necessary for the selection of the lands on the Maumee. They would feel authorized to make an order in their journal of proceedings, adopting the canal route as surveyed, marked, and located by Howard Stansbury, esq., assistant civil engineer of the United States, from the State line dividing Indiana and Ohio; thence on the south side of the Maumee river to near the town of Defiance; thence across the said river to the north side; thence down the valley on the north side to the town of Fort Meigs, or near thereto, as was located by the said Stansbury in 1829, a copy of whose memoir of the location of said route, with the maps, profiles, notes of levels and surveys, are deposited in the office of the secretary of state at Indianapolis, and in the War Department at Washington city; to also make such other surveys, maps, &c., as may be necessary to show the intersections of the route of said canal with the lines of the surveys of the public lands; and would then propose the mode of division which was adopted in the selection of that part of the canal donation which lies in the State of Indiana, and continue the selection by tiers of sections alternately in the same manner. But to make this division of the canal lands, as before remarked, will require some length of time, during which, there is strong probability that the most valuable tracts will be either sold, or occupied by settlers under the pre-emption law—a request is, therefore, earnestly, but respectfully made, that the sales may be suspended in the canal donation; and if it should be considered that the prior right of the State to the lands in question is paramount to the titles which can be acquired under the pre-emption law, that the land officers of this district may be directed to suspend the decision of such claims, until it shall be ascertained whether the tracts so claimed would have fallen to the share of the canal after the final adjustment of this subject, and the selection of the lands shall have been made.

Influenced in common by the interest felt by the citizens of this State on this subject, we respectfully solicit you to advise us—

1st. On the measures which must be pursued, to have the canal lands on the Maumee selected for the use of the State of Indiana.

2d. Whether your department will suspend further sales on the Maumee till the selection of the lands can be made; and

3d. Whether settlers can acquire titles to any part of these lands under the pre-emption laws, until the part accruing to the canal shall have been selected.

Enclosed we forward a copy of what we supposed to be the preamble and resolutions of Ohio; it is but just, however, to remark that they are not official, but having received them from a highly respectable source, we feel confident that they are the same as passed the general assembly of that State.

With great respect, your obedient servants,

No. 2.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, Indianapolis, March 27, 1833.

SIR: By an act of Congress of March 2, 1827, an alternate section of land was granted to Indiana, five miles in width on each side of the Wabash and Erie canal, to aid her in the construction of the work. Owing to the interference of the jurisdiction of Ohio, in that part of the route within her limits, no steps have been taken by the authorities of Indiana for the selection of the lands in Ohio. Since the close of our late session of the legislature, the executive of this State has received, from Governor Lucas, an official copy of resolutions, recently passed by that State, undertaking that Ohio will procure the extension of that part of the canal within her territory, or permit Indiana to do so, and inviting the adoption of any measure on our part necessary to the selection of the land, granted for the work, lying beyond our line. The authorized agents of this State, with as little delay as possible, will proceed with the selection of the lands, after a survey is made to ascertain the intersection of the route with the section lines. In the meantime, however, the sales at the land offices, under the late pre-emption law and otherwise, will continue, to the injury of this State, unless time is allowed us to make the necessary survey and selections. I, therefore, request, on behalf of this State, that the sales be suspended until the lands granted can be designated by our agents, under existing regulations, or such as may be hereafter determined upon. I need hardly remark that this State has brought herself strictly within the conditions of the grant, by commencing the work, and the terms upon which it is to be extended from the line between the States to the lake, being adjusted, there is no remaining doubt of its completion before the lapse of the time allowed by the act on that subject before mentioned.

Very respectfully, I am, your obedient servant,

N. NOBLE.

COMMISSIONER of the General Land Office.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, April 13, 1833.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 27th ultimo, in relation to the location of so much of the land granted for the Wabash and Erie Canal, as is situated in the State of Ohio.

Whenever you transmit to this office duly-authenticated copies of the resolutions of the State of Ohio, to which you refer, the subject will be taken into consideration, and you shall be advised of any decision which may be made thereon. I will also thank you to forward to this office certified copies of such laws of Indiana as provide for the appointment of your board of canal commissioners, and define their powers and duties so far as they may respect the location of the canal line, and the selection of the alternate sections. In the meantime, I do not feel myself authorized to direct the suspension of the sales, as requested in your letter.

With, &c.

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, April 18, 1833.

GENTLEMEN: Your letter of the 8th ultimo, respecting the selection of lands for the proposed extension of the Wabash canal from the Indiana State line to the Miami bay, was duly received, and, as a reply thereto, I enclose herewith a copy of my letter of this date to the governor of Indiana upon the subject.

I am, &c.,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, April 16, 1833.

SIR: I have this day received from the governor of the State of Ohio, under date of the 9th instant, a copy of the preamble and resolutions passed at the last session of the legislature of Ohio, in relation to the location of the lands granted for the Wabash and Erie canal, and, so soon as the business of the office will permit, the subject shall receive all proper attention.

I am, &c.

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, April 18, 1833.

SIR: Agreeably to the intention expressed in my last communication to you, I have availed myself of the first opportunity which circumstances have afforded to examine into the subject of the proposed extension of the Wabash canal through Ohio to the Maumee bay; and, as the result of such examination, I beg leave to state, that I consider the second resolution of the legislature of Ohio as sufficiently broad to authorize the State of Indiana, by such agents as she may specially appoint for that purpose, to cause any line of canal she may adopt to be connected with the sectional lines of the public surveys; and so soon as such connections are made and an authenticated plat thereof, and of the act recognizing such canal line, is transmitted to this office, the particular sections to be set apart for the purpose of aiding in the construction of the canal will be designated.

As the second section of the act of 1827 does not contemplate that any selection of the alternate sections should be made until "the route of the said canal shall be located and agreed upon by the said State," and as I do not know of any law which will authorize the general suspension from sale of all lands within five miles on each side of the Miami, I do not consider myself as being authorized to issue any directions by which those lands could be legally withdrawn from entry.

I am, &c.

ELIJAH HAYWOOD.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, Indiana, Secretary's Office, April 27, 1833.

SIR: Your favor of the 13th instant to his excellency the governor of this State, requesting to have transmitted to you authenticated copies of the resolutions of the State of Ohio, and of a portion of the laws of Indiana, relative to the Wabash and Erie canal, and that of a subsequent date, informing him that copies of the Ohio resolutions had been forwarded to you from that State, have been received. I have the honor to forward to you printed copies of the acts of Indiana for the years 1829 and 1830, in which, at page 13 of each volume, you will find laws in relation to the canal, and embracing those parts of which you desired copies.

It is confidently believed, when this subject shall have been duly considered, that the suspension, for the time being, of the sales of the lands bordering on the line of the canal, in the State of Ohio, will be but an act of justice on the part of the general government toward Indiana. Permit me, therefore, to solicit to this subject that attention which its importance to Indiana demands, and to assure you of the respect and esteem with which I have the honor to be, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

WM. SHEETS.

Hon. ELIJAH HAYWOOD, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

An extract from "An Act concerning the Wabash and Miami canal, passed by the legislature of Indiana, and approved, January 23, 1829.

"SEC. 4. That the line of the said contemplated canal, as surveyed and marked and platted, by the engineer of the United States, as the same now stands, altered by the commissioners of the State of Indiana, as by them surveyed, marked, and platted, the field notes and plats of all said surveys are now in the office of the secretary of this State, be and the same is hereby, for the time being, adopted and established as the line of said canal, subject, however, to such alterations as the chief engineer, who may be employed by the State of Indiana to superintend the construction of said canal, may find it necessary for the interest of the State to make.

"SEC. 5. That so soon as the lands on said canal which were donated to the State of Indiana, by the act of Congress of the 2d March, 1827, for the purpose of aiding the State in the construction of said canal, shall be surveyed, said commissioners shall proceed to and shall select said lands agreeably to the true intent and meaning of the aforesaid act of Congress, omitting all reservations made by the treaty previous to the passage of said act of Congress, and make five complete plats, maps and descriptions of said lands, showing the numbers, townships, ranges, and other necessary descriptions, together with the aforesaid reservations, if any, which would have fallen to the State, had no such reservation been made, and shall immediately forward one of said plats to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, and one to each of the offices of secretary, auditor, and treasurer of state, and retain in their own office the other."

An extract from "An act providing means to construct the portion of the Wabash and Erie canal, within the State of Indiana," approved, January 28, 1830.

"SEC. 1. Be it enacted by the general assembly of the State of Indiana, That the board of commissioners of the Wabash and Erie canal shall continue to consist of three members, to be appointed by joint ballot of the general assembly, to hold their respective offices three years, subject to removal by joint resolution of the senate and house of representatives; and any vacancy in said board, happening in recess, shall be filled by appointment of the governor, until the end of the next ensuing session of the legislature, at which it shall be filled as above. Each of such commissioners shall, before entering upon his duties, take an oath, well and faithfully to execute the same; which, together with a penal bond, of like amount, condition and operation, as required by an act entitled, "An act concerning the Wabash and Miami canal," approved, January 23, 1829, shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state, and which bond shall be renewed, with additional security, when required by the treasurer of state, or a majority of the board of which he is a member; a failure to do which shall forfeit the said office.

"SEC. 2. That the said board of commissioners shall have the general superintendence of the land accruing to this State, under an act of Congress of March 2, 1827, selected under the act above named, of January 23, 1829; and a majority of the board shall form a quorum for the transaction of business; and they shall meet and adjourn from time to time at any time and place they think proper, and may employ such aid as may be necessary to enable them to discharge the duties imposed by this act.

"SEC. 4. That the said board is hereby authorized and directed to finally adjust with the general government, the selection of the lands accruing to the State by the act of Congress, above named, and to subdivide the same, if not done previously by the United States, by quarter-sections and fractions. They shall proclaim a sale thereof, in half quarter-sections, by three months' notice in the State Gazette and Indiana Journal, newspapers in this State, in the National Intelligencer, the United States Telegraph, in one paper in the cities of Boston, Albany, New York, Rochester, and Buffalo, Philadelphia, Harrisburgh, and Pittsburgh, Pa., and Richmond, Virginia; and in one of each of the States of Vermont, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Delaware, North and South Carolina, and in four papers in Ohio, two in Kentucky, and two in Tennessee; which sale shall take place on the first Monday in October next, at such place, on or near the line of the canal, as they may select. In all cases, when the commissioners superintending the sale become satisfied of the existence of a combination between purchasers, to cause any tract or tracts to sell for a less price than would otherwise be obtained, authority is hereby given to said commissioners, to bid off all such tracts, on behalf of the State, and to note the same when advertising the next semi-annual sale, as particularly worthy of public attention, and again offer all such to purchasers as before.

"SEC. 5. That the said board, previous to such sale, shall select and reserve a sufficient quantity of land, at appropriate sites, and in suitable tracts, for timber, stone, or other materials for the canal, and for the proper location of locks; and a general reservation shall be made, on the north and south sides of the Wabash river, from the mouth of Eel river, to the probable southern termination of the canal, in all lands sold, of a right to enter thereon, and construct the canal, as may be hereafter deemed expedient by the general assembly, and they shall reserve to the State of Indiana all benefit of water-power created by the construction of the canal.

"SEC. 6. ———— Provided, however, That no sale of any part of said lands donated to Indiana, as aforesaid, shall, at any time, be made, or take effect, at a less price per acre, than is required for Congress lands at the time of such sale."

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, May 7, 1833.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of the 27th ultimo, with printed copies of the acts of Indiana passed in 1829 and 1830.

On the 18th ultimo, Governor Noble was advised of the views of this office upon the subject of the proposed extension of the Wabash canal, from the Indiana line to the Maumee bay.

I am, &c. ELIJAH HAYWARD.

WILLIAM SHEETS, Esq., Secretary of State, Indianapolis, Ia.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, June 20, 1833.

GENTLEMEN: I enclose for your information a copy of a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, dated the 14th instant, and copies of my letters of the 17th instant to the land officers at Wapaukonetta and Bucyrus, directing them to reserve from entry all the lands within five miles on each side of the Miami river, from the Indiana State line to the town of Perrysburgh, which appears by the map to be the termination of the canal route as surveyed by Mr. Stansberry.

I am, &c. JNO. M. MOORE, Acting Commissioner.

No. 10.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, June 17, 1833.

SIR: Herewith you will receive a copy of a letter dated the 14th instant, from the Secretary of the Treasury, upon the subject of the application by the governor of the State of Indiana, to have all the lands within five miles on each side of the Miami of Lake Erie reserved from sale, under the provisions of the act of Congress of the 2d of March, 1827.

The route of the canal corresponds very nearly with that of the Miami river, from its termination at the town of Perrysburg to the western line of your land district; and in conformity to the decision of the Secretary of the Treasury, you are hereby directed to reserve from sale all lands within five miles on each side of the Miami river, between the points above mentioned, until further orders. You will observe, however, that the restriction does not apply to applications to purchase lands within those limits under the provisions of the laws granting pre-emption rights to certain individuals.

I am, &c. JNO. M. MOORE, Acting Commissioner.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, June 14, 1833.

SIR: Having fully considered the correspondence which you have laid before me in relation to a request from the governor of Indiana for a suspension from sale of the lands, within the State of Ohio, through which the canal to connect the waters of the Wabash with those of Lake Erie will probably pass, I am of opinion that it is advisable to comply with the request.

From these communications, and especially that of the canal commissioners, it appears that the probable line of the canal will be that marked out by Mr. Stansberry, one of the United States engineers, in 1829, a copy of which is represented to have been deposited in the office of the secretary of state at Indianapolis, and in the War Department at Washington. I have, therefore, to request, that, after obtaining a copy of it, you will instruct the officers of the land districts through which it will pass, to reserve, from both public sale and private entry, the lands within five miles on each side of that line. This, however, is not to be understood as interfering with pre-emption rights within that limit.

You have correctly decided that the particular lands to which the State will be entitled cannot be ascertained until the route of the canal shall have been located and agreed upon. Yet an arrangement of this kind seems necessary in the mean time to secure for the canal the aid which was intended by Congress; and, as a similar course was adopted in 1827 in regard to Indiana, and in 1828 in regard to Ohio, the department has not hesitated to adopt it on the present occasion.

In informing the governor of this decision, I will request that the route of the canal may be located and agreed on by the State, as early as practicable.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant, W. I. DUANE, Secretary of the Treasury.

COMMISSIONER of the General Land Office.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, June 17, 1833.

SIR: Herewith you will receive a copy of a letter dated the 14th inst., from the Secretary of the Treasury, upon the subject of the application by the governor of the State of Indiana, to have all the lands within five miles of the proposed canal down the Miami of Lake Erie, reserved from sale under the provisions of the act of Congress of the 2d of March, 1827.

The route of the canal corresponds very nearly with that of the Miami river; and in conformity to the decision of the Secretary of the Treasury, you are hereby directed to reserve from sale all lands within five miles, on each side of the Miami river, until further orders. You will observe, however, that the restriction does not apply to applications to purchase lands within those limits, under the provisions of the laws granting pre-emption rights to certain individuals.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, October 29, 1833.

SIR: My attention having been called to a decision of the department, directing that certain lands bordering on the line of the proposed canal connecting the waters of the Wabash with those of Lake Erie, should be reserved from sale—which lands, or a part of them, are understood to be embraced in those which are to be offered at public sale at the land offices at Wapaukonetta and Bucyrus, in December next—I have to request that you will instruct the land officers in the respective districts to withhold the lands in question from sale or entry, according to the instructions contained in the letter from this department dated 14th day of June last.

I make this communication with the approbation of the President.

I am, respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

R. B. TANEY, Secretary of the Treasury.

COMMISSIONER of the General Land Office.

No. 13.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, October 31, 1833.

SIR: In reference to the subject of your letter of the 29th inst., I have the honor to represent that the instructions issued to the land officers at Wapaukonetta and Bucyrus, in pursuance of the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury of 14th June last, to which you refer, are intended to require the reservation from private entry of all lands within five miles of each side of the Maumee river, which were public lands at the time of the grant to Indiana for the construction of the canal, in the year 1827. All the lands on the Maumee river have long since been proclaimed for sale, with the exception of two Indian reserves (Ottawas) amounting to 28,741 acres, lying on the north side of that river, which, agreeably to the stipulations of the treaty of 1831, under which the United States acquired the title thereto, are to be "sold to the highest bidder in the manner of selling the public lands," and after deducting therefrom a certain specified rate per acre, the balance is granted to discharge the debts of the Indians, and the overplus, if any, to be paid to them in money, or under certain circumstances stated in the treaty, such overplus is to be invested by the President, and five per centum allowed them as an annuity. Hence you will perceive that no lands have been proclaimed for sale at the two offices aforesaid, which the government has not bound itself to offer for sale under treaty stipulations, whereby increased advantages may accrue to the Indians.

Inasmuch, however, as the circumstances growing out of the treaty with the Ottawas could not have been anticipated and provided for at the time of the grant to Indiana, I would beg leave to recommend that the public sale be permitted to take place agreeably to the terms of the proclamation, but that no private entries of land be permitted to take place within the reserves, thereafter, until Congress shall have had time to act upon this subject.

The treaty will be found in the pamphlet laws of 1st session, 22d Congress. (Appendix, page 56. See Article 12.) The enclosed diagram will show the lines of reservation from sale intended under the instruction of the 14th June last.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

Hon. R. B. TANEY, Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, November 2, 1833.

SIR: I have received your letter of the 31st ultimo. Concurring in the opinion that by the treaty with the Ottawas, the government is under an obligation to expose the lands thereby ceded to public sale; yet, taking into view that no serious inconvenience can result from a postponement of the sales advertised to be held in December next, and that the governor of Indiana has been advised of the intention to suspend the sale of the lands bordering on the line of the canal, and which, it appears, embraces a part of that cession, I think it advisable that there shonld be no proceeding inconsistent with that intention until after the termination of the ensuing session of Congress.

I am, respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

R. B. TANEY, Secretary of the Treasury.

COMMISSIONER of the General Land Office.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, November 2, 1833.

GENTLEMEN: I have been instructed by the Secretary of the Treasury, with the approbation of the President, to direct you to withhold from the public sale advertised to take place at your office, on the first Monday of December next, such portion of the Ottawa reserve, on the Maumee, as falls within the grant of five miles to the State of Indiana, on the line of the canal to connect the waters of the Wabash with those of Lake Erie.

You will, therefore, act accordingly. Enclosed is a copy of the letter of the Secretary.

I am, &c.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1440. [1ST SESSION.

LAND CLAIMS IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 16, 1836.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 15, 1836.

SIR: In compliance with the provisions of the 2d section of the act of 6th February, 1835, I have the honor to transmit the report of the register and receiver of the land office at Ouachita, Louisiana, made in pursuance of said act; accompanied by the opinion of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, touching the validity of the claims therein referred to.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. the SPEAKER of the House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 12, 1836.

SIR: I have the honor to submit herewith a letter, dated the 9th ultimo, from the register of the land office at Ouachita, Louisiana, transmitting the reports of the register and receiver of that land office upon two claims, numbered 1 and 4, under the provisions of the act of Congress of the 6th of February, 1835, entitled, "An act for the final adjustment of claims to land in the State of Louisiana;" and in relation thereto, beg leave to make the following remarks:

No. 1. This claim was filed by the legal representatives of Pierre and Julien Besson, brothers, with the register of the land office at Opelousas, for examination, under the provisions of the act of the 11th of May, 1820; who entered the same in his report of the 1st of October, 1825, as claim B, No. 67, and observed that, "in this claim there are not sufficient, indeed no data, in the office to test the genuineness of the documents filed herein; without knowing even that there was ever such an officer at the post of Natchitoches, as Lieutenant Governor De Mezier, and in the absence of any oral testimony, this claim cannot, for the present, be recommended for confirmation. As it bears marks of some authenticity, and as it would be unjust to condemn it without allowing the claimants further time to substantiate it, which it may be in their power to do, it is therefore recommended that a further time be given to the claimants for that purpose."

By the additional testimony now produced in support of this claim, it would appear that upon examining the archives in the office of the parish judge of Natchitoches, it is found that De Mezier acted as lieutenant-governor at that post during the year 1770, and that his signature to the concession seems to be genuine.

No. 4. In this case the entry is made by John Sibley, as the assignee of Louis Tregarie, in virtue of a settlement made by the said Louis: the confirmation of it, under certain restrictions, is, however, recommended to be made to Tregarie, his heirs and assigns. The notice of Mr. Sibley states the claim to be on the east side of Red river, and as being bounded below by the lands of Athanaze De Mezier, and above by public lands. One of the witnesses identifies the land as being on the "bayou Cypree," and another one states it to be adjoining to that of Athanaze De Mezier. By a note from P. Barry, accompanying the report, it is stated, that the land now claimed by Mr. Sibley, has been already confirmed by the United States to Augustine, (a free negro,) and to John Pierre, in township 10 north, of range 7 west, and by the enclosed copy of part of the plat of that township, as returned to this office by the surveyor general, it will be seen that the land on the east side of Red river, situate adjoining and immediately above the claim of A. De Mezier, and embracing both sides of Cypress bayou, has been surveyed as the confirmed claims of the said Augustine and John Pierre; and that therefore the land now claimed by Mr. Sibley, and the confirmation of which is thus conditionally recommended, is not part of the public domain.

With great respect, sir, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

LAND OFFICE, Ouachita, Louisiana, January 9, 1836.

SIR: We enclose the claims Nos. 1 and 4, with the proof, and our report upon the same. Several others are recorded, but in so imperfect a state that no decision can be made. Further time is therefore allowed to obtain proofs and documents in relation to them.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. M. A. HAMBLEN, Register.

Hon. ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

No. 1.

LAND OFFICE, Ouachita, Louisiana, December 24, 1835.

John W. Butler, of the province of Natchitoches, in the State of Louisiana, claims a tract of land in said parish, containing thirty arpens in front, with the ordinary depth of forty arpens, equal to 1015.54 superficial American acres, situated at a place called "L'Ecor Rouge, de la Prarie aux Oies," and designated as "Boné dún coté par le bayou de l'Ecor Rouge et de l'autre par celui nonemé Dourbeaux or Bourbeaux."

The present claimant represents, that he is the assignee, by regular transfer, of the legal heirs and representatives of Pierre and Julien Besson, deceased, and produces a paper purporting to be the requete of Pierre Besson and Julien Besson, addressed to Athanase de Mezier, then commandant or lieutenant governor of the post of Natchitoches, &c., dated the 25th of February, 1770, to which is subjoined the act of said De Mezier, authorizing the said Pierre and Julien Besson to take possession of, and occupy, said tract of land, for the purpose set forth in said requete. On the 30th of December, 1820, Prudhomme fils notified the register of the land office for the western district of Louisiana, at Opelousas, of the claim of Pierre and Julien Besson, brothers, and, in consequence of that notice, the commissioners of that office made a report, on the first day of October, 1825, recommending that further time be allowed the claimants to establish their title. Since then, the act of adjudication to John W. Butler, at the sale of the succession in community between John Baptiste Besson, deceased, and his widow, Marie Belasaire Ris, the conveyance from François Besson to John W. Butler, the testimony of Pierre Trichell, the certificate of Fernando Gayoso, and the official certificate of C. E. Greneaux, judge of the parish of Natchitoches, have been added. By an endorsement on the file of these papers, it also appears, that the same had been, at the last session of Congress, referred to the committee of that body on private land claims, but not acted upon. We have given these papers an attentive examination, and, considering that the said Pierre and Julien Besson may have been, for a long lapse of years, under the Spanish government, and since, under that of the United States, in the uninterrupted possession and enjoyment of said land, and that great injustice might be done to them, their heirs, or assigns, we are of opinion that the claim should be allowed; but as it is not sufficiently shown that Jean Baptiste and François Besson were such legal heirs, we would suggest, if such shall be the will of Congress, that the confirmation be in the name of Pierre and Julien Besson, their heirs, or assigns. The papers, such as they came to us, are therefore respectfully submitted.

JNO. M. A. HAMBLEN, Register.
BAN. EASTIN, Receiver.

NOTICE.

To the Register and Receiver of the Land Office at Ouachita, acting as a board of commissioners, under an act of Congress, entitled, "An act for the final adjustment of claims to land in the State of Louisiana," approved February 6, 1835:

John W. Butler, of the parish of Natchitoches, and State of Louisiana, gives notice that, by regular transfers, copies of which are hereunto annexed, he is the assignee of the heirs and legal representatives of Pierre and Julien Besson, deceased, to the tract or parcel of land situate in the parish of Natchitoches, at a place called L'Ecor Rouge, of the prairie Aux Oies, containing about thirty arpens front, bounded on one side by the bayou of L'Ecor Rouge, and on the other by a bayou called Dourbeaux, about six leagues above the post of Natchitoches, which land was conceded to the said Pierre and Julien Besson, brothers, on their petition, by Athanaze De Mezier, on the 25th day of February, 1770, who was, at that time, lieutenant governor of the post of Natchitoches, all which will more fully appear by reference to the said petition and concession hereto annexed, and made part of this notice.

The said John W. Butler begs leave further to represent, that, on the 20th day of December, 1820, the representatives of Pierre and Julien Besson filed a notice of this claim with the register of the land office at Opelousas, as will appear by reference to the receipt and certificate of Levin Wales, hereto annexed. That afterward the said register made a report, by which it appears that the only reason for not immediately reporting favorably on said claim was, that there were no data in their office by which the genuineness of the signature of De Mezier could be tested, and that they did not know of the existence of such an officer as lieutenant governor of the post of Natchitoches, but they say that, as the acts have some appearance of authenticity, they accord further time to the claimants to furnish the proof necessary for making out their title; all which will more fully appear by reference to a copy of said report herewith filed and specially referred to.

In answering these objections, the claimant has first examined the parish judge's office in Natchitoches, in company with the parish judge and the other witness, whose testimony, with that of the parish judge, is hereto annexed, and found that the signature of De Mezier to the concession is genuine. Secondly, that as the office of lieutenant governor was one known to the Spanish government, the claimant refers to the testimony taken by V. King and D. L. Todd, and found at page 1042 of the Appendix of the Land Laws, to which reference is made, and that there was such an officer at the post of Natchitoches, the claimant refers the commissioners to "documents relative to Louisiana and Florida," received at the department of State, from the Secretary of State of Spain, through the Hon. C. P. Van Ness, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary at Madrid, a copy of which has no doubt been received at your office; and special reference is made to document No. 2, page 2, of said documents, and to the testimony of the parish judge of Natchitoches, relative to the official character in which De Mezier acted. It will be remarked by the commissioners, that the concession was made in February, 1770, and the recommendation of O'Reilley, that the granting of lands should, in future, be confined to the governor alone, is August, 1770.

The habitation and cultivation of this land by the Bessons, will be found proved by the annexed testimony of Durcey, Trichell, and others.

The premises considered, the said John W. Butler prays that his title to said land be confirmed by the said register and receiver, and that an order of survey may issue, and his title be made complete according to law. And as in duty bound, &c.

J. W. BUTLER.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Natchitoches:

Before me, the undersigned authority, personally came and appeared Pierre Trichell, of the parish of Natchitoches, and State of Louisiana, who, being duly sworn by me, deposes and says that he is now about fifty-five years of age, and that he has always lived in this parish, at a place called Compte, about twelve miles from the land now belonging to John W. Butler, and which he acquired of the family of Bessons; that it is to his knowledge that Pierre Besson and Julien Besson, brothers, lived on the land mentioned in John W. Butler's notice to the register and receiver of the land office at Ouachita; that affiant was a small boy, can't say how old, but the said Bessons were his uncles, and he visited them on said tract of land, in company with affiant's father and mother; that they continued to live on the land until the death of Pierre; Julien then continued to live on the land, and cultivated it for many years after the death of his brother Pierre. Affiant had always understood that the Bessons were in possession of said land, in virtue of title given by Athanase de Mezier, who was in authority under the Spanish government. Affiant must have known them on the land, he is certain, twenty years before the 20th day of December, 1803. Pierre Besson died many years ago, and Julien died about 1818; since the death of Julien, Jean Baptist Besson, the son of Julien, has lived on and cultivated the land. The land was always considered, and sold by the parish judge, as part of the estate of Julien Besson. In old times, the Bessons had their vacherie on this land; since that there has been much land cleared and cultivated by both the old and young Bessons.

PIERRE TRICHELL.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 15th day of April, 1835.

I. HOLMES, Justice of the Peace

PARISH OF NATCHITOCHES, State of Louisiana.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Natchitoches:

I, the undersigned, parish judge of the parish aforesaid, do hereby certify that I am well acquainted with Pierre Trichell, of this parish, and that his testimony is entitled to credit. I do further certify that Isaac Holmes, whose name is subscribed to the within affidavit, is now, and was at the time of signing the same, a justice of the peace, duly commissioned, and acting in and for the said parish, and that full faith and credit are due to all his official acts.

Given under my hand and official seal, at Natchitoches, this sixth day of May, A. D. 1835.

[N. B.—The annexed papers were sent to Congress, with claimant's petition, but the land offices being opened again, the papers were returned.]

Monsieur ATHANAZE DE MEZIERES, Capitaine d'Infanterie, Lieutenant Gouverneur, Juge Civil, ou Criminal du Natchitoches et les dependances.

Supplient humblement Pierre et Julien Besson, freres, habitans en ce poste, disant qu'ayant entréux plusieurs bestieaux, lesquels diminuent plutot que d'augmenter, en ce poste, à cause de la difficulte qu'il y a de les pouvoir garder ils aurarient formé de dessein de faire un vacherie; et pour cet effet ils ne trouvent pas d'endroits plus propre pour leur projet qu'un endroit situé à l'Ecor Rouge de la prairie aux Oïes, contenant environs trente arpens de face en haut de ce post à six lieues; borné d'un coté par le bayou de l'Ecor Rouge, et de l'autre par celui nommé Baurbeaux. Ce consideré Monsieur, les suppliants recours a vous afin qu'il vous plaise leur accorder la concession de trente arpens de terre ou environ, de face c'y dessus designés, sur la profondeur ordinaire, pour s'y mettre tout de suite dessus. Ils ne cessesont de faire des voeux pour la conservation de votre santé et prosperités.

Aux Natchitoches, le 25 Fevrier, 1770.

PIERRE BESSON.

ATHANAZE DE MEZIERES, Capitainè d'Infanterie, Lieutenant Gouverneur du poste de Natchitoches et les dependances.

Vû la requête c'y avant nous permettons à Pierre et Julien Besson, freres, de s'etablir sur les trente arpens d'environs, de face sisé à l'endroit mentionné en la ditte requête, pour y placer leur bestieaux, conformement à leur exposé et aux conditions portés par les ordonances de sa majesté.

LAND OFFICE AT OPELOUSAS, State of Louisiana:

The foregoing is a true copy of the original requête and order of survey, on file in this office, in the claim reported by the register, (No. 67.) on the first of October, 1825.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto signed and affixed my private seal of office, this 11th day of October, A. D. 1834.

To the Register of the Land Office for the southwestern district of the State of Louisiana:

The legal representatives of Pierre and Julien Besson, brothers, give notice that, pursuant to the second section of an act of Congress, entitled "An act supplementary to the several acts for the adjustment of land claims in the State of Louisiana," approved the 11th of May, 1820, they claim a tract of land containing twelve hundred superficial arpens, to wit: thirty arpens front, with the depth of forty arpens, at a place called Ecore Rogue, of the Goose prairie, about six leagues above the post of Natchitoches; bounded on one side by the Bayou Ecore Rouge, and on the other by that called Dourbeaux. The claimants file herewith a requête for the said land, made by the said Pierre and Julien Besson, on the 25th of February, 1770, to which is annexed the concession of the same date, made by Mr. Athanaze de Mezier, at that time lieutenant governor and commandant for the post of Natchitoches.

Knowing the justice of this claim, they hope it will be confirmed by the honorable Congress of the United States.

For the claimants,

PRUDHOMME, Fils.

OPELOUSAS, December 30, 1820.

LAND OFFICE AT OPELOUSAS, State of Louisiana:

The foregoing is a true copy of the original notice on file in my office.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto signed and affixed my private seal of office, this 10th day of October, A. D. 1834.

B—No. 67.

The legal representatives of Pierre and Julien Besson, brothers, claim a tract of land containing twelve hundred superficial arpens, equal to 1,015.54 American acres, at a place called Ecore Rouge, in the Goose prairie, about six leagues above the post of Natchitoches, bounded on one side by the Bayou Ecore Rouge, and on the other by that called Dourbeaux. The claimants file herewith a requête for the said land, made by the said Pierre and Julien Besson, on the 25th February, 1770, soliciting a grant of the above-described tract of land, to which is subjoined the concession of the same date, and granting the said as solicited, made by Mr. Athanase de Mezier, at that time lieutenant governor and commandant for the post of Natchitoches. In this claim there are not sufficient, indeed, no data in the office to test the genuineness of the documents filed herein; without knowing even that there was ever such an officer at the post of Natchitoches as Lieutenant Governor De Mezier, and in the absence of any oral testimony, this claim cannot for the present be recommended for confirmation. As it bears marks of some authenticity, and as it would be unjust to condemn it without allowing the claimants further time to substantiate it, which it may be in their power to do, it is therefore recommended that a further time be given to the claimants for this purpose.

LAND OFFICE AT OPELOUSAS, State of Louisiana:

The foregoing is a true copy of the original report, made, among others, by the register of this office, to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, on the 1st day of October, 1825.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto signed and affixed my private seal of office, this 10th day of October, A. D. 1834.

Sale at auction of the property belonging to the succession of Jean Baptiste Besson, late of the parish of Natchitoches, in community with his widow Marie Belasire Ris, made on this third day of February, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four, by me, the undersigned parish judge and ex-officio auctioneer, in and for the parish of Natchitoches, in the State of Louisiana, in pursuance of an order of the court of probates of the said parish, under the following terms and conditions, to wit: The movable property payable on the 1st of May, 1835; the immovable property payable in three equal annual instalments, the first to become due on the 1st of May, 1835. Purchasers will give their notes, with security, in solida, to the satisfaction of the testamentary executor, and mortgage on the immoveables.

Property belonging exclusively to Jean Baptiste Besson's succession.

One undivided half of a tract of land, situate in the said parish, on the bayou of Compte, containing about six hundred arpens superficial measurement, at a place called Ecore Rouge, bounded on one side by the Bayou Ecore Rouge, and on the other by the Bayou Dourbeaux, adjudicated to J. W. Butler, B. B. Breazele, security for the sum of sixteen hundred and seventy dollars $1,670 00

When, there being nothing more belonging to the said succession to be offered for sale, I have closed the present sale, and signed the same with François Besson, the testamentary executor, and the undersigned witnesses, on the day and year first above written.

FRANCOIS BESSON.

Witnesses: Jn. Prat, Pierre Trichell, C. E. Greneaux, parish judge, and auctioneer ex officio.

I hereby certify the above and foregoing to be a true extract of the original on file and of record in my office.

Given under my hand and seal of office, on this eleventh day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four.

[L. S.] C. E. GRENEAUX, Parish Judge.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Natchitoches:

Be it known, that this day, before me, Charles E. Greneaux, parish judge and ex officio notary public in and for the parish of Natchitoches, State of Louisiana, aforesaid, duly commissioned and sworn, personally came and appeared Mr. François Besson, of the same parish, who declared that for the consideration hereinafter expressed, he doth, by these presents, grant, bargain, sell, convey, transfer, assign, and set over, with a full guaranty against all troubles, debts, mortgages, claims, evictions, donations, alienations, or other incumbrances whatsoever, unto John Walter Butler, also of the same parish, his heirs and assigns, one undivided half of a certain tract or parcel of land situate and being in the said parish, the whole of which contains twelve hundred arpens, superficial measurement, heretofore held in common between the present vendor and John Baptiste Besson, his deceased brother, and being the same tract of land which was granted to Pierre and Julien Besson; bounded on one side by the Bayou Ecore Rouge, and on the other by the Bayou Bourbeaux, near the place called Goose prairie; to have and to hold the said undivided tract of land unto the said John Walter Butler, his heirs and assigns, to their proper use and behoof for ever. And the said François Besson, for himself, his heirs, and administrators, to the said John Walter Butler, his heirs and assigns, shall and will warrant, and for ever defend, against the lawful claims of all persons whomsoever, by these presents. And the said vendor doth moreover subrogate the said purchaser to all the rights and actions of warrantee which he has or may have, against his own vendor, or against the vendors of his vendor, fully authorizing said purchaser to exercise the said rights and actions, in the same manner as he himself might or could have done.

The purchaser declared that he waived and dispensed with the certificate of the conservator respecting the mortgages which may exist on the said tract of land.

The above sale is made for and in consideration of the sum of sixteen hundred and twenty dollars, for which the said purchaser has this day given his three several promissory notes, each for the sum of five hundred and fifty-six dollars and two thirds; the first payable on the first of May, eighteen hundred and thirty-five; the second on the first of May, eighteen hundred and thirty-six; and the third and last on the first of May, eighteen hundred and thirty-seven. All of which notes are signed by Blount Baker Breazele, as security in solido, and are duly attested by me, said judge and notary, according to law. And in order to secure the true and punctual payment of said notes at maturity, the purchaser hereby mortgages and specially affects the above sold undivided half of tract of land.

Thus done and passed in my office, in the parish of Natchitoches aforesaid, in the presence of Daniel R. Hopkins and Chrysostome Vascocu, witnesses, of lawful age, and domiciliated in this parish, who hereunto sign their names, together with the said parties, and me, the said notary, on this twenty-eighth day of April, in the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four.

NATCHITOCHES, December 2, 1834.

Personally appeared before me, the undersigned, a justice of the peace in and for the parish of Natchitoches, Louis Closeau and Pierre Trichell, the former sixty-eight years, and the latter fifty-four, both of them born and raised in the parish of Natchitoches. Both of them, being duly sworn according to law, made oath that they remember well Athanaze De Mezier, sr.; that he was commandant and lieutenant governor. Mr. Trichell only recollects that he was commandant of this parish; and both of the affiants declare that they know that Pierre Besson and Julian Besson, both of them, occupied what is called the Ecore Rouge and Bayou Bourbeaux. They both declare that the Bessons occupied the said place forty years ago.

LOUIS CLOSEAU,
P. TRICHELL.

Subscribed and sworn to, at Natchitoches, the 2d of December, 1834, before me, JOHN SIBLEY, Justice of the Peace.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Natchitoches:

I, Charles E. Greneaux, parish judge of the parish aforesaid, do hereby certify that I am well acquainted with Louis Closeau and Pierre Trichell, whose names appear above; that they are both respectable citizens of this parish; that their testimony is entitled to full faith and credit, and that their signatures hereto are genuine. I further certify that John Sibley, who has certified to the within affidavit, was, at the time he signed the same, and is now, an acting justice of the peace, duly commissioned and sworn, in and for the said parish; that full faith and credit are due to all his official acts, and that his signature hereto is genuine.

Given under my hand and official seal, at Natchitoches, this 17th day of December, 1834.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Natchitoches:

I do certify that I examined, with Judge Greneaux, the papers in his office for the year 1770, and that we found many executed by Athanaze De Mezier, and among others, a proclamation dated the 21st of January, 1770, and signed by Athanaze De Mezier, as lieutenant governor of the post of Natchitoches and its dependencies. And further, I certify that, on comparing the signatures at the foot of the concession of land to the Bessons brothers, of a tract of thirty arpens front, at the Ecore Rouge of the prairie aux Oies, with the signature to the aforesaid proclamation, and other acts of said De Mezier, I am of opinion that the signature to the concession is genuine.

No. 4.

To the Register and Receiver of the Land Office at Ouachita, acting as a board of commissioners, under an act of Congress, entitled, "An act for the final adjustment of claims to lands in the State of Louisiana," approved February 6, 1835:

John Sibley, of the parish of Natchitoches and State of Louisiana, gives notice that he is the assignee of Louis Tregarie, late of said State and parish, who, on the 20th day of December, 1803, and for ten consecutive years prior to that date, had been in possession of a tract of land containing five arpens front by forty in depth, situated on the northeast side of Red river, and in the grand Ecore settlement, about seven miles from the Post of Natchitoches, the said land being bounded below by lands of Athanase de Mezier, and above by public lands. That the said Louis Tregarie continued to hold and occupy said land until the ninth day of September, one thousand eight hundred and eleven, at which time he sold the same to the present claimant; that the claimant has continued to hold the same from the said 9th day of September, 1811, until the present time, and is still in possession.

The premises considered, the said John Sibley prays that his title, as assignee of Louis Tregarie to said land, may be confirmed and perfected; he prays for all such other and further relief in the premises as justice, equity, and law will allow, and as in duty bound, &c.

JOHN SIBLEY.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Natchitoches:

Before me, the undersigned authority, personally came and appeared François Durcy, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that he is about sixty-five years of age; that he has lived in the parish of Natchitoches since the year seventeen hundred and ninety-seven; that he was well acquainted with Louis Tregarie; that when witness first came to Natchitoches, Tregarie lived on the land mentioned in John Sibley's notice, on the other side of this paper written; that Tregarie continued to live on and cultivate said land from the time witness first knew him, in 1797, until he sold to John Sibley, in 1811; that John Sibley has held the same by himself and one Louis Lamotte from the time of his purchase, in 1811, until the present moment; that, in 1797, the place had the appearance of an old settlement.

I. HOLMES, Justice of the Peace,
Parish of Natchitoches, State of Louisiana.

François Durcy further states, that he has a distinct recollection that, in conversation with Felix Trudeau, the commandant of the post of Natchitoches, under the Spanish government, that Trudeau said that Louis Tregarie had presented him a petition for land on the Bayou Cypre, between Campte and the Grand Ecore; that the said Trudeau told Tregarie to go and settle on the land, and he did so.

F. DURCY.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Natchitoches:

Before me, the undersigned authority, personally came and appeared Louis Geoffrois, of the parish of Natchitoches and State of Louisiana, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that he has been living in the parish of Natchitoches since 1808; that at that time he knew Louis Tregarie, generally called Quirrier; that the said Tregarie then lived on the land he afterward sold to John Sibley, and which is mentioned in the foregoing notice of said Sibley; that the place had, at that time, (1808,) the appearance of an old establishment, and that he was informed that Tregarie was the man who first settled it.

Before me, the undersigned authority, personally came and appeared Rosetti de Meziere, f. w. c., of the parish of Natchitoches and State of Louisiana, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that she is about forty-six years of age; that in her infancy she recollects Louis Tregarie, generally called Quirrier; that she recollects, because, when a small child, Tregarie lived within a short distance of her father's, and used to teach her songs and make much of her; she supposes she must have been about five years old at the time she speaks of; that Tregarie then lived on a tract of land adjoining to her father, Athanase De Meziere; the said land was afterward sold by Tregarie to Doctor Sibley, and Louis Lamotte now lives on it; it is the same mentioned in Doctor Sibley's notice. Witness recollects that Tregarie was living on said land long before the change of government. This land has always been, since the recollection of witness, in the possession of either Louis Tregarie, Doctor Sibley, or Louis Lamotte.

NATCHITOCHES, April 28, 1835.

DEAR SIR: Enclosed I send you the notice of Doctor John Sibley, with the evidence in support of his claim; should any further testimony be thought necessary, I would thank you to let me know. I hope, however, you will think what I have offered sufficient, for time and an unhealthy climate have taken off many who might have proved this claim.

I would thank you to let me know whether there is in your office any evidence of a claim to land, situated on the Rigolet du Bor Dieu, in favor of Jean Baptiste Trichell.

Please to send me by the bearer a certificate notice for Doctor Sibley.

I have the honor to be, dear sir, your obedient servant, FERNANDO GAYOSO.

JOSEPH FRIEND, Esq.

Memorandum for Doctor Hamblen and Judge Eastin.

I wish, gentlemen, to call your attention to the claim of John Sibley, for the land record in your book for report. You have seen the certificates and the report of the commissioners, confirmed by acts of Congress, I believe, in 1825. It was confirmed to Augustein, f. m. c., as appears on township plat 10, range 7 west; there is also another claim in the same situation, in the name of John Pierre. I purchased these claims of the heirs of Fleming and Irwin, who purchased of the original owners. I merely bought the land, paying them so much per acre for every acre they gave me undisputed title to; so the principal interest is in the heirs of Fleming and Irwin. There is a suit now pending at Natchitoches, Heirs of Fleming and Irwin vs. Lamotte, f. m. c.; and Sibley applies to make a title to affect the suit, as he has no color of title. The suit was continued last term on this ground.

Yours,

P. BARRY.

In this case there is no evidence before us of the ownership of John Sibley to the said land, save the oral testimony of his exparte witnesses. Therefore, we are of opinion that this claim should be confirmed to the said Tregarie, his heirs and assigns, whoever they may be, provided it does not interfere with the rights of any other person of previous date, the evidence of whose claim shall be in conformity with the established usages of the Spanish government, and confirmed by the proper authorities of the government of the United States; and provided also, that the said Louis Tregarie, or his legal representatives in his name, shall not have obtained a grant or donation of a similar nature at Opelousas, or some other land office of the United States.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1441. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 18, 1836.

Mr. CHAMBERS, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of William Baker, reported:

That they have had under consideration the same, and the evidence accompanying it. It is alleged, on the part of the petitioner, as son and heir of Gardner Baker, that said Gardner Baker did obtain from the proper Spanish authorities a concession or grant of a tract of land, in the then province of Florida, now the territory of the United States. From the evidence exhibited with the petition, it appears that on the 28th of April, 1804, there was conceded to said Gardner Baker five hundred and fifty acres of land, by White, governor of the said province of the Spanish government, in consideration that said Gardner had taken the oath of fidelity and vassalage to his Spanish Majesty, and professed his intention of transporting his family from New Providence, where they then resided, and dedicating himself to agriculture. This grant was thus predicated on the declared intention to cultivate the same, and in quantity made to correspond with his family, which by him was represented to consist of himself, wife, three children, and two slaves. It further appears that, on the 5th of May, 1804, there was granted by the same governor White to James Sampson and said Gardner Baker, on their petition, ten acres of land for a water saw-mill, on the river Miami, about six miles distant from its mouth. This grant was made on condition that they, the said Sampson and Baker, should build the said water saw-mill within the term of one year, or that the concession would be considered null and void. It is further alleged that said Gardner Baker died about the year 1829, without stating his residence at the time of his death, though it may be inferred to have been at the island of New Providence, as the power of attorney from Ann Sarah Baker, sister of said William, represents them as the surviving devisees of said Gardner Baker, late of the island of New Providence, house carpenter, deceased.

There is no evidence that said Gardner ever made any permanent settlement in the said province of Florida, or that he resided there for any length of time, or that he cultivated the lands conceded, by himself, family, or slaves, or that he ever constructed the proposed saw-mill. It is not even alleged that any part of his family were transported to said province. In the absence of all evidence to prove residence and cultivation of the land conceded, your committee cannot consider that the said Gardner would have had any claim to a confirmation of his grant from the Spanish authorities, had he even applied for it while Florida remained the property, and under the control and disposition of the Spanish government.

By the act of Congress of May 8, 1822, after the cession of Florida to the United States, it was required, that every person having claims to land under any patent, grant, concession, or order of survey, dated previous to January 24, 1818, which were valid under the Spanish government, should file with commissioners appointed by the same law to ascertain claims and titles to land within the Territory of Florida, their claim, setting forth particularly its situation and boundaries, &c.; and by the same law it was provided, that any claim not filed previous to the 31st May, 1823, shall be deemed and held to be void and of no effect; and by subsequent laws of Congress, permission to file said claims was extended to the 1st of November, 1825, with the provision that if not filed on or before that time, that said claim shall be held to be void and of no effect.

There is no evidence that said Gardner Baker, who was then living, filed his claim at any time with the commissioners, as required by the said recited acts of Congress. The petitioner alleges that his father and himself were both ignorant of any law requiring such claims to be presented to the said commissioners. Your committee cannot admit such alleged ignorance of the requisitions or laws of Congress to excuse or dispense with its requisitions, which, if allowed, would have made the law inoperative. The committee are therefore of opinion that the claim is not well founded, and that the petitioner is not entitled to the relief desired.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1442. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 18, 1836.

Mr. LAWLER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Louis Le Gras De Vobeceye and others, heirs and legal representatives of Robert Farmer, deceased, reported:

The petitioners set out in their petition that their ancestor, the said Robert Farmer, in his lifetime, and about the year 1764, purchased of Millon, a French subject, the tract of land in question, called the island, bounded on the south by the bayou of Marmott, on the north by the bayou Chatague, on the east by the river Mobile, and on the west by the junction of the said bayou with the said bayou Marmott, situate about a mile above or north of the city of Mobile, containing about three or four hundred acres, and that he (the ancestor of the petitioners) paid for the same fully what it was then worth; that the said Millon purchased the said land of one Prevost and his wife, in the year 1742; that Prevost purchased the same of one Joseph Brabant and his wife, in the year 1738, and who held it under a grant from the French government, which, through time and accident, has been lost. They further state that Robert Farmer, their ancestor, occupied it in his lifetime as a boat yard, and that he resided in Mobile until his death, which happened some time in or about the year 1781. That the right heirs of the said Robert Farmer were all born in America, and that some or all of them (your petitioners) resided in that part of Louisiana ceded to the United States by the French government, from the time of the death of their said ancestor, until the present day; and that the said Louis Le Gras De Vobeceye, who is one of the heirs, did reside in the town of Mobile, on the 15th day of April, 1813, when the United States took possession of that part of West Florida in which the land is situated, and that he has resided in the same place or its vicinity ever since, and still resides therein. They further state that the claim was presented to the commissioner appointed to adjust claims to lands in the district east of Pearl river, some time in the year 1813 or 1814, by the said Vobeceye on his own and their behalf, and having to trust to others to do his business, and being unacquainted with the proceedings of the said commissioners, and ignorant of the laws upon the subject, he rested under a full belief, until about four years ago, that the title to the said land was confirmed, and the more especially as the same has been in the immediate possession and occupation of the petitioners and their ancestor for upward of fifty years; that it was through the error and ignorance of the said Vobeceye, their agent, of the necessity of urging their claim with more vigilance, that it was not confirmed, until the time had elapsed when the commissioners had power to act upon it.

In support of the purchase of the within tract of land, the petitioners show a regular deed of sale from Joseph Barbant to Antoine Prevost, duly executed on the 22d April, 1738, and another from Prevost to a Mr. Millon, for the same land, dated the 17th December, 1742, and another from Millon to Robert Farmer, the ancestor of the petitioners, for the consideration of ninety dollars, dated the 3d day of August, 1764; all of which deeds and conveyances appear to be executed in due form, and regularly recorded in the proper offices or bureaus of the country, by the officers appointed to that trust, and which are properly certified by a notary public of Mobile, in the year 1831, after a due examination of the originals, and which appear to have been recognized and translated, and recorded in the book of the commissioner appointed by the United States to investigate titles to land in the district where the lands above mentioned lie, and whose certificate is duly exemplified by the register of the land office at St. Stephens, in the said district. The affidavit of Curtis Lewis, a witness in the case, shows that Robert Farmer, the ancestor, lived and died in Mobile, in or about the year 1781; that he occupied the land, or a part of it, for a boat-yard, until his death; that he devised it to his widow and children; that the family did then (in 1781) reside in this country, and have ever since resided in the United States or their territories, and a part of them in the neighborhood where the land lies; that Vobeceye, the agent of the heirs, paid off an execution which had been levied upon the land as the property of the heirs; that he saw the money paid; that the said land has always been considered the property of the said petitioners; that a part of the heirs of the said Farmer resided in Louisiana at the time of negotiating the treaty between the United States and France for the Louisiana country, and that all the heirs are citizens of the United States at this time, and that the said heirs have built a house on the premises.

The deposition of Dr. Gannard proves that, in 1822, he went with De Vobeceye to the island, and that he at that time had it in peaceable and quiet possession, on behalf of himself and the other heirs; that he always understood the property belonged to the heirs of Robert Farmer, and that he never heard of any claim set up for them until about eighteen months ago, he heard that some persons had attempted to throw over them some floating or pre-emption claims; that he knows as late as 1828, and thence until 1832, persons were used to obtain marine shells from the premises, and that they always applied to Mr. De Vobeceye for them; that he is perfectly acquainted with the situation of the land, and has often heard the old inhabitants of Mobile speak of it, and that they all agree in the fact, that it was of right the property of the said heirs.

The deposition of Henry V. Chamberlain shows, that he has lived in Mobile since 1814; that the land was always considered as the property of said heirs, and that it had been in their possession for many years before the change of government, several of whom now reside in that country; that he knew Mr. De Vobeceye, one of the heirs, in 1809; that he lived in Baton Rouge, a part of West Florida, and that he has seen him frequently since in Mobile and other places, and has no doubt of his having resided in that district ever since.

That the committee believe the case to be fairly made out by the documents accompanying it, all of which appear to have passed the scrutiny of public official inspection and supervision; that it is not only embraced by the equity of the acts of the 2d of March, 1805 and 1807, but is within the letter and spirit of the act of the 3d March, 1819, as these heirs have not owned and occupied the land prior to the 15th April, 1813, but have done so prior to the 20th December, 1803, and that they have always resided in the country. Wherefore your committee beg leave to report a bill.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1443. [1ST SESSION.

ON THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A NEW LAND DISTRICT IN ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 19, 1836.

Mr. CASEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of the citizens of Peoria and other counties, in the State of Illinois, praying the establishment of a new land district, reported:

The petitioners set forth, that the public lands in Peoria county, and its immediate neighborhood, lie in four different land districts, and, under the present regulations, have to be entered at four different land offices, the nearest of which is at Springfield, about sixty-five or seventy miles. The land office at Quincy, which embraces the county of Peoria in its district, is about one hundred and forty or one hundred and forty-five miles distant from the county seat of said county. The land office at Galena, which embraces the land immediately north of the county of Peoria, is about the same distance from the southern limits of that district. The western part of the Chicago district, which embraces the land nearest the eastern line of said county of Peoria, is almost about the same distance from the land office; so that all those who wish to enter land lying in that county or its vicinity, are subject to the toil and expense of a considerable journey, to reach the land office, and there, they state, that they are frequently delayed a long time on account of the multiplicity of business done at those offices. They, therefore, pray the establishment of an additional land district in that part of the country. The facts set forth in the petition, in relation to the remoteness of the land offices, being sustained by the map of the country, and the committee believing it to be the duty of the government to render every reasonable convenience and facility to the citizens, in the purchase of the lands of the United States, have agreed to report a bill.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1444. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 19, 1836.

Mr. HARRISON, of Missouri, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of John Whittsitt, reported:

The petitioner states that, "in the year 1823 or 1824, he went the security of one Alfred K. Stephens to William Carpenter, whereby the said Stephens bound himself with the petitioner as security, to make, or cause to be made, a good and sufficient transfer to a certificate for the northeast quarter of section four, township fifty, range twenty-five, containing one hundred and sixty-five and fifty hundredths acres of land; that said Stephens had bargained with one Abraham Jago for said certificate, but failed to pay for the same." The petitioner further represents that, for the purpose of complying with his covenant, and extricating himself from his liability, after many unsuccessful applications to said Stephens to assist him, he sent an agent about five hundred miles to the State of Kentucky, and, through him, paid to the said Jago the sum of two hundred and fifty-three dollars, being the balance which the said Stephens owed the said Jago for the said certificate, and thus procured the transfer to be made to the said Stephens; that, previous to procuring the above transfer, the said Carpenter commenced suit against the said Stephens and the petitioner, and that while the suit was pending, the petitioner tendered to the said Carpenter the said transfer, which was adjudged by the supreme court of the State of Missouri to be insufficient, for the want of a subscribing witness to the transfer from Martin Trapp, in whose name the land was originally entered, to the said Abraham Jago. The petitioner further represents that, during the pendency of the suit, the land in question became forfeited to the United States, and he believes there had been about ninety-five dollars paid for the land before the forfeiture. He further states, that he has paid about eighteen hundred dollars in the said case; that said Stephens became insolvent, left the country, and died; that Trapp, in whose name the land was entered, is also dead, and that the land has never been offered for sale since forfeiture. The petitioner prays that a law may be passed granting to him the right to said land, by his paying to the United States the balance of the money at the present price of the public lands, or to allow him the right of applying the aforesaid ninety-five dollars to the purchase of other lands.

The committee, believing that the claim of the petitioner is just and equitable, and that he is entitled to the relief prayed for, report the following bill.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1445. [1ST SESSION.

ON THE SALT LICK RESERVATIONS IN TENNESSEE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 19, 1836.

Mr. HUNTSMAN, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Tennessee settlers, reported:

The petitioners set forth in their petition, that they have been seated down in the actual cultivation and possession of the premises now occupied by them for twelve or fifteen years; these lands lie in the western district of Tennessee, and are comprehended in a tract of four miles square, on both sides of Sandy river, commonly called the Salt lick reservation. They pray to be allowed all the rights and benefits of occupancy and pre-emption, which has been secured under the laws of Tennessee to other persons similarly situated in the western district of Tennessee, who lived out of said reservation, and that they may be put upon an equality, in point of privileges and benefits, in every respect whatsoever. The committee have examined the facts upon which the prayers of the petitioners are based, and beg leave to state, that by the 4th article of the treaty of the 19th October, 1818, at Old Town, between the Chickasaw Indians and the United States, it was stipulated and agreed that the before-mentioned four miles square should be reserved for the use and benefit of the warriors and poor Indians, with this limitation and condition, to wit: "For the benefit of this reservation, as before recited, the trustees or agents are bound to lease the said reservation to some citizen or citizens of the United States, for a reasonable quantity of salt, to be paid annually to the said nation, for the use thereof. And that from and after two years from and after the ratification of this treaty, no salt made at the works on this reservation, shall be sold within the limits of the same for a higher price than one dollar per bushel of fifty pounds weight, and on failure of which, the lease shall be forfeited, and the reservation revert to the United States." In pursuance of the above article, James Brown and Levi Colbert, two of the principal chiefs, were appointed agents and trustees, and proceeded to lease the same, with the view of carrying the stipulations of the treaty into effect, in this behalf. But it seems that the expectations of all parties concerned proved to be illusory and deceptive, as there was no salt water procured within said reservation, from that time to this, and the objects in contemplation wholly failed, whereby the reservation reverted to the United States. The land, disconnected with the exceptions of procuring salt, was of an indifferent quality, taking it in the aggregate. It now remains for the government to take such steps as may be necessary, having in view a due regard to the cession act of North Carolina of 1789, and the compact between the United States, North Carolina, and Tennessee, in 1806, and the act of Congress, passed the 4th of April, 1818, entitled, "An act supplementary to an act, entitled an act to authorize the State of Tennessee to issue grants and perfect titles to certain lands therein described, and to settle the claims to the vacant and unappropriated lands within the same, passed the 18th of April, 1806." The first section of this act authorized the State of Tennessee to adopt such rules, regulations and restrictions, in regard to the entering and appropriating the lands secured by the treaty aforesaid, (which comprehends what is now called the western district of Tennessee,) as was then in force in Tennessee, or by similar laws thereto. In pursuance of this authority, the State of Tennessee, in opening the land offices for the purposes mentioned in said act, gave (as she had done before in several instances) rights of occupancy and pre-emption, to any person or persons who were seated down, on the 1st of September, 1819, in the actual occupation and cultivation of any piece of vacant and unappropriated land within this district of country, not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, as will more fully appear by reference to the land laws of Tennessee, Haywood and Cobb's Revisal, page 88 and section 9. This privilege conferred no other benefit than this, that if the settlers would procure a good and genuine warrant, and extinguish so much of the North Carolina claims as he wished to enter, that the office should be open to him to appropriate his warrant to his occupant claim sooner than it was opened for general entries. If he did not procure a warrant to appropriate his claim, it was subject to the entry of any other warrant-holder by a particular day. But such lands as were fit for cultivation in this reservation of four miles square, were not subject to the laws of Tennessee, as it was not known to whom it would belong, until it was ascertained whether or not salt could be procured as was anticipated. That event being now perfectly ascertained, by many experiments, in the negative, and that the land in this reservation has reverted to the United States, and as there are some outstanding warrants yet to satisfy, the petitioners pray that they may be placed in the same situation as all other settlers have been, and with the same privileges enjoyed by those who settled out of this reservation, and they ask no more.

The committee are of opinion that their prayers are reasonable, and such as ought to be granted, and have reported a bill accordingly.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1446. [1ST SESSION.

ON THE CREATION OF A SURVEYOR GENERAL'S OFFICE FOR ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 19, 1836.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February, 1836.

SIR: A delay much longer than intended has occurred in replying to inquiries made by you at two several periods, whether a surveyor general's office for the State of Illinois is believed to be necessary. The delay of this reply has been occasioned by the delay of a report from the surveyor general of Illinois and Missouri, which had been required and expected long since, and which was believed to be of much importance to the making up of a correct opinion on the present subject. I regret to have it to say that the desired report has not yet been received.

A map is herewith transmitted which was furnished by the surveyor general in 1833, from which you will perceive the bodies of land which were under contract at that time, and on this map are indicated such information as exists at the present time, in this office, of the progress in making those surveys.

Herewith are also transmitted copies of correspondence between this office and the surveyor general at St. Louis, papers marked 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5, which, with the indications made on the map, will place the committee in possession of all the means this office can afford of judging of the progress made in the surveys.

To create a new surveyor general's office for Illinois at this time, would require the transcribing of a vast amount of documents, the originals of which could not be detached from those of the surveyor's office at St. Louis, and would most materially interfere with and delay the progress of existing contracts remaining unexecuted, or in process of execution. Under these circumstances, and inasmuch as the primary object of the creation of the office is presumed to be the hastening of the execution of the public surveys in the State, it would appear to be the better policy at present to place increased means in the hands of the surveyor general at St. Louis, to employ more draughtsmen and clerks to expedite the office work and prepare the triplicate sets of plats.

I have the honor to be, &c.

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1447. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 19, 1836.

Mr. PORTER, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of the heirs of William Conway, deceased, reported:

The petitioners acquired, so far back as the year 1786, in virtue of three complete grants from the government of Spain, 4,560 arpens of land, equal to 3,859 American acres. These grants were confirmed by the Commissioner of the United States in the year 1820.

Evidence is given of their settlement under the Spanish government, and their validity appears unquestionable.

During the minority of the petitioners, and after the country passed from Spain to the United States, their possession was neglected, and other persons occupied the land. These persons have since obtained donations for the portions they occupied, from the United States; the balance has been sold by the government or appropriated to the use of public schools.

The settlers on the land originally conceded are numerous, and a town on the banks of the Mississippi, called Port Hudson, has grown up within the limits of the grants. A successful enforcement of the right of the petitioners would be productive of great inconvenience, and they ask permission to locate their titles on any unappropriated public lands, on their filing a relinquishment to the United States of all the land originally embraced within the limits of their grants.

The committee think that the prayer of the petitioners should be in part acceded to. For that portion of the tracts which have been sold or appropriated to the use of schools, the prayer to have an equal portion of any unappropriated land, appears just; for the remainder, which is occupied by donations, as the responsibility of the United States is not so great to the persons occupying it, the committee are of opinion that the petitioners should have liberty to locate it on any public land subject to entry; and they report a bill accordingly.

APPLICATION OF RHODE ISLAND FOR THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE PROCEEDS OF THE SALES OF THE PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 23, 1836.

STATE OF RHODE ISLAND AND PROVIDENCE PLANTATIONS.—In General Assembly, January session, A. D. 1836:

Resolved, That the public lands of the United States are the common property of all the States of this Union.

Resolved, That the senators and representatives of this State, in the Congress of the United States, be, and they are hereby requested to use their exertions and influence to procure, at the present session of Congress, and as early as may be, the enactment of a law providing for the distribution, in time of peace, in just and equitable proportions, to and among the several States, of the moneys annually accruing as net proceeds from sales of the public lands of the United States: and to aid the passage of such a law by their votes.

Resolved, further, That the said senators and representatives be each immediately furnished by the secretary with a copy of the foregoing resolutions.

True copy. Witness:

REMONSTRANCE OF CITIZENS OF MISSISSIPPI AGAINST THE MANNER OF EXECUTING THE FOURTEENTH ARTICLE OF THE TREATY OF DANCING RABBIT CREEK WITH THE CHOCTAW INDIANS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 24, 1836.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled:

We, the undersigned citizens of the State of Mississippi, beg leave to represent to your honorable body the peculiar condition in which a portion of this their country is situated by recent movements made by certain Choctaw Indians, or rather by a set of white persons purporting to represent them, and to endeavor to procure for them certain lands under the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek. Your memorialists beg leave to call the attention of Congress to the terms of said treaty, and more especially to the stipulations contained in the said 14th article, which says that each Choctaw head of a family being desirous to remain and become a citizen of the States, shall be permitted to do so by signifying his intentions to the agent within six months from the ratification of this treaty, and he or she shall then be entitled to a reservation of 640 acres of land, to be bounded by sectional lines of survey, and in like manner he shall be entitled to one half that quantity for each unmarried child which is living with him over ten years of age, and a quarter-section to such child as may be under ten years of age, to adjoin the location of the parents, if they reside upon said lands, intending to become citizens of the States, for five years after the ratification of this treaty; in that case a grant in fee simple shall issue. Said reservation shall include the present improvement of the head of the family, or a portion of it. Persons who claim under this article shall not lose the privilege of a Choctaw citizen, but if they ever remove, are not to be entitled to any portion of the Choctaw annuity.

Your memorialists present that the following-named Choctaw or Choctaws, claiming the following names, are now, through certain agents, endeavoring to hold lands under said article, to wit: Little Leader, Hiatubee, Onohambee, Anokatubee, Salahnea, Ianimatubee, Anola, Ishpia, Tuwatucha, Nowohona, Noatema, and Hotah, and that said Indians cannot be entitled for the following reason: The treaty referred to was ratified on the 14th day of February, 1831, and all who wished to receive the benefit of the 14th article must, within six months thereafter, signify their intention to the agent; and your memorialists humbly conceive that no evidence of such signification can be received or known other than the registration of the names of said applicants by the agent aforesaid, and by reference to said registry it will be found that the above-named Indians were not registered within that time; secondly, the applicants must take these locations so as to include their then improvement or a portion of it, and many of the above-named claim land in different townships from that in which they then resided; thirdly, they must reside upon said lands for the term of five years, and if they ever removed they were not to be entitled to any portion of the Choctaw annuity, and many of the above applicants have removed from their then residence, and are living on other lands than those on which they received their locations.

But, lastly, your memorialists represent that many of the above-named Indians have long since left this State, and are now residing west of the Mississippi river, and that certain individuals, for the mere purpose of speculation, have induced other Choctaws to assume their names, and by some means, unknown to your memorialists, have procured them to be located, which location appears to have been made by George W. Martin, a short time since; not content, however, with thus attempting to practise a fraud of so glaring a character upon the government, the individuals referred to have procured some of the locations aforesaid to be changed from where they were first made, and to be placed upon the lands purchased from government by pre-emptors, thus attempting to drive from the country the early and permanent settler, to whom such high inducements had been held out by government, and to throw into the hands of a few individuals, some of whom are not even citizens of this State, large portions of land at a mere nominal price, said Indians being well aware and long previously advised by their own chiefs, that they were not entitled, are giving bonds for titles to those speculators for the sum of seventy-five cents per acre, for lands worth at least ten dollars per acre.

Your memorialists further show, that application has been made to the General Land Office to have the above-alleged frauds inquired into and exposed, on account of which the locating agent, George W. Martin, was directed to investigate the same and report, but instead of doing so, said agent appointed three sub-commissioners, directing them to attend at the house of the Little Leader, on the 14th day of December, 1835, then and there to take testimony concerning the same. Said commissioners accordingly met for the purpose, but, on examining their commissions, it did not appear from them that they were issued by order of the General Land Office, and that the controversy was between the Indians and the general government, but particular individuals were made parties complainants against the Indians, wherefore, the commissioners determined that said Indians could not be compelled first to establish their claims, but that the burden of proof lay upon the citizens so made parties. In this your memorialists conceive the said agent to have been guilty of a dereliction of duty; first, in appointing sub-agents; and, secondly, in making individuals parties: no investigation therefore took place. Your memorialists having no confidence in said Martin, and believing him to be the only proper umpire to whom said matter could be referred, have thought proper to make a direct appeal to your honorable body. For proof of the facts touching the above-mentioned frauds, your memorialists would refer your honorable body to the accompanying documents, from which they will more fully appear.

Your memorialists again repeat, that the Choctaws who now claim those names, if left to themselves, or if permitted to be governed by the advice of their chiefs, would never have urged those unjust and iniquitous claims, (see the accompanying letter of Colonel David Fulsom, dated July, 1833,) but would have removed west of the Mississippi—an event equally desired by the general government and this State. Your memorialists view, with profound regret, the prospect of a protracted residence of many of the Indians in this otherwise growing and prosperous country; a prospect much heightened by the attempts that have been and are still making by white men, to trample under foot the treaty above referred to, by persuading those Indians to claim the right of citizenship who are not entitled, and procuring their locations to be made upon the most valuable lands in the country. By this means government is deprived of large sums to which she is justly entitled, and the citizen is compelled to forsake the spot whereon he had allotted to spend the remainder of his days, and to which he had been invited by government, and to seek a home elsewhere, amid the opposition of hungry speculators and large capitalists, not that the Indians themselves may be benefitted, but that the ill-gotten gain may fill the coffers of some one who is unworthy to be called an American citizen. Your memorialists further represent, Little Leader, who claims under the 14th article of the aforesaid treaty, is one of those Indians who were specially provided for in the supplement to said treaty, the condition of which was, that those thus provided for should receive no advantage under the treaty. Such, however, appears to be the course pursued by the locating agent, and such the facts which your memorialists feel bound to represent, confiding in the wisdom of your honorable body, and believing that you will adopt such measures as will best subserve the interest of all concerned, and save from ruthless violation a solemn treaty, so liberal in its inception, and so highly advantageous to those who are now made the instruments of its invasion. Your memorialists would merely suggest the impracticability of procuring an impartial investigation before the present locating agent, inasmuch as no compulsory process is allowed for the purpose of enforcing the attendance of witnesses, and great exertions are making, both to prejudice the public mind against the rights of the government, and to prevent the procurement of testimony against the claims of said Indians, and the utter disregard which the said Martin has manifested for the terms of said treaty. Your memorialists further show, that the said Little Leader has always refused to comply with the terms of the said treaty, and prevented his company from doing so, and that he and his company have, by a system of taxation, raised a fund for the purpose of purchasing their lands when they shall be offered for sale. Your memorialists therefore pray, either that a special commission may be appointed, with power to enforce the attendance of witnesses, or that said question may be reduced to some tangible form, and referred to the courts of the county for investigation, or such other measures adopted as may insure an impartial investigation of the above-named claims.

And your memorialists, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Kemper County:

Before me, James H. Jones, an acting justice of the peace in and for said county aforesaid, came, this day James Parker, and after being duly sworn by said justice, deposeth, and answers to the following interrogatories as follows;

Interrogatory 1. Do you know the Little Leader and his company of Indians?

Answer 1. I do.

Interrogatory 2. Don't you know that they have been in the habit of moving from place to place, and at this time do not live on the land, and are not located where they lived at the time of the treaty of the Dancing Rabbit creek in the year 1830?

Answer 2. They have moved several times to my knowledge since that time, and are now located and occupy the places of those Indians who have gone west of the Mississippi river.

Interrogatory 3. Do you not know that the Little Leader actually forbid them to register, and said he would buy lands for them when the land was offered for sale, and for the purpose of raising funds to do so, taxed them one dollar a head per year, which tax was to continue for ten years?

Answer 3. I know that fact of my own knowledge.

Interrogatory 4. Do you not know that those who claim lands now, have assumed the names of Indians who did register, and have now gone west of the Mississippi river?

Answer 4. I do know that to be a fact.

[L. S.] JAMES PARKER.

Sworn to, and subscribed before me, this 15th January, 1833.

JAMES H. JONES, J. P.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Kemper County:

I, Abel Key, clerk of probate in and for said county, do hereby certify that James H. Jones, whose name appears to the foregoing affidavits and certificates, is and was at the time he signed the same, an acting justice of the peace in and for said county, and that as such all his official acts are entitled to full faith and credit. Given under my hand and seal of office, at De Kalb, this 8th day of February, A. D. 1836.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Kemper County:

Before me, James H. Jones, an acting justice of the peace in and for said county aforesaid, came this day Miles Parker, and first, after being duly sworn by said justice, deposeth and answers to the following interrogatories as follows:

Interrogatory 1. Do you know the Little Leader and his company of Indians?

Answer 1. I do.

Interrogatory 2. How long have you known them?

Answer 2. Since 1832.

Interrogatory 3. Don't you know that they have been in the habit of moving about, from place to place, and do not live on the land where they lived at the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, in the year 1830?

Answer 3. They have moved several times to my knowledge, and now occupy the places of those Indians who have gone west of the Mississippi river.

Interrogatory 4. Do you not know that the Little Leader peremptorily forbid them from registering their names, and said he would buy land for them when the land was offered for sale, and for that purpose taxed them to raise funds to purchase said land?

Answer 4. I do know that the Little Leader did forbid them to register their names under penalty of death, and did make a law to tax them one dollar per month a head, for ten years, to raise money to buy land for them when the land was offered for sale.

Interrogatory 5. Do you not know that they who claim lands have assumed the names of Indians who have gone west of the Mississippi river.

Answer 5. I do know that fact of my own knowledge.

DEAR SIR: The above is the list of names who belong to the Little Leader party. I also will inform you here, there is not one has a reserve, excepting Little Leader. Even our good old friend Shap-ha-homo, who has so many cattle, has not registered; and has no reserve. I will thank you to tell the Choctaws, that by-and-by the land will be sold, and then the Choctaws will not have any money to buy land, and therefore they cannot hold their places, and they will no doubt be compelled to be driven away from their places. It is out of the question for them to hold their land; you can tell them much better than I can tell you, what to tell them.

I am very anxious for them to leave this country, and to go to their new home. I will thank you to do all you can, and other white men in that neighborhood, to prevail on the Choctaws to remove. Do you know any of the Little Leader's high captains that would be willing to go; if so, I would make him a captain of the party that would go. Will you be so kind as to sound some of them. I have already made A-nok-a-tubbee a captain, and I hope many will go with him. Be so kind as to write me as often as you have an opportunity, and inform me what is the prospect, &c.

Your friend, DAVID FULSOM.

ON THE LOCATION OF LAND FOR A SEMINARY OF LEARNING IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 24, 1836.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 22, 1836.

SIR: In compliance with the resolution of the House of Representatives, dated the 13th instant, I have the honor to enclose a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, dated the 18th instant, accompanied by certain documents therein referred to, embracing, it is believed, all the correspondence on the subject of the resolution in the possession of the department.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. the SPEAKER of the House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 18, 1836.

SIR: In reply to your reference to this office of a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 13th instant, in the following words, viz: "Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to lay before this house a copy of the correspondence between the executive of the State of Louisiana and the Treasury Department, as to the location of two townships of land granted to the State of Louisiana by an act of Congress passed on the 3d of March, 1827, for the use of a seminary of learning therein; and that he also be directed to transmit, at the same time, copies of all communications made to the said department from other persons in relation to that subject," I have the honor to transmit the accompanying documents marked A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, K, L, which embrace all the correspondence on the subject-matter of the resolution.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, New Orleans, April 25, 1835.

SIR: On the 3d of March, 1827, Congress passed an act concerning the location of two townships of land for the use of a seminary of learning in the State of Louisiana. (Land Laws, p. 940.)

By a resolution of the legislature, at its late session, the governor is requested to apply to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States to procure the location of the land referred to in the said act of Congress of 3d March, 1827.

Finding on the files of this office a communication from Mr. Rush, the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, to the governor of this State, dated August 21, 1827, a copy of which is hereto annexed, requesting the governor to make the necessary selections under the act of Congress alluded to, and transmit them to the department for confirmation, I have proceeded to execute in part, so far as the township plats that are completed would allow, the provisions of the laws of Congress, and the consequent directions of the department, by selecting and designating by a caveat or notice, in the office of the surveyor general and of the register of the land office, certain tracts on township plats about to be returned, in sections corresponding with the legal subdivisions into which the public lands in these townships are surveyed, as reserved and located for the use of the State, under the said act of the 3d of March, 1827, viz.:

Township 15 north, range 12 west—southwestern district of Louisiana.

	Acres
*Fractional section 1	158.03
*North half and southeast quarter of section 2	416.96
*North half and southwest quarter of section 3	480.00
West half of southeast, and east half of southwest quarter of section 4	160.00
West half and southeast quarter of section 10	480.00
Northeast quarter of section 9	160.00
*Section 12	983.53

Township 15 north, range 11 west.

Fractional section 17	179.44
Fractional section 20	517.68
Fractional section 21	100.36
Fractional section 28	445.85
*Fractional section 33	628.92
*Fractional section 34	677.02

* The sections marked * are located by individuals.

Township 14 north, range 11 west.

	Acres.
Fractional section 2	370.64
East half of fractional section 3	277.62
East half of fractional section 10	318.88
East half of fractional section 11	152.20
East half of fractional section 14	468.30
East half of fractional section 36	678.19

Township 13 north, range 11 west.

Fractional section 1	491.04
Fractional section 2*	158.54

There is one feature in Mr. Rush's communication of August 21, 1827, to which I beg leave to invite attention. The latter paragraph assumes that "permission is given in the act to locate tracts of not less than a section," until the whole quantity shall be obtained.

It is gratuitous to say, as Mr. Rush did, that "permission is given by the act to locate tracts of not less than a section." The act does not even say that they may be located in tracts of a section, but in "sections corresponding with any of the legal subdivisions;" which means, and can only mean, that the locations may be made according to the tracts as laid off by the proper surveyors. In the technical language of surveyors, the term section may perhaps be used to designate a specific quantity, six hundred and forty acres; but, in the common parlance, and in the intendment of Congress, no doubt, section means nothing more nor less than legal subdivision, more especially when they speak, as in this instance, of sections corresponding with any of the legal subdivisions into which the public lands are authorized to be surveyed. To say that the lands set apart by the act must be taken in "sections," in the technical sense of six hundred and forty acres, would be to render the law nugatory, seeing that the surveys contain none, or very few tracts of that kind.

How is it in the case of individuals? If a man has a floating claim of six hundred and forty acres, or other quantity, he takes one or more of the legal subdivisions, till the quantity of his claim is obtained. That is just what we have done in this instance, and for so doing we had the additional warrant of the law, prescribing that the tracts should be located in sections corresponding with any of the legal subdivisions.

There is another incidental circumstance which I deem it my duty to suggest. The act of Congress contemplates lands reserved to the State. The mode that has been adopted for their location is the only mode by which they can be reserved. From information, on which I rely, there are now in the hands of speculators and forestallers floating claims enough to cover all, or nearly all, the unappropriated lands that have been surveyed, and are of much value. The moment the township plats are approved and returned, the holders of these undefined claims will press their entries and absorb all, leaving nothing to satisfy the prior law in favor of the State. In point of fact, there would be no difference between exposing the lands to public sale, and offering them to private entries for floats. In either alternative, the State would be deprived, and the act of Congress frustrated.

I, therefore, earnestly hope the department will deem it consonant with right, as well as with the true intention and policy of the act of Congress, to confirm the selections now made, and that, by instructions to the surveyor general, and other land officers, it will authorize other locations in the same manner, on the completion of future plats, up to the complement of the quantity contemplated by the act of March 3, 1827.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

E. D. WHITE.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, August 21, 1827.

SIR: On the 3d of March last, an act passed Congress providing for the location of two townships of land granted to the State of Louisiana, for the use of a seminary of learning therein; and it is understood to be of importance to the value of the grant that the land should be located without unnecessary delay. A copy of the act is enclosed, and I beg leave to request, if it shall comport with the convenience of your excellency, that you will be pleased to make the necessary selections, and transmit them to this department for confirmation, accompanied by a description of the tracts and their numbers.

Although permission is given in the act to locate tracts of not less than a section, it is not expected that you will find it necessary to make many locations of this kind. You will be pleased to select good lands fit for tillage, in whatsoever tracts they be found, not less than a section, until the whole quantity called for shall be obtained.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

RICHARD RUSH.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, New Orleans, June 5, 1835.

SIR: In transmitting to you my communication of 25th of April last, on the subject of the two townships of land reserved for the use of a seminary of learning in the State of Louisiana, I now subjoin the copy of a letter from the surveyor general, dated 21st ult., from which it appears that a considerable portion of the tracts selected for the use of the State, as specified in my said communication of April 25, have been pitched upon and located by individual holders of floating claims. The tracts thus located by individuals, are marked (*).

The sanction of the department is respectfully solicited to the remainder.

Very respectfully, &c.

E. D. WHITE.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

* The southeast quarter of this section contains the quantity of 158.54 acres, and is presumed to have been the tract intended by the governor instead of "fractional section 2," and has accordingly been recommended to the Secretary for his approval.—J. M. M.

SURVEYOR GENERAL'S OFFICE, Donaldsonville, May 21, 1835.

SIR: Your caveat or notice of the 25th of April, 1835, designating certain tracts of land as selected for the benefit of the State, under the act of Congress of March 3, 1827, has been received, and I have to inform you that previous to the receipt of the notice, some of the tracts therein designated were selected and located to satisfy the claims of private individuals, viz.:

In township 15 north, range 12 west.

	Acres.
Fractional section 1	158.03
North half and southeast quarter of section 2	416.96
Section 12.
North half and southwest quarter of section 3	480.00

In township 15 north, range 11 west.

Fractional section 33	628.92
Fractional section 34	677.02

E.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, June 25, 1835.

SIR: Having approved the locations made under the act of the 3d of March, 1827, enumerated in your letter of the 23d instant, the papers therewith transmitted are hereby returned.

I am, respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

COMMISSIONER of the General Land Office.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, June 26, 1835.

SIR: I transmit herewith a list of lands situated in the Opelousas district, State of Louisiana, selected by you under the act of the 3d of March, 1827, appropriating two townships of land for the use of seminaries of learning in that State; the selections of which were approved by the Secretary of the Treasury on the 25th inst.

Your letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, of the 25th of April last, recommends with other tracts the selection of "fractional section 2, 158.4 acres" in township 13 north, of range 11 west. The southeast quarter of this section, (which is an entire one,) containing the exact quantity put down in your lists, has been presumed at this office to have been the tract intended by you, and was accordingly submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury for his approval.

I am, &c.

JNO. M. MOORE, Acting Commissioner.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, New Orleans, July 3, 1835.

SIR: In a communication to the department on the 25th of April, 1835, I designated certain tracts of land in the southwestern district of Louisiana as selected for the use of the State, under the act of Congress of the 3d of March, 1827, and the consequent instructions of Mr. Rush, Secretary of the Treasury, of August 21, 1837, concerning the location of two townships of land reserved for the use of a seminary of learning in the State of Louisiana.

In farther prosecution of the same subject, I have since proceeded to select and designate, by a caveat or notice, in the office of the surveyor general of Louisiana, and of the register of the land office, certain other tracts embraced in other township plats about to be returned, viz.:

Township 15, range 13 east, district north of Red River, Louisiana.

Of the tracts thus selected, there may be a few in the possession of actual bonafide settlers, who may have a fair pre-emption claim to the quarter-section, or one hundred and sixty acres, in which their improvement is made, under the act of 19th of June, 1834. It is not desired to interfere with such bonafide actual occupants. The object is to obtain for the State the lands intended to be set apart for its use by a previous law, the intention of which is now about to be prostrated by the effect given to the act of 19th June, 1834, allowing floats.

I therefore respectfully solicit the sanction of the department in favor of the selections thus made for the State, reserving only to the bonafide settlers aforesaid the privilege contemplated by the act of 19th of June, 1834, of entering the quarter-section, or one hundred and sixty acres, on which they are respectively settled, to include their improvements.

With respect, your obedient servant,

E. D. WHITE.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, August 19, 1835.

SIR: Your letter of the 3d of July last, advising this office of the further selection of certain tracts of land in the district north of Red river, under the act of the 3d of March, 1827, granting two townships of land for the use of a seminary of learning in Louisiana, has been received.

The townships 15 north, ranges 12 and 13 east, (the plats of which have not been received at this office,) in which these lands are situated, having never been proclaimed or offered at public sale, no entries will be suffered by the land officers to be made therein, other than by pre-emptors under the act of 19th of June, 1834; and they being allowed two years from the passage of that act to come forward and prove up their pre-emption rights, it is believed that this office cannot act definitely until the expiration of that period. In the meantime, should it be deemed advisable to offer these townships at public sale, the selections made by you will be respected.

I am, &c.

JNO. M. MOORE, Acting Commissioner.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 18, 1835.

GENTLEMEN: I transmit herewith a copy of a letter from the governor of Louisiana, dated the 3d of July last, notifying the department of the selection of certain tracts of land in township 15, ranges 12 and 13 east, district north of Red river, made in pursuance of the provisions of the act of 3d of March, 1827, entitled, "An act concerning the location of land reserved for the use of a seminary of learning in the State of Louisiana."

You are directed not to permit any floating claim derived from the pre-emption law of 19th of June, 1834, to be located on any of these lands, or suffer them to be located on by any claim of any description, other than such as may be proved to your satisfaction, by pre-emptors, as actual settlers and occupants under the aforesaid act.

I am, &c. ETHAN A. BROWN.

REGISTER'S OFFICE, Ouachita, La., January 23, 1836.

SIR: Your communication dated the 18th December, 1835, enclosing one from Governor White, of Louisiana, dated 3d of July same year, reached me by last mail. In reply I have to assure you, that neither Governor White, nor any one for him, ever filed a notice in this office of any location of land, as set forth in the copy of his letter to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Township No. 15, in range No. 13, east of this district, under the signature of the surveyor general, dated at Donaldsonville, Louisiana, February 19, 1835, was returned to this office on or about the time the present receiver entered upon the duties of his office, (15th May, 1835.) Upon its reception, many, if not all, the lands set apart by the governor were taken up, partly under the act of the 30th of May, 1830, and partly under the act of the 19th of June, 1834, and floating right derived therefrom.

I would observe, in relation to the notice of the governor, that had such a document been presented, this office would have required of his excellency the governor, the same formalities to locate his seminary floats as of an individual to locate his floating right, to wit: proof to the vacancy and non-occupancy of the lands designated in his notice; and this would have been required without the wish to wound the dignity of the State, of which our sensitive governor seems to be so tenacious.

The principal parts of the lands called for in the schedule sent are now in a high [some words here omitted in the original] and owned by some of our best citizens, many of whom have lived on and cultivated a part of them for seven or eight years past; who purchased floating rights, as they are called, to secure their respective plantations, and no more.

The time of making those locations, under what act, and in the form of an abstract, shall be furnished the department at an early date; in the meantime, permit me to suggest a total suspension of this business.

As his excellency has laid the subject before the legislature, I shall take upon myself to write to some of the leading members upon the subject; and if I did not feel called upon to investigate the pre-emptions from personal inspection, I would see his excellency on this subject.

With profound respect, I am, your obedient servant,

JNO. M. A. HAMBLEN, Register.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1451. [1ST SESSION.

APPLICATION OF MISSISSIPPI FOR THE REJECTION OF SUCH CLAIMS TO LAND, UNDER THE TREATY OF DANCING RABBIT CREEK, WITH THE CHOCTAW INDIANS, AS ORIGINATED IN FRAUD.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 25, 1836.

Whereas the United States did, by a certain treaty held and made with the tribe of Choctaw Indians, residing, for the time being, within the limits of the State of Mississippi, to wit, the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, made and concluded on the twenty-eighth day of September, A. D., eighteen hundred and thirty;

And whereas by the fourteenth article of said treaty, certain reservations of land were granted to such Indians as should remain on said land for five years next succeeding such treaty;

And whereas such claimants were, by the fourteenth article in the treaty referred to, compelled to signify their intention of claiming, under the provisions of said treaty, within six months after the ratification thereof, or forever forfeit the right thus acquired;

And whereas it appears, from recent developments, that large claims to lands have been preferred, conveying the richest and most valuable portions of the unsold Choctaw lands, and purporting to be founded on and growing out of the treaty above referred to, and on a part of which lands, thus claimed, no Choctaw Indian either does now or ever did reside;

And whereas it is evident, from the face of the case, that these claims are manifestly unjust in their character, oppressive in the result of their operation on the freemen of Mississippi, and calculated to secure no ultimate benefit to the Indians originally claiming, but, in their consummation, will have a direct tendency to impair the confidence which the good people of this State have, in the correctness of the law, and in the honesty of the administrators of our public institutions;

And whereas this most iniquitous transaction will, if consummated, not only rob Mississippi of her just and unalienable right to her five per cent. on the amount which ought to accrue from the large portion of valuable land thus reserved;

And whereas this body has satisfactory evidence of the fact, that a large portion of the claims to said land, under the provision of the treaty already referred to, are set up and attempted to be sustained on the testimony of Indians who are unacquainted with the nature of an oath, and utterly regardless of the obligation thus incurred, and on the testimony of other individuals, wholly unworthy of the confidence of a moral and intelligent community;

And whereas the permission of such abandoned and licentious profligacy would injure our community, disgrace our social and political compact, and license corruption and perjury to stalk at large through our land: now, therefore,

Be it resolved by the legislature of the State of Mississippi, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives requested, to use the most speedy and efficient means to prevent the consummation of such of said titles to said land as have originated in fraud, to the end that the aforesaid land may be disposed of in the regular way, and in accordance with the law in such case made and provided.

Resolved, That his excellency, Charles Lynch, be requested, at as early a date as may be possible, to furnish our senators and representatives in Congress with a copy of the foregoing preamble and resolutions, and with the testimony taken thereon, with a request that they lay the same before both branches of Congress.

JOHN S. IRVIN, Speaker of the House of Representatives.
JOHN A. QUITMAN, President of the Senate.
CHARLES LYNCH. .

B. W. BENSON, Secretary of State.

Testimony taken before the select committee, on the part of the House, to whom was referred the examination of the frauds charged to have been committed under the fourteenth article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek.

[Compared 30th January, 1836, in the clerk's office.]

Colonel William Ward, who was United States agent for Choctaw nation, at the time of the conclusion and ratification of the treaty referred to, being duly sworn, answers on oath:

Question 1. Do you know of the existence of any company, or companies, formed for the purpose of purchasing lands of the Choctaw Indians?

Answer. I do not.

Question 2. Did you keep a registry of names, as required by the treaty?

Answer. I did.

Question 3. Did you refuse to register the application of any Indian claiming, under the said treaty, when that application was made according to the treaty?

Answer. I did not. I only refused to register such applications as these, viz.: when one Indian applied for many. When one Indian proposed to apply for many, I refused to permit him to do so; but when I thus refused, I told such Indian that each one must apply for himself: and when they did thus apply, in their own proper persons, I always permitted them to register. I bought a bound book, in which I registered all applications, which I sent up to the War office.

Question 4. Did you lose any part of the register?

Answer. I think one leaf of the memorandum paper was lost in taking it round by M. Mactrez. This memorandum paper was not the regular register, but only a sheet of paper folded up, which was loose, and which was made at the trading-house, and which I made only for the accommodation of these men, and I did not consider myself bound to register any application which was made at my office at the agency. And these names, (which were between three and six only, in number,) which I suppose were lost, were not made at my office at the Choctaw agency. These Indians, from three to six in number, I thought, might be entitled to claim, and I gave a certificate to Dr. John H. Hand, that such was my belief.

Captain John Watts, a citizen of the county of ——, in this State, being duly sworn, answers, on oath, as follows:

Question 1. Do you know of the existence of any company for the purpose of securing Indian claims?

Answer. John Johnson told me that he and Wiley Davis were concerned; and said Davis afterward asked me where John Johnson was: he knows of no other company of his own knowledge. John Johnson showed him a title to one half of the lands to secure claim in the name of the Indian, and he, at the same time, showed him a power of attorney to do as he pleased with the other half: to sell, or dispose of it as he pleased. He saw Hugh McDaniel, who said he was agent for Fisher, at ball plays, surrounded by several hundred Indians, making their marks for them on blank sheets of paper, and, apparently, taking the number of their children, when the Indians themselves did not touch the pen; and the Indians, when he saw this going on, had no interpreter. One instance of this I saw at Garland's old stand, on the old military road. John Johnson told him, four or five weeks since, that he had located two hundred or two hundred and fifty sections of land under claims of this character; and that he had, out of this land, sold one hundred and fifty thousand dollars worth of claims; and that he was then on his way to Washington city, to get his claims confirmed by Congress. He showed him a book, on which he had marked the numbers of the lands he had located; that he had located this land under the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, part of which was in Sharkey's survey, and part in Honey island; and he stated that he expected to clear six hundred thousand dollars by the operation; and it is common report, before this, that Johnson is insolvent. Johnson further told him, that he expected Congress to grant those claims, because the government had, through their agent, defrauded the Indians by the refusal of the agent to register their names; and that he, the said agent, did refuse to register their names, threw away their sticks, and told them, damn them, he would not register their names; and that they ought to go over the Mississippi: and that four or five pages of the register were torn out. This deponent further saith, that he asked Johnson how he and Fisher got along together, taking names among the same Indians, and he, Johnson, replied that Indian names were difficult to be spelt, and that by spelling them differently, one Indian would be entitled to two reservations; and, furthermore, stated that they had more names than there were Indians.

James Ellis, a member of the legislature, from the county of Nashoba, being duly sworn, answers on oath: That he fully corroborates the statement made by Captain James Watts, with the additional statement that he knew some of the Indians who went west of the Mississippi, who have since returned, or been brought back, and whose names are among those now presented as having a right to reservations. This deponent further states, that Hugh McDaniel, who was engaged in taking these claims, stated, that when the general government left the door open to fraud, it was no harm to make use of it; that William Herbert has located a claim of this fraudulent kind, as said Herbert told deponent himself. And he further told him, if he would introduce no resolution in the legislature, calculated to bring this fraud before Congress, he would not appear in Jackson, and interfere with him in his county measures. And he states further, that a Mr. Hatch, and two other men, who said they were from Columbus, one of them had red hair, came to his house and told him they were concerned in this company; and told him that if he would certify that those Indians had remained, they would give him an interest worthy of his attention, or a section of land.

Additional Testimony.

General Dale, a member of the legislature, from Lauderdale county, in this State, being duly sworn, says, on oath, he knows of locations having been made in his county, at. or about the time of the land sales in Columbus; which locations, he supposes, were made under the article of the treaty referred to, on which no Indian ever has lived, to his knowledge; and on which there is no mark of field or house; and on which he does not believe any Indian had lived for fifty years. And these floats were laid on land on which men were actually settled, who had, before they heard of the location of said floats, gone to Columbus to buy these lands at the public sales,

S. J. Gholson, being duly sworn, saith, he heard D. W. Wright say, that himself, Mr. Fisher, and Mr. Young, and some other persons, were a company for the obtaining of Indian claims, under the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek. Said Wright further stated, that he believed that a large sum of money could be made by the operation; and that he believed the Indians were entitled to have located for them new land, in lieu of the lands on which they resided at the time of the treaty. Said Wright also stated, that he had had a view to the obtaining of Indian claims of this character ever since the treaty. I heard said Wright speak of a Mr. Johnston, who is said to be engaged in obtaining claims of the Indians, under this article of the treaty, in no very favorable terms. I heard said Wright further state, if there were any fraudulent claims owned by him and the company with which he was connected, he would be glad the same were exposed.

I heard a man who called himself Fisher, say, at Columbus, in November last, that if the settlers then residing on the lands located for the Indians would agree not to oppose the confirmation of the titles to the lands located for the Indians, they, the company, would bind themselves to sell, and convey to the settlers, one quarter-section of land, to include their improvement, at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, and the balance of the section at three dollars per acre; and that they, the company, would not require any pay of the settlers until the titles were perfected. Said Fisher also stated that he had no doubt, if the company were let alone, they would be able to get titles to land for all the Indians that had removed in the country, whether they had been registered or not; and that he did not believe that any other signification of intention, on the part of the Indians to become citizens, would be required, than proof of their being in the country at that time.

I heard D. H. Morgan say, that he believed a great many Indians had gone west of the Mississippi in ignorance of their rights under the treaty; and that he believed a company, who were engaged in buying Indian claims, had an agent west of the Mississippi for the purpose of buying Indian claims, and bringing the Indians back to the Choctaw nation. Said Morgan further stated, that it was a first-rate business, and that he had an interest in some of the Choctaw claims.

I also saw a bond from this Mr. Fisher, for the company to which he said he belonged, binding the company to make titles to a section of land, one quarter at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, and the balance at three dollars per acre. Said Fisher stated that they, the company, were to get one half for obtaining the lands for the Indians; and that he believed the lands would cost the company about ten cents per acre.

G. W. Bonnell, being duly sworn, saith that, for a few days previous to and during the sales of public lands at Columbus, in November last, the right of Choctaw floats was creating much excitement among the citizens of that town, and others, assembled at that place for the purpose of purchasing lands. The existence of these Choctaw claims was then first publicly known, and was then subject to the general censure of nearly all classes of the community. It was then that I first learned of the existence of this company; and there existed a great excitement against them.

About that time, it was proposed to enlarge the company, for the purpose, as stated to me, of taking in popular men, and allaying the opposition against the company; and, at the same time, allow the sub-company, which was to consist of one hundred individuals, an opportunity of making a pretty handsome speculation themselves. I do not know all the individuals composing the sub-company, but was informed that my own name had been spoken of, together with a great many others, in the town of Columbus and the adjoining county. Believing the claims to be fraudulent, I did not think they would pass, and, consequently, refused to have anything to do with the matter. This information I derived from L. N. Hatch, of Columbus, whom I believe to be the projector of the sub-company. He was not then engaged in the business of the Choctaw floats, but has since engaged in it. Mr. Hatch gave it as his opinion that it was one of the most stupendous frauds that had ever been attempted by any company, and said that the whole scheme could be easily blown up; and that if they did not give him as good a chance as others of the original company, he would set about the business, and he had no doubt that more than enough could be proved to break up the whole affair.

I saw, during the land sales, an instrument, signed by some of the members of the original company, (I think Johnston,) agreeing to convey a quarter-section to each settler who would not attempt to prevent the passage of the claims. There was a public meeting on the subject at Columbus, during the land sales, at which several of these instruments were publicly read, and commented upon. One individual, at the time, I saw pull his certificate from his pocket, tear it up, and asserted he had been induced to believe that it would secure to him a quarter-section of land; that he had been deceived, and signed an agreement which he did not consider binding; that, after hearing the frauds exposed, he had determined to oppose the claims with all his might.

William Dodd, a representative from Atalla county, being duly sworn, deposeth and saith, that he was at Columbus at the land sales in November last, and witnessed the great excitement among the settlers against the Indian floats; that he saw several memoranda given by Davis and Johnston to some of the settlers, showing that the settlers were to have their lands at $1 25 per acre. Most of the land floated in Sharkey's survey was on land of the first quality, and that had never been settled by any Indians. Colonel Boyd, at Atalla county, informed him that certain propositions had been made to him to become interested in those floats; that it was the object of the company to get as many men of influence interested with them as possible, so that all could make a handsome profit; and that those popular men could allay the prejudice and opposition to those claims.

Isaac Jones, representative from Winston county, having been duly sworn, deposeth and saith, that he knows many Indians that had left the country, and went west of the Mississippi river with other Indians, at the expense of the government, and were gone about twelve months, and have returned to this State with the guns they received from the general government; and Mr. Fisher told him he was locating agent for the Indians, and was among the Indians above alluded to; that he knows that there were many sections reserved from sale in Winston county, by virtue of having been floated on by the Indian claims; that no Indian ever lived on any of these sections, within his knowledge or belief.

Thomas P. Falconer, a member of the senate, being duly sworn, says, that for sometime past he has been acquainted with William and Henry Garvin; that from his own knowledge of their character, and from what he has heard from others, he would not believe them on their oath, when they should testify to any fact in which they are interested.

John C. Thomas, a member of the legislature from Jasper county, being on oath, corroborates the statement of Thomas P. Falconer, relative to the character of William and Henry Garvin, and makes the same statement as regards the character of William Samphire.

John H. Horne, a member of the legislature from Wayne county, being duly sworn, states, on oath, that he sustains the statement made by John C. Thomas, relative to the character of the individuals mentioned in the above statement of said Thomas.

James Ellis, a member of the legislature from Neshoba, being duly sworn, states, on oath, that the Garvins above alluded to by Messrs. Thomas and Falconer told him that he had certified that he would believe an Indian on oath as soon as any person; and that Indians had sworn that they had resided on the land claimed by them. He also states that Rollin Williams informed him that he had certified that these Indians would swear the truth as soon as any white man; and that Johnston had paid him for those certificates; and this deponent further states that he, from his knowledge of their charaoter, cannot believe either of the said Williams or those Indians on their oath.

Stephen Cocke, the senator from the county of Monroe, being before the committee, states, on oath, that as to the justice or injustice of the Indian claims referred to in the preamble and resolutions above, of his own knowledge he knows nothing. But from report and the statements of others, he believes many and great frauds have been attempted to be practised in relation to them. Being requested to state what he may know of persons who are interested in the confirmation of the Indian claims, he states that during the land sales at Columbus, in November, 1835, Charles Fisher, of North Carolina, was before George W. Martin, the locating agent for the Choctaws, obtaining from him certificates of locations of lands for Indians, under the order of the President, of the 13th October, 1834; that he learned from the said Charles Fisher that he was engaged with a company on the subject of urging the claims of the Indians before Congress; that the company had obtained to the amount of about two thousand sections; that the company was to have one half of the land if they succeeded, for their trouble; that the company consisted of the said Charles Fisher, Daniel W. Wright, William W. Gwinn, Alexander F. Young, (I think Wiley P. Davis, and a Mr. Porter of Tennessee.) The statements made by Colonel Fisher were, that the Indians were to have one thousand sections, himself five hundred, and Judge Wright, Doctor Gwinn, Mr. Young, and others, were to have the remaining five hundred sections; but I think there were other small interests to be taken out of the whole for persons who had examined lands and made Indian contracts; of the five hundred sections claimed by Colonel Fisher, he proposed to sell me and others two hundred and fifty sections. But we disagreeing on the subject of the guaranties and the amount of claims that he should be bound to make good, and the like, we did not consummate any agreement.

The said Stephen Cocke states that Lemuel U. Hatch, Henly L. Bennett, and himself, conversed on the subject of the validity of a purchase to be made of the Indians of the remaining half of the claims reserved to the Indians; that they united in opinion that it was as competent for the Indians to sell that half as it was the other half to Charles Fisher and others. They had obtained information that Fisher and others had from the Indians an irrevocable power of attorney to sell for the Indians the half retained for them. They also agreed in the opinion that, notwithstanding the irrevocable power of attorney, the sale of the Indian himself would be good. He states that Lemuel U. Hatch, Henly L. Bennett, T. M. Tucker, Armstrong Hodge, William Humphreys, Briscoe Bennett, and Richard Evans, of Columbus, and David H. Morgan, of Monroe county, and himself, (for a company in Adams county, for whom he had a sum of money to invest,) agreed to examine into the matter, and see if anything profitable could be done, and to that end agree to get Samuel Garland, a suitable interpreter, and that if it was found safe, that contracts should be entered into with the Indians for their lands, if those who should personally attend to the matter should think it proper to do so. And accordingly a list of locations was obtained from the map, and Mr. Morgan, Mr. Hatch, Mr. Bennett, Mr. Evans, and Mr. Garland, went into the nation to attend to the matter, but he has no information as to what has been done, except that he has understood they have made some contracts, but does not know how many, or on what terms. During the time Colonel Martin remained in Columbus, making the locations, there appeared several companies, and a good many individuals, engaged in making locations. So far as his knowledge extends, the locations have been made on lands greatly superior in value to the lands on which the Indians resided at the date of the treaty. He states that he knows several Chickasaw Indians for whom he believes locations of lands were made by the locating agent, as Choctaws, to wit, Nancy Frazier, Molly Frazier, some of the Perrys, and others; that he believes there are a good many of them, and he is satisfied they were known to the Chickasaw Indians at the time they were located as Choctaws; if not by the locating agent, by those who were attending to the location for them. He has thus given the committee his information on the matters required of him.

CONSTRUCTION OF THE LAW GRANTING PRE-EMPTION RIGHTS TO ACTUAL SETTLERS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, FEBRUARY 25, 1836.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 25, 1836.

SIR: In obedience to the resolution of the Senate, dated the 19th instant, directing "the Secretary of the Treasury to inform the Senate whether he has construed the act of Congress of the 29th May, 1830, entitled, 'An act to grant pre-emption rights to actual settlers,' and an act of the 19th June, 1834, to revive said act, so as to authorize and recognize as lawful, assignments of such claims made before the issuing of the patents; and, if he have, that he communicate to the Senate any legal opinion or authority on file in the department, warranting such construction," I have the honor to enclose copies of certain letters from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and this department, and the Attorney General, embracing the information called for by the resolution.

I have the honor to be, &c.

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. M. VAN BUREN, Vice President of the U. S., and President of the Senate.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 20, 1835.

SIR: I enclose to you a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, in relation to the pre-emption law of 19th June, 1834, and respectfully request your opinion on the questions therein presented.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. B. F. BUTLER, Attorney General, U. S.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 20, 1835.

SIR: I beg leave to call your attention to a question arising under the pre-emption law of the 19th June, 1834, and to ask your opinion and instructions in relation thereto. That act revives, and continues for two years, the act of the 29th May, 1830, the third section of which contains a provision, that all assignments and transfers of the right of pre-emption, prior to the issuance of patents therefor, shall be null and void. A supplementary act, passed on the 23d of January, 1832, abolishes, after that date, the restriction imposed by the act to which it is a supplement, permits the assignment of the certificate of purchase or final receipt, and authorizes the patents to be issued in the name of the assignees.

The question, therefore, presented for consideration is, does the act of 19th June, 1834, revive and continue the provisions of the act of 29th May, 1830, as originally enacted, or is it to be regarded as reviving and continuing those provisions only, as modified by subsequent legislation; in other words, did it revive the act as it originally passd, or only such parts as remained of it?

I am of opinion that the revival is to be considered as embracing the supplementary provisions which the wisdom of Congress had deemed it proper to annex to the original act. Should your opinion upon this subject coincide with mine, it will relieve, to a great extent, the embarrassment and importunities to which this office is now subjected, by calls for patents, out of the regular course of business, which are principally induced by the desire of obtaining assignments, after the patents have been issued, and patents will be issued to the assignees.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE, March 6, 1835.

SIR: I have considered the question stated to you by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, in relation to the effect of the act of the 19th of June, 1834, reviving the pre-emption act of the 29th of May, 1830, and referred to me in your letter of the 20th ultimo, and fully concur with that officer in the opinion that the revival of the original law is to be considered as embracing the provisions ingrafted thereon by the supplementary act of the 23d of January, 1832.

SIR: According to the opinion of the Attorney General, the revival of the act of the 29th of May, 1830, by that of the 19th of June last, is to be considered as embracing the provisions ingrafted thereon by the supplementary act of the 23d January, 1832.

UNSATISFIED MILITARY LAND WARRANTS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 1, 1836.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 2, 1836.

SIR: I have the honor herewith to transmit to the House of Representatives, a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, of "the amount of the unsatisfied military land warrants, issued by the United States and the State of Virginia," prepared in pursuance of a resolution of the House of the 13th ultimo.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. J. K POLK, Speaker House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 1, 1836.

SIR: In obedience to the resolution of the House of Representatives, received at this office on the 16th ultimo, and which is in the following words, viz.:

"Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be required to furnish to the House of Representatives a statement to show what is the amount of the unsatisfied military land warrants issued by the United States, and the State of Virginia, respectively, and filed in the Land Office of the United States prior to the first day of September, 1835; also, to state the amount of the land warrants of the same description, which have been filed in the Land Office aforesaid, since the 1st day of September, 1835; and also, what is the probable amount of the outstanding claims to military land warrants on the United States and the State of Virginia, respectively, according to the best means in possession of the Secretary, for making an estimate thereof;"

I have the honor to state, that the quantity of land in warrants issued by the United States, and filed in this office, prior to the 1st of September, 1835, amounted to 7,600 acres; and the quantity of land in warrants issued by the State of Virginia, and filed in this office prior to the 1st of September, 1835, (after deducting such as were ascertained to have been already satisfied,) amounted to 722,529 acres. The quantity of land in warrants issued by the United States, and filed since the 1st of September, 1835, amounts to 600 acres; and the quantity of land in warrants issued by Virginia, and filed since the 1st September, 1835, amounts to 2,600 acres.

The amount of claims for revolutionary military bounty lands, ascertained to be due by the United States on the 22d ultimo, are for 263,000 acres.

The amount of outstanding claims on the State of Virginia I have not the means to ascertain, but the register of the land office at Richmond, whom I addressed in relation thereto, stated in his answer, (received by yesterday's mail,) that there were orders from the executive on file in his office for 55,000 acres, and many claims were not yet acted on by the executive department.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN.

APPLICATION OF INDIANA FOR THE CESSION OF THE UNRECLAIMED LANDS NEAR VINCENNES, TO THE INHABITANTS OF FRENCH EXTRACTION.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 1, 1836.

Whereas it appears there are from four to five sections of unreclaimed or inundated lands, situate about six miles below Vincennes, in the county of Knox, yet unentered, belonging to the United States, and described as follows: bounded on the northwest by the Wabash river, on the northeast by the lower prairie, southeast by Gatherinette and Fort Sni prairie, on the southwest by Fort Sni creek. That said unreclaimed land is surrounded by lands owned by citizens of French extraction, descendants of those who rendered the American cause essential service during the campaign of '78 and '86, in conquering and maintaining the western posts against the British and Indians, for which they never have received any remuneration. That, in consequence of the inundation of this tract of land, the said inhabitants are injured in their health and in their agricultural pursuits: wherefore—

Be it resolved by the general assembly of the State of Indiana, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives requested, to use due exertions to procure a cession of said unreclaimed land to Lambert Burwois and others, the inhabitants of French extraction, residing in the prairies and lands adjoining said unreclaimed lands, for the purpose of constructing a levee or embankment, to prevent the overflowing of the Wabash into said bottom and adjoining lands.

APPLICATION OF ALABAMA, FOR A GRANT OF LAND TO THE MOBILE BAY AND TENNESSEE VALLEY RAILROAD.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 1, 1836.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America.

Your memorialists would respectfully represent to your honorable body that, at the present session of the legislature of this State, a bill passed, incorporating a railroad company, for the purpose of connecting the Tennessee valley with the waters of the Mobile bay; that said road will run through a part of the State in which the United States are owners of a greater portion of the land; that said lands, on account of their sterility, have not been sold at the minimum price of the government lands.

Your memorialists think it unnecessary to enter into an argument to show the necessity of a right of ownership in the company to a portion of those lands.

Your memorialists would, therefore, respectfully ask your honorable body to pass a law authorizing said company to condemn, for their own use, lands to the distance of three miles on each side of the line of said railroad, wherever the same may belong to the United States; and that your honorable body would point out the mode of assessing the value of said lands, and direct where the price, when assessed, shall be deposited to the credit of the United States.

Resolved, That the governor be requested to send to each of the senators and representatives in Congress a copy of the foregoing memorial.

APPLICATION OF ALABAMA FOR A REDUCTION OF THE PRICE OF THE PUBLIC LANDS AND FOR GRANTING PRE-EMPTION RIGHTS TO ACTUAL SETTLERS, AND AGAINST THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE PROCEEDS OF THE SALE OF THE PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 1, 1836.

JOINT MEMORIAL to the Congress of the United States.

The memorial of the senate and house of representatives of the State of Alabama respectfully represents to your honorable body: That, in addressing your honorable body on the subject of the present memorial, they are inspired with a confidence in the justice of the cause which they design to advocate, and, therefore, respectfully present your claims for consideration.

At a past session of Congress, "A bill to appropriate, for a limited time, the proceeds of the sales of the lands of the United States," passed both houses, and would have become a law, had not the President of the United States, with that fearless course and clear-sighted policy for which his whole life has been marked with such peculiar distinction, refused it his sanction.

Your memorialists look forward with almost an absolute certainty, that other attempts will be made by the friends of this measure, to force upon the country a system so ruinous to the new States and so destitute of interest to the general government. The advocates of this measure contend that no reduction ought to be made in the price of the public lands, and that the moneys hereafter to be received for them should be distributed among the States for the purposes of education, internal improvements, and the colonization of free persons of color on the western coast of Africa. Your memorialists will not discuss the power of the general government to grant to the States the proceeds of the public lands; but, it is obvious, if the moneys of the United States, arising from the sales of the public lands, can be granted to the States for the purposes of internal improvements and colonization of free persons of color, they can be granted for any other purpose, or to effect any other object; hence, the most dangerous powers would be given by construction to the general government—a construction against which the republicans have contended from the first formation of the Constitution of the United States, and which, if sanctioned, will finally destroy the rights of the States, and will make the United States one great consolidated government. The States in which the lands lie are to receive ten per centum upon the amount of sales, and the rest to be distributed among the several States in the ratio of their federal representative population. Your memorialists believe that this system is founded in error and injustice. Should a policy be adopted which gives the proceeds of the public lands to the different States, the price will never be reduced, and it will be the interest of the States, as they are to receive the proceeds, to wring from the persevering and meritorious citizen the last dollar, without the prospect of relief. The public domain of the United States was acquired from two sources, donation by patriotic States and by purchase from foreign powers. They are all equally the property of the United States, and subject to the disposition of Congress. The lands belonging to the general government have cost about $50,000,000, from which we may deduct the sum of $45,000,000 for proceeds of lands sold, leaving a balance of five millions yet due the government on this account.

Your memorialists further represent to your honorable body, that they are opposed to the whole system of keeping accounts between the general government and the federal domain. The government of the United States assumes the lofty attitude of being the guardian over the rights of the people, and she ought not, and will not, descend from the elevated and dignified station which she occupies, to the grade of a speculator in lands. Our citizens are the children of a country which they love and cherish. When danger surrounds our government, and we are threatened by a public enemy, they are ready to surrender up life and property for the protection of their country. All good governments will set down to the credit of their citizens the full value of their generous devotion to their country, and they will endeavor to increase the number of their people, ameliorate their condition, extend their means of happiness and usefulness, and excite their love of country. The inhabitants of a government, the proceeds of their labor, and the taxes which they pay, all stand against the value of the lands which they cultivate. The citizens of a state, their wealth, love of country, intellectual and moral worth, constitute the price of the lands—a price which no pecuniary consideration can in any manner equal. How insignificant is the money which has been paid for the lands, compared with the population residing upon them—their value in the social and political system, their power in the field, the taxes they pay to their country, and the long line of posterity which is to succeed them! Lands are not suitable property to be owned by the United States; they are better adapted to the people. In the hands of the general government they are useless; in the possession and occupation of the citizens they constitute the principal wealth of the state. The inutility in the sales of the public lands, and the fallacy of large calculations, are manifested by the history of the public lands of the United States. When they were acquired, it was calculated that their proceeds would pay off the public debt immediately, supply the revenue of the government, and that large sums would be distributed among the States. A thousand millions of dollars was considered less than their value; and the Secretary of the Treasury was considered as having abandoned the interest of his country, for the views contained in his report on this subject in 1791, in which those exorbitant calculations are exposed, and the value of the lands stated to be no more than twenty cents per acre. Fifty years' experience in the sales of the public lands have shown conclusively that there is nothing to be made by the system; and the products of their cultivation have furnished wealth to the country, paid for the lands themselves, and produced a treasury which has supported the government in a style of expenditure never anticipated by the economists who founded it. Since the foundation of the government the lands have produced about $45,000,000, while the revenue of our country, arising from the industry of its citizens, amounts to $650,000,000, which arises from the cultivation of the soil in the hands of agriculturists. Goods are imported upon which the United States receive duties, which constitute the revenues; exports are given in exchange for the goods, and exports are the products of the farms. But this is not all: the cultivation of the soil affords immense exports, upon which the commerce and navigation of the country are founded, supplying all trades and professions connected with these branches of industry. Selling the lands produces very little; it aids no useful employment, and cripples the young States by draining them of money. There is a vast difference between the sales and the cultivation of the soil; the sale takes place but once, while the revenue arising from cultivation is perpetually increasing with population, and the resuscitation and amelioration of the soils by improvements in the science of agriculture. Your memorialists would further represent, that our citizens who reside upon the public lands in the new States are a poor but meritorious class of people. They cut down the forest, make roads, and furnish accommodations for those who come after them. Their poverty prevents them from purchasing land at the present prices; and, having no settled residence which they can call their own, they cannot improve the land and accumulate property as they could were they the owners of the soil. By reducing the price of the public lands according to their intrinsic value, and granting pre-emption to actual settlers, population would rapidly increase, and thousands in the northern, middle, and eastern States would remove and find homes in a rich and plentiful country, and greatly increase the wealth and strength of the Union by the cultivating of the soil, paying taxes, and increasing in numbers.

Your memorialists, therefore, pray your honorable body to prevent the passage of any bill having for its object the distribution of the proceeds of the public lands among the several States; and to reduce the price of the said lands according to their intrinsic value, and to grant pre-emption to actual settlers; and when lands have been offered for sale for the term of five years, and have not been sold, your memorialists respectfully request that each person who may settle upon the same may be permitted to enter, at the proper land office, one quarter-section free from charge.

Your memorialists would respectfully call the attention of Congress to a class of citizens, who, although entitled to pre-emption rights in that part of the Choctaw nation within the limits of Alabama, the Indian title to which was extinguished by the last treaty with that tribe, have been deprived of the benefits secured to them by the pre-emption law, in consequence of the land on which they resided having been taken by Indian floats or reservations. They pray that a law may be passed giving to all persons within the limits of the Choctaw nation, and whose lands were taken by floats or reservations, a right to enter other lands within any land district within this State or the State of Mississippi.

There is, within the limits of Alabama, a small portion of the Chickasaw lands, which has been settled with an industrious population. They are likely to become a prey to land speculators, who, invited by the provisions of the Chickasaw treaty, have embarked in land speculations on a scale and with a capital sufficient to swallow up the whole of the Chickasaw nation. Your memorialists would present them as worthy of the protection of Congress, and in a condition that requires and demands of Congress and the Executive protection from a class of men that have acquired great wealth in speculating in Indian lands, and who, by the provisions of the late Indian treaties, are likely to become the owners and settlers of the whole of the Indian territory.

Resolved, therefore, That our senators be instructed, and our representatives requested, to use their best exertions to procure the relief requested in the foregoing memorial; and, be it further Resolved, That his excellency the governor be requested to forward a copy of this memorial to each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

APPLICATION OF MICHIGAN FOR THE SURVEY AND SALE OF THE PUBLIC LANDS IN MICHIGAN, ESTABLISHMENT OF LAND OFFICES, AND THE EXTENSION OF THE PRE-EMPTION LAW.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 1, 1836.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled:

The legislative council of the Territory of Michigan respectfully represents: That the part of the said Territory which lies west of the Mississippi river, and which was acquired by treaty with the Sac and Fox Indians, in the year 1832, is now settling with almost unexampled rapidity, by a highly respectable and enterprising class of citizens from all parts of the United States. Although it is not yet three years since the first emigration into the country, the counties of Dubuque and Desmoines already contain a population estimated, by those best acquainted with their numbers, at ten thousand inhabitants.

These citizens have, in the settlement and improvement of the country, had to encounter all the hardships and difficulties incident to frontier lives. By their spirit of industry and enterprise, they have, in an almost incredibly short time, settled nearly the whole west of the Mississippi to the extent of three hundred miles, and in some parts to the distance of forty miles back from the river. Throughout the whole of this delightful region, where three years since the white man's habitation was not to be found, there have sprung up, as if by enchantment, flourishing villages and cultivated farms, where all the business of commerce, agriculture, and domestic industry, are prospering in a degree unexampled in the history of our country. The settlers of this important and interesting district have relied upon the liberal policy of the general government, heretofore pursued toward the settlers upon the public lands, for protection in the possession of their homes. Many of them have invested all their means in the improvement of the country, and to be put in competition with the speculator for the purchase of their farms and habitations, would bring distress and ruin upon many worthy and industrious families. The country which they have settled is, perhaps, unsurpassed for fertility of soil, salubrity of climate, and commercial facilities; and a portion of it abounds in the richest mines of lead ore. They have, by their industry and enterprise, brought the country into notice, and enhanced its value to an incalculable extent. The town of Dubuque, in the county of that name, and the town of Burlington, in the county of Desmoines, have been regularly surveyed, and are growing up with great rapidity. For population, capital, and commercial business, they are already places of great importance in the western country. As a measure of the first importance to this portion of the Territory, and one calculated to promote the general interest of the country, the council respectfully ask of the Congress of the United States the passage of a law to provide for the survey and sale of the country as early as may be practicable; the establishment of two new land offices, one in the county of Dubuque, and one in the county of Desmoines; and to secure the usual pre-emption rights to all actual settlers who have made improvements prior to the first day of January, 1836. As an act of justice to the citizens of the towns of Dubuque and Burlington, a special pre-emption law should be passed to secure them in the possession of their lots, upon such terms as Congress may deem equitable and just.

It becomes the duty of the legislative council, also, to represent that there is a large district of lands lying in the southeast corner of the Territory, known as the Milwaukee, Root, and Pike river countries; part of this country is as yet unsurveyed, and already contains a large number of inhabitants. The fertility of its soil, the abundance of fine water, the beautiful diversity of prairie and woodland, its contiguity to Lake Michigan, and the salubrity of the climate, give it every advantage that can be desired to make it a prosperous, thriving, and densely populated district. It is now a part of the Green Bay land district, and is so far removed from the land office, that the expense, time, &c., of going and returning, is value equal to that of a good lot of land. This operates peculiarly hard upon the poor man; so much so, as to take from him the power of purchasing his home, particularly when it is considered that he is in a wilderness, where every moment of his time is wanted to shelter himself and family from the inclemency of the winter seasons.

Believing that there is every disposition on the part of the general government to protect, as far as possible, all its citizens, and more particularly the needy, the council considers it one of its first duties to ask that the Green Bay district, which extends something near two hundred and fifty miles from north to south, and about one hundred from east to west, be divided into two land districts, by the line between townships thirteen and fourteen, which would make each district contain about six million four hundred thousand acres of land. It is also a duty to say, that the inhabitants who are now upon the lands not yet brought into market in these districts, and who have undergone all the privations incident to the wilderness, and by first settling thereon have called into notice this country, are without the protection of the law granting the right of pre-emption to settlers.

We, therefore, in their behalf, as well as of those mentioned in the preceding part of this memorial, ask that a law may be passed to secure them in the homes they are now enjoying through the courtesy of the government.

The council would further represent, that the miners, a large and respectable portion of the counties of Iowa and Dubuque, by the operation of laws passed for the government of the mines, and those that have been passed relative to the sale and survey of the public lands, are placed in a position that makes them a prey for the speculator. This want of security damps their industry and enterprise, cramps their operations, and has, to a very great extent, prevented the extending further their exertions to make new discoveries of mineral. The law provides, that where lead mineral may have been discovered previous to the purchase of any lands, that such sale is null and void, manifesting clearly that it was not the original design of the government to dispose of the mineral lands; but that law does not provide any means by which these discoveries can be made known to the register and receiver of public lands in the district where this land lies. The miners, resting satisfied, confiding in the good faith of the government, have, until lately, quietly pursued their occupations, believing, as they do, that in a court of justice it will be decided that the purchasers' title be declared of no effect, and that the title never has been parted with by the government. But as it is the nature of the worthy, industrious, honest man, to avoid law, they have ceased to pursue any further their search for mineral, and have, in most instances, compromised with the purchaser for a temporary right to mine on the lands thus purchased. It is now acceded to on all hands, that the interest of the mining regions, as well as that of the government, will be best promoted by the sale of these lands. The investment of capital, the introduction of methodical mining, and the regular transaction of business, will render the mining operations more certain; there will be a great saving of labor and expense, and, instead of being a lottery as it is now, it will become a sure, certain, and safe business. So soon as this change is effected, lead may be furnished at less price than at present, whereby the community at large will be benefited, and those employed will be acquiring, by their daily exertions, a competency. The first wish of these people is, that the mineral lands be sold; that those sales already made be revoked; and that the actual possessor who may have obtained the ownership, as recognised under the regulations governing the mines, either by discovery or purchase, be entitled to the right of pre-emption.

The town of Mineral Point, in the county of Iowa, is situated in the heart of the richest part of the mining country, and for population, business, and capital, is the most important inland town in the county. The quarter-section upon which it is situated, is all reserved as mineral lands, except the forty acres upon which the town is built. The citizens have settled upon this forty acres as public lands, without any security to their improvements, except occupancy.

The council would therefore ask, that the right of pre-emption may be extended to the owners of lots in that town, upon such principle as Congress may deem equitable and just.

The limits of this paper will not allow the council to point out the defect of such law: they therefore leave its superintendence in the hands of the people's delegate in Congress, in whom the people, and more especially the miners, have the utmost confidence.

He is one of them, having resided a long time in the mining district.

OPINION OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES UPON CERTAIN CLAIMS TO LAND IN MISSOURI.

} On appeal from the district court of the United States for the district of Missouri.

Mr Justice Baldwin delivered the opinion of the court:

Pursuant to the provisions of the act of 1824 for the adjustment of land claims in the State of Missouri, John Smith, T., filed his petition in the district court on the 3d October, 1827, claiming a confirmation of his title to 10,000 arpens of land in that State, in virtue of a Spanish concession to James St. Vrain, a resident of Louisiana, legally made before the 10th March, 1804, by the proper authorities. He alleged that his claim was protected by the treaty between France and the United States for the cession of Louisiana, and might have been perfected into a complete title under the laws, usages and customs of the government under which the same originated, had not the sovereignty of the country been transferred to the United States.

His claim is founded on a petition of James St. Vrain to the governor general of Louisiana, in November, 1795, praying for a grant in full property, to him and his heirs, of 10,000 superficial arpens of land, with the special permission to locate in separate pieces, upon different mines of what nature they may be, salines, mill-seats, and any other place that shall appear suitable to his interests, without obliging him to make a settlement, which grant, as prayed for, was granted by the said governor general the 10th February, 1796. He alleges that he became owner of the grant by purchase from St. Vrain and wife, before the act of 1824, and has caused several parts thereof to be located in Missouri, which he specifies in the petition, and prays that the validity of his claim may be examined by the court.

On the face of the petition the petitioner shows a case within the provisions of the first section of the law of 1824, which directs the court to take jurisdiction to hear and determine it.

The petition of St. Vrain to the governor general of Louisiana states, that misfortunes had induced him to settle in Louisiana, at St. Genevieve, where he had rendered himself useful in representing a certain party; that his knowledge of mineralogy had induced his father to make over to him the contract which he had with the government for the supply of a certain quantity of lead. To enable him to comply with this contract, and insure him an honorable existence, he prays for a grant as specified in the petition of the appellant. At the foot of this petition there was the following writing: "New Orleans, 10th February, 1796; granted. The Baron de Carondelet."

The original petition, with this entry upon it, was produced before the land commissioners in Missouri, in 1806; the signature of the Baron was proved to be in his handwriting, and the residue to be that of the secretary of the government.

The original was lost in 1807 or 1808, but a copy certified from the land records, was produced at the hearing in the court below, and competent evidence was given of the existence and loss of the original; the district court did not, in their decree, decide on the effect of this evidence, nor do we think it necessary to consider it; for the purposes of this case, the genuineness of the grant and its loss is assumed.

On the 6th February, 1808, St. Vrain and wife, in consideration of five thousand dollars, conveyed the concession to the petitioner by deed duly recorded.

In 1811, the petition caused a survey of 294 arpens of land, to be made by a private surveyor, pursuant to the concession to St. Vrain; other surveys were afterward made in like manner of several tracts specified in the records, varying in quantity from 1,200 to 50 arpens, several of them including lead mines, the one for 50 acres being on a mill-site.

The claim was acted on by the United States board of land commissioners, in Missouri, who, in December, 1811, gave their opinion that it ought not to be confirmed. The district court of Missouri have also rejected it by their final decree, from which the petitioner has taken an appeal to this court, in the manner directed by the act of 1824.

At the January term of this court, in 1830, this cause, with that of Soulard's, was very ably and elaborately argued by the counsel on both sides; they were the first cases which came before us under the law giving jurisdiction to the district court of Missouri, to decide on claims to land in that State, subject to an appeal to this court. The subject was a new one, both to the court and the bar; the titles and tenure of lands in Louisiana had never undergone a judicial investigation, which could give the court such information as could lead them to any satisfactory conclusion. Hence, and notwithstanding the full argument in these cases, there seemed to be much matter for consideration, in the developments to be made of the laws, usages, and customs of Spain, in relation to grants of land in Louisiana: these cases were held under advisement.

At the next term, finding that appeals had been made in cases from Florida, arising under a law authorizing a judicial decision on claims to land in that Territory, on the consideration of which the whole subject of Spanish titles would be thoroughly examined, these cases were further postponed till the ensuing term. One of the Florida cases was then decided on principles which did not apply to them; it was thought that still further information must be presented, in some of the numerous cases before us, for final adjudication; and a further postponement was, therefore, deemed advisable. At each succeeding term since, it has been our duty to decide on claims to land under the government of Spain, if not in all the aspects in which they can be presented, at least in those sufficiently varied, as to enable us to decide this case on principles entirely satisfactory to ourselves. It was never doubted by this court, that property of every description in Louisiana, was protected by the law of nations, the terms of the treaty, and the acts of Congress; nor that in the term "property, was comprehended every species of title, inchoate or perfect, embracing those rights which lie in contract, those which are executory, as well as those which are executed. In this aspect, the relation of the inhabitants to their government is not changed. The new government takes the place of that which has passed away." (4 Pet., 512.)

Such, in 1830, was our general view of the Missouri cases. Our difficulty was, in ascertaining the powers of the governor general, of the intendant and his sub-delegates, and the local governors or commandants of posts, to make grants of lands; what acts by either operated by way of grant, concession, warrant, or order of survey, so as to sever any portion of land from the royal domain, and create in it a right of property in an individual. The law submitting claims of either of these four descriptions to judicial cognizance, confirmed the court to such as had been legally made, granted or issued, before the tenth of March, 1804, which were protected by the treaty of 1803, and might have been perfected into a complete title, under the laws, usages, and customs of Spain, if she had continued to hold the government of the province.

It was also made the duty of the court to conduct the proceedings on all petitions, according to the rules of a court of equity, and to decide upon them according to the principles of justice, and the laws and ordinances of the government under which the claims originated. In thus consenting to be made defendants in equity, at the suit of every claimant for land in Missouri, the United States waived all rights which the treaty could give them, as purchasers for a valuable consideration without notice. They bound themselves to carry into specific execution by patent, every grant, concession, warrant, or order of survey, which, before the 4th of March, 1804, had created any legal or equitable right of property, in the land so claimed; so that in every case arising under the law, one general question was presented for the consideration of the court. Whether in the given case, a court of equity could, according to its rules and the laws of Spain, consider the conscience of the King to be so affected by his own, or the acts of the lawful authorities of the province, that he had become a trustee for the claimant, and held the land claimed by an equity upon it, amounting to a severance of so much from his domain, before the 10th of March, 1804, in Missouri, and the 24th of January, 1818, in Florida, the proceeds fixed by the law in one case, and the treaty in the other.

In all our adjudications on either class of cases, we have considered the term lawful authorities, to refer to the local governors, intendants, or their deputies; the laws and ordinances of Spain, as composed of royal orders, of those of the local authorities, and the usage and custom of the provinces respectively under Spain; that any inchoate or perfect title, so made, granted, or issued, is legally made by the proper authorities. We have as uniformly held, that in ascertaining what titles would have been perfected, if no cession had been made to the United States, we must refer to the general course of the law of Spain, to local usage and custom, and not to what might have been, or would have been done, by the special favor or arbitrary power of the King or his officers. It has also been distinctly decided in the Florida cases, that the land claimed must have been severed from the general domain of the King, by some grant which gives it locality by its terms, by a reference to some description, or by a vague general grant, with an authority to locate afterward by survey, making it definite, which grant or authority to locate, must have been made before the 24th of January, 1818; that where the grant is descriptive, a survey in any other place is unauthorized, and that where a survey was made of a part of a descriptive grant before that time, an order or permission to survey the residue elsewhere, made afterward, is void, in contravention of the terms of the treaty and the act of Congress, it being in effect and substance, a new grant, made after the power of the governor to make grants had ceased; that where the grant was specific, a survey might be made after the time fixed by the treaty, and where the grant was vague, or contained an authority to locate, which was executed by a survey made before, it was valid. (8 Pet. 466–7, United States vs. Clarke.)

The same principles apply to the cases in Missouri, between which and those from Florida, there is (generally speaking) no other difference than that as to the latter the treaty annuls all claims acquired after the 24th January, 1818, while the act of 1824 limits the jurisdiction of the court to cases of claims made in virtue of grants, &c., made before the 10th of March, 1804. This limitation on the power of the court as effectually prohibits their confirmation of grants, &c., subsequently made, or titles acquired, as if they had been declared void by the terms of the law, or the Louisiana treaty.

In his petition to the governor general, St. Vrain asks for a grant, in full property, of 10,000 arpens, to be located at his pleasure as to place, time, and quantity; it was considered by him as authorizing locations throughout Louisiana, and not only while under the government of Spain, but after its cession to the United States, and its division into the two Territories of Orleans and Missouri.

So it was considered by the petitioner Smith, after he purchased from and held under St. Vrain; and such appears to be the true construction of the petition.

The grant is contained in one word, granted, which must be referred to everything prayed for in the petition; its object was not to obtain a grant merely in the upper province, or it would have been addressed to the local governor. It must have been intended to extend to both provinces, as it was addressed to the governor general, whose power was general over both. He, by his grant, without qualification or restriction, has acted in the plenitude of his authority, which authorizes no construction that could limit it to the upper province more than to the lower.

A limitation to either would be by an arbitrary decision, without rule; so would any construction cutting down the concession by striking from it any right or privilege prayed for.

This, then, was the nature and effect of the grant: to vest in the petitioner a title in full property to all the lands in either province, containing saline, mineral, or where there were mill-sites, which he might at any time locate in quantities to suit his own pleasure, or at any other place that might suit his interest.

When the cession of Louisiana was completed, by the surrender to the United States, the title of St. Vrain remained precisely at it was at the date of the grant in 1796; there is no evidence that he had done, or offered to do, any act, or made any claim or demand, asserting or affirming any right under the grant. With all the ungranted salt springs, lead mines, mill-sites, and valuable spots in Louisiana at his command, he held his grant dormant in his pocket for eight years under the Spanish government, without making or attempting to make one location under it.

On the 4th March, 1804, then, no land had been granted to St. Vrain; there was not an arpen on which his right had any local habitation. Until a location was made, it was a mere authority to locate, which he might have exercised at his pleasure, both as to time and place, by the agency of a public surveyor, authorized to separate lands from the royal domain by a survey pursuant to a grant, warrant, or order of survey. At the time of the cession nothing had been so severed, either by a public or private surveyor, or any act done by which the King could be, in any way, considered as a trustee for St. Vrain for any portion of the 10,000 arpens; and there was no spot in the whole ceded territory in which he had or could claim an existing right of property. An indispensable prerequisite to such a right was some act, by which his grant would acquire such locality as to attach to some spot; until this was done, the grant could by no possibility have been perfected into a complete title; it is clear, therefore, that the integrity of the public domain had in no way been affected by this grant in March, 1804. The only pretence of any right was one which extended to every vacant spot in Louisiana, to be located in future at the option of the grantee; it so continued until 1811, when the first location was made by the petitioner, Smith, by a private surveyor, on part of the lands he claims. It is evident that he had no other right to this tract of land in March, 1804, than he had to all the vacant lands in Louisiana. Had his claim been presented to the district court, while it remained thus indefinite, and incapable of definition, there would have been no cause for its jurisdiction under the act of 1824, to confirm or reject the claim. The 6th section provides that on the confirmation of any claim the surveyor should cause the land specified in the decree to be surveyed, a plat thereof to be made, delivered to the party, and a patent to issue therefor; if rejected, the 7th section directs, "the land specified in such claim forthwith be held and taken as a part of the public lands of the United States." By the 11th section, if the lands decreed to any claimant have been sold or disposed of by the United States, or have not been located, the party interested may, after the land has been offered at public sale, enter the like quantity of land in any land office of the State. These provisions show clearly that Congress did not contemplate the submission of any claim to the court, except such as on confirmation could be surveyed and patented, and on rejection, would be thenceforth held and taken to be a part of the public lands.

The cases of claims to make a prospective severance of particular tracts from the general domain, when the grant was wholly indefinite, would require a distinct provision. If confirmed, no land could be specified in the decree—none could be surveyed; nor could land which had never been the subject of specific claim, described in no grant or survey, become a part of the public lands, within the meaning of the law, after the decree, if there had not been some assertion by the claimant of their having been once his property, by a severance by grant. In providing for a case where the land had not been located, it was the evident intention to refer to grants of land by some description, before the 10th of March, 1804, which had not been surveyed; it is certain that it could not apply to this. Should this grant be confirmed, it must follow its tenor and purport: the decree must affirm its validity, not merely to the quantity of the land, but with the right of location according to its express terms, which give St. Vrain the unlimited choice of the most valuable portions of the public lands. It would be in direct violation of those rights which constitute the great value of the claim, which were, not the quantity of land granted, but the unlimited power of selection, to make a decree that they were secured to him by the law of nations, the treaty, and acts of Congress, as inviolable, and in the same decree to limit him to such lands in Missouri as should have been offered at public sale, without any bid beyond the minimum price of the public lands. This would necessarily deprive him of the very spots to which he would be entitled under our decree, whenever he might choose to appropriate them by a lawful survey.

We are therefore clearly of opinion, that no claim to land in Missouri can be confirmed under the acts of 1824 or 1828, unless by a grant, concession, warrant, or order of survey, for some tract of land described therein, to make it capable of some definite location consistently with its terms, made, granted, or issued, before the 11th March, 1804, or by an order to survey any given quantity, without any description or limitation as to place, which shall have been located by a survey made by a proper officer before that time, as was Soulard's case.

Spain never permitted individuals to locate their grants by mere private survey; the grants were an authority to the public surveyor, or his deputy, to make the survey as a public trust, to protect the royal domain from being cut up at the pleasure of the grantees. A grant might be directed to a private person, or a separate official order given to make the survey; but without either it would not be a legal execution of the power. No such survey was made on this grant, so that it had not attached to the land claimed at the time named in the law.

We have, then, to inquire whether a private survey, made in 1811, could be so connected with the grant of 1796 as to operate by relation to make out a title to the land claimed in March, 1804.

The laws of the United States give no authority to an individual to survey his grant or claim to lands; he may make lines to designate the extent and bounds of his claim, but he can acquire no rights thereby; the only effect which we can give to this private survey is to consider it as a selection by the petitioner of that piece of land, as a part of what he was entitled to locate in virtue of his general grant. As the United States have put themselves in the place of Spain, we must view this petition thus made as if Louisiana had never been ceded to them. But neither in this, or the record of any of the cases which have been before us, have we seen any evidence of any law of Spain, local regulation, law, or usage, which makes a private survey operate to sever any land from the royal domain. On the contrary, all the surveys which have been exhibited in the cases decided, were made by the surveyor general of the province, his deputies, the special order of the governor or intendant, or those who represented them. No government gives any validity to private surveys, of its warrants or orders of survey, and we have no reason to think that Spain was a solitary exception, even as to the general domain, by grants in the ordinary mode, for a specific quantity, to be located in one place. A fortiori, where a grant sui generis might, by its terms, be so split up as to cover every saline, mineral, and water-power site in the whole territory, of all others, the survey of such a grant ought to be made by an authorized officer. If the grant was a lawful authority for such selections, its execution by survey ought to be made so supervided that the selection should be made in a reasonable time, quantity of land, and number of spots selected.

We cannot believe that Spain would have ever consented to the exercise of such a right, by an individual, over all the most valuable portions of her domain, when she did not permit the appropriation of her ordinary lands to be so made; still less that a claim of this description would have been perfected into a complete title, had she remained in possession of Louisiana, or that it ought so to have been.

The claim was unreasonable in its nature, excluding the government from all control over locations made on a sweeping grant, which, by small subdivisions, might be a monopoly of every valuable spot in both provinces. Such a grant, with such privileges, has no equity in it, as against the government of Spain, or the United States standing in their place. There appears no law, usage, or custom, to authorize it, and it is incompatible with those rights which every government reserves to itself, of directing by its own officers the surveys of its lands, either on specific grants or orders of survey for vacant lands.

The negative evidence in the record is also powerful to lead to the same conclusion. The unprecedented privilege granted to St. Vrain was of immense value, if asserted in time, before other appropriations were made of the places, of which he had the right of selection without limit, but it would become less valuable by waiting till others had obtained grants for them. Neither he, nor the petitioner Smith, has in any way accounted for the delay; they have shown no selection made, no application to a public, or even private surveyor, to make any survey during the eight years which elapsed from the date of the grant till the cession.

The grant does not appear to have been recorded or entered in any Spanish office, exhibited to any Spanish officer, or any notoriety given to it, by any assertion of right under it. With such powerful reasons for action, is it a harsh construction of the conduct of St. Vrain, to attribute it to the conviction that the Spanish authorities would not have sanctioned his claim?

The power of the governor general being supreme, his power would not have been invoked in vain, if the grant was good, and no officer in the province would have disobeyed his order to survey, on the selections being made. It is not for us to say what, if any, acts would have given St. Vrain an equity in any definite piece of ground; it suffices for this case that he had none while the country was under the government of Spain, and that the petitioner Smith has acquired none since the cession by any acts which he has done, or caused to be done, in making the locations specified in his petition. It is for another branch of the government to decide on the claims of the petitioner, under the third section of the act of 1828; with that we have nothing to do; our duty terminates by a decision on the validity of his by any law, treaty, or proceedings under them, according to those principles of justice which govern courts of equity.

Being clearly of opinion that the claim of the petitioner to any of the land claimed by his petition is not valid, and ought not to be confirmed,

The decree of the district court is affirmed.

Supreme Court of the United States, January term, 1836.

ISABELLA MACKAY, widow, and JOHN ZENON MACKAY, and others, heirs of James Mackay, deceased, appellants, vs.
THE UNITED STATES.

On an appeal from the district court of the United States for the district of Missouri.

Mr. Justice Baldwin delivered the opinion of the court.

This is an appeal from the decree of the district court of Missouri, rejecting the claim of the appellants to 800 arpens of land in that State, for the confirmation of which they had filed their petition, pursuant to the provisions of the act of 1824, for the adjustment of land claims in that State.

The petition was in the form prescribed by the law, presenting a proper case for the jurisdiction of the court.

The claim of the petitioners was founded on an application by James Mackay, to the lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, on the 13th September, 1799, for a grant of 800 arpens of land, at a place therein particularly described.

On the 14th of the same month, the application was granted by the lieutenant governor, with directions to make the survey, and put the party into possession.

The grant or concession was proved to have been in the handwriting of the surveyor general; the signature of the lieutenant governor was also proved to be genuine; the claim of the petitioners was rejected by the district court, on the ground that the grant was not consistent with the regulations of O'Reilley, made in 1770, and was invalid for want of authority to make it.

Having heretofore decided that these regulations were not in force in Upper Louisiana, this court cannot consider them as in any way affecting the title of the petitioners; in repeated decisions we have affirmed the authority of the local governors to make grants of lands, and have also affirmed the validity of descriptive grants, though not surveyed before the 10th March, 1804, in Missouri, and the 24th January, 1818, in Florida. But there is another objection to the title of the claimants, which is suggested in the decree of the court below, though it is not assigned as a reason for its rejection.

In the original petition to the lieutenant governor, the land prayed for is described as adjoining the land of Mr. Choteau, whereas the grant to Choteau for the land referred to, was not made till January, 1800, four months after the date of Mackay's application in September, 1799. This was deemed a circumstance tending to show that his grant was fraudulently antedated, and, had it not been explained, would have induced this court to have directed an issue to the court below, to try its genuineness.

By the record in the case of Choteau's heirs, decided at the last term, (9 Pet. 142-3,) it appears, that by a letter of the 20th May, 1799, the governor general of Louisiana directed the governor of the upper province to favor all the undertakings of Mr. Choteau. In the evidence given in that case, it was established that Mr. Choteau had erected a distillery on the tract granted to him in 1800, as early as 1796, which was occupied and in operation from that time till the date of the grant, after obtaining which he enlarged and continued the establishment at the same place.

It is therefore perfectly consistent with Mackay's application that he should refer to land in the occupation and actual possession of Choteau, though he had not any grant or order of survey. The record in the present case also shows, that the court below have considered this subject, and did not think the reference to Choteau's land was such evidence of fraud or antedation of the grant as to make it their duty to prevent it from being used as evidence of the title to the land claimed.

The final decree was rendered on the 15th January, 1830. On the 16th, "The court ordered that the clerk retain, with the papers on file in this cause, the concession upon which the claim is founded, until its further order." On the 18th, the court "ordered that the petitioners show cause why the concession under which the petitioners claim should not be impounded by the court." This rule was discharged on the 5th February, 1830.

After such evidence as appears on the record in the case of Choteau, and the proceedings of the district court in this case, in relation to the grant to the petitioner, it is fair to presume that that court was satisfied, on their last examination, that the grant to Mackay was genuine, and not open to any impeachment on account of the reference to Choteau's adjoining land. It would be assuming much in this case, for this court to decide, as a matter of fact, that the grant was fraudulent and void; the proof of the signature to, and the handwriting of, the grant, is positive and uncontradicted, and reference to Choteau's land before the date of the grant to him is accounted for.

We, therefore, are of opinion that the grant was genuine, and that the title of the petitioners, derived therefrom, is valid by the law of nations, of the United States, of Spain, under whose government the claim originated, and by the stipulations of the treaty ceding Louisiana to the United States, and ought to be confirmed.

It is therefore ordered, adjudged, and decreed, by this court, that the decree of the district court be and the same is hereby reversed; and, proceeding to render such decree as the said district court ought to have rendered, it is further ordered, adjudged, and decreed, that the title of the petitioners to the land described in their petition to the district court, is valid by the laws and treaty aforesaid, and the same is hereby confirmed as therein described; and that the surveyor of the public lands in Missouri, be and is hereby directed to survey the quantity of land claimed in the place described in the petition and grant or concession; that he deliver to the petitioners a copy or plat of such survey, and also do and perform such other acts and things therein as by law are directed.

Supreme Court of the United States, January term, 1836.

JULIE SOULARD, widow, and JAMES G SOULARD, and others, heirs of ANTOINE SCULARD, deceased, appellants, vs.
The UNITED STATES.

On appeal from the district court of the United States for the district of Missouri.

Mr. Justice Baldwin delivered the opinion of the court.

This is an appeal from the decree of the district court of Missouri, on the petition of the plaintiffs, praying for the confirmation of their claim to a tract of land, pursuant to the act of 1824, for the settlement of claims to land in that State.

The petition was in due form, setting forth such a case as gave jurisdiction to the court below, who decided the claim to be invalid; the appeal is regularly taken, according to the terms of the law.

It is in full proof that, on the 20th of April, 1796, the lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana, in consideration of the services rendered to the Spanish government by Antoine Soulard, the ancestor of the petitioners, made a concession or order of survey to him and his heirs forever, of a tract of land of two thousand arpens, French measure, to be surveyed and located on any vacant land in the royal domain. Pursuant to this order, a survey was made in February, 1804, and recorded in the office of the surveyor general of the district, in March following.

To the confirmation of this title various objections were made, on the ground that such concession was not authorized by the law of Spain; but as they have all been fully considered and overruled, in the numerous cases which have been decided by this court, on claims to land in Florida, under the treaty with Spain, and in Missouri, under the treaty with France, and the various acts of Congress on the subject, it is deemed unnecessary to notice them.

To the survey no objections have been made, if the concession is valid, of which we can have no doubt, consistently with the principles heretofore established by this court.

We are, therefore, of opinion that the claim of the petitioners to the land described in the petition is a good and valid title thereto, by the law of nations, the laws, usages, and customs of Spain, under whose government the title originated, the treaty between France and the United States for the cession of Louisiana, and the stipulations thereof, as well as the acts of Congress in relation thereto, and that it ought to be confirmed to the petitioners, agreeably to the prayer of their petition.

The court doth, therefore, finally order, adjudge, and decree, that the decree of the district court of Missouri be, and the same is hereby annulled and reversed, except as to such part or parts of the land surveyed to the said Soulard, pursuant to the aforesaid concession, as had been sold by the United States, before the filing of the petitions in this case, as to which the decree of the district court is hereby affirmed, and the land so sold confirmed to the United States. And this court, proceeding to render such decree as the district court ought to have rendered, doth further order, adjudge, and decree, that the title of the petitioners to all of the said land embraced in said concession and survey, which has not been so sold by the United States, is valid by the laws and treaty aforesaid, and is hereby confirmed to them, agreeably to said concession and survey. And the court doth further order, adjudge, and decree, that the surveyor of the public lands in the State of Missouri, shall cause the land specified therein, and in this decree, to be surveyed at the expense of the petitioners, and to do such other acts thereto as are enjoined by law on such surveyor. Also, that such surveyor shall certify on the plats and certificates of such survey to be so made, what part or parts of the original survey of such land has been sold as aforesaid by the United States, together with the quantity thereof; which being ascertained, the said petitioners, their heirs or legal representatives, shall have the right to enter the same quantity of land as shall be so certified to have been sold by the United States in any land office in the State of Missouri, after the same shall have been offered for sale, which entry shall be made conformably to the act of Congress in such case made and provided.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1459. [1ST SESSION.

RELATIVE TO A REORGANIZATION OF THE GENERAL LAND OFFICE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 3, 1836.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 3, 1836.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of this morning, requesting that the Committee on Public Lands may be furnished with such information as may be in my power to afford, relative to the proposed reorganization of the General Land Office. In reply, I have the honor herewith to transmit a copy of a communication made to the Secretary of the Treasury on that subject, with copies of the documents therein referred to.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. THOMAS EWING, Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, Senate.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 2, 1836.

SIR: In compliance with your request, upon the application of the Committee on Public Lands of the House of Representatives, made on the 20th of last January, I have the honor to submit a draught of a bill for reorganizing the General Land Office, containing the principles of such a reform as, in my judgment, is adapted to its anomalous nature, and to remedy some of the most apparent defects of its present condition, to impart greater facility and order to its numerous branches of duty, and to insure the efficiency on which so mainly depends a correct and energetic administration of the present multiplied concerns of the land system.

The accompanying exposition of the state of the General Land Office, and some branches of service with which it stands connected, is intended to explain to you and the committee the reasons that have governed in preparing the bill, which has occupied as much care and deliberation as I could devote to the subject, in the midst of incessant and pressing calls upon my attention since your request was made. I hope, sir, that you and the committee will find, in the circumstances in which I am placed, a sufficient apology for the delay of this communication.

In order to furnish you a tolerable idea of the mass of business accumulated and accumulating in the office, it has been computed that from six to eight years' labor of the regular force in the office would be required to bring all business and arrears of the establishment to a close, if the district land offices had been shut at the commencement of this year.

The moneys received from purchasers of public land, during the year 1834, including stock and scrip, amounted to		$6,099,981 04
During the first, second, and third quarters of 1835, to	$8,869,483 57
Payments into the Treasury for the fourth quarter	5,591,009 86
		14,460,493 43
Estimated for the year 1836		10,000,000 00
Which constitute an aggregate of payments for three years of		$30,560,474 47

This amount of money would require three hundred and five thousand patents to be issued, on the assumption that the tracts were all half quarter-sections, every hundred dollars requiring one patent; but making a reasonable estimate for the number of tracts sold in sixteenths of sections, the number would be augmented to three hundred and sixty thousand, at least.

The act of the 5th of April, 1832, admitting of the sales of public lands in tracts of forty acres, has, as may well be supposed, greatly increased the number of patents, and every labor preparatory to their issue in the same proportion. The number of sales in such small tracts is large in many districts, and the sum of receipts for them requires double the number of patents that the same amount of money made necessary before the passage of that law.

The pre-emption law of the 19th of June, 1834, has already introduced into the office fifteen hundred cases of complaints and appeals from the decisions of the land officers; and the number is daily increasing.

It is ascertained that one hundred and sixty-nine thousand one hundred and seven certificates of sales (of tracts) remain to be registered in the tract-books of the office, returns from some districts being still deficient, to complete the past year.

The labor yet to be performed in the Bureau of Private Land Claims, in relation to land titles originating under foreign governments, and required to be consummated by our own, if valid, can only be estimated by years in the best possible organization of the General Land Office. There seems reason to apprehend that, without some change, the next generation of the holders of such claims, unacquainted with its state and the causes of delay which it cannot control, may reproach the officers of this institution with neglect or omission for having left the work unfinished.

This bureau is inevitably charged with thousands of Indian claims, titles, and conveyances, which unforeseen and unexpected causes have cast upon this office, in the midst of its heavy embarrassments, and of a complexity of affairs, that probably enters not, in greater proportion, into the details of any other branch of the public service.

The several commissions instituted in the course of thirty years have not closed the settlement of the private land claims in Louisiana, and some of the most difficult and complicated cases, in law and in fact, remain to be extricated from their involvement, by the General Land Office. In order to exhibit the state of this branch of the business more in detail than would be advisable in this summary, I beg leave to refer you to the accompanying paper, marked No. 1.

In the bureau of Virginia military bounty lands, with which, since the year 1831, the business of issuing scrip has been connected, it may require from three to five years to investigate all the warrants, surveys, and claims of title, now on file, and to execute the singularly tedious task of engrossing the grants on those surveys. The cases require attentive and critical investigation, and continual recurrence to indexes and papers; and these causes, joined with a voluminous correspondence in the numerous cases where scrip has been demanded since the year 1830, inclusive, and concerning which the office has been excessively importuned, have operated, in the meanwhile, to prevent any other than occasional issue of patents on the Virginia military surveys.

The clerk charged with these duties has exercised as much energy and promptitude as is believed to have been possible, in his circumstances, to satisfy the demands upon this branch, and obviate the embarrassment of augmenting arrears. For a more particular detail of this subject, I respectfully refer to the accompanying paper, marked No. 2.

It is respectfully suggested that the surveys are at the base of the land system, and should be directed by the most efficient supervision, for which no adequate provision has been made; the laws on this subject having prescribed the mere outline of rectangular surveying, appear to have left the detail to be filled up by the surveyors general, and to justify the department in recognizing the certificate of each, however variant their notions of proceeding, as definitively conclusive. Hence, a want of uniformity might have been anticipated, in the operations of the several surveying districts, which have reached their present number in the course of —— years by successive additions; and hence the mischiefs which, prior to the year 1831, found their way into the surveying system.

I am led to believe that the appointment of an officer at the seat of government, to superintend, especially, this branch of service, would have been economical and highly beneficial, if such charge had been intrusted soon after the late war, when the immense amount of surveys for military bounty, and sale, in Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas, Alabama, &c., were ordered, and even in 1818, before certain regular progressive sales were ordered by Mr. Secretary Crawford. The supervision might have prevented much bad surveying, that a system like the one above described was likely to lead to, and timely correctives might have been applied to the numerous errors that continue to be developed in those old surveys, as the demand for land increases; and it seems to me still proper and necessary that the General Land Office should have the assistance of an officer possessing the peculiar talent and acquirement expected in a surveyor general, to direct future operations, detect incorrect work as occasion may require, and devise and apply the proper correction; to direct and oversee the necessary execution and distinctive coloring of maps, arranging and recording of field-notes, formation of indexes; to place his charge in systematic order, and attend to its particular correspondence—labors that will demand discriminating judgment, devoted and almost exclusive attention, and great industry. Since the commencement of the land system, the law has never referred the operations of surveying the public lands to any supervisory head at the seat of government, unless the commissioner be considered such by implication; and, if he possesses implied powers in this respect, the law has not defined them.

The General Land Office, with its small comparative force, has struggled to obviate and avert as many evils as possible. I am informed that signal benefit has resulted to the public surveys, within the last four years, from instructions emanating from this office in July, 1831, in the shape of a circular to the surveyors general, pointing out all the minutiæ of their duties which past experience indicated to be necessary; which instructions, I understand, had to be matured by the chief clerk, in extra hours, during a period of several months; as no leisure could be found in office hours for digesting a subject involving so many details. A desirable degree of uniformity in field operations, and in returns to this office and to the district land offices, not before existing, has been thus insured for the future; but the defects of the past are not yet adequately provided against. The exposition of these last, with a view to their remedy, would form an important item of the duty of the officer proposed.

In conclusion of this subject, I beg leave to add that the laws concerning the surveys, by a singular oversight, made no early requisition that copies of the field-notes (technically the surveys) should be multiplied. Instead of such copies, the surveyors general were required to furnish, with the township plats, a document called "a description" of the township, which shows the quality of the land on sectional lines, and describes the corner-posts and bearing-trees. These descriptions, however, answer not the purpose of the field-notes, and no protraction can be made from them. The original field-notes are in the offices of the surveyors general; no copies of them are extant by law, and if they should be lost, by conflagration or otherwise, no record of them will exist. After considerable effort on the part of this office, Congress has made extra appropriations for transcripts of the field-notes to be filed here; an operation now in progress, which will be the work of years.

The amount received into the Treasury from the sales of public lands, will have enabled you and the committee to form an opinion of the extent and amount of operations under the land system. The lapse of near a quarter of a century since the General Land Office was organized, has introduced a state of things, in this respect, which could not have been anticipated and provided for in the year 1812. Hence the defects which time has unfolded in the organic law of the General Land Office, which, at this crisis of the system, call upon the legislature for a remedy, in view of all probable exigencies in future.

While I would ask permission to invite the attention of the committee to the vast increase of the land sales, and the proportionate additional labor and responsibility consequent on that increase, I would respectfully desire them to advert especially to the various enactments of the national legislature, which, from time to time, since 1812, have, by gradual progress, imperceptible to the public eye, introduced new and peculiar duties and responsibilities, often necessarily diverting attention and exertion from other current and increasing business, and very materially affecting the circumstances and conduct of the institution specially appointed to administer the laws regulating the disposal of the public domain.

The swelling amount and diversity of business in the General Land Office justify the suggestion that, if the other means were afforded for issuing patents within a year for the lands sold within a like period, the manual task of affixing to documents, of both parchment and paper, so as to keep pace, nearly, with the other operations, would occupy so many of the Commissioner's hours per diem, as to leave him little time to be devoted to the multifarious and sometimes perplexed subjects of increasing duties that devolve upon him under the present organization.

The committee may well imagine that, in affairs so extensive and ramified as our land concerns, cases important and intricate, in law, and in fact, will arise, demanding time and deliberation; and that the Commissioner, regarding the comparative urgency and importance of the subjects before him, must be compelled to choose which shall shall claim precedence of his attention. They will perceive, on an intimate acquaintance with the state of affairs confided to this office, that it does not now possess the power to silence all complaints by speedy action in every case; since some must, of necessity, be delayed, when no possible diligence and assiduity can accomplish all.

In order that the just expectations of those interested may be complied with in a reasonable degree and time, it is deemed highly expedient and necessary, and almost indispensable, that the assistance of the law officer proposed in the 6th section of the bill submitted, should be afforded to the commissioner for a limited time. The duties of the trust will be arduous, requiring competent legal acquirement and persevering attention and industry.

As the tedious task of signing the patents (which justice to purchasers requires should be expedited,) causes a more constant diversion of the Commissioner's attention from subjects of great interest than any other ordinary occupation in the discharge of his duties, I have thought it advisable that the patents be prepared under the immediate superintendence of an officer to be charged exclusively with that duty; by whose signature, in addition to that of the President, and the seal of the General Land Office, authenticity should be given to the patents. With this relief, added to the assistance of the soliciter proposed, and proper distribution of duties and responsibilities among those placed under his direction, the Commissioner might find time for due investigation of cases and subjects novel or difficult; for promoting order and despatch in the office, and regularity in the routine of business; and, in fine, for performing, in a more efficient manner than present circumstances allow, the proper functions of the head of a great establishment.

In connexion with the subject of the bill which I have the honor herewith to submit, a summary of the views I have taken the liberty to express is subjoined, with great respect, in the following intended arrangement of duties, should the bill proposed become a law. It is believed that the detail is not too minute for the satisfaction of the committee.

First. The office of Commissioner of the General Land Office:

Duties and Clerks.

Principal clerk of the public lands, with one assistant and two recorders.

Accountants.

To examine and adjust the accounts of receivers of public moneys, preparatory to auditing; also to exercise a general direction of the manner of opening the tract-books, and of registering therein, in order to preserve uniformity; and have the care of correspondence with the receivers, under the direction of the commissioner. The duties to be confided to two accountants, with a clerk to record the reports and correspondence.

Book-keepers for registering the land sales.

One for the books of the land districts in Ohio;
One, with an assistant, for the land districts in Indiana;
One, with two assistants, for the land districts in Illinois;
One, with an assistant, for the land districts in Missouri;
One, with two assistants, for the land districts in Alabama;
One, with two assistants, for the land districts in Mississippi;
One, with an assistant, for the land districts in Louisiana;
One, with an assistant, for the land districts in the peninsula of Michigan;
One, with an assistant, for the land districts in western Michigan, Arkansas, and Florida:
Making an aggregate of nine book-keepers, and eleven assistant book-keepers.

Miscellaneous.—Bureau of Patents.

1. The arranging and preparing and keeping the proper checks on the certificates of purchase, after the registry of the sales in the tract-books, prior to handing the same over to the Recorder of the General Land Office.
2. The issuing of donation patents, and patents of other descriptions, required under special laws.
3. The issuing of patents under the credit system.
4. The issuing of patents for military bounty lands, late war.
5. The issuing of patents for exchange military bounty lands.
6. Preparing exemplifications of patents, and the evidences on which they are founded, other than those under the cash system, which would be prepared by the Recorder of the General Land Office.
7. The correction of errors of entry in the district land offices. This branch of business increases in proportion to the increase of the sales of public lands, and the application for changes of entry, and the testimony adduced in their support; requiring rigid investigation, and involving much correspondence.
8. Correction of patents. In consequence of clerical errors at the district land offices in the description of tracts, and in the names of parties in the evidences of title transmitted to the General Land Office, frequently originating in the want of care in the agents of purchasers in filling up the "applications," and sometimes from inadvertence on the part of the land officers, numerous patents, in the course of a year, are, from the foregoing causes, returned for correction, and much time and great caution are required to effect their correction, and make corresponding alterations otherwise consequent thereon.

9. Overpayments and short payments. It requires considerable time to attend to cases of this description, which sometimes arise from inaccuracies of calculation of contents by the surveyors general, and sometimes from error in calculating the amount of purchase money by the land officers.

10. Examination of the assignments before filing the same with the certificates of the purchase.

11. An extensive miscellaneous correspondence connected with the inquiries of individuals for information in particular cases.

12. The superintendence of the patents handed over by the recorder for the purpose of having the seal affixed.

The foregoing miscellaneous duties of the bureau of patents to be in charge of a superintending clerk and three assistants.

Bureau of private land claims.

Under the immediate supervision of the principal clerk on the private land claims, with four assistants.

The labors of this bureau, as connected with the issuing of patents on about sixteen thousand private claims to lands, originating under foreign governments, and to be consummated by the United States, and also a view of the duties of the General Land Office in relation to Indian lands connected with the same bureau, are set forth in the document marked No. 1, herewith submitted.

Bureau of scrip and for issuing patents for Virginia military bounty lands.

To be in charge of a superintending clerk and four assistants.

The origin of the arrears in this branch, and of the principal embarrassments resulting therefrom, are minutely set forth in the document marked No. 2, herewith submitted: from which it appears that, separate and apart from all duties connected with the issuing of scrip, there have accumulated between three and four hundred surveys, the title-papers of which are of very complicated character, requiring great scrutiny and patient investigation, prior to their being carried into grant; and that about six hundred of such surveys yet remain afloat, and which may be thrown on the office at the pleasure of the proprietors.

Apart from the numerous letters of inquiry and complaint of delay in issuing patents on the surveys on file yet to be patented, there are 150 or 200 pressing letters requiring various kinds of information relative to surveys which have been patented, and which inquiries cannot possibly be attended to under existing circumstances. Since the month of October last, not less than three hundred letters have been received on this single branch.

Bureau of pre-emption claims.

There are between 1,500 and 2,000 cases of complaints and appeals from the decisions of land officers in relation to pre-emption claims remaining to be adjudicated. These cases are of very urgent character, but of such nature that it would not be advisable to distribute the duties between more than two agents, lest there should arise conflict of opinion and inconsistency of decision.

Recorder of the General Land Office.

Principal clerk; two principal examiners; and thirty-five clerks to engross and record patents.

It will be necessary to have two sets of examiners, each composed of three persons, to compare together the certificate of purchase, the patent, and the record of the same. Each of the principal examiners must be familiar with the technical language required to be observed in the patents, adapted to the various peculiarities existing in different land districts.

From an investigation made on the 11th of January, it was ascertained, as will appear by the document marked No. 3, herewith submitted, that there were then 169,107 patents to be issued. Numerous heavy returns have since been received, and the number at present is estimated to be about 180,000. Such a number of patents would require the labor of fifty clerks to issue them in a year.

Bureau of surveys.

The existing state of the bureau of surveys, as respects the arrangement of maps, books, and papers, will be found in the paper marked No. 4, herewith submitted.

The force necessary to conduct the duties of this branch in an appropriate manner would be a first clerk, two principal draughtsmen, and one assistant draughtsman.

Messengers and packers.

Messengers and two assistant messengers for the Commissioner; messengers for the recorder; two packers and sealers of packages of blank forms, patents, &c.

Under this organization, the aggregate force in the whole establishment, exclusive of the two principal clerks on the public lands and private claims, also of the recorder and first clerk on the surveys, would be eighty-one clerks, and when an increased force would be requisite on any particular branch or subject, the Commissioner would have it in his power to detail it from ordinary duties, as occasion may require.

I would respectfully invite attention to the accompanying report of the chief clerk, made to me by direction, and the documents therein referred to, marked 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5.

I have the honor to be, sir, with great respect, your servant,

E. A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February, 1836

SIR: In obedience to your request, I have the honor herewith to submit to you the reports which, by direction, have been prepared by the gentlemen having the immediate supervision of the business of the branches of duty therein named.

No. 1 is the report of Mr. King, on the subject of the arrears and embarrassments in the Bureau of Private Land Claims.

No. 2 is a report of Mr. Keller, who has in charge the duties of the Bureau of Scrip, and for issuing patents on Virginia military lands. Having been appealed to by him, in reference to matters which happened many years ago, I confirm his statements.

No. 3 is the report of Mr Simmons, the senior of the accountants and book-keepers, indicating in a tabular form, the arrears in the settlement of the accounts of the receivers of public moneys; in the duty of registering the sales in the tract-books, and the number of patents to be issued, as ascertained up to the date of his report, since which time many additional thousands of certificates of purchase have been received, making the number of patents to be issued at the present time about 180,000.

No. 4 is the report of the draughtsman, who has thought proper to confine himself to a statement of the existing arrangement in the Bureau of Surveys, and purposely to omit any estimate of the magnitude of the arrears, in consequence of his having but recently taken charge of the duties. Of these arrears a correct estimate cannot be made without occupying more time in the research than would be justifiable in due regard to the other pressing engagements of the bureau; and to make such estimate would necessarily involve an inquiry into the arrears existing in the offices of the several surveyors general of returns now due, and of what returns may be expected in a given time. A vast amount of surveying is in progress, and heavy returns are now due. In the fall of 1833, it was ascertained that six hundred township surveys then remained to be protracted on the connected maps of the land districts. The returns since received, added to those due, and which may shortly be rendered, will more than double that number.

It is proper here to notice the fact, of which you are fully aware, that neither the surveying laws, nor the law of 1812, organizing the General Land Office, point out any specific duties to be performed at the seat of government, in relation to the returns of surveys made by the surveyors general. Prior to the creation of this office, when the subject of the public lands formed part of the duties proper, in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Gallatin directed the practice of constructing district maps, on a suitable scale, from the official returns of survey, from which district maps, State maps could readily be formed, when required. This practice was subsequently continued after the organization of this office, until the year 1829, when (like many other plans and arrangements commenced as official desiderata, and unavoidably discontinued, not without regret) it had to be abandoned for want of aid, consequently the arrears of five years have now accumulated, and should be speedily brought up, unless it be determined to abandon the compilation of such maps altogether.

In due regard, therefore, to what are assumed to be the duties proper of the Surveying Bureau, I would respectfully submit the following view of the subjects which it would seem fit to place under its charge, in order to give it the requisite degree of efficiency, and render it a more useful auxiliary to the Commissioner:

1. To place in its charge the correspondence with the surveyors general, under the general directions of the commissioner; a charge which, in the midst of a heavy amount of miscellaneous correspondence, has heretofore principally devolved on the chief clerk, and which he has generally been compelled to attend to out of office hours.

2. To exercise the supervision necessary to ensure a uniform compliance with the instructions as to details in the protracting of the township maps.

3. To superintend the arrangement of the field notes, which (as now provided for by law) are in progress of being transcribed.

4. To examine the accounts of the surveyors general, and compare the charges for the miles surveyed with the returns of surveys prior to the settlement of such accounts.

5. To continue the book of quantities, (on the plan long since commenced, but unavoidably abandoned,) by indicating the amount of public land and private land claims in each township, in order that accurate statements may at all times be rendered on official calls, as to the quantities of land surveyed in the respective districts.

6. The critical examination and comparison with the maps of the designations, as well as the quantities of tracts, as expressed in the certificates of purchase, where such tracts are fractional sections, or legal subdivisions of fractional sections, prior to the engrossing of the patents founded on such certificates.

To designate correctly and technically the parts of fractional sections, or their legal subdivisions, where the same have to be identified by their relative position in the fractional section, and not by a specific number affixed, is frequently found to be a critical matter, wherein a very slight inadvertence or deviation may involve no small consequences to the interests of purchasers, if not to the public, were the same not detected prior to being carried into grant. Such cases are becoming very numerous, and mistakes in such designations are of frequent occurrence at the district land offices in the hurry of business. These examinations and checks would seem more properly a duty belonging to the surveying bureau than to the book-keepers who register the sales, and who have heretofore been required to attend to them, whenever the numerous other requisitions on the time of the draughtsman have prevented him from doing so.

7. The devising of means of correcting the errors in the old surveys, as they are from time to time developed.

8. The compilation of connecting maps of the land districts, protracted on a suitable reduced scale from the official returns of surveys; the preparations of the State maps from those of the land districts, and the copying of draughts.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN M. MOORE, Chief Clerk.

P. S.—I beg leave to submit herewith document No. 5, being a tabular view of the annual increase of the office from the year 1826 to 1835, inclusive, and showing the annual appropriations made for the execution of all duties required of the General Land Office during the same periods, and would respectfully invite attention to the explanations made on the table, deeming it unnecessary here to repeat the same.

J. M. M.

ETHAN A. BROWN, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office.

No. 1.

The following estimate presents, as accurately as can be ascertained from a cursory examination of the reports, &c., the number of private claims to lands in the several States and Territories which have been confirmed, and the number which have been patented, exclusive of those confirmed by the numerous private acts of Congress for the relief of individuals.

State or Territory.	Number of claims confirmed.	Number patented.	Number to be patented.
In Indiana	953	80	873
In Illinois	1,588	385	1,203
In Michigan, east and west	1,119	569	550
In Missouri and Arkansas	3,107	818	2,289
In Mississippi and Alabama	1,200	93	1,107
In Mississippi, not requiring patents	815	...	....
In Louisiana	8,857	463	8,394
In Florida	1,322	65	1,257
Totals	18,961	2,473	15,673

By the foregoing estimate, it will be perceived that nearly 16,000 claims have been confirmed, for which patents have yet to be issued. Before any of those patents can be issued, it is necessary that the certificates and surveys should be critically examined and compared with the confirmatory laws, the reports and official returns of survey, to ascertain whether they are correct; and, as may be supposed, such examinations result in considerable correspondence. The manner in which the claims in Missouri, Arkansas, and Michigan, are represented upon the returns of survey, has rendered it necessary that the lands should be described in each patent by particularly detailing the courses and lengths of all the lines, the nature and position of the bearing-trees, &c.; thus rendering their patenting a very tedious process. In other cases, the tracts being described by their sectional numbers, the patents are shorter, but yet involve considerable labor in issuing them.

From the progress which has been made in the surveys, it is supposed that this office is now liable to be called upon, at any moment, for the patent in almost every case of confirmation in Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, and Arkansas, and for a large portion of those in Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, and Florida, and nothing but the neglect or inattention of the claimants themselves tends to prevent this vast mass of business from being at once thrown upon the office. As those lands are rapidly increasing in value, and as the public attention is becoming more and more drawn to them, we cannot but expect they will, ere long, demand their patents. The allegations of fraud either in procuring the confirmation or surveys of claims, necessarily occasion considerable correspondence and close investigation.

Particular causes have, for a long time past, been operating in Louisiana and Mississippi, to delay the forwarding of the patent certificates for the claims in those States, and also in the southern part of Alabama; but when those causes are removed, the certificates must be expected to be forwarded.

The embarrassments connected with the confirmed claims, form only a small part of the business connected with this branch of the General Land Office.

It will be perceived that no estimate has been made of the great number of the unconfirmed claims in the several States and Territories. These claims are the cause of much difficulty and labor; they pass from hand to hand, in the hope of their eventual confirmation, being apparently seldom, if ever, abandoned; and as new boards are, from time to time, opened for their re-examination, under, in some cases, relaxed regulations of law, and also from the right of petitioning Congress in each case, under a hope of succeeding by exparte representations, the office is continually called upon for information which, in the present state of reports, can in many cases be only obtained after tedious and extensive examinations, and in many cases even the information that does exist cannot be afforded from the want of proper indexes, for the preparation of which, time cannot, under the present circumstances, be afforded.

Within the last few years, a considerable portion of the reports have been indexed, so far as to show the names of the individuals who claimed the land before the officers making those reports; but in no case has the office been enabled to prepare indexes showing the names of the original claimants, or the intermediate owners of those lands, so far as they are exhibited by the reports. It therefore results, as a matter of necessity, that unless when an inquiry is made, the name of the individual who claimed the land before those officers is given, the office has no means of ascertaining whether such claim was produced and acted upon or not; but if the office was enabled to make all the indexes required, then a knowledge of the name of any one of the former owners or claimants would enable it to ascertain the nature of action which may have been had respecting such claim. The labor involved in their preparation would be very great, but the results would be far more important.

So far as the reports have been submitted to and been acted upon by Congress, the originals in this office are necessarily the only conclusive evidence respecting the confirmation of each of the particular claims included therein, and their preservation is therefore all-important; but if, as heretofore, we are obliged to be continually referring to them, they must necessarily become so injured and obliterated by constant use, as eventually to render them imperfect. These originals, which are now upon every kind of paper, from the largest size wrapping paper to letter paper, should, therefore, be most carefully and neatly copied into well-bound and durable volumes, which, after being critically examined, should be duly certified, and to these copies the ordinary references should be made, in order that the originals might be carefully preserved, and only used when absolutely required in giving certified copies and extracts to be used for judicial purposes. Another great advantage from adopting this course, would be the possession of such duly-certified copies, in case of the destruction of the originals.

In some districts the door has been opened from time to time, for the last thirty years, for the investigation of land titles, and reports have been made at different periods upon the claims presented, and claims which have been rejected under one law, have been brought up under subsequent acts. To enable the office, therefore, to trace the history of each of those claims, and the decisions which may have been made thereon, it is necessary that all the reports from the same section of country should be compared with each other, and such references made thereon to the previous and subsequent proceedings in each case, as would show the entire action upon such claim.

The difficulties existing in relation to the surveys of some of the claims, and the issuing of the patent certificates therefor, not necessarily coming under the head of arrearages in the General Land Office, are not now noticed, as they more properly belong to the consideration of other branches of the embarrassments connected with the existing state of the land system.

In the foregoing remarks, any reference to the proceedings under special laws confirming the claims of particular individuals, or granting lands for particular purposes to corporate institutions, or to the States or Territories, has been purposely avoided; not because they have not, in many instances, occasioned great labor, and involved many points of difficulty, but in consequence of their not forming a part of that burden arising out of general legislation, which is to be classed under the general head of private land claims.

Another branch of the business of the office, now connected with the private claims, which has sprung up with unexampled rapidity, and which, although it now forms an extremely heavy part of the business in this branch of the office, promises soon to overwhelm it, is that arising out of the Indian transactions, which have been thrown upon this office. Allusion is made to the location of Indian reservations, and more particularly to their sale by the reservees. Until the late Indian treaties, the reservations were conditionally selected by the Indian agent, and reported to this office and to the register of the proper district, and if no objections were perceived to such selections, they were submitted to the President, for his approval. Most of the reservations being subject to sale with the approbation of the President, he has uniformly required that the conveyance should be acknowledged and certified in a particular manner, to meet his approbation, and when so approved, that all such conveyances, with the whole of the evidence in support thereof, should be recorded in full, in this office. Under the late treaties, the locations have been made by special agents appointed by the War Department, but all their locations should not only be compared with the plats and books of this office, before approval, but afterward be permanently marked upon the plats and books, as a check to prevent interfering sales. The total number of reservations which may be granted under the late Choctaw, Chickasaw, and Creek treaties, is not known to this office, but they are to be counted by thousands; and if, eventually, this office should have to revise the locations, and the conveyances of those reservations, the labor involved will be beyond estimate.

This branch of the business can, however, be most easily and properly disconnected from this office. The duties of locating, &c., are now performed by persons appointed by the War Department, and acting under its instructions, and who are in no wise responsible to this office, or under its control. All that this office should know, is the designation of the lands reserved; and if, therefore, it was only required to withhold from sale the lands which the War Department might inform it were Indian reservations, it could do so without inconvenience or much labor; and the business connected with the sales of those reservations being transacted by the Indian bureau of the War Department, this office would be almost entirely relieved from this additional source of great and rapidly increasing embarrassment.

Very respectfully, J. D. KING.

CHIEF CLERK of the General Land Office.

No. 2.

BUREAU OF SCRIP AND VIRGINIA MILITARY SURVEYS, February 1, 1836.

SIR: In compliance with your request, I now proceed to give a statement of the difficulties and embarrassments under which this bureau labors, as respects the duties confided to me, ever since the 1st of April, 1828, up to this day, and of the impossibility to attend to and perform these duties faithfully to the claimants and the government.

In 1828, the duties confided to me were: 1. The issuing of patents on Virginia military surveys.

2. The issuing of patents on United States military warrants granted for Revolutionary services.

3. The issuing of patents on warrants granted to the soldiers of the late war.

4. The issuing of patents for lands selected by soldiers of the late war in exchange for others.

5. The transmission of patents for purchased lands.

Although I had assistance, yet the correspondence arising out of the several branches of business referred to, could no longer be attended to by myself, and the duties enumerated under Nos. 3, 4, and 5, were transferred, in 1830, to the Bureau of Patents, then instituted, where they have ever since been performed; and, to account why the duties stated under Nos. 1 and 2 have not been attended to with the usual requisite promptitude, it may be proper to give a brief history of the events which caused the delay and the present embarrassment.

Colonel Richard C. Anderson, late surveyor of the lands in the Virginia military district in Ohio, died in the latter part of the year 1826, and great difficulty existed in appointing a successor, the President being of opinion that no appointment could be made until Congress had given authority by law, as no such officer had ever been appointed by the Executive. Colonel Anderson having been appointed under the authority of Virginia, by the officers of the Virginia continental line, (who, I believe, were specially convened for that purpose,) held the office for about forty years.

In consequence of Mr. Anderson's decease, very few surveys were returned to this office during the years 1827 and 1828, and even at that period, the issuing of patents on those surveys occupied the whole of the time of the clerks in this office who had charge of that branch of business; and in order to discharge the duty promptly, he occasionally, as you well know, required an assistant.

The act of 26th of May, 1826, in relation to the Virginia military lands, required certain formalities to be observed as respected the issuing of patents on surveys surrendered previous, to which the Secretary of War was required to certify that the warrant (on which the survey was made) was granted by Virginia for services, as by the laws of that State passed prior to the cession of the Northwestern Territory, would have entitled such officer, his heirs or assigns, to bounty land. This provision in the law was complied with by the then Secretary of War, until March, 1829, and the surveys that were returned up to that time were, in most instances, disposed of.

On the 24th of February, 1829, Congress passed an act authorizing the President to appoint a successor to Colonel Anderson, and on the 13th of March following, the President commissioned the present incumbent, Allen Latham.

The immediate consequences of the appointment of a surveyor caused the return of a number of surveys for patents, previous to the issuing of which the warrant and surveys had to be submitted to the Secretary of War for the certificate required by the proviso in the first section of the act above referred to, but the then Secretary refused to certify until evidence authorizing the act was laid before him. In consequence of this refusal, the warrants and surveys were, in almost every instance, returned to the proprietors or agents, with the request to procure the requisite evidence from the Virginia land office, at Richmond, where the warrants emanated. The delay thereby created raised great clamor among the owners, inasmuch as it involved them in considerable expense and loss of time; but before that evidence could be obtained, the summer had passed by, and the papers, together with the evidence, were not returned until the winter of 1829–30; but, notwithstanding all embarrassments, I succeeded in disposing of a great many cases, and Congress being made acquainted with the vexatious delay and expense which the claimants to patents were subjected to, repealed the embarrassing proviso above stated, by the act of the 23d of April, 1830, and I then flattered myself in having a prospect before me to conduct this business with despatch and fidelity to those interested, when Congress passed an act on the 30th of May, 1830, appropriating three hundred and ten thousand acres of land for satisfying Virginia state line and navy warrants, as well as those of the continental line, which had been issued, or were to be issued, by granting scrip therefor.

This law is commonly called the scrip law, and contained, also, provisions for warrants granted by the United States for the latter. I had, heretofore, as above stated, issued the patents, and that labor constituted a very considerable part of my duties.

The execution of this law was confided to the Secretary of the Treasury, but the burden thereof was imposed on the General Land Office, and the active duties necessarily devolved on me. In making the necessary arrangements for the execution of the scrip law, and before the issue of scrip commenced, the summer of that year had passed by, during which the number of surveys had gradually accumulated to three hundred, and the surveyor reported that one thousand yet remained in his office. To dispose of those three hundred would have required my exclusive attention, and that of an assistant, for eighteen months.

This branch of my duties was then laid aside, and the issue of scrip commenced, and the only clerks allowed me were Arthur L. McIntyre and Henry Sylvester; the former copied the correspondence, and the latter was exclusively engaged in recording the scrip and keeping the index, in which, occasionally, when the clamor for scrip was great, another assistant was allowed.

Mr. Sylvester was, in 1832, transferred to another department, and his experience lost to the bureau, which materially embarrassed me, inasmuch as the one who obtained his place possessed no experience in the business. Mr. McIntyre also obtained considerable information, and was of great use and help in the bureau, when subsequent appropriations were made for the same objects. The correspondence and daily inquiries and calls by persons interested increased steadily, and at sundry periods have I been exclusively and most laboriously, day after day, engaged in nothing else than giving verbal explanations and information to claimants, who personally appeared, particularly during the session of Congress; hence, the business arising under that act was not brought to a close until late in 1832, that is, so far as the issuing of scrip was concerned for the land appropriated. The respite which took place was of but short duration, and did not permit me, except in very few instances, to take up a single survey, for I had to prepare statements in order to execute the law subjecting the unlocated lots in the United States military district to private entry.

By the act of 13th of July, 1832, a further appropriation of three hundred thousand acres of land was made, and the issue of scrip under that law commenced in the autumn of that year, which, however, was disposed of in about nine months, but yet no relaxation was afforded; for by the act of 2d March, 1833, another appropriation of two hundred thousand acres was made, which was also disposed of, at the beginning of 1834, leaving only a fraction undisposed of, which was covered by claims suspended for further evidence.

The index and record-books of the proceedings under the several scrip laws, were made in such haste, and subjected to such frequent changes, that they should be renewed, together with the old war-office indexes, which had become very much mutilated and defaced by wear and tear of about forty years' use, and most especially of latter years; and by renewing them in the mode proposed, would afford a comprehensive view of all matters relative to the Virginia military claims, and hereafter would be an effectual check against any imposition that might be attempted.

To carry this proposition into effect, Congress, on the recommendation of the Commissioner, appropriated fifteen hundred dollars for this especial purpose, and I flattered myself then, that Mr. McIntyre would be detailed for this duty; for, independent of his excellent record hand, the general knowledge which he had acquired the preceding years rendered him well qualified for the work; but his suspension from office has compelled me to relinquish the undertaking, and I see no possibility to commence that most desirable work at the present time, because it would require my constant supervision, should a person be appointed without possessing any previous information, however well qualified he might be in all other respects.

The issue of scrip, under the act of 3d of March last, which appropriated six hundred and fifty thousand acres, commenced about the middle of October last, and the recording thereof is intrusted to Mr. Paine, and the copying of letters to Mr. Murray, who, although a very intelligent person, is, from inexperience, as yet of no other use. The daily inquiries relative to the claims and the calls for scrip engross my attention so much, that I can scarcely obtain time to make out applications for scrip; moreover, rival claimants to the scrip embarrass me very much, and lay me open to malicious inferences, and compel me to make constant references to the Commissioner for decisions; and to such extent do these adverse claims exist at this time that no other business can be taken up, and at what time the appropriation will be disposed of, I cannot pretend to say.

The scrip correspondence has already filled up three large books, containing only the record of letters on that subject, and the fourth is more than half filled; and the correspondence arising out of the several laws, even if no further appropriation should be made, will, for many years to come, employ one person exclusively. In the meantime, the surveys are accumulating, and are of more intricate character than heretofore.

Many important cases have been laid over for the Commissioner's decision, and, if obtained, how am I to issue the patents, the engrossing of which cannot be suffered to pass without a critical investigation and comparison of the patent with the record. To supervise this is necessarily my duty, and the same cannot be done, in consequence of continued interruption in the scrip business.

To the foregoing detailed duties, a new and very troublesome one has lately been added, arising out of the incorporation of a banking institution by the State of Ohio, for the purpose, as I am informed, of making loans on real estate; and you well know that the grants for mostly all the lands in that State emanated from the United States. Agencies of the bank are located, I believe, in the principal counties of Ohio, and any individual applying for a loan has to mortgage his estate. To ascertain the legality of the title to his land which the applicants for a loan may offer to mortgage, applications are made for copies of the original patents for lands lying within the military district, and a great part of my time during last summer has been consumed in making out copies.

The demand for such copies increases at a fearful rate. The applicants do not confine themselves to make their own application, because they cannot be attended to agreeably to their own wants and wishes, but they make their applications to members of Congress, and they to this office. The application for such copies, in a single letter, is sometimes for three and four, and the letters are always very urgent, and now amount to eighteen, requiring twenty-seven copies.

The letters which require answers, and some of very great importance, involving most elaborate and critical investigation, amount to one hundred and eighteen, and increase so rapidly that I am no longer able to pay any attention to them. It is almost too late, even with sufficient assistance, to dispose of the arrears, and it cannot be done until the scrip laws are disposed of. Mere manual labor alone cannot relieve me, for I am unable to prepare the work, and most of it I will have to do myself. A sensible relief would be afforded, if I could make a reference of the letters to another clerk, whose experience on the duties would enable him to answer direct inquiries and give information, but this is out of the question; none has sufficient information, and the want of it might only still further embarrass this branch of the business, were I to make such reference without accompanying it with the substance of the necessary answer.

The foregoing exhibits the causes, and my inability to make even a reasonable progress of the several duties confided. In addition, I will state that the surveys on file amount probably to between three and four hundred, of which the title papers to most of them are of a very complex nature, and some will require perhaps a whole day in the examination. The writing of one of this description (the surveys being, in many cases, of a very zigzag shape) will require a whole sheepskin, and a day to engross it, and another to record it; and to despatch all those on hand, of which at least one half are probably imperfect and require consequent correspondence, will demand the attention of two clerks for several years, there being at least six hundred surveys afloat or remaining uncalled for in the surveyor's office. To execute, therefore, this branch of business, and expedite the issuing of the patents, it ought to be committed to some other person, who, at the same time, could attend to the incidental correspondence arising under it, and preparing such copies of patents as may be called for. The issue of scrip, under the several acts of Congress, at the present time requires my undivided attention, the peculiar nature of which does not permit me to employ others, except that of recording the certificates and filing the papers.

The number of warrants surrendered, under the late appropriation, amount to seven hundred and forty, of which two hundred and forty are disposed of, that is, so far as the preparing of the scrip is concerned, but the greater portion of them is not yet issued, as in most of the large claims contest arises between rival agents, compelling me to ask advice from the Commissioner, and then to prepare reports to the Secretary; and here it is necessary to peruse vast numbers of documents, so that it is almost impossible to make out applications for the issue of scrip.

Many warrants are necessarily suspended, and require continual correspondence with the register of the land office at Richmond; so that about three hundred letters remain unanswered, and the number is daily increasing. This branch of business will, even if the present appropriations be disposed of, require for many years the time of one clerk to give information on personal calls, or by letter, and after the appropriations be disposed of, the indexes of these warrants on which scrip has been issued ought to be completed, otherwise the confusion will be such that no information of a correct nature can ever be given by a clerk who may hereafter succeed me. This I have most at heart, for it would be a high gratification for me to leave that business in a state that any person could understand it.

Finally, I would state that there is now a bill pending authorizing the issue of scrip on United States warrant, of which about fifty are already on file, and more may be expected on the enactment of that law.

Your most obedient servant,

FRED. KELLER.

Estimate of the number of clerks required.

First. The number of accounts unadjusted is 251, nearly the same as the annual number to be audited. One accountant can easily adjust two accounts per week, on an average, or one hundred per annum; consequently, six accountants (the present number in the office) can audit and report on six hundred accounts a year, if not otherwise occupied; but as each of the accountants is also a book-keeper, a great portion of every year is consumed in posting the books.

Secondly. One book-keeper, familiar with the business of posting, may make about one hundred and fifty entries per week, or eight thousand a year. It will therefore require seventeen book-keepers for one year to bring up the arrears of posting; but if no more be employed on the work, the arrears at the end of this year will be nearly as great as at its commencement. As, however, there may be some diminution in the sales of lands this year, as compared with last year, perhaps twelve assistant book-keepers, in addition to the present number of accountants, making eighteen in all in this branch of the business, will be found sufficient to adjust the accounts and post the books; the distribution of the assistant book-keepers to be regulated by the quantum of work assigned to each accountant.

Thirdly. The number of patents in arrear, to be written, recorded, examined, and issued, is one hundred and sixty-nine thousand one hundred and seven, which, according to an estimate made at the Patent Bureau, will require the labor of fifty clerks for one year.

It is hardly possible to say what force the office will require hereafter; but judging from the increase in the sales of lands for several years past, it would seem desirable that the number of clerks in the auditing and posting business should not be less than eighteen, as estimated above, and in the patenting department about forty.

Respectfully submitted.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, Surveying Bureau.

SIR: In obedience to your request that I should report on the existing state of the business in this bureau, showing what has been done since my duties commenced therein, I have to state as follows:

That, since the report made from this office in 1833, the duties of this branch of the business appear to have increased to double or triple the amount that they then were; and, as a necessary consequence, the back work has accumulated nearly in the same proportion.

For the six months during which I have had charge of the business, I have only been able, by the closest application and industry, and with the aid of the assistant draughtsman employed out of the appropriation for extra aid in this office, to attend to that part of the current business on this branch, (which could not be delayed without either putting a stop to or essentially interfering with official operations on other branches of the office,) and to place the files in such a state as to enable any one to refer with facility to the maps and other documents which are constantly in requisition, particularly by the book-keepers in registering the sales in the tract-books. During the period above mentioned, (with the exception of fifty-seven volumes previously arranged and bound,) the whole of the township plats on file in the office, amounting in all to 105 volumes, have been carefully arranged and permanently bound into suitable books, with an index to each volume, showing the maps contained therein, and a general index atlas to the whole has been constructed, by which they can be referred to with an ease and facility before unknown. The miscellaneous documents relating to boundaries, mines, salines, and special surveys, have likewise been all arranged by States, according to their subjects, and a table constructed by which they can readily be referred to; also, with the exception of those of the Southern States and the Territory of Florida, sketch maps of each of the States and Territories have been made separately, which answer as indexes to the district, military, and other maps, which are filed in cases arranged along the walls of the room, in all about 170. These index maps exhibit on the face of them not only the present extent of the surveys, but will also show, when completed, the present state of the numerous district maps as to the townships required to be protracted on them in continuation of the protractions previously made. These district maps were in all stages of progress up to the year 1830, but since that period it has not been in the power of the office to make any additions to them, nor will it be practicable to do so until increased means are afforded.

Various expedients or make-shifts appear to have been resorted to in this branch, from time to time, for want of the requisite assistance to enable it to meet the exigencies of the business connected with it, which otherwise would have most materially interfered with, if not positively stayed, many important operations in other branches.

I would take leave to remark, from the experience acquired since my incumbency on this branch of the service, that it appears to me to be utterly impracticable that all the duties which appropriately belong to it can be performed without an entire new organization of the system. The current business alone is more than can be attended to. Neither State nor district maps can be constructed, nor can the bureau attempt to exercise any supervision over the execution of the office work returned by the surveyors general, much less to conduct any portion of the various correspondence connected with the branch, until further provisions of law shall enable it so to do.

I have the honor to remain your obedient servant,

WM. F. STEIGER, Draughtsman.

REMARKS.

The gradual increase of the labors of the office can probably be best explained and understood by taking into consideration the increase in the number of tracts sold, which multiplies all the labors in a degree proportionate thereto. This table shows (col. 2) the annual appropriations for regular clerks and extra patent writing from the year 1826 to 1835, inclusive; also (col. 3) the total number of tracts sold during each of those years; (col. 4) the amount appropriated for clerk-hire for each tract sold in each year; being the amount of appropriation divided among the number of tracts. The office was reduced in 1827 (from which period its duties have been annually on the increase) from twenty-three to seventeen regular clerks, which is the present number. Taking as the basis of the calculation the appropriation for regular clerk-hire ($22,550) as it stood before 1827, when the reduction took place, and regulating the subsequent annual appropriations in proportion to the tracts sold annually, the 5th column shows what would have been the required annual appropriation, agreeably to the rate in 1826, which annual amounts, as here stated, certainly do not exceed what were the annual requirements for the exigencies of the service.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1460. [1ST SESSION.

ON AN APPLICATION FOR A GRANT OF LAND TO AID IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE MISSOURI AND MISSISSIPPI RAILROAD.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 3, 1836.

Mr. HARRISON, of Missouri, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the memorial of the Missouri and Mississippi Railroad Company, asking a donation of land to aid in the construction of their road, reported:

It appears that a company of individuals have associated themselves together, under the name and style of the Missouri and Mississippi Railroad Company, for the purpose of establishing a railroad—to begin at a point called Marion city, in the county of Marion, in the State of Missouri, on the Mississippi river, which shall extend thence through Palmyra, to a newly-located town in Shelby county, called New York; and thence shall be divided into two branches, the right of which to ascend, between the Mississippi and Charitan rivers, to the northern boundary line of the State; and the other branch to descend, along the course of the East Charitan, to the Missouri, at some point in or near the county of Howard.

Toward the accomplishment of this object, the memorialists state that they have already received, or secured to themselves and their successors, grants of land from the individual proprietors along the contemplated route of the railroad, from the point of beginning to the said town of New York, a distance of nearly fifty miles, and that they had taken a deed of trust for the same.

The memorialists further state, that measures preliminary to the sale of stock have been already taken, and a sufficient sum of money pledged to complete the work from the point of beginning, to that in which it is proposed to subdivide it into two sections; that operations will begin early in the spring of the present year; and that they expect, before its close, to have several miles of the track completed.

The application to Congress is made for the reason, mainly, that the memorialists, in the prosecution of their designs, cannot pass beyond the town of New York, in the county of Shelby, either on the right or left branch of the railroad, without entering on the public land of the United States; and the memorialists ask of Congress, for the purpose of successfully prosecuting and completing the road, the right of way over the public lands of the United States, over which it is necessary to extend the same; and also the right of pre-emption to each alternate section, for the space of ten years.

Your committee are of opinion that Congress should grant the prayer of the memorialists. Such a work is well calculated to enhance the value of the public lands through which it will run, and will, no doubt, be the means of bringing into the market a vast quantity of the public lands, which would otherwise not be noticed for many years to come. The government in the end will be the gainer. The northern branch of the proposed road will run up what is called the "Grand prairie," which is wide and unsettled, and from the nature of things will continue to remain unsettled for an immense length of time, unless some such scheme should be adopted to attract public attention and give value to the lands. A compliance on the part of Congress with the wishes of the memorialists, will not only make the wide and waste lands of this immense prairie valuable, but it will be the means of attracting a busy and active population to a quarter where now not a human voice is to be heard, and nothing to be seen but the wild beasts of the forest; and it will, too, no doubt, be the means of developing new resources, of starting up new channels of trade and commerce, and giving vigor and life to the agricultural and commercial interests of the country.

Your committee have accordingly reported in conformity with the prayer of the memorialists.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1461. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM FOR A BOUNTY-LAND WARRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 3, 1836.

Mr. GALBRAITH, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of William C. Hazard, of Rhode Island, reported:

That the petitioner represents himself as the only child and heir-at-law of Ezekiel Hazard, a soldier in the army of the United States, who died in said service, while a prisoner of war at Quebec, on the 25th day of February, 1814. The petitioner further states that he never had any legally-qualified guardian who could relinquish his claim for bounty land as minor child and heir of said soldier, and obtain or claim for him to the commutation of five years' half pay, allowed him by law; and that he did not arrive at the age of twenty-one years until the month of June, A. D. 1833. The evidence accompanying the petition satisfactorily proves the facts thus set forth; and it appears that the petition was referred to Congress at the session succeeding the petitioner's arriving at majority.

An act of Congress, passed the 16th day of April, 1816, the second section of which authorized the guardian of any child or children of any non-commissioned officer, musician, or private soldier of the army of the United States, who shall have been killed in battle, or died of wounds or disease while in the service of the United States during the late war, within one year from the passing of the act to relinquish the bounty land to which such non-commissioned officer, musician, or private soldier, had he survived the war, would have been entitled, and in lieu thereof to receive half the monthly pay to which such deceased person was entitled at the time of his death, for and during the term of five years. By an act of Congress, passed the 3d of March, 1817, this provision was extended for two years, and by an act passed the 3d of March, 1819, it was again extended for three years; but the provision was then suffered to expire on the 3d of March, 1822, and has not been since revived. The petitioner now asks to be placed in the same situation that his guardian would have been for him, had one ever been appointed for him, under these acts of Congress; and inasmuch as he never had a guardian, to have now the right in his own person, having reached his majority, of availing himself of the same advantage he would have enjoyed by law if he had had a guardian.

The committee are of opinion that the claim is founded in equity, and report a bill in accordance with the prayer of the petitioner.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1462. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LOTS IN PENSACOLA, FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 3, 1836.

Mr. LINCOLN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whose consideration was referred the petition of Peter Alba, reported:

That, in the year 1817, the Spanish authorities exposed to public sale a number of lots, situated in the city of Pensacola, when one Joseph Sweet, being the highest bidder, became the purchaser of ten of said lots. Sweet failing subsequently to comply with the conditions of sale, the present petitioner, upon application to the governor of Pensacola, was permitted, for a valuable consideration, to take up and purchase the same ten lots, together with five additional lots in said city, and these fifteen lots were adjudged and conveyed to him by the said governor.

After the cession of Florida to the United States, the petitioner, Peter Alba, exhibited to the commissioners appointed under the authority of the United States to examine and adjust land titles in that Territory, certain papers under which he claimed title to those lots. These papers appearing to the commissioners to be antedated and fraudulent, the claim of the petitioner to a confirmation of his title was rejected.

From communications, addressed to the committee by the Hon. Joseph M. White, who was one of the commissioners, and who is a member of this House, it now appears that the legal and sufficient evidence to sustain the claim of the petitioner, was, for some unexplained cause, withheld, or not produced; but, probably from a hope or expectation of greater advantage, testimony of a suspected and false character was substituted, and attempted to be imposed upon the commissioners. The documents which accompany the petition show satisfactorily that the petitioner had acquired a good and sufficient title to the property in the lots, and Mr. White has certified his opinion that, if Alba had presented this record (one of the above documents) to the commissioners, the title would have been confirmed, as all the other titles depending on that record, and similar in all respects to his, were confirmed. He adds, "that he (Alba) and those who claim under him, now exhibit the same evidence on which similar claims have been confirmed, and he thinks this title ought to be confirmed, and that it is a valid title under the treaty with Spain, and has been so decided by the commissioners and Congress heretofore in other cases in all respects the same."

It further appears to the committee that the petitioner, Alba, assigned, for a valuable consideration, a bona fide part of these lots to an innocent purchaser, ignorant of any fraud in the attempt to enlarge or maintain his claim to confirmation before the commissioners by feigned and false papers; and it is further represented to the committee that, since the presentation of this petition to Congress, the said Alba has deceased, leaving heirs interested in the title to the residue of said lots. While, therefore, the committee would be slow to recommend the interposition of the authority of Congress to the relief of one who, having even a good right to property, had attempted to enforce it by dishonest practices, yet, in behalf of honest purchasers, and the rightful heir, innocent of this wrong, they would adopt a measure which should remove the prejudice to which otherwise they might seem to be subjected, under the circumstances, with undue severity. With this latter view the committee report a bill.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1463. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO A BOUNTY LAND WARRANT FOR THE MILITARY SERVICES OF A SLAVE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 3, 1836.

Mr. CHAMBERS, of Pennsylvania, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the resolution of inquiry into the propriety of granting to Benjamin Oden, of Prince George's county, Maryland, a tract of bounty land, reported:

That it appears from the evidence submitted to the committee, that a slave named Frederick ran away from the said Benjamin Oden, his master, in the spring of 1814, and was advertised by the said master in the National Intelligencer, as a runaway slave. The said Frederick, on the 5th of April, 1814, was enlisted as a common soldier under the name of William Williams, by Ensign Martin, of the 38th infantry, and continued in the service of the United States until the 19th of March, 1815, when he died in the hospital, at Baltimore, which he entered on the 25th of October, 1814. It appears that said slave was recognized by a friend of the owner; and information communicated to Mr. Oden, the owner, some time in the year 1814, but at what time it is not stated; and that Mr. Oden went in pursuit of his slave to the head of South river, in Anne Arundel county, Maryland, where the troops were supposed to be stationed, but that he did not see him there, as a part of the troops had marched for Baltimore. It does not appear that Mr. Oden pursued him to Baltimore, or did anything more to reclaim his slave; but allowed him to remain in the service of the United States, as a soldier, until his death: though your committee have not learned that there was any obstacle to the discovery, apprehension, and release of his slave.

There was due by the United States, for monthly pay and bounty, a considerable sum of money, but as that subject is not referred to your committee, they forbear to express any opinion about the disposition of it.

The question submitted for the decision of the committee under the circumstances of this case is, is the owner, Benjamin Oden, entitled to receive from the United States the bounty land which said Frederick alias William Williams, would have received had he been a free man?

By the acts of Congress regulating the term of enlistment, and the emoluments to the soldiers of the army of the United States, during the last war with Great Britain, and at the time and enlistment of the said Frederick, it was provided, that whenever any soldier shall be discharged from service, who shall have obtained from the commanding officer of the company, battalion, or regiment, a certificate that he had faithfully performed his duty while in service, he shall be allowed and paid in addition to his pay, as bounty, three months' pay, and one hundred and sixty acres of land; and the heirs and representatives of those who have been killed in action, or died in the service of the United States, were to be paid and allowed the same bounty and land.

The claim or right of a soldier, under the laws of Congress, to the money, or land bounty, was dependent on a faithful service as a soldier until death, or his discharge from service by the United States. It was one of the great inducements of the government, to insure faithful service on the part of the soldier, so far as was dependent on himself, who was a free contracting citizen, that, at the end of his service, he should receive the bounty, and in case of his death in service, bounty land was to be some provision for the heirs and representatives of an ancestor who had perilled his life, and sacrificed it, in the military service of his country. By the laws of the United States, the enlistment of soldiers for the army was restricted to citizens who were not only willing, but, as free men, competent to contract with their government for a personal service in the army, which was to be enforced for the term of enlistment, under the same penalties of military regulations. It was a service that the individual was not only to perform by the term of his contract, but which the United States could, by all the powers of government, require and enforce, even with the forfeiture of life. Of this service, and the penalties for disobedience, the free man who entered into the contract or enlistment could not complain; as these incidents of service were or ought to have been known to him, when he enlisted, and were essential to the discipline and organization of an army.

The enlistment of a slave was contrary to law; he could make no valid contract with the government, which could be enforced against his consent or that of his master. The contract was one which the master or slave might void whenever either desired it; and the officer having the command would have been under obligations to have such slave dismissed the service, as soon as the fact become known to them that he was a slave; for, being such, he could not be an enlisted soldier of the army of the United States. The law, public policy, and security, forbid the enlistment of a slave, nor can your committee admit that a slave is to be enlisted and trained as a soldier in the army of the United States, even with the consent of his master. To allow slaves to be thus employed and instructed in the discipline of an army, the use of arms, and the other arts of war, would be imparting to them a species of instruction, that might increase much their means of mischief and influence over the other slave population, and endanger the peace and security of our fellow-citizens in the slaveholding States. Such training of slaves would not only familiarize them with the use of arms, but give them a confidence that would encourage insurrection, and make them more formidable in any servile war they might have influence to excite or direct.

The contract of enlistment of a slave should be considered not only void, but as fraudulent and mischievous to the community, and no benefit from such contract ought to be allowed to accrue to either the slave or master who permitted it.

Though the enlistment of the slave Frederick was without the knowledge of his master, and we are to presume against that consent, from the circumstance of his being an absconding slave, yet after such enlistment and detention was made known to Mr. Oden, he does not seem to have used reasonable diligence to recover and remove his slave. Though it was communicated to him, by an officer of the government, that such slave was an enlisted soldier in the 38th infantry, the corps to which he belonged being employed chiefly, if not entirely, in the summer and autumn of 1814, in the State of Maryland, where the master resided; yet the only evidence of pursuit furnished is, that he went once to the head of South river, in Anne Arundel county, Maryland, where the troops were supposed to be stationed; but, on his arrival there, the troops had marched for Baltimore. There is no evidence of pursuit to Baltimore, which would have subjected Mr. Oden to but little expense, trouble, or even loss of time. When he first learned that his slave was in the army is not stated, or at what time he went in pursuit to South river; yet it was probably in the summer or early in the autumn of 1814, as this slave was placed in the United States hospital, at Baltimore, on the 25th of October, 1814, where he remained in the United States service and support until he died, on the 19th of March, 1815, a period of near five months, from which an inference might be reasonably raised that he was either abandoned by his master, or that his master consented that he might be detained as a soldier.

Your committee cannot discover in the circumstances of this case, anything that would except it from the operation of a law and policy opposed to the enlistment of a slave; and as the contract of enlistment was a fraud upon the United States, and against the public peace and security, the master ought not to receive a reward and bounty under a contract which should have been voided by him, as soon as it came to his knowledge.

Entertaining the opinion that the said Benjamin Oden is not entitled to relief, the committee ask to be discharged from the further consideration of this case.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1464. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO A BOUNTY LAND-WARRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 3, 1836.

Mr. CARR, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the resolution instructing the committee to inquire into the expediency of granting a land warrant to the legal representatives of Daniel Warner, deceased, a soldier of the late war, reported:

That proof has been exhibited to the committee, stating that Daniel Warner, who is now dead, did enlist as a private soldier in the year 1814, in a company of regular troops, commanded by Captain Peters, of the 27th regiment of infantry, and that he, said Daniel Warner, departed this life on the 6th day of December, 1815, leaving a widow and three children; there is also exhibited to the committee a copy of a power of attorney, which purports to have been executed by Daniel Warner, on the 9th day of October, 1817, authorizing A. F. Crain, of the county of Washington, in the district of Columbia, to receive from the Commissioner of the General Land Office a patent founded on a military land warrant, No. 4838, dated the 23d day of May, 1816; there is also in evidence before the committee, a certified copy of a patent issued to Daniel Warner, late a private in Peters's company of the 27th regiment of infantry, for the southeast quarter of section thirty, of township six north, in range two east, containing one hundred and sixty acres, situate in the tract appropriated for military bounties, in the Territory of Illinois, which patent bears date 29th of November, 1817.

From the foregoing statement of facts, it appears evident to the committee, that the power of attorney, which seems to have been executed more than a year and a half after the death of the said Daniel Warner, must be a forgery, and that the patent was obtained through fraud.

The committee, therefore, are of opinion, that the patent which issued to the said Daniel Warner ought to be revoked, and that a patent do issue to his legal representatives, and to that end the committee report a bill.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1465. [1ST SESSION.

ON AN APPLICATION FOR A REDUCTION OF THE PRICE OF LANDS SOLD IN ALABAMA, IN 1818 AND 1819, TO THOSE PURCHASERS WHO PAID CASH AT THE SALE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 3, 1836.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred a memorial from the legislature of Alabama, and a petition from certain inhabitants of that State on the same subject, reported:

That it is stated in the said memorial, and the petitioners set forth, that in the years 1818 and 1819, they became the purchasers of lands at the public sales, which they intended for settlement and cultivation; that these purchases having been made when the public lands were sold under the credit system, they were bid off at the usual high and extravagant prices, at which lands were at that period generally sold.

That although, according to the terms of sale, under the law then regulating the sale of the public lands, a long credit was allowed to purchasers, payable by instalments annually, a few individuals, who were desirous of perfecting complete titles to the lands they purchased for their permanent home, which they wished to improve, instead of availing themselves of the credit allowed by law, paid the full amount of the purchase money, at the time of the sale of those lands, which they bought at prices very greatly beyond their real value.

The well-known embarrassment which became so general among the people in that State who purchased lands under the credit system, at the sales in 1818 and 1819, resulting from the exorbitant prices at which they were sold, together with other causes well understood, as a part of the history of the country during then and the two succeeding years, induced Congress, at the session of 1820 and 1821, to pass a law for the relief of purchasers of the public lands under that system, by which they were permitted, either to relinquish any portion of the lands they had bought, and apply the amount paid on such lands toward other tracts, so as to complete the payment thereof, to pay their lands out in cash at a discount of thirty-seven and a half per cent. from the original cost; or they were permitted to relinquish the original certificates of purchase, and take others of further credit, payable by instalments at six or eight years, according to the amount of the purchase money previously paid.

Soon after this liberal relief, induced from the known hardships attending the purchase of the public lands at that period, it was ascertained that this class of public debtors could never extricate themselves from the ruinous effects of the engagements into which they had been induced, by the extraordinary infatuation of the times, incautiously to enter; and Congress becoming convinced that general ruin and distress would be the certain fate of those individuals if they were required to perform their contracts, accordingly, at the session of 1829 and 1830, passed a law, the effect of which was to relieve almost all those who had availed themselves of the further credit under the former law, from the payment of any additional sum for their lands than what had been paid at the time of purchase, that being one fourth part of the price. By this, and other acts of Congress, all those who had paid any part of the price of any public lands purchased under the credit system, whether paid as a deposit, or as the instalment required in cash at the time of sale, for lands that afterward became forfeited according to the terms of purchase, were allowed to obtain scrip to the amount so paid on such forfeited lands, which was made receivable in payment for any other lands purchased from the United States. These several acts, it is believed, protected every class of purchasers under the credit system, except such as had made full payment, at the time of sale, in cash. The question then arises, whether they are not equally entitled to relief.

Your committee believe that the reason and motive which induced the enactment of the several relief laws above alluded to, were not only better to secure the debt due the government from an unfortunate class of debtors, whose circumstances would not enable them to fulfil their ruinous contracts, by allowing them longer time in some cases, and compromising at a less sum in others; but also to do what was conceived to be but justice to a class of citizens who certainly had the strongest claims upon the government to relief. Because, if, as between debtor and creditor, the government acted, in granting relief, only with a view of securing, in the best mode, under the embarrassed situation of the debtors, the most they could pay, it is evident that no relief would have been extended to those individuals who had forfeited their lands after the payment of the cash instalments, or who had forfeited the deposit money paid previous to the final purchase; since they were not then the public debtors, having forfeited the lands. Your committee are therefore urged to the conclusion that these laws were enacted, as well from a sense of justice toward those individuals who were admitted to have purchased the public lands at prices greatly beyond their true value; and that these wild and extravagant purchases were made, in a considerable degree, under the influence of that mistaken policy adopted by the government in disposing of the public lands on credit, as with a view of better securing the debt due the United States.

The abandonment of the credit system, and the reduction of the minimum price of the public lands, necessarily had a tendency to reduce the price of the lands which had been purchased at very high prices under that policy. This afforded one strong ground for the claim of relief, and it is believed to be equally good in favor of every class of purchasers.

Your committee, therefore, while they entertain the most perfect conviction of the correctness of the policy of passing the several relief laws for the purchasers of the public lands under the credit system, and confidently believe that nothing more than justice has been done for that misguided class of individuals; yet they are constrained to say that they have not been able to distinguish between the claims of those who have been relieved, and those who now ask similar benefits, and are in the situation represented in the memorial and petition, unless (which your committee cannot believe) it be a fault to have paid a debt before it could have been legally demanded. Your committee consider all the arguments urged in behalf of those who have been granted relief, to show the justice of their claim upon a government, the policy of which is to protect and not oppress her citizens, applies with equal force in favor of that class of purchasers who now ask the same or similar relief. Acting in conformity with these views, and upon the principle of equal justice, they report a bill, not to allow all the advantages to those individuals that have been obtained for some others, but to give them the benefits of the most limited relief that has been granted to any, by permitting all those who purchased lands under the credit system, and paid the full price in cash at the time of sale, to receive a certificate which may be used in payment for any lands subject to private entry, in the same State or Territory, for a sum equal to 37½ per cent. upon the cost of such lands, provided it does not reduce the price below the then minimum price of the government lands; in which case, only so much as will make the cost equal only to such minimum shall be allowed in such scrip.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1466. [1ST SESSION.

FRAUDS COMMITTED UNDER THE PRE-EMPTION LAWS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 10, 1836.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 6, 1836.

SIR: I now have the honor to submit, for your information and that of the Committee on Public Lands, a number of documents on the subject of fraudulent practices, evils, and embarrassments, growing out of and essentially connected with the pre-emption principle, which could not be copied in time to submit with the communication I had the honor to make to you on the 28th ultimo.

I would respectfully request your attentive consideration of these papers, so far as your arduous duties will admit, and would remark that these papers afford only a small portion of the evidences which, if time admitted, could be adduced to the national legislature, as to the evils growing out of pre-emption laws.

As connected with the general subject of the pre-emption principle, it is deemed proper to allude specifically to the claim alleged to the tract of land near Chicago, on which the United States troops are garrisoned, said to be worth from half a million to a million of dollars, which formed the subject of a communication from this office, of the 14th of September last, published in the "Globe" newspaper, on the 19th of September, for public information; a copy of which is hereto annexed.

I have the honor to remain, most respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. THOMAS EWING, Chairman Committee on Public Lands, Senate U. S.

Site of Fort Dearborn, (Chicago,) Illinois.

We have been requested to publish the following letter, from the Commissioner of the General Land Office to a gentleman in the West, for the information of those who take an interest in the subject, and to obviate the necessity of official replies to numerous inquiries of individuals:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, September 14, 1835.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 25th ultimo, requesting information on the subject of the fractional section, No. 10, in T. 39 N., of range 14 E., adjoining the town of Chicago, and which is the site of Fort Dearborn, in the occupancy of the United States as a garrison, I have the honor to advise you that said fraction was expressly reserved for military purposes, as far back as the year 1824, and has continuously and invariably been regarded ever since by the government as a special reserve for public use. The fraction, it is believed, contains less than the quantity of an eighth of a section, and, as a fractional tract, is regarded as wholly appropriated to the uses for which it was originally reserved.

Several bold attempts have been made to allege a pre-emption right to this valuable tract of land, in the face of all the circumstances which had induced the government, as a matter of necessity and expediency, to reserve it for public use. Those attempts, first through the medium of the land officers at Palestine, and subseqnently that of the officers at Danville, when they respectively had jurisdiction over the lands in that region, were, of course, repelled and discountenanced by the government.

You are aware that all these circumstances occurred before I came into office.

The idea that the views of the government, in relation to this fraction, so fully made known by this office at different periods, and through different channels, had become matter of perfect notoriety, appears, in the midst of the great pressure of the details of business, naturally to have drawn off the attention of this office from issuing any further express instructions relative thereto, when the region of country was detached from the Danville district, and made to form the northeast land district of Illinois. It is surprising that, in the face of all the circumstances, the land officers at Chicago should have admitted this tract, estimated to be worth from half a million to a million of dollars, to be entered under the allegation of a pre-emption right. Such a reprehensible and preposterous act, originating in whatever cause it may, is of course of no sort of validity. As soon as the fact was ascertained, the officers were instantly ordered to correct the proceedings; and the receiver has been directed to refund the amount of purchase-money (a little less than $100) paid by the alleged pre-emptor.

I am, &c.

ETHAN A. BROWN.

POINT COUPEE, LA., January 3, 1835.

MY DEAR SIR: I avail myself of this early moment to give you my views of the unprecedented and palpable frauds practised in the land offices in this State, under the provisions (as a cloak) of the act of Congress, approved the 19th June, 1834, reviving the act of the 29th May, 1830, granting pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands.

Enclosed is a sample for the eye of yourself and Judge Porter, to form your opinions of the loose manner in which honest citizens are deprived of the advantages so kindly held out to them who settled in good faith, and the government swindled out of two thirds, at least, of the best public lands in the State of Louisiana. I was in the land office in New Orleans a short time past, when the enclosed application was made, by handing the paper to the clerk of the register, (the register, as usual, absent,) by Mary Sturgen, and on examining his plat for the sections, township, and range, he said the sections were taken by William Bryan and Sarah Bryan, who proved their occupation and cultivation by William Summers, Hally B. Roundtree, and Samuel Westaker, upon which she replied, that they had all sworn to falsehoods, as she would prove by all her neighbors, that she settled on the land in 1830, and had continued to reside on and cultivate the same until this time, and that no other person had occupied or cultivated this land but herself, and those who worked for her.

I then told this woman to take home her application and testimony, and told the clerk to give her the names of the applicants, witnesses, and justice, who had thus taken her land, and charged her to bring all to me as soon as she learned I had returned home, and I would have the persons apprehended and committed to answer to an indictment for perjury.

A few days past, she came to my house with her son Robert, who appears as an applicant with her, and the sample sheet enclosed, with a list of those names from the clerk of the register. She told me the applicants were gone; I suppose to the usual retreat—Texas. I then told her to go back, remain on her land, and if any person attempted to take it from her, let me know, and I would protect her, and as soon as the government filled the land offices with efficient officers, I would have her testimony taken properly, entitling her to the right to purchase, and if she hears of the perjurers' returning, she is to bring witnesses to enable me to have them arrested.

It has been intimated to me by many, and, I fear, with too much ground of cause, that not only many concerned in the land department, but others high in office and confidence in the State, are deeply interested in this swindling business of land-floating.

When floating assumed a daring stride, and even men, barred by the oaths of office, began to speak without restraint, I made some inquiries for the fountain-head of the floating current, as if wishing to purchase, and was uniformly answered, "Go to Meloden, in New Orleans, and you can get whatever number you wish." Afterward, when in the register's office, filing a claim and testimony for a confirmation of a Spanish title to the land I live on, I saw a man come in and return one of these blank floats and transfer, filled up, as you see the enclosed, with the names of the applicant, witnesses, and justice, but the clerk filled the blanks for section, township, and range, in the float. On this man pointing his finger to the numbers in the plat, he told the clerk he could fill those blanks in the transfer at another time; the clerk answered, "Yes," and lodged them both in his desk.

This man, (who called himself Christie,) it was said, was a deputy surveyor, or had been; that he sold some floats to Meloden for one hundred dollars each, which was too cheap, but that he had done it to get a start to procure more, and for which Meloden should pay higher prices. He introduced himself to me, and proposed furnishing any number if I would furnish the funds, as he knew all the best lands in the State to lay the floats on. I answered him, that he had better examine well the ground he was passing; and that for myself I did not like to dabble in dirty water. I then left him and the clerk in the office. After I returned home, I learned that many floats had floated into Point Coupee for sale; I inquired for some; one or two were soon handed to me. The applicant's name, witness's name, and justice's name, all filled out and signed and certified; but the blanks of the sections, townships, and ranges, yet remaining to be filled. I observed that such swearing to blanks was surely a short cut to floats, and asked the reason why those blanks were still open, being sworn to. The answer was, he did not know where to lay them on good land, as so many had gone before him. I advised the holder to return them, as he might see, as well as myself, that they were obtained by forgery or perjury, as all the writing on the face of the paper was in the same handwriting; and to have nothing to do with this floating business. He has told me since that he has returned them.

Again: a man by the name of Bishop, who said he was of New York, called on me, professing a wish to buy my land, and to know if I and my neighbors intended to save our back concessions. Supposing him a tool or understrapper of the banditti, I asked him if he was attached to the company of Robert J. Walker (of notoriety) in the land-jobbing Green school. He said Mr. Walker was of the company, that he had saved fifty or sixty thousand acres in Arkansas, since the passage of the present pre-emption law. I asked him where Walker got the money to pay for such a quantity of land. He answered, he had paid for all he had bought, and could command money to pay for all he wished to buy; and that he (Bishop) could draw on New York for five hundred thousand dollars, if the quantity of land to be had required it.

This man, Bishop, has been (as I am informed and believe) through all the valuable public land in the State, with hireling surveyors, whether deputies under the surveyor general, (as many allege,) I cannot say; but I do say that I cannot get any deputy, and I have heard other citizens say that they could not get a deputy, to run out old lines, or locate back concessions, without paying three prices, until this banditti of floating speculators is served. And I believe that not more than from fifty to one hundred honest settlers, in good faith, were entitled to a preference for a quarter-section in the parish of Point Coupee. I think that more than five times that number of sections have been covered by floats; and I do believe that this banditti, and many of the villains of Vicksburg notoriety, have combined and confederated together to take the whole of the most valuable lands in the State, as well as elsewhere; the small fry and understrappers to apply for and prove up; then sell to the floating company, and slip off to Texas, leaving this banditti to hold the swindled prize, under that well-intended principle of law, that third innocent purchasers cannot be deprived of their lands, not recollecting that equally wise rule, that titles, obtained through fraud, are void, and no subsequent act of parties can make the same valid.

Again: the practice of obtaining many floats has been for the father, and sons or daughters, perhaps down to the cradle, to claim to have lived together and cultivated on various sections. Thus, taking to the father and first son one quarter jointly, and each a float for eighty acres, and the balance of the family to take floats for the other tracts, purporting to have been cultivated, when not a stick had been cut on the land; and where there are no sons or daughters, the banditti furnish applicants and witnesses, to prove for each other that all lived together, or by twos, on the quarters to be taken jointly, and the others take the floats, when, in numbers of instances, the land has never been seen by any of the parties, except, perhaps, the examining agent, as Bishop, to see if the land is good, or was pointed out by the hired surveyor. As a proof of this kind of family arrangement, Mary Sturgen, applicant in the enclosed sheet, admitted to me that her son Robert, signed as an applicant, was but twelve years old, and, from his appearance, he cannot be more. When I told her that the law allowed no such tricks, she said she was advised that, by using his name, she could get two quarters, and, of course, double the sum she had agreed to sell the one quarter for. She said that Justice Dawson knew the age of her son, and that, when he took the affidavit and testimony for Bryan and his daughter, he knew the girl was under age, and that all of the parties were swearing falsely, as he well knew when she settled on the land, and that no other persons occupied or cultivated it but her or those who worked for her. I will here remark that, when I detected fraud in the register's office, and told Mary Sturgen to go home and remain on her land, that she could not be deprived of her right unless she sold it for a trifle to speculators, as many of the ignorant settlers had done, her speculating purchaser, by the name of Lewis, then at her elbow, told her that she was at liberty to drop the sale to him, on which she said she would do so.

I do think that the true interest of the government requires speedy action in this behalf; that the present inefficient officers either be superseded, or more competent persons, as supervisors, sent to their aid, to overhaul every entry made in the offices under the provisions of the present law, and the testimony re-examined or expunged (as in many cases must be done,) and new testimony taken; and that all further proceedings in the register's and surveyor's offices, touching locations or entries of pre-emptions or floats, be enjoined or suspended, until a full legal and honest investigation be had on claims made, and to be made, under the provisions of the present law; otherwise, two thirds, at least, of the best land in the State will be lost to honest citizens, or to the government, and be monopolized by a base set of swindling and suborning knavish villains.

I am far from charging public officers with turpitude of intentions, but I feel clear in noticing their negligence and errors which they could have avoided. Mr. Canonge, and Mr. Cannon, the register and receiver at New Orleans, were absent at the North nearly all the summer and fall, when many of these abuses of their offices were committed; leaving their offices under the sole control of their clerks, whom I have ever considered only recorders of such acts and writings as were proper to be recorded in their offices; and as the register and receiver, in certain cases, sitting as a board, were sole judges of the rights of applicants, on the testimony adduced, could not delegate their judicial power to their clerks, therefore the adjudications by the clerks must be void, and, at least, great inconvenience would result. Then the neglect of their offices, and erroneously suffering their clerks to fill their places, and sign their names officially, is, I conceive, highly reprehensible.

I must say that, although neither are competent to the discharge of all the duties of their offices, yet the receiver, when at home, is prompt to attend when called on, but the register can never be found at his office when he can locate himself elsewhere.

These offices should be filled with profound legalists, and good judges of the human character, as well as men of strict attention and integrity to their responsibilities.

The law requires, as well as the written instructions of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, the testimony to be taken before the register and receiver, sitting as a board, unless inconvenient to have the witnesses at the office, when it is to be taken elsewhere, before some justice, I should suppose, or commissioners from a court. These modes have not been pursued by the board at New Orleans, nor has a proper certificate of character been required of applicants or witnesses; the whole has been under the control of the clerk of the register, and he has received them uniformly in the form you see in the enclosed—blanks made out somewhere, and filled up somehow, by honest or dishonest means, we know not which, perhaps both, but under no known sanction of law.

I am, with true esteem, most obediently, your humble servant.

Application to the Register and Receiver of the Land Office for the southeastern district of Louisiana, at New Orleans.

GENTLEMEN: In virtue of an act of Congress, approved on the 19th June, 1834, entitled, "An act to revive the act entitled, 'An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands,' approved on the 29th May, 1830," we apply to become the purchaser of a certain tract of land, situated and lying in township No. 2, of range No. 9 east, designated as, and being, section No. 14, containing —— acres, agreeably to the township plat, on file in the register's office. We cultivated the said tract of land (designated as above) in the year 1833, by raising corn, &c., thereon; and continuing on the same, was in actual possession and peaceable occupancy thereof at the date of the passage of the above-mentioned act. We therefore pray that we may be permitted to enter the said tract according to law.

MARY STURGEN,
ROBERT STURGEN.

Affidavit of applicant.

Personally appeared before me, Thomas Dawson, a justice of the peace, Mary Sturgen and Robert Sturgen, who, being duly sworn, depose and say, that the facts contained and set forth in their foregoing application are true, and that every matter and thing therein stated is strictly correct. So help them God.

THOMAS DAWSON,
A justice of the peace, in and for the parish of West Feliciana, and State of Louisiana.

Corroborative testimony.

Also, personally appeared Jesse L. Sanders and William P. Mulder, of said parish of West Feliciana, who, being duly sworn, declared (in answer to interrogatories to them propounded by me) that they are well acquainted with the said Mary Sturgen and Robert Sturgen, of the parish of Point Coupee; that their within application has been fully read and explained to these deponents, and that all the facts therein contained, in relation to the cultivation and possession, by the said Mary Sturgen and Robert Sturgen, of the land described in the said application, are, to these deponents' knowledge, true.

And these deponents further declare that they are in no manner interested or concerned with the said applicants in the said tract of land.

THOMAS DAWSON, Justice of the Peace.

Agreeably to the provisions of the 9th section of the act of Congress, approved on the 19th of June, 1834, Mary Sturgen and Robert Sturgen were permitted to take lands elsewhere, in order to make up the quantity the law allowed each. They, in consequence, entered section No. 13, township No. 2, of range No. 9 east; said entry not interfering with other settlers having a right of preference, as it has been satisfactorily proved to the register and receiver, by the following testimony, viz.:

Personally appeared before me, Thomas Dawson, one of the justices of the peace in and for the parish of West Feliciana, Jesse L. Sanders and William P. Mulder, who, being duly sworn, declare that it is to their knowledge that the above described section is not cultivated or inhabited by any person who is or was entitled to a right of preference.

I hereby certify that the facts contained on this sheet are, to my knowledge, true, and that all the witnesses are gentlemen and ladies of truth and veracity.

Further corroborative testimony.

STATE OF LOUISIANA:

Personally appeared before me, the undersigned, justice of the peace, Jesse L. Sanders, William P. Mulder, Mary Sanders, Ann Mulder, William Kean, who, being duly sworn, declare that Mary Sturgen and Robert Sturgen were the first settlers of both the aforesaid described sections, their houses being near the line that divides said sections; and that said applicants settled there about 1830 or 1831, and have kept said sections in cultivation ever since, each having labored on said section, and are now in possession; and that no other person or persons are better or as well entitled to said described land as they are; and that none of these deponents are in any manner interested in said described land.

WASHINGTON CITY, August 25, 1835.

To ANDREW JACKSON, President of the United States:

By an act of Congress, dated 29th of May, 1830, giving to actual settlers and occupants on the public domain the right of pre-emption, according to the requisites stated in said act, and by subsequent acts continuing in force the act of 1830, a new era was introduced on the subject of land claims to the citizens of western Louisiana. Although the legislation of Congress on the subject of public lands is as mild and beneficent as any system on earth, since the government tolerates, in the first instance, a trespass in the citizen which subsequently perfects a title in himself; yet, amid this mild and merciful legislation, persons are found perverting the designs of these acts to selfish and corrupt purposes. I will call your attention to a part of these acts, in order more fully to understand my subsequent statement. By the act of Congress of 1830, where two persons live on the same quarter-section, cultivate and improve it, the register and receiver are required, upon due proof exhibited to their satisfaction, to divide the quarter-section between the occupants. Independent of this, the law accords to each of them what is called a pre-emption float of eighty acres each, to be located on any unappropriated lands of the government. It will be supposed for a moment that two pre-emption floats are located as required by law. The rights of the occupants on the first quarter-section, according to the construction of the law which prevailed at the land office at Opelousas, Louisiana, have not yet ceased. The moment they make the location of their pre-emption floats, they are entitled to what is called a back concession, which is the same quantity of land as the pre-emption float itself. These two occupants of a quarter-section have that quarter-section divided equally between them. They acquire by the accident of occupancy a right to 320 acres each.

In addition to this view of the question, if men were strictly honest, it would present no avenues for imposition, frauds, or perjuries. I regret to say, because I religiously believe, that the most shameful frauds, impositions, and perjuries, have been practised upon the land office at Opelousas, Louisiana. I make no imputation upon the official conduct of Mr. King, the late register at Opelousas, nor upon the present receiver; but from my statement it will appear that they must have been most grossly imposed upon, and should have put them more completely upon their guard, so as to have guarded themselves against the wiles of notorious land speculators. I will here mention a construction of the law, which was adopted by the officers at Opelousas, and most of the pre-emption floats have been admitted under that construction: two persons living on a quarter-section, or who pretend that they do, on lands not worth a cent an acre, men who can neither read nor write, men who have never seen a survey made, and know nothing about sections or quarter-sections of land, and who, in point of fact, live five, ten, and, in many instances, twenty miles apart, go before a justice of the peace, as ignorant as themselves, and swear to all the facts required by law to make their entry; this, too, in a section of country never surveyed by the authority of government, nor any competent officer thereof. Would it be believed that any officer of the government would admit an entry under circumstances like these, upon the oaths alone of the parties interested in making them, and upon lands not surveyed, approved, and returned by higher authority? Can it be possible that an entry of that kind can either be in conformity with law, justice, or right? I state, of my own knowledge, that many of these pre-emption floats are precisely in the situation above detailed. I am authorized to name Colonel Robert A. Crane, of Louisiana, who states positively he knows many of them to be founded upon the same corrupt perjury, persons swearing that they lived on the same quarter-section, when, in truth and in fact, they never had lived so near each other as five miles. It is not believed that there are thirty honest pre-emption floats in the whole western district of Louisiana; and yet, since the first of January, 1835, up to the 27th of May, there have passed, at the land office at Opelousas, at least 350. And who are the owners of these floats principally? One, or not more than three speculators. Since the first of January, of this year, up to the 27th of May, day after day, week after week, I might say month after month, a notorious speculator, and who must have been known as such to the officers of the land office at Opelousas, was seen occupying that office to the almost total exclusion of everybody else. No other person appeared to understand how to get pre-emption floats through; and no one did succeed until an event, which will be stated below. He could be seen followed to and from the land office by crowds of free negroes, Indians, and Spaniards, and the very lowest dregs of society, in the counties of Opelousas and Rapides, with their affidavits already prepared by himself, and sworn to by them, before some justice of the peace, in some remote part of the country. These claims, to an immense extent, are presented and allowed; and upon what evidence? Simply upon the evidence of the parties themselves who desire to make the entry. And would it be believed, that the lands where these quarter-sections purported to be located, from the affidavit of the applicants, had never been surveyed by the government, nor any competent officer thereof, nor approved nor returned surveyed? I further state, that there was not even a private survey made. These facts I know; I have been in the office when the entries were made, and have examined the evidence, which was precisely what I have stated above. This state of things had gone on from the first of January until about the middle of April or first of May of the present year, when it was suddenly announced that a more rigid rule would thereafter be adopted; which was this: that a sworn deputy surveyor of the United States should, in all cases, make the survey, in order to ascertain if the parties were on the same quarter-section; and to testify before the register that such was the fact. Besides this, they required the applicants to produce very satisfactory evidence from their neighbors that they had cultivated and improved as stated in their notice. Pre-emption floats, when tested by this rule, were found to be very few indeed. Governments, like corporations, are considered without souls, and according to the code of some people's morality, should be swindled and cheated on every occasion. Whether such a distinction can be reconciled to either morality or law, one thing is certain, that equal protection and advantages are not afforded to all. I would further suggest to your excellency to withhold your signature from all patents when entries have been made, and consequent pre-emption floats have resulted, since the first of June, 1834, to the first of July, 1835; that James Ray, lately appointed register of the land office at Opelousas, Louisiana, and some other competent persons, be appointed a board of commissioners, to examine all the entries from which pre-emptions have resulted during the above period; that the said board of commissioners have the power to administer an oath to all persons who may appear before them desiring to make entries of land; that some qualified attorney be appointed to appear before the said commissioners to represent the interest of the government, to put cross-interrogatories to elicit the facts, whether true or false, in regard to the validity or illegality of the said claims; that this said board of commissioners shall, under the supervision of the said attorney, take down the evidence in each entry, with its consequent pre-emption floats; shall file the same with them; shall give their opinions upon each, respectively, in writing, with references to the evidence and law, and shall forward the same to the Commissioner of the General Land Office; that if said board, upon the examination of any pre-emption claims or floats, which hitherto have been allowed, are satisfied that they were passed upon the affidavit of the parties alone, without other and corroborating evidence, and if they are further satisfied that the land proposed to be entered has not been surveyed by a competent officer of the government, approved and returned to the Land Office, they shall unconditionally reject the said claims, with their consequent pre-emption floats. These suggestions are made, not with the belief that they may be adopted in the investigation that may be ordered, but simply with a hope that they might afford some aid in laying down the rules of that investigation. It may not prove so extensive a fraud, and show such gross impositions upon the officers of the government, and such glaring perjury, as did that Arkansas land speculation; yet the investigation will show enough of each to entitle this administration to the lasting gratitude and approbation of its friends in western Louisiana, as well as a majority of its political opponents.

I am, with great respect, sir, your obedient humble servant,

BENJ. F. LINTON, District Attorney, Western District of Louisiana.

Extract of a letter from —— Morgan to Henry H. Johnson, Esq., dated October 6, 1835.

"It is stated, and generally believed, and the receiver's books of public lands will show the fact of the case, if it is one, that spurious claims have covered all the Atchafalaya railroad, all the lands on the Granfete bayou, Maringin, Fordorche, Atchafalaya, Latanache bayous, something like one hundred and fifty-four miles in front, with one and a half miles deep, have been located within ninety days by different companies and different men. It may be that the law warrants such locations; there are many things make me believe there is something wrong. As to improvements, none were ever made on not over fifteen of all the one hundred and fifty or sixty miles front; and only a few surveyors and bears ever passed over them. If you believe the information worth the attention of the Patent or Land Office, you are at liberty to communicate the fact; the books, names, and surveys, can easily be examined. If the companies and individuals are acting correctly, this information can do them no harm; if incorrectly, they ought to be stopped at once. I write you this information, as there are big fish engaged in this traffic, though little ones do the business; how it is done, as yet I have not been able to learn, except by lax construing and foul swearing.

"There are yet many small claims been investigated twenty years, not approved of, and the claimants entitled to them; while a set of speculators are getting titles by proving pre-emptions by hundreds where they never were. If it is law, it is an unjust one."

WASHINGTON CITY, January 4, 1836.

SIR: I present herewith a number of affidavits in relation to pre-emptions obtained by Gabriel H. Tutt to the southeast quarter, Richard Tutt to the east half of the northeast quarter, and Benjamin Tutt to the west half of the northeast quarter, of section number three west, in the land district of Demopolis, in the State of Alabama. These affidavits have been taken by some of the most respectable men in the State of Alabama, and have been sent on to me for the purpose of procuring the grant of the above pre-emptions to be set aside, on the ground that they were obtained by fraud and imposition; and that this is the fact I entertain no doubt whatever. Shortly before I left Alabama I was in the immediate vicinity of the above lands, and heard a number of persons speaking of the manner in which they had been paid out; and the opinion was general, without exception, that a most shameful and scandalous imposition had been practised upon the government. There is no doubt that all the lands mentioned were paid out at the instance and for the benefit of James B. Tutt; a man, to my knowledge, of notoriously bad character. Gabriel H. Tutt, as the affidavit shows, is a citizen of Greene county, (the county in which I reside myself,) and I know him well, and that he never did reside on the quarter-section paid out in his name, or near it; his residence in Greene county being at least fifteen or twenty miles from the land paid out in his name. Richard Tutt and Benjamin Tutt are, I believe, both public paupers and have been so for years—I am confident as to one, and am satisfied in my own mind as to the other. I have known them for several years; they have lived in Greene county, and have been supported at the charge and expense of the county. Neither of them, as the affidavits show, have resided on the lands since they were paid out; and Richard Tutt was not on the land paid out in his name until January 1834, and had no improvements whatever in 1833.

I know several of the persons by whom the accompanying affidavits were made, and know them to be men of honesty and integrity. Among the affidavits there is one made by R. Eskridge, in relation to the time at which a man named Brown came to the State of Alabama and went to live with James B. Tutt. If I mistake not, Brown's affidavit was procured and relied on, in paying out these lands; and the object of Eskridge's affidavit, if I understand it, is to show that Brown swore to what he could have known nothing about. It will be observed that Mr. Eskridge, in his affidavit, does not mention the year particularly, but only the month. It is obvious, however, that he meant the year 1834, as that was the year the affidavit was taken. I have written to Alabama to have his affidavit taken over, so as to ascertain the time of Brown's coming to Alabama explicitly.

If, after examining the accompanying affidavits, a doubt should remain as to the fraudulent and improper nature of the transactions they are intended to expose and have set aside, I feel authorized to say, from the high character of the persons who have undertaken the task of having the matter investigated, that upon that doubt being made known by the department, ample additional evidence will be produced to remove it. I feel bound to state, in justice to the gentlemen who have interested themselves in the matter, that they do not pretend to set up any claim whatever to the land, and I am not aware that they have the slightest pecuniary interest in the matter; a shameful fraud, as they honestly believe, has been committed in their immediate neighborhood, and they have come forward to expose and defeat it.

If reckless and unprincipled men can succeed in cheating and defrauding government, by appropriating and securing to their own use public land at the minimum price, under acts of bounty and benevolence, passed for the benefit of honest, enterprising, and industrious settlers, corruption and venality must and will become the order of the day, wherever there is a quarter-section of public land left worth contending for; and it is greatly to be feared that this has become too much the case already. May I ask to be informed of any steps taken by the department in this matter, as early as convenient?

I have the honor to be, your servant, JNO. ERWIN.

[L. S.] DANIEL WOMACK, Clerk.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1467. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO A BOUNTY LAND-WARRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 11, 1836.

Mr. KING, of Georgia, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the memorial of Eliza Causin and Ann Turner, heirs and representatives of the late Colonel John H. Stone, reported:

That this claim has been several times referred to committees which have concurred in acknowledging the great merit and services of the late Colonel John H. Stone, but have differed upon the propriety of affording the relief prayed by his heirs. For a fuller view of the claim than the committee think it necessary here to present, they refer to document 379, 23d Congress, 1st session, and to document 50, 23d Congress, 2d session.

Colonel Stone resigned his commission in August, 1779, and it is not pretended that he was strictly entitled, under any of the resolutions of Congress passed for the benefit of such officers as should continue in service to the end of the war. But it is insisted that the great merit of the officer, and the laudable and patriotic motive which induced his resignation, should give to his heirs the benefit, at least, of the resolutions of the 15th May, 1778, and of the 16th September, 1776, which said resolutions were in existence at the time of his resignation. By the resolution of the 15th May, 1778, it was resolved as follows: "That all military officers, commissioned by Congress, who now are or hereafter may be in the service of the United States, and shall continue therein during the war, and not hold any office of profit under these States, or any of them, shall, after the conclusion of the war, be entitled to receive annually, for the term of seven years, if they live so long, one half of the present pay of such officer," &c.

It appears from the evidence before the committee, that Colonel Stone was appointed auditor by the State of Maryland immediately on his resignation; and therefore could not have claimed the benefit of the said resolution, even if he had continued in service to the end of the war.

The resolution of September, 1776, would have entitled Colonel Stone to a bounty of 500 acres of land, if he had continued in service to the end of the war, in terms of said resolution. And the committee have felt strongly inclined to recommend thus far the relief which seems to be expected by the petitioners; but when the committee considered the great number of meritorious officers who resigned during the war, after doing good service to their country, the delicacy of distinguishing between the merits of such officers, and consequently the great number of claims to which relief, in this case, would give rise; and when they considered further, that all extra pay or military bounty is in its very nature personal; and all claims for it by heirs, much weaker than that of the ancestor, they have thought it inexpedient to make a special exception, even in favor of the descendants of the brave and patriotic Stone.

The committee more readily come to this conclusion, as an unfavorable report was made on the claim at the last session by the Committee on Revolutionary Claims, to whom the subject was more properly referred. And the same committee made an unfavorable report at the present session on the petition of William K. Johnson, executor of George Evans, upon a claim of a character similar to the claim under consideration. (See document 143.) The committee, therefore, propose the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioners be rejected.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1468. [1ST SESSION.

REMONSTRANCE OF CITIZENS OF ARKANSAS AGAINST THE CONFIRMATION OF THE SPANISH GRANT OF LAND TO CARLOS DE VILLEMONT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 11, 1836.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

The memorial of H. F. Walworth, B. L. Miles, and others, respectfully showeth: That your memorialists and other citizens of the United States and of the Territory of Arkansas, feel themselves much interested in a portion of what they conceive to be the public lands of the government within the said territory, but which is claimed by certain individuals under a pretended Spanish grant to a certain Carlos de Villemont.

Your memorialists and other citizens, many years ago, encouraged by the pre-emption laws of the United States, believing that the title to this land had passed to the United States, and finding it unoccupied, and as far as they had any opportunity of knowing, unclaimed, made their settlements and improvements thereon, at great labor and expense, and subjected themselves to all the hardships incident to a new settlement; and now that they find themselves established in comfortable homes, and improved plantations, with every prospect of having their titles to the land they thus occupy confirmed according to the provisions of the laws under which they were invited to improve them, they learn that an old stale claim under a Spanish paper, dated in 1795—which never had been followed by any possession on the part of the grantee, nor even surveyed, or in any manner recognized by the Spanish government, at the time of the cession of this territory to the government of the United States, but which, if it ever gave any right to the grantee, gave only the right to do certain acts within a limited time, in order to obtain thereby a title to the land, no one of which acts ever was done, so as to impose any obligation upon either the Spanish or American government to grant the said land to the person named in the said paper—hath been set up by certain speculators or purchasers of the said pretended title, to defeat the just rights of your memorialists and of the public.

Your memorialists state that, although under a former commission to report on the validity of Spanish grants, this claim was rejected, yet it hath at last, by dint of importunity, and without a full and sufficient opportunity given to your memorialists to contest it, received a favorable report from the commissioners now acting under the authority of Congress in reporting on those grants.

This concession, as it is called, with the approval of the said commissioners, appears in the report of claims acted on by them, and reported to the last session of Congress, recommending that it be confirmed for two leagues in front by one league in depth, without any survey having been made, or any particular and definite location being given to it, or any principle established by which its location can be fixed; so that your memorialists are utterly at a loss to know what particular portions of land may be covered by the claim; the terms of description used in the paper being so loose and indefinite, as to create alarm and apprehension among all the occupants of the public lands in that part of the territory; so that your memorialists would contend, if there were no other objections to the paper, and if it were in fact a grant regularly issued, that it was void for uncertainty. It does not describe the land so that it could be located; it being entirely uncertain whether it was to be on the island of Chicot, or on either or which side of the river, and, no doubt, was thus vaguely, purposely expressed, that the party in whose favor it was executed might select the location he preferred—the paper being not a grant, but a mere promise to grant thereafter, if the party should comply with the prescribed conditions within the limited time, establish himself upon the land, and exhibit a plat and certificate of survey. These are the express terms of the paper which has been thus recommended to be confirmed, and it is not pretended that at the time of the cession any such possession had been taken, or location selected, or survey made, although the paper bears date in 1795, and one of the conditions was required to be performed "in the peremptory term of one year," and the whole to be null, if the land should not be established "at the expiration of the precise term of three years."

As to the performance of these conditions, some proof was attempted to be offered to the commissioners of a settlement by Villemont, prior to 1803, and his having an agent there in that year; but this was contradicted by two of the claimant's own witnesses, Vaugine and Bougy, who swear that there could be no settlement there till 1803, on account of the hostility of the Indians. Opposed to this contradictory evidence on the part of the claimants, your memorialists are prepared with abundant and undoubted evidence, to show that neither De Villemont, nor any of his agents or family, attempted a settlement at Point Chicot, until 1810 or 1811; that for years after the cession to the United States, he never imagined that this paper, under which he had leave to establish himself upon the land, the precise location of which he was to determine, and which he knew he had never done an act to entitle himself to, could be set up against the United States as a grant which, under the cession, they were bound to acknowledge. It was not until then, upon some suggestion, no doubt, from persons who supposed that something might be made out of the claim, that he was seen to make his first movement toward complying with the conditions on which he was to be allowed a grant by the Spanish government, or to set up any pretensions to a title under this antiquated paper.

The commissioners say, in their report, that this claim ought to be confirmed according to the concession, reference being had to the opinion of Judge Smith, as afterward sustained by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Arredondo and others against the United States.

Your memorialists are advised that there is nothing in the case thus referred to, that can give any sanction to this claim. On the contrary, the principles there decided will show that this concession can have no validity.

In the case of Arredondo, it was held by the court that, at the date of the Spanish treaty, the time for fulfilling the conditions of the grant had not expired; that the eighth article of the treaty provided that in all cases further time should be allowed the grantees to fulfil the conditions, equal in extent to the time originally allowed them by the terms of the concession from the Spanish government; and further, that the performance of the conditions was rendered impracticable after the cession of the lands to the American government, so that the grantees could not be held, in a court of equity, to have forfeited their title by the non-performance of the conditions.

In the present case, not one of these grounds for sustaining the claim by an extension of the time of performing the conditions, or dispensing with the performance, can be found.

The concession was dated in 1795, limiting the time of performing the conditions to one and three years. Spain retained the dominion of the country for five years; so that at the time of the cession to France, the year 1800, it had become null and void by its terms. While France retained the dominion of the country, nothing was done to perform the conditions, or to obtain any recognition by that government of the validity of the concession.

In 1803, therefore, when the lands were ceded to the United States, there could be no original Spanish claim which had become more entirely extinct; and if this should be confirmed, there can no doubt be found hundreds of others which had been extinguished, equally entitled to be revived.

But if the time for performing these conditions had not expired in 1803, still there would be no such provision for extending that time as is contained in the eighth article of the Florida treaty.

And again, if there was, and the United States could be considered as in any manner bound to allow the grantee the same time originally provided in the original concession for the performance of the conditions, that is, one and three years from the time of the cession, that time, thus extended, having expired from 1803, before the grantee complied with the conditions, would again and equally nullify the claim.

The remaining ground taken in the case of Arredondo is also inapplicable here. There, the conditions were, the removal and establishing on the lands, two hundred Spanish families; and this was held a condition rendered impossible or immaterial after the treaty brought the lands within the dominion of the United States, so that the title of the grantees could not be forfeited when the grantor had, by the cession of the territory to another power, virtually dispensed with the condition of the grant.

But here the condition was, that the grantee should take possession, establish and improve the land, and return a survey and plat. De Villemont, after 1803, might have done this. His own proof shows that there were then no hostile Indians, nor any other pretext for delaying the performance of these conditions. Had he remained in the territory after 1803, and—claiming to be excused for not entering upon, designating, and improving the lands before then, on account of the hostility of the Indians—proceeded then to fulfil the terms of the concession by taking possession, procuring a survey, and claiming the confirmation of his title, he might possibly have been enabled to show some claim to have his pretensions fairly considered.

But if, instead of this, on the cession and the establishment of the American government in the territory thus acquired, he retires within the Spanish government in Florida, (as can be proved to have been the case,) makes no claim under this expired concession, nor any effort to take possession of the lands, and so remains in the Spanish dominions until 1809 or 1810, how can he, or those who claim under him, expect to be listened to when they attempt to set up this doubly-extinguished and long-abandoned concession?

Your memorialists therefore object to the confirmation of this paper—

1st. Because it is vague and indefinite in its terms, and instead of having that reasonable certainty required to the validity of a grant, is not susceptible of location;

2d. Because the limitation for the performance of the conditions had expired before the cession from Spain in 1800; and

3d. Because, on the acquisition of the territory by the United States in 1803, the grantee, instead of making his claim and attempting to perform the conditions, abandoned the country and his claim.

Your memorialists, therefore, trust that an obsolete and abandoned claim, under a paper requiring a fulfilment of its terms, and looking to a completion of title on such fulfilment in 1790, and declared to be null if by that time no such fulfilment should appear, shall no longer be allowed to interfere with the just rights of your memorialists, and the interest and policy of the government in the settlement, sale, and improvement of the public lands.

These lands, your memorialists beg leave to state, were surveyed as other public lands, in the year 1823; and some portions which have been supposed to lie within what are understood to be claimed as the limits of this pretended grant, have been sold and patented by the government. On other portions of the land so understood to be claimed, many citizens of the United States have been long settled; many ever since the survey in 1823, and many long before; and the improvement and settlement of this part of the territory is greatly retarded by the doubts necessarily existing as to the ultimate disposition of these lands.

They therefore respectfully ask that this claim be rejected, and the lands declared open for sale and entry, according to the provisions of the land laws of the United States.

They present herewith certain depositions which they had no opportunity of laying before the commissioners, and will be prepared to sustain the statements herein made by other evidence, if required.

Depositions.

The deposition of John A. Holton, taken at the office of Lewis Madison, in the city of Louisville, to be read before the Congress of the United States, in support of a remonstrance of Horace F. Walworth against the claim of Don Carlos de Villemont to a tract of land on Point Chicot, in the Territory of Arkansas, the deponent being sworn to tell the truth and nothing but the truth.

Being interrogated, he states that his first acquaintance at Point Chicot was in 1809, but he had been down the river in 1808, but does not recollect anything of Point Chicot until July or August, 1809. I landed the barge Eliza, then in distress, on account of the sickness of the crew, and remained twenty-nine days. There was a settlement or a house built on the bank, I think a log-cabin, occupied by a Spaniard named Malbrough; it being the only settlement on the point, with the exception of one, about a mile lower down the river. I thought it was a very recent settlement, and was confined to a small rail fence around the cabin. I do not know that they raised anything. It is my impression that they did not. It was a small cabin. I thought the Spaniard appeared to live by hunting, and trading with boats passing up and down the river. I did not see the settlement said to be about a mile below the Spaniard's, but was told by the men on my boat that it was occupied by an Englishman. I understood it was such a settlement as Malbrough's, and not a plantation or place under cultivation. And further this deponent saith not.

JOHN A. HOLTON.

STATE OF KENTUCKY, Jefferson County, ss.:

The foregoing deposition of John A. Holton was this day taken, subscribed, and sworn to, by the said John A. Holton, before the undersigned, a justice of the peace for said county, and one of the judges of the county court of Jefferson county.

The deponent was examined, cautioned, and sworn, and his deposition wholly written by me, at the time and for the purpose stated in the caption thereof.

Given under my hand, this 18th day of February, 1836. LEWIS MADISON, J. P. J. C.

I have sealed and addressed this deposition to the Congress of the United States.

LEWIS MADISON.

TERRITORY OF ARKANSAS, County of Chicot:

Personally appeared before me, an acting justice of the peace, Henry Baker, of lawful age, who, being duly sworn, deposeth that, in the year of 1809, about the month of February, he cut and put in a raft of timber of cypress-trees, on section 24, township 155, 1 west, and section 18, township 15, 1 east, and the intermediate fractions of section 13, 1 west, as now appears from public surveys, now made, and further states that there were no settlements on what is now known as Point Chicot, except John Baptist, alias Malbrough, alias Daigle, and Joseph Huttsel, who were living upon what is now known as sections 4 and 5; and there were no other settlements between the mouth of White river and the mouth of the Yazoo, and the said Malbrough, alias Daigle, and Joseph Huttsel, lived in picket camps; and neither of those settlers were known or surmised as agents of Don Carlos de Villemont; and the deponent further states that there were no road or roads from Point Chicot to the post of Arkansas, and there is not to this day any public road from Point Chicot to the post; and the deponent further states that he was acquainted on the river as early as 1805, and that there was no serious danger to be apprehended from the Indians. And further deponent saith not.

mark.

Sworn to, and subscribed before me, this 24th day of November, 1835.

JAMES BLAINE, J. P.

TERRITORY OF ARKANSAS, County of Chicot:

I, James Blaine, clerk of the circuit county court, and ex-officio recorder within and for the county aforesaid, do hereby certify that James Blaine, whose name is subscribed to the annexed affidavit, as the officer before whom the same was made, is, and was at the time of taking the same, an acting justice of the peace within and for the county aforesaid, duly commissioned and qualified, and that full faith and credit are due and ought of right to be given to all his official acts as such.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of office, at Columbia, this 24th day of November, A. D. 1835, and of the independence of the United States the sixtieth.

[L. S.] JAMES BLAINE, Clerk.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Territory of Arkansas, County of Chicot:

Personally appeared before me, an acting justice of the peace for the county of Chicot, Joseph Egg, who, being duly sworn, deposeth that he commenced ascending and descending the Mississippi, in 1804, as a bargeman, and continued as a bargeman regularly until 1808, and says that there was no improvement or settler at Point Chicot, or, to the best of his knowledge, there was no improvement from the mouth of the St. Francis to the Yazoo.

JOSEPH EGG.

Sworn to, and subscribed before me, an acting justice of the peace for Chicot county, this 20th day of July, 1835.

[L. S.] W. P. REYBURN, J. P.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Territory of Arkansas, County of Chicot:

Personally appeared before me, an acting justice of the peace for the county and Territory aforesaid, Isaac Moore, who, being duly sworn, says that, in October, 1811, his father, as the agent of Don Carlos de Villemont, settled at Point Chicot; that, at the time of the arrival of his father, Amos Moore, at Point Chicot, there appeared to have been a small improvement of about a half acre, which appeared to have been made about one year; and that his father, Amos Moore, remained there until 1819; and further deponent saith not.

ISAAC MOORE.

Sworn to, and subscribed before me, a justice of the peace for the county and Territory above written, this 21st day of October, A. D., 1834.

W. P. REYBURN, J. P.

TERRITORY OF ARKANSAS, County of Chicot:

I, James Blaine, clerk of the circuit and county courts, and ex-officio recorder within and for the county aforesaid, do hereby certify that William P. Reyburn, whose name is subscribed to the foregoing affidavit, as the officer before whom the same was made, is, and was at the time of taking the same, an acting justice of the peace within and for the county aforesaid, duly commissioned and qualified, and that full faith and credit are due, and ought of right be given, to all his official acts as such.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of office, at Columbia, this 24th day day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty, and of the independence of the United States the sixtieth.

The deposition of Gabriel Winter, taken in the city of Louisville, State of Kentucky, on the 30th day of September, 1835, before Gabriel J. Johnston, a justice of the peace and judge of the county court of Jefferson county, in the State of Kentucky, to be read as evidence before the Congress of the United States, in support of the remonstrance of Horace F. Walworth against the confirmation of the claim of Don Carlos de Villemont, to a tract of land on Point Chicot, in the Territory of Arkansas.

The deponent, being of lawful age, and first duly sworn, deposes and says, that he was at the post of Arkansas, in the spring of 1798, and was well acquainted with Don Carlos de Villemont, (who was the military commandant of said post, and a captain in the service of his Majesty, the King of Spain.) He frequently heard said Don Carlos de Villemont speak of a grant which he had for a tract of land at Point Chicot, on the Mississippi river, situated immediately below a large cypress swamp or bend, having a front of two leagues by one league in depth; that in the spring of 1803 he was on said land, and there was not at that time any appearance of improvement on the said point, nor did he, at any time up to that period, understand that any improvements had been made, nor was there any roads, leirs, house, or inhabitants, on the said river, between Little prairie and the Walnut hills; that in 1809, the said Villemont informed him, (the deponent,) in New Orleans, that he was then going up to make a settlement and live upon said land. Deponent further states that, in his opinion, and to the best of his recollection, there was no improvement made on said land previous to 1809; and further saith not.

GAB. WINTER.

STATE OF KENTUCKY, Jefferson County, ss.:

I, G. J. Johnston, a justice of the peace and one of the judges of the county court of said county, do hereby certify that the foregoing deposition of Gabriel Winter was reduced to writing by me, in the presence of said Winter, and having been carefully read over by me to him, was then subscribed and sworn to by him in my presence, at the time and place, for the purpose stated in the caption thereof.

Given under my hand and seal, this September 30, 1835.

I, Worden Pope, clerk of the county court of Jefferson county, in the State of Kentucky, and keeper of the seal of said county, do certify that G. J. Johnston, esq., who has signed the above certificate, was, at the date thereof, an acting justice of the peace in and for said county, duly commissioned and sworn, and that full faith and credit are due to all his official acts.

In witness whereof, I have hereto set my hand and the said seal, this 7th day of December, 1835, and in the 44th year of the commonwealth.

[L. S.] WORDEN POPE.

ST. LOUIS, October 4, 1813.

Carlos de Villemont, claiming two leagues of land in front by one league in depth, situate at fifteen miles below the mouth of Arkansas, on the Mississippi, at a place called Island of Chicot, produces concession from Baron Carondelet, dated 17th June, 1795.

Joseph Bougy, duly sworn, says that, in 1795, claimant proposed to witness to settle on this tract, promising to give him the choice of situations on it, a tract for his own use; witness declined, on account of the supposed danger from the Indians. Indeed, the neighboring Indians were at that time so hostile as to render it unsafe—they often committed outrages, even in the village. Claimant was known as a Spanish officer, and commandant of the post of Arkansas, from the year 1794 till 1802. The danger from the Indians continued until the year 1803.

Francis de Vaugine, duly sworn, says that the Indians continued so unfriendly, or rather, hostile, as to make it altogether unsafe to settle at the Isle of Chicot, till the year 1803.

Carlos de Villemont, claiming two leagues of land in front by one league in depth, situate at Point Chicot, (see record-book F, page 1; Bates's minutes, page 58; Bates's decisions, page 24,) produces a paper purporting to be an original concession from the Baron de Carondelet, governor general of Louisiana, dated 17th June, 1795.

M. P. Leduc, duly sworn, says that the signature to the concession is in the true handwriting of the said Baron de Carondelet.

In the case of Carlos de Villemont, claiming two leagues in front by one league in depth. (See book No. 7, page 62.)

Pierre Chouteau, senior, duly sworn, says, that the signature to the concession is in the true handwriting of the Baron de Carondelet; that he, Chouteau, first became acquainted with said De Villemont in the year 1776 or 1777; that he knows that said De Villemont was captain in the Spanish service; that, in 1802, witness, going down to New Orleans in a boat, stopped at the mouth of Arkansas river, having some business to transact with Joseph Bougy, senior, who lived at the post of Arkansas; that said Bougy told witness that De Villemont (who was Bougy's son-in-law) had made a settlement at Point Chicot; that witness, on his return in the summer of 1803, stopped at Point Chicot, expecting to meet with De Villemont, but De Villemont had gone down to New Orleans; that his agent, living at Point Chicot, gave witness vegetables of all kinds, poultry, &c.; that the improvements witness saw consisted of log-houses and gardens—he did not see any fields—they might have been further in the interior; the houses, as well as he can recollect, had the appearance of having been built two or three years before.

Witness further says, that he was well acquainted with Joseph Bougy, senior, who testified in this case before Recorder Bates, that said Bougy, senior, was a man of good character, known by everybody for a man of veracity, and who could be relied upon.

Witness further says, that the De Villemont family resided on said place, but does not know how long.

253. Carlos de Villemont, claiming two leagues in front by one league in depth. (See No. 7, page 62.)

The board are unanimously of opinion that this claim ought to be confirmed to the said Carlos de Villemont, or to his legal representatives, according to the concession, reference being had to the opinion of Hon. Joseph L. Smith, judge of the superior court for the district of East Florida, as afterward sustained by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Arredondo and others, against the United States.

To the Governor General:

Don Carlos de Villemont, captain in the regiment of infantry of Louisiana, civil and military commandant of the post of Arkansas and its districts, with due respect states to your lordship that, wishing to establish a plantation and a stock farm, in order to supply the consumption of this post, in which the scarcity of horned cattle is so great that, during many months in the year meat cannot be procured, although it is an indispensable article to life, he supplicates your lordship to be pleased to grant to him a tract of land of two leagues in front by one league in depth, to be comprised within parallel lines, in the place called Chicot island, at the distance of twenty-five leagues below the mouth of Arkansas river; the cypress swamp of Chicot island is to serve as upper limit; a favor which he expects to receive of your lordship's benevolence.

CARLOS DE VILLEMONT.

NEW ORLEANS, June 17, 1795.

The surveyor general of this province, or one appointed by him, shall put this party (the petitioner) in possession of the tract of land, of two leagues in front by one league in depth, which he solicits, in the place designated in the foregoing memorial, provided they are vacant and do not cause prejudice to any one, under the express condition to make the road and regular clearing in the peremptory term of one year; and this concession to be null if, at the expiration of three (years) the said land should not be established; during which time, it shall not be alienable. Under which conditions, the plat and certificate of survey shall be made out in continuation, in order to provide the interested with the corresponding title in form.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1469. [1ST SESSION.

APPLICATION OF KENTUCKY FOR LAND TO OFFICERS AND THOSE WHO SERVED IN THE LATE WAR WITH GREAT BRITAIN LESS THAN FIVE YEARS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 11, 1836.

RESOLUTIONS for the benefit of the commissioned officers of the United States army, who served in the last war with Great Britain.

Whereas, the non-commissioned officers and privates of the United States army who served in the last war with Great Britain, have received from the bounty of the national government suitable portions of public lands as a just reward for their many perils and privations, as a resting-place and a home, while the commissioned officers and soldiers who served for a less term than five years, of that army, who braved the same perils, and suffered the same privations, had the mortification to find themselves disbanded, at the close of the war, without any such remuneration: And whereas, there still remains a large portion of the national domain unappropriated, which, it is believed, cannot be devoted to a more laudable purpose than furnishing homes for the declining age of those who have given so much of their youth and manhood to its glory and defence: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the general assembly of the commonwealth of Kentucky, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives requested, to exert themselves in procuring the passage of a law of Congress, to place the commissioned officers and soldiers who served for a less term than five years in the United States army, who served in the last war with Great Britain, on a just equality with the soldiers of that army, in the distribution of the public lands, due regard being had to their relative rank.

And be it further resolved, That his excellency the lieutenant and acting governor be, and he is hereby requested to transmit a copy of the above preamble and resolutions to each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

CONSTRUCTION OF THE PRE-EMPTION LAWS OF MAY 29, 1830, AND JUNE 19, 1834.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 14, 1836.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 14, 1832.

SIR: In compliance with a resolution of the Senate of the 9th instant, I have the honor to transmit a communication from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, together with copies of the instructions issued from the Land Office, for the purpose of carrying into effect the act of the 29th May, 1830, and 19th June, 1834, containing the information required by the resolution.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. M. VAN BUREN, Vice President of the U. S., and President of the Senate.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 11, 1836.

SIR: Having been requested by you to report on the subject of the resolution of the Senate of 9th instant, which is in the following words, viz.: "Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury inform the Senate whether the acts of Congress, granting rights of pre-emption to settlers inhabiting and cultivating the public lands at certain periods, have been so construed as to extend to such of the public lands as had been offered for sale and were subject to entry at private sale, and if so, to communicate such instructions to the Senate," I have the honor to state, that the act of Congress, passed the 19th June, 1834, entitled, "An act to revive the act entitled, 'An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands,' approved May 29, 1830," extends its provisions, in terms, to all public lands except such as have been reserved or appropriated, and that the provisions have been construed to extend to lands which had been offered at public sale, and subject to private entry at the date of the act, and also to lands which should be offered at public sale at any period during the two years to which its operations are restricted, provided that pre-emptions to lands offered at public sale within such term, shall be satisfactorily proved and paid for before the day appointed by the President's proclamation for the commencement of the public sale of lands, including the tract or tracts on which such right of pre-emption is claimed.

Herewith are submitted copies of the printed instructions emanating from this office in order to carry into effect the acts of the 29th May, 1830, and 19th June, 1834, on the subject of pre-emption rights, papers marked A, B, C, and D.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

[Circular.]

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, June 10, 1830.

GENTLEMEN: Annexed you have a copy of the act of Congress approved on the 29th ultimo, entitled, "An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands."

This act grants to any person who actually cultivated a tract of the public lands in the year 1829, and who, continuing thereon, was in the actual possession of that tract at the date of the passage of the act, a pre-emption right to the lands at $1 25 per acre.

The fact of the cultivation in 1829, and that of the possession of the land applied for, on the 29th of May, 1830, must be established by the affidavit of the occupant, supported by such corroborative testimony as may be entirely satisfactory to you both. The evidence must be taken by a justice of the peace, in the presence of the register and receiver, and be in answer to such interrogatories propounded by them as may be best calculated to elicit the truth. The whole of the evidence must be carefully filed in the office of the register.

All lands not otherwise appropriated, of which the township plats are, or may be, on file in the register's office, prior to the expiration of the law, are subject to entry under the act.

Where the whole of the improvement is embraced in the limits of a quarter-section, the occupant must be confined to the entry of that particular "quarter-section;" but where the improvement is situated in different quarter-sections, then the occupant is entitled to enter the two adjacent legal subdivisions or half-quarters in which the improvement may lie, not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres in the whole.

In making your usual returns to this office you will, in all cases of purchase under this act, designate them by marking on the returns and the certificate of purchase, "Pre-emption act of 1830."

With great respect, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

GEORGE GRAHAM, Commissioner.

REGISTER and RECEIVER of the land office at ———.

AN ACT to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That every settler or occupant of the public lands, prior to the passage of this act, who is now in possession, and cultivated any part thereof in the year one thousand eight hundred and twenty-nine, shall be and he is hereby authorized to enter with the register of the land office for the district in which such lands may lie, by legal subdivisions, any number of acres, not more than one hundred and sixty, or a quarter-section, to include his improvement, upon paying to the United States the then minimum price of said land: Provided, however, That no entry or sale of any lands shall be made, under the provisions of this act, which shall have been reserved for the use of the United States, or either of the several States, in which any of the public lands may be situated.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That if two or more persons be settled upon the same quarter-section, the same may be divided between the two first actual settlers, if by a north and south or east and west line, the settlement or improvement of each can be included in a half quarter-section; and in such case the said settlers shall each be entitled to a pre-emption of eighty acres of land elsewhere in said land district, so as not to interfere with other settlers having a right of preference.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That, prior to any entries being made under the privileges given by this act, proof of settlement or improvement shall be made to the satisfaction of the register and receiver of the land district in which such lands may lie, agreeably to the rules to be prescribed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office for that purpose; which register and receiver shall each be entitled to receive fifty cents for his services therein; and that all assignments and transfers of the right of pre-emption given by this act, prior to the issuance of patents, shall be null and void.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That this act shall not delay the sale of any of the public lands of the United States beyond the time which has been or may be appointed for that purpose by the President's proclamation; nor shall any of the provisions of this act be available to any person or persons who shall fail to make the proof and payment required before the day appointed for the commencement of the sales of lands, including the tract or tracts on which the right of pre-emption is claimed; nor shall the right of pre-emption contemplated by this act extend to any land which is reserved from sale by act of Congress, or by order of the President, or which may have been appropriated for any purpose whatsoever.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That this act shall be and remain in force for one year from and after its passage.

Approved, May 29, 1830.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, September 14, 1830.

GENTLEMEN: Numerous interrogatories having been propounded in relation to the act of 29th May last, entitled, "An act granting pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands," I subjoin the following replies for your information and government, embracing, it is believed, all the prominent points which have yet arisen; and have to add that, if any case shall occur at your office which, after a careful perusal, appears to you not provided for in the present or former circular letter, in relation to that law, you will make it a subject of a joint communication.

1. In cases where more than two persons were settled on the same quarter-section, the first two actual settlers only are entitled to the right of pre-emption under the second section of the act, and none others are provided for.

2. As the law grants to any settler on the public lands, who was in possession thereof at the date of the act, and cultivated the same in 1829, a right of pre-emption to lands which, having been offered at public sale, were subject to private entry at the same date, and has provided the term of one year for its operation, the question arises whether the ordinary private entries of such lands are to be suspended until the 29th of May, 1831, when the occupant's claims shall have been proved and filed, or whether the ordinary private entries can proceed at the hazard of interfering with the occupant within the year. This being a difficulty against which the law has omitted to provide, and it not being believed to be the intention of its framers that the ordinary private entries should be suspended for the term of one year, we must, therefore, so act as to make the law available to the occupant, to its full extent as to time, and also permit the ordinary private entries to proceed. It is, therefore, to be expressly understood that every purchase of a tract of land, at ordinary private sale, to which a pre-emption claim shall be proved and filed according to law, at any time prior to the 30th May, 1831, is to be either null and void, (the purchase money thereof being refundable under instructions hereafter to be given,) or subject to any future legislative provisions.

Therefore, prior to your permitting any entries of land, you will have to exercise every possible precaution to prevent such interference. The only precaution that can be pointed out to you is, to require the oath of the applicant, that, to the best of his knowledge and belief, no claim exists to the same land as a pre-emption under the act of 29th May, 1830.

The right to enter pre-emptions within any tract of country offered at public sale subsequent to the date of the act, ceases at the time of the commencement of such public sale. Therefore, all tracts remaining unsold after such public sale are, of course, liable to private entry in the same manner as if the pre-emption law had not been passed.

You are requested to make a report to this office on the 1st of November next, of all private sales which shall, up to that period, be found to conflict with pre-emption rights; and monthly reports of the same character are requested thereafter.

3. The settler has the right to select any one of several tracts which he may have actually occupied at the date of the act, and cultivated in 1829.

4. It is the intention and object of the law, that where two persons are settled on a quarter-section, each of them should obtain his own improvements as near as practicable, and if this can be done by dividing the quarter-section by an east or west or a north and south line, the register and receiver will proceed to make the division; but if such division would deprive either party of a material portion of his improvement, then the parties may be permitted to take the whole quarter-section jointly, and make such division among themselves as they may prefer for their mutual interest. The entries in your books, the receiver's receipt, and the register's certificate, in such case, are to be in the joint names of the parties, and the patent will be issued to them as tenants in common.

5. When two or more persons have settled on a quarter-section, and have relinquished their claims to one person prior to the date of the act, those who have relinquished have no claim to a pre-emption.

6. The act of 31st March, 1830, entitled, "An act for the relief of the purchasers of the public lands, and for the suppression of fraudulent practices at the public sales of the lands of the United States," has provided the special privilege of pre-emption to the purchasers, their heirs or assignees, of all lands relinquished under any of the laws passed for the relief of purchasers of the public lands, and of such lands further credited under the relief laws passed in the years 1821, 1822, or 1823, as have since reverted to the United States by reason of non-payment, which right extends to the 4th day of July, 1831. The privilege of entering any such lands under the general pre-emption law of 29th May, 1830, does not exist. The right of pre-emption under the act of 29th May, 1830, may, however, be claimed on that description of lands remaining unsold, which were not further credited under any of the relief laws above mentioned, and which have reverted to the United States for non-payment under the act of 10th May, 1800.

7. It being the intention of the law to confine the privilege of pre-emption to the tract occupied and cultivated, to a maximum quantity of one quarter-section, it results that where such tract is a fraction containing less than the quantity of a quarter-section, the right of pre-emption does not extend beyond the quantity of such fraction. In cases, however, where the fraction exceeds the maximum quantity, the entry is to be made conformably to the legal subdivisions, in such manner as to obtain the quantity as nearly as circumstances will admit, and to include the improvements of the occupant.

8. Although a quarter-section may be found to contain rather more than the ordinary quantity of one hundred and sixty acres, the right of pre-emption is to extend to the full quantity of such quarter-section. If, however, such quarter section (situate on the north or west sides of the township in which the excesses of quantity are thrown agreeably to law) should contain so large an excess as to have rendered it necessary for the surveyor general to subdivide the same into three or more lots of eighty acres each, the party in such case is to take two adjoining lots, including his improvements.

9. The law contemplates that payment be made for the lands claimed by the pre-emption right, at the period when the proof shall be filed.

10. Possession at the date of the act, and cultivation in 1829, are both essentially necessary to the conferring of the pre-emption privilege. The absence of either of these requisites will vitiate the claim. The building of a mill is a "possession," but without actual cultivation, it does not confer the pre-emption privilege under the law. The extent and nature of the cultivation are points concerning which the law is silent. The ordinary culture of the soil, with the view to the raising of a crop for farming purposes, either of Indian corn, small grains, clover, cotton, tobacco, or esculent roots, is all that is to be looked to as regards the requisite "cultivation."

11. An individual who mediately or immediately has acquired a title to a tract of public land which he occupies and cultivates, and who, either by accident or design, has so constructed his fence as to include part of any adjoining tract of public land, does not thereby acquire a right of pre-emption, under the law, to such adjoining tract.

12. When the occupant is unable to pay for a full quarter-section, he may be permitted to enter the half-quarter which shall include his improvements, to be either the east or west half of such quarter, the divisional line running north and south, in the ordinary mode prescribed by the act of 24th April, 1820.

I am, very respectfully, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

JOHN M. MOORE, Acting Commissioner.

REGISTER and RECEIVER of the land office at ———

P. S.—To the RECEIVER: You are requested hereafter to render your quarterly accounts in a book form of the foolscap size, the sheets of paper to be securely stitched together, and all receipts for incidental expenses, and for register's salary and commission, to be written on one or more of the last pages of the account.

C.

Circular to registers and receivers of the United States land offices, by order of the Secretary of the Treasury.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, July 22, 1834.

GENTLEMEN: Annexed is a copy of an act of Congress, approved 19th June, 1834, entitled 'An act to revive the act entitled 'An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands,' approved May 29th, 1830," together with a copy of the former act.

1. The recent act provides, "that every settler or occupant of the public lands, prior to the passage of this act, who is now in possession and cultivated any part thereof in the year 1833, shall be entitled to all the benefits and privileges provided by the act entitled, 'An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands,' approved May 29, 1830, and the said act is hereby revived and shall continue in force two years from the passage of this act, and no longer," to wit, to the 19th June, 1836.

2. The fact of cultivation in eighteen hundred and thirty-three, and that of possession of the land applied for on the nineteenth June, eighteen hundred and thirty-four, must be established by the affidavit of the claimant, supported by such corroborative testimony of disinterested witnesses as shall be satisfactory to you both. The evidence must be taken by a justice of the peace, in the presence of the register and receiver, wherever convenient, and be in answer to such interrogatories, to be propounded by them, as may be best calculated to elicit the truth; and when not convenient for the witnesses to attend before the register and receiver, the evidence is to be taken by a justice of the peace, and be in answer to such interrogatories, to be propounded by him, as shall be best calculated to elicit the truth.

The credibility of the testimony is to be certified by the justice of the peace, and by such other persons of the neighborhood as can certify the same.

3. Possession on 19th June, 1834, and cultivation in 1833, are both essentially necessary to the conferring of the pre-emption privilege, the absence of either of which requisites will vitiate the claim. The building of a mill is a "possession," but without actual cultivation, it does not confer the privilege under the law. The extent and nature of the cultivation are points concerning which the law is silent. The cultivation of a crop of grain, esculent roots, or other vegetables of ordinary culture in the peculiar section of the country, is to be regarded as sufficient as respects the requisite of "cultivation," together with the ordinary fence or other suitable enclosure; or, when no crop or product has been taken from the land, and it shall appear to your satisfaction that the claimant has, in good faith, made the usual preparations for a crop, as, when he shall have cleared ground and enclosed the field, and ploughed the soil preparatory to the ensuing seed-time, and with intent to sow or plant, such shall be regarded and taken as a sufficient cultivation to entitle him to the benefit of the act.

The erection of a dwelling-house for the purposes of habitation, will be regarded as a requisite of "possession."

4. The provisions of the act are not available to any person or persons who shall fail to make the proof and payment required, before the day appointed for the commencement of the sales of lands, including the tract or tracts on which the right of pre-emption is claimed; nor can the right of pre-emption extend to any land which is reserved from sale by act of Congress, or by order of the President, or which by law may have been appropriated for any purpose whatsoever.

5. Should any tract of land, subject to private entry at the date of the act, be entered at ordinary private sale, and a pre-emption claim be duly established thereto within the term of two years from the date of the act, the former entry is null and void; and the register and receiver are hereby required to make monthly reports of all such interfering sales, designating the tract, date of sale, name of purchaser, quantity of acres, and purchase money; also, name of pre-emptor and date when satisfactory proof of pre-emption was admitted. On such reports, orders for repayment will be issued.

6. Where a person inhabits one quarter-section and cultivates another, he shall be permitted to enter the one or the other, at his discretion, provided such occupant shall designate, within six months from the passage of this act, (viz., from 19th June, 1834,) the quarter-section of which he claims the pre-emption, and file in the office of the register a relinquishment of the right of entry to the other; but in all cases where those six months will expire before the date of the public sale of the township including such claim, the designation and relinquishment must be made prior to the day of such sale.

7. Where an improvement is situate in different quarter-sections, the claimant is entitled to enter such two adjacent legal subdivisions, viz., the east and west half-quarters, as will include his improvement.

8. Where an improvement is situate on a fraction containing less than the quantity of a quarter-section, such fraction must be taken in lieu of an entire quarter-section. Should the fraction contain more than the quantity of a quarter-section, the claimant will be permitted to take, according to the legal sub-divisions of such fraction, so as to include his improvements, and obtain the quantity of one hundred and sixty acres, as nearly as practicable, without any further subdivision.

9. In cases where two or more persons are settled on the same quarter-section, the two first actual settlers who cultivated in 1833, and had possession on 19th June, 1834, are entitled to the right of pre-emption. If an equal division of such quarter by a north and south or east and west line, will not secure to each party his improvements, they must become joint purchasers and patentees of the entire quarter-section; if otherwise, it will be divided so as to secure to the parties respectively their improvements. In either case, the said settlers shall each be entitled to a pre-emption of eighty acres of land elsewhere, in said land district, so as not to interfere with other settlers having a right of preference.

10. You are requested to make monthly reports of those cases where two persons obtain a pre-emption on the same quarter-section.

11. Transfers of pre-emption rights, prior to the issuing of patents, will not be recognized.

12. The act of 29th May, 1830, applied only to lands to which the Indian title was extinguished at that date. Hence the right of pre-emption to lands to which the Indian title was extinguished subsequent to that date, can be claimed only in virtue of cultivation in 1833, and possession on 19th June, 1834.

13. In making your usual returns to this office, you will, in all cases of purchases under this act, designate them by marking on the returns the certificate of purchase and receipt, thus, "Pre-emption act of 1834." Separate returns, and distinct series of numbers for pre-emption "receipts" and "certificates," are not admissible.

14. Inasmuch as the ordinary private entry of lands subject thereto at the date of the act, must be permitted to proceed at the hazard of interfering with the pre-emption claims which may be established within the two years allowed by the act, it is indispensably necessary, by way of precaution, to require each applicant at private sale, to file with his written "application," an affidavit to the following effect, to wit:

"I do solemnly swear, (or affirm,) that since the 1st day of January, 1834, viz., on or about the ——— day of ———, I personally inspected the tract of land designated in the annexed application, viz, the ——— quarter of section No. ——, in township No. ——, of range No. ——, in the district of lands subject to sale at ———, and that there was not, at that time, any person residing thereon, or cultivating the same; and I do not believe that any pre-emption right exists thereto, either under the act of 29th May, 1830, or that of 19th June, 1834."

In case the party applying to purchase did not personally inspect the tract, he may be permitted to file, in the above form, the oath or affirmation of any person who alleges to have made such personal inspection; and in all cases, you must be satisfied of the credibility of such testimony.

15. Where the occupant alleges that he is unable or unwilling to pay for a full quarter-section, he may be permitted to enter the half-quarter which shall include his improvements; to be either the east or west half of such quarter; the divisional line running north and south, in the mode prescribed by the act of 24th April, 1820; but in such case he will be required to file a relinquishment of his further right of pre-emption for the quantity authorized by the act.

16. You are each entitled by law to receive from the party interested, a fee of fifty cents on each case of pre-emption admitted under the act.

17. The evidences adduced in support of pre-emption rights admitted under this act, and also the oaths required of purchasers at ordinary private sale, are to be carefully enclosed in the appropriate certificates of purchase, and transmitted therewith to this office, accompanied by your joint certificate as to the credibility of the witnesses.

The evidences adduced in support of cases not admitted, are to be carefully filed in the register's office, with suitable endorsements thereon.

18. By the 3d section of the act of 19th June, 1834, persons residing on the public lands, and cultivating the same, prior to the year 1829, but who were deprived of the advantage of the act of 29th May, 1830, by reason of the construction given to the same by the Secretary of the Treasury, are authorized to enter, at the minimum price, one quarter-section of the public lands within said land district. This provision can be available only to those whose right to a pre-emption in virtue of cultivation and possession prior to 1829, shall be established by satisfactory proof; and who, from any cause originating in the restrictions and limitations imposed by the Secretary of the Treasury, which have not had a remedy by the act of 14th July, 1832, or that of 2d March, 1833, have been deprived of the advantages of the act of 1830. When such cases shall be presented, you will specially report them, with all the testimony, for the decision of the department.

19. Where floating rights to eighty acres are granted under this act, they must be located and paid for at the time of entry of the tracts on which such floating rights accrue.

In the execution of the act, the utmost vigilance and diligence on your part are requisite to detect fraud, and determine the character and credibility of the testimony. A faithful and impartial discharge of your duty are alike essential to protect the government from imposition, and the honest claimant in his right.

I am, very respectfully, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Commissioner.

P. S.—It will be proper to give publicity to the law, and to these instructions, by distributing copies of this circular throughout your land district; for which purpose a number of copies will be furnished. It is also desirable that the newspapers published in your district should gratuitously publish the same, for the information of the community.

The forms of journal and ledger now used by the register and receiver, will be discontinued from and after the 1st of October next. A form of ledger to be substituted by the receiver will be furnished as soon as practicable.

AN ACT to revive the act entitled, "An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands," approved, May 29, 1830.

Be it enacted, &c., That every settler or occupant of the public lands, prior to the passage of this act, who is now in possession, and cultivated any part thereof, in the year 1833, shall be entitled to all the benefits and privileges provided by the act entitled, "An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands," approved, May 29, 1830; and the said act is hereby revived, and shall continue in force two years from the passage of this act, and no longer.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That when a person inhabits one quarter-section and cultivates another, he shall be permitted to enter the one or the other at his discretion: Provided, Such occupant shall designate, within six months from the passage of this act, the quarter-section of which he claims the pre-emption under the same.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That all persons residing on the public lands, and cultivating the same, prior to the year 1829, and who were deprived of the advantages of the law passed on the 29th May, 1830, by the constructions placed on said law by the Secretary of the Treasury, be and they are hereby authorized to enter at the minimum price of the government, one quarter-section of the public lands within said land district.

Approved, June 19, 1834.

ANDREW JACKSON.

AN ACT to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands.

Be it enacted, &c., That every settler or occupant of the public lands, prior to the passage of this act, who is now in possession, and cultivated any part thereof in the year one thousand eight hundred and twenty-nine, shall be, and he is hereby, authorized to enter, with the register of the land office for the district in which such lands may lie, by legal subdivisions, any number of acres, not more than one hundred and sixty, or a quarter-section, to include his improvement, upon paying to the United States the then minimum price of said land: Provided, however, That no entry or sale of any lands shall be made under the provisions of this act, which shall have been reserved for the use of the United States, or either of the several States in which any of the public lands may be situated.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That if two or more persons be settled upon the same quarter-section, the same may be divided between the two first actual settlers, if, by a north and south or east and west line, the settlement or improvement of each can be included in a half quarter-section; and in such case the said settlers shall each be entitled to a pre-emption of eighty acres of land elsewhere in said land district, so as not to interfere with other settlers having a right of preference.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That prior to any entries being made under the privileges given by this act, proof of settlement or improvement shall be made to the satisfaction of the register and receiver of the land district in which such lands may lie, agreeably to the rules to be prescribed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office for that purpose, which register and receiver shall each be entitled to receive fifty cents for his services therein. And that all assignments and transfers of the right of pre-emption given by this act, prior to the issuance of patents, shall be null and void.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That this act shall not delay the sale of any of the public lands of the United States beyond the time which has been, or may be, appointed for that purpose, by the President's proclamation; nor shall any of the provisions of this act be available to any person or persons who shall fail to make the proof and payment required before the day appointed for the commencement of the sales of lands, including the tract or tracts on which the right of pre-emption is claimed; nor shall the right of pre-emption, contemplated by this act, extend to any land which is reserved from sale by act of Congress, or by order of the President, or which may have been appropriated for any purpose whatever.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That this act shall be and remain in force for one year from and after its passage.

To Registers and Receivers of United States Land Offices. Supplemental instructions under the pre-emption law of 19th June, 1834, by order of the Secretary of the Treasury.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, October 23, 1834.

GENTLEMEN: In consequence of representations made to the department respecting the operation of the third clause of the instructions contained in the circular letter of 22d July last, I have to inform you that the Secretary of the Treasury, unwilling to withhold the advantages of the late pre-emption law from applicants who may have meritorious and substantial claims to its benefits, and who, by reason of circumstances peculiar in their character, have no actual residence on the land claimed, has concluded so to modify the instruction complained of, as to admit as exceptions from the general principle, such cases of the character referred to, as in the exercise of a sound and liberal discretion on your part, shall appear from facts, satisfactorily proved, to come within the meaning and intent of the act. The following are cited as examples of the cases expressly referred to:

Where the cultivation may have been made by an unmarried person, without family, boarding and lodging with another family resident on a tract adjoining or in the immediate vicinity of his improvements, or by a married person living in a similar manner; where there has been actual and bonafide intention to reside on the land cultivated, but where the preparation was not complete, or the intention was frustrated by unavoidable accident; where the tract cultivated may have been a necessary and integral portion of a farm or plantation of an individual residing on an adjoining tract, and where, without the aid of the proceeds of such additional cultivation, he could not have maintained himself and family, and continued to reside where he did; or where, by reason of the unhealthy location of the lands cultivated, the individual may have fixed his residence on a neighboring tract—in all these cases, and others analogous in their circumstances and spirit, where the facts are distinctly proved, and where, in the exercise of a sound and liberal discretion, you are satisfied that they come within the meaning and intent of the law, the third clause of the circular letter referred to, which regards the erection of a dwelling-house for the purposes of habitation as a requisite of "possession," is modified so as to admit the right of entry.

2. No pre-emption right to section No. 16, reserved for schools, can be sustained under existing laws, nor will the act of 19th June, 1834, admit of a floating right of pre-emption elsewhere, in virtue of a settlement and improvement in the sixteenth section. Individual claimants considering themselves aggrieved under such circumstances, will have to prefer their claims to Congress.

3. Where an individual establishes a right of pre-emption to a fractional section containing less than one hundred and sixty acres, or to a half-quarter section, the other half of which was sold previous to the date of the act or to a residuary quarter-quarter of a section, (which residuary quarter-quarter must have been made such by locations made under the act of 5th April, 1832, inasmuch as quarter-quarters of sections cannot originally be selected, as such, under the pre-emption law,) in all such cases, the fraction—the half-quarter, or the quarter quarter—is to be regarded as a separate and distinct tract, beyond the quantity of which the party can claim no right to locate elsewhere, or on adjoining lands; but in cases where two or more individuals are settled on any one such tract, the first two actual settlers are entitled to enter in their joint names, and each of these two is entitled to receive a floating right to eighty acres elsewhere.

4. Where A settled on and cultivated a tract of public land in 1833, and prior to the 19th June, 1834, sold his right to B, who continued to improve and occupy the same, on that day, B is regarded as entitled to the benefits of the act.

5. Where A cultivated a tract of public land in 1833, and had placed B thereon, as tenant in possession, who continued to improve and cultivate the same on the 19th June, 1834, A is regarded as entitled to the right of pre-emption, on due proof of cultivation and occupancy as required by the act. But in case A, prior to the year 1833, had placed a tenant on a tract of public land, who cultivated and possessed, agreeably to the tenor of the act, the right of pre-emption is to accrue to the tenant.

6. The testimony heretofore required to be taken before a justice of the peace, may also be taken before a notary public, or any other officer duly qualified to administer oaths.

7. Where there were more than two actual settlers on a tract, floating rights accrue to the first two actual settlers, and to none of the others.

8. Quarter-quarters of sections are created only by the operation of the act of the 5th of April, 1832, entitled, an "Act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands."

The right to enter and make payment for quarter-quarters of sections, (lots of forty acres,) under the act of the 19th June, 1834, can be claimed only in cases where residuary quarter-quarters are found to exist in a section, they having been created separate and distinct legal subdivisions by the peculiar operation of the act of 1832.

While on this subject, I have to mention that, on inspecting the names of purchasers, it is apprehended that due caution is not observed by registers in operating under the act of 1832, which provides that no one individual can enter more than eighty acres in tracts of forty acres. Increased vigilance is strictly enjoined in this respect, and in order to insure a strict compliance with the law, the register is hereby required to keep an alphabetical list of the names of purchasers of quarter-quarters of sections, which list must always be referred to as a check prior to the admission of entries of land in that mode under the act aforesaid.

9. In cases where individuals have settled on public lands since the passage of the act of the 19th June, 1834, the form of affidavit prescribed in the 14th clause of the circular letter of the 22d July last, may be varied to suit the pecular circumstances of such cases, by striking out the words "and that there was not, at that time, any person residing thereon or cultivating the same," and inserting in lieu thereof, all the facts in the case as they are found to exist.

10. Military land scrip cannot, under existing laws, be located on any public lands settled, or occupied, "without the written consent of such settlers or occupants as may be actually residing on said land at the time the same shall be entered or applied for." Such settlements or occupancy, therefore, although it may or may not have reference to any existing pre-emption privilege, is a bar to the location of scrip, without the written consent of the settler or occupant. The form of the affidavit prescribed for such cases by the circular letter of the 2d of October, 1833, will substantially remain unaltered; but in cases where individuals are desirous of locating scrip, it is not deemed necessary to require from them two separate affidavits; one under the circular of the 2d October, 1833, and another under the 14th clause of the circular of the 22d July last; but the substance of both those forms may be incorporated into one affidavit.

11. Payment is to be required in all cases arising under the late pre-emption law at the time the right of entry is admitted. In cases arising under the third section, or in such as may be of doubtful character, and which you may deem it necessary to refer for the decision of the department, payment will not be required until a favorable decision is communicated. Meanwhile the land claimed is to be withheld from sale.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

P. S. It has been the usual practice of this office to acknowledge the receipt of the monthly and quarterly returns. Henceforward that practice, which consumes time and creates unnecessary labor, will be discontinued. If returns are not promptly rendered, the reason of the delay will be promptly demanded.

The register is requested to report to the surveyor general, lists of such township plats as require renewal in consequence of mutilation or defacement, and also to forward to this office a copy of such report.

The "quarterly account-book," described in the circular letter of the 28th August last, for the use of receivers, and also a supply of printed blanks for making quarterly returns to this office, (in lieu of the form of quarterly accounts heretofore in use,) have both been forwarded by mail some weeks since.

APPLICATION OF PENNSYLVANIA FOR THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE PROCEEDS OF THE SALES OF THE PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 21, 1836.

Whereas, by the official statements from the Treasury Department of the United States, it appears there will be an unappropriated balance in the Treasury, above the ordinary demands of the government, subject to the action of Congress during the present session: and whereas, it is presumed that the wisdom of Congress will not suffer that fund to accumulate in the Treasury without devising means by which it can be usefully employed for the benefit of the people of this Union: and whereas, some of our sister States deny to Congress the constitutional power of making internal improvements in the several States, while all seem to admit the power and propriety of distributing the proceeds arising, or which may have arisen, from the sale of the public lands, among the several States, subject to the control of their respective legislatures: and whereas, the proportion to which Pennsylvania would be entitled, should such distribution be made, would enable her to complete her public works, and establish a fund for the support of common schools, which would preclude the necessity of taxation for either purpose: and whereas, it is the policy of our government to guard against the increase of executive patronage, and especially against the accumulation of large sums of money in the Treasury unappropriated: and whereas, a very large proportion of surplus revenue arises from the sales of the public lands, the joint property of all the States, which is regarded as a source of revenue which ought to be applied in the promotion of education, by establishing a system of common schools, to the purposes of internal improvement, or such other purposes as will best promote the interests of the States respectively; therefore,

Resolved, by the senate and house of representatives of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in general assembly met, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives be recommended, to use their influence to procure the passage of a law to distribute the proceeds arising, or which may have arisen, from the sale of the public lands, among the several States, in proportion to the number of members from each State in the House of Representatives of the United States.

Resolved, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives be recommended, to vote for a liberal and judicious expenditure of public money for the completion and construction of fortifications for the common defence.

Resolved, That the governor be requested to forward to each of our senators and members of Congress from Pennsylvania, a copy of the foregoing preamble and resolutions; and also, to the governors of the several States, with a request that they shall be laid before their State legislatures, requesting their co-operation.

STATEMENT OF LANDS UNSOLD ON THE LINE OF THE ROAD FROM NEW ALBANY TO VINCENNES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 21, 1836.

Mr. REYNOLDS, of Illinois, from the Committee on Roads and Canals, submitted the following documents:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 14, 1836.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 3d instant, desiring for the information of the Committee on Roads and Canals, to know the quantity of public lands on and near the main stage road from Louisville to St. Louis, via Vincennes, I herewith transmit a statement (marked A) of lands in the State of Indiana, remaining vacant in those townships which are intersected by the road as laid down on Tanner's map, making one township in width. The quantities exhibited in the list are taken from the returns made to this office up to the 1st of February last, and may therefore be depended on as correct to that date.

I regret exceedingly that, owing to the arrears of the tract books in which the sales are registered, it is not in my power to furnish a similar list of the public lands contiguous to the road in Illinois, and that I am only enabled to state the amount vacant at the close of 1834, which was, for Palestine, 179½ sections; Vandalia, 235; Edwardsville, 200½—615 sections; which, at 640 each, is 393,600 acres.

This last statement cannot, I fear, serve any useful purpose, since the immense sales that have been made in those districts subsequent to the close of 1834, preclude the idea of arriving at a correct estimate by the rules of proportion.

I have the honor to remain, your obedient servant, ETHAN A. BROWN.

Hon. JOHN REYNOLDS, Committee on Roads and Canals, House of Representatives.

APPLICATION OF FLORIDA FOR A GRANT OF LAND TO THE EAST FLORIDA RAILROAD COMPANY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 21, 1836.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

The governor and legislative council of the Territory of Florida, beg leave respectfully to represent to Congress, That a company, entitled "The East Florida Railroad Company," has been chartered by them at their present session, having for its object the establishment of an expeditious and efficient communication between the Atlantic ocean and the gulf of Mexico. That, from the evidence communicated to them, they fully believe that this company is prepared to commence and complete the work with all convenient despatch, provided that Congress will, at its present session, make the grant of lands which they now solicit.

It is, therefore, resolved, by the governor and legislative council of the Territory of Florida, That the delegate in Congress be requested to obtain from the Congress of the United States the relinquishment, on the part of the United States, to the East Florida Railroad Company, (of) one section of land at each end of the route of their railroad; and also the relinquishment on the part of the Congress of the United States of three hundred feet in width of the land throughout the line which may be selected for the said railroad to the said company: Provided, That when the route of said road shall be surveyed and determined, the same shall prove to be public land, or wherever the route of the said road shall pass through the public lands. Also, the right and privilege to obtain and use any timber, stone, or other materials, which may be suitable for their purposes on public lands.

It is further resolved, That the delegate in Congress be requested to obtain from Congress such other donations of public land as they may, in consideration of promoting and aiding an object of so much utility, and which promises great national benefits, be pleased to grant to this company.

It is further resolved, That the foregoing resolutions, when signed by the governor and the president of the legislative council, shall be certified by the chief clerk, and forwarded to the delegate in Congress.

I, JOSEPH B. LANCASTER, chief clerk of the legislative council of the Territory of Florida, do hereby certify that the above and foregoing resolutions were duly passed by the legislative council, signed by the president thereof, and approved and signed by the governor of Florida, at and during the session of the legislative council held in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-five; and that the same is a true copy.

Given under my hand this 13th day of February, 1836.

ON A CLAIM TO A CHOCTAW RESERVATION UNDER THE FOURTEENTH ARTICLE OF THE TREATY OF DANCING RABBIT CREEK.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 21, 1836.

MR. EVERETT, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was committed the petition of Jubal B. Hancock, reported:

The petitioner claims two and a quarter sections of land, under the 14th section of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, made with the Choctaw nation on the 27th September, 1830, and ratified 24th February, 1831.

That article is as follows: "Article xiv. Each Choctaw head of a family, being desirous to remain and become a citizen of the State, shall be permitted to do so by signifying his intention to the agent within six months from the ratification of this treaty, and he or she shall thereupon be entitled to a reservation of 640 acres of land, to be bounded by sectional lines of survey; in like manner shall be entitled to one half the quantity for each unmarried child which is living with him, over ten years of age, and a quarter-section to such child as may be under ten years of age, to adjoin the location of the parent. If they reside upon said lands, intending to become citizens of the State, for five years after the ratification of this treaty, in that case a grant in fee simple shall issue; said reservation shall include the present improvement of the head of the family, or a portion of it. Persons who claim under this article shall not lose the privilege of a Choctaw citizen, but if they ever remove, are not to be entitled to any portion of the Choctaw annuity."

The petitioner claims, as a "Choctaw head of a family," one section for himself, two half-sections for his two unmarried children over ten years of age, then living with him, and a quarter-section for a child under ten years of age.

The rights of the children depend on that of the father, and his right depends on the questions, 1, whether he was, at the date of the treaty, a Choctaw head of a family; and 2, whether, within six months from the date of the treaty, he gave notice to the agent of his intention to remain and become a citizen of the State. In relation to these questions the petitioner and the United States are the only parties whose rights can be taken into consideration; other questions may arise in the case in which the rights of the petitioner may conflict with those of third persons.

In relation to the first question, it appears from the testimony that the petitioner is a white native-born citizen of the United States, and before becoming a member of the Choctaw nation, was a resident of the State of Tennessee, when he married a woman of Choctaw descent, by whom he had children; that long before the treaty of 1830, he removed to and became a member of the Choctaw nation, and at the date of the treaty was the head of a Choctaw family.

The question is, then, reduced to this: whether the head of a Choctaw family, on the facts stated, is a Choctaw head of a family, within the fair construction of the treaty. It would be unworthy of the justice of the United States to avail itself of the technical sense of the word, or of its position in the construction of a sentence, contrary to the manifest intention of the other party to a treaty, and especially in a treaty with a nation with whom it treats on unequal terms. With the Indian nations, treaties are made in our language. They are, however, assented to through the medium of interpreters, of our own interpreters; and without imputing any intention of error, it would have been difficult to have explained to their understanding the difference, if any can be supposed to exist, between a Choctaw head of a family, and a head of a Choctaw family. They had no reason to make a distinction between members of their nation, whether members by blood or by adoption, nor between members by adoption, whether previously citizens of the United States, aliens, or members of other tribes. Nor is there, in the opinion of the committee, any reason why the United States should make any such distinction.

The treaty was made with the Choctaw nation, and, as a consequence, with every member of that nation. It was competent for that nation to determine who should be entitled to the privileges, who should be members of the nation; and every person who, at the date of the treaty, was, in good faith, a member of the Choctaw nation, was a Choctaw within the meaning of the 14th article; and if the head of a family, was a Choctaw head of a family. Nor is it material whether the head, or the family, or both, were Choctaws by blood or by adoption. In either case, as members of the nation, they were entitled to remove west or remain, and such as chose to remove were entitled to a share of the annuities, and such as remained, being heads of families, to reservations.

The absurdity of a distinction will be obvious from its consequences. It is well known that there were, among the Choctaws, as in other tribes, many intermarriages between white persons and native Indians, and the consequent half-breeds; if none are Choctaws but those who are so by blood, then it would follow that the wife and children must remove because they were Choctaws, and the husband remain. The wife would not be entitled to a reservation because she is not the head of a family, nor the husband because he is not a Choctaw by blood.

The abstract question of natural allegiance and its consequences cannot be supposed to have been either thought of or understood by the Indians when they concluded the treaty. They well knew who in fact were members of their nation; and that all, without distinction, were subject to their laws, and entitled to equal protection and to equal privileges; and that all, whether adopted native-born citizens of the United States, foreigners, or Indians of other tribes, were equally, with the native Choctaws, subject or not, to the laws of the State in which the nation was located.

While members of the Indian nation, they were not regarded as citizens of the State To entitle them to reservations, each head of a family was to signify his intention "to remain," (the words which follow are but the consequence,) "and become a citizen of the State."

Were there, however, doubts as to the construction of this article, the committee might refer to the provision in the eighteenth article, viz.: "and further, it is agreed that in the construction of this treaty, wherever well founded doubts shall arise, it shall be construed most favorably toward the Choctaws."

The committee are then of opinion that the petitioner was entitled, under the treaty, to claim a section of land in his own right, as a Choctaw head of a family.

In relation to the petitioner in right of his children, the words of the treaty are "in like manner" (such head of a family) "shall be entitled to one half that quantity for each unmarried child which is living with him, over ten years of age; and a quarter-section to such child as may be under ten years of age." It appears from the testimony that at the date of the treaty the petitioner had two children over ten years of age, and one under that age; that the eldest resided in his house, and the two younger elsewhere, but that they were under his care and control. He had at that time separated from his wife, who had returned to Tennessee. It does not appear that the younger children resided with her, or where they resided, or under what circumstances they were under the care and control of the petitioner.

All the relations between a parent and child are presumed to continue until the contrary is shown, and the children, wherever actually residing, will be considered as a part of the family of the parent so long as they are under his care and control; and in this sense the term "residing with him" is used in the treaty. His reservations are given to him as a head of a family, and also in right of the members of his family, who, it was to be expected, would remain if he remained. The committee are therefore of opinion that the petitioner was entitled to claim two and a quarter sections in right of his children.

The committee do not consider the right affected by the fact proved, that the petitioner did not live with his wife at the date of the treaty, or that he has since married another woman. It was not necessary to constitute him the head of a family that he should have had a wife then living, or that his children should even have been legitimate: much less would his subsequent misconduct have impaired any right vested in him by the treaty.

In relation to the second question, whether the petitioner, within six months after the ratification of the treaty, (24th February, 1831,) signified to the agent his intention to remain and become a citizen of the States. All that was necessary to entitle him to the reservation was, that he should signify such intention to the agent: that being done, the right vested in him could not be divested by any neglect of the agent. The treaty having provided that the notice should be given to the agent, the government looked to the agent for the evidence of the fact, and by a regulation directed him to return a register of all such notices.

It appears by the testimony, that the petitioner did, within six months, (viz., on the 12th August, 1831,) signify to the agent his intention to remain and become a citizen of the States, and claimed, and has ever since claimed, his right under the treaty; and that his name was entered by the agent, or the register, but, by accident or mistake, was not returned to the War Department. He had thus perfected his right to the two and a quarter sections of land.

It further appears, that on the 1st of January, 1832, the petitioner applied to the Secretary of War for a location of his reservations under the treaty; to which an answer was given, that "the name of J. B. Hancock is not upon the list of Choctaws entitled to reservations returned by the agent." The petitioner then furnished evidence to the department of his having clearly given the notice required by the treaty, and of his being a Choctaw head of a family, &c.; and in consequence of this, on the 3d February, 1834, the following instructions were given to the locating agent, and of which notice on the same day was given to the petitioner:

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, Office of Indian Affairs, February 3, 1834.

SIR: Juba B. Hancock has transmitted to this office papers to establish his claim to reservations for himself and two children, under the 14th article of the treaty of September 27, 1830. He states, that he is a white man, married to a Choctaw woman, the mother of these children; that his son, William Mitchell, was twelve years old on the 1st day of September, 1830, and his daughter, Mary Melinda, was ten years old on the 14th of February, 1830; that his name and theirs were registered by Col. Ward in August, 1831, but the leaf on which they were registered was lost. This statement is supported by the affidavit of Giles Thompson; and David Folsom and P. P. Pitchlynn certify that the claimant was for many years prior to the treaty, a citizen, and entitled to all the privileges of a citizen.

You are requested to inquire of Col. Ward whether these circumstances are truly stated; and if they are, you will locate a section for the father, and a half-section for each of the children, and apprise the department of the result.

Very respectfully, &c.

ELBERT HERRING.

Col. GEORGE W. MARTIN, Columbus, Mississippi.

P. S.—There is a third child, Caroline Delia, who is now about ten years of age, and, of course, entitled to a quarter-section.

On the 29th September, 1834, the petitioner applied to the locating agent to locate his reservations on No. 13, 12, and remainder in No. 11, who answered that he had "not seen Colonel Ward, nor received any satisfactory evidence of the fact of Hancock's registration from him, and that he did not feel himself authorized by his instructions to receive proof of the fact from any source except from Colonel Ward, the witness to whom he was referred in his instructions, and declined to make or authorize the location applied for without further instructions."

On the 16th October, 1834, Colonel Ward gave a deposition giving the facts required by the instructions of the 3d February, which was forwarded immediately to the War Department.

The department having thus recognized the right of the petitioner as a head of a Choctaw family, in his own right and in right of his children, and being furnished with the proof it required of his having duly signified his intention to remain under the fourteenth section, there appears then no reason why the location should not have been made by order of the department, and according to the provisions of the treaty; on what lands other than on such as should include his improvement or a portion of it, was subject to the discretion of the Department, with the restriction of boundaries by sectional lines of survey.

During the time thus spent in procuring testimony, other Indian reservations were located which conflicted with the claim of the petitioner. His improvement was on the southeast quarter-section of No. 13, township 19, range 3 west. Jerry Fulson, an Indian reservee, whose improvement was on the southwest quarter-section of said No. 13, located his reservation on said southeast quarter-section of No. 13, covering the whole of the petitioner's improvement, and on the west half of the northeast quarter-section of said No. 13, and on the west half of the southeast quarter-section of said No. 13, and the residue on No. 11 and 14. Israel Fulson, whose improvement was on No. 18, township 19, range 2 west, and adjoining the improvement of the petitioner, located his improvement on No. 18 and 7, and on southeast half of the southeast quarter-section one, on the south quarter of the northeast quarter section of said No. 12, and another Indian (whether a reservee or not does not appear) had an improvement on the west half of the northeast quarter of section No. 13, so that by these two locations all lands adjoining the improvement of the petitioner and his improvement itself were covered; and on portions of Nos. 12 and 36, in township 19, floats and pre-emption rights were claimed. In some cases the land was entered by the pre-emption claimants, the purchase money paid, and pre-emption certificates issued by the register of the land office.

Thus circumstanced, the petitioner, on the 21st October, 1834, procured the locating agent to locate and mark on the map his reservations on No. 1, and on the east half of the southeast quarter of the southwest quarter of section No. 2, aud on the west half and northeast quarter of the northeast quarter of section No. 12, township 19, range 3 west; and on the south half of section No. 36, in township 20, range 3 west; and in consequence of this location the lands have been secured from sale. It appears by a certificate of the register, that the locating agent had, before that time, made a location, in some parts differing from the one above mentioned, not, however, including any part of his improvement, but when, or by whose directions it was made, does not appear.

None of the Indian locations of reservations, or pre-emption or float claims, have been confirmed, and until confirmed, the executive is at liberty to direct a relocation of the reservations of the Fulsons and of the petitioner, to be made in such manner as will give each his right according to the provisions of the treaty, and their locations might be so made as to give to each a portion of his improvement, and might be laid to each in an entire tract, unless the pre-emption claimants have, in the meantime, acquired rights superior to those of the reservees.

The rights of the reservees originated from the treaty, and accrued to them when they gave notice to remain and become citizens. His right to have his reservation located conformably to the treaty, became perfect, and Congress could pass no law that could impair this right, nor have they passed a law of that character.

The act of the 19th June, 1834, revives the act of 1830, and extends its benefits to settlers of 1833, &c. The act of 1830 contains a proviso, that no entry or sale of any lands shall be made under the provisions of that act, which shall have been reserved for the use of the United States. By the treaty of 1830, the lands necessary to satisfy the reservation were reserved to the United States, to be by them appropriated for that purpose. They remained in the United States subject to this use; when the Choctaw head of a family gave notice of his intention to remain, the use becomes instantly vested to, at least so much of his improvements as would be contained in the least tract that could be bounded by sectional lines, and to the right to have the remainder located; when his location was made and approved, he was entitled to occupy it as long as he should choose; and when he should have resided on it five years, he was entitled to a grant in fee simple.

The right of the reservees is, therefore, prior and paramount to any claim or right that could be acquired under the act of 1834, and no right is vested in the pre-emption claimants that entitles them to interpose between the United States and the petitioner, on the question of location.

The petitioner asks a confirmation of his last location, on the ground that he supposes it to be wholly invalid, because it did not include his improvement, and that location cannot now be made that will include his improvement.

The committee are not satisfied of the correctness of either of the positions taken. The locations after made by the locating agent are subject to the determination of the executive, when affirmed, and then only are they irrevocably made. Until confirmed, they may be altered, in whole or in part, and it is yet competent for the President to direct a new location, so as to include the improvement of the petitioner, and to confirm so much of his several locations, as shall make up the whole quantity to which he is entitled.

The treaty guarantees a section of land, to include his improvements; by the term section is not meant an entire section, but a quantity equal to that contained in a section, or 640 acres, which is to be bounded by sectional lines, and sectional lines are not descriptive only of those lines which bound entire sections, but also of those which divide sections, and those divisions are into halves, quarters, eighths, and sixteenths. It follows, then, that it is not necessary that the location should be in one entire tract; wherever practicable, it would be laid in one entire tract. But this may be impossible. Such may be the situation of adjoining improvements, that the reservation of every reservee could not be located in one tract, without taking the whole of the improvements of others; so if prior locations should surround a quarter-section on which was the improvement of a reservee, he could take only that quarter-section, unless permitted to locate the residue elsewhere.

In the case of the petitioner, his improvement was on the southeast quarter of section 13. To this he is entitled of right. The question as to where the residue shall be located, is open between him and the Executive, and without disturbing the locations of either of the Fulsons or other reservees, further than depriving Israel Fulson of the southeast quarter-section of 13, and for which he would be entitled to an equal quantity elsewhere, the Executive may locate the residue of the petitioner's reservation on any other sections not before located, in an entire or separate tract, as convenience may require. This construction is necessary to the execution of the treaty, and it is not perceived that any injustice can flow from it.

As between the United States and the reservee, the whole question of location is open. The provision that the reservation shall include the improvement is, in this treaty, solely for the benefit of the reservee. No provision is made that the United States should pay for improvements abandoned. It is competent, then, for the reservee, with the consent of the United States, to relinquish this privilege, and to take other lands in exchange, and it may be competent for Congress to give such assent. The committee, however, do not recommend a confirmation of his location, but that a relocation should be made, on the ground that it should be so made as to interfere with the claims of others as little as possible.

The five years having expired, the petitioner, if now entitled to a relocation, is also entitled to a grant in fee. To this an objection is made, on the ground that he did not reside on the reservation during the whole of the five years.

It appears, by the testimony, that his improvement was claimed by an Indian reservee under a location; that in January, 1835, he attempted to erect a house on a part of his localities, but was driven off by force by some of the pre-emption claimants and others; that in February or March, 1835, having resided on his improvement until that time, he left it, and has since resided at Livingston, about five miles distant, without any intention to abandon his claim or citizenship.

The issue of abandonment is between the petitioner and the United States. The petitioner gave notice to the agent according to the treaty; he has done everything on his part to prove a location of his reservation; and that it was not done in due time and manner is wholly the fault of the agents of the United States. The embarrassments into which the petitioner has been thrown are consequences of that default, and of which the United States cannot, in justice, take any advantage. His leaving his improvement, in 1835, was the effect of a supposed necessity; his improvement being taken by a prior location, and when he attempted to settle on his location he was driven off by force.

On a view, then, of the whole case, the committee are of opinion that the petitioner is entitled to his reservation, notwithstanding the agent neglected to return his name to the War Department; and now to a grant in fee, notwithstanding that, under the circumstances stated, he removed from his improvement before the expiration of the five years, and report a bill accordingly for his relief. With a view to avoid, if possible, a conflict with existing claims, they have provided that on his relinquishment of his right to a location, according to the treaty, he may locate on any lands required by the treaty, not subject to prior locations or pre-emption claims.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1477. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN OHIO.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 21, 1836.

Mr. KENNON, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Solomon Sturges, reported:

That it appears from a letter of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, directed to the committee, that on the 30th of April, 1832, the petitioner and Rezin Frazier entered the northwest quarter of section 9, township 4, of range 5, military land, in the Zanesville land district, Ohio, the east half by Rezin Frazier, with bounty land scrip, and west half by the petitioner, with cash and forfeited land stock; that on the same day, James Laughlin, under the act of the 15th of April, 1832, claimed the south half of said quarter, being two quarter quarter-sections, including his improvements, and was permitted, by the receiver of public moneys at Zanesville, to enter the same. That Frazier assigned, in due form of law, before said receiver to the petitioner, all this interest of said Frazier in said east half of said quarter-section of land. The amount paid by the petitioner for the west half of said quarter was refunded to him by the Secretary of the Treasury. The petitioner applied to the Secretary to have the amount paid by Frazier refunded to him, as assignee of Frazier; but the same having been paid in bounty land scrip, there was no law authorizing such relief. It will be perceived that the entry by Sturges and Frazier, was made —— days after the passage of the pre-emption law, under which Laughlin claimed, but the circular of instructions for the Treasury Department to the land officer were not issued until the 8th of May following. The petitioner states, that at the time of the entry of said east half of said quarter by said Frazier, the pre-emption law was not promulgated, and that the remaining half of said east half of said quarter-section, is not desirable, and he prays permission to enter eighty acres of any of the lands in the Zanesville district, subject to sale by private entry, in lieu of said east half of said quarter. Your committee are of opinion that the prayer of the petitioner is reasonable, and report a bill accordingly.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1478. [1ST SESSION.

ON APPLICATION OF THE WOODWARD HIGH SCHOOL IN CINCINNATI, OHIO, FOR A GRANT OF LAND.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 21, 1836.

Mr. KENNON, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of the trustees of the Woodward High School of Cincinnati, in the State of Ohio, reported :

That said petitioners state, that William Woodward, of Cincinnati, has conveyed to the trustees, real estate in said city of the value of $60,000, in trust for the endowment of a literary institution, with the above title. That the trustees leased said property, at the sum of $1,600 per annum, subject to a re-valuation every fifteen years, and that after the year 1845, it is confidently expected, the annual proceeds of said real estate will amount to the sum of $6,000. That they have obtained an act of incorporation from the legislature of the State of Ohio, with the above title, and that, according to the said act, as well as according to the deed executed by said William Woodward, the funds of the institution are to be applied to the gratuitous education of young men of promise, who have not the means of defraying the expenses of an education; that the rich patronise the institution, by paying tuition fees, at a rate that will justify their admission, without doing injustice to those for whose benefit the endowment was especially made.

The petitioners further state, that they have proceeded to erect on a lot of said land, reserved for that purpose, one wing of the building originally contemplated for the institution, which wing is 40 by 60 feet, two stories and a basement in height; that there is a competent faculty provided for said institution, consisting of a professor of mathematics and philosophy, a professor of languages, and a teacher in the primary departments, embracing a general course of classics, scientific, and business instruction. That there have been seventy-five scholars gratuitously taught in said institution, since its commencement in September, 1831, and that there are now twenty-eight of that number regular students, who, but for the advantages thus furnished, would be deprived of the means of education. That, by the original grant and the charter, the institution is prevented from ever becoming sectarian in any degree. The petitioners state that this is the only incorporated literary institution in what is called the Miami or Symmes's purchase, now in operation, or that is likely to be, where general education is furnished, and that it is so located as to be convenient to the residence of more than half the entire population of said purchase, and to afford the best facility for education to its whole population.

The petitioners claim that by the original terms of sale by Congress to Symmes, and by Symmes to the different persons under whom the citizens of the Miami purchase claim, it was expressly stipulated, that one entire township of land should be reserved for the purpose of establishing an academy and other public schools and seminaries of learning, within said purchase. They insist that the terms of said contracts have not been fulfilled according to the just expectations of the inhabitants of Miami purchase, and pray that a township of land may be granted for the purpose of endowing said Woodward High School of Cincinnati. Your committee find in an act of Congress, passed the 5th of May, 1792, authorizing the conveyance to John Cleves Symmes and his associates, of said Miami purchase, a clause empowering the President to grant to said Symmes and his associates, their heirs and assigns, in trust, for the purpose of establishing an academy and other public schools and seminaries of learning, one complete township of land, comformably to an order of Congress, of the second of October, 1787, made in consequence of the application of said Symmes, for the purchase aforesaid.

They also find in the deed executed by the President in September, 1794, conveying to said Symmes and his associates the land known as the Miami purchase, a clause in these words, to wit: It is hereby declared that one complete township or tract of land of six miles square, to be located with the approbation of the governor for the time being of the territory northwest of the river Ohio, and in the manner and within the term of five years aforesaid, as nearly as may be, in the centre of the land herein before granted, had been, and is granted, and shall be holden in trust, to and for the sole and exclusive intent and purpose of erecting and establishing thereon an academy, and other public schools and seminaries of learning, and endowing and supporting the same, and to and for no other intent or purpose whatever. The township thus to be located by the governor for the time being of the territory northwest of the river Ohio, as nearly as might be, in the centre of the tract of land conveyed to Symmes, was never applied to the purpose for which it was intended; Symmes failed to execute the trust thus reposed in him, and the object of the conveyance of said township entirely defeated.

In March, 1803, Congress passed another act in relation to this township of land, the fourth section of which is in these words, to wit: That one complete township in the State of Ohio, and district of Cincinnati, or so much of one complete township within the same as may remain unsold, together with as many adjoining sections as shall have been sold in the said township, so as to make in the whole thirty-six sections, to be located under the direction of the legislature of the said State, on or before the first day of October next, with the register of the land office at Cincinnati, be, and the same is hereby vested in the legislature of the State of Ohio, for the purpose of establishing an academy, in lieu of the township already granted for the same purpose, by virtue of an act entitled, "An act authorizing the grant and conveyance of certain lands to John Cleves Symmes and his associates;" by the same act, the attorney general for the time being, was authorized and empowered to locate and accept from John Cleves Symmes, and his associates, any one complete township within the boundary of the patent of Symmes and his associates, so as to secure the same for the purpose of establishing an academy in conformity to the provisions of the said patent; and in case of a non-compliance, to take, or direct to be taken, such measures as would compel an execution of the trust, and in case the township should be secured within five years' time, the township to be located by the legislature to revert to the United States. The attorney general did not succeed in securing an execution of the trust by Symmes and his associates, and thirty-six sections were located under the direction of the legislature of the State of Ohio, within the Cincinnati land district, and near to said Miami purchase, and the legislature of the State of Ohio here directed the proceeds of said township to be applied to the support of the Miami University, a college located, as your committee believe, in said township. Your committee have thought it unnecessary in their report, to refer to the contract entered into by the board of the treasury, with said Symmes and his associates, relative to said Miami purchase, or to the cause which led to a total failure of the execution of the trust on the part of Symmes and his associates. They are satisfied that said township was intended for the benefit especially of those who might be interested in the soil included in said purchase, and to induce persons to make purchases there. The only question presented for the consideration of the committee is, whether the United States has complied substantially with all the obligations binding upon her, by reason of said sale to Symmes and his associates; there is no complaint that the township located by the legislature of the State of Ohio is or was of less value than the one near the centre of said purchase, but it is alleged that the Miami college is located without the limits of said purchase, and is of no more value to the inhabitants thereof than if it were in another State.

Your committee are of opinion, that in granting the second township of land, of equal value of the first, and vesting the same in the legislature of the State of Ohio, in trust, for the purposes, and in lieu, of the one granted to Symmes and his associates, the United States has substantially complied with all obligations which may have attached to her, in relation to said township of land.

Congress has no security that the Woodward High School of Cincinnati would more faithfully discharge that trust than the legislature of the State of Ohio; nor that some other institution might not hereafter claim a third township, upon the ground that the Woodward institution had not executed the trust, according to the original intent of the grant to Symmes and his associates.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioners ought not to be granted.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the trustees of the Woodward High School of Cincinnati respectfully represents, that during the years 1826, 1828, and 1830, William Woodward, of the city of Cincinnati, executed three several deeds to Samuel Lewis and others, of land and real estate in said city, now estimated to be worth $60,000, in trust for the endowment of a literary institution, with the title of the "Woodward High School of Cincinnati.

The trustees, at the time of receiving such conveyances, took measures to rent the land so conveyed, at the highest prices that could then be obtained, on leases that were made subject to revaluation every fifteen years; securing, by this means, the benefit of future rise in the value of the property. Nineteen-twentieths of the whole property was thus leased, at prices that would at this time be thought reduced. The actual revenue accruing therefrom is $1,600 per annum, and it cannot exceed that sum, until the expiration of the first term, when the revenue it is expected will not be less than $6,000 per annum; and supposing the future increase of the city to be equal to one fifth what it has been in the past, the revenue of the institution must go on increasing until it is equal to the support of a literary institution as large and useful as any now in the United States.

Your memorialists further represent, that they have obtained an act of incorporation from the legislature of the State of Ohio, with the above title; that they have proceeded to erect on a lot of the land above conveyed, reserved for that purpose, one wing of the building originally contemplated for the institution, which wing is sixty feet by forty, and two stories and a basement in height.

In September, 1831, they commenced instruction therein with a competent faculty, consisting of a professor of mathematics and philosophy, a professor of languages, and a teacher in the preparatory department, embracing a general course of classical, scientific, and business instruction.

By the terms of the deeds and the charter, the funds of the institution are applied to the gratuitous education of young men of promise, who have not the means of defraying the expense of an education; so that the endowment instead of going into the general treasury to enable the school, by reducing prices, to compete with rival institutions, is applied altogether to the deserving poor. The rich patronize the institution by paying tuition fees, fixed at a rate that will justify their admission without doing injustice to those for whose good the endowment was especially made.

Pursuing this plan, there have been seventy-five scholars gratuitously taught in said institution since its commencement, and there are now twenty-eight of that number regular students, who, but for the advantages thus furnished, would be deprived of the means of education. Your memorialists have found such an institution in a city of much more value than it could be in the country, as many parents could afford to board and clothe their children themselves, while they were receiving a gratuitous education, who could not afford to pay their board elsewhere, though the other advantages might be the same.

Your memorialists beg leave further to state, that in their present location they are satisfied the very best opportunities will be furnished to put in practice a system of manual labor in connection with study, on such a plan as to make the student a practical mechanic as well as a man of learning, which cannot but prove of especial advantage to the progress of mechanical improvement. Your memorialists have, however, gone as far as is possible for them to go, until the expiration of the first fifteen years, when the revaluation will take place, unless they can procure assistance to enable them to purchase a library, make arrangements to carry the manual labor system into operation, put up the remainder of the building originally contemplated, and increase their endowments, so that something may be added to their present revenue. With such aid they could immediately enlarge the sphere of the school's usefulness, and extend their operations, commensurate with the increased means that their present endowment will afford them after the year 1845.

By the terms of the original grant and by the charter, the institution is prevented from ever becoming sectarian in any degree, and to render this more secure, a majority of the trustees hold their office under appointment from the city council of Cincinnati, who are elected by the popular suffrages of the citizens.

The Woodward High School of Cincinnati is the only incorporated literary institution in the Miami, or Symmes' purchase, now in operation, or that is likely to be in operation, where general education is furnished.

It is so located as to be convenient to the residence of more than one half of the entire population of said purchase, and affords the best facilities for education to the whole population of the purchase.

Thus your memorialists respectfully show that the said institution is prepared to receive and give the most effective utility to any and every grant in said purchase, which they, in common with the whole population, have an equitable right to claim at the hands of the Congress of these United States; and as a pledge of this, they beg leave to state, that they think the funds committed to their care have been expended so as to produce as much, if not more, good than the like sum expended in any other institution in this or any other country.

Your memorialists respectfully represent that, by the original terms of sale by Congress to Symmes, and by Symmes to the different persons under whom the citizens of the Miami purchase claim, either by descent or purchase, it was expressly stipulated that one entire township of land should be reserved for the purpose of establishing an academy, and other public schools and seminaries of learning in said purchase, as appears by the order of Congress made October 2d, 1787, and as is also recognized by all the acts and correspondence on said subject of the purchase of said Symmes. And your memorialists beg leave further to state, that the whole of the said purchase of Symmes had been by him sold, with the full assurance that Congress would see that one township of land within said limits should be reserved for the establishment and maintenance of a literary institution suited to the wants of the country. And they insist that the right to such an institution, so established and supported, is clearly a privilege belonging to each and every holder of the lands within said purchase; that it was not among the least of the inducements for the rapid purchase and settlement of said tract of country which has produced so much influence and facility in the subsequent settlement of the entire western country. To prove the justice of this claim, your memorialists beg leave to refer to the application of John C. Symmes, by petition, dated at New York, 29th August, 1787, 1 U. S. L. 494; the order of Congress, 2d October, 1787; application of John C. Symmes for alteration of boundary, &c., 1 U. S. L. 495; the act authorizing the alteration, April 19th, 1792, 2 U. S. L. 270; the act authorizing the patent, May 5th, 1792, 2 U. S. L. 287; patent to Symmes, September 30th, 1794, 1 U. S. L. 497.

Your memorialists are aware that since that time a law has been passed, giving the State of Ohio a township without the limits of said purchase, and placing it in the control of the State, in lieu of the one to have been reserved as above, that one having been sold on an execution against said Symmes, and Congress having thus ratified the sale. Which township, so given as above, has been appropriated to the support of a university, without the limits of said purchase, so that the inhabitants of said purchase derive no more actual benefit from such township reservation than if it had been located and appropriated in another State. Your memorialists beg leave to be excused from a recitation of the different measures that have produced this result, any further than to state that Congress has been a party to a principal part of them, and all have been so far and so long sanctioned by Congress that it would be useless, if not unjust, to attempt to interfere with the Miami University, the institution now supported by the proceeds of said township.

If, however, your honorable body should be satisfied that an equitable right exists in favor of the citizens of the said Miami purchase for a township of land, or its equivalent, for the purposes aforesaid, your memorialists respectfully suggest that the proceeds of an unimproved township of land would not be sufficient of itself to establish and sustain a literary institution suited to the increased wants of the country entitled to its benefits, and the sum thus raised could only be rendered efficient by joining it to the fund of some institution already endowed and in operation.

In consideration of these premises, your memorialists would respectfully ask that a township of land may be given to the aforesaid Woodward High School of Cincinnati, an institution which is here shown to be the only one which can receive the same with any assurance of making the grant efficient in promoting education in our growing and needy district.

All of which your memorialists respectfully submit.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1479. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM FOR A CHOCTAW RESERVATION, UNDER THE TREATY OF DANCING RABBIT CREEK.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 21, 1836.

Mr. HAYNES, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the petition of Allen Yates, and Milley, his wife, reported:

The petitioners represent, that Allen Yates is a white man, who has long lived and been naturalized in the Choctaw tribe of Indians, and that his wife, Milley, is a native of that tribe. They further represent, that after the conclusion of the treaty with the Choctaws, at Dancing Rabbit creek, on the 27th of September, 1830, it was proposed that supplemental articles should be added, providing reservations of land to certain individuals of the tribe, among whom was the petitioner, Allen Yates; that after the supplemental articles had been agreed upon, by the commissioners of the United States and the chiefs of the Choctaws, by one of which the right to two sections was reserved to the said Allen Yates; that the Chief Nit-uk-cha-chee insisted that two sections should also be secured to the petitioner, Milley Yates, in consideration of her having taught the women of the tribe to spin, weave, &c.; that in compliance with the said supplemental articles, four sections of land, in legal subdivisions, were located for them by Col. George W. Martin, the agent appointed to locate reserves under the treaty; and that, in due time, they exhibited his certificate to the register and receiver at St. Stephens, in whose district the locations had been made, and requested that the lands described in the certificate might be marked on the map, and reserved from sale. But this, their reasonable request, was disregarded, and a large portion of the lands thus located were exposed to sale, and purchased by persons having full knowledge of their claim. This sale having been made on the alleged ground that the petitioners were only entitled to two sections, instead of the four secured to them by the supplemental articles of the treaty. They further state, that according to the custom of the Choctaws, the husband and wife are not considered one person in law, but hold separate and distinct property, wholly independent of each other; and they pray Congress to grant them such relief as to equity and justice shall appertain.

Your committee, after a due examination of the original and supplemental articles of the treaty, are satisfied that if doubt existed as to the rights of the petitioner, Milley Yates, she is entitled to the most liberal interpretation of that instrument. But, without such interpretation, they are convinced by the certificate of the Chief Nit-uk-cha-chee, bearing date the 1st of December, 1835, and attested by R. M. Jones, United States interpreter, and William Armstrong, Choctaw agent, which certificate, they ask, may be taken as part of this report, that the Choctaw custom of separate rights and property between husband and wife is as it has been stated by the petitioners; and that in the final arrangement of the supplemental articles of the treaty, it was the intention of the contracting parties to secure two sections of land each to the petitioners, of two of which they have been deprived, as alleged in their petition. Although your committee have no doubt that the petitioner, Milley Yates, has been unjustly deprived of the benefit of locations secured to her by the treaty, and believe the lands so located have passed into the possession of persons probably acquainted with her rights; forasmuch as expense and litigation might arise from an attempt to secure to her the lands located for her by Colonel Martin, they would recommend the passage of an act authorizing the location of two sections of land, in the name, and for the use of, the said Milley Yates, on any of the public lands within the country acquired by that treaty, and not previously located to any Choctaw reservee, nor subject to any pre-emption claim; and for this purpose they report a bill.

FORT TOWSON, CHOCTAW NATION, December 1, 1835.

I certify, that at the late treaty made between John H. Eaton and John Coffee, commissioners on the part of the United States, and the Mengoes Chiefs, and of the Choctaw Nation, concluded at Dancing Rabbit creek, September 28, 1830, I called on John H. Eaton, and stated that for services rendered in instructing the Choctaw women to weave, spin, &c., I was desirous that the wife of Allen Yates should be separately provided for; that I was aware that the family was provided for, yet, for the reasons above stated, I wished her separately provided for; and it was at my request, at the conclusion of the treaty, that the alteration was made, giving to Allen Yates and wife each two sections of land.

NIT-UK-CHA-CHEE, his × mark.

Witness:
R. M. JONES, United States Interpreter.

The within statement of the Chief Nit-uk-cha-chee was interpreted to him by R. M. Jones, United States interpreter; by him acknowledged to be his understanding of the treaty, and what Allen Yates and his wife were entitled to.

WILLIAM ARMSTRONG, Choctaw Agent.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1480. [1ST SESSION.

ON CLAIMS TO RESERVATIONS OF LAND UNDER THE FOURTEENTH ARTICLE OF THE TREATY OF DANCING RABBIT CREEK WITH THE CHOCTAW INDIANS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 22, 1836.

Mr. BLACK, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of several persons stating themselves to have been Choctaw heads of families at the time of making a treaty between the United States and the Choctaw Indians, at Dancing Rabbit, on the 27th September, A. D. 1830, and entitled to reservations under and by the provisions of the 14th article of that treaty, having complied on their part with all the requisitions and conditions of that article; resolutions of the legislature of the State of Mississippi, and memorials of many of the citizens of that State, in relation to these claims, together with the testimony of witnesses, which the legislature of that State, in the exercise of a proper vigilance over the public interest, have thought fit to have taken and submitted for the consideration of Congress—finding, on examination, that all the questions arising upon the petition, resolutions, and memorials, have a common origin, relate to the same subject, and are intimately connected, reported:

The claims set up by the petition to reservations of land, and to which the resolutions and memorials have reference, are predicated on the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, made with the Choctaws, on the 27th September, A. D. 1830, and ratified by the Senate on 21st February, A. D. 1831, which article is in these words:

Art. 14. "Each Choctaw head of a family, being desirous to remain and become a citizen of the States, shall be permitted to do so by signifying his intention to the agent within six months from the ratification of this treaty; and he or she shall thereupon be entitled to a reservation of one section of six hundred and forty acres of land, to be bounded by sectional lines of survey; in like manner shall be entitled to one half that quantity for each unmarried child which is living with him, over ten years of age, and a quarter-section to such child as may be under ten years of age, to adjoin the location of the parent; if they reside upon said land intending to become citizens of the States for five years after the ratification of this treaty, in that case a grant in fee simple shall issue. Said reservation shall include the present improvement of the head of the family, or a portion of it. Persons who claim under this article shall not lose the privilege of a Choctaw citizen, but if they ever remove, are not to be entitled to any portion of the Choctaw annuity."

The petitioners allege that they have complied with the requisitions of the treaty, by applying to be registered by the agent within the time limited, with the intention of remaining and becoming citizens of the States; but that their names, by accident, or the neglect of the agent, were omitted in the register which he kept, and they have put on file proof to sustain their claims. They also undertake to speak for many others, who do not now apply to Congress for relief, and request that a board may be created to determine their claims.

The first question, therefore, which naturally suggested itself to the committee, was the propriety of granting this request; for, if it were determined that a board ought to be established for this purpose, the duty of further investigation, on the part of the committee, would cease, and all questions arising under the treaty as to its proper construction and meaning, as well as the decision of all facts, would devolve upon such board. But, they are not of opinion, after a careful consideration of all the circumstances attending these claims, that this board ought to be created. They are aware that such boards have from time to time been created, under different treaties with Spain, for the adjudicating, settling, and locating numerous claims to lands by grants from that government, and inchoate rights acquired] before the making of the treaties, under the usages and customs of the Spanish government; also, for the purpose of deciding on claims to donations, on account of habitation and cultivation; and, also, that the registers and receivers of the different land offices have been from time to time clothed with authority to decide on the rights of pre-emptioners, under the several acts of Congress heretofore passed, but it is to be remembered that the claims under each of the above-enumerated heads were very numerous, and, in very many cases, conflicting, so that it was impossible that they could have been decided by any committee of Congress, or by the Treasury Department, with a due regard to what might be considered an economy of time and expense, or a proper respect for the convenience of the claimants themselves. These claims to reservation, set up by some of the Choctaw Indians, do not, from the number of them which can, by any possibility, be just, nor from any of the other considerations alluded to, require that a board shall be established for the decision of them. And there are other considerations arising out of the facts stated by the witnesses examined by a committee of the legislature of the State of Mississippi, under their order, and referred to the committee, which they will hereafter take the liberty of referring to, which leave on their minds no doubt that it would not, under present circumstances, be judicious.

The committee have, therefore, proceeded to consider the merits of the different claims of the petitioners, and all those on file in the War Department, and to allow all of them which, from the testimony, appear to have equity. In doing this, it became necessary to ascertain what are the rights of the Choctaws under the fourteenth article of the treaty above recited, by a just, and, at the same time, liberal interpretation of it. To constitute a good and valid claim under this article of the treaty, the following facts, in the opinion of the committee, must be established:

1. It must appear that the claimant was, at the time of making the treaty, a Choctaw head of a family.

2. It must appear that, being such Choctaw head of a family, he did signify his intention to become a citizen of the States, by an application to the Indian agent to register his name, within the time prescribed in the treaty, viz., prior to the 21st of August, A. D. 1831.

3. It must appear that such head of a family had, at the time of making the treaty, within the territory ceded, "an improvement," inasmuch as the location must, by the terms of the treaty, include "the improvement, or a portion of it." If there was no improvement, there would be nothing to which this provision of the treaty could attach, or by which the locality of the reservation could be fixed.

It appears to the committee that the application for registration to secure the reservation, should have been made either by the claimant himself, or some one for him, in his name, having from him competent authority to make it. The claimant must have had an improvement for the reason stated. This provision of the fourteenth article of the treaty was made with an especial view to those who had advanced somewhat in the agricultural art —who had farms which they might be unwilling to leave. It was not intended for the advantage of the wild, uncivilized hunting Indian, who, from his habits of living, and his aversion to the pursuits of civilized life, was peculiarly unfitted to become a citizen of the States. This description of Indians it was especially the object of the government to remove west of the Mississippi river, considering such removal necessary, both for their own preservation, by placing them beyond the operation of the laws of the States, and to relieve the several States, within the territorial limits of which they were, of a useless and burdensome population.

This privilege of having one section of land set off for each Indian head of a family, as secured by the treaty, for the purpose of residing upon it, becoming citizens of the States, and receiving a title in fee simple to the land, after a residence of five years, appears to be "personal," which can be claimed by no one, except the Indian head of a family himself. His title in fee depends upon the performance of the condition precedent, of five years' residence, which no one but himself can perform. In case of death, or abandonment, the land reverts to the United States. No one can, therefore, acquire an interest in these claims by purchase. Upon this view of the rights of these claimants, an important consideration arises from the facts brought to light by the testimony taken by authority and order of the legislature of the State of Mississippi, laid before the Senate, and referred to the committee, to which the committee would call the attention of the Senate.

It appears that certain individuals, influenced by a desire of gain, have associated themselves into companies, with divisions into what they are pleased to call sub-companies, and purchased, for a trifling consideration, the claims of many of the Choctaw Indians; and through the agency and instrumentality of these persons, the agent of the government, by an evident misconstruction of the orders of the President of the United States, has been induced to withhold from the late public sales in Mississippi and Alabama, an enormous quantity of land, supposed largely to exceed one million of acres. The committee have not been able to ascertain the precise quantity of land so reserved from sale, no returns having as yet been made; but they have no doubt that it will not fall short of the quantity above stated. The terms upon which these persons have contracted for these claims to reservations (if they are equitable), are most disadvantageous to the Indians. It appears by the testimony, that they have agreed with the Indians to pay them for one-half the quantity of land which they may secure, at the rate of one dollar and a quarter per acre; the other half these companies are to receive for what they are pleased to call their services. This is the arrangement, as they state it themselves; and it is more than probable that many purchases have been effected at a much lower rate. Powers of attorney have been procured from the Indians, irrevocable, to locate these claims, and to sell and dispose of the half promised to the Indians, in any manner, and at any price, these "agents" may think proper. Not satisfied with this to them profitable arrangement with all the Indians who could be found on this side of the river Mississippi, these companies have sent agents among those Indians who had, in pursuance of the stipulations of the treaty, gone west of the river to their new homes assigned them by the government, and have procured their return to the States of Mississippi and Alabama, in great numbers, for the purpose of setting up these claims, which they themselves had never thought of previously to their removal. It also appears that these companies, in order to quiet any opposition to these claims on the part of the settlers on the public lands, many of whom would be deprived of pre-emptions, under the act of Congress of 1834, have, in many cases, entered into agreements to permit them to have one hundred and sixty acres at one dollar and a quarter per acre, and the remainder of the section at three dollars per acre. They have induced the locating agent to reserve from sale a great quantity of land of the best and richest quality in that part of the State of Mississippi—taking none but the most fertile, upon which there is no pretence that any Indian ever lived or had an improvement, for the purpose of satisfying these pretended claims.

In addition to what has been said on the construction of the 14th article of the treaty, the committee will, in relation to those Choctaws who had gone west of the Mississippi, call the attention of the Senate to other provisions of this treaty, which they think, in a legal point of view, preclude them all. By the 14th article, all those taking reservations under it are deprived of any participation in the annuity paid to that tribe. By the 17th article, it is also provided that ten thousand dollars shall be distributed among those not receiving reservations under any of the provisions of the treaty. All the Choctaws who have removed west of the Mississippi have received the full advantage of the annuity, and the proportionate dividend of the ten thousand dollars, and may be fairly presumed to have made their election between the advantage of remaining among the whites and removing with the tribe and participating in the benefits of the treaty, common to all.

They cannot be permitted to share in the dividends of the annuities and the ten thousand dollars, and then come back and take reservations also. To permit this would be to defeat the policy of the government and the stipulations of the treaty—would again burden the States with a population which it was one of the principal objects of the treaty to relieve them of—would greatly retard the improvement and prosperity of the States—would be an act of injustice to many of the settlers who are entitled to pre-emptions, of which they would be deprived, and would in the end, place the Indian himself, in ninety-three cases in a hundred, in a worse condition than if he were to remain with his tribe. It is easy to foresee that these white persons, or agents, as they style themselves, will, in the event of success, give to each of these Indian claimants a meagre support and a residence upon the land until the end of five years. The Indian will be nominally in possession, while the benefit is to be received by others. At the end of the five years, when he would be entitled to the land in fee simple, he will be either compelled or induced to transfer his title in pursuance of agreements already entered into. How disproportionate the price agreed to be paid by these white persons is to the real value of the land, may be learned from the fact, that this land will cost these purchasers of Indian reservations only ten cents per acre, in the event of these claims being confirmed. This is the account given of this speculation, by witnesses of indisputable credibility, known to one of the members of the committee, on the statement of the speculators themselves.

The lands asked for are in lieu of those which have been sold, and to which it is alleged that the Choctaw claimants were in equity entitled. The granting of other lands, in the place of those sold, would be in the shape of an indemnity, it not now being possible to obtain that to which they suppose they were entitled. Under these circumstances the Executive has not the power to allot other lands to them any more than he has to indemnify other individuals who have equitable claims on the government, on account of land claims, out of the public domain. Application is therefore made to Congress, and the question is, in what way, (admitting the claims to be equitable,) and to what extent, ought indemnity to be granted. If these individuals were entitled to lands sold, other lands in lieu of them cannot be a matter of right: a just compensation is all that can be claimed. Compensation in money has frequently been made for lands sold by the government, to which citizens were entitled. The committee, after considering all the facts and circumstances attending the whole transaction, do not hesitate to recommend that course in case any of these claimants can hereafter show they have equity. They are not of opinion that many, and doubt if any can do so, having much reliance on the testimony of Mr. Ward, who was the Indian agent at the time this treaty was being carried into execution. He states that not more than six or eight were omitted in the register which he kept, and this happened by the loss of a paper upon which the names were taken down for registration. These cases are now before the committee, having been filed in the War Department, and have been decided on.

This course would be giving to the Indian a substantial benefit, of which he would have but a poor prospect, under present circumstances, if land should be given nominally to him, but in reality for the use and benefit of his white agents. It would remove all inducement to fraud and perjury, of which there is great danger, in holding out to greedy speculators the prospect of the immense gain to be derived from the acquisition of valuable land at a price merely nominal: it would avoid the injustice to the government of selecting the most valuable portion of the public domain in lieu of lands upon which the Indians lived, which, it is generally known, was of the poorest quality, and would be most conducive to the interests of the States interested. The committee are, therefore, of opinion that it is not expedient to create a board for adjustment of those claims not heretofore presented, and have reported a resolution to that effect.

They have also examined the cases submitted, with a reference to the principles before laid down, and will report a bill for the relief of those who appear, by the testimony, to be entitled—securing to them lands of equal value, where those to which they were entitled have been sold, and guarding the rights of all others who may be interested; for it would not be just, in doing equity to the Indians, to deprive others of their rights.

Resolved, That it is not expedient to grant so much of the prayer of the petition and memorials as prays for the creation of a board to determine on the claims to reservations under the late treaty with the Choctaw Indians, at Dancing Rabbit, of 27th September, A. D., 1830.

Resolved, That all claims hereafter presented to Congress, under the 14th article of the treaty, which may appear to be just, and where the land claimed has been sold, a compensation should be paid in money.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1481. [1ST SESSION.

ON THE REORGANIZATION OF THE GENERAL LAND OFFICE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 23, 1836.

Mr. BOON, from the Committee on the Public Lands, laid before the House the following documents:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 3, 1836.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose to you herewith a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, on the reorganization of that bureau. The only change which I would suggest in the bill in its present form, is the expediency of devolving the duty named in the sixth section, on the Solicitor of the Treasury, if full inquiry should be found to render it useful.

The great importance of the subject must be the apology for so long a delay in making this report, and the accompanying it with so many papers.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. R. BOON, Chairman Committee on Public Lands.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 2, 1836.

SIR: In compliance with your request, upon the application of the Committee on Public Lands of the House of Representatives, made on the 20th of last January, I have the honor to submit a draught of a bill for reorganizing the General Land Office, containing the principles of such a reform as, in my judgment, is adapted to its anomalous nature, and to remedy some of the most apparent defects of its present condition, to impart greater facility and order to its numerous branches of duty, and to insure the efficiency on which so mainly depends a correct and energetic administration of the present multiplied concerns of the land system.

The accompanying exposition of the state of the General Land Office, and some branches of service with which it stands connected, is intended to explain to you and the committee the reasons that have governed in preparing the bill, which has occupied as much care and deliberation as I could devote to the subject, in the midst of incessant and pressing calls upon my attention since your request was made. I hope, sir, that you and the committee will find, in the circumstances in which I am placed, a sufficient apology for the delay of this communication.

In order to furnish you a tolerable idea of the mass of business accumulated and accumulating in the office, it has been computed that from six to eight years' labor of the regular force in the office would be required to bring all business and arrears of the establishment to a close, if the district land offices had been shut at the commence ment of this year.

The moneys received from purchasers of public land, during the year 1834, including stock and scrip, amounted to		$6,099,981 04
During the first, second, and third quarters of 1835, to	$8,869,483 57
Payments into the Treasury for the fourth quarter	5,591,009 86
		14,460,493 43
Estimated for the year 1836		10,000,000 00
Which constitute an aggregate of payments for three years of		$30,560,474 47

This amount of money would require three hundred and five thousand patents to be issued, on the assumption that the tracts were all half quarter-sections, every hundred dollars requiring one patent; but making a reasonable estimate for the number of tracts sold in sixteenths of sections, the number would be augmented to three hundred and sixty thousand, at least.

The act of the 5th of April, 1832, admitting of the sales of public lands in tracts of forty acres, has, as may well be supposed, greatly increased the number of patents, and every labor preparatory to their issue in the same proportion. The number of sales in such small tracts is large in many districts, and the sum of receipts for them requires double the number of patents that the same amount of money made necessary before the passage of that law.

The pre-emption law of the 19th of June, 1834, has already introduced into the office fifteen hundred cases of complaints and appeals from the decisions of the land officers; and the number is daily increasing.

It is ascertained that one hundred and sixty-nine thousand one hundred and seven certificates of sales (of tracts) remain to be registered in the tract-books of the office, returns from some districts being still deficient, to complete the past year.

The labor yet to be performed in the Bureau of Private Land Claims, in relation to land titles originating under foreign governments, and required to be consummated by our own, if valid, can only be estimated by years in the best possible organization of the General Land Office. There seems reason to apprehend that, without some change, the next generation of the holders of such claims, unacquainted with its state and the causes of delay which it cannot control, may reproach the officers of this institution with neglect or omission for having left the work unfinished.

This bureau is inevitably charged with thousands of Indian claims, titles, and conveyances, which unforeseen and unexpected causes have cast upon this office, in the midst of its heavy embarrassments, and of a complexity of affairs, that probably enters not, in greater proportion, into the details of any other branch of the public service.

The several commissions instituted in the course of thirty years have not closed the settlement of the private land claims in Louisiana, and some of the most difficult and complicated cases, in law and in fact, remain to be extricated from their involvement, by the General Land Office. In order to exhibit the state of this branch of the business more in detail than would be advisable in this summary, I beg leave to refer you to the accompanying paper, marked No. 1.

In the bureau of Virginia military bounty lands, with which, since the year 1830, the business of issuing scrip has been connected, it may require from three to five years to investigate all the warrants, surveys, and claims of title, now on file, and to execute the singularly tedious task of engrossing the grants on those surveys. The cases require attentive and critical investigation, and continual recurrence to indices and papers; and these causes, joined with a voluminous correspondence in the numerous cases where scrip has been demanded, since the year 1830, inclusive, and concerning which the office has been excessively importuned, have operated, in the meanwhile, to prevent any other than occasional issue of patents on the Virginia military surveys.

The clerk charged with these duties has exercised as much energy and promptitude as is believed to have been possible, in his circumstances, to satisfy the demands upon this branch, and obviate the embarrassment of augmenting arrears. For a more particular detail of this subject, I respectfully refer to the accompanying paper, marked No. 2.

It is respectfully suggested that the surveys are at the base of the land system, and should be directed by the most efficient supervision, for which no adequate provision has been made; the laws on this subject having prescribed the mere outline of rectangular surveying, appear to have left the detail to be filled up by the surveyors general, and to justify the department in recognizing the certificate of each, however variant their notions of proceeding, as definitively conclusive. Hence, a want of uniformity might have been anticipated, in the operations of the several surveying districts, which have reached their present number in the course of —— years by successive additions; and hence the mischiefs which, prior to the year 1831, found their way into the surveying system.

I am led to believe that the appointment of an officer at the seat of government, to superintend, especially, this branch of service, would have been economical and highly beneficial, if such charge had been intrusted soon after the late war, when the immense amount of surveys for military bounty, and sale, in Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas, Alabama, &c., were ordered, and even in 1818, before certain regular progressive sales were ordered by Mr. Secretary Crawford. The supervision might have prevented much bad surveying, that a system like the one above described was likely to lead to, and timely correctives might have been applied to the numerous errors that continue to be developed in those old surveys, as the demand for land increases; and it seems to me still proper and necessary that the General Land Office should have the assistance of an officer possessing the peculiar talent and acquirement expected in a surveyor general, to direct future operations, detect incorrect work as occasion may require, and devise and apply the proper correction; to direct and oversee the necessary execution and distinctive coloring of maps, arranging and recording of field-notes, formation of indices; to place his charge in systematic order, and attend to its particular correspondence—labors that will demand discriminating judgment, devoted and almost exclusive attention, and great industry. Since the commencement of the land system, the law has never referred the operations of surveying the public lands to any supervisory head at the seat of government, unless the commissioner be considered such by implication; and, if he possesses implied powers in this respect, the law has not defined them.

The General Land Office, with its small comparative force, has struggled to obviate and avert as many evils as possible. I am informed that signal benefit has resulted to the public surveys, within the last four years, from instructions emanating from this office in July, 1831, in the shape of a circular to the surveyors general, pointing out all the minutiæ of their duties which past experience indicated to be necessary; which instructions, I understand, had to be matured by the chief clerk, in extra hours, during a period of several months; as no leisure could be found in office hours for digesting a subject involving so many details. A desirable degree of uniformity in field operations, and in returns to this office and to the district land offices, not before existing, has been thus insured for the future; but the defects of the past are not yet adequately provided against. The exposition of these last, with a view to their remedy, would form an important item of the duty of the officer proposed.

In conclusion of this subject, I beg leave to add that the laws concerning the surveys, by a singular oversight, made no early requisition that copies of the field-notes (technically the surveys) should be multiplied. Instead of such copies, the surveyors general were required to furnish, with the township plats, a document called "a description" of the township, which shows the quality of the land on sectional lines, and describes the corner-posts and bearing-trees. These descriptions, however, answer not the purpose of the field-notes, and no protraction can be made from them. The original field-notes are in the offices of the surveyors general; no copies of them are extant by law, and if they should be lost, by conflagration or otherwise, no record of them will exist. After considerable effort on the part of this office, Congress has made extra appropriations for transcripts of the field-notes to be filed here; an operation now in progress, which will be the work of years.

The amount received into the Treasury from the sales of public lands, will have enabled you and the committee to form an opinion of the extent and amount of operations under the land system. The lapse of near a quarter of a century since the General Land Office was organized, has introduced a state of things, in this respect, which could not have been anticipated and provided for in the year 1812. Hence the defects which time has unfolded in the organic law of the General Land Office, which, at this crisis of the system, call upon the legislature for a remedy, in view of all probable exigencies in future.

While I would ask permission to invite the attention of the committee to the vast increase of the land sales, and the proportionate additional labor and responsibility consequent on that increase, I would respectfully desire them to advert especially to the various enactments of the national legislature, which, from time to time, since 1812, have, by gradual progress, imperceptible to the public eye, introduced new and peculiar duties and responsibilities, often necessarily diverting attention and exertion from other current and increasing business, and very materially affecting the circumstances and conduct of the institution specially appointed to administer the laws regulating the disposal of the public domain.

The swelling amount and diversity of business in the General Land Office justify the suggestion that, if the other means were afforded for issuing patents within a year for the lands sold within a like period, the manual task of affixing to documents, of both parchment and paper, so as to keep pace, nearly, with the other operations, would occupy so many of the Commissioner's hours per diem, as to leave him little time to be devoted to the multifarious and sometimes perplexed subjects of increasing duties that devolve upon him under the present organization.

The committee may well imagine that, in affairs so extensive and ramified as our land concerns, cases important and intricate, in law, and in fact, will arise, demanding time and deliberation; and that the Commissioner, regarding the comparative urgency and importance of the subjects before him, must be compelled to choose which shall shall claim precedence of his attention. They will perceive, on an intimate acquaintance with the state of affairs confided to this office, that it does not now possess the power to silence all complaints by speedy action in every case; since some must, of necessity, be delayed, when no possible diligence and assiduity can accomplish all.

In order that the just expectations of those interested may be complied with in a reasonable degree and time, it is deemed highly expedient and necessary, and almost indispensable, that the assistance of the law officer proposed in the 6th section of the bill submitted, should be afforded to the commissioner for a limited time. The duties of the trust will be arduous, requiring competent legal acquirement and persevering attention and industry.

As the tedious task of signing the patents (which justice to purchasers requires should be expedited,) causes a more constant diversion of the Commissioner's attention from subjects of great interest than any other ordinary occupation in the discharge of his duties, I have thought it advisable that the patents be prepared under the immediate superintendence of an officer to be charged exclusively with that duty; by whose signature, in addition to that of the President, and the seal of the General Land Office, authenticity should be given to the patents. With this relief, added to the assistance of the soliciter proposed, and proper distribution of duties and responsibilities among those placed under his direction, the Commissioner might find time for due investigation of cases and subjects novel or difficult; for promoting order and despatch in the office, and regularity in the routine of business; and, in fine, for performing, in a more efficient manner than present circumstances allow, the proper functions of the head of a great establishment.

In connexion with the subject of the bill which I have the honor herewith to submit, a summary of the views I have taken the liberty to express is subjoined, with great respect, in the following intended arrangement of duties, should the bill proposed become a law. It is believed that the detail is not too minute for the satisfaction of the committee.

First. The office of Commissioner of the General Land Office:

Duties and Clerks.

Principal clerk of the public lands, with one assistant and two recorders.

Accountants.

To examine and adjust the accounts of receivers of public moneys, preparatory to auditing; also to exercise a general direction of the manner of opening the tract-books, and of registering therein, in order to preserve uniformity; and have the care of correspondence with the receivers, under the direction of the commissioner. The duties to be confided to two accountants, with a clerk to record the reports and correspondence.

Book-keepers for registering the land sales.

One for the books of the land districts in Ohio;
One, with an assistant, for the land districts in Indiana;
One, with two assistants, for the land districts in Illinois;
One, with an assistant, for the land districts in Missouri;
One, with two assistants, for the land districts in Alabama;
One, with two assistants, for the land districts in Mississippi;
One, with an assistant, for the land districts in Louisiana;
One, with an assistant, for the land districts in the peninsula of Michigan;
One, with an assistant, for the land districts in western Michigan, Arkansas, and Florida:
Making an aggregate of nine book-keepers, and eleven assistant book-keepers.

Miscellaneous.—Bureau of Patents.

1. The arranging and preparing and keeping the proper checks on the certificates of purchase, after the registry of the sales in the tract-books, prior to handing the same over to the Recorder of the General Land Office.
2. The issuing of donation patents, and patents of other descriptions, required under special laws.
3. The issuing of patents under the credit system.
4. The issuing of patents for military bounty lands, late war.
5. The issuing of patents for exchange military bounty lands.
6. Preparing exemplifications of patents, and the evidences on which they are founded, other than those under the cash system, which would be prepared by the Recorder of the General Land Office.
7. The correction of errors of entry in the district land offices. This branch of business increases in proportion to the increase of the sales of public lands, and the application for changes of entry, and the testimony adduced in their support; requiring rigid investigation, and involving much correspondence.
8. Correction of patents. In consequence of clerical errors at the district land offices in the description of tracts, and in the names of parties in the evidences of title transmitted to the General Land Office, frequently originating in the want of care in the agents of purchasers in filling up the "applications," and sometimes from inadvertence on the part of the land officers, numerous patents, in the course of a year, are, from the foregoing causes, returned for correction, and much time and great caution are required to effect their correction, and make corresponding alterations otherwise consequent thereon.
9. Overpayments and short payments. It requires considerable time to attend to cases of this description, which sometimes arise from inaccuracies of calculation of contents by the surveyors general, and sometimes from error in calculating the amount of purchase money by the land officers.
10. Examination of the assignments before filing the same with the certificates of the purchase.
11. An extensive miscellaneous correspondence connected with the inquiries of individuals for information in particular cases.
12. The superintendence of the patents handed over by the recorder for the purpose of having the seal affixed.

The foregoing miscellaneous duties of the bureau of patents to be in charge of a superintending clerk and three assistants.

Bureau of private land claims.

Under the immediate supervision of the principal clerk on the private land claims, with four assistants.

The labors of this bureau, as connected with the issuing of patents on about sixteen thousand private claims to lands, originating under foreign governments, and to be consummated by the United States, and also a view of the duties of the General Land Office in relation to Indian lands connected with the same bureau, are set forth in the document marked No. 1, herewith submitted.

Bureau of scrip and for issuing patents for Virginia military bounty lands.

To be in charge of a superintending clerk and four assistants.

The origin of the arrears in this branch, and of the principal embarrassments resulting therefrom, are minutely set forth in the document marked No. 2, herewith submitted: from which it appears that, separate and apart from all duties connected with the issuing of scrip, there have accumulated between three and four hundred surveys, the title-papers of which are of very complicated character, requiring great scrutiny and patient investigation, prior to their being carried into grant; and that about six hundred of such surveys yet remain afloat, and which may be thrown on the office at the pleasure of the proprietors.

Apart from the numerous letters of inquiry and complaint of delay in issuing patents on the surveys on file yet to be patented, there are 150 or 200 pressing letters requiring various kinds of information relative to surveys which have been patented, and which inquiries cannot possibly be attended to under existing circumstances. Since the month of October last, not less than three hundred letters have been received on this single branch.

Bureau of pre-emption claims.

There are between 1,500 and 2,000 cases of complaints and appeals from the decisions of land officers in relation to pre-emption claims remaining to be adjudicated. These cases are of very urgent character, but of such nature that it would not be advisable to distribute the duties between more than two agents, lest there should arise conflict of opinion and inconsistency of decision.

Recorder of the General Land Office.

Principal clerk; two principal examiners; and thirty-five clerks to engross and record patents.

It will be necessary to have two sets of examiners, each composed of three persons, to compare together the certificate of purchase, the patent, and the record of the same. Each of the principal examiners must be familiar with the technical language required to be observed in the patents, adapted to the various peculiarities existing in different land districts.

From an investigation made on the 11th of January, it was ascertained, as will appear by the document marked No. 3, herewith submitted, that there were then 169,107 patents to be issued. Numerous heavy returns have since been received, and the number at present is estimated to be about 180,000. Such a number of patents would require the labor of fifty clerks to issue them in a year.

Bureau of surveys.

The existing state of the bureau of surveys, as respects the arrangement of maps, books, and papers, will be found in the paper marked No. 4, herewith submitted.

The force necessary to conduct the duties of this branch in an appropriate manner would be a first clerk, two principal draughtsmen, and one assistant draughtsman.

Messengers and packers.

Messengers and two assistant messengers for the Commissioner; messengers for the recorder; two packers and sealers of packages of blank forms, patents, &c.

Under this organization, the aggregate force in the whole establishment, exclusive of the two principal clerks on the public lands and private claims, also of the recorder and first clerk on the surveys, would be eighty-one clerks, and when an increased force would be requisite on any particular branch or subject, the Commissioner would have it in his power to detail it from ordinary duties, as occasion may require.

I would respectfully invite attention to the accompanying report of the chief clerk, made to me by direction, and the documents therein referred to, marked 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5.

I have the honor to be, sir, with great respect, your obedient servant,

E. A. BROWN, Commissioner.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 22, 1836.

SIR: In obedience to your request, I have the honor herewith to submit to you the reports which, by direction, have been prepared by the gentlemen having the immediate supervision of the business of the branches of duty therein named.

No. 1 is the report of Mr. King, on the subject of the arrears and embarrassments in the Bureau of Private Land Claims.

No. 2 is a report of Mr. Keller, who has in charge the duties of the Bureau of Scrip, and for issuing patents on Virginia military lands. Having been appealed to by him, in reference to matters which happened many years ago, I confirm his statements.

No. 3 is the report of Mr. Simmons, the senior of the accountants and book-keepers, indicating in a tabular form, the arrears in the settlement of the accounts of the receivers of public moneys; in the duty of registering the sales in the tract-books, and the number of patents to be issued, as ascertained up to the date of his report, since which time many additional thousands of certificates of purchase have been received, making the number of patents to be issued at the present time about 180,000.

No. 4 is the report of the draughtsman, who has thought proper to confine himself to a statement of the existing arrangement in the Bureau of Surveys, and purposely to omit any estimate of the magnitude of the arrears, in consequence of his having but recently taken charge of the duties. Of these arrears a correct estimate cannot be made without occupying more time in the research than would be justifiable in due regard to the other pressing engagements of the bureau; and to make such estimate would necessarily involve an inquiry into the arrears existing in the offices of the several surveyors general of returns now due, and of what returns may be expected in a given time. A vast amount of surveying is in progress, and heavy returns are now due. In the fall of 1833, it was ascertained that six hundred township surveys then remained to be protracted on the connected maps of the land districts. The returns since received, added to those due, and which may shortly be rendered, will more than double that number.

It is proper here to notice the fact, of which you are fully aware, that neither the surveying laws, nor the law of 1812, organizing the General Land Office, point out any specific duties to be performed at the seat of government, in relation to the returns of surveys made by the surveyors general. Prior to the creation of this office, when the subject of the public lands formed part of the duties proper, in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Gallatin directed the practice of constructing district maps, on a suitable scale, from the official returns of survey, from which district maps, State maps could readily be formed, when required. This practice was subsequently continued after the organization of this office, until the year 1829, when (like many other plans and arrangements commenced as official desiderata, and unavoidably discontinued, not without regret) it had to be abandoned for want of aid, consequently the arrears of five years have now accumulated, and should be speedily brought up, unless it be determined to abandon the compilation of such maps altogether.

In due regard, therefore, to what are assumed to be the duties proper of the Surveying Bureau, I would respectfully submit the following view of the subjects which it would seem fit to place under its charge, in order to give it the requisite degree of efficiency, and render it a more useful auxiliary to the Commissioner:

1. To place in its charge the correspondence with the surveyors general, under the general directions of the commissioner; a charge which, in the midst of a heavy amount of miscellaneous correspondence, has heretofore principally devolved on the chief clerk, and which he has generally been compelled to attend to out of office hours.

2. To exercise the supervision necessary to ensure a uniform compliance with the instructions as to details in the protracting of the township maps.

3. To superintend the arrangement of the field notes, which (as now provided for by law) are in process of being transcribed.

4. To examine the accounts of the surveyors general, and compare the charges for the miles surveyed with the returns of surveys prior to the settlement of such accounts.

5. To continue the book of quantities, (on the plan long since commenced, but unavoidably abandoned,) by indicating the amount of public land and private land claims in each township, in order that accurate statements may at all times be rendered on official calls, as to the quantities of land surveyed in the respective districts.

6. The critical examination and comparison with the maps of the designations, as well as the quantities of tracts, as expressed in the certificates of purchase, where such tracts are fractional sections, or legal subdivisions of fractional sections, prior to the engrossing of the patents founded on such certificates.

To designate correctly and technically the parts of fractional sections, or their legal subdivisions, where the same have to be identified by their relative position in the fractional section, and not by a specific number affixed, is frequently found to be a critical matter, wherein a very slight inadvertence or deviation may involve no small consequences to the interests of purchasers, if not to the public, were the same not detected prior to being carried into grant. Such cases are becoming very numerous, and mistakes in such designations are of frequent occurrence at the district land offices in the hurry of business. These examinations and checks would seem more properly a duty belonging to the surveying bureau than to the book-keepers who register the sales, and who have heretofore been required to attend to them, whenever the numerous other requisitions on the time of the draughtsman have prevented him from doing so.

7. The devising of means of correcting the errors in the old surveys, as they are from time to time developed.

8. The compilation of connecting maps of the land districts, protracted on a suitable reduced scale from the official returns of surveys; the preparations of the State maps from those of the land districts, and the copying f draughts.

I am, with great respect, sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN M. MOORE, Chief Clerk.

P. S.—I beg leave to submit herewith document No. 5, being a tabular view of the annual increase of the office from the year 1826 to 1835, inclusive, and showing the annual appropriations made for the execution of all duties required of the General Land Office during the same periods, and would respectfully invite attention to the explanations made on the table, deeming it unnecessary here to repeat the same.

J. M. M.

ETHAN A. BROWN, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office.

No. 1.

The following estimate presents, as accurately as can be ascertained from a cursory examination of the reports, &c., the number of private claims to lands in the several States and Territories which have been confirmed, and the number which have been patented, exclusive of those confirmed by the numerous private acts of Congress for the relief of individuals.

State or Territory.	Number of claims confirmed.	Number patented.	Number to be patented.
In Indiana	953	80	873
In Illinois	1,588	385	1,203
In Michigan, east and west	1,119	569	550
In Missouri and Arkansas	3,107	818	2,289
In Mississippi and Alabama	1,200	93	1,107
In Mississippi, not requiring patents	815	...	....
In Louisiana	8,857	463	8,394
In Florida	1,322	65	1,257
Totals	18,961	2,473	15,673

By the foregoing estimate, it will be perceived that nearly 16,000 claims have been confirmed, for which patents have yet to be issued. Before any of those patents can be issued, it is necessary that the certificates and surveys should be critically examined and compared with the confirmatory laws, the reports and official returns of survey, to ascertain whether they are correct; and, as may be supposed, such examinations result in considerable correspondence. The manner in which the claims in Missouri, Arkansas, and Michigan, are represented upon the returns of survey, has rendered it necessary that the lands should be described in each patent by particularly detailing the courses and lengths of all the lines, the nature and position of the bearing-trees, &c.; thus rendering their patenting a very tedious process. In other cases, the tracts being described by their sectional numbers, the patents are shorter, but yet involve considerable labor in issuing them.

From the progress which has been made in the surveys, it is supposed that this office is now liable to be called upon, at any moment, for the patent in almost every case of confirmation in Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, and Arkansas, and for a large portion of those in Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, and Florida, and nothing but the neglect or inattention of the claimants themselves tends to prevent this vast mass of business from being at once thrown upon the office. As those lands are rapidly increasing in value, and as the public attention is becoming more and more drawn to them, we cannot but expect they will, ere long, demand their patents. The allegations of fraud either in procuring the confirmation or surveys of claims, necessarily occasion considerable correspondence and close investigation.

Particular causes have, for a long time past, been operating in Louisiana and Mississippi, to delay the forwarding of the patent certificates for the claims in those States, and also in the southern part of Alabama; but when those causes are removed, the certificates must be expected to be forwarded.

The embarrassments connected with the confirmed claims, form only a small part of the business connected with this branch of the General Land Office.

It will be perceived that no estimate has been made of the great number of the unconfirmed claims in the several States and Territories. These claims are the cause of much difficulty and labor; they pass from hand to hand, in the hope of their eventual confirmation, being apparently seldom, if ever, abandoned; and as new boards are, from time to time, opened for their re-examination, under, in some cases, relaxed regulations of law, and also from the right of petitioning Congress in each case, under a hope of succeeding by exparte representations, the office is continually called upon for information which, in the present state of reports, can in many cases be only obtained after tedious and extensive examinations, and in many cases even the information that does exist cannot be afforded from the want of proper indexes, for the preparation of which, time cannot, under the present circumstances, be afforded.

Within the last few years, a considerable portion of the reports have been indexed, so far as to show the names of the individuals who claimed the land before the officers making those reports; but in no case has the office been enabled to prepare indexes showing the names of the original claimants, or the intermediate owners of those lands, so far as they are exhibited by the reports. It therefore results, as a matter of necessity, that unless when an inquiry is made, the name of the individual who claimed the land before those officers is given, the office has no means of ascertaining whether such claim was produced and acted upon or not; but if the office was enabled to make all the indexes required, then a knowledge of the name of any one of the former owners or claimants would enable it to ascertain the nature of action which may have been had respecting such claim. The labor involved in their preparation would be very great, but the results would be far more important.

So far as the reports have been submitted to and been acted upon by Congress, the originals in this office are necessarily the only conclusive evidence respecting the confirmation of each of the particular claims included therein, and their preservation is therefore all-important; but if, as heretofore, we are obliged to be continually referring to them, they must necessarily become so injured and obliterated by constant use, as eventually to render them imperfect. These originals, which are now upon every kind of paper, from the largest size wrapping paper to letter paper, should, therefore, be most carefully and neatly copied into well-bound and durable volumes, which, after being critically examined, should be duly certified, and to these copies the ordinary references should be made, in order that the originals might be carefully preserved, and only used when absolutely required in giving certified copies and extracts to be used for judicial purposes. Another great advantage from adopting this course, would be the possession of such duly-certified copies, in case of the destruction of the originals.

In some districts the door has been opened from time to time, for the last thirty years, for the investigation of land titles, and reports have been made at different periods upon the claims presented, and claims which have been rejected under one law, have been brought up under subsequent acts. To enable the office, therefore, to trace the history of each of those claims, and the decisions which may have been made thereon, it is necessary that all the reports from the same section of country should be compared with each other, and such references made thereon to the previous and subsequent proceedings in each case; as would show the entire action upon such claim.

The difficulties existing in relation to the surveys of some of the claims, and the issuing of the patent certificates therefor, not necessarily coming under the head of arrearages in the General Land Office, are not now noticed, as they more properly belong to the consideration of other branches of the embarrassments connected with the existing state of the land system.

In the foregoing remarks, any reference to the proceedings under special laws confirming the claims of particular individuals, or granting lands for particular purposes to corporate institutions, or to the States or Territories, has been purposely avoided; not because they have not, in many instances, occasioned great labor, and involved many points of difficulty, but in consequence of their not forming a part of that burden arising out of general legislation, which is to be classed under the general head of private land claims.

Another branch of the business of the office, now connected with the private claims, which has sprung up with unexampled rapidity, and which, although it now forms an extremely heavy part of the business in this branch of the office, promises soon to overwhelm it, is that arising out of the Indian transactions, which have been thrown upon this office. Allusion is made to the location of Indian reservations, and more particularly to their sale by the reservees. Until the late Indian treaties, the reservations were conditionally selected by the Indian agent, and reported to this office and to the register of the proper district, and if no objections were perceived to such selections, they were submitted to the President, for his approval. Most of the reservations being subject to sale with the approbation of the President, he has uniformly required that the conveyance should be acknowledged and certified in a particular manner, to meet his approbation, and when so approved, that all such conveyances, with the whole of the evidence in support thereof, should be recorded in full, in this office. Under the late treaties, the locations have been made by special agents appointed by the War Department, but all their locations should not only be compared with the plats and books of this office, before approval, but afterward be permanently marked upon the plats and books, as a check to prevent interfering sales. The total number of reservations which may be granted under the late Choctaw, Chickasaw, and Creek treaties, is not known to this office, but they are to be counted by thousands; and if, eventually, this office should have to revise the locations, and the conveyances of those reservations, the labor involved will be beyond estimate.

This branch of the business can, however, be most easily and properly disconnected from this office. The duties of locating, &c., are now performed by persons appointed by the War Department, and acting under its instructions, and who are in no wise responsible to this office, or under its control. All that this office should know, is the designation of the lands reserved; and if, therefore, it was only required to withhold from sale the lands which the War Department might inform it were Indian reservations, it could do so without inconvenience or much labor; and the business connected with the sales of those reservations being transacted by the Indian bureau of the War Department, this office would be almost entirely relieved from this additional source of great and rapidly increasing embarrassment.

Very respectfully, S. D. KING.

CHIEF CLERK of the General Land Office.

No. 2.

BUREAU OF SCRIP AND VIRGINIA MILITARY SURVEYS, February 1, 1835.

SIR: In compliance with your request, I now proceed to give a statement of the difficulties and embarrassments under which this bureau labors, as respects the duties confided to me, ever since the 1st of April, 1828, up to this day, and of the impossibility to attend to and perform these duties faithfully to the claimants and the government.

In 1828, the duties confided to me were: 1. The issuing of patents on Virginia military surveys.

2. The issuing of patents on United States military warrants granted for Revolutionary services.

3. The issuing of patents on warrants granted to the soldiers of the late war.

4. The issuing of patents for lands selected by soldiers of the late war in exchange for others.

5. The transmission of patents for purchased lands.

Although I had assistance, yet the correspondence arising out of the several branches of business referred to, could no longer be attended to by myself, and the duties enumerated under Nos. 3, 4, and 5, were transferred, in 1830, to the Bureau of Patents, then instituted, where they have ever since been performed; and, to account why the duties stated under Nos. 1 and 2 have not been attended to with the usual requisite promptitude, it may be proper to give a brief history of the events which caused the delay and the present embarrassment.

Colonel Richard C. Anderson, late surveyor of the lands in the Virginia military district in Ohio, died in the latter part of the year 1826, and great difficulty existed in appointing a successor, the President being of opinion that no appointment could be made until Congress had given authority by law, as no such officer had ever been appointed by the Executive. Colonel Anderson having been appointed under the authority of Virginia, by the officers of the Virginia continental line, (who, I believe, were specially convened for that purpose,) held the office for about forty years.

In consequence of Mr. Anderson's decease, very few surveys were returned to this office during the years 1827 and 1828, and even at that period, the issuing of patents on those surveys occupied the whole of the time of the clerk in this office who had charge of that branch of business; and in order to discharge the duty promptly, he occasionally, as you well know, required an assistant.

The act of 26th of May, 1826, in relation to the Virginia military lands, required certain formalities to be observed as respected the issuing of patents on surveys surrendered previous, to which the Secretary of War was required to certify that the warrant (on which the survey was made) was granted by Virginia for services, as by the laws of that State passed prior to the cession of the Northwestern Territory, would have entitled such officer, his heirs or assigns, to bounty land. This provision in the law was complied with by the then Secretary of War, until March, 1829, and the surveys that were returned up to that time were, in most instances, disposed of.

On the 24th of February, 1829, Congress passed an act authorizing the President to appoint a successor to Colonel Anderson, and on the 13th of March following, the President commissioned the present incumbent, Allen Latham.

The immediate consequences of the appointment of a surveyor caused the return of a number of surveys for patents, previous to the issuing of which the warrant and surveys had to be submitted to the Secretary of War for the certificate required by the proviso in the first section of the act above referred to, but the then Secretary refused to certify until evidence authorizing the act was laid before him. In consequence of this refusal, the warrants and surveys were, in almost every instance, returned to the proprietors or agents, with the request to procure the requisite evidence from the Virginia land office, at Richmond, where the warrants emanated. The delay thereby created raised great clamor among the owners, inasmuch as it involved them in considerable expense and loss of time; but before that evidence could be obtained, the summer had passed by, and the papers, together with the evidence, were not returned until the winter of 1829–30; but, notwithstanding all embarrassments, I succeeded in disposing of a great many cases, and Congress being made acquainted with the vexatious delay and expense which the claimants to patents were subjected to, repealed the embarrassing proviso above stated, by the act of the 23d of April, 1830, and I then flattered myself in having a prospect before me to conduct this business with despatch and fidelity to those interested, when Congress passed an act on the 30th of May, 1830, appropriating three hundred and ten thousand acres of land for satisfying Virginia state line and navy warrants, as well as those of the continental line, which had been issued, or were to be issued, by granting scrip therefor.

This law is commonly called the scrip law, and contained, also, provisions for warrants granted by the United States for the latter. I had, heretofore, as above stated, issued the patents, and that labor constituted a very considerable part of my duties.

The execution of this law was confided to the Secretary of the Treasury, but the burden thereof was imposed on the General Land Office, and the active duties necessarily devolved on me. In making the necessary arrangements for the execution of the scrip law, and before the issue of scrip commenced, the summer of that year had passed by, during which the number of surveys had gradually accumulated to three hundred, and the surveyor reported that one thousand yet remained in his office. To dispose of those three hundred would have required my exclusive attention, and that of an assistant, for eighteen months.

This branch of my duties was then laid aside, and the issue of scrip commenced, and the only clerks allowed me were Arthur L. McIntyre and Henry Sylvester; the former copied the correspondence, and the latter was exclusively engaged in recording the scrip and keeping the index, in which, occasionally, when the clamor for scrip was great, another assistant was allowed.

Mr. Sylvester was, in 1832, transferred to another department, and his experience lost to the bureau, which materially embarrassed me, inasmuch as the one who obtained his place possessed no experience in the business. Mr. McIntyre also obtained considerable information, and was of great use and help in the bureau, when subsequent appropriations were made for the same objects. The correspondence and daily inquiries and calls by persons interested increased steadily, and at sundry periods have I been exclusively and most laboriously, day after day, engaged in nothing else than giving verbal explanations and information to claimants, who personally appeared, particularly during the session of Congress; hence, the business arising under that act was not brought to a close until late in 1832, that is, so far as the issuing of scrip was concerned for the land appropriated. The respite which took place was of but short duration, and did not permit me, except in very few instances, to take up a single survey, for I had to prepare statements in order to execute the law subjecting the unlocated lots in the United States military district to private entry.

By the act of 13th of July, 1832, a further appropriation of three hundred thousand acres of land was made, and the issue of scrip under that law commenced in the autumn of that year, which, however, was disposed of in about nine months, but yet no relaxation was afforded; for by the act of 2d March, 1833, another appropriation of two hundred thousand acres was made, which was also disposed of, at the beginning of 1834, leaving only a fraction undisposed of, which was covered by claims suspended for further evidence.

The index and record-books of the proceedings under the several scrip laws, were made in such haste, and subjected to such frequent changes, that they should be renewed, together with the old war-office indexes, which had become very much mutilated and defaced by wear and tear of about forty years' use, and most especially of latter years; and by renewing them in the mode proposed, would afford a comprehensive view of all matters relative to the Virginia military claims, and hereafter would be an effectual check against any imposition that might be attempted.

To carry this proposition into effect, Congress, on the recommendation of the Commissioner, appropriated fifteen hundred dollars for this especial purpose, and I flattered myself then, that Mr. McIntyre would be detailed for this duty; for, independent of his excellent record hand, the general knowledge which he had acquired the preceding years rendered him well qualified for the work; but his suspension from office has compelled me to relinquish the undertaking, and I see no possibility to commence that most desirable work at the present time, because it would require my constant supervision, should a person be appointed without possessing any previous information, however well qualified he might be in all other respects.

The issue of scrip, under the act of 3d of March last, which appropriated six hundred and fifty thousand acres, commenced about the middle of October last, and the recording thereof is intrusted to Mr. Paine, and the copying of letters to Mr. Murray, who, although a very intelligent person, is, from inexperience, as yet of no other use. The daily inquiries relative to the claims and the calls for scrip engross my attention so much, that I can scarcely obtain time to make out applications for scrip; moreover, rival claimants to the scrip embarrass me very much, and lay me open to malicious inferences, and compel me to make constant references to the Commissioner for decisions; and to such extent do these adverse claims exist at this time that no other business can be taken up, and at what time the appropriation will be disposed of, I cannot pretend to say.

The scrip correspondence has already filled up three large books, containing only the record of letters on that subject, and the fourth is more than half filled; and the correspondence arising out of the several laws, even if no further appropriation should be made, will, for many years to come, employ one person exclusively. In the meantime, the surveys are accumulating, and are of more intricate character than heretofore.

Many important cases have been laid over for the Commissioner's decision, and, if obtained, how am I to issue the patents, the engrossing of which cannot be suffered to pass without a critical investigation and comparison of the patent with the record. To supervise this is necessarily my duty, and the same cannot be done, in consequence of continued interruption in the scrip business.

To the foregoing detailed duties, a new and very troublesome one has lately been added, arising out of the incorporation of a banking institution by the State of Ohio, for the purpose, as I am informed, of making loans on real estate; and you well know that the grants for mostly all the lands in that State emanated from the United States. Agencies of the bank are located, I believe, in the principal counties of Ohio, and any individual applying for a loan has to mortgage his estate. To ascertain the legality of the title to his land which the applicants for a loan may offer to mortgage, applications are made for copies of the original patents for lands lying within the military district, and a great part of my time during last summer has been consumed in making out copies.

The demand for such copies increases at a fearful rate. The applicants do not confine themselves to make their own application, because they cannot be attended to agreeably to their own wants and wishes, but they make their applications to members of Congress, and they to this office. The application for such copies, in a single letter, is sometimes for three and four, and the letters are always very urgent, and now amount to eighteen, requiring twenty-seven copies.

The letters which require answers, and some of very great importance, involving most elaborate and critical investigation, amount to one hundred and eighteen, and increase so rapidly that I am no longer able to pay any attention to them. It is almost too late, even with sufficient assistance, to dispose of the arrears, and it cannot be done until the scrip laws are disposed of. Mere manual labor alone cannot relieve me, for I am unable to prepare the work, and most of it I will have to do myself. A sensible relief would be afforded, if I could make a reference of the letters to another clerk, whose experience on the duties would enable him to answer direct inquiries and give information, but this is out of the question; none has sufficient information, and the want of it might only still further embarrass this branch of the business, were I to make such reference without accompanying it with the substance of the necessary answer.

The foregoing exhibits the causes, and my inability to make even a reasonable progress of the several duties confided. In addition, I will state that the surveys on file amount probably to between three and four hundred, of which the title papers to most of them are of a very complex nature, and some will require perhaps a whole day in the examination. The writing of one of this description (the surveys being, in many cases, of a very zigzag shape) will require a whole sheepskin, and a day to engross it, and another to record it; and to despatch all those on hand, of which at least one half are probably imperfect and require consequent correspondence, will demand the attention of two clerks for several years, there being at least six hundred surveys afloat or remaining uncalled for in the surveyor's office. To execute, therefore, this branch of business, and expedite the issuing of the patents, it ought to be committed to some other person, who, at the same time, could attend to the incidental correspondence arising under it, and preparing such copies of patents as may be called for. The issue of scrip, under the several acts of Congress, at the present time requires my undivided attention, the peculiar nature of which does not permit me to employ others, except that of recording the certificates and filing the papers.

The number of warrants surrendered, under the late appropriation, amount to seven hundred and forty, of which two hundred and forty are disposed of, that is, so far as the preparing of the scrip is concerned, but the greater portion of them is not yet issued, as in most of the large claims contest arises between rival agents, compelling me to ask advice from the Commissioner, and then to prepare reports to the Secretary; and here it is necessary to peruse vast numbers of documents, so that it is almost impossible to make out applications for the issue of scrip.

Many warrants are necessarily suspended, and require continual correspondence with the register of the land office at Richmond; so that about three hundred letters remain unanswered, and the number is daily increasing. This branch of business will, even if the present appropriations be disposed of, require for many years the time of one clerk to give information on personal calls, or by letter, and after the appropriations be disposed of, the indexes of these warrants on which scrip has been issued ought to be completed, otherwise the confusion will be such that no information of a correct nature can ever be given by a clerk who may hereafter succeed me. This I have most at heart, for it would be a high gratification for me to leave that business in a state that any person could understand it.

Finally, I would state that there is now a bill pending authorizing the issue of scrip on United States warrant, of which about fifty are already on file, and more may be expected on the enactment of that law.

Your most obedient servant,

FRED. KELLER.

Estimate of the number of clerks required.

First. The number of accounts unadjusted is 251, nearly the same as the annual number to be audited. One accountant can easily adjust two accounts per week, on an average, or one hundred per annum; consequently, six accountants (the present number in the office) can audit and report on six hundred accounts a year, if not otherwise occupied; but as each of the accountants is also a book-keeper, a great portion of every year is consumed in posting the books.

Secondly. One book-keeper, familiar with the business of posting, may make about one hundred and fifty entries per week, or eight thousand a year. It will therefore require seventeen book-keepers for one year to bring up the arrears of posting; but if no more be employed on the work, the arrears at the end of this year will be nearly as great as at its commencement. As, however, there may be some diminution in the sales of lands this year, as compared with last year, perhaps twelve assistant book-keepers, in addition to the present number of accountants, making eighteen in all in this branch of the business, will be found sufficient to adjust the accounts and post the books; the distribution of the assistant book-keepers to be regulated by the quantum of work assigned to each accountant.

Thirdly. The number of patents in arrear, to be written, recorded, examined, and issued, is one hundred and sixty-nine thousand one hundred and seven, which, according to an estimate made at the Patent Bureau, will require the labor of fifty clerks for one year.

It is hardly possible to say what force the office will require hereafter; but judging from the increase in the sales of lands for several years past, it would seem desirable that the number of clerks in the auditing and posting business should not be less than eighteen, as estimated above, and in the patenting department about forty.

Respectfully submitted.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, Surveying Bureau.

SIR: In obedience to your request that I should report on the existing state of the business in this bureau, showing what has been done since my duties commenced therein, I have to state as follows:

That, since the report made from this office in 1833, the duties of this branch of the business appear to have increased to double or triple the amount that they then were; and, as a necessary consequence, the back work has accumulated nearly in the same proportion.

For the six months during which I have had charge of the business, I have only been able, by the closest application and industry, and with the aid of the assistant draughtsman employed out of the appropriation for extra aid in this office, to attend to that part of the current business on this branch, (which could not be delayed without either putting a stop to or essentially interfering with official operations on other branches of the office,) and to place the files in such a state as to enable any one to refer with facility to the maps and other documents which are constantly in requisition, particularly by the book-keepers in registering the sales in the tract-books. During the period above mentioned, (with the exception of fifty-seven volumes previously arranged and bound,) the whole of the township plats on file in the office, amounting in all to 105 volumes, have been carefully arranged and permanently bound into suitable books, with an index to each volume, showing the maps contained therein, and a general index atlas to the whole has been constructed, by which they can be referred to with an ease and facility before unknown. The miscellaneous documents relating to boundaries, mines, salines, and special surveys, have likewise been all arranged by States, according to their subjects, and a table constructed by which they can readily be referred to; also, with the exception of those of the Southern States and the Territory of Florida, sketch maps of each of the States and Territories have been made separately, which answer as indices to the district, military, and other maps, which are filed in cases arranged along the walls of the room, in all about 170. These index maps exhibit on the face of them not only the present extent of the surveys, but will also show, when completed, the present state of the numerous district maps as to the townships required to be protracted on them in continuation of the protractions previously made. These district maps were in all stages of progress up to the year 1830, but since that period it has not been in the power of the office to make any additions to them, nor will it be practicable to do so until increased means are afforded.

Various expedients or make-shifts appear to have been resorted to in this branch, from time to time, for want of the requisite assistance to enable it to meet the exigencies of the business connected with it, which otherwise would have most materially interfered with, if not positively stayed, many important operations in other branches.

I would take leave to remark, from the experience acquired since my incumbency on this branch of the service, that it appears to me to be utterly impracticable that all the duties which appropriately belong to it can be performed without an entire new organization of the system. The current business alone is now more than can be attended to. Neither State nor district maps can be constructed, nor can the bureau attempt to exercise any supervision over the execution of the office work returned by the surveyors general, much less to conduct any portion of the various correspondence connected with the branch, until further provisions of law shall enable it so to do.

I have the honor to remain your obedient servant,

WM. T. STEIGER, Draughtsman.

REMARKS.

The gradual increase of the labors of the office can probably be best explained and understood by taking into consideration the increase in the number of tracts sold, which multiplies all the labors in a degree proportionate thereto. This table shows (col. 2) the annual appropriations for regular clerks and extra patent writing from the year 1826 to 1835, inclusive; also (col. 3) the total number of tracts sold during each of those years; (col. 4) the amount appropriated for clerk-hire for each tract sold in each year; being the amount of appropriation divided among the number of tracts. The office was reduced in 1827 (from which period its duties have been annually on the increase) from twenty-three to seventeen regular clerks, which is the present number. Taking as the basis of the calculation the appropriation for regular clerk-hire ($22,550) as it stood before 1827, when the reduction took place, and regulating the subsequent annual appropriations in proportion to the tracts sold annually, the 5th column shows what would have been the required annual appropriation, agreeably to the rate in 1826, which annual amounts, as here stated, certainly do not exceed what were the annual requirements for the exigencies of the service.

ON APPLICATION FOR POWER TO SELL A SECTION OF THE SCHOOL LANDS IN ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 24, 1836.

Mr. CASEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Gideon Blackburn, praying for the sale of a section of school land, reported:

The committee are deeply impressed with the importance of the subject of education, and greatly appreciate the laudable and highly honorable exertions of the petitioner in promoting it.

It is the proper education of the youth of the country, which must and will regulate and govern its future destinies.

In a republic of self-government, the people ought to be virtuous and intelligent, and in order to accomplish this desirable object, the course of education must be sustained, and sustained in all its various grades and departments; on account, therefore, of its importance, the committee have bestowed on the prayer of the petitioner that due deliberation to which the subject is entitled.

The petitioner, Doctor Blackburn, whose character for high standing, and whose exertions in the cause of education are well known to the public, and to most of the committee, states that he is a resident of township nine north, and range nine west, in the county of Macoupin, and State of Illinois, and has given to said township and the sixteenth section thereof, a thorough examination, so that he further states, that there is no other section of land in the township which is "so favorable to the purposes of a seminary of learning."

He says also, that the "citizens of said township are much inclined to the advancement of such institution, and will consent that the fee simple property of said section be vested in some person for the above purpose and object."

In the investigation of this subject, the committee have examined the ordinance, accepting certain propositions made by the general government, which ordinance is a part of the constitution of Illinois, and is in the following words: "That section numbered sixteen in every township, and when such section has been sold, or otherwise disposed of, other lands equivalent thereto, and as contiguous as may be, shall be granted to the State, for the use of the inhabitants of such township for the use of schools." The State of Indiana, and some other of the new States, have a similar ordinance on this subject, and out of abundant caution to secure the fee-simple property in purchasers beyond doubt or cavil, have procured acts of Congress to be passed on the subject, giving the consent of the general government to such sales.

An act of Congress was passed, on the 24th May, 1828, of the following title: "An act to authorize the legislature of the State of Indiana to sell the lands hereto appropriated for the use of schools in that State."

It is provided in said act, "That the legislature of the State of Indiana shall be, and is hereby authorized to sell and convey, in fee simple, all or any part of the lands heretofore reserved and appropriated by Congress for the use of schools within said State."

It is further provided in said act, that said lands, or any part thereof, shall in no case be sold without the consent of the inhabitants of such township or district, to be obtained in such a manner as the legislature of said State shall by law direct.

The committee are informed that the petitioner and other citizens are desirous to vest a considerable sum of money in the erection of suitable buildings and other improvements for a very large seminary of learning, and to improve the said section of land, so that the "labor system," which is adopted in some institutions of learning, may be improved and carried on with all its beneficial influences.

The committee, after giving all the facts above alluded to an attentive consideration, and having carefully observed the course of national legislation on the subject, have come to the conclusion, that, in order to promote so desirable an object, and to secure the fee simple property of said section of land in the purchaser, they do recommend the passage of an act of Congress, giving the citizens of said township the power, under the direction and authority of the legislature of the State of Illinois, to sell and convey the said sixteenth section of land, in the manner which has been, or may be hereafter, prescribed by the laws of the State of Illinois; therefore the committee report a bill.

ON A CLAIM FOR THE REFUNDING OF MONEY PAID FOR LAND IN OHIO.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 24, 1836.

Mr. CASEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred a resolution to inquire into the expediency of providing by law for refunding to James Brewer, of Tuscawaras county, Ohio, the sum of one hundred dollars, by him heretofore paid to the United States for the west half of the southwest quarter of section number fourteen, in township eight, range three military, in the Zanesville district, reported:

That from the papers submitted it is proven, to the satisfaction of the committee, that, on the 30th day of January, A. D. 1822, James Brewer applied at the land office in Zanesville, Ohio, to enter and pay for the southwest quarter of section No. 14, in township No. 8, range No. 3 military, in the Zanesville land district, containing by estimation 160 acres, and the purchase money of which amounted to two hundred dollars.

The register informed him that said land was for sale, and requested him to state what kind of money he had to pay for it. Brewer showed his money, and while they were conversing on the subject, and looking at the land plats, &c., in a few minutes, and by some process in which Brewer had no agency whatever, his cash, which was good land-office money, was converted into land scrip, by persons in the office strangers to him, in consequence of which, said land was returned by the Zanesville officers to the General Land Office as having been purchased and paid for in land scrip, by Brewer.

The scrip thus improperly thrust into his purchase, was issued under the act of the 30th of May, 1830, for the relief of certain officers and soldiers of the Virginia line, &c., the fifth section of which provides "That no scrip issued under the provisions of this act shall entitle the holder to enter or purchase any settled or occupied lands without the written consent of such settlers or occupants as may be actually residing on said lands at the time the same shall be entered or applied for."

On the 26th day of July, A. D. 1833, a man by the name of John Benninger proved to the satisfaction of the proper officers in the Zanesville land office, that on the 30th day of January, 1832, (the date of Brewer's purchase,) he had settled upon, and then occupied, the west half of said quarter of land, and insisted that for that reason Brewer's purchase, so far as said west half was concerned, was illegal and void, as it appeared to have been paid for with scrip, and that he (Benninger) had a right to enter it, notwithstanding Brewer's former purchase; and such was the decision of the legal officers. Benninger was thereupon permitted to make said purchase, and has since received a patent for the said west half of said quarter-section.

As the books of the Zanesville land office show that this land was paid for in military scrip, the amount paid for said west half cannot be refunded to Brewer without an act of Congress authorizing it. He has received and accepted a patent for the east half of said quarter.

The committee are clearly of opinion that he is entitled to relief. They therefore report a bill for refunding to the said James Brewer the sum of one hundred dollars, by him paid for the west half of said quarter-section of land.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1484. [1ST SESSION.

ON THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A SURVEYOR GENERAL'S OFFICE WEST OF LAKE MICHIGAN.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 24, 1836.

Mr. CASEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the subject of the establishment of a surveyor general's office for that part of the Territory of Michigan which lies west of Lake Michigan, reported:

The subject of the establishment of this office was brought to the attention of the committee by a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 13th of February ultimo, and subsequently by a petition from the people of the county of Desmoine, in the Territory of Michigan, west of the Mississippi river, both which are hereto attached, marked A and B, and made a part of this report.

The committee, in order to become as fully enlightened on this subject as possible, addressed a note to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and received from him the communication marked D, with the map, which are hereto attached, and also made a part of this report.

The vast extent of country lying between the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, which has been ceded to the United States by the Indians, the richness of the soil, not surpassed by any under the sun, and the rapidity with which it is being settled, at once convince the committee of the propriety of the survey of the same, and consequently, the establishment of an office for that purpose.

The quantity of land between the Mississippi and Missouri rivers which has been ceded to the United States by the Indians, is estimated at upward of 21,328,000 acres. Of this, 7,200,000 acres, lying immediately north of the State of Missouri, and along the west bank of the Mississippi, is comprised the counties of Dubuque and Desmoine, containing already a population of some twelve or thirteen thousand souls, and increasing in numbers with a rapidity never surpassed in any country before, and from which the Indians have emigrated. West of this tract is an immense country, containing something like 14,576,000 acres of land, which is not yet ceded to the United States, and occupied by Indians, but which they are extremely anxious to cede, because of the scarcity of game within the same. This, too, is a country rich as any other in soil, of salubrious climate, beautifully watered, and intended as the home of the white man. In addition to this is the great extent of country between the Mississippi river and Green bay, lying north of the Wisconsin river. It is at present occupied by Winnebago and other tribes of Indians, who are also anxious to remove from the same, and which must very soon receive the attention of the government, be surveyed and sold.

That part of the country which composes the counties of Iowa, Brown, and Milwaukee, a greater portion of which has been surveyed, is attached to the office of the surveyor general of Ohio. The plats of survey, records, &c., are of course in his office, and the people of those counties are put to great inconvenience and expense in procuring them when needed in the courts of justice, or otherwise, it being from eight to twelve hundred miles distant from the county to the office at Cincinnati. The whole of the country west of the Mississippi is as yet attached to no surveyor's district, and is too far distant from any one already established to derive advantage therefrom.

This valuable and extensive country west of the Mississippi and north of the Wisconsin rivers, to which the committee have adverted, has not yet received from the government any attention to the survey of the same; and the committee, being deeply impressed with the conviction of the necessity thereof, report a bill for that object.

A.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
In the House of Representatives, February 13, 1836.

On motion of Mr. JONES, of Michigan,

Resolved, That the Committee on the Public Lands be instructed to inquire into the expediency of establishing a surveyor general's office west of Lake Michigan, in the Territory of Michigan; and that the committee also inquire into the expediency of authorizing the survey and sale of the lands purchased from the Sac and Fox Indians, at the treaty concluded at Rock Island, on the 21st day of September, A. D. 1832, and that appropriation be made for the above objects.

Attest: W. S. FRANKLIN, Clerk,
By B. B. FRENCH

B.

To the Honorable the Congress of the United States:

Your petitioners, citizens of the town of Burlington, in the county of Desmoine, in that part of the Territory of Michigan which lies on the west side of the Mississippi river, showeth: That the unexampled rapidity with which that district of country lately purchased of the Sac and Fox Indians is populating, requires that your honorable body should establish a surveyor general's office in the said town of Burlington. Was said purchase surveyed it would all be purchased of government immediately. And it is not only the present lands of government that will justify the establishing of an office of the kind mentioned, but there lies west of the late purchase an almost unbounded extent of very valuable country which to the Indians is of but little value, in consequence of there being but little game. They inform us already that they wish a purchase to be made by the government. So rapidly, indeed, has this purchase increased in population that there scarcely, between the Mississippi river and the purchase line, remains a good farming situation that is unoccupied; and this is not only back of the flourishing town of Burlington, but from the lower end of the purchase one hundred and fifty miles upward. Your petitioners are confident that there is no point other than the one mentioned which furnishes so good grounds for the establishing of said office. They, your petitioners, therefore, earnestly pray that a surveyor general's office may be established at Burlington, Desmoine county, Michigan Territory.

January 19, 1836.

[Signed by 191 persons.]

D.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 11, 1836.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 8th ultimo, wherein you mention "that the Committee on the Public Lands have under consideration the expediency of establishing a surveyor general's office in that part of the Territory of Michigan which lies west of the lake," and which subject, you intimate, has been presented to the attention of the committee by petitions and memorials from the people of the territory and the legislative council.

You further remark, that "a mere glance at the map of the vast extent of unsurveyed land west of Lake Michigan and the Mississippi river, and the great distance of the country from the surveyor's office at Cincinnati, Ohio, in which the business of this section is transacted, induce the committee at once to feel favorably disposed toward the establishment of this office."

In conformity to the wish of the committee to have my opinion on this subject, which you are pleased to communicate in the concluding paragraph of your letter, I have to inform you, that it affords me pleasure to express, in coincidence with what appears to be the views of the committee in this matter, my decided conviction that the public interest requires the creation of a surveyor general's office for the region of country described in your letter.

I have to remark, however, that a great portion of the ceded territory west of Lake Michigan, which now constitutes the district of Wisconsin and Green bay, bounded south by the northern line of the State of Illinois, north and west by the Wisconsin and Fox rivers, has been surveyed and offered for sale, and that contracts have been entered into by the surveyor general at Cincinnati for the surveying of the residuary portion; and which contracts, together with all the subsequent office work necessarily incident thereto, it is every way desirable and proper should be consummated at Cincinnati, whence should emanate the official evidences of survey necessary to bring the residue of said lands into market.

I would therefore respectfully intimate my opinion, that the proposed bill should provide for a surveyor general's office, to be located at a suitable point, to take jurisdiction (until further and additional provision of law) over the surveying of all public lands lying north of the State of Missouri, west of the Mississippi river, and north of the Wisconsin and Fox rivers, in the Territory of Michigan; and that whenever, in his opinion, the President of the United States shall deem it important to the public service so to do, he shall be empowered and directed to cause to be transferred to the office of the surveyor general for such new district, all maps, field notes, documents, books, and papers, now in the surveyor general's office at Cincinnati, appertaining to the surveys of that portion of the country west of Lake Michigan, and now forming the Wisconsin and Green bay land districts, in virtue of the provisions of the act of Congress, approved on the 26th June, 1834, entitled, "An act to create additional land districts in the States of Illinois and Missouri, and in the territory north of the State of Illinois."

Herewith transmitted is a sketch map, exhibiting the region of country referred to.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, sir, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. ZADOK CASEY, of the Committee on the Public Lands.

ON CLAIMS TO RESERVATIONS UNDER THE TREATY WITH THE CHOCTAW INDIANS, OF 1830.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 24, 1836.

Mr. EVERETT, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom, by resolution of the 1st February last, was referred a communication of the President, of the 6th February, 1835, with the accompanying documents, relating to certain claims to reservations under the Choctaw treaty of 1830, reported:

That Zadock Brashears, Alexander Brashears, Imponah, alias Billy, Cunnaubbe, and Lispio, the reputed wife of George Clark, were, at the date of said treaty, Choctaw heads of families, and that they severally gave notice to the United States agent, Colonel Ward, of their intention to remain and become citizens of the States, and claimed reservations under the 14th article.

That Zadock Brashears had then living with him, as members of his family, two children of his wife by a former husband, over ten years of age, and unmarried, whose names were registered by the agent, but were omitted in the register returned to the War Department, and he now claims reservations on their account, of two half-sections of land.

Alexander Brashears had then living with him nine children, three over ten years of age, unmarried, and six under that age, whose names were registered by the agent, but that the names of two of said children, one over, and the other under, the age of ten years, were omitted in the register returned, and he now claims reservations on their account of three fourths of a section of land.

Imponah, alias Billy, then had living with him one child over ten years of age, and unmarried; and that his name and that of his child were registered by the agent, but omitted in the register returned; he has since deceased, and his widow now claims reservations on his and their account, of one and a half sections of land.

Cunnaubbe had then living with him two children under ten years of age, and his and their names were registered by the agent, but omitted in the register returned, and he now claims reservations on his and their account, of one and a half sections of land.

Lispeo was the reputed wife of George Clark, and that, on account of his intemperance and incapacity, took charge of her family; that she had then living with her four children over ten years of age, unmarried, and two under that age, and that her and their names were registered by the agent, but omitted in the register returned. Her husband took a reservation under the 19th article, and she claims reservations on account of herself and children, of two and a half sections of land.

It further appears that, under the direction of the President, conditional reservations, nearly to the extent of the claims, have been located, subject to the confirmation of Congress, and that the claimants have resided on their locations since the date of the treaty.

The committee are of opinion that those locations ought to be confirmed, and that other locations should be made, to satisfy the balance of their claims, and they report a bill for that purpose; and also in cases where patents, or patent certificates have issued to others for any part of said locations, and that patents in fee issue for the same, and they report a bill for that purpose.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1486. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO A CREEK RESERVATION IN ALABAMA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 25, 1836.

Mr. HAYNES, from the Committee on Indian affairs, to whom was referred the petition of Poas Hadgo, a Creek Indian, reported:

That petitioner states that he was entitled to a reservation of land of one mile square, to include his improvements, under and by virtue of the treaty concluded on the 9th day of August, 1814, between the United States and the chiefs, head men, and warriors of the Creek nation. That for the same he received a patent, bearing date the 5th day of October, 1826, for fractional section eighteen, township six, in range thirty east, in the State of Alabama, in the district of lands offered for sale at Sparta in that State. That he continued to reside on and occupy said lands, until the year 1828, when the emigrating agent of the McIntosh party of the Creek nation induced him to emigrate with them, west of the Mississippi, by representing that petitioner was secure in the title to the reservation for which, as before stated, he held the patent of the government. That petitioner has been informed, since his removal, that he has forfeited his right to said land; and he now prays that Congress may vest in him, his heirs, and assigns, a fee simple title to the same. Your committee have examined petitioner's case with attention, and have ascertained that a patent, in manner and form as set forth, was issued to him as above stated, on the 5th day of October, 1826, for the fractional section eighteen, township six, range thirty east, in the land district of Sparta, in the State of Alabama. It also appears by the affidavit of Colonel David Brearly, who was emigrating agent of the McIntosh Indians, in 1828, and by the extract of a letter from said Brearly, written to Chilly McIntosh in that year, that inducements were held out through him to reservees to remove west of the Mississippi, upon the condition that they should thereafter receive one dollar and a quarter per acre for the reservations abandoned by them. It further appears to your committee, that authority was conferred for such purchase, by the act of the 20th February, 1819, relative to reservations granted under the treaty of 9th of August, 1814. It further appears, from the statement of Colonel Brearly, that when he applied for compensation for said reservation at the proper department, subsequent to the removal of Hadgo west of the Mississippi, he was told that on further examination of the law, it had been discovered that it gave no authority to make the purchase in question. Forasmuch, therefore, as the said Hadgo appears to have been induced to abandon his reservation on the pledge of the authorized emigrating agent, that he should be paid for it, and as it amounts almost to a certainty that if he had remained upon it until the conclusion of the treaty of 1832, he would have been placed on an equal footing with the rest of his tribe, your committee recommend an appropriation for the purchase of said reservation, at the price of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, and for that purpose report a bill.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1487. [1ST SESSION.

ON THE CORRECTION OF AN ERROR IN THE ENTRY OF LAND IN ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 25, 1836.

Mr. CASEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Daniel Malone, praying relief for a mistake in the purchase of a tract of land, reported:

That, on the 21st day of November, 1829, the said Malone "procured" and authorized one John Brown, as his agent, who is now dead, to purchase and enter in the land office, in the Kaskaskia district, in the State of Illinois, the west half of the northeast quarter-section, No. 35, in township No. 6 south, and range 3 west of the third principal meridian, for the said Malone.

The said Malone, presuming he had a good title to said tract of land, took possession of the same, resided on it, cultivated it, and improved it. In the month of November, 1832, after the death of said Brown, the receipt of the purchase money of said land was examined, (which receipt had remained with the papers of said Brown,) and thereby the mistake in the purchase was ascertained. The entry and purchase, which was made in mistake, was for the west half of the northeast quarter of section 35, township 4 south, range 3 west of the said meridian, instead of the other tract of land.

The tract of land which was purchased by mistake, by the agency of Brown, is situated in a different township, twelve miles north of the tract of land which Malone intended to purchase. This fact, together with the occupation and improvement of the land by Malone, satisfies the committee, beyond a doubt, that there was a mistake made in the purchase of said tract of land.

The committee are also clearly of opinion that the west half of the northeast quarter of section 35, township 4 south, range 3 west, which was entered by mistake, is "worthless," and cannot be cultivated.

Having given to this case due consideration, the committee consider it an act of justice and right to afford to Malone relief; and on his surrendering to the government the tract of land he entered by mistake, for the United States to permit him to enter other lands to the amount of money he paid in the office for said land.

LAND WARRANTS AND SCRIP FOR REVOLUTIONARY SERVICES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 25, 1836.

Mr. LEWIS WILLIAMS, from the Committee on the Public Lands, laid before the House the following documents, granting an additional quantity of land to satisfy Virginia military land warrants, &c.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
In the House of Representatives, February 13, 1836.

On motion of Mr. JOHNSON, of Virginia—

Resolved, That the Committee on the Public Lands be instructed to inquire into the expediency of making an additional appropriation of land to satisfy the warrants in scrip, which have been issued, or which may hereafter issue, according to the resolutions and laws of the United States, and of Virginia, for Revolutionary services.

Attest: W. S. FRANKLIN, Clerk.
By HENRY WELSH.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 4, 1836.

SIR: I return the resolution enclosed in your letter of the 1st instant, and for the information of the Committee on the Public Lands have the honor to state, that this office is not in possession of any data to form a reasonable estimate of what quantity of land may be required to satisfy Virginia warrants "which have been issued or which may hereafter issue," except what can be derived from the report made on the 18th of December, 1834, by the select committee on Revolutionary claims, of the Virginia legislature.

A copy of that report, and papers connected therewith, is enclosed. (See papers Nos. 1, 2, and 3.)

It may be proper to state, that the number of warrants issued by the register of the land office at Richmond, Virginia, since the 15th October, 1834, to the 1st of September, 1835, amount to about four hundred, embracing a large quantity of land, being principally claims of officers, and are, with very few exceptions, provided for by the appropriations made by the act of 3d March, 1835.

The quantity of land in warrants issued by Virginia, and filed in this office since the 1st of September last, and for which there is no provision, amount only to 2,600 acres.

On the 29th ultimo the register of the land office at Richmond informed me that there were on file in his office, orders from the governor and council, to issue warrants for 55,000 acres, and that there were a great many claims yet pending before the executive department.

With great respect, sir, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. LEWIS WILLIAMS, of the Committee on the Public Lands.

No. 1.

Report of the select committee on Revolutionary claims, December 18, 1834, made to the Virginia legislature.

The select committee, to whom was referred so much of the governor's message as relates to the subject of Revolutionary claims, have had the same under consideration, and submit the following report:

Instead of taking a view of the subject purely financial, your committee have thought proper to institute an inquiry into the justice and legal foundation of claims for Revolutionary services. If they are just, and founded in law, your committee cannot see the necessity or justice of imposing any unreasonable restraint upon their future prosecution and allowance. Your committee, after having given to this branch of the subject the most careful consideration, are constrained to admit that the claims to land bounty for services in the war of the Revolution, are not only just, but have the clearest foundation in law. By reference to the various land bounty laws, enacted by Virginia during her Revolutionary struggle, it will appear that the claims for land bounty are the result of the most solemn engagement to her officers and soldiers, who participated in the eventful conflict that resulted in our national independence.

At the October session of the year 1778, the legislature stipulated to allow to each person who should enlist for three years, or during the war, the continental bounty land. (See Hen. Stat. at Large, pages 588-9, vol. 9.)

In May, 1779, (see Hen. Stat. at Large, vol. 10, pages 24 and 25,) land bounty was promised to the officers, soldiers, sailors, and marines, who should enlist to serve during the war.

In October, 1780, (see Stat. at Large, vol. 10, page 375,) land bounty was promised to general officers; and the legal representatives of such officers as should have died in the service, or been slain in battle, were declared to be entitled to land bounty.

And finally, in May, 1782, (see Stat. at Large, page 84, vol. 11,) land bounty was stipulated to officers and soldiers who had served three years without being cashiered or suspended; and an additional allowance, at the rate of one sixth per annum of the original bounty, was promised those who should have served more than six years.

These are the principal laws relating to land bounty. They clearly show an unequivocal engagement on the part of the State to her officers and soldiers. Holding immense tracts of unappropriated lands, the State of Virginia readily adopted the idea first suggested by the continental Congress, of rewarding with donations of land, the patriot band who should go forth to fight the battles of liberty and their country.

But while this committee are convinced that these claims rest on the grounds of strict legal provisions, and the most solemn obligations of the State, they are free to admit that there may be considerations which might, with propriety, merge even their legality and justice, sacred as they may be and undoubtedly are. If it shall appear that the amount of land bounty allowed by the State of Virginia exceeds the quantity of good claims which ever could have existed against the commonwealth; if their allowance in time past has been in equal ratio with that of the last four or five years; if the obtaining of land bounty claims has become a matter of so great facility that the generous provisions of the land bounty laws have been unreasonably extended and abused; if frauds are so easy of commission, or so difficult of detection, as that they cannot be checked, or have been so numerous as to furnish a fair offset against future allowances: then the committee think that not even the justice and legality of the claims should save the whole system from entire annihilation.

Your committee have accordingly directed their attention to the investigation of these points.

In relation to the first point, whether the allowance made by Virginia exceeds the amounts of good claims which could ever have existed against her, your committee beg leave to say, that after an accurate and careful examination of the subject, they have no hesitation in saying that the amount of claims allowed by the Executive falls far short of the number of good claims which, from the nature of the case, must have existed against the State; that the amount of good claims has not been overdrawn; and furthermore, that there are now outstanding good and valid claims against this commonwealth. They submit herewith the substance of a certificate of General Robert Porterfield, concurred in by Chief Justice Marshall, (both of whom were officers in the Revolution,) that the persons entitled to land bounty from Virginia must have amounted to at least 500 for each continental regiment.

There were in service in the Revolution twenty-one regiments—viz., sixteen on continental establishment, three regiments of the State line proper, and the two western regiments—and the State navy, composed of twenty or twenty-five vessels. Estimating, therefore, the number of persons in each continental regiment entitled to land bounty at 500, and putting down the State navy as one regiment, after making up the difference between the State line and continental regiments, (which is far below the estimate,) the number of persons entitled to land bounty would be 11,000.

By the certificate of the register of the land office, hereto annexed, it appears that the whole number of warrants issued to 15th October last, were for the services of about 6,136 persons; so that there would be 4,864 persons, or their representatives, still entitled to land bounty from Virginia.

By reference, too, to the register's certificate, it will be seen that the amount of warrants drawn since 1830 bears no proportion to those issued prior to that date. In some years very few were issued, for reasons which will appear in the sequel; while, from causes of the most obvious character, the allowances of land bounty for the last four years have been greatly increased. There is, therefore, no danger that the amount of good claims has been overreached.

Nor, according to the best information your committee have been able to obtain, is the allowance of land bounty a matter of such facility as to justify an apprehension that claims of an unjust character are likely to be allowed. It is true that, since the enactment of the land bounty laws, and since the cession of her northwest territory, Virginia has interposed no barrier to the satisfaction of those claims, as in justice she ought not. Claims founded upon services thus valuable and meritorious, should be trammelled with no obstacles not required by the strictest necessity and policy. But, on the other hand, since the act of cession, she has never altered nor enlarged the land bounty allowance. The acts under which grants are now made, are the same before referred to, enacted in the time of the Revolution, and the amount is the same prescribed by those laws.

Not only are the same rules and regulations now in force as immediately after the Revolution, but, as your committee are informed, an additional, nay, unusual degree of scrutiny and rigor is now practised, arising from the lapse of time since the origin of claims for Revolutionary services. Your committee would rather incline to the opinion that, in consequence of the lapse of time, the rules of allowance should be rendered more liberal; yet the reverse seems to be the fact. And it furthermore appears, from the statement of John H. Smith, esq., who was appointed by Governor Floyd, and reappointed by the legislature, to examine sundry newly-discovered papers and documents relating to Revolutionary claims, that most of the claims recently allowed have been decided upon the evidence of the record.

Your committee are not apprized that frauds, growing out of the prosecution of Revolutionary claims, have been more numerous than the nature of the case would warrant them to expect. Some there doubtless have been; but your committee are not aware that they have been so frequent and numerous as that they should be permitted to prejudice the right of honest claimants. Let the upright agent and claimant be unmolested in his rights, the dishonest receive all the penalties of the law. Your committee, therefore, recommend the adoption of the governor's suggestions, that legislative provision be made to punish rigorously all frauds and forgeries committed in relation to Revolutionary claims.

Your committee are of opinion that no argument against these claims can be drawn from the fact, that their prosecution has been deferred to this time. The delay can be readily accounted for, in a manner that will leave no room for the imputation of laches on the part of claimants.

First, with respect to claimants of bounty for services in the State line. These have never, since the year 1784, had it in their power to make their claims available. In the year 1784, the superintendent appointed by the deputation of officers, proceeded to Kentucky, for the purpose of laying off and surveying the lands in the military district of the Kentucky reserve; but found them in possession of the Indians, and claimed by them. The settlers in that country earnestly represented to the Legislature of Virginia, that if the surveys were persisted in, the infant and defenceless settlements in Kentucky would be involved in all the horrors and calamities of an Indian war. Accordingly, at the October session of 1784, the legislature authorized the governor of Virginia "to suspend, for such time as he may think the tranquillity of the government may require, the surveying or taking possession of those lands which lie northwest side of the river Ohio, or below the mouth of the river Tennessee, and which have been reserved for the officers and soldiers of the Virginia line and the Illinois regiment." (See Hen. Stat. at Large, vol. 11, page 447.) In pursuance of this authority, the governor of Virginia, on the 6th of January, 1785, issued his proclamation, suspending the surveys. Thus Virginia, by her own act, put it out of the power of her officers and soldiers, after the 6th of January, 1785, to locate their warrants. This inhibition by the State authority continued until the 10th of January, 1786, when the prohibition was continued by the act of the general government. At that date, the treaty of Hopewell was concluded between the United States and the Chickasaw Indians, "guaranteeing to the Indians, as part of their habitation and hunting ground, all the lands below the Tennessee river; and providing that if any citizen of the United States, or any person not being an Indian, shall attempt to settle on any of the lands thereby allotted the Chickasaws to live and hunt on, such person shall forfeit the protection of the United States of America, and the Chickasaws may punish him or not, as they please." (See Mr. Johnson's report, in the Journal of 1821–22, page 4 of the report.) The treaty of Hopewell continued in force until the year 1818, when the Indian title was extinguished. After that period, Kentucky would not permit the location of military warrants to be made.

Thus it appears, that the officers, &c., of the State line, who had not surrendered their warrants prior to the 6th of January, 1785, (and they are many,) have been utterly precluded from the satisfaction of their claims, until the recent appropriations by Congress: First, by an act of Virginia herself, resulting from humane considerations in relation to the infant settlement of Kentucky. Secondly, by the act of the government of the United States; and, finally, by the State of Kentucky. The holders of State line warrants dared not, from 1785 to 1818, under the penalty of Indian violence and vengeance, intrude upon the lands allotted them. They forfeited even the protection of the United States; and if they offended against the provisions of the treaty, they were placed at the mercy of the ruthless savage. It cannot escape observation that, but for the provisions of the treaty of Hopewell, the State line warrants might have been, and doubtless would have been, located in Kentucky.

Being thus excluded from the Kentucky reservation, there was but one other source for the satisfaction of State line warrants, viz.: the northwest reserve, between the Miami and Scioto rivers. But it seems they are cut off from this; for, upon reference to the act of cession, it appears, that the words "upon her own State establishment," were accidentally omitted. Your committee deem it unnecessary to enter into a train of reasoning, to show that the words "and upon her own State establishment" were unintentionally omitted. They will only refer to the very able report before alluded to, pp. 6 and 7, and to the lucid commentary of W. W. Hening, esq. on this subject. (See Hen. Stat. at large, vol. 9, p, 465; and vol. 11, pp. 562–566.)

It is readily explicable, therefore, why the claims of the officers and soldiers of the State line and navy, have been deferred to this late period. But for the generous appropriation by the Congress of the United States, they would have slept forever, unnoticed and unsatisfied.

With respect to claims for services in the continental line, a reason somewhat similar may be assigned. The general fund for the satisfaction of military warrants being diminished by the measures just referred to, the good lands in the northwest reserve were soon exhausted. The expense of obtaining warrants being exceedingly great, and the lands of inferior quality, it was scarcely considered an object worthy of attention. And, accordingly, not until the recent appropriations of good lands by Congress, has the prosecution of this class of claims been a subject of much attention.

Your committee have also directed their attention to the inquiry, why there has been an increase of applications for land bounty for the last two years. In the year 1832, a large mass of documents, books, and papers, relating to Revolutionary matters, was discovered in the attic story of the Capitol. A gentleman of unquestionable competency, the present commissioner of Revolutionary claims, was selected by the governor to give them the fullest examination. Much valuable information, hitherto concealed, was developed; and the legislature, at its last session, thinking that this information ought to be made public, for the benefit of those concerned, ordered the publication to be made. In consequence of this, many, heretofore ignorant of their claims, were made acquainted with them; some who were aware of the services of their ancestors, but could not establish them by satisfactory proofs, now beheld them substantiated by the evidence of the records; and accordingly the number of applications has been much increased.

There are other reasons of a general character, why many claims have been deferred to so late a day. At the end of the war, some who had performed services were in independent circumstances, and did not care to prosecute their land claims. The lands were at best of little value. Many died in the service, whose representatives might have been unaware that they had claims to bounty land. With respect to the amount of outstanding claims for bounty land, your committee are of opinion, that it cannot greatly exceed the allowances already made. Only a small portion of those outstanding can ever be favorably decided, in consequence of the lapse of time, and consequent difficulty of procuring proof. According to the showing of the commissioner, very few officers' claims remain to be satisfied. Those that remain to be discharged are chiefly privates, of whom comparatively few, in consequence of the small amount of their allowance, and the scarcity of proof, it is presumed, will ever bring forward their claims.

Upon the whole, your committee cannot recommend a total repeal of the land bounty laws; but they can see no objection, on the contrary, they acknowledge the propriety, of imposimg some limitation. They therefore advise, that all persons holding undischarged claims for bounty land, be compelled to bring them forward before the 1st day of January, 1837, or be forever after barred. And in order that the short period allotted for the settlement of these claims may be the more advantageously used for the benefit of claimants, your committee recommend that the investigation and decision of these claims be referred, for the future, to the commissioner of Revolutionary claims, together with two others, to be denominated "The board of commissioners of Revolutionary claims." There is peculiar propriety in transferring the subject to such board, aided by that officer. For eighteen months, or two years, he has been engaged in maki g minute and laborious examinations into all the sources of evidence connected with the subject; has classified and arranged the numerous Revolutionary documents recently discovered, and is therefore peculiarly fitted to aid in the decision of the claims, with justice to the claimants on the one hand, and the commonwealth on the other; and to check improper applications, we recommend the adoption of certain regulations. Your committee also advise, that our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives be requested, to use their best exertions to procure the passage of a law appropriating land, or some other equivalent, for the satisfaction of such land bounty warrants as have been already filed for scrip, or which may be allowed within the limit already prescribed.

Your committee cannot permit themselves to think that Congress will withhold further appropriations, liberal as they have heretofore been. They believe that that body has only to be satisfied that the claims are just, to discharge them all, even though the amount should prove larger than they can reasonably anticipate. The northwestern territory was ceded by Virginia to the United States, upon the express condition that if the lands included in the Kentucky reserve should prove insufficient for the satisfaction of the claims of her officers and soldiers, the deficiency should be made up in good lands between the Scioto and Miami rivers. The good lands have been long since exhausted, and according to the plain terms of the cession, it would seem that the clearest obligation devolves upon the government of the United States to make up the deficiency. The equity of the claim which Virginia has upon the general government cannot be withstood. If, from an erroneous estimate of the necessary amount, Virginia has made an insufficient reservation, it would ill become the generosity of the United States to take advantage of the omission. She could not have given up her immense western domain, without designing to make the fullest satisfaction to her officers and soldiers; and her benevolent designs, whatever they may have been, should be carried into full effect by the government receiving this vast quantity at her hands; and when it is considered that the government of the United States, by the treaty of Hopewell, put it out of the power of a large portion of the claimants to locate their warrants, the justice of the case is placed in a light perfectly irresistible. The equity of this matter derives additional force from the circumstances under which Virginia ceded her immense territory in the west. It is a well-known fact of our Revolutionary history, that the disposition of the unappropriated lands held by the several colonies, formed one of the most agitating topics of our Revolutionary era. The State of Maryland absolutely refused to ratify the articles of confederation, until some satisfactory arrangement should be made of the vast western domain. No subject, indeed, so much distracted the councils, and disturbed the harmony of the colonies, as that of the uncultivated territory within the general States.

In 1780, the continental Congress, in relation to this embarrassing subject, addressed the following language to the colonial States: "That it appears more advisable to press upon those States which can remove the embarrassment respecting the western country, a liberal surrender of a portion of their territorial claims, since they cannot be preserved entire without endangering the stability of the general confederacy; to remind them how indispensable it is to establish a federal union on a fixed and permanent basis, and on principles acceptable to all its members; how essential to public credit and confidence, to the support of our army, to the vigor of our councils, and the success of our measures, to our tranquillity at home, and to our reputation abroad, to our present safety and future prosperity, to our very existence as a free, sovereign, and independent people. That they are fully persuaded the wisdom of the respective legislatures will lead them to a full and impartial consideration of a subject so interesting to the United States, and so necessary to the happy establishment of the federal union. That they are confirmed in these expectations by a review of the before-mentioned act of the legislature of New York, submitted to their consideration; that this act is expressly calculated to accelerate the federal alliance, by removing, as far as depends on that State, the impediment arising from the western country, and for that purpose, to yield up a portion of territorial claim for the general benefit." To these patriotic suggestions of the continental Congress, Virginia, with a magnanimity which has ever distinguished her character, responded: "The general assembly of Virginia, being well satisfied that the happiness, strength, and safety of the United States depend, under Providence, upon the ratification of the articles of a federal union between the United States, heretofore proposed by Congress for the consideration of the said States, and preferring the good of their country to every object of small importance, do resolve, That this commonwealth will yield to the Congress of the United States, for the benefit of the said United States, all right, title, and claim that the said commonwealth hath to the territory northwest of the river Ohio, upon the following conditions," &c.

Thus, at a most critical juncture, did Virginia make, upon the altar of the public good, the most magnificent sacrifice perhaps ever recorded in the history of States; generously giving up a treasure which would have enriched her through all future time.

There is one other consideration which your committee cannot forbear to urge. As early as the year 1776, Congress promised to the troops of the various continental establishments, donations in land. At that time, Congress had no lands wherewith to fulfil their engagements, and would necessarily have been compelled to purchase lands for that purpose, had not the States, Virginia in particular, by a generous surrender of their waste lands, furnished them the means of complying with their engagements. Virginia, therefore, may be said with justice chiefly to have paid the bounty claims of all the continental officers and soldiers of all the old States.

Your committee report herewith in part, and beg leave to conclude, by offering the following resolution:

Resolved, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives be requested, to use their best exertions for the passage of a law, authorizing a further issuing of scrip to satisfy such warrants as may have been already allowed, or which may be allowed, prior to the first day of January, 1837; and that each of our senators and representatives be furnished, by the clerk of this house, with a copy of this resolution and report.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

No. 2.

Certificate of General Robert Porterfield, dated 16th September, 1834.

Taking into consideration the number of officers and soldiers who died in the service, and thereby became entitled to land bounty from Virginia—the number who served three years, and thereby became entitled, and the number who were entitled for services to the end of the war—I think it probable there were a thousand to each regiment who were so entitled; but I state the opinion with confidence, that there were at least five hundred.

ROBERT PORTERFIELD.

I should not think there were a thousand to each regiment entitled to bounty land; but the number cannot, I think, have been short of five hundred; I allude to the regiments actually raised in the Virginia line on continental establishment.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1489. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN ALABAMA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 25, 1836.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Joel Chandler, reported:

That it is stated in said petition, that, at the land office at Huntsville, Alabama, the petitioner purchased, among other tracts of land, the east half of the southeast quarter of section twenty-four, in township twelve, range four east, of the lands situated in said district. That, under the act of Congress authorizing the relinquishment of lands purchased under the credit system, the petitioner intended to relinquish said half quarter among others; and, for this purpose, he caused a written memorandum to be made out, before he went to the land office, in which each tract intended to be relinquished was particularly stated, as well as those he intended to pay out. This written statement contained the tract above alluded to, as one piece to be relinquished. This fact is established by the testimony of the individual who made out the statement for petitioner. Petitioner states, that he gave the register the written memorandum as above stated, and paid, as he supposed, according to his intention, as therein expressed. That he remained under this impression until a patent was received for said half quarter-section, which he thought had been relinquished. Petitioner states, that it was omitted by the mistake of the register, who made the calculations from the written memorandum; and, instead of relinquishing the said piece, as petitioner intended, he made full payment. These facts are established by the oath of the petitioner and the individual who made out the memorandum. It is also in proof, that the half quarter-section is worthless land. The petitioner prays that he may be allowed to relinquish said land, and appropriate the amount paid thereon toward the purchase of other lands.

The committee, being satisfied from the proof that it was bona fide petitioner's intention to have relinquished said land, and that he was prevented from doing so by the mistake of the register, recommend the relief prayed for, and therefore report a bill.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1490. [1ST SESSION.

IN FAVOR OF GRANTING PATENTS TO POLISH EXILES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 25, 1836.

Mr. LEWIS WILLIAMS, from the Committee on the Public Lands, laid before the House the following documents, accompanied by a bill for the relief of certain exiles from Poland.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
In the House of Representatives, March 1, 1836.

On motion of Mr. White,

Resolved, That the Committee on the Public Lands be instructed to inquire into the expediency of authorizing patents to be issued to the Polish exiles for lands granted to them, under the law of 30th June, 1834, on their paying to the government the minimum price of said lands, or of authorizing such other disposition of said lands, as will give relief to said exiles in their unfortunate and embarrassed condition.

Attest:

W. S. FRANKLIN, Clerk.

To the Representatives of the people of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

The undersigned Poles, selected by the two hundred and thirty-five placed on the hospitable shores of these United States by order of the Emperor of Austria, venture to address your august body, for such relief as men placed in our peculiar situation may lay claim to.

As long as we had a country that we could call our own, we resolutely fought for her independence, until the overwhelming power of Russia forced us to take refuge in the Austrian and Prussian provinces, asking only for a free passage into France. In the month of April last, the Austrian government, having promised us liberty and protection, suddenly and without notice placed us in confinement in the city of Bruna, in Moravia, answering our protests with assurances that, when assembled, we should be sent into France. After three months' confinement, the Austrian government gave us the choice either of returning to Russia, or of embarking for the United States, with the government of which an arrangement had been made, as we were informed, for our protection and support. As lovers of freedom, and of free institutions, we accepted the alternative of living among a free people, although, in so doing, we had to give up all hopes of the land of our love, of our habits, of our laws, and of our language. Arrived at Trieste, we were there confined for three months, until finally we were embarked on board of two Austrian frigates, and after a navigation of four months and ten days, landed at New York, in these United States, where we now find ourselves placed in the most critical situation, being ignorant alike of the language, and of the customs of the country, and destitute of everything but the means of a few days' support.

Although pilgrims in a foreign land, with nothing but the sad recollection of the past, and hope for the future, we wish to live a life of active industry, and to become useful to the country of our adoption; since Providence, in its inscrutable wisdom, has deprived us of the land of our birth, we wish to plant in these United States a second Poland, where our countrymen, the still unconquered sons of adversity, may congregate and prosper.

With these views, we respectfully solicit of your august body, a grant of land under such provisions as will enable us to live by our industry, to rally round us such of our countrymen as may visit these shores, and to become of use and of service to the people of these United States. And for which aid and assistance, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

NEW YORK, April 9, 1834.

Some notes concerning the situation of the Polish exiles.

1. The Poles, who are scattered in the different countries of Europe, and who are now transported to these United States, cannot be considered as other emigrants; the reasons of their leaving their home, their situation, and their views for the future, being totally different from those of any other people. They are compelled by the utmost rigor and perfidy of the Russian government to say farewell to their sweet home; they cannot trust to the most solemn promulgations of amnesty, which has never been kept faithfully. They had no other choice than to return under the reign of the knout, in the mines of Siberia, in the Muscovite regiments in the provinces of the Caucasus, or to go to France. This latter country having been precluded to them by the policy of the allied courts, they were sent by the Austrian and Prussian governments to this country. Two Austrian ships have already landed 235 of them, and a third man-of-war (corvette Hipsia) is now on her passage to New York with 50 or 60 persons. Three Prussian ships, with nearly 700 Poles, destined to New York, New Orleans, and some third port, stopped in Havre, Cowes, and Portsmouth, and it is very doubtful if they will arrive. The private credits, and those of the Prussian government, allowed to them, are already retired, and it is not known if the latter would be renewed or not in case they arrive.

The petition presented to Congress can therefore not be prejudicial to those Poles, who could come later to this country, the time of their arrival not giving any privilege or prerogative to those who are already in this free country.

Forty dollars have been paid to every Pole on board of the Austrian frigates (four dollars in Malta, three in Gibraltar, and thirty-three in New York). It would be of the greatest importance, and a true benefit, that the resolution of Congress should be known to them the sooner, in order to begin their settlement before the summer, their finances and the season requiring a great economy of time.

The views of the petitioners are to be of use to the country of their adoption, to the great cause in whose defence they are suffering, to those of their countrymen who should, in progress of time, become victims of the oppression. They wish to save the sacred fire of patriotism, of liberty, and of human dignity, under the ægis of the country of Penn, Washington, and so many prototypes of true humanity. They will show to Europe that their presence is only to be feared there, where there is tyranny and degradation of mankind, and that the calumniations of the servile are the most infamous weapons plunged in the heart of Poland.

2. More than a half of the 235 are officers of different degrees, the highest of which is that of a major. The minority have been private soldiers. Fifty have been in the army before the revolution; the others took up the arms in the revolution, and are, in consequence, more exposed to the resentment of monarchical governments. The majority are natives of the Polish Russian provinces, viz.: of those which have been taken possession of by Russia in the first division of Poland; the minority are from the kingdom of Poland, created in the Congress of Vienna. The greatest hatred of the autocrat falls upon the inhabitants of these provinces, which he likes to call his conquests.

Some are above and near 60 years of age; some from 17 to 20 years; the greatest number between 26 to 40. Some have been wounded, so that they cannot work as they would. One only has his wife with him; many others have left their families at home; some are widowers, but have children.

Almost all the privates, and some of the officers of lower degrees, have been farmers. The majority have lived in the country, and have seen the agricultural and similar occupations, and are now willing to work. Some of the young have been students when the revolution broke out, and have been the most zealous in the exploits of the patriots, as the history of the Polish struggle shows.

They want encouragement to accommodate themselves to the new mode of living, but they have the most ardent desire to be active in any mode consistent with the customs and institutions of their new fatherland and their own abilities.

3. If the Constitution of these United States would allow to confer on the settlers American citizenship, it would be of the most energetic means of encouragement to become useful to their new home.

4. The committee which will occupy itself with the cause of the Polish exiles, will, without doubt, take in consideration, that their critical situation requires some speed for some arrangement, notwithstanding the explanations and elucidations of several points. The Polish deputation will endeavor to furnish every explanation within its power. It would be important to have at least one member of the committee which could speak the French language, the knowledge of the English of one of the deputies (Kraitzer) being very trifling, and the two others (Banezakiewiez and Rozienkiewiez) being entirely destitute of it.

5. Belonging to the Poles, who are out of Poland in different countries of Europe, their fate seems to deserve greater pity than of those who are in this free and happy country. We presume the state of things in Europe will sooner or later contrive many of them to come and join us here, flying the perfidious and sanguinary policy of the royal conspirators, the artifices and machinations of their spies, agents provocateurs, (fortunately an unknown being in the United States,) and other spiders of the augean-stable governments. The emeutes, partial insurrections, and plans to form new kingdoms in the land of marmottes, are works of the secret policemen of the holy alliance and consorts, in view to compromise those who lent their ears to such chimerical projects, and to have a pretext to persecute the innocent, unhappy and quiet patriots and liberals, to pollute the sacred cause of liberty in the eyes of cowards and of the credulous. We think that in consequence of such and similar commotions, there will be many weary and tired of their precarious and provisory state of existence, and that they will direct their eyes to these quiet and hospitable shores, where liberty, equality, and humanity, are dwelling in spite of their enemies. They will rally round us as brethren, and show that we not only have been dealt with inhumanly in respect to our home, our goods, and families, but that our honor and reputation has been blackened by the everlasting hostilities of the anti-national conspirators.

We cannot give the exact number of the Polish exiles now in France, England, and other countries; but we are of opinion that it amounts to several thousand in France, (perhaps seven thousand,) and about 500 in England, not counting those who are in Algiers in the French service. In Portugal there are about 500; in different parts of Germany, occupied differently and under false names, about 500; some in Switzerland, in Hungary, Turkey, Egypt, some in Sweden, &c.

The late Polish army being dissolved, the military conscription made by ukases, by the not-checked will of the Emperor of Russia, there are more than 100,000 men of the so-called kingdom of Poland distributed in the Russian regiments on the frontiers of China, Tartary, and Persia, in Valachia, Moldavia.

Many thousands are transplanted in the interior of Russia, in Astrachan, Siberia, Kamschatka; many in prisons, or treated in the most inhuman manner, being called not by their names, but by numbers, as pieces of cattle.

Thousands of children have been transported into the interior, under the pretext to give them a convenient education, in order to make a new generation, "the present being lost"—(words of the Emperor Nicholas, spoken at Modlin to a deputation of Warsaw, last fall.)

The whole amount of expatriated Poles, viz., exiles, departed, transplanted, etc., is about 150,000 men.

We abstain from speaking of the confiscations, of the different punishments of other kinds, of the means of demoralization and humiliation of our beloved country, These are things too well known to the civilized world to want any explanation here.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1491. [1ST SESSION.

ON APPLICATION OF ALABAMA FOR A REDUCTION OF THE MINIMUM PRICE OF THE LANDS GRANTED FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF THE TENNESSEE AND OTHER RIVERS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 26, 1836.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred a resolution instructing them to inquire into the expediency of authorizing the legislature of the State of Alabama to reduce the minimum price of that portion of the four hundred thousand acres of land granted to that State, for the improvement of the Tennessee river and other purposes, which remains unsold, reported:

That the grant of four hundred thousand acres of land mentioned in said resolution, was made in the year 1828, of the relinquished lands in the counties of Madison, Morgan, Limestone, Lawrence, Lauderdale, and Franklin, in Alabama, if there should be found within those counties a sufficient quantity, if not, the residue to be made up of the unappropriated lands in the county of Jackson, in said State. From the terms of the act making the grant, it will be seen that doubts were entertained at the time of making the same, that there would not be found a sufficient quantity of relinquished lands within the counties first named to fill the grant; and as subsequent experience has shown, there was but very little more than that quantity, by which, in making the selection, that which was of little or no value, had to be taken.

The lands thus granted, were in the year 1829 brought into market by the State, upon terms the most favorable to induce their sale; while the lands of the government were sold for cash, those of the State were offered upon liberal credits, requiring one fourth only of the price in cash, and dividing the balance into four annual instalments. Those lands of the State were situated near to the improvement of the Tennessee river, which was to be effected by the donation, and which, if accomplished, would greatly enhance their value. Those lands, too, were well known by the citizens residing in that part of the country; for all of them had been purchased previously by individuals, and relinquished under acts of Congress, allowing transfers of payments made upon them to other lands retained; most of those lands, too, having formed a part of the plantations of the citizens of those counties. These considerations, with many others that might be here mentioned, as your committee believe, induced all of those lands to be purchased which were worth the sum of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, very soon after they were offered for sale; that those lands have now been in market, such as have not been sold, for near seven years, at the price of $1 25, being the minimum at which, by the terms of the grant, the State was authorized to dispose of them, and that seventy-seven thousand acres remain unsold. From these facts, your committee believe that the remaining portion of the donation is not worth the minimum price thus put upon them, and cannot be sold for that price for many years, if they will ever command it.

Your committee find, from the report of the Tennessee canal commissioners, who were appointed by said State to superintend and carry on said improvement, that the proceeds of the sale of said donation will fall far short of the accomplishment of said work, and that the funds already received are nearly exhausted. By the act making the donation it is required that said work shall be begun in one year, and completed, or the whole proceeds of the lands used, in ten, from the passage of the act, or that the said State shall become responsible to the government for the proceeds of said lands. If, then, the lands thus granted cannot be sold at $1 25 per acre, and the permission to sell the balance on hand at a lower price, shall not be granted, the donation thus made for the benefit of the State, will result in its injury. Your committee would add here, that similar grants have been made to other States for the purpose of making internal improvements without such limitation in the price at which the same might be disposed of, and that in allowing this privilege to the State of Alabama, it will be doing no more than has been done for other States. Your committee cannot see the necessity either of retaining the limitation in the act, so far as the minimum is concerned, for it cannot be supposed for one moment, that the State would not desire to obtain the best price for those lands, when the importance to her of the improvement to be made by the proceeds is considered.

The influence which the sale of those lands would have upon the unsold public lands in their neighborhood, your committee believe would be unimportant if it should have any. There is but little of the public land near those embraced in the donation of any value; and as your committee is informed, none that will probably command the sum of $1 25 per acre for many years, if ever. From every view of the subject which the committee have been able to take, they are satisfied that the privilege asked should be granted, and for that purpose report a bill.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1492. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN ALABAMA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 26, 1836.

Mr. CARR, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petitions of Etiene (Stephen) La Lande, a resident of the State of Alabama, and in that part which lies east of Pearl river, and west of the Perdido, reported:

The petitioner sets forth, that, in the year 1800, or thereabouts, he received from the Spanish government permission to settle a piece of land in the county of Mobile, on the west side of Dog river, containing twenty arpens in front on said river, with forty in depth, making in all eight hundred arpens; that by time or accident he has lost the muniments of his title; but that he has resided on, occupied, and cultivated the land ever since the year 1800; that he still resides on the land; that he has built a dwelling-house and convenient out-houses, has cleared some fifty or sixty acres, which is under good fence and in a high state of cultivation; that he is now old, and is desirous of continuing on the place for the remainder of his life; that he was not aware of the necessity of presenting his claim on the land to the commissioners appointed by Congress to investigate titles to lands in that part of the country until the year 1827; but as soon as he was informed of the necessity thereof, he did present it by and through an agent, (he being illiterate and unacquainted with the English language,) and trusting to the fairness and honesty of his claim, he supposed it had been confirmed, until lately he had discovered it was not confirmed, by reason of the limited jurisdiction of the commissioners not embracing his case; and concludes by praying that as he has no written evidence of his title, that it may be confirmed upon the strength of his long possession, habitation, and cultivation. It is believed that the facts stated in the petition present a fair case for relief, if indeed they be supported by sufficient evidence, and that they are, is beyond all controversy. The depositions of John B. Frenier and Philip Joseph show a continued inhabitation and cultivation since the year 1801. The deposition of Leon Nicholas shows the same since the year 1804, and each of them swears he has no interest in the confirmation of the claim.

The above facts, as well as the reasons why the said claim was not confirmed by the commissioners as above stated, amply appears in their report made to the Secretary of the Treasury, in February, 1828.

They declare the land to have been cultivated and inhabited by the petitioner from the year 1799 until that time, and the reason why they do not confirm the claim, appears to be grounded upon the fact that the law did not provide for that class of cases.* The case being clearly embraced by all the acts of Congress granting donations to actual settlers, the committee believe the petitioner entitled to relief, and have therefore reported a bill.

ON CEDING TO OHIO THE RESIDUE OF THE PUBLIC LANDS THEREIN.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 29, 1836.

Mr. CRITTENDEN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the resolution of the Senate of the 18th of March, 1836, instructing them to "inquire into the expediency of ceding to the State of Ohio the residue of the public lands in that State which have been offered for sale for the term of fourteen years, and also of ceding the residue of said lands which have been offered for sale for a less term of time, or of permitting the State to become the purchaser of the last-mentioned lands at the price of one dollar per acre, on a credit of fourteen years, except in case of foreign war, in which case the same shall be paid for by the State, at such time as the Congress of the United States shall require, and that the same principle be extended to each of the new States in which the public lands of the United States are situate, by extending the sales to, or reserving for future sale, the same quantity of land as has been sold in the State of Ohio, in proportion to the whole quantity of land in each of said States," reported:

That they are totally unable to discover any motive or inducement that the United States can now have, either to give away the public lands or to sell them, as suggested, to Ohio and the other new States, at reduced prices, and upon long credits. The case is too clear and plain to require argument; and the committee are of opinion, that so to give, or so to sell the public lands, would be contrary to the true policy and duty of the general government, and altogether inexpedient. The committee ask to be discharged from the further consideration of the subject.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1494. [1ST SESSION.

ON GRANTING LANDS TO COLLEGES IN THE NEW STATES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 29, 1836.

Mr. CRITTENDEN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, who have had under consideration the resolution of the Senate, instructing them to inquire into the expediency of making "a grant of lands to one or more colleges in each of the new States, for education of the poor, upon the manual-labor plan," &c., reported:

That no reason has occurred to them for making further grants of lands to colleges in the new States, that would not equally justify and require the like grants to colleges in the old States, and in all the States of the Union. They are therefore of opinion that such an application of the common property of the United States, to the endowment of colleges of any description in the new States, to the exclusion of those in other States, would be unjust, uneqal, and inexpedient.

* See State Papers, public lands, vol. 5, page 121.

The committee are sensible that the education of all classes of the people is of the highest public importance, but they are not required on this occasion to inquire or report either as to the policy of the measure, or as to the constitutional competency of Congress to promote education by the general endowment of colleges throughout the Union. Those questions will arise more properly whenever a general system for that purpose shall be proposed.

For the present, the committee, confining itself strictly to the inquiry submitted to them by the resolution of the Senate, report that a grant of public lands to one or more colleges in each of the new States, is inexpedient, if for no other reason, because it is exclusive and unequal, and therefore unjust to the other States of the Union.

The committee ask to be discharged from the further consideration of the subject, &c.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1495. [1ST SESSION.

ON THE SALE OF THE PUBLIC LANDS IN FORTY-ACRE LOTS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 29, 1836.

Mr. CRITTENDEN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the resolution of the Senate, instructing them to inquire into "the expediency of authorizing, without restriction or limitation, the entry of the public lands after the public sale in forty-acre tracts," reported:

That, in their opinion, uniformity and stability in the plain system which has been adopted for the disposition and sale of the public lands, is highly important, and that all changes ought to be avoided, except where their propriety or necessity is clearly evinced by experience.

The committee perceive no sufficient reason for the changes suggested by the resolution. Its object is, no doubt, the very laudable one of favoring the poorer classes of purchasers and cultivators, but the advantage to them is too slight and contingent to merit much consideration; while on the other hand, it would enable speculators, by dotting over large tracts of country with their numerous little purchases, to affect the sale of the adjacent public lands, or to extort higher prices for their own.

The committee are therefore of opinion that it would be inexpedient to authorize, without restriction or limitation, the entry of public lands in forty-acre tracts, and they ask to be discharged from the further consideration of the subject.

IN SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, February 25, 1836.

On motion of Mr. HENDRICKS—

Resolved, That the Committee on the Public Lands be instructed to inquire into the expediency of authorizing, without restriction or limitation, the entry of the public lands, after the public sales, in forty-acre tracts.

Attest: WALTER LOWRIE, Secretary,
By W. HICKEY, Clerk.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1496. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM FOR THE ISSUE OF SCRIP FOR A VIRGINIA BOUNTY LAND WARRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MARCH 29, 1836.

Mr. CRITTENDEN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred "A bill for the relief of the heirs of Nathaniel Tyler," (from the House of Representatives,) reported:

That, from the petition of H. B. Tyler, who represents himself as heir of Nathaniel Tyler, and from other evidences, it appears that in the year 1784 a warrant, No. 3,301, for 2,666⅔ acres of land, was granted and issued by the State of Virginia, in the name of Nathaniel Tyler, as heir-at-law of John Tyler, for his (said John's) military services in the Virginia continental line; that Nathaniel Tyler died previous to the year 1796; that in the year 1798, and from that time up to the year 1817, various entries and re-entries, to its full amount, were made upon said warrant, in the name of the said Nathaniel Tyler; that these entries were long ago surveyed, but no grants issued thereon.

The petitioner also represents that all these entries and surveys were made by "some person without authority." For that reason, and because those entries and surveys were made in the name of Nathaniel Tyler, after his death, the petitioner considered them as void, and that, therefore, he was entitled, under the act of Congress of the 30th May, 1830, "for the relief of the officers and soldiers of the Virginia line," &c., to demand scrip in satisfaction of said warrant, and accordingly he made his application at the General Land Office. His claim was there rejected, and the decision was sanctioned by the opinion of Mr. Taney, then Secretary of the Treasury. An appeal is now made to Congress for relief; and the bill referred to this committee provides that relief, by authorizing scrip to be issued to the heirs of Nathaniel Tyler for 2,666⅔ acres of land.

The act of Congress of the 30th of May, 1830, as explained by the act of the 31st of March, 1832, authorized the issuing of scrip upon those military warrants only which had not been "located, surveyed, or patented." The application for scrip, in this case, was rejected by the Secretary of the Treasury, because the warrant had been "located according to the forms of office," and the department would not undertake to decide whether it was valid or not. The committee concur in this decision of the Secretary, and are of opinion that the acts of Congress which have been alluded to do not embrace the case of Tyler's heirs, and the only question is, whether there is any sufficient and proper ground for legislating and providing specially for this case.

The chief argument in favor of this claim of Tyler's heirs is, that the entry in the name of their ancestor was void, because made after his death. It was, no doubt, void for that reason; but still this circumstance gives them no better claim on the government than may be asserted by every individual whose entry upon a like warrant has turned out, from any cause, to be invalid or unavailing. The misfortune or loss of the parties is the same in all the cases, and the principle that applies is the same. It is well known that there are very numerous instances of entries upon such warrants, that have proved ineffectual to secure the land intended to be appropriated, and have been found to be invalid on account of their vagueness, or for other cause of invalidity. In each and every one of these cases the unfortunate losing party has just the same right to demand redress of the government that the heirs of Tyler have; and if the claim of the latter be allowed, the former cannot be rejected. They all depend on the same principle, and ought to share the same fate. If it be the purpose and policy of Congress to extend the scope of its former laws, providing for the satisfaction of Virginia military land warrants, it should be done, in the opinion of this committee, by general and not by special legislation. To make provision for this particular case, while the numerous class to which it belongs remains unprovided for, would be unjust and inexpedient.

The committee, therefore, report the bill back to the Senate without amendment, and recommend that it be rejected.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1497. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM FOR THE RE-ISSUE OF A LOST BOUNTY LAND WARRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 30, 1836.

Mr. CARR, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Samuel Rowe and John Rowe, reported:

That the petitioners set forth that they are the legal heirs and representatives of Ludwick Rough, a soldier of the Revolution; that they, upon application, received a warrant, numbered 404, for 100 acres of land, which warrant was issued on the 4th day of April, 1808; that the said warrant has been lost, thereby depriving them from realizing the benefits of their claim. James Maden swears that, about nine years ago, John Rowe gave him a warrant for 100 acres of land, granted to the heirs of Ludwick Rowe, a Revolutionary soldier, lying in the western reserve, in the fifty-quarter township, No. 144 (affidavit badly worded) which warrant he lost on his journey through the State of Ohio.

William Gordon, esq., of the bounty land office, states, that it appears, by the records of his office, that said warrant, No. 404, for 100 acres, was issued the 4th of April, 1808, in the names of John Rough and Samuel Rough, legal heirs and representatives of Ludwick Rough, who was a private in the Pennsylvania line. It being alleged, in the petition, that the abovementioned warrant has been lost, he states that the existing laws furnish no authority for the issue of warrants of the Revolutionary class, in lieu of such as may have been lost; the only means by which relief can be obtained in such cases, is by a special act of Congress, authorizing the Secretary of War to issue either a new warrant, or a duplicate of that which was originally issued.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office states, that the warrant, No. 404, stated in the letter of Mr. Gordon, to have been issued to John and Samuel Rough, has never been presented to that office for the purpose of being satisfied. Upon the statement of the above facts, the committee report a bill authorizing the Secretary of War to issue a ——— warrant.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, Bounty Land Office, March 17, 1836.

SIR: I herewith return the petition of John and Samuel Rowe, which was referred by you to this office yesterday; and in reference thereto, have to state that, it appears by the records in this office, Land Warrant No. 404, for 100 acres, issued on the 4th April, 1808, in the names of John Rough and Samuel Rough, legal heirs and representatives of Ludwick Rough, who was a private in the Pennsylvania line.

It being alleged in the petition that the above-mentioned warrant has been lost, I have to state that, as the existing laws furnish no authority for the issue of warrants of the Revolutionary class, in lieu of such as may have been lost, the only means by which relief can be obtained in such cases, is by a special act of Congress, authorizing the Secretary of War to issue, either a new warrant, or a duplicate of that which was originally issued.

By reference to the General Land Office, and furnishing the date and number of the warrant, it may be ascertained whether such warrant has been surrendered at that office, and satisfied by either the issue of a patent or scrip.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM GORDON.

Hon. JOHN CARR, House of Representatives.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1498. [1ST SESSION.

IN FAVOR OF A GRANT OF LAND TO AID IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 31, 1836.

Mr. CASEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the memorial of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, reported:

That by an act of the legislature of the State of Illinois, approved on the 16th January, 1836, a company was incorporated, and authorized, and empowered, to locate, construct, and finally complete a railroad, commencing at or near the mouth of the Ohio river, in the State of Illinois, thence north to a point on the Illinois river, at or near the termination of the proposed Illinois and Michigan canal, with the right to extend the same to the town of Galena in the said State.

The character and importance of the undertaking, and the propriety of the government granting assistance in the prosecution and completion of the work, by securing for a limited time to said company, the right of pre-emption to a portion of the public lands on each side of the contemplated railroad, according to the prayer of the memorialists, will more fully appear from the following statement of facts. It will form a connecting link with other works of internal improvements by railroads and canals, and great natural highways of intercommunication, which will more or less affect the interests of a large portion of this Union.

Illinois is situated in the heart of the Mississippi valley, bounded on the west and southwest by the great Father of waters, on the east and southeast by the Wabash and its parent river, the beautiful Ohio, and on the north by an artificial line, passing through a region of inexhaustible wealth. These limits embrace a territory which nature has left without a rival on the habitable globe, in all that affords facilities for the acquisition of the essential means of human happiness. At the confluence of the Ohio and the Mississippi, it is contemplated to commence the proposed railroad, and run it north, touching at the most important points in the interior of the State, to the contemplated termination of the Illinois and Michigan canal, continuing north, near said third principal meridian line, to township 42 north, and thence it diverges to the northwest, and terminates at Galena, in the very heart of the mineral region before mentioned.

The committee acknowledge the influence of many weighty considerations in granting the prayer of the memorialists. A reference to the map of the country shows that the work will commence at a point of uninterrupted navigation, and, passing through a country of great fertility, fixes its northern termination in a region where navigation is closed several months in the year. The line of this road divides the western and eastern boundaries of the State nearly at equal distances, and becomes more distant as it progresses north, until it unites with the canal connecting the waters of the St. Lawrence and Mississippi, by which a continuous line of communication is opened into the lakes of the north, the Canadas, and the northern parts of the United States. Looking south, it connects with a navigation, which, by means of the Ohio, penetrates the States of Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, and Virginia, to the base of the Alleghany chain of mountains, and through the channels of the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers you enter the very heart of the rich States of Alabama and Tennessee; and by the Upper Mississippi and Missouri, you reach the outposts of America.

Through the tributaries of the Lower Mississippi, the whole southwestern world is open to American enterprise; and on the bosom of the parent river, every nation and port known to commerce is accessible from this beginning point of the railroad.

The route of the central railroad passes through a country, the greater part of which has been in market for 10, 15, 20, or 25 years, which is mainly ascribable to the fact of its remoteness from navigation and market. It is well known to all observers that the first settlements of new countries are almost invariably confined to the great rivers. Such is the fact in relation to Illinois. Another reason which has contributed to keep this land out of market is, that large proportions of it are prairies of great extent, which retards greatly the settlement of the country, and which difficulty will be nearly obviated by the construction of the contemplated road, and the government be enabled to sell its unavailable land for many miles contiguous to the route, and thus derive a large revenue from an unanticipated source, and from one which would have lain dormant, and consequently without profit to the State or nation for ages to comee.

Regarded thus in a pecuniary point of view, in reference to the general government, the construction of the road will give value to immense bodies of unproductive wild lands, and considerably enhance the revenues of the State, by subjecting them to taxation.

The proposed central railroad will follow, as nearly as practicable, the third principal meridian line, passing through the seat of government of the State, and the other principal towns on the route. It will be seen by a statement derived from the department of the General Land Office, that the lands remaining unsold up to a late period, confining the estimate to the said meridian line, between the mouth of the Ohio and its intersection of the Illinois, without any divergence, and a scope of five miles on either side thereof, amount to 2,183,880 acres, and that 383,133 acres have been sold, making the entire quantity of public lands on the route 2,565,613 acres. Between the point of intersection on the Illinois river (the western termination of the Illinois and Michigan canal) and Galena, a distance by estimate of 110 miles, the unsold lands within the prescribed limits of five miles on each side of the route, amount to 661,120 acres.

As gigantic as the proposed project is regarded in every point of view, whether for its extent, being from 450 to 500 miles in length, the newness of the country in and through which its construction is contemplated, its unsurpassed fertility and adaptation to agricultural pursuits, the prospective utility of the road to the nation, and present advantage to the State, and being entirely practicable, it will be undertaken and finished, but much more speedily by the grant of the privilege prayed for.

When the Mississippi and Ohio are fast bound up in ice, troops and munitions of war can be transferred with a rapidity and despatch unknown to water transportation, to the frontiers of Illinois, Wisconsin, and Northern Missouri, whence they can be stretched along the lines of these frontiers in an incalculably short period of time.

The northern termination of the road is situated in the centre of the lead region. At all times and seasons this valuable article of trade can be brought south, and thence to any military point or commercial mart in the Union. The lead in this region is inexhaustible, and will afford a sufficiency to supply the wants of the country in both peace and war. Regarded as the ground-work of a system of internal improvement about being commenced in Illinois, it is of paramount importance to the public interests. This road will be regarded as the grand stem, from which will diverge works of a similar kind, to connect with every road or canal of importance, which the enterprise of the neighboring States may undertake, pointing in the direction of Illinois. A branch is contemplated to St. Louis, whereby an unbroken line of railroad will be made to the northwestern limits of Missouri; another to unite with the Wabash and Erie canal; thus opening to every citizen of Illinois, a direct communication with the Northern States of the Union. In a word, branch roads, it may be confidently calculated, will be constructed to every important town or commercial position on the borders of the State. Considered then as a facility of carrying out a system about undergoing the action of Congress, for the transportation of the United States mail, it should be regarded in a most favorable light. It is also in contemplation, (and recent experience proves that it is only necessary to conceive a work of internal improvement, to carry it into effect,) to extend the road from the mouth of the Ohio to Nashville, in the State of Tennessee, to meet the projected road from that city to New-Orleans, and to unite with branches of the great Charleston project, and the contemplated Baltimore and Ohio, and Richmond railroads.

The completion of these great works would identify the interests of the whole valley of the Mississippi, and bring the west and the south into the most intimate communion. Viewing this subject in every possible point of light, as creating at its southern termination, a commercial emporium of great future consequence to the commerce of the western States, at which will concentrate the trade from the sources of the Mississippi and Missouri, the mineral regions of the north and southern Missouri, the manufactures of the Ohio and tributaries, the rich products of the southern country, brought in exchange for the superabundant productions of the rich soils of Illinois, or as giving value to millions of acres of the public domain, which are now wholly worthless and unsaleable; or as enhancing the revenues of the State, and contributing to its welfare and prosperity, in the increase of its population, wealth, and intelligence, and in direct and positive benefits to the people, or as creating great facilities in the conveyance of the mail, the transportion of troops and munitions of war from one extreme of the country to another, at all seasons of the year, in one fourth of the time, and at one half the expense now required, or its effects upon the social and political relations of a large portion of the American people, or their public, or their private interests; it operates upon each and all in the most beneficial manner.

The committee will not permit themselves to doubt the final decision of the House on this subject, especially when it is recollected that a large portion of the very land to which the right of pre-emption is asked, unless the road be made, will remain for many years, as millions of acres now are, valueless and unsalable on the hands of the government; and that the sound policy in relation to the value and sale of the immense districts of lands, owned by the United States, almost exclusively, through which the road would pass, would be to make the grant asked for. There can be no doubt but that three times the amount that could now be realized for those lands, would, on the completion of the work, be immediately reimbursed by the increased value and ready sale of the adjacent lands, a large portion of which, from their remoteness from highways, and other causes, are now nearly, if not altogether, without value. The correspondence before alluded to, with the Commissioner of the General Land Office, together with a map of the State of Illinois, is appended to and made a part of this report.

The committee report a bill in conformity with the prayer of the memorialists.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, March 25, 1836.

SIR: The memorial of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, incorporated by an act of the legislature of the State of Illinois, for the purpose of constructing a railroad from a point at or near the mouth of the Ohio river, to the termination of the proposed Illinois and Michigan canal, on the Illinois river, with the right to extend the same to the town of Galena, in said State, praying for the right of pre-emption to a portion of the public lands through which said railroad may be located, has been referred to the Committee on the Public Lands of the House of Representatives. In order to enable the committee to judge of the propriety of reporting a bill in accordance with the prayer of said memorial, will you have the goodness, at your earliest convenience, to furnish the committee with a statement, showing the quantity of land that has been disposed of by the government, and the quantity still owned by the United States, within five miles in width on each side of the third principal meridian line in the State of Illinois, from a point on the Ohio river where said third principal meridian line intersects the same, north, to a point on the Illinois river where said line crosses said river; and also the quantity of land that has been disposed of by the government, and the quantity still owned by the United States, within five miles in width on each side of a State line, east, from the last point aforesaid to the town of Galena, in said State of Illinois.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

Z. CASEY.

E. A. BROWN, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 26, 1836.

SIR: In your letter of the 25th instant, you request to be furnished with a statement showing the quantity of land disposed of by the government, and the quantity still owned by the United States, within five miles in width, on each side of the third principal meridian line in the State of Illinois, from a point on the Ohio river where said third principal meridian line intersects the same, north, to a point on the Illinois river where said line crosses said river; and also the quantity of land that has been disposed of by the government, and the quantity still owned by the United States, within five miles in width, on each side of a straight line, from the last point aforesaid, to the town of Galena, in the said State of Illinois.

From the verbal explanation which I had yesterday the honor to make, you are aware of the difficulties in the way of preparing such statements as you require, by reason of the heavy arrears of sales remaining to be registered in the tract-books of this office.

Under these circumstances of official embarrassment, I am enabled only to estimate, as nearly as practicable, the particulars you desire, and the following are the results:

First.—Total quantity of five sections on each side of third principal meridian from the Ohio river to river Illinois, estimated	1,861,613	acres.
Sold and otherwise disposed of by the United States	340,253	"
Vacant	1,521,360	"
Second.—Estimated distance of the line from the Illinois river to Galena, 110 miles, ten sections to a mile	704,000	"
Sold, estimated	42,880	"
Vacant	661,120	"

Transmitted herewith is a map of the route described in your communication.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN.

Hon. ZADOK CASEY, Esq., of the Committee on the Public Lands, House of Representatives.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1499. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN MICHIGAN.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MARCH 31, 1836.

Mr. HUNTSMAN, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Charles A. Grignon, praying to be perfected in a title to six hundred and forty acres of land, lying upon Fox river, in the Territory of Michigan, reported:

The petitioner presents his claims to the government in the following words and figures, to wit:

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled:

The petition of Charles A. Grignon, of Green Bay, in the county of Brown, and Territory of Michigan, respectfully showeth, that, in the year 1831, a grant was made by the chiefs and head men of the Menominee nation of Indians, to your petitioner (who is allied, on the part of his mother, to the said Menominees) of a tract of land, containing one section, or six hundred and forty acres, including a site for a mill, and other valuable privileges, situated at the mouth and upon the waters of a stream called "Apple creek," emptying into the Fox river, on the west side thereof, and about thirteen miles from the head of Green bay. That the said grant was sanctioned by the Secretary of War, and was surveyed by your petitioner.

That in the year 1832, at the time of negotiating the treaty between the late Governor Porter, commissioner on behalf of the United States, and the Menominee and New York tribes of Indians, at Green Bay, the said grant was recognised by the said Menominee chiefs. That an objection was made by the chiefs of the Oneida nation at that time, to the reservation of said tract of land, as it was situated within the portion of country allotted to their use. That the said Menominee chiefs refused to sign the treaty unless the reservation of said land was made to your petitioner and his heirs and assigns. That after several unsuccessful attempts made by the governor, to reconcile the matter between the said parties, he, Governor Porter, applied to your petitioner in person, and requested several individuals to apply to him upon the subject of said grant or reservation, and proposed to your petitioner to relinquish the said grant, at the same time promising your petitioner that he should be fully satisfied by the government for his said claim, provided he would no longer let the said grant be an obstacle to the final adjustment of the differences which had so long existed between the Menominee and New York Indians. That, at the solicitation of the governor, he, your petitioner, agreed to relinquish his right to said tract of land, upon the pledge given by Governor Porter that full equivalent, either in land or money, should be given by the government, to the satisfaction of your petitioner, in lieu of said tract; and further, that Governor Porter pledged himself to the Menominee chiefs, in council, as the commissioner of the government, that your petitioner should be fully satisfied in regard to said grant; upon which the said Menominee chiefs signed the treaty.

And your petitioner further showeth, that he has repeatedly applied to Governor Porter, during his lifetime, and also to the Secretary of War, upon this subject, but has received no satisfaction. That during the last fall a paper was addressed to the President of the United States, signed by the said chiefs, which was forwarded by Colonel Boyd, the United States Indian agent at this place, to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and by him returned with the remark that nothing could be done by the department, and referring your petitioner to your honorable body for relief, &c., although by the said treaty reference is made to the said grant, and it is thereby expressly reserved.

Your petitioner, therefore, prays your honorable body that a law may be passed, giving him a full and adequate equivalent in money, or other land equally valuable, or ratifying and confirming to him and his heirs and assigns, forever, the said tract of land, according to the intention of the said chiefs, and the pledge of Governor Porter, solemnly made as the commissioner of the government, or granting such other and further relief as your honorable body may deem meet and proper.

And your petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

CHAS. A. GRIGNON.

GREEN BAY, February 4, 1836.

It is distinctly within my recollection, that the late Governor Porter agreed for, and on behalf of, the United States, to give to the memorialist, Charles A. Grignon, one thousand dollars, in lieu of his claim to the section of land on Apple creek, or that he should be allowed to locate one other section of land, at some other point, under the direction of the President of the United States.

GEORGE BOYD, Indian Agent.

GREEN BAY, February 6, 1836.

The undersigned, chiefs and head men of the Menominee nation of Indians, to their great father, the President of the United States, respectfully represent: That, previous to the ratification of the treaty, made and concluded at Green Bay, in 1832, between them and the said United States, a grant was made by them to their relation and friend, Charles A. Grignon, of Green Bay, of a tract of land, one mile square, lying upon the west side of the Fox river, near said Green Bay, at the mouth and upon the waters of Apple creek; that, at the time of making said treaty, the said chiefs and head men, on behalf of themselves and the said tribe, expressly stated their wishes, and declared that they would not sign the treaty unless the said tract of land was granted to the said Charles A. Grignon, or he otherwise fully satisfied and paid for the same by the United States. And we do further state, that, immediately before signing the said treaty, we stated our wishes to our late father, Governor Porter, who then pledged himself that our wishes and desires should be granted. But we are informed, and now believe, that our wishes have not been complied with; and although we have long since given to our friend this piece of land, (which gift was sanctioned by our father, Governor Porter,) yet there is not a sufficient grant contained in the treaty to secure to him the tract of land which we so long since gave to him.

We, therefore, in our own behalf, and for the said nation, do earnestly request our great father, the President, to comply with our wishes, and to grant to our relation, the said Charles A. Grignon, and his heirs, the said tract of land, to be of the dimensions and situated according to the survey of the said tract herewith transmitted, which has been made with our consent and approbation; or that a full equivalent may be made by the United States to him, the said Charles A. Grignon, in lieu of that tract of land.

Signed in open council, at the Little Butte des Morts, this 12th day of October, 1835.

Description of a section of land, located to C. A. Grignon, as a mill privilege, on Apple creek, to wit: Beginning at a pine on the bank of Fox river, 7 chains and 26 links below the mouth of Apple creek, from which N. 47° W. distant 11 links are twin oaks, (black;) thence west 80 chains is a willow 6 inches diameter, squared; thence S. 80 chains is a pine 8 inches diameter, squared; thence E. 74 chains, 96 links, is Fox river, and a pine on the bank, notched and blazed; thence down the bank of Fox river to the place of beginning; estimated to contain six hundred and forty acres of land.

A. G. ELLIS, Surveyor, B. C. M. T.

November 1, 1833.

I do hereby certify, that, at the treaty which was held at Green Bay, in the fall of the year 1832, between the late Governor Porter, commissioner on behalf of the United States, and the Menominee and New York tribes of Indians, I was present, and, at the request of the governor, assisted in negotiating the said treaty; that at that time the chiefs of the Menominee nation declared in council, that it was their intention and desire to give to Charles A. Grignon (who is allied to said chiefs, on the side of his mother), a section of land lying upon the Apple river, at its junction with the Fox river, near Green Bay; that the said chiefs stated that they had long since set that tract of land apart for the said Grignon, and supposed it was secured to him and his heirs, as they had, when previously at Washington, made the same statement; that the chiefs of the Oneida nation objected to said grant, as it was situated within the district of country set apart by the treaty for their use; that the Menominee chiefs refused to sign the treaty until Grignon was satisfied in regard to this grant; that Governor Porter, in person, and by others, conferred with Mr. Grignon upon the subject, and pledged himself as the commissioner of the government, that if he would not insist upon this reservation, or interpose it as an obstacle to the ratification of the treaty, he (the governor) would see him fully satisfied by the government, by an equivalent in land or money; that, upon this promise, Grignon induced the Menominee chiefs to accede to the terms of the treaty; and that upon its final adjustment, and before the signing of the same, the governor, in open council, again promised the said chiefs and the said Grignon, that he should be fully satisfied by the government for the said grant or reservation. The above is a true statement of the facts, according to my best recollection.

R. A. FORSYTH.

GREEN BAY, January 30, 1836.

We, the undersigned, were present at the making of the treaty, within alluded to, at Green Bay, in the year 1832: we have carefully read the within statement of Major R. A. Forsyth, and are fully satisfied that the facts stated therein are correct and true: and that we have a distinct recollection of the promise made by Governor Porter to Mr. Grignon, that he should be amply remunerated by the government for the said grant; and we do further state that we are well acquainted with the quality and location of said tract of land; that it is of superior quality, and possesses many advantages which cannot be found in common locations.

ALEXANDER J. IRWIN.
HENRY S. BAIRD.

GREEN BAY, February 4, 1836.

Upon an examination of the testimony, your committee find that the allegation set forth in the petition is fully sustained by the proof, and that the government is under a strong moral obligation to grant relief to the petitioner, to the extent prayed for, and have reported a bill accordingly.

RELATIVE TO THE LOCATION OF A NEW MADRID CERTIFICATE ON THE SAND-BAR IN FRONT OF ST. LOUIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 1, 1836.

REGISTER'S OFFICE, City of St. Louis, March 15, 1836.

SIRS: In pursuance of an order from the authorities of this city, I enclose herewith copies of certain papers relative to the location of a new Madrid certificate upon the sand-bar and strip of land in front of this city, which is now claimed by E. T. Langham and others.

Respectfully,

J. A. WHERRY, Register.

HONS. WILLIAM A. ASHLEY and A. G. HARRISON, House of Representatives, U. S.

RECORDER'S OFFICE, St. Louis, February 9, 1836.

SIR: This office does not afford any of the information sought by the resolution which you enclosed to me; the resolution is herewith returned to you.

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

F. R. CONWAY.

JOS. A. WHERRY, Esq., City Register of St. Louis, Mo.

LAND OFFICE AT ST. LOUIS, Register's Office, February 11, 1836.

SIR: Yours of the 9th, enclosing a resolution of the board of aldermen of this city, under date the 8th instant, has been duly received.

The resolution calls on this and other offices for, 1st: "A copy of the location of the New Madrid certificate, and the certificate itself, under which E. T. Langham, and others, claim part of the sand-bar opposite the city, and a certain strip of land on the margin of the river, within the limits of this city."

2d: "A copy of the pre-emption location, and of the proofs, under Robert Duncan, under whom said Langham, and others, claim part of said sand-bar, and the evidence in said offices tending to the subject."

In answer to the first section of the resolution: There is no evidence in this office.

In reply to the 2d section: It is made my duty to forward, with my monthly returns, to Washington city, the evidence in pre-emption rights admitted; which was accordingly done in the case referred to, in my report of December last.

There exists in this office now, no other evidence of the pre-emption of Robert Duncan, other than the entry in the books thereof, of which the following is a transcript:

"December 5, 1835. Receiver's receipt, No. 5,812, Robert Duncan, of St. Louis county, Mo. (under) the pre-emption act of 1834, (entered) fract. sect. 24; N. W. fr. qr. and N. ½ of S. W. qr. sec. 25; N. E. fr. qr. and N. ½ of S. E. qr. sec. 26, on island in Mississippi river; township No. 45, N. R. 7, east, containing 160 acres; amounting to $200."

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. CHRISTY, Register.

No. 333.

OFFICE OF RECORDER OF LAND TITLES, St. Louis, September 26, 1817.

I certify that a tract of six hundred and forty acres of land, situated in Marais des Pechis, county of New Madrid, which appears from the books of this office to be owned by John B. Thibauld, has been materially injured by earthquakes; that said Thibault has been already relieved for one hundred and sixty acres (see certificate No. 222); therefore, in conformity to the provisions, and to complete the limitation contained in the act of Congress of 17th February, 1815, the said John B. Thibault, or his legal representatives, is entitled to locate four hundred and eighty acres of land, on any of the public lands of the Territory of Missouri, the sale of which is authorized by law.

FREDERICK BATES.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, St. Louis, February 11, 1836.

E. T. LANGHAM.

Know all men by these presents, that, whereas, by an act of Congress, entitled, "A bill for the relief of Archibald Gamble," approved January 28, 1833, it was enacted that the heirs or assigns of John B. Thibault, who are entitled to a New Madrid certificate, numbered three hundred and thirty-three, for four hundred and eighty acres, heretofore entered in township number forty-six, range six east of the fifth principal meridian, be, and were thereby authorized, to enter four hundred and eighty acres of land on any at the public lands in the State of Missouri, the sale of which is authorized by law: Provided, That the said heirs or representatives of said John B. Thibault, so entitled, as aforesaid, before making said location or entry, shall execute a release to the United States, for all claim and right to the land upon which said certificate had been heretofore entered. Now this deed witnesseth, that I, Archibald Gamble, claiming, by regular chain of title, as the assignee or legal representative of said John B. Thibault, the said certificate, number three hundred and thirty-three, and the land heretofore located by virtue thereof, in township number forty-six north, in range six east, of the fifth principal meridian; do, by these presents, release unto the United States all the right, title, and claim, of myself and my heirs, or assigns, or of the said John B. Thibault, of, in, and to, the southwest fractional quarter of section twenty-two, the southeast fractional quarter of same section, the northwest fractional quarter of section twenty-seven, and so much of the east half of the same section as makes the quantity of four hundred and eighty acres, in township forty-six north, range six east, to have and to hold to the said United States, or their assigns, for ever.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal, at the city of St. Louis, this 15th day of March, in the year 1834.

[L. S.] ARCHIBALD GAMBLE.

STATE OF MISSOURI, County of St. Louis, ss.:

Be it remembered, that on this 15th day of March, in the year 1834, personally appeared before me, one of the justices of the peace of the county of St. Louis, the above-named Archibald Gamble, who is personally well known to me as the person executing the deed of release to the United States, and acknowledged the same to be his act and deed, hand and seal, for the purposes therein mentioned, taken and certified the day and year aforesaid.

PETER FERGUSON, Justice of the Peace.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, St. Louis, August 17, 1835.

This deed from Archibald Gamble to the United States, bearing date the 15th of March, 1834, was filed by said Archibald Gamble, on or about the 20th of March, in said year 1834, in this office; and it appears, from the records of this office, that the tract of land released to the United States by this deed, is the same tract of land upon which New Madrid certificate, numbered 333, was heretofore entered.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI, August 17, 1835.

SIR: By an act of the Congress of the United States, entitled, "An act for the relief of Archibald Gamble," approved January 28, 1833, (a copy of which said act is herewith filed, and made part and parcel hereof,) the heirs or assigns of John B. Thibault, who are entitled to New Madrid certificate, numbered 333, for four hundred and eighty acres of land, heretofore entered in township numbered 46, range numbered 6 east of the fifth principal meridian, are authorized to enter four hundred and eighty acres of land on any of the public lands in the State of Missouri, the sale of which is authorized by law: Provided, That the said heirs or representatives of said John B. Thibault, so entitled as aforesaid, before making said location or entry, shall execute a release to the United States for all claim and right to the land upon which said certificate has been heretofore entered. Now I, the said Archibald Gamble, assignee and legal representative of the said John B. Thibault, having executed heretofore, and filed in your office, a deed bearing date the 15th of March, 1834, releasing to the United States all claim and right of the heirs or representatives of said John B. Thibault to the land upon which said New Madrid certificate, numbered 333, was heretofore entered, do hereby, in virtue and by authority of the above-mentioned act of Congress, locate and enter four hundred and eighty acres of land on the following described tract or parcel of the public lands of the United States, in the State of Missouri, to wit: being in township numbered 45, north of the base line, of range numbered 7, east of the fifth principal meridian, and bounded as follows, to wit: northwardly by Willow street, in the city of St. Louis, prolonged to the river Mississippi; eastwardly by said river Mississippi, and public land; southwardly by said river Mississippi, and public land; westwardly and northwardly by lands confirmed or claimed under the laws of the United States, in the names of the following named persons, to wit: Benito Vasques, Joseph Brazeau under Benito Vasques, Joseph Brazeau, Antoine Soulard under Gabriel Cerrè, James Mackay, Auguste Chouteau, and John B. Provencheres, legal representatives; and by town lots in the city of St. Louis, in blocks numbered 45, 44, 43, 42, 41, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, and 19, which lots were heretofore confirmed by laws of the United States to individual persons, or reserved by said laws for the support of schools.

In surveying the above location or entry, and determining the area thereof, I request that you will leave out of said survey, and out of the computation of the area thereof, the land claimed by Robert Duncan, where he now lives, in the right of pre-emption.

AN ACT for the relief of Archibald Gamble.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That the heirs or assigns of John B. Thibault, who are entitled to a New Madrid certificate, numbered three hundred and thirty-three, for four hundred and eighty acres, heretofore entered in township number forty-six, range six east of the fifth principal meridian, be, and are hereby authorized to enter four hundred and eighty acres of land on any of the public lands in the State of Missouri, the sale of which is authorized by law: Provided, That the said heirs or representatives of said John B. Thibault, so entitled, as aforesaid, before making said location or entry, shall execute a release to the United States for all claim and right to the land upon which said certificate has been heretofore entered.

To the Hons. THOMAS H. BENTON and LEWIS F. LINN, Senators, and WM. H. ASHLEY and ALBERT G. HARRISON, Representatives in Congress of the State of Missouri:

GENTLEMEN: The undersigned, your constituents, inhabitants of the city of St. Louis, beg leave to call your attention to certain matters which very materially affect their interests, as well as the interests of the United States.

It is known to you that the authorities of the city of St. Louis have made several efforts to procure from the government of the United States a removal of the island, or sand-bar, which has been made by the accumulation of logs and sand, opposite to the lower part of the city; and which has obstructed the landing along a portion of the margin of the river, and from time to time threaten still further to block up and injure the harbor. Knowing that the subject has been brought before Congress at a former session, and that your exertions would not be wanting to procure a favorable result at the present session, we should have waited for that result, without troubling our representatives further, had not certain events occurred here, which have an adverse bearing upon the attainment of our object.

It seems, that while the action of Congress, with respect to the improvement of our harbor has been delayed, a person, by the name of Robert Duncan, built a hut on the island or sand-bar in question, and that recently he has preferred to the proper land office his claim to a pre-emption. This claim has been allowed, and he has received the proper voucher for obtaining a patent, and has transferred all his right therein, as is believed, to Elias T. Langham, the surveyor general, and A. H. Evans. Mr. Langham has also, as we understand, located on other portions of said sand-bar, and upon sundry strips of ground along the margin of the river, adjacent to the sand-bar, and along the whole front of the city, a New Madrid certificate. It is now pretended on the part of Mr. Langham and others, who are interested in the speculation, that the sand-bar, or a considerable portion of it, is individual property; and plans are already on foot to divert the natural course of the river, and to bring a part of the bar into a line with the landing of the upper part of the town, and make it the permanent landing for the lower part of the city. The result of success in these efforts will be the following:

1. It will throw all the lots in the south part of the town, calling for the river as a boundary, inland a considerable distance, and greatly injure their value; for it is evident that if this island is permitted to remain as private property, it will be improved, and the channel between it and the town will be filled up.

2. It will give a permanent direction of the current of the river toward the Illinois shore, which will affect the navigation and course of the river for an indefinite distance below. The landing on the Missouri side will be destroyed by sand-banks and accretions, and in time that shore extended, perhaps, for miles; while encroachments will be made on the same extent on the Illinois side. The injury to private rights will thus be incalculable: while the United States will be deprived of a landing at the arsenal and barracks, upon a river the navigation of which, like that of the sea, within their jurisdiction, would seem to belong to their exclusive control.

3. A great injury may, and in time perhaps will, be sustained by the State of Illinois. The bottom land on the Illinois side of the river is of many miles in width; and is settled and improved below this place, and is exceedingly fertile. Private enterprise ought not to be permitted to subtract from the territory of that or any other State, by diverting or altering the direction of a great navigable stream, which is a common boundary of two States. If this can be done in the present instance, then, on the same principle, the owners of Bloody island, which is in the State of Illinois, may construct piles and artificial works that will turn the current from this city and utterly ruin its harbor.

Our objects in this communication are: first, to call your attention to the necessity of early action by Congress upon the subject of the removal of the sand-bar; secondly, to request that proper steps may be taken to prevent the issuing of patents on the pre-emption and New Madrid localities mentioned above.

As to the first, nothing further need be said, except that the bill should provide that any money appropriated for the improvement of the harbor of St. Louis should be expended under the superintendence of a proper agent, engineer, or officer of the United States.

In regard to the patents, we will observe, that even if a private right has vested in Langham and his associates, yet the United States, for the benefit of the harbor of St. Louis, the preservation of the current of the Mississippi in its ancient channel, along the bold shore of this State, and the protection of the property of the goverment, as well as that of a mass of individuals, should remove the bar, and indemnify those who own any interest in it.

But it seems very questionable whether this sand-bar or island can be the subject-matter of a grant by government. We understand that during the existence of the Spanish government here, a bar commenced (where the one in question is) and increased for a length of time, till it became an island, (that is, till it was above water throughout the year, as it is at present,) when certain persons petitioned for a concession of it, which was refused by the Spanish authorities, on the ground that the convenience of the inhabitants of St. Louis forbid the acquisition of the title to it by individuals. In a few years thereafter that bar was entirely swept away, and the channel of the Mississippi, as theretofore, continued along the Missouri shore. Accordingly, it is well known that twenty or thirty years ago the place of business in this town was at the southern end of it. The present bar, by its obstacles to navigation, has caused the business of the town to travel up to that part of the town where the obstruction does not exist; so that the ancient business lots and landing of the place have been deserted by the merchants. The grants of those lots in the southern part of the town, in many instances, in terms, call for the river. Has the government, after granting lots on such terms, a right to dispose of, to individuals, and thus interpose between them and the river, a sand-bar, that has grown up to be an island since the grant of the lots? On the contrary, have not the owners a right, acquired at the time of the grant, to be bounded by the river; and for that purpose to remove any obstructions to navigation, or any bars or other obstacles that should threaten to turn the river from their lots? Certainly they might have done this with regard to the bar in its incipient stage; and if so, if when the bar first commenced, and during its increase, they had a right to stop its growth and remove it, because it threatened to injure their landing, and turn the river from the front of their lots, at what moment did their right cease? Certainly the fact that the bar is now of such a size that it remains above water, except occasionally, when the annual flood is unusually high, the fact that it has bushes and small trees growing upon it, does not alter its character. It is only, in such a state, a larger and more permanent obstruction to the navigation along the front of those lots, originally granted with a river boundary, when there was no sand-bar there. It would seem, therefore, that the United States acquired, and could acquire, no right in this bar, which they could sell under the acts of Congress. If the government had any right in it, it had such rights as it has to the sea along our coast, or to a sand-bank that should arise in or near a harbor there; a right to hold it, or remove it, for the benefit of navigation.

By the civil law, and by the Spanish law, which was the general law here till its abolition in 1816, all islands arising in rivers, whether navigable or not, belonged to the riparian proprietors. (See Cooper's Justinian, page 74; and Partidas's translation, 1 vol., page 346.) If this bar commenced under those laws, it would seem to be now the property of the proprietors of the adjacent lots, on the Missouri side, and not the property of the government; and, therefore, not susceptible of sale by the government. Under the common law, which was introduced here in 1816, islands arising in rivers, above the ebb and flow of the tide, belonged to the riparian proprietors: so that whether this island was formed under the Spanish or American government, the right of the government to dispose of it is very questionable, to say the least.

There is another view of this subject, derived from the character of the Mississippi, which is deserving of consideration.

The laws of Spain, and of England, and of ancient Rome, on this subject, were made as applicable to the rivers of those countries; and with such application, and in analogous instances, are reasonable and wise. But such laws never could have been considered as applicable to the Mississippi, had it existed in either of those countries. Their streams, in comparison, are mere creeks and rivulets. The Mississippi below the mouth of the Missouri is, moreover, extremely rapid, and carries down immense quantities of sand and trees, &c., which circumstances give it its peculiar character, of shifting its channel, which it is doing perpetually, as every person who has navigated it is aware. Along its banks, and dependent on its navigation for their prosperity, are settled a number of populous and powerful communities, occupying already a space of about two thousand miles from its mouth; while the land bordering on it for that distance has been, for the most part, granted to individuals by the government. Now, under these circumstances, who has a right, in case an island or bar should form, to occupy it as private property, and, by permanent improvements upon it, perhaps change the current for twenty miles below? Have not all these communities and riparian proprietors a vested right to have the river kept in its ancient channel? The slightest obstruction, as the sinking of a keel-boat, or a temporary obstacle from ice, makes a bar, and causes the channel to wear away the bank on one side of the river, and to desert the other. We should suppose that these considerations would induce the belief, that any bar or island that should spring up in the Mississippi under such circumstances, must be considered in the light of a nuisance, which might be removed by those whose interests are endangered thereby. The common good of all on its banks requires such to be law: and it can make no difference, in the reasonableness of the principle, whether the removal takes place before the sand-bar aspires to the dignity of an island, or after it has attained that character.

For these reasons, we protest against the locations above mentioned, and through you, desire such measures to be taken as will most effectually prevent a recognition by government of these pretended titles.

APPLICATION OF LOUISIANA FOR THE SETTLEMENT OF THE CLAIMS TO LAND HELD UNDER THE SPANISH GRANTS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 1, 1836.

RESOLUTION.

Be it resolved by the senate and house of representatives of the State of Louisiana, in general assembly convened, That our representatives and senators in Congress be requested to use their best exertions to obtain from the general government that the contest existing in Florida, county of Feliciana, State of Louisiana, between settlers under the title of the United States, and claimants under Spanish grants, be so terminated as to give to the actual settlers holding under titles derived from the United States, the free possession of the land on which they have settled, and to grant to the claimants under Spanish grants, lands located elsewhere, when they shall have been recognized as valid by the United States.

ALCEE LABRANCHE, Speaker of the House of Representatives.
C. DERBIGNY, President of the Senate.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN MICHIGAN.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 5, 1836.

Mr. CASEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of George C. Willard, of Iowa county, Michigan Territory, reported:

That the said George C. Willard, under and in conformity to the regulations of the United States, for the government of the lead mines in Iowa county, Michigan Territory, settled on and improved a tract of land in said county, in the year 1829; that he continued to inhabit and cultivate the same until the date of his petition, the 27th December, 1835, except during the Indian war of 1832, in which he served his country with great zeal and bravery, and received in the last battle fought in that war a severe wound; that the tract of land upon which the petitioner settled, as above, was, after the survey of the public lands in that county, found to be the south-east quarter of section sixteen, in township two north, and range one east of the fourth principal meridian, and, in consequence thereof, the petitioner was not, of course, permitted, by the register and receiver of the land office for the Wisconsin district, to prove up his pre-emption right to said quarter-section, it being reserved for school purposes.

The committee, believing that another quarter-section, quite as valuable for school purposes, may be obtained for the township, and that the said Willard ought to be permitted to prove his right of pre-emption to the same, and enter at the minimum price, if he should prove his right of pre-emption, report a bill for the purpose. The petition of the said George C. Willard is made to be a part of this report.

To the Congress of the United States, now in session:

Your petitioner, an inhabitant of the county of Iowa, and Territory of Michigan, begs leave to petition your honorable body for the privilege of proving a pre-emption right to the southeast quarter of section sixteen, township two north, and range one east of the fourth principal meridian, and being in the Wisconsin land district, (land office at Mineral Point.)

Your petitioner begs leave to set forth his claims to the above privilege, as follows: Having been among the first settlers of the mining country, I made a location, in the summer of 1829, and continued improving the same until the summer of 1832, when the Indian war broke out and caused the inhabitants of this country to fort. In the winter of the same year, the land was surveyed, and my improvement fell on the above quarter-section, which has deprived me of the benefits of the late pre-emption law that the citizens of this county have enjoyed; and I do not think the school fund will be injured by granting my petition, as there is a sufficient quantity of timber on the above sixteenth section to support two quarters of prairie land, and there is a plenty of excellent prairie land adjoining said section; and the quarter my improvements are on is about one third good timber, and a great portion of the balance is what we call barrens.

I beg leave, also, to make known to your honorable body that, during the Indian campaign of 1832, I served during the whole campaign under Colonel Henry Dodge, and, unfortunately for me, at the very close of the campaign (at the battle of the Bad-Axe), I was wounded, having a ball pass through my right wrist, then cutting ball deep across the breast, and passing through the left arm above the elbow, and has entirely disabled me from doing any manual labor. A small pension I receive from the United States and my farm are the only means I have for the support of a wife and two children.

I would further state to your honorable body, that as soon as I left the hospital at Prairie du Chien, in the fall of 1832, I repaired to my farm on the above quarter-section, where I have resided ever since. Your petitioner believes that Hon. George W. Jones is known to all the foregoing facts, to whom I would refer for any further information that may be wanted; and if your honorable body will grant the prayer of your petitioner, he will ever pray, &c.

GEORGE C. WILLARD.

RELATIVE TO AN INCREASE OF FORCE IN THE GENERAL LAND OFFICE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 6, 1836.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, April 4, 1836.

SIR: Since I had the honor of conversing with you, on the subject of the proposed organization of this office, and submitting, for the consideration of the committee, an exposition of the present embarrassed condition of the office, arising from a defective organization, an immense amount of arrears, and a force totally insufficient to cope with the existing embarrassments, I have prepared, with much care and attention, a tariff of salaries under the proposed organization, which takes into view the magnitude of labor, and the comparative degrees of responsibility, which will devolve on each individual attached to the several branches. A copy of that paper I take leave most respectfully to submit to the Committee on the Public Lands.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1504. [1ST SESSION.

ON DRAINING THE INUNDATED LANDS ON THE MISSISSIPPI AND ARKANSAS RIVERS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 7, 1836.

Mr. HARRISON, of Missouri, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the memorial of the legislature of the Territory of Arkansas upon the subject of draining the inundated lands on the Mississippi and Arkansas rivers, and also the report of the Secretary of the Treasury, on the same subject, made in compliance with a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 2d March, 1835, reported:

Although your committee have not been able to collect such precise information as they would have been glad to have had in their power to lay before the house upon a subject of such magnitude as the present, yet they conceive that sufficient has been obtained, which is here embodied, to enable the House both to see and to feel the necessity of at once entering upon the proposed undertaking. For the purpose of more fully understanding this subject, and of presenting it in some systematic form, your committee have considered it under the following heads:

1. The probable expense of constructing a levee on the public lands on the western bank of the Mississippi, and on the southern bank of the Red river.

2. Also, of constructing levees on, or removing obstructions from, the Missouri, Arkansas, and St. François rivers, through the public lands, wherever it may be necessary.

3. The probable quantity, quality, and value of land belonging to the United States which will be reclaimed by such works.

4. The probable effect upon the health of the country in which such works may be constructed.

5. The probable advantages and disadvantages of such works respectively, and the effect which they will likely have upon the general prosperity of the country.

Before entering upon the consideration of the first head, it may be proper to remark that such data cannot be given as will lead to certain conclusions; the nature of the subject, and the character of the country which falls within the scope of the examination, are such as utterly to forbid the hope that we can begin upon known and established facts, and end in safe and certain results. Covered, as the inundated lands of the Mississippi and many of its tributaries are, with impenetrable swamps and marshes, no surveys have been made from which we can draw anything like exact information; nor is it possible that successful examinations can be made without first accomplishing to some extent such objects as are here contemplated. Enough, however, is known to justify the conclusion to which the committee have arrived, that the inundated lands of the Mississippi and its tributaries can be reclaimed, and become subject to the labor and industry of man in all the various arts and improvements of civilized life.

The point at which the inundated lands commence on the Lower Mississippi may be said to be the sources of Cape La Croix creek, in the State of Missouri, about three miles from the town of Cape Girardeau. It extends from this point south 135 miles, in a parallel direction with the Mississippi river; its mean breadth is 22 miles, covering altogether an area, in round numbers, of about 2,000,000 acres. This immense swamp is made principally by the high waters of the Mississippi overflowing the sources of the La Croix, and finding a discharge through the swamp; it is deemed entirely practicable to drain this swamp, and render it fit for cultivation, at a cost comparatively small. To accomplish this, it will not be necessary to construct a levee on the banks of the Mississippi the entire length of the swamp, but it can be effected at less cost, and more successfully, by constructing a levee at the head of the La Croix, so as to keep out the high waters of the Mississippi. This levee will require to be between one and two miles long, and, upon an average, about four feet high; it can be constructed for about $2,500. A canal from the La Croix to Hubble's creek, a distance of eight miles, thence to White water, six miles, and thence to Castor creek, thirty miles, clearing out the obstructions in each, will be required. From the mouth of Castor to the Mississippi, by the head of Portage bay, a canal would be necessary of six or eight miles in length, sufficiently deep and wide to receive the waters of the swamp, and that portion of the St. François which contributes to the formation of Little river, which should be diverted from its present course into the canal by a dam thrown across its channel. There being no streams discharging into the swamp south of Castor, and the outlet of the St. François just mentioned, by diverting them from their present course into the Mississippi through Portage bay, all that portion of country lying between the Mississippi and the St. François, south of Portage bay, will be reclaimed. In the streams mentioned, Hubble's creek and White water, and Castor, there are great quantities of fallen timber, which obstruct the free passage of the water, and cause it to overflow and accumulate in large ponds and lakes; these obstructions removed, and the canal dug, the waters would pass freely along their channels into the Mississippi, and a large portion of the most valuable land would be thus reclaimed.

The canal, until after it had received the waters of White river, would not, probably, require to be more than fifteen feet in width. After that, thirty feet in width would probably be sufficient; especially when we recollect that the whole space through which it would be made, is a rich alluvial soil, calculated to yield to and widen by the force of the passing water. There are no data upon which an estimate for the construction of this work can be founded, but it is supposed that the cost will not exceed $100,000.

As the St. François riven runs through this swamp, parallel with the Mississippi, and its waters, from the obstructions in it, overflow its banks, and contribute to the formation of the swamp, it is proper that we should take a view of what may be necessary to confine its waters within its banks, and make it fit for navigation. The St. François is a large stream; at present navigable from 100 to 150 miles above its mouth, and would be navigable 500 miles for steamboats, but for the obstructions which prevent it. The first obstruction is what is called the "sunken lands," about 150 miles from its disemboguement into the Mississippi. This strange name is derived from the circumstance that, in 1811 and 1812, the land sank about 100 feet perpendicularly for 50 miles in length and thirty in breadth, caused by those terrible and well-known earthquakes which produced so much alarm in that portion of the State of Missouri, and changed so completely the face and character of the country. This singular occurrence multiplied the channels of the river, so as to render it dangerous to navigation; the true channel not having been discovered since this circumstance took place. The estimate cost for restoring the waters to their main channel, made by those who have seen and are acquainted with this obstruction, is $50,000. The other obstructions in this stream are three rafts, the principal one of which is about a mile long. These, like the rafts in Red river, cause the waters to overflow the banks of the river, and to inundate the adjacent country. Those acquainted with this stream and its obstructions, calculate that $15,000 will be sufficient to remove all the rafts in it.

Were these rafts removed, the water which now overspreads the country would be collected and confined within the channel, and the volume of water which would thus pass down the stream, being so much larger, would gradually deepen the channel; and the points between the existing lakes, bayous, and the river, would be gradually deepened by the continual flow of water, and thus reclaim a very large quantity of the finest and most fertile lands.

When the Mississippi is high, its back waters extend up the St. François a considerable distance, and overflow the lands lying between the two rivers. To secure the lands from these inundations a levee should be constructed on the eastern bank of the St. François, for a hundred miles up the river. The levee should be about five feet high, and twenty feet at the base. It is supposed that this would not exceed the mean estimate for the construction of levees on the Mississippi, which is $4 per rod. This estimate would make the cost of a levee on the St. François, as above mentioned, amount to $128,000. According to the calculations of your committee, the aggregate cost for the works deemed by them necessary to reclaim this extensive swamp, would amount to the sum of $281,000; but supposing it necessary to levee the banks of the Mississippi, at certain points on a range with the swamp, and that too low an estimate has been made for the works here contemplated, your committee would fix the cost at the round sum of $400,000. For this amount very nearly 2,000,000 acres of land would be reclaimed, made fit for cultivation, and would command a ready market.

The distance from Cape Girardeau, in Missouri, to Helena, in Arkansas Territory, is computed to be 350 miles, and the inundated lands from one point to another, it is supposed, will average thirty miles in breadth, the breadth gradually increasing as you descend the river. This calculation will make the inundated lands in this distance amount to 6,720,000 acres. But as we have already had under consideration the quantity included in the "Big swamp," and given an estimate for the construction of the works necessary to reclaim it, it will be proper to deduct this quantity from the calculation. As the amount of land covered by the swamp is estimated, in round numbers, at 2,000,000 acres, and its length at 135 miles, the remaining quantity will be 4,720,000 acres, and the distance 215 miles, upon which it may be necessary to construct levees.

In considering the cost of constructing levees, we approach something like known data, by which we may be governed in our calculations. Such works being common, as you descend the Mississippi to its mouth, it is not difficult to ascertain the usual cost of their construction. To reclaim the vast quantity of land which is covered, from the lower extremity of the swamp, to the town of Helena, it may be necessary to raise a levee the whole distance. Upon this supposition, a levee averaging from four to five feet high, and from fifteen to twenty feet at the base, at the estimate of $4 per rod, will cost $275,000. But allowing in this, as we have in the other case, that too low an estimate has been made, which may be so, as there may be an occasional bayou, or other stream, requiring to be embanked, it cannot be considered that the calculation will fall short of the real cost, if the estimate as given is doubled. This will make the sum $500,000, necessary to reclaim at least 4,000,000 acres. This sum will be considered as amply sufficient, when it is recollected that in many places, it may not be necessary to raise an embankment at all. From Helena to the mouth of the Arkansas river is about 100 miles. The average extent of the overflow of the Mississippi, between these points may be assumed at thirty miles, the distance assumed between Cape Girardeau and Helena, although it is known that the bottoms of the Mississippi widen as we descend the river.

The construction of a levee from Helena to the mouth of the Arkansas river, at the estimate of $4 per rod, will cost $128,000. This and the other estimate are made upon the supposition that the levee will follow the meanderings of the river; but this will not always be the case. It should be constructed, as well as circumstances will permit, on a straight line, from one to two hundred yards from the bank of the river. The estimate just given of the cost of a levee from Helena to the mouth of the Arkansas, should be considerably increased, as White river disembogues itself into the Mississippi, about twelve miles above the disemboguement of the Arkansas. This will necessarily have to be embanked some distance above its mouth, as the back water from the Mississippi, independently of the overflowing of its own waters, cause the surrounding country to be inundated to a considerable extent. To construct the requisite levee on this river, and the Mississippi, from Helena to the mouth of the Arkansas, may be fairly estimated to cost $300,000, which will reclaim about 1,920,000 acres.

From the Pine bluffs on the Arkansas river, following the course of that stream to its mouth, to the northern boundary line of the State of Louisiana, may be estimated at 300 miles. A levee on the Arkansas river, it is thought, will cost more than one on the Mississippi, as it will be necessary to make it higher. One from five to six feet, on the average, will be required on this stream. The base should be in all cases four times the height of the embankment. The country between the Mississippi and the Pine bluffs, a distance of about sixty miles, is inundated, or marshy, caused in a great measure by inundations. A levee on the Arkansas and the Mississippi will, without doubt, reclaim this country, to a very great extent, and the average cost may be fairly calculated at $5 per rod to the Louisiana line. An immense body of land, now either a swamp or inundated, wholly useless, and of no value in its present condition, might be reclaimed by the construction of such a work, the cost of which the whole distance mentioned, at $5 per rod, would be $480,000, but which may be set down at $600,000. The quantity of inundated land lying south of the Arkansas river, and north of the Louisiana line, has been variously estimated. If the average width be fifty miles, as is said to be the fact by many who are acquainted with the country, we shall have the enormous amount of 9,600,000 acres of land, subject to be overflowed, and covered with swamp. Although we may reasonably doubt whether this quantity is actually subject to inundation, and covered with lakes and swamps, yet it can hardly be considered an exaggeration, if we take into the account the adjacent lands rendered unfit for the habitation of man, on account of the poisonous exhalations which arise from stagnant waters.

From the northern line of Louisiana to the mouth of Red river is about 300 miles. A levee from one point to the other will reclaim a large quantity of land.

The extent of the inundated lands and of the swamps, increasing as we descend the Mississippi, it is impossible to approach to anything like exactness in the total amount subject to be overflowed. But the calculation, it is presumed, will scarcely be said to be too large, to estimate the overflowed country, between the points mentioned, at 3,500,000 acres, and the cost of a levee at $1,000,000.

From the mouth of Red river it is about thirty miles, on a straight line to the point where we meet with levees already constructed by individuals, at their own expense. Levees below the mouth of this river will cost a good deal more than those above. The average height of one between the points just mentioned, may be estimated at eight feet, and the cost, including all contingencies, may be set down at $85,000. But to this should be added the cost of a levee on the Atchafalaya, of about seventy-five miles in length, as the country between this river and the Mississippi cannot be reclaimed without it. The sum of $125,000, it is thought, will be sufficient for this purpose. There are 675,000 acres of land said to be in the district of country lying between the Atchafalaya and Mississippi, two thirds of which, at least, belong to the general government, and which can be reclaimed and made fit for cultivation by the means proposed. This, however, is but a small portion of the inundated lands lying between the northern boundary line of the State of Louisiana and the Gulf of Mexico. In the report made by Mr. Graham, and submitted to the House of Representatives, in January, 1829, he estimated the superficial area of the inundated lands at 5,429,260 acres, 500,000 of which had been reclaimed by enbankments, constructed at private expense. Although that gentleman is against the opinion that a levee on the Red river and Mississippi will be sufficient to reclaim the country lying between the Red river and the Gulf of Mexico, and for this purpose suggests the necessity and practicability of carrying off surplus waters to the gulf in another and a different direction from the Mississippi river, yet there are many intelligent persons, whose observations and knowledge of the country justify them in the belief, that this desirable object can be accomplished to a great extent by embankments on Red river and the Mississippi, of sufficient length and strength. Enbankments on Red river should not be less than eight feet high, and thirty-two at the base. It will be necessary to levee this river about sixty miles, which would cost about $153,000, but making allowances for contingencies and unforeseen difficulties, the estimates may be increased to $200,000. In addition to these enbankments, for the purpose of reclaiming the country as effectually as possible, it will no doubt be occasionally necessary to dig canals for the purpose of leading off the water to be found in the numerous bayous between the Atchafalaya and Red river. This being done, the desired object may be, to a great extent, consummated.

On the Mississippi, above its confluence with the Missouri, there is a large body of land subject to be overflowed, extending more or less along its whole course with the State of Missouri, which can be easily reclaimed by the means proposed. The quantity would probably amount to 300,000 acres. This land is of the richest character, and might be reclaimed for $100,000.

The Missouri river does not overflow its banks to a sufficient extent to deserve attention. The most serious difficulty attending this stream is the numerous obstructions to be found in it, in the form of snags and collected drifts of wood. The sum of fifty thousand dollars, it is supposed, would be sufficient to remove these, and make it safe for navigation.

Having embraced the second head in the views presented upon the first, we now proceed to the consideration of the third, which is "the probable quantity, quality, and value of land belonging to the United States, which will be reclaimed by such works."

We have already remarked that any estimate of the inundated lands must be imperfect. No surveys having ever been made, it is impossible that we can arrive at anything like certainty on this head. We are of opinion, however, from the general information which we have been able to collect on the subject, that we can sufficiently approximate the real quantity, to show that Congress may safely undertake a work of so much importance.

The aggregate quantity of inundated lands on the Mississippi, according to the estimates here presented, is 23,469,260 acres; to ascertain how much of this belongs to the United States, the amount owned by individuals should be deducted, which cannot be said, upon a fair calculation, to exceed one million. Although we are inclined to think actual surveys would show that we are not very far wrong in the aggregate calculation just submitted, yet, for the purpose of bringing our estimate within limits which no reflecting mind can controvert, we will deduct one half, upon the supposition that the calculation is too great, and on the conviction that a considerable quantity of these inundated lands will prove to be, upon experiment, wholly irreclaimable. This will leave the quantity of 11,234,630 acres of land that can be redeemed from its present worthless state.

The quality of this land is the finest on the habitable globe; the rich and fertile lands of the Nile do not excel it; and if we take into view its great extent, the variety of climate, and the great variety of staple articles which it may produce, we may safely say that there is not an equal extent of land in the known world that can vie with it for fertility of soil and the variety of its productions. Extending from the northern line of the State of Missouri to the southern extremity of Louisiana, every species of produce which can be raised within this range of latitude will be the rich return of the farmer and the planter. It is the opinion of your committee that the United States do not own any lands as valuable as these would be, if reclaimed, independently of the fertility of the soil, their contiguity to the Mississippi river, and adaptation to such a variety of important staples, give them a value that can scarcely be properly estimated. Wheat, hemp, tobacco, cotton, sugar, rice, and indigo, are the principal of these staples, and will abundantly repay the farmer and planter for his industry and labor. As the importance of the commodity enhances the value of the land, and as the most important articles to commerce and manufactures are exclusively produced on such lands as these, your committee do not hesitate to fix the minimum value of these lands at five dollars per acre. According to this computation, the quantity which we have assumed as entirely practicable to reclaim will bring the sum of $56,173,150; the whole cost of reclaiming, according to the calculations submitted, will amount to the sum of $2,267,000, an amount which your committee are willing to double, as being altogether sufficient to cover every expense that may be necessary for the completion of the work; this will leave a balance in favor of the government of $51,343,000. But, on considering every circumstance connected with these lands, your committee are willing to express it as their opinion that they will bring to the government a net amount of at least a hundred millions, when put up at public auction.

4. "The probable effect upon the health of the country in which such works may be constructed."

On this point there can be no doubt of an effect of the most salutary character. All concur in the fact that swamps, and marshes, and stagnant pools, are the fruitful sources of disease; the poisonous miasmata which are evolved in the course of decomposition from vegetable matter in such places generate diseases of the most acute and fatal character. This not only keeps back the improvement of the surrounding country, but in fact deters people from making settlements on land contiguous to such seats of disease and death. For these reasons, large bodies of land, of a valuable and desirable character, lying adjacent to the swamp and inundated lands, have never been taken up, which should enter into the calculations that have been made. It has been remarked, by close and attentive observers, living in the neighborhood of the Big swamp, in the State of Missouri, that sickness exists to the greatest extent in the direction of the prevailing winds, clearly showing its true cause.

5. "The probable advantages and disadvantages of such works respectively, and the effect which they will likely have upon the general prosperity of the country."

Your committee are not aware that any disadvantages can possibly arise from the construction of such works to individuals, the community at large, or to the general government. On the contrary, the effect will be, in every particular, of the most beneficial character. The land subject to inundation is, perhaps, more valuable from the extraordinary and inexhaustible qualities of its soil, than from the extent of its superficial area. For there is not a doubt, that as long as the Mississippi rolls the mighty volumes of its turbid and angry waters into the gulf of Mexico, the soil of these lands will be as fresh and vigorous as the day when the enterprise of man made the first stroke to subdue it from its natural rudeness, and subject it to all the various arts of cultivation and improvement. With such facilities as would belong to them, if reclaimed, who can say what point will be the extent of the improvement, the wealth, the greatness, and the power of this portion of our country? The brightest picture which fancy can paint of its condition, will scarcely be an insight into its future destinies. The Mississippi, instead of being lined with swamps and stagnant waters, presenting a dreary and desolate waste, the loathsome abode of reptiles, and the fruitful source of certain disease, will be thronged with a busy and active population, with their farms, their villages, and their cities, indenting its borders in every direction that the eye may range. The St. François, White river, the Arkansas, the Red river, and other tributaries, the existing obstructions being removed, and the necessary embankments constructed, will present a new and interesting spectacle. Population will flow into and fill up a space which now defies the courage of man to occupy. The desert will be converted into fruitful fields. New channels of commerce will spring up; trade will be extended; the agriculturist will be stimulated to fresh exertions by the exciting causes around him; the resources of the country, which insuperable barriers to individual enterprise have kept hid, will be exploded; the elastic power of man in the avocations of social life will be extended to its utmost capacity, and the country rewarded with the most happy results affecting the moral, intellectual, and political condition of society. In surveying the extensive range of the valley of the Mississippi, and contemplating its future destiny, we cannot but have reference to the facts here set forth in miniature, and to those salient principles in every active and intellectual community which contribute to its progressive improvement, as calculated to realize what may now seem to be the visions of fancy. If any should be skeptical on this head, let them look at the broad deep rivers intersecting it in every direction, its commercial facilities, its agricultural resources, its mineral wealth, sweeping within its immense range every variety of growth peculiar to its climate, from the gorges of the Alleghany, and the frozen regions of the Rocky mountains, to the burning sands on the delta of the Mississippi, each section of the country becoming alternately, in the course of their intercommunication, the suppliers and the consumers to the other, and they may have some faint outline of the boundless capacities and striking tendencies of which we have been speaking.

Your committee, therefore, deeply impressed with the importance of this subject, must be excused for earnestly pressing upon the House the prompt and speedy action in the proposed work. Other considerations than those of mere interest to itself, demand this at the hands of the government. The government is the proprietor of the soil. No steps can be taken toward the accomplishment of this object, unless she shall undertake it herself, or abandon her interest to others who will do so. The government is certainly bound by every obligation which can subsist between itself and the citizens of the country, to do everything calculated to benefit the people and ameliorate their condition. The prevailing sickness which attends a contiguity to these swamps and inundated lands, can be almost wholly prevented by removing its palpable causes. The government is fully able to do this, without the possible chance of injury resulting to herself. Besides this consideration, a no less imperious duty devolves upon it, to redeem from waste and worthlessness a portion of our country, which every reasonable calculation justifies us in saying, can be rendered equal to the finest parts of the habitable globe. In a word, where such great advantages are likely to be the consequences, the government is bound by the most solemn obligations which can enter into the relations of life; if for no other cause, for the sake of its own honor and character, to undertake the projected works. But should the apprehensions exist, that the grounds here assumed are fallacious, and that the danger of involving itself in immense expenses is too great for the probability of permanent advantages that might result to the country from such schemes, and the government should, therefore, decline undertaking the proposed works, your committee, without hesitation, would recommend that these lands be given to the States respectively, or the Territory in which they lie, with an express agreement on their part, that they shall do it. The spirit of enterprise which prevails so extensively in the States, would very soon entitle them to the distinguished honor of accomplishing a work which an overreaching prudence, on the part of the general government, had caused it to lose. If, however, this last suggestion should not be approved of, your committee would venture to indicate another mode. These lands have not been surveyed, and a great portion never can be, without first constructing, to some extent, works of this character. If the government will not engage in it, nor will not give them to the States, that they may do it, then let them be sold to the States in which they may be situated, for such a price as, under all the circumstances, they may be worth. The price that might be exacted, should certainly be very far below the present minimum price of the public lands. These suggestions have been prompted, on the part of your committtee, from the thorough conviction which they feel, that it is due to the honor of the government, and to the States in which these lands are situated, to the health of the people, and the general prosperity of the country, that the most practicable plan, and one which the government might feel was most congenial to her own interests, should be speedily adopted for the accomplishment of a work which, in point of magnificence in its extent and general utility, has not a parallel in the records of any age or nation.

Your committee would refer to the report made to the Senate on this subject by Mr. Livingston, in January, 1830, and beg leave that said report may be appended to this. Your committee, for much of the information here attempted to be given, would refer to the letters of Wm. G. Bozeman, Allen Martin, T. B. Martin, John Rodney, and H. T. Williams, contained in the report of the Secretary of the Treasury, made to the House of Representatives, December 16, 1835.

Your committee, therefore, feeling confident of the practicability of the proposed work to a great extent, have adopted and report to the House, a resolution:

Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War be and he is hereby directed to be caused to be surveyed, by a sufficient number of competent engineers, the inundated lands on the Mississippi river, the Missouri, the St. François, the Arkansas, and Red river, and that he report to Congress as soon as the same is done, the practicability of reclaiming the same, and removing the obstructions from said rivers; the best mode of doing the same; the amount of money which it will cost to accomplish it; the quantity, quality, and estimated value, of the lands that may be so reclaimed; and the effects which such works may have upon the health and prosperity of the country.

IN SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, January 12, 1830.

The Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred a resolution of the Senate, directing them to inquire whether justice, and the interest of the United States, do not require that provision should be made by law, for constructing embankments and bridges, and making roads, on the lands belonging to the United States, in the State of Louisiana, reported:

That the United States own large tracts of land, situated on the banks of the Mississippi, or those of seve ral of its outlets into the lakes and the sea, and on the water courses called bayous, in that State: that all these lands are subject to be inundated by the annual rise of the Mississippi, until they shall be protected by a levee or embankment; and, until that work is performed, will be of little or no value.

That such embankment is not only necessary to give value to the lands on which it is erected, but also to protect the adjoining plantations from inundation, and their proprietors, in many instances, from the loss of their crops, and consequent ruin.

That every individual owning land so situated, is obliged, under very heavy penalties, to make the levee in front of his land, and keep it in repair, on account of the great injury that would result to the community, from a breach being made in any part of it. That each grantee of land, under the successive governments of France and Spain, in Louisiana, was also obliged to make and keep in repair a road, of forty feet wide, across the front of his plantation, and make and sustain bridges over the ditches, necessary for carrying off the water that leaked through the levee: all these being matters of the utmost consequence to the whole settlement, were ordered to be performed under heavy fines and forfeitures; and have always been placed under the care of a vigilant police, created for that purpose. When the lands were not granted, and the making of the levee was expensive, it was done, under the Spanish government, at the expense of the crown.

Since the change of government, no provision has been made for this purpose by the United States. They own the lands, but are subject to none of the burdens that are imposed on individuals for its improvement, or to prevent its becoming the means of ruin to the adjoining planters: they pay no taxes, and their property is increased in value, solely at the expense of the State, which has no interest in the lands, or of individuals, less able to bear it; or, if this is not done, the lands remain unimproved, and injure the value of those which have previously been granted.

Under the circumstances, the committee think, in answer to the inquiry they have been directed to make, that both "justice and the interest of the United States require, that provision should be made by law for making embankments, roads, and bridges, on the lands owned by the United States, in the State of Louisiana;" for which purpose they report a bill.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1505. [1ST SESSION.

ON CLAIMS TO LAND IN LOUISIANA AND ARKANSAS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 12, 1836.

Mr. HUNTSMAN, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to which has been referred the memorials and documents, &c. pertaining to the claims of the Baron de Bastrop, Marquis Maison Rouge, and others, in Louisiana, and the claims of Elisha, William, and Gabriel Winters, in Arkansas, together with the memorial from the legislature of Louisiana, all praying that some speedy action may be taken by Congress to effect an adjustment and final settlement of those claims; also, a bill from the Senate, submitting the various questions growing out of those claims to a judicial investigation, reported:

That from the magnitude of the claims, (which amount to millions of acres,) the great value of the property in controversy, (not less than ten millions of dollars,) the deep interest the United States have in the public domain, the great solicitude which the State of Louisiana must necessarily feel in the speedy determination of this question, the continued applications to Congress, for upward of twenty years, to appoint some tribunal before which those claims could be adjudicated on the one side, together with the various allegations of fraud, corruption, and want of fulfilment of the conditions attached to those grants on the other, have all received a due portion of the consideration of the committee. They have also examined various reports, which, from time to time, have been made in Congress, by committees in both branches of the national legislature, with the reasons and conclusions drawn therefrom, and which would be too voluminous to embody in a report at this session of Congress, but will be referred to by the committee, designating the book, date, and No. of document, &c., so that an easy reference thereto may be had by those who are desirous of a more minute investigation of the subject-matter, than can possibly be comprised in a report of ordinary length, and without consuming more time than would be safe to risk at so late a period of this session, with a view to have the action of Congress thereupon. Those references will be appended to this report. The committee consider it to be vastly important to all parties concerned that the action of Congress should be had at this session upon this subject. Some of the reasons which have influenced the committee to this opinion are based upon facts which will be submitted to the consideration of the House.

First. The State of Louisiana, (in the limits of which most of those large grants are said to be located) has been crippled in her energies, paralyzed in her wealth and resources, and greatly restrained in her population and political power; and, furthermore, she has been arrested in her progress, and thrown far behind many of her sister States, in the construction of those valuable works of internal improvement which would benefit that country so peculiarly. All this has been produced by the circumstance, that a considerable portion of the surface of the State is covered by those unsettled titles, so that purchasers or emigrants could not know of whom to buy or take title from. Notwithstanding a large portion of this land is most admirably adapted to the cultivation of cotton, the great staple commodity of the American market, and the yet more important article of home consumption, (sugar) which enters so deeply into the comfort, and constitutes so essential a part of the necessaries of life, in every man's family, still all this wealth and luxury is entirely lost, by reason of the uninhabited state of the country; and this state of things will so remain as long as those claims are unsettled. They will always act like an incubus, pressing upon the energies of the State and its population.

The opinion is entertained by the committee that Louisiana has a just right to claim of the general government a prompt and speedy disposition of this question.

Second. Congress has been perpetually harassed, for upward of twenty years, by the claimants, praying for the adoption of some mode, or the establishment of some tribunal, for the final determination of this question, and the settlement of those titles. Every succeeding year brings forth new and additional applicants, produced by the circumstance of speculators and companies, in various States of the Union, becoming interested by purchase in those grants, as well as by the multiplication of the heirs of some of the original grantees. By these and other causes, the claimants are becoming more imposing from their wealth, numbers, and influence, yearly. And it is believed by the committee that the longer the question is postponed the more formidable they will be, and the more incessant will be their applications to Congress upon this subject.

Furthermore: if those claims, or any of them, are fraudulent, void, or voidable, there is much more danger that the interest of the United States will suffer by delay, than that of the claimants. Near forty years has passed away since the origin of those claims. Many of the witnesses, who might have given valuable testimony, are dead and gone. The hand of time must press heavily upon those surviving. Some valuable documents, it is believed, have already been abstracted, which would have been useful in the elucidation of the questions arising in these claims, and others have been substituted in their stead (perhaps spurious). If these suppositions be well founded, the longer the adjustment of these titles are delayed, the more difficult will be the proof to establish these facts, as time must sweep away the witnesses daily.

Third. If there is justice in those claims, or any of them, then the parties interested therein have an unquestionable right to that great and fundamental principle of government, which is the pride and boast of an American, that private property shall be secured, and justice shall be administered, without sale, delay, or denial.

The laws and constitution have already opened one channel for the relief of all similarly situated to the claimants, namely, a resort to the courts of justice as now organized. The claimants pray that Congress may open another for their especial benefit. There are three modes presented for Congress to pursue, namely:

First, To leave the parties to whatever remedies that can be allowed in the courts of justice, as they are at present organized;

Second, To order those lands into market, under the rules and regulations which govern the land offices in regard to the public domain, generally, and thereby declare (virtually) those grants or claims void: or,

Third, To establish a tribunal as prayed for, under such modifications as Congress may think proper.

It is not considered necessary to discuss this first proposition, as it has been long open to the claimants, if it had been considered judicious by them to have selected it.

The last two propositions will be noticed in the order that they have been presented.

The famous Yazoo question, when the legislative power acted upon its own responsibility, and, it is believed, usurped the powers of the judicial department of the government, has been a theme of much legal commentary among the jurists of our country, and a subject of sober reflection with the politicians of the present generation. Notwithstanding the belief is almost universal, that frauds and bribery of the most enormous and flagitious character prevailed in the Yazoo purchase, and without which it could not have been accomplished; yet the sense of mankind has been opposed to the power and the process by which that corrupt speculation was destroyed In all constitutional propriety the same ends should have been accomplished through the judicial department, which it is considered was the fit and appropriate organ by which the same ends could have been attained.

If Congress should act upon the supposition that there is no constitutional objection to a settlement of this question in the National Legislature, yet the committee think it very questionable if justice would be administered there so certainly as in the judicial tribunals. If there should be no party excitement, interested interference, or improper management in passing or defeating the claims, there would be, notwithstanding, many other and extrinsic causes which will have an operating influence upon the minds of the members, to such an extent as to prevent that cool and dispassionate inquiry which would be so essential in arriving at correct conclusions upon a subject so complicated. The want of a thorough acquaintance with the laws, ordinances, usages, and customs of Spain, in relation to her public domain, at the time of the emanation of those claims; the weight of business which is frequently thrown upon the representative by his own constituents; the superior claims upon his time and attention in the consideration of subjects of much higher national importance, which are often presented for the action of Congress, all conspire to make the Congress of the United States a very unsafe tribunal for the determination of such questions. The committee are of opinion that the peculiar adaptation of the judiciary department for the investigation of such subjects, was early foreseen and carefully provided for, in the structure and organization of the government, and they recommend that mode, under specified limitations, accordingly. The committee have been informed, and believe, that in the western district of Louisiana, suits have long since been commenced by the claimants, and are yet pending, against the settlers, who claim adversely to those grants, some of whom claim under the United States, and some under other titles. No reasons have been furnished to the committee why the claimants have not prosecuted these suits to judgment. There are also adverse claims and settlers within the boundaries of some other of the Spanish grants, and particularly in those claimed by Elisha, William, and Gabriel Winters, where there are some settlers by purchase of lands of the United States, which might have enabled the parties to commence suits long since if they had been so disposed.

It is deemed important to notice this fact in two points of view. If those claimants rely upon Congress to provide a tribunal for the trial of these causes, and pay the expenses of its establishment, to try titles for them, it surely is reasonable that this shall be done under such regulations, restrictions, and limitations of power, as to produce no injustice or injury to the United States, or the settlers on the lands. If the claimants have quietly stood by and permitted others to settle down and acquire titles within the limits of those grants, without commencing suit in a reasonable time against them, it is submitted to the sound discretion of Congress how far she would lend her aid in turning those settlers out of possession, without imposing upon the claimants terms that would be just and equitable, in the event that those grants, or any of them, should, upon investigation, be deemed valid.

Second. If the claimant or claimants under Bastrop and Maison Rouge grants, or, in fact, under any others similarly situated, cannot get along in the investigation of their titles, or the establishment of their rights, without the aid and assistance of Congress in their behalf, surely Congress has the right, in extending this relief, to exercise such a cautious hand as not to prejudice her own interests or those of the settlers within the boundaries of those claims, but to adopt such a course in the establishment of a tribunal as will insure substantial justice to all parties interested or concerned therein.

If the claimants choose to abandon the suits already commenced, or have refrained from commencing suits when it was in their power to do so, and now pray that the Congress of the United States may establish such a tribunal for their benefit, and to which their claims may be submitted for adjudication, then the committee will insist that it is not only the duty of Congress to prescribe such rules, regulations, and prescriptions, for the government of this tribunal, but to add limitations to its powers, not only in the modus operandi, but upon the subject which it may be called upon to act. And if the claimant or claimants shall not be content to submit to the restrictions and limitations of power prescribed by Congress, then they are at full liberty to decline the acceptance thereof, and resort to the courts of justice established by the constitution and laws already in force and use. This tribunal should be invested with full power (after full investigation) to decree those grants or concessions good, bad, void, or voidable, either in the whole or in part, as substantial equity between the parties would dictate, and the facts in the respective cases would point out as proper for such a decree.

The committee have been informed, and verily believe, that many persons of high standing, influential stations, and character, have become deeply interested in those claims. And that the cities of New Orleans and Philadelphia, by the last will and testament of the late Stephen Girard, deceased, have become legatees to a large interest therein. And that the most distinguished lawyers in Louisiana and other places have already been retained for the claimant or claimants.

From these and other circumstances the belief is entertained, that if it becomes necessary for the court, before whom said causes may be tried, to impanel a jury to ascertain any fact or facts disputed by the parties, that the United States could scarcely expect to get a fair and impartial trial in the city of New Orleans, which is so deeply interested in the subject-matter of controversy; and that said cause or causes ought to be tried in some adjoining State or Territory, free from those influences. This practice is prevalent and common in many of the western States, where controversies in respect to landed property are of frequent occurrence. If interest or undue influence, prejudices or partialities, for or against a particular title, is sufficiently great to obstruct the channels of justice, State regulations have enabled the party or parties likely to be injured by this undue influence, to remove the cause so situated to some adjoining district or county, where those influences did not exist.

As this practice has often been adopted in the western States with great advantage, the committee can perceive no reason why it may not apply to States in the federal courts, under similar rules to those where causes are removed from one section of the country to another in State courts. The committee will especially invite the attention of the members of the House of Representatives to document No. 50, printed on the 7th of January, 1836, at the instance of Mr. Garland, of Louisiana, and laid upon the table of the members. It has superseded the necessity of making a minute and extended report of the facts pertaining to Bastrop and Maison Rouge's claim, because the report of the board of commissioners, appointed for that purpose, and the report of a former committee of this house, both embodied in document No. 50, have presented the facts with such force and ability as to leave nothing for the present committee to do upon that part of the case.

The committee have drawn up a bill embracing the points and principles presented in this report. If the claimants shall elect to commence suits, and submit to the rules, regulations, restrictions, and limitations, embodied in said bill, a sincere belief is entertained, that substantial justice can be administered to all parties concerned. If they or any of them, however, shall not choose to submit their claims to said courts, under the rules, &c., aforesaid, then they have lost no rights, but may proceed to the investigation of their claims in the courts of justice, as now constituted, without the extraordinary aid of Congress in their behalf.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1506. [1ST SESSION.

APPLICATION OF MARYLAND FOR THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE PROCEEDS OF THE SALES OF THE PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, APRIL 12, 1836.

By the House of Delegates, April 1, 1836.

Resolved, by the general assembly of Maryland, That each of the United States has an equal right, in its just proportion, to participate in the benefits of the public lands, the common property of the Union.

Resolved, That the senators and representatives of this State, in the Congress of the United States, be requested to use their exertions to procure the passage of a law to appropriate to the use of the different States of the Union, such part of the proceeds of the public lands of the United States as may be equitable and just, and in accordance with the public interest.

Resolved, That his excellency the governor be requested to communicate a copy of the aforesaid resolutions to each of the senators and representatives of this State, in the Congress of the United States.

By order:

GEO. G. BREWER, Clerk.

By the Senate, April 2, 1836.

Read, and assented to.

By order:

JOS. H. NICHOLSON, Clerk.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1507. [1ST SESSION.

RELATIVE TO FRAUDS UNDER THE PRE-EMPTION LAWS, AND THE EFFECT OF SAID LAWS UPON THE SALE OF THE PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 14, 1836.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 13, 1836.

SIR: In compliance with a resolution of the House of Representatives, bearing date the 11th day of February last, I have the honor to submit a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, accompanied by certain documents therein referred to, in answer to the several inquiries embraced in the resolution.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. SPEAKER of the House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, April 11, 1836.

SIR: Pursuant to your requisition, in referring to me the resolutions of the House of Representatives of the 11th of February last, requiring "that the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to communicate to this House any information in his possession of frauds or fraudulent practices, under the existing pre-emption law; and that he also inform the House what has been the effect of the pre-emption laws now in force, or heretofore passed, upon the sales of the public lands, and upon that branch of the public revenue;

"Also, the quantity of land entered or purchased in the State of Louisiana, under the pre-emption law approved the nineteenth of June, 1834, designating the quantity entered or purchased in each land district, and the quantity entered as floats in each district, under the second section of the pre-emption law, approved May 29, 1830, revived by the pre-emption law of June 19, 1834; together with copies of all documents and papers on file in the department, relating to the official conduct of the late register of the land office and receiver of public moneys at Opelousas, in the aforesaid State, or either of them; also, copies of all letters written by the late Commissioner of the General Land Office, and Gideon Fitz, esq., formerly register of the land office at Mount Salus, or Clinton, in the State of Mississippi, upon the subject of allowing pre-emptions or floats, under the second section of the pre-emption law, approved May 29, 1830; together with copies of all the instructions that have been given to the registers of land offices and receivers of public moneys, for their government in executing the pre-emption laws of 29th May, 1830, and the 19th of June, 1834;

"Also, that he communicate to the House any information in his possession respecting combinations of persons, by force or otherwise to prevent or obstruct the sale of the public land, either at public sale or private entry;"

I have the honor to report, that the written information, in possession of the General Land Office, of fraudulent practices to obtain the advantages of the pre-emption laws, is principally set forth in the printed document No. 125, of the first session of the 24th Congress, printed by order of the House of Representatives, which I beg leave to make a part of this report, and to add such further written communications on this topic as may be found in the copies marked A, B, and C, herewith transmitted. The oral information received on this subject consists, for the most part, of public rumor, credited and uncontradicted, without the specification and proof necessary to give it a shape for official action, as I had the honor of representing to you in my report, comprised in the document above referred to.

This office possesses no data whereby to estimate with tolerable accuracy how far the sales of public lands have been affected, in respect to quantity, by the pre-emption act of 19th of June, 1834. Considering the great demand for land within the last two years, it remains to be shown that a greater number of acres has been disposed of in that period in consequence of the privilege it confers. It is quite impossible to estimate with satisfactory accuracy the effect that has been produced on this branch of the revenue by allowing (to those who have, and pretend to, a right of preference) the choice, at the lowest rate, of distinguished sites for towns, and their vicinities, the best mill-sites, and the finest farming lands, including those so highly prized for the culture of cotton.

The General Land Office has no certain data for a just calculation of the amount which the Treasury has been prevented from receiving by the operation of this law; but considering the many tens of thousands of claims that have arisen under it, and the prevailing desire, in the meanwhile, to vest money in public land, the conclusion seems fair that the selected spots would have been sold for a price proportioned to their excellence, if no such law, nor any improper conspiracy, had existed. The estimate of three millions of dollars, which I had the honor to submit to you on the 28th of January last, appears to me now to underrate, much rather than magnify, the difference between the receipts for pre-emption concessions, and the sum the same lands would have brought into the Treasury had no impediment laid in the way of full and free competition for the purchase.

It is but just, however, to observe, that the revenue from public lands has not been impaired by pre-emptions alone, and I may be allowed to remark, in this place, that the information, on the subject of the last resolution referred to me, consists of what common fame represents as avowed and notorious, to wit: that the public sales are attended by combinations of two kinds, interested in keeping bids down to the minimum: the one composed of those who have, and those who pretend to, a right of preference, and resort to intimidation by threats and actual violence, as exemplified most particularly at the public sales at Chicago, in June, 1835, when and where the controlling party is represented to have effectually prevented those from bidding who were not acceptable to themselves; the other description formed of persons associated to frustrate the views of individuals desirous of purchasing, who refuse to join their coalition or submit to their dictation, by compelling the recusants to forego their intended purchases, or give more than the market value of the lands. With the papers marked A, B, and C, heretofore referrrd to, are copies of letters found in the files, relating to this kind of conspiracy, which the penal enactments of the law of 31st March, 1830, have not hitherto operated to repress, in the least, so far as I have been informed.

I have the honor, in compliance with the second resolution, to annex a table, marked D, showing, as well as the records of the General Land Office permit, the quantities of land entered under the pre-emption laws, within certain periods, in three districts of Louisiana, distinguishing, so far as the returns enable the officer to discriminate, those entered under the provisions for that sort of claims vulgarly called "floats;" and also to transmit copies, in pursuance of that resolution, of all documents and papers on file in this office relating to the official conduct of the late register and receiver at Opelousas, which will be found in the letter of Benjamin F. Linton, United States District Attorney, and in an extract of a letter from ——— Morgan, in the document No. 125, before referred to.

The copies marked E will show all the correspondence which has taken place between the General Land Office and Gideon Fitz, late register of the land office at Mount Salus, or Clinton, relative to allowing pre emptions or "floats" under the act of 29th May, 1830.

The printed documents herewith transmitted, marked F, are copies of the instructions which have emanated from this office to the different registers and receivers of the district land offices in relation to the execution of the pre-emption laws.

I have the honor to be, sir, with great respect, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Document No. 125, referred to in the foregoing.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 26, 1836.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose a communication from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, on the subject to which your letter of the 16th instant relates; and to inform you that the documents referred to in the commissioner's letter will be transmitted as soon as they are prepared.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. A. G. HARRISON, of the Committee on Public Lands, H. R.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 28, 1836.

SIR: You have been pleased to refer to me a letter from the Hon. A. G. Harrison, accompanied by a resolution of the Committee on the Public Lands, the letter advising you that a bill granting pre-emption to actual settlers, then before the committee, had been drawn with an eye particularly directed to the frauds alleged to have been committed, and expressing that the great desire of the committee, to adopt such provisions as will prevent the future possibility of such frauds, had led to the communication, believing that you may have it in your power to give additional light on the subject. The resolution of the committee aforesaid being in these words: Resolved, That the resolution of the House, instructing the committee "to inquire into the expediency of modifying the different acts of Congress, granting pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands, so as to protect the rights of settlers, and prevent frauds against the United States," be referred to the Secretary of the Treasury; and that he be requested to furnish the committee with the best plan which occurs to him, of securing the right of pre-emption to actual settlers, and of preventing said frauds." I have attentively considered the said letter and resolution, and have the honor to report:

The Committee on the Public Lands apply to you, sir, for "all the information in your department, concerning the alleged frauds."

Most of the knowledge possessed by the General Land Office, concerning frauds practised in relation to pre-emptions, of which I am now able to speak, consists of uncontradicted reports, in general currency and credit; of oral communications to me, and letters to me and others, from persons in high standing; most of the writers either requesting that their names may not be published, or not giving authority for such publication. The terms of these communications are rarely sufficiently specific and tangible to fix peculiar instances, except in the cases of interested correspondents; some of whose representations have been verified, others not; while want of time and opportunity has delayed an investigation of the greater part of this last class.

The requisition of the committee above-mentioned is sufficiently comprehensive in terms to include every case and its circumstances as well as the general representations that have reached this office. I must take the liberty to observe, that a literal compliance with the requisition cannot be speedily yielded. It would render the report very voluminous, and require to search the files of an immense correspondence, and the investigation of many tens of thousands of pre-emption cases reported, which we have not yet been able to take up for examination. To particularize every exceptionable case, even of those that have attracted attention since the act of 1834 has been in operation, would require more time in the revision and narration, than would seem to comport with the desire of the committee to act soon upon the bill alluded to by Mr. Harrison; and, therefore, with your permission, I will confine myself, on this occasion, to the imputations currently believed, and general heads of impositions attempted and practised, which have been detected in some of the contested cases examined, or which common fame has represented as having been but too common in some quarters; and without comment on the conspicuous cases of the military reservation at Chicago, and the missionary stations in Mississippi, I proceed to remark that the loudest and most numerous complaints, arising from the pre-emption policy, that have reached the General Land Office, have been against the alleged abuse of the privilege commonly called floating claims. Some who claim to be the bonafide cultivators and occupiers under the act of 1834, complain of being vexed and disturbed by these "floats." A more numerous class, not comprised in the provisions of the act, are said not to be less clamorous because the floats have been lawfully located on their chosen spots; but chiefly the virtuous and patriotic citizens of Louisiana have been disgusted and alarmed by the extent to which fraud and perjury are asserted to have been carried, in the manufacture of such claims within that interesting State, threatening to cover a large portion of the most valuable lands that have been surveyed. These representations are made by individuals in highly respectable standing, besides our own officers; and it is said, on credible authority, that preparations appear to be making, in hopes of a pre-emption act at this session of Congress, to acquire at a minimum cost a great part of the precious lands on Red river. No particular instance of these practices has been indicated to me, but the opinion is prevalent that they are transacted. It is believed that the number of bonafide pre-emptions in Louisiana is comparatively small, as information derived from persons distinguished by public confidence in that State, represents a belief that a claim to pre-emption was not often heard of on the island of New Orleans, nor west of the Mississippi, before this multiplication of "floats" was devised to be laid on the finest vacant lands.

This iniquitous scheme appears to be of late date in that region, as the first intelligence of it seems to have been communicated to the General Land Office, some time after it was placed in my charge. Agreeably to your direction, sir, circumspection and vigilance were recommended to the land officers in Louisiana, in order to guard against imposition; and I ventured to direct the surveyor general to retain the plats in his hands, which were destined for the land offices, until further orders. Other steps have recently been taken at this office, to put in train a rigorous scrutiny into the legitimacy of the floating pretensions in that State. Letters, and copies of letters, on this subject, Nos.— to — are herewith transmitted. Contrivances have been brought to light in other places, showing where a family occupying the same tenement, where father and son, and mother and son, dwelling together, have set up the pretence of separate cultivation and occupancy, to divide a quarter-section, and obtain a float for each half.

Claimants of another reprehensible description are they whose pretensions are founded on depositions in general terms, or wearing the appearance of being artfully worded, admitting a subterfuge in the attempt to give a legal coloring to their proceedings, by construing the statute to suit their purposes. The law, as its title imports, is in favor of settlers; but pretensions have been set up by persons dwelling in town with their families, and there following mercantile or other pursuits, while they caused a little show of improvement, that scarcely deserved the name, to be made for them by others; no proof being produced of their personal superintendence or direction on the spot. Cultivation by slaves or hirelings in 1833, and one or the other, or a growing crop on the place on the following 19th of June, have been assumed as fulfilling the required conditions.

Among the pretences to cultivation, there have been disclosures as follows, viz.: where the cutting and burning a small patch of cane; where an enclosure, not entitled to be called a fence, around a space only large enough for a very small garden, and the planting of a few culinary vegetables: and where scattering an undefined quantity of turnip or grass seeds, and in one case, planting a few turnips or onions, have been claimed as cultivation, to meet this condition. Further remark upon constructive possession may be dispensed with.

The registers and receivers are made judges of the credibility and sufficiency of the proof, except in contested cases, which are required to be sent to the Commissioner for decision. My predecessor ordered the evidence in every case to be forwarded; but during near five months of my superintendence, it has been quite impossible to scrutinize the proof in about sixteen hundred of the former class, without neglecting duties that appeared more pressing and imperative. In those examined, contradictions, prevarications, and other circumstances, have occasionally placed parties and witnesses in no favorable point of view. In the contested class, the land officers must be presumed, prima facie, to have acted correctly. If honest, they would not knowingly pass a fraudulent claim; if conniving, they will hardly be expected to expose themselves voluntarily. The necessary quantum of evidence can hardly be prescribed, the same proof being more or less convincing to different persons.

The bill mentioned by Mr. Harrison as having for subject the granting of pre-emptions to actual settlers, and to prevent the future possibility of such frauds as are alleged to have been committed, forms no part of your reference; and it would perhaps be improper to allude to it in this place, if the letter did not seem to indicate an intention on the part of the writer, and of the committee to which he belongs, to extend the grants of pre-emption to others than those who come within the provisions of the act of 1834. Believing such a disposition to be implied, and that a new law to that effect will go far to form the pre-emption policy into a durable system, involving considerations of great importance to the Treasury, and materially affecting the land establishments under my particular charge, I hope it will not be considered officious or impertinent to submit a few remarks, though not expressly called for, upon the hypothesis that such an extension of the pre-emption privilege is contemplated.

The pre-emption laws originated and bestowed rights, but recognized none in the settlers as previously existing. I conceive they have no other rights, in this respect, than what the law confers; and that the pre-emption privilege may be considered little else than a mere benevolence, enabling the adventurer to appropriate to himself the choicest lands, most valuable mill-sites, and localities for towns, at a vast cost to the public; or in other words, preventing the receipts of vast sums into the Treasury. It is confidently believed that these privileges, covering at least four millions of acres of land, joined with outrageous combinations to intimidate purchasers, and other unjustifiable confederacies, have diminished the receipts for public lands, in the year 1835, full three millions of dollars, at a moderate estimate, below what they would have brought in fair competition. If frauds in pre-emptions were unknown; if no one obtained a pre-emption but upon a faithful compliance with the conditions prescribed; still the selections of the most valuable lands, and most desirable situations, at the minimum price, would produce an effect upon the revenue too considerable to be overlooked by the financier. I should step out of my province, as Commissioner, by urging officially the questions, whether other considerations of public policy counterbalance this cost, or whether the settlers have extraordinary merits transcending this calculation, and accordingly abstain from the discussion.

If the propriety were conceded of making the pre-emption policy a part of our land system, there would be still no evident fitness in extending the concession to a full quarter-section of land. An allowance of half that quantity of the very best land is surely munificent; and if presumed poverty be one of the considerations for the grant, it may be observed that many a good farm in the west contains no more than an eighth of a section.

The committee request you, sir, to furnish them with the best plan which occurs to you of securing the right of pre-emption to actual settlers, and of preventing said frauds, viz.: against the United States.

In relation to the first branch of this request, I have to observe that the act of 1834, and the precautions already taken by the Commissioner, with the advice of the Secretary of the Treasury, appear to have provided sufficiently for the fair claimants, under the present law. The resolution is silent respecting the nature and extent of any future grants of this kind that may be contemplated; and the difficulty of devising a plan for their protection under such circumstances must be apparent.

The second part of the request presents a difficulty extraordinary. The temptation to abuse the charity of the legislature is so radically intermixed, and so inextricably interwoven, with the operation of the pre-emption laws, that I should despair of laying before you a plan altogether effectual for the prevention of fraud on the part of claimants. It seems to me a hopeless task to project any modification of existing enactments that shall silence perjury, and defeat the devices of sagacious speculators, so long as their ingenuity shall be sharpened and stimulated by the prospect of an immense gain attending their success. The conscientious will resort to no dishonest tricks, but the contagion of speculation is proverbial: and when an expectation may be entertained of obtaining, by indirection, for the lowest price, land worth from five to forty dollars per acre in the market, the inducement to perjury and fraudulent shifts will be too strong to be resisted, by many of weaker morality. A scheme of extreme liberality toward the settlers might diminish the number of fraudulent cases, by partially removing the motive to such practices; but I do not imagine any project to defeat them altogether, so long as there remain legal restrictions upon the invasion of the public property by unlicensed intruders, who, by a statue unrepealed, are considered as trespassers—liable to be prosecuted as such, and to be forcibly removed, at the discretion of the President, as has heretofore been done.

It will be seen in the preceding remarks, that protection of the rights bestowed by the pre-emption act of 1834, is considered to be well provided for by that act, and by the liberal construction it has received in instructions that have emanated under your sanction; and that similar provisions will suffice for similar cases, in future concessions of the pre-emption privilege.

The practices by which the United States have been most defrauded in claims of this nature, are believed to consist principally of the misstatements, or improper coloring of facts, and the evasions and prevarications of parties and witnesses. To obviate such iniquitous proceedings, it will be proper to provide a mode of subjecting the deponent to the test of a rigorous interrogation and cross-examination. I ask leave, however, to suggest that the interest of the Treasury seems to demand a guard against force as well as fraud. I allude to that system of terror that threatens the competitor for the purchase of public land with the vengeance of the settler with whose usurpation he may interfere. In some quarters, this state of things is become formidable: probably finding its origin, in a great measure, in the pre-emption laws, whose repeated enactment may have led the settlers to the erroneous persuasion, that they have acquired rights not given by law. Be this as it may, experience has shown, that by mutual support and open menace, they have succeeded in deterring others from bidding against them at the public sales, and it is evident that the prospect for the future is not less threatening. The injurious effect of the continuance of such acts upon the Treasury will be obvious to you.

Respectfully submitted. ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 4, 1836.

SIR: I enclose a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with certain documents referred to in his letter of the 28th ultimo, in answer to the inquiries made in your letter of the 14th ultimo.

I am, respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. A. G. HARRISON, of the Committee on the Public Lands, H. R.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 3, 1836.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith copies of certain documents, numbered 1 to 13 inclusive, on the subject of frauds and embarrassments consequent on the pre-emption law of the 19th of June, 1834, which could not be prepared in time to accompany my report to you of the 28th ultimo, and I request that you will have the goodness to regard them as connected with such report, and to dispose of them accordingly.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

WASHINGTON CITY, August 25, 1835.

To ANDREW JACKSON, President of the United States:

By an act of Congress, dated 29th of May, 1830, giving to actual settlers and occupants on the public domain the right of pre-emption, according to the requisites stated in said act, and by subsequent acts continuing in force the act of 1830, a new era was introduced on the subject of land claims to the citizens of western Louisiana. Although the legislation of Congress on the subject of public lands is as mild and beneficent as any system on earth, since the government tolerates, in the first instance, a trespass in the citizen which subsequently perfects a title in himself; yet, amid this mild and merciful legislation, persons are found perverting the designs of these acts to selfish and corrupt purposes. I will call your attention to a part of these acts, in order more fully to understand my subsequent statement. By the act of Congress of 1830, where two persons live on the same quarter-section, cultivate and improve it, the register and receiver are required, upon due proof exhibited to their satisfaction, to divide the quarter-section between the occupants. Independent of this, the law accords to each of them what is called a pre-emption float of eighty acres each, to be located on any unappropriated lands of the government. It will be supposed for a moment that two pre-emption floats are located as required by law. The rights of the occupants on the first quarter-section, according to the construction of the law which prevailed at the land office at Opelousas, Louisiana, have not yet ceased. The moment they make the location of their pre-emption floats, they are entitled to what is called a back concession, which is the same quantity of land as the pre-emption float itself. These two occupants of a quarter-section have that quarter-section divided equally between them. They acquire by the accident of occupancy a right to 320 acres each.

In addition to this view of the question, if men were strictly honest, it would present no avenues for imposition, frauds, or perjuries. I regret to say, because I religiously believe, that the most shameful frauds, impositions, and perjuries, have been practised upon the land office at Opelousas, Louisiana. I make no imputation upon the official conduct of Mr. King, the late register at Opelousas, nor upon the present receiver; but from my statement it will appear that they must have been most grossly imposed upon, and should have put them more completely upon their guard, so as to have guarded themselves against the wiles of notorious land speculators. I will here mention a construction of the law, which was adopted by the officers at Opelousas, and most of the pre-emption floats have been admitted under that construction: two persons living on a quarter-section, or who pretend that they do, on lands not worth a cent an acre, men who can neither read nor write, men who have never seen a survey made, and know nothing about sections or quarter-sections of land, and who, in point of fact, live five, ten, and, in many instances, twenty miles apart, go before a justice of the peace, as ignorant as themselves, and swear to all the facts required by law to make their entry; this, too, in a section of country never surveyed by the authority of government, nor any competent officer thereof. Would it be believed that any officer of the government would admit an entry under circumstances like these, upon the oaths alone of the parties interested in making them, and upon lands not surveyed, approved, and returned by higher authority?

Can it be possible that an entry of that kind can either be in conformity with law, justice, or right? I state, of my own knowledge, that many of these pre-emption floats are precisely in the situation above detailed. I am authorized to name Colonel Robert A. Crane, of Louisiana, who states positively he knows many of them to be founded upon the same corrupt perjury, persons swearing that they lived on the same quarter-section, when, in truth and in fact, they never had lived so near each other as five miles. It is not believed that there are thirty honest pre-emption floats in the whole western district of Louisiana; and yet, since the first of January, 1835, up to the 27th of May, there have passed, at the land office at Opelousas, at least 350. And who are the owners of these floats principally? One, or not more than three speculators. Since the first of January, of this year, up to the 27th of May, day after day, week after week, I might say month after month, a notorious speculator, and who must have been known as such to the officers of the land office at Opelousas, was seen occupying that office to the almost total exclusion of everybody else. No other person appeared to understand how to get pre-emption floats through; and no one did succeed until an event, which will be stated below. He could be seen followed to and from the land office by crowds of free negroes, Indians, and Spaniards, and the very lowest dregs of society, in the counties of Opelousas and Rapides, with their affidavits already prepared by himself, and sworn to by them, before some justice of the peace, in some remote part of the country. These claims, to an immense extent, are presented and allowed; and upon what evidence? Simply upon the evidence of the parties themselves who desire to make the entry. And would it be believed, that the lands where these quarter-sections purported to be located, from the affidavit of the applicants, had never been surveyed by the government, nor any competent officer thereof, nor approved nor returned surveyed? I further state, that there was not even a private survey made. These facts I know; I have been in the office when the entries were made, and have examined the evidence, which was precisely what I have stated above. This state of things had gone on from the first of January until about the middle of April or first of May of the present year, when it was suddenly announced that a more rigid rule would thereafter be adopted; which was this: that a sworn deputy surveyor of the United States should, in all cases, make the survey, in order to ascertain if the parties were on the same quarter-section; and to testify before the register that such was the fact. Besides this, they required the applicants to produce very satisfactory evidence from their neighbors that they had cultivated and improved as stated in their notice. Pre-emption floats, when tested by this rule, were found to be very few indeed. Governments, like corporations, are considered without souls, and according to the code of some people's morality, should be swindled and cheated on every occasion. Whether such a distinction can be reconciled to either morality or law, one thing is certain, that equal protection and advantages are not afforded to all. I would further suggest to your excellency to withhold your signature from all patents when entries have been made, and consequent pre-emption floats have resulted, since the first of June, 1834, to the first of July, 1835; that James Ray, lately appointed register of the land office at Opelousas, Louisiana, and some other competent persons, be appointed a board of commissioners, to examine all the entries from which pre-emptions have resulted during the above period; that the said board of commissioners have the power to administer an oath to all persons who may appear before them desiring to make entries of land; that some qualified attorney be appointed to appear before the said commissioners to represent the interest of the government, to put cross-interrogatories to elicit the facts, whether true or false, in regard to the validity or illegality of the said claims; that this said board of commissioners shall, under the supervision of the said attorney, take down the evidence in each entry, with its consequent pre-emption floats; shall file the same with them; shall give their opinions upon each, respectively, in writing, with references to the evidence and law, and shall forward the same to the Commissioner of the General Land Office; that if said board, upon the examination of any pre-emption claims or floats, which hitherto have been allowed, are satisfied that they were passed upon the affidavit of the parties alone, without other and corroborating evidence, and if they are further satisfied that the land proposed to be entered has not been surveyed by a competent officer of the government, approved and returned to the Land Office, they shall unconditionally reject the said claims, with their consequent pre-emption floats. These suggestions are made, not with the belief that they may be adopted in the investigation that may be ordered, but simply with a hope that they might afford some aid in laying down the rules of that investigation. It may not prove so extensive a fraud, and show such gross impositions upon the officers of the government, and such glaring perjury, as did the Arkansas land speculation; yet the investigation will show enough of each to entitle this administration to the lasting gratitude and approbation of its friends in western Louisiana, as well as a majority of its political opponents.

I am, with great respect, sir, your obedient humble servant,

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, September 29, 1835.

SIR: I enclose you a copy of a communication addressed to the President of the United States, by B. F. Linton, esq., upon the subject of the pre-emption claims heretofore awarded at the land office at Opelousas. In consequence of that communication, all patents for pre-emption claims in your district will be suspended until the merits of the claims have been re-examined and fully investigated. This examination will be made in the first instance by yourself, in conjunction with the receiver; and I have to request that you will immediately upon the receipt of this, give public notice, and proceed anew to the examination of the claimants themselves, and of such witnesses in support of the claims as may present themselves before you for that purpose. Those claims which may be sustained by you will also be re-examined here, and those heretofore admitted which shall not be sustained upon your revision, will be regarded as definitely rejected. I enclose you a form of interrogatories calculated to elicit the truth in relation to the validity of each claim, which you will propound, together with such other questions as may be suggested to you by the peculiar circumstances developed in the examination of each particular case. As soon as the examination shall have been completed, I will thank you to forward a report, together with all the testimony, to this office, and have to request that in the admission of new cases the utmost caution may be observed, and the instructions with which you have been furnished strictly adhered to. While upon this subject, I deem it important to call your particular attention to one of the allegations of Mr. Linton, viz., that, in addition to the pre-emption granted by the act itself, the claimants have been permitted to enter a back pre-emption equal in quantity to the tract first granted: the act of 19th June, 1834, and that of the 29th May, 1830, which restrict the quantity of land to be acquired under their provisions to 160 acres, would of themselves preclude any such construction, and I am at a loss to conceive how the land officers could so far have misconceived the terms of the act of the 15th June, 1832, granting these back pre-emptions, as to have given to that act a prospective effect, when its provisions are specially restricted to those individuals who were then in possession under one of the descriptions of title stipulated by the act itself.

I am, &c. E. A. BROWN, Commissioner.

REGISTER at Opelousas.

Interrogatories to be propounded to the pre-emption claimants, and, with the necessary modifications, to the witnesses produced by them in support of their claims:

1. What is the description of the tract claimed by you?
2. Did you cultivate the tract described in 1833? If not, state what tract was cultivated by you in that year.
3. State the nature, extent, and manner of such cultivation.
4. Were you in possession of the tract claimed on the 19th of June, 1834?
5. Had you a dwelling-house upon the tract claimed, and were you residing therein, on the 19th of June, 1834? If not, state whether you resided upon public land, and describe the tract upon which you resided.
6. If you were not residing upon the tract claimed, in what did your possession consist?
7. Did any other person cultivate the tract claimed in 1833?
8. Was any other person in possession of the same on the 19th of June, 1834?
9. To what extent did he cultivate, and what was the manner of his possession?

Extract of a letter from —— Morgan to Henry H. Johnson, Esq., dated October 6, 1835.

"It is stated, and generally believed, and the receiver's books of public lands will show the fact of the case, if it is one, that spurious claims have covered all the Atchafalaya railroad, all the lands on the Granfete bayou, Maringin, Fordorche, Atchafalaya, Latanache bayous, something like one hundred and fifty-four miles in front, with one and a half miles deep, have been located within ninety days by different companies and different men. It may be that the law warrants such locations; there are many things make me believe there is something wrong. As to improvements, none were ever made on not over fifteen of all the one hundred and fifty or sixty miles front; and only a few surveyors and bears ever passed over them. If you believe the information worth the attention of the Patent or Land Office, you are at liberty to communicate the fact; the books, names, and surveys, can easily be examined. If the companies and individuals are acting correctly, this information can do them no harm; if incorrectly, they ought to be stopped at once. I write you this information, as there are big fish engaged in this traffic, though little ones do the business; how it is done, as yet I have not been able to learn, except by lax construing and foul swearing.

"There are yet many small claims been investigated twenty years, not approved of, and the claimants entitled to them; while a set of speculators are getting titles by proving pre-emptions by hundreds where they never were. If it is law, it is an unjust one."

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 17, 1835.

GENTLEMEN: It has been represented to the department that associations of men are engaged in speculating in the purchase of floating rights, under the late pre-emption law; and by means of facilities afforded by deputy surveyors, acting as agents in their location, much valuable land in Louisiana is thus engrossed; and that these rights are multiplied by the recognition of separate pre-emption rights, in the parents, children, and hired men, of each family, and fictitious persons.

The Secretary of the Treasury has directed that the most prompt and energetic measures be taken to detect and arrest frauds of the character alluded to; and, with this view, I have to require of you to enter into the most rigid scrutiny of all pre-emption claims and floats alleged in your district, and resort to such means and sources of information, within your reach, as will lead to a faithful and satisfactory result in the ascertainment of whatever may be the facts.

Your immediate attention to this important matter, with a view to a report on the subject at the earliest possible date, is strictly required. To guard against imposition, the closest adherence, on your part, is required to the principles of the law, and those laid down in the printed letters of instruction, bearing date the 22d July and 23d October, 1834.

I am, &c. ETHAN A. BROWN.

P. S.—You are required by the Secretary of the Treasury to institute, forthwith, such inquiries as will enable you to report an opinion on the subject of the rumors and representations which have been the occasion of this communication, so as to enable the department to form something of a definite and adequate idea as to the extent to which the evils exist in the premises.

In case your inquiries should lead you to suspect the existence of frauds, the Secretary requires that, without loss of time in writing for further orders after your report herein to the department, you will forthwith proceed to take such testimony in support of the facts in the alleged abuses which you shall have ascertained; and should you find yourself at any loss in the progress of the investigation, the secretary directs that you will promptly call to your aid the advice of the district attorney, whom you are to address on the subject.

I am, &c.

E. A. BROWN.

The REGISTER AND RECEIVER,
at New Orleans, Opelousas, Ouachita, and St. Helena, La.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 19, 1835.

SIR: I herewith enclose to you a copy of a letter addressed to the registers and receivers of the United States, on the subject of fraudulent practices alleged to exist in the proving of pre-emption rights, and obtaining what are called "floats," under the act of 19th June, 1834.

You are hereby directed to furnish to the district land officers no more plats of surveys, until you shall have received further directions. You are requested, however, to transmit the plats to this office as fast as they can be prepared.

I am, &c.

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

H. T. WILLIAMS, Esq., Surveyor General, Donaldsonville.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, December 21, 1835.

GENTLEMEN: In relation to the subject of pre-emption rights, concerning which I addressed you on the 17th instant, you are particularly required to keep in view the following general principles, in fulfilment of the meaning and intent of the act of the 19th of June, 1834, and of the instructions heretofore issued by the department.

1st. In cases where two or more persons are settled on the same quarter-section, the first two actual settlers, (and they only,) who cultivated in 1833, and had possession on the 19th of June, 1834, are entitled to the right of pre-emption. If an equal division of such quarter, by a north and south, or east and west line, will not secure to each party his improvements, they must become joint purchasers or patentees of the entire quarter-section; if otherwise, it will be divided so as to secure to the parties respectively their improvements; in either case the said first two actual settlers, who obtain the right of pre-emption to the quarter-section, and none others, are entitled each to a pre-emption of eighty acres elsewhere in the same land district, to be located so as not to interfere with other settlers having a right to pre-emption. This right to locate eighty acres elsewhere, usually called a floating right, must be located and determined at the time the quarter-section is paid for on which the right accrues.

2d. Only one pre-emption to the maximum quantity of one hundred and sixty acres is allowed to a family when cultivation is in common, or for common benefit, and no floating right is allowable under such circumstances.

3d. No one employed by another as a laborer on his improvements, can be admitted to a pre-emption right.

By a careful attention to the act and the instructions, you will save to yourselves, as well as the department, much trouble and embarrassment in finally determining rights accruing under the law.

I am, &c.

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

REGISTER and RECEIVER, at New Orleans, Opelousas, Ouachita, and St. Helena, La.

QUINCY, MONROE, Co., MISS., December 28, 1835.

DEAR SIR: I hope you will excuse me for the liberty I have taken, and should not have troubled you with this communication, but for an injury done myself, and a fraud practised on the government, which I hope I have proved to the satisfaction of the department; I speak with regard to a pre-emption and float that was obtained at the land office, in Columbus, by John and William Purser. I have forwarded an affidavit to Major William Dowsing, register of the land office at Columbus, showing that said Pursers had no shadow of a claim to the land on which they got a pre-emption and float until after the 16th of October, 1834, and also proving that I bought the improvement of John Purser in August, 1835. John Purser was residing on the land since he first purchased the land, but William Purser has never resided on the land, and never had any kind of claim to the same. I have sent the affidavit to Major Dowsing for the purpose of having it sent to the General Land Office. I have got several of neighbors' names to the affidavit, and can give any recommendation in this county; and although I am not personally acquainted with Major Dowsing, I can refer you to him for my character. It is probable that the persons that have bought the floats may try to make some exertions in behalf of the Pursers, but I am certain that they cannot get a witness of respectability to strengthen their claim. I have omitted to give the numbers of the land above, they are as follows: southeast quarter of section nineteen, in township twelve, range sixteen west.

You will have the goodness to inform me if I have taken the proper course to defeat said claimants, and whether or not they can have a pre-emption under the above circumstances.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JEREMIAH RIGGINS.

Hon. E. HAYWARD, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

AUBURN, HINDS Co., MISS., December 7, 1835.

DEAR SIR: Permit me, as one of your constituents, to call your attention to a case in the General Land Office, in which I am immediately concerned. On the 30th of June last, I purchased at the land office, Mount Salus, (Clinton,) in this State, the northeast quarter of section twenty-seven, township four, of range four west, for which I had a receipt in these words, to wit:

"No. 22,184. "RECEIVER'S OFFICE, Mount Salus, Miss., June 30, 1835.

Received of Reuben Collins, of Hinds county, Mississippi, the sum of one hundred and ninety-nine dollars, fifty-six cents, being in full for the northeast quarter of section twenty-seven, township number four, of range number four west, containing 159.65 acres, at the rate of $1 25 per acre.

"$199 56. "S. W. DICKSON, Receiver."

I now understand that one Uriah H. McManis, and his brother, Archibald McManis, have set up a claim, and that they having failed to establish any color of claim by a pre-emption in the land office here, they have petitioned the General Land Office, or the department thereof, for said land. Of this I knew nothing until a few days since, and on Saturday last I applied to the land office to know if such were the facts, and was informed by the register that they had petitioned both for a pre-emption, and that Archibald McManis had sworn that he had paid the money into the land office some two years since, for the land which Uriah now wishes to claim by pre-emption. Well, sir, if the department of the General Land Office thinks their claim has any color of law or equity, I only ask to be informed of the same, and I fear not the result if I can be allowed to confront them with testimony. The fact is this: U. H. McManis, in the year 1822, bargained with one Cooper for his claim or improvement on the west half of the quarter-section above mentioned, and shortly afterward reported that he had paid for the quarter-section. And one William Spinks, a poor but industrious man, with a large family, was improving the east half of the said quarter-section; Spinks removed, and McManis rented the land to Cooper, from whom he had purchased the claim, and got rent for it off him (Cooper) in 1833. In 1834, Mark Snow, by his negroes and overseer, one Mathews, cultivated the land, and paid McManis rent; and this year, 1835, Richard J. Malett raised a cotton crop, and has promised rent. In the meantime, Uriah and Archibald McManis were merchandising, one in the town of Raymond, the other in Clinton; neither of them ever occupied the land, and how they can expect to come in under the pre-emption law I know not: and as to having paid for the land long since, is to my mind strange, when they can neither produce a receipt, nor make a showing of the records to that effect. In the absence of all this, is it possible that they can have any legal claim? I stand ready to prove the statements which I have made. I can prove, by unimpeachable testimony, that Archibald McManis has said, since I paid for the land, that he applied to pay for the land, and that he was told that there was a pre-emption upon it. How does this look beside his oath that he has actually paid for the land? No, sir, he never paid for the land; it is true the map was marked with a pencil mark, with the letter S, the usual mark for sold, and when I paid for some of my land two years ago, it was marked S. Now, the question is, who marked it? Why, I will tell you what I think: it was some one interested, that it should not be known that it was unsold. It is a well-known fact, that while Mr. Gwin was register, the map was frequently marked S, and the land still was unsold; and many accused him and his particular friends of corruption and speculation; but I am inclined to the belief that others marked the map by getting permission to examine it while the register was otherwise engaged, and had no idea such was the design of those who practised the fraud.

In conclusion, let me ask you to be so kind as to lay this letter before the department of the General Land Office, and request for me a hearing, if, as I have before remarked, the case presented shall seem to require it.

I remain, your obedient servant,

REUBEN COLLINS.

Hon. JOHN BLACK.

SURVEYOR GENERAL'S OFFICE, Donaldsonville, January 9, 1836.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 19th ultimo, enclosing a copy of one directed to the register and receiver of the different land offices in Louisiana.

I assure you it was a great relief to me, as the demand for speedy returns had become almost intolerable; and my aversion to a compliance was produced by the fear that many frauds were practised under the late pre-emption law.

So far as relates to the deputy surveyors, I have uniformly discountenanced any participation in the speculation, and when they have been known to be concerned, I have suspended their functions; but the sacrifice they make is so inconsiderable, that while the temptation exists, there seems to be but little prospect of correcting the evil. I am pleased, however, to say, that I have not heard of one unlawful claim that has passed through the hands of a deputy, and that, excepting in one or two cases of a disposition manifested to locate them so as to interfere with the rights of other persons, (which has been counteracted,) they are free from censure, nor am I, in any other respect, entitled to the compliment gratuitously conferred on me in some of the newspapers.

I have no doubt but the wealth and influence of this country are embarked in this immense tide of speculation, but I fear that little can be done to arrest it, unless it should be in the power of Congress to repeal the act of the 14th July, 1832, supplemental to the act granting the right of pre-emption, &c., or to limit the operation of the law, so that the settler would be required to take the vacant land next adjacent to the settlement; beyond this, the only remaining hope is to bring the public land into market as expeditiously as possible.

I am decidedly of opinion, that there are not more than three or four private, unlocated claims in the townships included in the list enclosed in my letter of the 6th of November, and the enclosed list may now be added to the number.

I do not think it would be proper to have a sale in this State between the middle of May and the 1st of November, but it is earnestly urged by the inhabitants, that if it could be effected before May, I think it would be advantageous to the government.

With great respect, sir, your obedient servant,

H. T. WILLIAMS, Surveyor General, Louisiana.

ETHAN A. BROWN, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office.

LAND OFFICE, New Orleans, January 9, 1836.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 17th December last, we beg to state, that all applications that have been made to us for entries of lands in this district were accepted by us, after having been found in conformity with law, and your letters of instruction of the 22d July, and 23d October, 1834. But, inasmuch as it could be possible that, among those that have been presented from the different parishes (for the law permits the settlers, who cannot bring forward their witnesses to this office, to make affidavit, supported by the corroborative testimony of two persons, in presence of one of the judges of the parish wherein he resides,) there might be some not altogether legal, yet we would observe, that however great the fraud might have been represented to you, we nevertheless think that the mischief is not as great as you seem to suppose.

In order, however, to remedy, as far as in our power lies, the evils which may have crept into the present system, we have deemed it our duty to enter into the following arrangements with the surveyor general, which will have a tendency to lessen frauds, if not to stop them altogether.

That every time an application will appear suspicious to us, a copy of the same shall be sent to him, and he will forthwith send a qualified person on the premises, in order to ascertain the validity of the claim.

We request of you, sir, to bear in mind, that we shall do all in our power to deserve a continuance of confidence from the government; and that if we discover any frauds we shall immediately communicate the same to you, and have the offender prosecuted by the district attorney.

We remain, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servants,

B. Z. CANONGE, Register,
MAURICE CANNON, Receiver.

CHOCCHUMA, November 29, 1833.

SIR: I have now a momentary respite to drop you a line on the operations of this office during the last six weeks. From the moment the public sales opened the crowd was immense, up to yesterday. The sales have been immense, falling little short of $400,000, notwithstanding the greatest juggling and the most formidable combination that was, perhaps, ever arrayed at a public sale. A formidable company was formed on the second or third day of the sale, that silenced all opposition, and the lands went off, generally, at government price. It was so ingeniously arranged that all the settlers were interested in it; of course that stopped opposition. All the persons of capital were in it. Lands were offered, and where there was no opposition, of course were knocked off at government price, and then a resale took place among the parties concerned, where the lands sold, generally, very high. We had no means in our power to break up this combination, unless we suspended the sales, and this was too heavy a responsibility for us to take. I intend to send you the abstract of two days' sale, that you may see the deep schemes by the forfeitures and the prices the lands sold for the next day.

I have no doubt but in the strict interpretation of the law the sales are void, and the individuals interested subject to a public prosecution. It is not very material whether you bribe off opposition or use physical force. The results are the same to the government. I shall give you my views more in detail when I have more leisure. I wish the President to be informed of the matter, and whatever steps may be adopted will be for the best. It is the policy of the government that her lands should go at $1 25 to those who intend to cultivate them; but the good intention of the government is defeated by these companies, as they sell the lands for their intrinsic valuation, and persons of limited capital are, by this means, deprived of the bounty of government to a great extent. If required, I can furnish the plainest proof on the above matters. It is notorious to the world. I have fretted myself into a fever at these movements, and I shall hold myself prepared to prove this and more too.

Our entries have amounted to upward of 2,100. I have been compelled to have a clerk to myself during the sales, and I must ask that you allow me one until January, as I do not think I can get everything up by that time. From the heavy amount of sales, I am persuaded you will grant the request, as I shall be compelled to take some exercise in my present situation, with my health not good.

It is very hard to get a person, in this new country, that can be trusted in an office, and I have been compelled to give the per-diem allowance as stated in the instructions, and will have to pay it myself, unless granted by the department. It will be the last of next month before our returns will be finally prepared to be forwarded, but I am making out, with all possible speed, the general abstract up to the end of the present month, which I will forward to you in advance of the other accounts, for your information and the information of the President, presuming that it may be wanted for congressional purposes. I have had to send express to Clinton for blank abstracts, and am now out, or nearly so. I learn from the receiver that he is short, also, in his abstracts, which will retard our returns until others can be forwarded from Washington. As yet we have no mails, and our communications have to be sent by hand to the nearest post-office, fifty miles.

I must ask leave of absence for two months, as soon as I can arrange my returns. The death of a brother since I left Clinton, with whom I was concerned in a plantation on the Missouri river, leaves my property there greatly exposed only under the charge of negroes, my cotton, I fear, yet standing in the field. I will arrange everything here so that my absence will not be felt.

In haste, your obedient servant,

SAMUEL GWIN.

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Esq., Commissioner, &c.

NATCHEZ, March 27, 1834.

SIR: Enclosed you will receive the deposition of Mr. Dougharty, one of the persons who signed the paper complaining of the conduct of the speculators, at the recent public sales. As Mr. Dougharty was one of those that gave rise to the action of the department on the matter, at the suggestion of my friends I thought it best that his statement should go on to show that no allusion whatever was made to the operations of the Chocchuma land office.

As I perceive by the last papers that our veracious senator, Mr. Poindexter, has introduced sundry resolutions in the Senate, founded in part on the recent public sales, and implicating the officers of the government, I have advised Mr. Robert J. Walker to forward to the government the original article of agreement, signed by the speculators, or a certified copy of it. I have never seen it, but I got Mr. Senator Black to read it, and also the laws of Congress, and if the agreement was contrary to law, to advise me what course I had better take in the matter, or whether I could act at all on the subject. After a careful examination, Mr. Black informed me that there was nothing in it or in the acts of the speculators that was in violation of the law.

I was prepared to adopt any measures to defeat the object of the speculators, had they been violating law. In my letter from Chocchuma, on this subject, I advised you that Mr. Archer had no complaints to make as to the Chocchuma sales, and, with the affidavit enclosed, I hope it will satisfy all concerned that their complaints or insinuations are unfounded. It is true, as I have before advised you, that companies were formed—that some tracts of good land did sell at government price, that were very valuable, and that I did suppose, until Judge Black informed me to the contrary, that they were contrary to law; yet I am free to say that the formation of these companies has greatly advanced the interests of the government, by selling a much larger portion of land than otherwise would have been sold; and were the sales annulled, not one half of the lands sold would now sell. Another advantage in these companies was, every settler got his improvement, and a quarter-section of land around it, at the very same price that the speculators had to pay; this accounts for the great number of transfers, nearly all of which were made to the settler. So united were the settlers on this subject, that, at the close of the first two weeks' sale, they gave the persons composing these land companies a public dinner, at which the Hon. Mr. Plummer, (who was also one of the company,) at the instance of the settlers, returned their cordial thanks to them, and informed them that they had done more for them than all the pre-emption laws that could have been passed by the government; and to this hour you cannot find an individual in the nation who will not defend the companies.

It is true that I did all in my power to embarrass the company at the time; but it was, as I then supposed, in violation of law; and instead of the officers of the government being concerned with them, the reverse is known by every man on the ground; and so determined were the members, that where either the receiver or myself wanted land where there was a settler on it, it was run up to the full value of the land, for the benefit of the settler.

I see it is the intention of the land committee to institute a secret inquisitorial examination of the conduct of the officers, without letting them know the nature of the charges against them, or even permitting them to know the witnesses to be used against them, or cross-examine them. This is in character with many other acts of this party; but as an officer, or a man, I am prepared for the severest investigation, but would prefer that the accused, accuser, and witnesses, might all be ordered on to give evidence.

I shall remain in Clinton for some time yet, closing my business there, and wish any immediate communications to me sent there.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

SAMUEL GWIN, Register.

E. HAYWARD, Esq.

NATCHEZ, March 27, 1834.

SIR: In reply to your inquiries relating to the sales of the public lands, and whether a certain communication made by R. T. Archer and myself had any relation to the sales at Chocchuma, I wish it distinctly understood, that no reference or allusion was intended to the sales at Chocchuma, but to Columbus alone.

On the contrary, I believed that the sales at Chocchuma were conducted in a manner strictly legal, and much to the advantage of the settlers. I was at that place only a few days, at the commencement of the sales; in that time I did not hear of any attempt made by speculators to prevent the bid of any person, nor any complaint of any settler in that district against any speculator; nor have I heard of any complaint since that time.

I attended the sales at Columbus, to purchase lands for R. J. Walker and Thomas Barnard, of Natchez, and was instructed by them not to bid on any man's improvement, and also that I should not, on any account, join any company at the sales; this was afterward repeated in a letter from R. J. Walker, Esq., while I was at Columbus. I acted in conformity with their instructions.

The communication from R. T. Archer and myself to the President of the United States, contains particulars relative to the land sales at Columbus only; as I have no copy of that communication, reference must be had to the original.

I will add, that it was a general complaint among the settlers that the speculators did not act at Columbus as the speculators did at Chocchuma, at which latter place the lands were very generally bid off for the settlers by R. J. Walker, Thomas G. Ellis, and others, and all transferred, at government cost, without any compensation or reward whatever, as I understood at the time, and now believe. I know that it was insisted on by R. J. Walker, esq., at Chocchuma, that not one cent, in any form or shape, should be exacted from the settlers for the land on which they had settled; but that in all cases they should have it at government cost, (that is, for the same price that it was bid off at,) let that be less or more. This proposition was objected to by speculators from Alabama at first, but was afterward acceded to.

I am, sir, very respectfully,

GEO. DOUGHARTY.

Col. SAMUEL GWIN.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Adams County:

Personally appeared before me, the undersigned, justice of the peace in and for the county aforesaid, George Dougharty, who being duly sworn, makes oath that all the matter stated in the above and foregoing letter are true, to the best of his recollection and belief.

GEO. DOUGHARTY.

Sworn to, subscribed, and acknowledged, before me, this 27th day of March, 1834.

WM. B. MELVIN, Justice of the Peace.

N. E. LAND DISTRICT OF MISSISSIPPI, Columbus, March 15, 1834.

SIR: Your communication of the 13th of December last, with the accompanying copies of letters to which you referred, was received in due time.

In pursuance of your instructions we designated a day (1st Monday inst.) to proceed to the taking of depositions against the speculators, and notified Messrs. Martin, Archer, and Dougharty, of the day and place, (Columbus,) requesting them to attend, and bring with them all persons by whom any fact might be elicited to convict the persons implicated; but to our disappointment, not an individual attended on that day or since.

We entertain no doubt of the organization of a speculating company during the sales at this place, by which we are impressed with the opinion, that the government has been defrauded, and some individuals have been made to suffer.

So soon as we were impressed with the belief of the existence of such a company, we threatened them with a suspension of the sales; and indeed we should have done so, had we seen any authority in the laws for such a course; but believing that we could not exercise any such discretion without hazarding censure, we declined doing so. Will you be so good as to let us know how we should act in future, in the event of a recurrence of the kind: also, what course we should take (if any) in reference to past occurrences. As before observed, we have no doubt but a company was organized, and well disciplined, during the last sales; for you will discover by our returns that most of the land sold at the minimum price, a great deal of which was as valuable as any land in the State.

Very respectfully, your most obedient servants,

N. E. LAND DISTRICT OF MISSISSIPPI, Columbus, May 3, 1834.

SIR: We herewith enclose you a communication and deposition forwarded to us, some time since, by Richard T. Archer, esq., at the reception of which, we had received no answer from either of the other gentlemen to whom we had written, in reference to the same subject, and concluded we would wait on them awhile, and we are sorry to say, that we have not heard a word from any person, other than the one alluded to above, and we are under the impression, from what we have heard, that no person will appear to implicate the speculators unless he be compelled. We have very little doubt but that facts might be elicited from several persons to commit the speculators of a violation of the law, were it in our power to coerce the attendance of witnesses. Our impressions, however, are founded on rumor principally.

HONEY ISLAND, March 1, 1834.

GENTLEMEN: Your favor of the 10th ult. is before me. I was aware of the propriety of giving my testimony in relation to the matter on which you solicit my presence. I, therefore, have carefully noted down such evidence as I can testify to, in form of a deposition, which I should have sent you before this, that but I have been disappointed in meeting with a justice of the peace or magistrate, before whom to qualify to it. I consulted the United States attorney, for the Mississippi district, to know if this would be sufficient, and am advised by him that as the investigation is exparte, and designed as an inquiry into facts, for the purpose of instituting suits or indictments, if the facts disclosed will authorize, he thinks it will be all-sufficient, and that my presence may be dispensed with by sending the deposition. I could not, without extreme inconvenience, leave home at this time. I am truly desirous of affording all aid in my power. I have already notified you of such persons as I believed to be able to testify on the subject. I have recommended to some to give their testimony, but I believe they are unwilling to do so until required. I am unable to induce any to go to Columbus on this business. I am so remote from Colonel Martin, that I suppose he has as good or better opportunity of receiving a communication from your quarter than this. We were all requested to attend at Chocchuma on the same business, on the first Monday in March, and think he will be in attendance there. I shall go to Lexington (the seat of justice of Holmes) on Monday, to qualify to the deposition which I shall enclose in this letter, which I detain for that purpose. This is Saturday, and I received your second communication about one hour since.

Very respectfully, yours, &c.

RICHARD T. ARCHER.

P. S. Not being able to see a magistrate in my county with convenience, I have qualified to the enclosed deposition at Manchester. I have sent Colonel Martin a message that will supersede the necessity of writing.

Yours, &c. R. T. A.

Messrs. Wm. Dowsing and W. P. Harris.

Richard T. Archer being solicited by Messrs. William Dowsing and Willy P. Harris, of the United States land office at Columbus, in Mississippi, to give such information as comes within his knowledge of fraudulent and illegal practices, alleged to have been perpetrated at the land sales at Columbus, in November last, by certain speculators, of whom Isaac Lane, Daniel Green, and John C. Whitsett, of Alabama, and Dr. John H. Hand, and W. W. Cherry, of Mississippi, and others, are believed to have been the principal actors and authorized agents, being duly sworn, deposeth: that said speculators, by their agents, Isaac Lane and others, did demand of him pay for transferring to him certain lands which had been stricken off in the name of Isaac Lane, but which said Archer did believe that he was bidding for for him; that on his refusal to pay a cent it was objected, that the company would be dissatisfied, and alleged that others paid them; also, that he, the said Archer, heard Allen Sharkey say, that he paid the speculators $500 not to bid against him; that he had contracted to pay $1,000, but paid only $500; also, that he heard Jerrry Robertson say, that he paid them for the like purpose; that he contracted to pay $400, but paid something less; also, that he heard Dr. Fisher say, that he paid them $800; that it was arranged between them that one eighth of a section of the land which he wanted was to be stricken off to the speculators, and afterward to be purchased by him, and that it was so purchased at $800; also that he heard Dr. Garret Keern say, that finding that others paid them, that although he had made no agreement with them, that he paid them $200; also, that he heard Mr. Gallespie say, that he paid them, and that the matter was arranged with them by Allen Sharkey for him; also, he heard Mr. Garey say, that he had to buy one eighth of a section from them; that they would not agree to take money from him, but that they should buy one eighth of a section of the land, and sell to him; and in this way, I think, he said he paid them $200; also, that he heard Isaac Lane say, publicly, while the bidding for the public lands was actually going on, in a loud voice, that if the settlers would put themselves under the protection of the company, that the company would protect them; also, that Mr. McLemore came to him and stated, that he had a communication from the company to make; that the company were aware that he (R. T. Archer) could do them great injury; that they had no hostile feelings to him, and as evidence of it, showed a list of prices they had put on lands already purchased by him (R. T. A.) at lower rates; that he returned for answer, by Mr. McLemore, that he was actuated by feelings of hostility to no one; that for himself he asked nothing of them, but if they would desist from the practices which he reprobated, and let the settlers buy their lands without extorting sums from them, that he would take no notice of the past, but if they did continue these practices, he would certainly report them; he afterward saw McLemore take J. Lane out, and they had a conference for a considerable time. And further this deponent saith not.

F. W. QUACKENBOAS, J. P.

B.

Point Coupee, La., January 3, 1835.

My Dear Sir: I avail myself of this early moment to give you my views of the unprecedented and palpable frauds practised in the land offices in this State, under the provisions (as a cloak) of the act of Congress, approved the 19th June, 1834, reviving the act of the 29th May, 1830, granting pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands.

Enclosed is a sample for the eye of yourself and Judge Porter, to form your opinions of the loose manner in which honest citizens are deprived of the advantages so kindly held out to them who settled in good faith, and the government swindled out of two thirds, at least, of the best public lands in the State of Louisiana. I was in the land office in New Orleans a short time past, when the enclosed application was made, by handing the paper to the clerk of the register, (the register, as usual, absent,) by Mary Sturgen, and on examining his plat for the sections, township, and range, he said the sections were taken by William Bryan and Sarah Bryan, who proved their occupation and cultivation by William Summers, Hally B. Roundtree, and Samuel Westaker, upon which she replied, that they had all sworn to falsehoods, as she would prove by all her neighbors, that she settled on the land in 1830, and had continued to reside on and cultivate the same until this time, and that no other person had occupied or cultivated this land but herself, and those who worked for her.

I then told this woman to take home her application and testimony, and told the clerk to give her the names of the applicants, witnesses, and justice, who had thus taken her land, and charged her to bring all to me as soon as she learned I had returned home, and I would have the persons apprehended and committed to answer to an indictment for perjury.

A few days past, she came to my house with her son Robert, who appears as an applicant with her, and the sample sheet enclosed, with a list of those names from the clerk of the register. She told me the applicants were gone; I suppose to the usual retreat—Texas. I then told her to go back, remain on her land, and if any person attempted to take it from her, let me know, and I would protect her, and as soon as the government filled the land offices with efficient officers, I would have her testimony taken properly, entitling her to the right to purchase, and if she hears of the perjurers' returning, she is to bring witnesses to enable me to have them arrested.

It has been intimated to me by many, and, I fear, with too much ground of cause, that not only many concerned in the land department, but others high in office and confidence in the State, are deeply interested in this swindling business of land-floating.

When floating assumed a daring stride, and even men, barred by the oaths of office, began to speak without restraint, I made some inquiries for the fountain-head of the floating current, as if wishing to purchase, and was uniformly answered, "Go to Meloden, in New Orleans, and you can get whatever number you wish." Afterward, when in the register's office, filing a claim and testimony for a confirmation of a Spanish title to the land I live on, I saw a man come in and return one of these blank floats and transfers, filled up, as you see the enclosed, with the names of the applicant, witnesses, and justice, but the clerk filled the blanks for section, township, and range, in the float. On this man pointing his finger to the numbers in the plat, he told the clerk he could fill those blanks in the transfer at another time; the clerk answered, "Yes," and lodged them both in his desk.

This man, (who called himself Christie,) it was said, was a deputy surveyor, or had been; that he sold some floats to Meloden for one hundred dollars each, which was too cheap, but that he had done it to get a start to procure more, and for which Meloden should pay higher prices. He introduced himself to me, and proposed furnishing any number if I would furnish the funds, as he knew all the best lands in the State to lay the floats on. I answered him, that he had better examine well the ground he was passing; and that for myself I did not like to dabble in dirty water. I then left him and the clerk in the office. After I returned home, I learned that many floats had floated into Point Coupee for sale; I inquired for some; one or two were soon handed to me. The applicant's name, witness's name, and justice's name, all filled out and signed and certified; but the blanks of the sections, townships, and ranges, yet remaining to be filled. I observed that such swearing to blanks was surely a short cut to floats, and asked the reason why those blanks were still open, being sworn to. The answer was, he did not know where to lay them on good land, as so many had gone before him. I advised the holder to return them, as he might see, as well as myself, that they were obtained by forgery or perjury, as all the writing on the face of the paper was in the same handwriting; and to have nothing to do with this floating business. He has told me since that he has returned them.

Again: a man by the name of Bishop, who said he was of New York, called on me, professing a wish to buy my land, and to know if I and my neighbors intended to save our back concessions. Supposing him a tool or understrapper of the banditti, I asked him if he was attached to the company of Robert J. Walker (of notoriety) in the land-jobbing Green school. He said Mr. Walker was of the company, that he had saved fifty or sixty thousand acres in Arkansas, since the passage of the present pre-emption law. I asked him where Walker got the money to pay for such a quantity of land. He answered, he had paid for all he had bought, and could command money to pay for all he wished to buy; and that he (Bishop) could draw on New York for five hundred thousand dollars, if the quantity of land to be had required it.

This man, Bishop, has been (as I am informed and believe) through all the valuable public land in the State, with hireling surveyors, whether deputies under the surveyor general, (as many allege,) I cannot say; but I do say that I cannot get any deputy, and I have heard other citizens say that they could not get a deputy, to run out old lines, or locate back concessions, without paying three prices, until this banditti of floating speculators is served. And I believe that not more than from fifty to one hundred honest settlers, in good faith, were entitled to a preference for a quarter-section in the parish of Point Coupee. I think that more than five times that number of sections have been covered by floats; and I do believe that this banditti, and many of the villains of Vicksburg notoriety, have combined and confederated together to take the whole of the most valuable lands in the State, as well as elsewhere; the small fry and understrappers to apply for and prove up; then sell to the floating company, and slip off to Texas, leaving this banditti to hold the swindled prize, under that well-intended principle of law, that third innocent purchasers cannot be deprived of their lands, not recollecting that equally wise rule, that titles, obtained through fraud, are void, and no subsequent act of parties can make the same valid.

Again: the practice of obtaining many floats has been for the father, and sons or daughters, perhaps down to the cradle, to claim to have lived together and cultivated on various sections. Thus, taking to the father and first son one quarter jointly, and each a float for eighty acres, and the balance of the family to take floats for the other tracts, purporting to have been cultivated, when not a stick had been cut on the land; and where there are no sons or daughters, the banditti furnish applicants and witnesses, to prove for each other that all lived together, or by twos, on the quarters to be taken jointly, and the others take the floats, when, in numbers of instances, the land has never been seen by any of the parties, except, perhaps, the examining agent, as Bishop, to see if the land is good, or was pointed out by the hired surveyor. As a proof of this kind of family arrangement, Mary Sturgen, applicant in the enclosed sheet, admitted to me that her son Robert, signed as an applicant, was but twelve years old, and, from his appearance, he cannot be more. When I told her that the law allowed no such tricks, she said she was advised that, by using his name, she could get two quarters, and, of course, double the sum she had agreed to sell the one quarter for. She said that Justice Dawson knew the age of her son, and that, when he took the affidavit and testimony for Bryan and his daughter, he knew the girl was under age, and that all of the parties were swearing falsely, as he well knew when she settled on the land, and that no other persons occupied or cultivated it but her or those who worked for her. I will here remark that, when I detected fraud in the register's office, and told Mary Sturgen to go home and remain on her land, that she could not be deprived of her right unless she sold it for a trifle to speculators, as many of the ignorant settlers had done, her speculating purchaser, by the name of Lewis, then at her elbow, told her that she was at liberty to drop the sale to him, on which she said she would do so.

I do think that the true interest of the government requires speedy action in this behalf; that the present inefficient officers either be superseded, or more competent persons, as supervisors, sent to their aid, to overhaul every entry made in the offices under the provisions of the present law, and the testimony re-examined or expunged (as in many cases must be done) and new testimony taken; and that all further proceedings in the register's and surveyor's offices, touching locations or entries of pre-emptions or floats, be enjoined or suspended, until a full legal and honest investigation be had on claims made, and to be made, under the provisions of the present law; otherwise, two thirds, at least, of the best land in the State will be lost to honest citizens, or to the government, and be monopolized by a base set of swindling and suborning knavish villains.

I am far from charging public officers with turpitude of intentions, but I feel clear in noticing their negligence and errors which they could have avoided. Mr. Canonge, and Mr. Cannon, the register and receiver at New Orleans, were absent at the North nearly all the summer and fall, when many of these abuses of their offices were committed; leaving their offices under the sole control of their clerks, whom I have ever considered only recorders of such acts and writings as were proper to be recorded in their offices; and as the register and receiver, in certain cases, sitting as a board, were sole judges of the rights of applicants, on the testimony adduced, could not delegate their judicial power to their clerks, therefore the adjudications by the clerks must be void, and, at least, great inconvenience would result. Then the neglect of their offices, and erroneously suffering their clerks to fill their places, and sign their names officially, is, I conceive, highly reprehensible.

I must say that, although neither are competent to the discharge of all the duties of their offices, yet the receiver, when at home, is prompt to attend when called on, but the register can never be found at his office when he can locate himself elsewhere.

These offices should be filled with profound legalists, and good judges of the human character, as well as men of strict attention and integrity to their responsibilities.

The law requires, as well as the written instructions of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, the testimony to be taken before the register and receiver, sitting as a board, unless inconvenient to have the witnesses at the office, when it is to be taken elsewhere, before some justice, I should suppose, or commissioners from a court. These modes have not been pursued by the board at New Orleans, nor has a proper certificate of character been required of applicants or witnesses; the whole has been under the control of the clerk of the register, and he has received them uniformly in the form you see in the enclosed—blanks made out somewhere, and filled up somehow, by honest or dishonest means, we know not which, perhaps both, but under no known sanction of law.

I am, with true esteem, most obediently, your humble servant,

——— ———.

Application to the Register and Receiver of the Land Office for the southeastern district of Louisiana, at New Orleans.

GENTLEMEN: In virtue of an act of Congress, approved on the 19th June, 1834, entitled, "An act to revive the act entitled, 'An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands,' approved on the 29th May, 1830," we apply to become the purchaser of a certain tract of land, situated and lying in township No. 2, of range No. 9 east, designated as, and being, section No. 14, containing —— acres, agreeably to the township plat, on file in the register's office. We cultivated the said tract of land (designated as above) in the year 1833, by raising corn, &c., thereon; and continuing on the same, was in actual possession and peaceable occupancy thereof at the date of the passage of the above-mentioned act. We therefore pray that we may be permitted to enter the said tract according to law.

MARY STURGEN,
ROBERT STURGEN.

Affidavit of applicant.

Personally appeared before me, Thomas Dawson, a justice of the peace, Mary Sturgen and Robert Sturgen, who, being duly sworn, depose and say, that the facts contained and set forth in their foregoing application are true, and that every matter and thing therein stated is strictly correct. So help them God.

Corroborative testimony.

Also, personally appeared Jesse L. Sanders and William P. Mulder, of said parish of West Feliciana, who, being duly sworn, declared (in answer to interrogatories to them propounded by me) that they are well acquainted with the said Mary Sturgen and Robert Sturgen, of the parish of Point Coupee; that their within application has been fully read and explained to these deponents, and that all the facts therein contained, in relation to the cultivation and possession, by the said Mary Sturgen and Robert Sturgen, of the land described in the said application, are, to these deponents' knowledge, true.

And these deponents further declare that they are in no manner interested or concerned with the said applicants in the said tract of land.

THOMAS DAWSON, Justice of the Peace.

Agreeably to the provisions of the 9th section of the act of Congress, approved on the 19th of June, 1834, Mary Sturgen and Robert Sturgen were permitted to take lands elsewhere, in order to make up the quantity the law allowed each. They, in consequence, entered section No. 13, township No. 2, of range No. 9 east; said entry not interfering with other settlers having a right of preference, as it has been satisfactorily proved to the register and receiver, by the following testimony, viz.:

Personally appeared before me, Thomas Dawson, one of the justices of the peace in and for the parish of West Feliciana, Jesse L. Sanders and William P. Mulder, who, being duly sworn, declare that it is to their knowledge that the above described section is not cultivated or inhabited by any person who is or was entitled to a right of preference.

Further corroborative testimony.

STATE OF LOUISIANA:

Personally appeared before me, the undersigned, justice of the peace, Jesse L. Sanders, William P. Mulder, Mary Sanders, Ann Mulder, William Kean, who, being duly sworn, declare that Mary Sturgen and Robert Stur-

gen were the first settlers of both the aforesaid described sections, their house being near the line that divides said sections; and that said applicants settled there about 1830 or 1831, and have kept said sections in cultivation ever since, each having labored on said section, and are now in possession; and that no other person or persons are better or as well entitled to said described land as they are; and that none of these deponents are in any manner interested in said described land.

Extract of a letter from E. B. Williston, to the Secretary of the Treasury, dated DONALDSONVILLE, LA., Nov. 30, 1835.

"I also take the liberty to inform you, that it is a matter of general notoriety here, that gross abuses are practised under the late pre-emption law. Great numbers of floating pre-emption claims have been unjustly got up, with all the necessary legal formalities, and have been located on highly valuable lands, to the great detriment of the interests of the government.

"The fraud consists in persons falsely pretending to have been settlers on the public lands at the time of the passage of the act.

"I have no doubt if the department were to direct an examination of all the tracts of land which have been represented to the registers as having been settled upon at the time of the passage of the law, great numbers of them would be found, even at this time, destitute of the least improvement. There is an immense system of fraud, I fully believe, and nothing but the interference of the department, or the immediate sale of the public lands, can put a stop to it."

C.

WASHINGTON CITY, January 4, 1836.

SIR: I present herewith a number of affidavits in relation to pre-emptions obtained by Gabriel H. Tutt to the southeast quarter, Richard Tutt to the east half of the northeast quarter, and Benjamin Tutt to the west half of the northeast quarter, of section number three west, in the land district of Demopolis, in the State of Alabama. These affidavits have been taken by some of the most respectable men in the State of Alabama, and have been sent on to me for the purpose of procuring the grant of the above pre-emptions to be set aside, on the ground that they were obtained by fraud and imposition; and that this is the fact I entertain no doubt whatever. Shortly before I left Alabama I was in the immediate vicinity of the above lands, and heard a number of persons speaking of the manner in which they had been paid out; and the opinion was general, without exception, that a most shameful and scandalous imposition had been practised upon the government. There is no doubt that all the lands mentioned were paid out at the instance and for the benefit of James B. Tutt; a man, to my knowledge, of notoriously bad character. Gabriel H. Tutt, as the affidavit shows, is a citizen of Greene county, (the county in which I reside myself,) and I know him well, and that he never did reside on the quarter-section paid out in his name, or near it, his residence in Greene county being at least fifteen or twenty miles from the land paid out in his name. Richard Tutt and Benjamin Tutt are, I believe, both public paupers and have been so for years—I am confident as to one, and am satisfied in my own mind as to the other. I have known them for several years; they have lived in Greene county, and has been supported at the charge and expense of the county. Neither of them, as the affidavits show, has resided on the lands since they were paid out; and Richard Tutt was not on the land paid out in his name until January, 1834, and had no improvements whatever in 1833.

I know several of the persons by whom the accompanying affidavits were made, and know them to be men of honesty and integrity. Among the affidavits there is one made by R. Eskridge, in relation to the time at which a man named Brown came to the State of Alabama and went to live with James B. Tutt. If I mistake not, Brown's affidavit was procured and relied on, in paying out these lands; and the object of Eskridge's affidavit, if I understand it, is to show that Brown swore to what he could have known nothing about. It will be observed that Mr. Eskridge, in his affidavit, does not mention the year particularly, but only the month. It is obvious, however, that he meant the year 1834, as that was the year the affidavit was taken. I have written to Alabama to have his affidavit taken over, so as to ascertain the time of Brown's coming to Alabama explicitly.

If, after examining the accompanying affidavits, a doubt should remain as to the fraudulent and improper nature of the transactions they are intended to expose and have set aside, I feel authorized to say, from the high character of the persons who have undertaken the task of having the matter investigated, that upon that doubt being made known by the department, ample additional evidence will be produced to remove it. I feel bound to state, in justice to the gentlemen who have interested themselves in the matter, that they do not pretend to set up any claim whatever to the land, and I am not aware that they have the slightest pecuniary interest in the matter; a shameful fraud, as they honestly believe, has been committed in their immediate neighborhood, and they have come forward to expose and defeat it.

If reckless and unprincipled men can succeed in cheating and defrauding government, by appropriating and securing to their own use public land at the minimum price, under acts of bounty and benevolence, passed for the benefit of honest, enterprising, and industrious settlers, corruption and venality must and will become the order of the day, wherever there is a quarter-section of public land left worth contending for; and it is greatly to be feared that this has become too much the case already. May I ask to be informed of any steps taken by the department in this matter, as early as convenient?

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant, JNO. ERWIN.

LAND OFFICE, Mount Salus, July 5, 1830.

SIR: Your letter of the 10th ult., accompanying the pre-emption law of the 29th of May last, has just come to hand. I beg leave to ask your opinion on some points which will arise under the law. The quantity of land allowed to each settler, is "not more than one hundred and sixty acres, or a quarter-section." It will often happen that a quarter-section, or two eighths of different sections or quarters, will contain more or less than one hundred and sixty acres, and as the law contemplates "legal subdivisions," it would be best to be governed by them, rather than exact quantity. In fractional sections it may sometimes be necessary to cut off part of the fraction, but it would be extremely troublesome to cut off, or add on, parts of eighths or quarters, either in the square sections, or those of two acres front, and forty deep, on water-courses. The lands of this district not yet offered for sale, lie along the Mississippi river, and between that and Yazoo river, where, I presume, the tracts of much value will be laid off two acres front and forty deep. Those lots rarely contain the exact quantity of eighty acres, and should they be lessened, the purchaser will require it to be cut off on the back part, but if enlarged, he will require it on the front part; and, therefore, I presume it would be best, in all cases, to be governed by the legal subdivisions, rather than quantity, as the average quantity will be about one hundred and sixty acres to each settler, though some will have a few acres more, and others less.

It is much to be regretted that the surveys are not made, and the lands offered for sale, before the country is settled. Pre-emptions, in parts of the country where there are no private claims to adjust, seem to hold out rewards to those who, in the first instance, violate the laws with a view of greatly benefitting themselves, by securing the choice parts at the lowest price, while others, more conscientious, wait for the public sales. It has a very demoralizing effect: the temptation is so great to get land worth five to ten dollars an acre, in many instances, at the government price for the poorest land, that witnesses will be found to prove up the occupancy of the land. It occasions severe disputes between the settlers, and much troublesome unthankful service for the officers, all of which would be avoided by hastening the surveys, and immediately offering the lands for sale. The witnesses are sometimes, probably, deceived, by not knowing where the subdivisional lines would run if extended through the tracts.

I also beg your advice on another subject, which relates to giving out patents where the purchaser has lost the receipt of the receiver. This often occurs, and I have let some patents go out of this office on taking the certificate of the party concerned, that the receiver's receipt for the tract has been lost, destroyed, or cannot be found, which certificate, signed by the party, is filed among the receipts taken in the office.

With great respect,

GIDEON FITZ, Register.

GEORGE GRAHAM, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office.

NOTE.—The second section of the act seems to contemplate the privilege, where two settlers are on one quarter-section, that each may have a half quarter elsewhere in the district, without being confined to land adjoining their improvements. This will be a troublesome privilege. Ought the first applicant be questioned as to his knowledge of another settler on the same quarter-section, and should the entire quarter be sold to the first applicant, if it appears that there is another entitled to a preference on the same quarter?

It is presumed that the law embraces those tracts having two acres more or less front, with forty in depth, as laid out generally on the Mississippi river, as well as square sections, though the lines do not run north and south, east and west. G. F.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, July 28, 1830.

SIR: Your letter of the 5th instant has been received. In reply to your inquiries, I have to state:

First, the pre-emption law of 29th of May last, which restricts the quantity to be located to "one hundred and sixty acres, or a quarter-section," does not intend that any excess of quantity over 160 acres in a tract of land, technically known as a quarter-section, should be cut off, in order to restrict the quantity literally to 160 acres. The law has taken it for granted that every quarter-section contains 160 acres, which not being the fact, we must be guided by what we know to be the spirit and intent of the law. The same remark will apply to the excess of an eighth of a section over and above eighty acres, in cases where the tract is technically known to the law as a legal subdivision of a quarter-section.

In cases of fractional sections, you must conform to the legal subdivisions reported in the township plats, taking due precaution to adhere to the quantity to which the law restricts the pre-emption as nearly as practicable. You are not authorized, under any circumstances, to recognise or make any subdivision of a fractional section, in reference to location under the pre-emption law, or under any other circumstances whatever, but must be implicitly guided by the subdivisions sanctioned by the surveyor general.

In locating subdivisions of fractional sections, large excesses are not to be admitted. No general rule can, however, be prescribed; your own discretion will have to govern you, and special cases, in which you have doubts, may have to be referred to this office.

Tracts of land having a water front, and extending back for quantity, and which may sometimes exceed the quantity of eighty acres, are, nevertheless, legal subdivisions, subject to the pre-emption privilege.

In locating this description of lots, two lots are not to be taken, which, in the aggregate, would greatly exceed the quantity of 160 acres, a small excess in such cases may be admitted, where it is evidently the design of the surveyor to obtain, as nearly as practicable, the quantity of 80 acres.

In reply to your inquiry respecting giving out patents where the duplicate receipt cannot be produced, the party should be required to make oath that the receipt has been lost or destroyed, as the case may be.

I am, &c.

J. M. MOORE, Chief Clerk and Acting Commissioner.

GIDEON FITZ, Esq., Register, Mount Salus, Miss.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, June 5, 1831.

SIR: Your letter of the 8th ultimo has been received, in which I understand you to say that you have issued floating rights in those cases in which the individuals have not paid for the tract whereon the floating rights accrued under the 2d section of the act of May 29, 1830, which provides "that if two or more persons be settled on the same quarter-section, the same may be divided between the two first actual settlers, if by a north and south or east and west line, the settlement or improvement of each can be included in a half quarter-section, and in such cases the said settlers shall each be entitled to a pre-emption of eighty acres of land elsewhere in said land district, so as not to interfere with other settlers having a right of preference."

This provision of the law is perfectly intelligible, but lest any misconstruction should take place by not demanding payment at the time of filing the proof, and in giving the pre-emptor until the 29th of May, 1831, to complete payment subsequently to filing his proof, and the admitting of his claim, the circular of the 14th of September last, 9th clause, states: "the law contemplates that payment be made for the lands claimed by the pre-emption right, at the period when the proof shall be filed."

Under these plain provisions of the law and the instructions, I am totally at a loss to comprehend your meaning, when you state "that a total perversion of the meaning of the act is held to be correct." By whom is such perversion of the intention of the law entertained? If by the people at large, it is manifestly the duty of the register and receiver to give no countenance to such false opinions and gross attempts to violate the law. You proceed by stating that "the only small part of the law that seems to guard against the unlimited fraud on the public domain is set aside and totally evaded. This evasion and perversion is effected by applying the provisions of the act to lands which have long ago been offered for sale, and were subject to entry at the date of the act. Lands that intruders have cut down and worn out, and which they never intend to buy at any price. On these lands they prove that two settlers cultivated in 1829, and have possession on the 29th of May, 1830. There being two settlers on the same quarter-section gives them a right each to claim eighty acres elsewhere in the land district."

If it is to be understood from the foregoing quotation that you have permitted the subdivision of quarter-sections between two settlers, without requiring each to pay for his half of such quarter-section, there has been a most palpable misconstruction of the intention, as well as of the letter of the law, and the parties could not be legally entitled to floating rights for eighty acres without having made payment for the half quarter-section on which the floating right accrued, as well as for the floating right itself.

You are, therefore, requested, as soon as practicable, to prepare a list of all the quarter-sections upon which the settlements were proved and pre-emption rights admitted, and on which the floating rights accrued, agreeably to the form herewith transmitted, showing the names of the settlers, tract, quantity, purchase money, and number of the certificate, in case you have so misunderstood the law as to grant certificates for such quarter-sections where there was no payment made thereon; and opposite to each case, under the head of "floating rights," state the particular tract on which the floating right was applied, by whom applied, and number of the certificate.

No patents will be issued for lands in your district until you shall have reported in the mode above required, and the office is satisfied that the floating rights have been granted agreeably to law.

Your special and immediate attention is requested to this subject, and it is desired that you communicate this letter to the receiver, who is to join you in making the report.

I am, &c.

E. HAYWARD.

GIDEON FITZ, Esq., late Register, Mount Salus, Mississippi.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, August 3, 1831.

GENTLEMEN: In reference to the subject of my letter of the 6th of June last, to G. Fitz, late register, a copy of which was enclosed to you in my letter of the 22d ultimo, I have to inform you that a reply has been received from Mr. Fitz, from which I am happy to learn that the lands claimed by right of pre-emption, where two parties were interested, and on which floating rights accrued, were all paid for on or prior to the 29th of May last.

Hence the difficulties which were apprehended in consequence of Mr. Fitz's representation in his former letter do not exist.

I am, &c. E. HAYWARD.

REGISTER and RECEIVER, at Mount Salus, Mississippi.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, August 8, 1832.

SIR: In reply to your inquiry whether the affidavit required under the instructions of the 8th of May last is to apply to all cases of ordinary private entries, I have to apprise you that such is the intention of the instruction; otherwise the affidavit would be no safeguard to prevent a conflict with vested rights.

No applicant has good cause to object to the affidavit, inasmuch as it only requires him to testify to the best of his knowledge and belief that he is not interfering with a vested right, as such interference would vitiate his entry.

Where a person applies for a pre-emption, who has built his house immediately over the corner of a section, and his claim is in parts of four sections, and a portion of the land covered by his alleged claim has been sold since the 1st of May last, he has no claim to the portion so sold, as he has given no evidence of right to any particular tract. The law did not contemplate that any individual claimant should be allowed to stay the private entry of portions of four sections until the 5th of October next, and the party claiming the right of pre-emption has no right to complain, when he is permitted to make his election out of the unsold portions of the sections over which the greatest portion of his improvements extend.

I am, &c. E. HAYWARD.

SAMUEL GWIN, Esq., Register, Mount Salus, Mississippi.

LAND OFFICE, Mount Salus, November 28, 1830.

SIR: I beg leave to draw your attention to the instructions given by Mr. Moore, the acting commissioner, on the 14th of September last, in relation to the pre-emption law of the 29th of May, 1830.

Until these instructions were given, I believe no person here supposed the law had any relation to lands which had previously been offered for sale, but the idea being once created, is likely to give a great deal of trouble in the land offices.

The law seems to depend entirely on the President's proclamation. The 4th section provides, "that this act shall not delay the sale of any of the public lands of the United States beyond the time which has been or may be appointed for that purpose by the President's proclamation; nor shall any of the provisions of the act be available to any person or persons who shall fail to make the proof and payment required before the day appointed for the commencement of the sales of lands, including the tract or tracts on which the right of pre-emption is claimed."

The law does not provide for the entry of any other lands than such as were occupied and cultivated in the year 1829, and, therefore, under this act, no unimproved land can be entered, because the 3d section requires proof of "settlement and improvement," to be made in every case, before the entry can be made. The 4th section requires that the "proof and payment" shall be made before the commencement of the sales, including the lands on which the pre-emption is claimed, and consequently, all lands after being offered at public sale, are freed from any further incumbrance of pre-emptions under the act. The act is to continue in force one year from its date, but if all the public lands should, before that date, be offered for sale, the act would cease to operate.

Mr. Moore has suggested the expediency of requiring each applicant to take an oath that, "to the best of his knowledge and belief, no claim exists to the same land, as a pre-emption, under the act of 29th May, 1830." If the applicant claim by pre-emption, this oath would be improper, because it would go to disprove his right, and as the law does not authorize the entry of any but pre-emptions, the oath would seem to be inapplicable. It would be extremely troublesome to require this oath in every case, where the land has been offered for sale; some would refuse to take the oath, because they do not believe the law applied to such cases. Many persons send money by mail, by servants and others, who could not take the oath, nor do the purchasers themselves, in all cases, know whether the land is improved or not.

I beg you will excuse me for troubling you on this subject; the inconvenience in this office, in answering the thousands of questions, as to what may, or what may not, be done under this act, is beyond anything you can imagine. It is not generally believed that the law intended to prohibit entries of any land which has been offered at public sale, and there seems to be a contradiction between the law and instructions; because the law requires proof of occupancy in all cases, and the instructions require an oath that would go to disprove that fact. If it is desirable that the above oath shall be taken in every entry, when the land has been offered for sale, you will have the goodness to advise me, as it is my wish to comply with instructions which are intended for the guide of the registers.

With great respect,

GIDEON FITZ, Register.

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office, Washington.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, Feb. 17, 1831.

SIR: In recurring to your letter of 28th November last, it appears you misconceived the meaning of the circular letter of the 14th September last, in reference to the pre-emption law of the 29th May, 1830. That act grants pre-emption rights in virtue of cultivation in 1829, and possession at the date of the act to all lands which have been surveyed, and not appropriated, and requires that its provisions shall not delay the sale of any public lands. The provisions of the law should have been restricted to those lands which had not been offered for sale at its date, thereby placing the individual who occupied and cultivated lands subject to private entry at the date thereof on the same footing as any other person who was willing, and had the right to purchase the land at the minimum price. As the law requires that its provisions should not delay the public land sales, the only regulation by which delay of public sales could be prevented was, to require the pre-emptioner to prove his right previously to the commencement of the public sales. But the lands subject to private entry at the date of the act, were also made subject by the law to the pre-emption privilege throughout the whole term of its operation, and no authority of law existed to compel the pre-emptioner to prove his right before the utmost limit of the term, 29th May, 1831, a whole year. The question, therefore, arose how to admit the private entries of lands which had been offered at public sales prior to the date of the act of 29th May, 1830, proceed as usual without running the hazard of interfering with persons who, under the strict letter of the law, might have a vested right to a pre-emption, but whom we could not compel to come forward with the proof of such claim within the year. The measure proposed in the 2d article of the circular of 14th September last, was merely intended as a preventive for wilful or ignorant interference with the individual thus situated, who had a good claim to a pre-emption under the letter of the law. The oath there required has no reference to the proving of a pre-emption right, but is a precaution to prevent interference with such right; and, on a strict perusal of the circular, and comparison between it and the instructions of 10th June, 1830, with the act itself, you will find that there is no contradiction, and, moreover, that no pre-emption rights are intended to be established or recognized on lands after they have been offered at public sale, subsequent to the passage of the act, and at any time during the operation thereof; but, on the contrary, that those claims are proveable only prior to the public sale. I would observe that many cases exist where lands have been sold at private sale to which the right of pre-emption has been since proved, and will be sustained under the law.

I am, &c.

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

GIDEON FITZ, Register of the Land Office, Mount Salus, Miss.

LAND OFFICE, Mount Salus, December 7, 1830.

SIR: I beg leave to ask your opinion on the following points, relating to the pre-emption act of 29th May, 1830:

1. What limit, if any, may be set as to the age or denomination of persons who may claim pre-emptions?

2. If the father of a family had settled and improved on the corner of four adjacent quarter-sections, may his children, who resided with him, whether under or over the age of 21 years, claim three of these adjacent quarters, and the father have the remaining quarter?

3. If two settlers on the same quarter, as father and son, two brothers, or other persons not related, residing in the same house, and cultivated together the same ground, which ground cannot, from its situation, be divided as the law directs, and whose claim to that quarter may be entered jointly, will each be entitled to an additional half quarter, and if so entitled, may such additional half quarter be entered separately, or should another entire quarter be entered jointly by them?

4. The instructions of the 10th June, require that the testimony shall be taken "in the presence" of the register and receiver; but as the law only requires that the testimony shall be "satisfactory" to them, and there being widows, aged and infirm persons, who cannot attend at the land office, or whose indigent circumstances may prevent them, I respectfully suggest the propriety of having the testimony of such persons taken by a magistrate in answer to such interrogatories which may be furnished by the registers and receivers.

5. If the occupant who cultivated in the year 1829, had died in 1830, before the passage of the act, but his slaves or hired persons, or others, continued to occupy and possess on the 29th May, 1830, when the act was passed, would the widow or other legal heirs or representatives of such person be entitled to the benefits of the pre-emption?

6. Will the cultivation of pumpkins and planting of peach-trees in the year 1829 be sufficient cultivation?

These questions are now waiting for determination at this office.

With great respect,

GIDEON FITZ, Register.

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Esq., Com. of the Gen. Land Office, Washington.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, February 17, 1831.

SIR; In reply to the first and second inquiries of your letter of the 7th December last, I have to state the law sets no limit to the age of the party recognisable as entitled to a right of pre-emption. If a man has a number of children who each cultivated a separate tract of land, each one is to be permitted to prove his claim, and if the same be admitted, each is entitled to a certificate of purchase on payment of the purchase-money.

Reply to third inquiry: When two or more of a family, no matter how related, cultivate, jointly, a tract of land, they are to receive a joint certificate for such tract of land, and a joint floating right to a quarter-section elsewhere. The patent will issue to them as tenants in common, and the partition of the land among themselves is to be a private transaction.

Reply to fourth inquiry: The testimony must be taken in such way as will be fully satisfactory to the register and receiver, who are the judges of the proof.

Reply to fifth inquiry: If the cultivator in 1829 died before the passage of the act, and his children, widow, or others of the same family interest, occupied at the date of the act, the right is to secure to the head or representative of the family, or person having the maintenance thereof.

Before replying to your sixth inquiry, whether the cultivation of pumpkins and planting peach-trees in the year 1829, be sufficient cultivation within the meaning of the act, I must inspect the proof. You will, therefore, be pleased to forward the same.

I am, &c.

ELIJAH HAYWARD.

GIDEON FITZ, Esq., Register of the Land Office, Mount Salus, Mississippi.

LAND OFFICE, Mount Salus, Mississippi, March 20, 1831.

SIR: I have received your letter of the 17th February, in reply to mine of the 28th November last. As a public officer I think it my duty to make some further remarks, and give you some further information as relates to the pre-emption act of the 29th May, 1830.

I beg you will have the goodness to bear with me, as the subject is of great importance to the public. I do not wish to contend unreasonably as to the true meaning of the act, but to suggest to you from experience, what mischief may arise from a doubtful or wrong construction of the act. First as to the words of the act: the first section gives to any settler or occupant of the unappropriated public lands who was then in possession and cultivated any part thereof in the year 1829, the right to enter not more than 160 acres, to include his improvements, upon paying the minimum price, &c. This is not a new privilege as regards lands then liable to entry, because settlers had that right before, without proof of occupancy, and without limit to quantity or time of payment. The privilege, therefore, must have been intended for some other lands than those which were then liable to entry. The first section of the act does not say when the payment shall be made, but the fourth section does fix the time of paying, by providing that none of the provisions of this act shall be available to any person or persons who shall fail to make the proof and payment required (that is, required by the first section of the act) "before the day appointed for the commencement of the sales of lands, including the tract or tracts on which the right of pre-emption is claimed." There is but one kind of pre-emption right created by the act, and to perfect that, the proof and payment must be made before the first day of the public sales, which embrace the pre-emption tract. This provision also defines clearly what class of the public lands is subject to the pre-emption right. If the pre-emption right given by the first section of the act was applicable to lands then liable to private entry, that part of the privilege is effectually repealed and rendered void by the fourth section, which guards against any delay of the sales, as well private as public, "beyond the time which has been [that is, all past time] or may be [that is, all future time] appointed for that purpose by the President's proclamation." You will observe that the act does not read as indicated in your letter, that is, "should not delay the public land sales," but it reads "that this act [that is, that no part of the act] shall delay the sales of any of the public lands of the United States," which applies as well to private as public sales,) beyond the time which has been or may be appointed for that purpose by the President's proclamation. These words of the act apply as well to private as to public sales, and to past time as well as to future time, and no other meaning can be attached to the words from any other part of the law. As the fourth clause governs all other parts of the act, as to the time of making payment, it explains or repeals in effect, all parts which do not comport with that meaning. The fourth section prohibits the public officers from suspending, under that act, any public land from sale after it has been offered at public sale, according to the President's proclamation. The act is to continue in force one year from its date, but that section does not give the privilege of applying it to land then subject to private entry. Thus much for its words, and now for its reasoning and effect. The credit system, as relates to the public lands, has been fully tried and abandoned, it is to be hoped forever. After having first extended the term for making payment for four years, then from time to time for a long series of years, and at last vast quantities of the public land reverted to the United States, after a considerable portion of the price had been paid on it, how is it to be expected that settlers now will pay all up in one year, and free the land from intruders? In general, they will do no such thing; and at the end of the year a large additional number will be settled, claiming equal privileges with their neighbors, and uniting to elect members to Congress, who will promise to continue the pre-emption privilege from year to year forever.

The act takes effect from its date, and could not be known in the public land districts for months after its passage.

In all that time, the sales, private and public, were going on under the full faith of the government, pledged for the validity of such sales under former laws. It is too unreasonable to think, that the government would involve its citizens in such enormous difficulties, without a possibility of their knowing anything of the matter. Cultivation in 1829, and possession on the 29th of May, 1830, is all that is required to give the pre-emption privilege. If a child, a slave, or hired person, without regard to age, sex, or color, should have cultivated a hill of corn, potatoes, or ground peas, on the land in 1829, the father of such child, the owner of such slave, or employer of such hired person, and the hired person and child themselves, living on public land, may claim the right of pre-emption, long after the tract may have been purchased by an innocent and honest purchaser, and houses, gins and fields, made thereon, worth thousands of dollars. The improvements made by the pre-emption claimant on the land, may be so obscure as not to be observed by a purchaser even if he had examined the land for that purpose, or such improvement may never have existed; if it be proved in the land office, it will be sufficient to get the title. As to possession on the 29th of May, 1830, it had as well mean nothing as something, because that is always established, if it cannot be disproved, by showing that the claimant had relinquished or abandoned his pretensions. If a person had cultivated a hundred tracts, more or less, scattered all over the district, by himself, negroes, hirelings, or children, each having a hill of corn, potatoes, goober peas, or one turnip, he could keep all those tracts out of market one year, for he may select which he pleases, just before the close of the term, or may not purchase any. It is calculated to bring into fierce action two among the worst passions of the human heart, if not properly controlled, that is, avarice and revenge. Many pre-emption rights may be claimed for no other view than to get the labor and improvements of honorable and innocent purchasers. It will bring about the most odious schemes of extensive speculation. The demoralizing system of fraud and speculation, if only confined to lands which have not been offered for sale, will by and by be looked on with serious regret by the moral part of the community; but if suffered to be applied to land which has been offered for sale, and was subject to entry at the date of the act, the evils will be beyond anything that you can now imagine. It will begin with heart-burning litigation and bloodshed, if not something like a civil war. Swarms of speculators will be out to get floating rights, as they are called, from every part of the district, which floating rights will be scattered along the banks of the Mississippi, and other valuable land, leaving small intervals which could not suit other persons, and thus secure all the best land at the government price, and deprive the greater part of the community of all chance to purchase, but at second hand, and at a high price. If the evil would stop here, it could be borne with, but many innocent and honest purchasers will probably be totally stripped of their labor and improvements.

The mischief likely to be done to innocent and honest purchasers is likely to be ten times greater than the injury would have been to lawless settlers on the public lands. Such settlers generally have but small improvements, and it has been common among purchasers, to pay such settlers a generous price for their improvements, both at public and private sales. There have been very few complaints of hardships of that nature in this district. I am in favor of donations of land to those who are not able to purchase, and that is the only way in which they can be benefited. Pre-emptions are of but very little use to those who are not able to pay for them. They may lose their time and labor on them, and at last have to give them up. But no claim should be suffered to exist on the public lands, until the tracts claimed can be designated and marked on the maps. All other schemes of designating are too uncertain and dangerous to the rights of individuals. Permit me, sir, respectfully to suggest the propriety of suffering the pre-emption act to be construed finally hereafter by an act of Congress when its effects will be better understood, and the executive officers may be relieved from the responsibility.

With great respect,

GIDEON FITZ, Register.

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office.

LAND OFFICE, Mount Salus, May 8, 1831.

SIR: It becomes my painful duty once more to write in relation to the pre-emption law of 29th of May, 1830. I have been informed that a total perversion of the meaning of the act is held to be correct, and the only small part of the law that seemed to guard against unlimited fraud on the public domain, is set aside and totally evaded. This evasion and perversion is effected by applying the provisions of the act to lands which have long ago been offered for sale, and were subject to entry at the date of the act—lands that intruders have cut down and worn out, and which they never intend to buy at any price. On these lands they prove that two settlers cultivated in the year 1829, on the same quarter-section, and had possession on the 29th of May, 1830. There being two settlers on the same quarter-section, gives them a right each to claim eighty acres elsewhere in the land district.

These two floating eighths are purchased from the claimants by bands of speculators, and located on the choice rich land on the banks of the Mississippi, that is now worth, in its wild state, from five to ten or twenty dollars per acre. They are sometimes located on improved places, but not cultivated in 1829. The floating privileges were at first worth $100 for each tract, but have become so plenty now as to be had at ten dollars each. The speculator pays a dollar and a quarter per acre to the United States for the floating rights, but no payment is made for the cultivated tract, which is the basis of the claim. The pre-emption claimant then perhaps takes his grog, and returns home to live on the public land, as usual; and when that tract is worn out he will move to another, and be ready to sell another floating right. He says he would be a great fool to buy land, because those who have purchased land and reside on it, can have no such privileges. That in future, not more nor less than two settlers should get on the same quarter-section, because two has become the lucky number. In old times the odd numbers were supposed to be the lucky numbers, but things have changed, and the United States are now in fact hiring intruders to go on the public lands, and bribing them not to buy land. The first two intruders on a quarter-section now get from $10 to $100 for violating the laws of their country; and the keen-eyed speculator gets a quarter-section, that the government could sell for $800 to $1,000, by doing justice to the community, and giving each individual an equal chance to buy. Under these unfortunate systems of exclusive privilege, the idea has become wide-spread, among old and young, that there is no harm in defrauding the public; that it is fair game: that when laws are made to give exclusive privileges, the people are no longer bound in honor to observe those great moral rules that bind a people together by equal burdens, and equal rights. I am persuaded, that when persons, of tender age at least, learn to get valuable property by hard swearing, they will in the next generation transfer their plans from the government to operate on individuals.

I am of opinion that the pre-emption privilege does not obtain without payment being made for the land which was cultivated in the year 1829, and possessed by the same individual, or individuals, on 29th May, 1830, because the words of the law, (first section) which gives the right, makes payment the condition on which the privilege may originate: that is, the right to enter land under the act depends on the fact of payment being made for the land which embraces the improvement. As the President is the officer, under the constitution, to see the laws be properly executed, I beg leave to suggest the propriety of submitting the case to him for consideration; and if he should be of opinion that the practice above alluded to of totally evading the intention of the law, by which individuals can possess themselves of the most valuable property of the government, without an equivalent, or any excuse for doing so, is a violation of the provisions of the act, the register should be instructed to report every such case to the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

The pre-emption system is not a practicable system to dispose of the public lands; and if the President could see the outrageous uproar and confusion in the register's office for one day, I am well convinced he would never sign another pre-emption law. The pre-emption rights heretofore were confined to small districts, interspersed with private claims, and the right was given only to actual settlers who resided on the very tract claimed by them, and then only to heads of families, and persons over twenty-one years of age. There were no floating rights. Even that system created great confusion and fraud in Louisiana, and was generally believed to do more harm than good. I know one considerable battle royal fought on the occasion, and was told by the deputy surveyors, that many of the tracts they surveyed, perhaps in the very year the pre-emption right obtained, were in a wild state, where they did not see the trace of a human being, were proved to be in a state of cultivation. At present it is customary for the leader of a party of speculators to agree with a number of dealers, with their witnesses, men, women, and children, to meet on a certain day at the register's office. They come like the locusts of Egypt, and darken the office with clouds of smoke and dust, and an uproar, occasioned by whisky and avarice, that a register at least can never forget. Hundreds of questions are put to know the meaning of a law that no mortal ever understood. The papers, books and maps, are whirled through the house from place to place, and a dozen persons claiming to be first in to prove. Then twenty more wish at once to know what they have to prove. The great difficulty is generally over when it is known what is to prove. The speculator tells the settler that he cannot get his money without proving, and if the claim is not so clear as it might be, that it is as good as others that have been allowed: that he had as well have the land as another. In this way sometimes three hours are consumed before one claim is got through. I believe I should have quit the office ere this, but for the expectation of being relieved by my successor. I am distressed, and my health is fast sinking under this dreadful system. I cannot hold out long, and no price would induce me to act under such another pre-emption law.

It is believed by many that the law itself was intended for fraud, because if it had been the object of him who drew it to give the settler his improvement only, it was wholly unnecessary to give him floating rights, contrary to the object of all such laws; and if the object of Congress was to prevent any land from being sold for more than a dollar and a quarter per acre, then it would only be necessary to let the lands be entered without offering them at public sale. The valuable lands can very easily be disposed of for that price without killing the public officers to write volumes of pre-emption lies or truths.

With great respect,

GIDEON FITZ, Register.

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Esq., Commissioner of the General Land Office, Washington city, D. C.

WASHINGTON, MISS., July 11, 1831.

SIR: I have received your letter of 6th June, 1831, requesting a report of tracts of land claimed under the pre-emption act of 29th May, 1830, from which floating claims have originated, and on which payment has not been made for the basis of the claim. The cases alluded to in my letter of the 8th May, were such as speculators had purchased the floating part from the claimants, and paid the United States for such floating tracts, but no payment was made for the basis of the claim.

On discovering that some of the claimants and speculators supposed that such a course was justifiable, or would not probably be examined into, I took prompt measures to ascertain the facts at the receiver's office, that I might report the cases to the General Land Office. My determination was made known, and I wrote a note to the receiver, requesting him to report such cases to me; and on making out the applications afterward, I wrote across the face of them, the word "Pre-emption," extending entirely across the application as well for the basis as the floating part, which prevented the application from being torn apart, or separated, without being detected by the receiver. This course created doubts in the claimants and speculators as to the effect, and then the speculators determined not to pay the claimant for the floating part, without first seeing the basis of the claim paid for to the government. When the claimants were not able to pay for the basis of the claim, the speculator furnished the money, and took the claimants' obligation to refund it, or make over the title of the whole to the speculator after the patent issued. Thus, the project of obtaining the receiver's receipt for the floating part, without paying for the basis of the claim, was defeated, and before the last day of the term, 29th May, 1831, the whole were paid for. There are no cases to be reported that I know of, and I was very particular in examining the entries for this purpose. I am glad that it ended as well as it did; but it is to be hoped that no other pre-emption law will ever be passed. I believe that the community have become disgusted at the demoralizing effect of the system, and the unequal bearing it has on the community generally.

You seem to be under the impression that the floating rights were, or might have been, issued in other names than the settler's. This was not the case. The title, in every case, is intended to come out in the name of the settler, and all the entries are made in that manner, because the law forbids, or renders void, any transfer of title before the patent issues.

With great respect,

GIDEON FITZ, Late Receiver at Mount Salus, Miss.

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

LAND OFFICE, Mount Salus, June 22, 1832.

SIR: Does the word "ordinary," in the third paragraph, under the oath prescribed in your instructions of the 8th ultimo, for pre-emptors, allude to all entries, whether they should be for sections, halves, quarters, eighths, or does it have allusion alone to the entries under the forty-acre law?

The construction put on this clause in the office is, that it has allusion to the forty-acre entries, for were it to extend "to all," it would greatly retard the sale of public lands.

The first day after the instructions were received, we required all applicants to take the oath. Some refused to do so, when there was not a stick amiss on the land, alleging, that if it was required by the government for them to search half a day for a magistrate to take an oath, they would not enter, but settle on the land, and run future consequences.

Again, suppose a person applies for a pre-emption, (the land applied for being already sold, but since the 1st May last) whose house stands immediately over the corner, or, in other words, is on four sections in part, but on no one in the whole, is he entitled to a pre-emption to that portion already sold as above? To be a householder, to hold a pre-emption, must not the house be entirely on the land he wishes to hold?

Your answers are requested early. I believe as yet we have only two conflicts in this office.

Yours respectfully,

SAM. GWIN.

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Esq., Commissioner General Land Office.

LAND OFFICE, Mount Salus, Miss., January 16, 1836.

SIR: The many different propositions made by members of Congress to dispose of the public lands, makes it probable that some change in the system will be effected; I therefore ask your indulgence to make some general remarks on the subject: I have been engaged in the land business from the year 1806, first as a deputy surveyor, about one year; then, about fifteen years as principal deputy for the western district, Louisiana; four years of which time, as one of the commissioners for deciding on and adjusting the claims of that district; and have now been more than eight years register for the Choctaw land district. I think it is to be regretted that there is so much feverish anxiety to make alterations in the land system, by members of Congress, who have not the practical experience necessary to enable them to avoid confusion and endless difficulties.

The pre-emption act of the 29th May, 1830, is the most unguarded, and in all respects the worst land law that has ever been passed in the United States. In districts where the public land could not be disposed of, for many years, on account of private claims, there seemed to be some necessity for allowing pre-emptions, but where there are no private claims to be adjusted, the exclusive advantage given to those who go on the most choice spots, and that in direct violation of an act of Congress, has a very unequal bearing and demoralizing effect. If the whole community, who are equally interested, were authorized by law to make settlements on the public lands, the advantages would seem to be equal, but if such was the case, I think it likely that it would cause the loss of many lives in the general scramble which would take place. If the pre-emption right only extended to the forfeited lands, or such as had been improved under the credit system, where the tracts paid for had cost the parties a high price, there would seem to be some reason in it; but that a general sweep should be made of the most valuable lands of the United States by intruders, at as low a price as that which the poorest person in the nation would have to pay for the poorest pine barren, is unreasonable in the extreme.

The unfortunate provision in the act of 1830, which authorizes a floating eighth, as it is called, is likely to create much speculation. Where two settlers are on the same quarter-section, and each of their improvements cannot be included respectively in a half-quarter, by an east and west or north and south line, then each is entitled to eighty acres "elsewhere in the district."

I find there is great anxiety among claimants to get out these floating half-quarters, which can be placed on other valuable places, leaving strips of vacant land between, so as to prevent the sale of the intermediate lots to any but those who hold the pre-emption claims.

The excuse for all these exclusive privileges ever has been to favor poor people, but it is a fact that the rich are the persons benefited in the end, because the poor, or at least that degree of indigence which would render acts of charity necessary on the part of the government, cannot pay for the land, and all they can do is to sell their claims and remove to some other place. It is also a fact that many of the very wealthy inhabitants send overseers and slaves, or hire men to make improvements on the most choice places for the purpose of getting pre-emptions. Those meritorious citizens who wait patiently for the sale of the public lands, and will not violate the sacred laws of the land, cannot procure a choice place, but at second-hand, and then at a high price.

To remedy these intolerable evils, it is only necessary to cause the surveys to be made, and offer the lands for sale with proper despatch. The poorer classes are greatly benefited by having a great extent of country to select in, and the rich are not so anxious to buy when there is a great quantity of land in market. The mere speculator in land is always deterred from buying when he knows that the prospect of selling to advantage is weakened by the great quantity in market. I think it would be beneficial to the government, and of great advantage to the poor, to suffer such as are not able to buy land, to have a half quarter or quarter-section donated to them. Their inability to buy might be proved to registers and receivers, on a plan that pensions are obtained by the Revolutionary soldiers. But such donations should be confined to lands which had been subject to entry some few years. I think also that it would be justice to lessen the price of land which had been subject to entry, say five years. This could be carried into effect by the President's proclamation designating the townships which should be subject to entry at the reduced price. The maps of such townships then might be marked conspicuously, so as to enable the registers to avoid errors in the sales. It is certainly unreasonable to sell the poorest land at the same price with that of the richest. It is a disadvantage to any government or community to have beggars, and the best way to avoid that, is to let every head of a family own land. The project proposed by some to cut up the sections into forty-acre tracts, would be attended with endless difficulty. It would destroy the use of all the tract-books at present in use in the land offices, and would make it so difficult for purchasers to describe the lots, for the tracts could not be designated in any other way, that erroneous entries would continually occur. It is very difficult now to make purchasers understand the divisions of half-quarters, simple as it is; besides a tract of eighty acres is small enough for any one person to live on, and it would be much better to lessen the price than to lessen the tracts. The surveyors general should have a sufficient number of efficient clerks to keep up the business in their offices. This department has never been sufficiently provided for. It is a responsible laborious office. Public officers should not be necessarily dependent on other employments for a living, but should be dependent on their offices, be well paid, and made to do their duty, and then the public would be benefited.

With great respect,

GIDEON FITZ.

P. S.—If pre-emptions are allowed on land which has been offered for sale, and is at any time liable to entry, then the private sales will cease entirely, for no person will pay for land while it can be held under improvements, and if one year only be allowed at first for such privileges the settlers will have increased at the end of that time tenfold, and the community will unite in electing members to Congress, who will promise to extend the privilege from year to year forever. In this case it would be better at once to give up the public land to the States and Territories where it lies.

Copies of the circular letters of instruction to the registers and receivers of the several district land offices, in relation to the execution of pre-emption laws.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, June 10, 1830.

GENTLEMEN: Annexed you have a copy of the act of Congress approved on the 29th ultimo, entitled, "An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands."

This act grants to any person who actually cultivated a tract of the public lands in the year 1829, and who, continuing thereon, was in the actual possession of that tract at the date of the passage of the act, a pre-emption right to the lands at $1 25 per acre.

The fact of the cultivation in 1829, and that of the possession of the land applied for, on the 29th of May, 1830, must be established by the affidavit of the occupant, supported by such corroborative testimony as may be entirely satisfactory to you both. The evidence must be taken by a justice of the peace, in the presence of the register and receiver, and be in answer to such interrogatories propounded by them as may be best calculated to elicit the truth. The whole of the evidence must be carefully filed in the office of the register.

All lands not otherwise appropriated, of which the township plats are, or may be, on file in the register's office, prior to the expiration of the law, are subject to entry under the act.

Where the whole of the improvement is embraced in the limits of a quarter-section, the occupant must be confined to the entry of that particular "quarter-section;" but where the improvement is situated in different quarter-sections, then the occupant is entitled to enter the two adjacent legal subdivisions or half-quarters in which the improvement may lie, not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres in the whole.

In making your usual returns to this office you will, in all cases of purchase under this act, designate them by marking on the returns and the certificate of purchase, "Pre-emption act of 1830."

With great respect, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

GEORGE GRAHAM, Commissioner.

REGISTER and RECEIVER of the land office at ———.

AN ACT to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That every settler or occupant of the public lands, prior to the passage of this act, who is now in possession, and cultivated any part thereof in the year one thousand eight hundred and twenty-nine, shall be and he is hereby authorized to enter with the register of the land office for the district in which such lands may lie, by legal subdivisions, any number of acres, not more than one hundred and sixty, or a quarter-section, to include his improvement, upon paying to the United States the then minimum price of said land: Provided, however, That no entry or sale of any lands shall be made, under the provisions of this act, which shall have been reserved for the use of the United States, or either of the several States, in which any of the public lands may be situated.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That if two or more persons be settled upon the same quarter-section, the same may be divided between the two first actual settlers, if by a north and south or east and west line, the settlement or improvement of each can be included in a half quarter-section; and in such case the said settlers shall each be entitled to a pre-emption of eighty acres of land elsewhere in said land district, so as not to interfere with other settlers having a right of preference.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That, prior to any entries being made under the privileges given by this act, proof of settlement or improvement shall be made to the satisfaction of the register and receiver of the land district in which such lands may lie, agreeably to the rules to be prescribed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office for that purpose; which register and receiver shall each be entitled to receive fifty cents for his services therein; and that all assignments and transfers of the right of pre-emption given by this act, prior to the issuance of patents, shall be null and void.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That this act shall not delay the sale of any of the public lands of the United States beyond the time which has been or may be appointed for that purpose by the President's proclamation; nor shall any of the provisions of this act be available to any person or persons who shall fail to make the proof and payment required before the day appointed for the commencement of the sales of lands, including the tract or tracts on which the right of pre-emption is claimed; nor shall the right of pre-emption contemplated by this act extend to any land which is reserved from sale by act of Congress, or by order of the President, or which may have been appropriated for any purpose whatsoever.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That this act shall be and remain in force for one year from and after its passage.

Approved, May 29, 1830.

ANDREW JACKSON.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, September 14, 1830.

GENTLEMEN: Numerous interrogatories having been propounded in relation to the act of 29th May last, entitled, "An act granting pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands," I subjoin the following replies for your information and government, embracing, it is believed, all the prominent points which have yet arisen; and have to add that, if any case shall occur at your office which, after a careful perusal, appears to you not provided for in the present or former circular letter, in relation to that law, you will make it a subject of a joint communication.

1. In cases where more than two persons were settled on the same quarter-section, the first two actual settlers only are entitled to the right of pre-emption under the second section of the act, and none others are provided for.

2. As the law grants to any settler on the public lands, who was in possession thereof at the date of the act, and cultivated the same in 1829, a right of pre-emption to lands which, having been offered at public sale, were subject to private entry at the same date, and has provided the term of one year for its operation, the question arises whether the ordinary private entries of such lands are to be suspended until the 29th of May, 1831, when the occupant's claims shall have been proved and filed, or whether the ordinary private entries can proceed at the hazard of interfering with the occupant within the year. This being a difficulty against which the law has omitted to provide, and it not being believed to be the intention of its framers that the ordinary private entries should be suspended for the term of one year, we must, therefore, so act as to make the law available to the occupant, to its full extent as to time, and also permit the ordinary private entries to proceed. It is, therefore, to be expressly understood that every purchase of a tract of land, at ordinary private sale, to which a pre-emption claim shall be proved and filed according to law, at any time prior to the 30th May, 1831, is to be either null and void, (the purchase money thereof being refundable under instructions hereafter to be given,) or subject to any future legislative provisions.

Therefore, prior to your permitting any entries of land, you will have to exercise every possible precaution to prevent such interference. The only precaution that can be pointed out to you is, to require the oath of the applicant, that, to the best of his knowledge and belief, no claim exists to the same land as a pre-emption under the act of 29th May, 1830.

The right to enter pre-emptions within any tract of country offered at public sale subsequent to the date of the act, ceases at the time of the commencement of such public sale. Therefore, all tracts remaining unsold after such public sale are, of course, liable to private entry in the same manner as if the pre-emption law had not been passed.

You are requested to make a report to this office on the 1st of November next, of all private sales which shall, up to that period, be found to conflict with pre-emption rights; and monthly reports of the same character are requested thereafter.

3. The settler has the right to select any one of several tracts which he may have actually occupied at the date of the act, and cultivated in 1829.

4. It is the intention and object of the law, that where two persons are settled on a quarter-section, each of them should obtain his own improvements as near as practicable, and if this can be done by dividing the quarter-section by an east and west or a north and south line, the register and receiver will proceed to make the division; but if such division would deprive either party of a material portion of his improvement, then the parties may be permitted to take the whole quarter-section jointly, and make such division among themselves as they may prefer for their mutual interest. The entries in your books, the receiver's receipt, and the register's certificate, in such case, are to be in the joint names of the parties, and the patent will be issued to them as tenants in common.

5. When two or more persons have settled on a quarter-section, and have relinquished their claims to one person prior to the date of the act, those who have relinquished have no claim to a pre-emption.

6. The act of 31st March, 1830, entitled, "An act for the relief of the purchasers of the public lands, and for the suppression of fraudulent practices at the public sales of the lands of the United States," has provided the special privilege of pre-emption to the purchasers, their heirs or assignees, of all lands relinquished under any of the laws passed for the relief of purchasers of the public lands, and of such lands further credited under the relief laws passed in the years 1821, 1822, or 1823, as have since reverted to the United States by reason of non-payment, which right extends to the 4th day of July, 1831. The privilege of entering any such lands under the general pre-emption law of 29th May, 1830, does not exist. The right of pre-emption under the act of 29th May, 1830, may, however, be claimed on that description of lands remaining unsold, which were not further credited under any of the relief laws above mentioned, and which have reverted to the United States for non-payment under the act of 10th May, 1800.

7. It being the intention of the law to confine the privilege of pre-emption to the tract occupied and cultivated, to a maximum quantity of one quarter-section, it results that where such tract is a fraction containing less than the quantity of a quarter-section, the right of pre-emption does not extend beyond the quantity of such fraction. In cases, however, where the fraction exceeds the maximum quantity, the entry is to be made conformably to the legal subdivisions, in such manner as to obtain the quantity as nearly as circumstances will admit, and to include the improvements of the occupant.

8. Although a quarter-section may be found to contain rather more than the ordinary quantity of one hundred and sixty acres, the right of pre-emption is to extend to the full quantity of such quarter-section. If, however, such quarter section (situate on the north or west sides of the township in which the excesses of quantity are thrown agreeably to law) should contain so large an excess as to have rendered it necessary for the surveyor general to subdivide the same into three or more lots of eighty acres each, the party in such case is to take two adjoining lots, including his improvements.

9. The law contemplates that payment be made for the lands claimed by the pre-emption right, at the period when the proof shall be filed.

10. Possession at the date of the act, and cultivation in 1829, are both essentially necessary to the conferring of the pre-emption privilege. The absence of either of these requisites will vitiate the claim. The building of a mill is a "possession," but without actual cultivation, it does not confer the pre-emption privilege under the law. The extent and nature of the cultivation are points concerning which the law is silent. The ordinary culture of the soil, with the view to the raising of a crop for farming purposes, either of Indian corn, small grains, clover, cotton, tobacco, or esculent roots, is all that is to be looked to as regards the requisite "cultivation."

11. An individual who mediately or immediately has acquired a title to a tract of public land which he occupies and cultivates, and who, either by accident or design, has so constructed his fence as to include part of any adjoining tract of public land, does not thereby acquire a right of pre-emption, under the law, to such adjoining tract.

12. When the occupant is unable to pay for a full quarter-section, he may be permitted to enter the half-quarter which shall include his improvements, to be either the east or west half of such quarter, the divisional line running north and south, in the ordinary mode prescribed by the act of 24th April, 1820.

I am, very respectfully, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

JOHN M. MOORE, Acting Commissioner.

REGISTER and RECEIVER of the land office at ———

P. S.—To the RECEIVER: You are requested hereafter to render your quarterly accounts in a book form of the foolscap size, the sheets of paper to be securely stitched together, and all receipts for incidental expenses, and for register's salary and commission, to be written on one or more of the last pages of the account.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, May 8, 1832.

GENTLEMEN: The following is a copy of the act of Congress, approved on the 5th of April, 1832, entitled, "An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That from and after the first day of May next, all the public lands of the United States, when offered at private sale, may be purchased at the option of the purchaser, either in entire sections, half-sections, quarter-sections, half quarter-sections, or quarter quarter-sections; and in every case of a division of a half quarter-section, the line for the division thereof shall run east and west; and the corners and contents of quarter quarter-sections, which may thereafter be sold, shall be ascertained, as nearly as may be, in the manner and on the principles directed and prescribed by the second section of an act entitled, "An act concerning the mode of surveying the public lands of the United States," passed on the 11th day of February, 1805; and fractional sections, containing fewer or more than 160 acres, shall, in like manner, as nearly as may be practicable, be subdivided into quarter quarter-sections, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; Provided, That this act shall not be construed to alter any special provision made by law for the sale of land in town lots; and Provided, also, That no person shall be permitted to enter more than one half quarter-section of land under this act, in quarter quarter-sections, in his own name, or in the name of any other person, and in no case unless he intend it for cultivation, or for the use of his improvement; and the person making application to make an entry under this act, shall file his or her affidavit, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, that he or she makes the entry in his or her own name, for his or her own benefit, and not in trust for another; Provided, further, that all actual settlers, being housekeepers, upon the public lands, shall have the right of pre-emption to enter, within six months after the passage of this act, not exceeding the quantity of one half quarter-section, under the provisions of this act, to include his or their improvements, under such regulations as have been, or may be, prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. And in cases where two persons shall live upon the same quarter-section, subject to be entered under the provisions of this act, each shall have the right to enter that quarter quarter-section which includes his improvements.

Under the provisions of this act, no one person is permitted to enter more than one half quarter-section, in quarter quarter-sections, in his own name, or in the name of any other person; and in no case, unless he intends it for cultivation, or for the use of his improvement.

The following is the form of the affidavit (prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, in pursuance of the requirements of the act), which is to be attached to, and filed with, the application for the entry of the one or two quarter quarter-sections, as may be desired, under the privileges conferred by the act:

"I (or we) do solemnly swear, (or affirm,) that the land above described is intended to be entered for my (or our) personal benefit, and not in trust for another; and that the same is intended for the purposes of cultivation, or (as the case may be) for the use of my (or our) improvement, situate on the of section No. township No. range No. ."

This affidavit to be made before a justice of the peace, or other officer legally authorized to administer oaths.

Pre-emption privilege in favor of housekeepers on the public lands.

The act further provides that "all actual settlers, being housekeepers upon the public lands, shall have the right of pre-emption to enter within six months after the passage of this act, not exceeding the quantity of one half quarter-section, under the provisions of this act, to include his or their improvements under such regulations as have been, or may be, prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and in cases where two persons shall live upon the same quarter-section, subject to be entered under the provisions of this act, each shall have the right to enter that quarter quarter-section which includes his improvement."

The proof to be adduced to you, that the party applying for the benefit of the act is rightly entitled thereto, is his or her own affidavit before a magistrate, or other officer, duly authorized by law to administer oaths, setting forth the fact that he or she is an actual settler and housekeeper on public lands, (not on lands already purchased from the government,) and that the half quarter-section applied for includes his or her improvement, which affidavit is to be sustained by the affidavits of one or more disinterested persons, substantiating the fact to your entire satisfaction.

Form of the affidavit.

"I do solemnly swear, that I am an actual settler and housekeeper on a tract of public land, viz., the quarter of section No. in township No. of range No. and hereby apply to enter the quarter of the said section, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved on the 5th of April, 1832, entitled, 'An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands,' which will include my improvement."

The operation of this pre-emption privilege, in favor of housekeepers, will exist until the fifth day of October next; and I have it in charge from the Secretary of the Treasury to inform you that this privilege must not have the effect to stay or interfere with either public sales or private entries of lands during the same period.

Where the right of pre-emption exists to lands not at this date subject to private entry, and that will be offered at public sale prior to the 5th October next, the evidence of claim under the act must be filed with you, and the purchase money paid prior to the day of the public sale, otherwise the pre-emption will not be recognized.

In order to prevent collision between the ordinary private entries, and the pre-emption rights intended to be secured to housekeepers by the act, the Secretary of the Treasury directs that in all cases of applications to make private entries, within the term of six months ending on 5th October next, the applicant (not being the pre-emptor) be required to make affidavit in the following mode and form, viz.:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that the tract of land intended to be applied for, viz., the quarter of section No. township No. range No. in the district of lands subject to sale at is not, to the best of my knowledge and belief, subject to any claim by pre-emption right, under the provisions of the act of Congress passed on the 5th April, 1832, entitled 'An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands.'"

"In cases where two persons shall live on the same quarter-section, subject to be entered under the provisions of this act, each shall have the right to enter that quarter quarter-section which includes his improvements;" and should any cases exist where the improvements of both parties fall within the same quarter quarter-section, they must apply jointly for the purchase of the land, which they are respectively entitled to enter under the law. The receiver's receipt and register's certificate will issue in their joint names, and they will become co-patentees, and thereby be enabled to make such division of the tract as may be mutually satisfactory to them.

Of the subdivisions into quarter quarter-sections.

The act of 24th April, 1820, entitled, "An act making further provision for the sale of the public lands," authorizes the subdivisions of quarter-sections into half quarter-sections, by a line supposed to be run north and south from points to be ascertained on the principles laid down by the act of 11th February, 1805, entitled, "An act concerning the mode of surveying the public lands of the United States." Such points are intermediate between the established corners, on the lines running east and west.

Under the provisions of the act of 5th April, 1832, the corners and contents of quarter quarter-sections must be ascertained on the principles of the act of 11th February, 1805, by lines running east and west. Such east and west lines must, therefore, be supposed to run through the section from intermediate points between the established corners on the sectional lines which form the eastern and western boundaries of the section, so as to divide each half quarter-section into two equal parts. Therefore, the contents of a quarter quarter-section are to be assumed as the one half of the contents of a half quarter-section.

In cases where the sectional lines diverge from the cardinal points, the divisional line, to constitute the quarter quarter-sections, will be considered as running parallel to the line forming the northern or southern boundary of a section; for instance, the line constituting quarter quarter-sections, in the two southern quarter-sections, is to be considered as running parallel to the southern boundary of the section, and the line constituting the quarter quarter-sections, in the two northern quarter-sections, is to be considered as running parallel to the northern boundary of the section, starting, in each case, from points intermediate between the established corners in the eastern boundary of the section, and running west to join the corresponding intermediate points, between the established corners in the line forming the western boundary of the section.

The act of 5th April, 1832, prescribes that "fractional sections, containing fewer or more than 160 acres, shall, in like manner, as near as may be practicable, be subdivided into quarter quarter-sections, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury." The Secretary directs that the subdivisions of fractional sections shall be made by the surveyors general, into lots containing the quantity of a quarter quarter-section, as nearly as practicable; by which subdivisions you will be governed.

Of the practical operation on the books and maps.

The tract books, as now opened, admit of the entry of sections by half-quarters. Where it is practicable to interline the entries of quarter quarter-sections in a suitable manner, (which can be the case only where the hand-writing is small and neat,) and interlineation will answer the purpose.

In those cases where the entry in the tract book has been for a quarter or half-section, such of the spaces opened for the entry of the same quantity in eighths, as remain vacant, may be occupied by the entry of the quarter quarter-sections.

Where it is, from any cause, inexpedient to interline the entries of quarter quarter-sections in the regular tract book, they will have to be entered into a "Miscellaneous Tract Book," as they occur, in the order of their dates, and a reference must be made in the place where such entry ought to appear in the regular tract book, to the number of the receiver's receipt, issued on payment for the quarter quarter-section, which proceeding will always furnish the means of tracing up the entry.

The map is to be marked, in such case, with the number of the receiver's receipt, corresponding in number with the register's certificate of purchase for the same tract.

The quarter quarter-sections are to be described as the northeast, northwest, southeast, or southwest quarters, as the case may require; and the subdivisions of fractional sections into quarter quarter-sections, as nearly as practicable, are to be designated in the mode to be indicated by the surveyor general, in the plat of subdivision which he is required to furnish you.

The register is requested to furnish the surveyor general, as soon as practicable, with a schedule of the fractional sections and parts of fractional sections remaining unsold, and which are liable to be subdivided under the provisions of the act of 5th April, 1832.

I am, very respectfully, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Commissioner.

REGISTER and RECEIVER of the land office at ———

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, July 28, 1832.

GENTLEMEN: Subjoined is a copy of the act of Congress approved on the 14th instant, entitled, "An act supplemental to the act granting the right of pre-emption to settlers on the public lands, approved the 29th of May, 1830."

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That all the occupants and settlers upon the public lands of the United States, who are entitled to a pre-emption according to the provisions of the act of Congress, approved the twenty-ninth of May, eighteen hundred and thirty, and who have not been, or shall not be, enabled to make proof and enter the same within the time limited in said act, in consequence of the public surveys not having been made and returned, or where the land was not attached to any land district, or where the same has been reserved from sale on account of a disputed boundary between any State or Territory, the said occupants shall be permitted to enter the said lands on the same conditions in every respect, as are prescribed in said act, within one year after the surveys are made, or the land attached to a land district, or the boundary line established; and if the said lands shall be proclaimed for sale before the expiration of one year, as aforesaid, then they shall be entered before the sale thereof.

"SECTION 2. And be it further enacted, That the occupants upon fractions shall be permitted, in like manner, to enter the same, so as not to exceed in quantity one quarter-section; and if the fractions exceed a quarter-section, the occupants shall be permitted to enter one hundred and sixty acres, to include his or their improvement, at the price aforesaid."

The provisions of this law extend to public lands surveyed, or in process of being surveyed, prior to the 29th May, 1831, but where the township plats of the same were not filed in your office until after the 29th May, 1831, when the act of 29th May, 1830, ceased to operate.

Under the provisions of this law, any actual settler or occupant of a quarter-section of land, surveyed as aforesaid, or of a fraction not exceeding the quantity of one hundred and sixty acres, and who cultivated the same in the year 1829, and had possession thereof, on the 29th May, 1830, may be permitted to file proof of his or her right of pre-emption thereto, on the terms and in the mode heretofore prescribed under the said act of 29th May, 1830, at any time within one year after the lands were surveyed, and if the lands shall be proclaimed for sale before the expiration of such year, the claim must be duly proved and entered prior to the day of sale, otherwise the party forfeits his right of pre-emption. Where the year since the survey was made, and plats thereof returned to your office, has expired prior to the date of this act, the right of pre-emption is not vested.

The provisions of this act also extend, under certain restrictions, to lands surveyed on the 29th May, 1831, which were not attached to any land district; also, to any lands reserved from sale on account of a disputed boundary between any State and Territory.

In cases where two or more persons cultivated the same quarter-section or fraction, in the year 1829, and had possession thereof, on the 20th of May, 1830, they are to be permitted to enter the tract in their joint names, and the receipt and certificate of purchase will be filled up accordingly, and the patent will issue to them as tenants in common. This course will enable the parties to make any division of the land they may find expedient for their mutual interest. No floating rights accrue under the provisions of the aforesaid act.

All receipts and certificates of purchase issued under the present act are to be headed thus:

"Pre-emption under act of 14th July, 1832."

All receipts and certificates of purchase for pre-emption rights under the act of 5th April, 1832, are to be headed thus:

"Pre-emption under the act of 5th April, 1832."

Your respective monthly abstracts are to indicate opposite each entry of lands under the two aforesaid acts, the fact of the entry being by pre-emption right, and also the day of the act, thus:

"Pre: 14th July, 1832."
"Pre: 5th April, 1832."

The provisions of this act do not apply to the Indian reservations in the State of Ohio, the title to which has been recently acquired by the United States, and which are to be sold to the highest bidder, agreeably to the treaty stipulations; nor to the lands in Alabama and Mississippi, recently acquired from the Creeks and Choctaws; nor do they apply to lands which have been appropriated by law, or reserved in any manner for the purposes of the government.

In the execution of the present act, you will be governed by the instructions heretofore given under the act of 29th May, 1830, so far as they are applicable to the circumstances of the existing law.

The present opportunity is embraced to advise you respecting sundry points which have arisen in the execution of the act of 5th April, 1832, entitled, "An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of the public lands."

First. Persons who made settlements after the 5th day of April, 1832, are not entitled to the benefits of the act, which intends to confer the right of pre-emption to those only who were settlers and housekeepers on public lands (not on land sold by the United States) at the date of said act. This right of pre-emption was vested on the 5th April, 1832, and six months from that date are allowed to the claimant to prove his right and make his entry; if within that period, the land to which such right is vested should be sold at private sale to another, the facts must be specially reported by you in a joint communication to this office, and an order will be issued to refund the purchase money.

Second. Where there are two adjoining and contiguous legal subdivisions of the same fractional section, the aggregate quantity of which does not exceed eighty acres (or the quantity of a half quarter-section, as nearly as practicable), they may both be taken by an actual settler and housekeeper residing on one of them, provided there is no bonafide adverse claimant of a pre-emption right to the other.

Third. Where the improvements of the pre-emptor lie partly in both of two adjoining and contiguous legal subdivisions of the same fractional section, the aggregate quantity of which does not exceed eighty acres (or the quantity of a half quarter-section, as nearly as practicable), he may take either or both of such fractions at his option, provided there is no bonafide adverse claimant.

Fourth. In case a pre-emptor has built his house immediately over the corner of a section, he can maintain his claim under the law only to that half quarter-section in which the greatest portion of his improvements lie.

Fifth. The act of 5th April, 1832, provides that no person shall be permitted to enter more than one half quarter-section of land in quarter quarter-sections, in his own name, or in the name of any other person, and in no case unless he intends it for cultivation, or for the use of his improvement.

In cases where two adjacent quarter quarter-sections are intended to be entered, forming parts of the same quarter-section, (viz. the east or west halves, or the north or south halves, of the quarter-section, as the case may be,) the entry, certificate, and receipt, are to be for the entire half quarter-section, as only one patent will be issued on the entry; but in cases where the quarter quarter-sections do not form a half quarter-section, or are not situate in the same quarter-section, there must be two entries, with separate receipts and certificates to correspond.

No attention will be paid to inquiries concerning points on which specific instructions have already been given under the act.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Commissioner.

REGISTER and RECEIVER of the land office at ——

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 17, 1833.

GENTLEMEN: Subjoined is the copy of an act of Congress, approved on the 2d of March last, entitled, "An act to revive the act entitled 'An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands,' approved the 5th of April, 1832."

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in all cases in which persons were settlers or occupants of the public land, prior to the first day of May, 1832, and were authorized to enter under the provisions of the act entitled, 'An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands,' approved April 5th, 1832, and were prevented from making their entries, in consequence of the public surveys not having been made and returned, or where the land was not attached to any land district, or where the same has been reserved from sale in consequence of a disputed boundary between two States, or between a State and Territory, the said occupants shall be permitted to enter the said lands on the same conditions, in every respect, as were prescribed in said act, within one year after the surveys are made, or the land attached to a land district, or the boundary line established; and if the land shall be proclaimed for sale before the expiration of one year, as aforesaid, then the said settlers or occupants shall be permitted to enter before the sale thereof."

The provisions of the above act give the right of pre-emption or two quarter quarter-sections to such persons as were entitled to the benefits of a pre-emption entry of two quarter quarter-sections of land under act of the 5th of April, 1832, but who were prevented from making an entry from the operation of the causes stated, viz.:

1st. Where the public surveys were not made and returned prior to the 5th of October, 1832; or

2d. Where the land was not attached to any land district; or

3d. Where the land has been reserved from sale in consequence of a disputed boundary between two States, or between a State and Territory.

The proof to be adduced to you that the party applying for the benefit of the act is rightfully entitled thereto, is his or her affidavit before a magistrate or other officer duly authorized by law to administer oaths, setting forth the fact that he or she is an actual settler and housekeeper on public lands, (not on lands already purchased from the goverment,) and that the half quarter-section applied for includes his or her improvement; which affidavit is to be sustained by the affidavit of one or more disinterested persons substantiating the fact to your entire satisfaction.

Form of the affidavit.

I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I am an actual settler, and a housekeeper, on a tract of public land, viz.: the quarter of section No. in township No. of range No. and hereby apply to enter the quarter of said section, under the provisions of an act of Congress, approved on the 2d day of March, 1833, entitled, "An act to revive the act entitled, 'An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public land,'" which will include my improvement; and I do further swear (or affirm) that I have not entered under this act, or under the act of the 5th of April, 1832, to which it is supplemental, at this, or any other land office of the United States, any land in quarter quarter-sections, in my own name or in the name of any other person.

In order the further to guard against the violation of the act of the 5th of April, 1832, by persons entering more than two quarter quarter-sections, the Secretary of the Treasury has directed that the following affidavit be made before a justice of the peace, or any other officer legally authorized to administer oaths, prior to all entries to be made under that act:

Form of affidavit.

I (or we) do solemnly swear (or affirm) that the land above described is intended to be entered for my (or our) personal benefit, and not in trust for another; and that the same is intended for the purposes of cultivation, (or as the case may be,) for the use of my (or our) improvement, situated on the of section No. of township No. of range No. and that I (or we) have not entered under the act of the 5th of April, 1832, or under the act of the 2d of March, 1833, at this, or any other land office of the United States, any land in quarter quarter-sections in my (or our) name, or in the name of any other person.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Commissioner.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 1, 1834.

GENTLEMEN: In the construction of the act of Congress approved on the 14th of July, 1832, entitled, "An act supplemental to the 'Act granting the right of pre-emption to settlers on the public lands,' approved the 29th May, 1830," in the words following, to wit:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That all the occupants and settlers upon the public lands of the United States who are entitled to a pre-emption according to the provisions of the act of Congress, approved the twenty-ninth day of May, eighteen hundred and thirty, and who have not been, or shall not be, enabled to make proof and enter the same within the time limited in said act, in consequence of the public surveys not having been made and returned, or where the land was not attached to any land district, or where the same has been reserved from sale on account of a disputed boundary between any State and Territory—the said occupants shall be permitted to enter the said lands on the same conditions in every respect as are prescribed in said act, within one year after the surveys are made, or the land attached to a land district, or the boundary line established; and if the said lands shall be proclaimed for sale before the expiration of one year, as aforesaid, then they shall be entered before the sale thereof.

"SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the occupants upon fractions shall be permitted in like manner to enter the same, so as not to exceed in quantity one quarter-section; and if the fractions exceed a quarter-section, the occupants shall be permitted to enter one hundred and sixty acres, to include his or their improvement, at the price aforesaid."

And the act approved on the 2d March, 1833, entitled, "An act to revive the act entitled, 'An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands,'" in the words following, to wit:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That in all cases in which persons were settlers or occupants of the public land prior to the first day of May, eighteen hundred and thirty-two, and were authorized to enter under the provisions of the act entitled, 'An act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands,' approved April fifth, eighteen hundred and thirty-two, and were prevented from making their entries in consequence of the public surveys not having been made and returned, or where the land was not attached to any land district, or where the same has been reserved from sale in consequence of a disputed boundary between two States, or between a State and Territory, the said occupants shall be permitted to enter the said lands on the same conditions in every respect as were prescribed in said act, within one year after the surveys are made, or the land attached to a land district, or the boundary line established; and if the land shall be proclaimed for sale before the expiration of one year, as aforesaid, then the said settlers or occupants shall be permitted to enter before the sale thereof."

The Secretary of the Treasury has decided that the persons to whom the right of pre-emption extended are entitled to make their entries at any time within a year from the period when the plats of survey were RETURNED and RECEIVED at the proper land office. It results from this decision:

First. That all settlers on the public lands prior to 30th May, 1831, entitled to the benefits of the act of 29th May, 1830, in cases where the land was in process of being surveyed, between that date and the 29th May, 1831, but the plat thereof, not returned to your office within that period, may prove and complete payment for their claims within one year from the day on which the plat of the township where the claim lies was, or shall be, received at your office.

Second. That all settlers on the public lands prior to the 1st of May, 1832, entitled to the benefits of the act of the 2d March, 1833, in cases where the land was in process of being surveyed prior to the 1st May, 1832, but the plat thereof not returned to your office within that period, may prove their claims, and complete their payments, within one year from the day on which the plat of the township where the claim lies was, or shall be, received at your office.

If any township to which this instruction will apply shall be offered for sale prior to the expiration of one year from the day on which the plat thereof has been or shall be received at your office, the pre-emption rights therein must be paid for prior to the day of the public sale.

In the location of fractions under the foregoing instructions, the legal subdivisions thereof furnished to you by the surveyor general must be adhered to, so as to give the party the quantity of land to which he is entitled, as nearly as practicable, be the same a little more or less, and in as compact a shape, conformably to those subdivisions, as the nature of the case will admit.

The instructions do not apply, in any manner, to the tracts of country recently obtained by the government from the Choctaw, Chickasaw, and Creek Indians, in the States of Mississippi and Alabama.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

REGISTER of the Land office, and RECEIVER of public moneys at ———.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, October 23, 1834.

GENTLEMEN: In consequence of representations made to the department respecting the operation of the third clause of the instructions contained in the circular letter of 22d July last, I have to inform you that the Secretary of the Treasury, unwilling to withhold the advantages of the late pre-emption law from applicants who may have meritorious and substantial claims to its benefits, and who, by reason of circumstances peculiar in their character, have no actual residence on the land claimed, has concluded so to modify the instruction complained of, as to admit as exceptions from the general principle, such cases of the character referred to, as in the exercise of a sound and liberal discretion on your part, shall appear from facts, satisfactorily proved, to come within the meaning and intent of the act. The following are cited as examples of the cases expressly referred to:

Where the cultivation may have been made by an unmarried person, without family, boarding and lodging with another family resident on a tract adjoining or in the immediate vicinity of his improvements, or by a married person living in a similar manner; where there has been actual and bonafide intention to reside on the land cultivated, but where the preparation was not complete, or the intention was frustrated by unavoidable accident; where the tract cultivated may have been a necessary and integral portion of a farm or plantation of an individual residing on an adjoining tract, and where, without the aid of the proceeds of such additional cultivation, he could not have maintained himself and family, and continued to reside where he did; or where, by reason of the unhealthy location of the lands cultivated, the individual may have fixed his residence on a neighboring tract—in all these cases, and others analogous in their circumstances and spirit, where the facts are distinctly proved, and where, in the exercise of a sound and liberal discretion, you are satisfied that they come within the meaning and intent of the law, the third clause of the circular letter referred to, which regards the erection of a dwelling-house for the purposes of habitation as a requisite of "possession," is modified so as to admit the right of entry.

2. No pre-emption right to section No. 16, reserved for schools, can be sustained under existing laws, nor will the act of 19th June, 1834, admit of a floating right of pre-emption elsewhere, in virtue of a settlement and improvement in the sixteenth section. Individual claimants considering themselves aggrieved under such circumstances, will have to prefer their claims to Congress.

3. Where an individual establishes a right of pre-emption to a fractional section containing less than one hundred and sixty acres, or to a half quarter-section, the other half of which was sold previous to the date of the act or to a residuary quarter-quarter of a section, (which residuary quarter-quarter must have been made such by locations made under the act of 5th April, 1832, inasmuch as quarter-quarters of sections cannot originally be selected, as such, under the pre-emption law,) in all such cases, the fraction—the half-quarter, or the quarter-quarter—is to be regarded as a separate and distinct tract, beyond the quantity of which the party can claim no right to locate elsewhere, or on adjoining lands; but in cases where two or more individuals are settled on any one such tract, the first two actual settlers are entitled to enter in their joint names, and each of these two is entitled to receive a floating right to eighty acres elsewhere.

4. Where A settled on and cultivated a tract of public land in 1833, and prior to the 19th June, 1834, sold his right to B, who continued to improve and occupy the same, on that day, B is regarded as entitled to the benefits of the act.

5. Where A cultivated a tract of public land in 1833, and had placed B thereon, as tenant in possession, who continued to improve and cultivate the same on the 19th June, 1834, A is regarded as entitled to the right of pre-emption, on due proof of cultivation and occupancy as required by the act. But in case A, prior to the year 1833, had placed a tenant on a tract of public land, who cultivated and possessed, agreeably to the tenor of the act, the right of pre-emption is to accrue to the tenant.

6. The testimony heretofore required to be taken before a justice of the peace, may also be taken before a notary public, or any other officer duly qualified to administer oaths.

7. Where there were more than two actual settlers on a tract, floating rights accrue to the first two actual settlers, and to none of the others.

8. Quarter-quarters of sections are created only by the operation of the act of the 5th of April, 1832, entitled, an "Act supplementary to the several laws for the sale of public lands."

The right to enter and make payment for quarter-quarters of sections, (lots of forty acres,) under the act of the 19th June, 1834, can be claimed only in cases where residuary quarter-quarters are found to exist in a section, they having been created separate and distinct legal subdivisions by the peculiar operation of the act of 1832.

While on this subject, I have to mention that, on inspecting the names of purchasers, it is apprehended that due caution is not observed by registers in operating under the act of 1832, which provides that no one individual can enter more than eighty acres in tracts of forty acres. Increased vigilance is strictly enjoined in this respect, and in order to insure a strict compliance with the law, the register is hereby required to keep an alphabetical list of the names of purchasers of quarter-quarters of sections, which list must always be referred to as a check prior to the admission of entries of land in that mode under the act aforesaid.

9. In cases where individuals have settled on public lands since the passage of the act of the 19th June, 1834, the form of affidavit prescribed in the 14th clause of the circular letter of the 22d July last, may be varied to suit the peculiar circumstances of such cases, by striking out the words "and that there was not, at that time, any person residing thereon or cultivating the same," and inserting in lieu thereof, all the facts in the case as they are found to exist.

10. Military land scrip cannot, under existing laws, be located on any public lands settled, or occupied, "without the written consent of such settlers or occupants as may be actually residing on said land at the time the same shall be entered or applied for." Such settlement or occupancy, therefore, although it may or may not have reference to any existing pre-emption privilege, is a bar to the location of scrip, without the written consent of the settler or occupant. The form of the affidavit prescribed for such cases by the circular letter of the 2d of October, 1833, will substantially remain unaltered; but in cases where individuals are desirous of locating scrip, it is not deemed necessary to require from them two separate affidavits; one under the circular of the 2d October, 1833, and another under the 14th clause of the circular of the 22d July last; but the substance of both those forms may be incorporated into one affidavit.

11. Payment is to be required in all cases arising under the late pre-emption law at the time the right of entry is admitted. In cases arising under the third section, or in such as may be of doubtful character, and which you may deem it necessary to refer for the decision of the department, payment will not be required until a favorable decision is communicated. Meanwhile the land claimed is to be withheld from sale.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

P. S.—It has been the usual practice of this office to acknowledge the receipt of the monthly and quarterly returns. Henceforward that practice, which consumes time and creates unnecessary labor, will be discontinued. If returns are not promptly rendered, the reason of the delay will be promptly demanded.

The register is requested to report to the surveyor general, lists of such township plats as require renewal in consequence of mutilation or defacement, and also to forward to this office a copy of such report.

The "quarterly account-book," described in the circular letter of the 28th August last, for the use of receivers, and also a supply of printed blanks for making quarterly returns to this office, (in lieu of the form of quarterly accounts heretofore in use,) have both been forwarded by mail some weeks since.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, July 22, 1834.

GENTLEMEN: Annexed is a copy of an act of Congress, approved 19th June, 1834, entitled, 'An act to revive the act entitled, 'An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands,' approved May 29th, 1830," together with a copy of the former act.

1. The recent act provides, "that every settler or occupant of the public lands, prior to the passage of this act, who is now in possession and cultivated any part thereof in the year 1833, shall be entitled to all the benefits and privileges provided by the act entitled, 'An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands,' approved May 29, 1830, and the said act is hereby revived and shall continue in force two years from the passage of this act, and no longer," to wit, to the 19th June, 1836.

2. The fact of cultivation in eighteen hundred and thirty-three, and that of possession of the land applied for on the nineteenth June, eighteen hundred and thirty-four, must be established by the affidavit of the claimant, supported by such corroborative testimony of disinterested witnesses as shall be satisfactory to you both. The evidence must be taken by a justice of the peace, in the presence of the register and receiver, wherever convenient, and be in answer to such interrogatories, to be propounded by them, as may be best calculated to elicit the truth; and when not convenient for the witnesses to attend before the register and receiver, the evidence is to be taken by a justice of the peace, and be in answer to such interrogatories, to be propounded by him, as shall be best calculated to elicit the truth.

The credibility of the testimony is to be certified by the justice of the peace, and by such other persons of the neighborhood as can certify the same.

3. Possession on 19th June, 1834, and cultivation in 1833, are both essentially necessary to the conferring of the pre-emption privilege, the absence of either of which requisites will vitiate the claim. The building of a mill is a "possession," but without actual cultivation, it does not confer the privilege under the law. The extent and nature of the cultivation are points concerning which the law is silent. The cultivation of a crop of grain, esculent roots, or other vegetables of ordinary culture in the peculiar section of the country, is to be regarded as sufficient as respects the requisite of "cultivation," together with the ordinary fence or other suitable enclosure; or, when no crop or product has been taken from the land, and it shall appear to your satisfaction that the claimant has, in good faith, made the usual preparations for a crop, as, when he shall have cleared ground and enclosed the field, and ploughed the soil preparatory to the ensuing seed-time, and with intent to sow or plant, such shall be regarded and taken as a sufficient cultivation to entitle him to the benefit of the act.

The erection of a dwelling-house for the purposes of habitation, will be regarded as a requisite of "possession."

4. The provisions of the act are not available to any person or persons who shall fail to make the proof and payment required, before the day appointed for the commencement of the sales of lands, including the tract or tracts on which the right of pre-emption is claimed; nor can the right of pre-emption extend to any land which is reserved from sale by act of Congress, or by order of the President, or which by law may have been appropriated for any purpose whatsoever.

5. Should any tract of land, subject to private entry at the date of the act, be entered at ordinary private sale, and a pre-emption claim be duly established thereto within the term of two years from the date of the act, the former entry is null and void; and the register and receiver are hereby required to make monthly reports of all such interfering sales, designating the tract, date of sale, name of purchaser, quantity of acres, and purchase money; also, name of pre-emptor and date when satisfactory proof of pre-emption was admitted. On such reports, orders for repayment will be issued.

6. Where a person inhabits one quarter-section and cultivates another, he shall be permitted to enter the one or the other, at his discretion, provided such occupant shall designate, within six months from the passage of this act, (viz., from 19th June, 1834,) the quarter-section of which he claims the pre-emption, and file in the office of the register a relinquishment of the right of entry to the other; but in all cases where those six months will expire before the date of the public sale of the township including such claim, the designation and relinquishment must be made prior to the day of such sale.

7. Where an improvement is situate in different quarter-sections, the claimant is entitled to enter such two adjacent legal subdivisions, viz., the east and west half-quarters, as will include his improvement.

8. Where an improvement is situate on a fraction containing less than the quantity of a quarter-section, such fraction must be taken in lieu of an entire quarter-section. Should the fraction contain more than the quantity of a quarter-section, the claimant will be permitted to take, according to the legal sub-divisions of such fraction, so as to include his improvements, and obtain the quantity of one hundred and sixty acres, as nearly as practicable, without any further subdivision.

9. In cases where two or more persons are settled on the same quarter-section, the two first actual settlers who cultivated in 1833, and had possession on 19th June, 1834, are entitled to the right of pre-emption. If an equal division of such quarter by a north and south or east and west line, will not secure to each party his improvements, they must become joint purchasers and patentees of the entire quarter-section; if otherwise, it will be divided so as to secure to the parties respectively their improvements. In either case, the said settlers shall each be entitled to a pre-emption of eighty acres of land elsewhere, in said land district, so as not to interfere with other settlers having a right of preference.

10. You are requested to make monthly reports of those cases where two persons obtain a pre-emption on the same quarter-section.

11. Transfers of pre-emption rights, prior to the issuing of patents, will not be recognized.

12. The act of 29th May, 1830, applied only to lands to which the Indian title was extinguished at that date. Hence the right of pre-emption to lands to which the Indian title was extinguished subsequent to that date, can be claimed only in virtue of cultivation in 1833, and possession on 19th June, 1834.

13. In making your usual returns to this office, you will, in all cases of purchases under this act, designate them by marking on the returns the certificate of purchase and receipt, thus, "Pre-emption act of 1834." Separate returns, and distinct series of numbers for pre-emption "receipts" and "certificates," are not admissible.

14. Inasmuch as the ordinary private entry of lands subject thereto at the date of the act, must be permitted to proceed at the hazard of interfering with the pre-emption claims which may be established within the two years allowed by the act, it is indispensably necessary, by way of precaution, to require each applicant at private sale, to file with his written "application," an affidavit to the following effect, to wit:

"I do solemnly swear, (or affirm,) that since the 1st day of January, 1834, viz., on or about the ——— day of ———, I personally inspected the tract of land designated in the annexed application, viz., the ——— quarter of section No. ——, in township No. ——, of range No. ——, in the district of lands subject to sale at ———, and that there was not, at that time, any person residing thereon, or cultivating the same; and I do not believe that any pre-emption right exists thereto, either under the act of 29th May, 1830, or that of 19th June, 1834."

In case the party applying to purchase did not personally inspect the tract, he may be permitted to file, in the above form, the oath or affirmation of any person who alleges to have made such personal inspection; and in all cases, you must be satisfied of the credibility of such testimony.

15. Where the occupant alleges that he is unable or unwilling to pay for a full quarter-section, he may be permitted to enter the half-quarter which shall include his improvements; to be either the east or west half of such quarter; the divisional line running north and south, in the mode prescribed by the act of 24th April, 1820; but in such case he will be required to file a relinquishment of his further right of pre-emption for the quantity authorized by the act.

16. You are each entitled by law to receive from the party interested, a fee of fifty cents on each case of pre-emption admitted under the act.

17. The evidences adduced in support of pre-emption rights admitted under this act, and also the oaths required of purchasers at ordinary private sale, are to be carefully enclosed in the appropriate certificates of purchase, and transmitted therewith to this office, accompanied by your joint certificate as to the credibility of the witnesses.

The evidences adduced in support of cases not admitted, are to be carefully filed in the register's office, with suitable endorsements thereon.

18. By the 3d section of the act of 19th June, 1834, persons residing on the public lands, and cultivating the same, prior to the year 1829, but who were deprived of the advantage of the act of 29th May, 1830, by reason of the construction given to the same by the Secretary of the Treasury, are authorized to enter, at the minimum price, one quarter-section of the public lands within said land district. This provision can be available only to those whose right to a pre-emption in virtue of cultivation and possession prior to 1829, shall be established by satisfactory proof; and who, from any cause originating in the restrictions and limitations imposed by the Secretary of the Treasury, which have not had a remedy by the act of 14th July, 1832, or that of 2d March, 1833, have been deprived of the advantages of the act of 1830. When such cases shall be presented, you will specially report them, with all the testimony, for the decision of the department.

19. Where floating rights to eighty acres are granted under this act, they must be located and paid for at the time of entry of the tracts on which such floating rights accrue.

In the execution of the act, the utmost vigilance and diligence on your part are requisite to detect fraud, and determine the character and credibility of the testimony. A faithful and impartial discharge of your duty are alike essential to protect the government from imposition, and the honest claimant in his right.

I am, very respectfully, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

ELIJAH HAYWARD, Commissioner.

P. S.—It will be proper to give publicity to the law, and to these instructions, by distributing copies of this circular throughout your land district; for which purpose a number of copies will be furnished. It is also desirable that the newspapers published in your district should gratuitously publish the same, for the information of the community.

The forms of journal and ledger now used by the register and receiver, will be discontinued from and after the 1st of October next. A form of ledger to be substituted by the receiver will be furnished as soon as practicable.

AN ACT to revive the act entitled, "An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands," approved, May 29, 1830.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That every settler or occupant of the public lands, prior to the passage of this act, who is now in possession, and cultivated any part thereof, in the year 1833, shall be entitled to all the benefits and privileges provided by the act entitled, "An act to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands," approved, May 29, 1830; and the said act is hereby revived, and shall continue in force two years from the passage of this act, and no longer.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That when a person inhabits one quarter-section and cultivates another, he shall be permitted to enter the one or the other at his discretion: Provided, Such occupant shall designate, within six months from the passage of this act, the quarter-section of which he claims the pre-emption under the same.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That all persons residing on the public lands, and cultivating the same, prior to the year 1829, and who were deprived of the advantages of the law passed on the 29th May, 1830, by the constructions placed on said law by the Secretary of the Treasury, be and they are hereby authorized to enter at the minimum price of the government, one quarter-section of the public lands within said land district.

Approved, June 19, 1834.

ANDREW JACKSON.

AN ACT to grant pre-emption rights to settlers on the public lands.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That every settler or occupant of the public lands, prior to the passage of this act, who is now in possession, and cultivated any part thereof in the year one thousand eight hundred and twenty-nine, shall be, and he is hereby, authorized to enter, with the register of the land office for the district in which such lands may lie, by legal subdivisions, any number of acres, not more than one hundred and sixty, or a quarter-section, to include his improvement, upon paying to the United States the then minimum price of said land: Provided, however, That no entry or sale of any lands shall be made under the provisions of this act, which shall have been reserved for the use of the United States, or either of the several States in which any of the public lands may be situated.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That if two or more persons be settled upon the same quarter-section, the same may be divided between the first two actual settlers, if, by a north and south or east and west line, the settlement or improvement of each can be included in a half quarter-section; and in such case the said settlers shall each be entitled to a pre-emption of eighty acres of land elsewhere in said land district, so as not to interfere with other settlers having a right of preference.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That prior to any entries being made under the privileges given by this act, proof of settlement or improvement shall be made to the satisfaction of the register and receiver of the land district in which such lands may lie, agreeably to the rules to be prescribed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office for that purpose, which register and receiver shall each be entitled to receive fifty cents for his services therein. And that all assignments and transfers of the right of pre-emption given by this act, prior to the issuance of patents, shall be null and void.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That this act shall not delay the sale of any of the public lands of the United States beyond the time which has been, or may be, appointed for that purpose, by the President's proclamation; nor shall any of the provisions of this act be available to any person or persons who shall fail to make the proof and payment required before the day appointed for the commencement of the sales of lands, including the tract or tracts on which the right of pre-emption is claimed; nor shall the right of pre-emption, contemplated by this act, extend to any land which is reserved from sale by act of Congress, or by order of the President, or which may have been appropriated for any purpose whatever.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That this act shall be and remain in force for one year from and after its passage.

Approved, May 29, 1830. ANDREW JACKSON.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1508. [1ST SESSION.

RELATIVE TO THE SELECTION OF LANDS GRANTED TO THE POLISH EXILES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 15, 1836.

ALTON, March 22, 1836.

DEAR SIR: I have been returned from surveying on Rock river about six weeks. You no doubt recollect that when I saw you in Springfield, last October, that I was going out to survey a district of public land on Rock river, out of which it was expected the Polish agents would select the 36 sections granted to the 285 Polish exiles, by an act of Congress passed in June, 1834. I have so far completed the work assigned me as to enable the agents to select the three townships out of which they must select the 36 sections. The Rock river country is equal to any part of Illinois, and is fast filling up with settlers; some of them have large improvements for the short time they have been there. The most valuable improvement was made by Mr. G. Kent, in the fall of 1834 and 1835. Mr. Kent's improvement consists of a saw-mill, on a small stream that empties into Rock river, at a place now called Rockford, and a field of eighty acres. One of the Polish agents was out on Rock river last November, and selected township 46, north, range 1, east, of the third principal meridian, which is next to the State line; also township 28, north, range 11, east, of the fourth principal meridian, and which lies adjoining and west of township 46, north, range 1, east, of the third principal meridian.

The settlers felt great interest in the subject of the Polish claims, having settled upon the land without expecting to be disturbed by foreigners. The agent manifested great sensibility on the subject, and great reluctance to take the improvements from the settlers, and promised many of them that he would not take their improvements. The selection of townships 28 and 46, by the Polish agent, left township 44, north, range 1, east, out of the range of his selection, and left township 45, north, range 1, east, and townships 45 and 46 north, range 2, east, as the only townships from which he (the Polish agent) could select the third township, under the act of Congress before referred to. In consequence of this decision, (which was considered final, so far as township 44 was concerned,) the inhabitants of township 44 extended their improvements, and, new emigrants coming in, took up most of the land in township 44, which had not before been taken up. At the time the Polish agent was on Rock river, there were from twenty-five to thirty claims in township 44. There was no person living in township 45, range 1, east; two families in 45 north, range 2, east; three or four families in township 46, north, range 2, east, and five families in township 46, north, range 1, east. These townships are all very good land, and the Polish agent might have selected first rate lands without taking any improvements, and thereby conciliated the feelings of the American population. The Polish agent returned to St. Louis, and was informed by the surveyor general that the field notes of the exterior boundaries of township 28, north, range 11, east of the fourth principal meridian, had not been returned; he, therefore, could not give me instructions to subdivide said township. The agent, then, by the advice of some of his countrymen, and probably of some other persons in St. Louis, who wish to speculate in the Polish lands, determined to disregard his promise to the settlers not to take their improvements, and to change, in part, his selection, by townships, and to select townships 44, 45, and 46, north, range 1, east of the principal meridian, and to take all the improvements in said townships. You are, no doubt, aware of the peculiar state of the public mind, in regard to the Polish exiles, at the time they obtained the grant of public land. They were considered as a suffering and persecuted people, on account of their attachment to the principles of civil liberty; they, therefore, excited the sympathy of the American people, under the influence of which principle, rather than sound judgment, they obtained the grant of land. But it never could have been anticipated that the Polish agents, under the authority of an act of Congress, would presume to take possession of the improvements of American settlers. I have talked very freely with the Polish agent, in St. Louis, who is styled Baron Chlopicki, on the subject of his selection, and told him plainly the consequences of his taking the claims of the settlers; that it would prejudice the public mind against the Poles, and that it would be the most unwise and impolitic course that could possibly be adopted. The agent replied that he had the right to do so, by the act of Congress, and that he would sell their land. I am inclined to think that he has been urged to this measure by some persons who think they can speculate out of the Polish lands; but I do not believe that, as the law now stands, the Poles can sell or transfer any right they have, or can acquire, to their lands, until they get possession, and "cultivate and occupy, for the space of ten years, without intermission, in the proportion of one settlement to every five hundred acres of land." As by the act the selection is to be made under the Secretary of the Treasury, it appears to me that if the proper representations are made to that officer, he would give instructions to the Polish agents not to take the claims of actual settlers. This would be decidedly to the advantage of the Poles themselves, for the consequences can readily be foreseen of their attempting to drive off American settlers. Townships 45 and 46, range 1, east, and 45 and 46, range 2, east of the third principal meridian, are all good land, and there are not at this time more than twelve families in the whole four townships; for since it became probable that the Polish agents would select three of those townships there have been no new settlements made in them, while every other part of the country has been filling up very fast with an enterprising and intelligent population. I have no doubt you will find it to your interest to visit that country before next August. I shall be surveying on Rock river all next summer, and should you come up there I should be very glad to see you. I think you have an opportunity to rendering an important service to a respectable portion of your constituents, which will not be forgotten before next August.

Public expectation has been sadly disappointed in regard to the Polish exiles. They have proved to be (with few exceptions) a miserable, degraded set of vagabonds, unworthy the esteem and regard of all respectable people. They are now dispersed to all parts of the United States; and some of them, as I am informed, have gone to Texas. They are generally engaged in keeping groceries, and many of them are dissipated, indolent, and vicious, having no qualifications or inclinations to be respectable citizens. Old Chlopicki himself is keeping one of the meanest groceries in St. Louis. General Langham told me about two weeks ago that he had no doubt that the next grand jury in St. Louis county would indict Chlopicki for keeping a disorderly house. Public opinion is now much stronger against the Poles than it ever was in their favor; and the opinion universally prevails that the Poles could not at this time obtain a grant of Congress for one single foot of land; but, as it is, we must make the best of the act of Congress, and permit them to make their selection, and avail themselves of the benefit of the law; but it is not believed by any intelligent gentleman with whom I have conversed (and I have conversed with a great many) that they ever will comply with the terms of the law so as to obtain a title from the United States to a single tract of land. Under this view of the subject, it is to be hoped that if the Secretary of the Treasury does now possess the power to control their selection, that he will instruct the Polish agents to regard the claims of actual settlers, and thereby put at rest a question which has produced no small excitement, and render to the Poles themselves an important service. Under existing circumstances it would be best for the Poles to take township 46 north, range one east, and two of the following described townships, viz.: 45, range one, 45 and 46, range two east. I shall subdivide these townships early in the season; and the delay of which some of the Poles have complained so much would not be much inconvenience to them. The Poles had better go back to Poland than to go on to Rock river, and attempt to take possession of the improvements of the actual settlers. I had hoped that the present Congress would pass a law granting pre-emption to actual settlers; but, from the latest accounts we have from Washington, there is not much probability of it. This reluctance on the part of the representatives of a free and independent people to grant to actual settlers a right of pre-emption, contrasted with the law granting the land to the Poles, furnishes a striking commentary on the frailty of human nature, which, in the one case, denies to the enterprising and industrious American citizens, who suffer the privations and undergo the hardships of a frontier settlement, what it would seem they almost have a right to demand, as a matter of right, and in the other case a liberality toward a set of vagabond foreigners which has never been exercised toward our own citizens. Although this letter is addressed to you, it is intended for the whole Illinois delegation. I am informed by Judge Smith and others, that you have been advised, on this subject, what course the Polish agent intends to pursue, and you can with confidence rely upon this communication as to matters of fact. I also enclose a sketch plat, showing or representing the situation of all the townships referred to in this letter. Have the goodness to inform me of the final determination of this question. Address me at Chicago, Illinois.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. A. SPAULDING.

Hon. WM. L. MAY, Washington city.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1509. [1ST SESSION.

RELATING TO SURVEYS OF THE PUBLIC LANDS IN ILLINOIS AND MISSOURI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 16, 1836.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 15, 1836.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose a communication from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, accompanied by a report from the surveyor general of Illinois and Missouri, and certain documents therein referred to.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. SPEAKER of the House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, April 14, 1836.

SIR: The report from the surveyor general of Missouri, which was expected to arrive in time to accompany my general report made to you, on the 5th of December last, was not received until the middle of last month.

I have now the honor to submit the same to you in duplicate, with the documents and maps therewith transmitted, marked A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, and K.

In submitting these papers, I would beg leave to call your attention to the difference between the estimate of expenses of surveying during the year 1836, made by the surveyor general, document marked A, and the estimate for the same object, prepared at this office in the absence of the surveyor's estimate. Had the latter been received in time, I should have estimated seventy thousand dollars instead of forty thousand dollars for the expenses of surveying in those two States, to be paid for during the current year. I beg leave to suggest that the estimate from the department may be increased accordingly.

I have the honor to remain, sir, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, ST. LOUIS, January 30, 1836.

SIR: On the 20th day of November, 1835, I forwarded to the Register of the Treasury my estimate of the expenses of this office during the present year, and of which the enclosed paper, marked A, is a copy.

The first item in this estimate is for surveying 18,038 miles of public lands, which I think ought to be executed in the several land districts of Illinois and Missouri in the proportions and quantities, and for the reasons hereinafter specified.

First.—In the northeast district of Illinois. (See the accompanying sketch, marked B.)

With unimportant exceptions, all that part of this district which lies south of the old Indian boundary lines, colored green, has been surveyed, and the extensive sales effected therein during the past season, in the townships which were brought into market, fully sustain my reports of the 19th November, 1833, and the 16th December, 1834, in relation thereto, and to the unsurveyed lands of the district.

I therefore again recommend that all the exterior boundaries represented by black dotted lines be surveyed; and that all the fractions adjoining Lake Michigan, and as many other townships and fractional townships as will be equal in the whole to about sixty entire townships, be subdivided.

Which gives for this district:

	Miles.
Township lines	1,056
Subdivision of sixty townships	3,600
Meanders of the lake and navigable rivers	300
Aggregate	4,956

This estimate includes the surveys ordered by the letters from the General Land Office, dated the 5th of August, and the 14th November, 1835.

Second.—In the northwest land district of Illinois. (See accompanying sketch, marked C.)

The township boundaries drawn with black ink on this sketch have been surveyed; those drawn with red ink have been contracted for; and those represented by black dotted lines have been neither surveyed nor contracted for.

All the townships, and fractional townships, which lie south of the old Indian boundary line, have been subdivided. The survey of a part of those adjoining the Mississippi, however, is incomplete, and is now being finished, under instructions from this office.

North of the old Indian boundary, townships 22 and 23 north, range 4 east; 21, 22, and 23 north, range 3 east; 19, 20, and 21 north, range 2 east; 18, 19, and 20 north, range 1 east; and 18 north, ranges 1 and 2 west, have been subdivided by C. R. Bennet, under the contract of himself and L. H. Bowen, dated 20th of August, 1833.

Neither Mr. Hamilton or Mr. Stephenson have returned the surveys which they ought to have executed under their contracts of 1833. Letters, of which the enclosed papers numbered 1 and 2 are copies, were addressed to them on the subject. Mr. Hamilton returned for answer a letter, of which the enclosed, marked 3, is a copy; my reply thereto is marked 4. No answer has been received from Mr. Stephenson, and I have again addressed him, as per copy thereof, marked 5. When their answers are received, such steps will be taken in the business as may be deemed proper and right, of which you will be duly informed.

The township boundary lines, which have not been surveyed nor contracted for, together with those of Mr. Spaulding's contract, will amount to about 444 miles, and ought all to be surveyed, so that the townships which may be wanted at any time for immediate use, can be selected and subdivided.

The abundance of mineral in this district, and the richness thereof, together with the large bodies of fertile land which are fast filling up with agricultural emigrants desirous of securing titles to the soil, will require the subdivision of at least 30 townships, including those embraced in the contract of Mr. Spaulding, and in addition to the contracts of Messrs. Stephenson and Hamilton.

The estimate for this district is, therefore, as follows:

	Miles.
Township boundary lines	444
Subdivision of 30 townships	1,800
Meanders	100
Aggregate	2,344

THAT PART OF THE WESTERN LAND DISTRICT

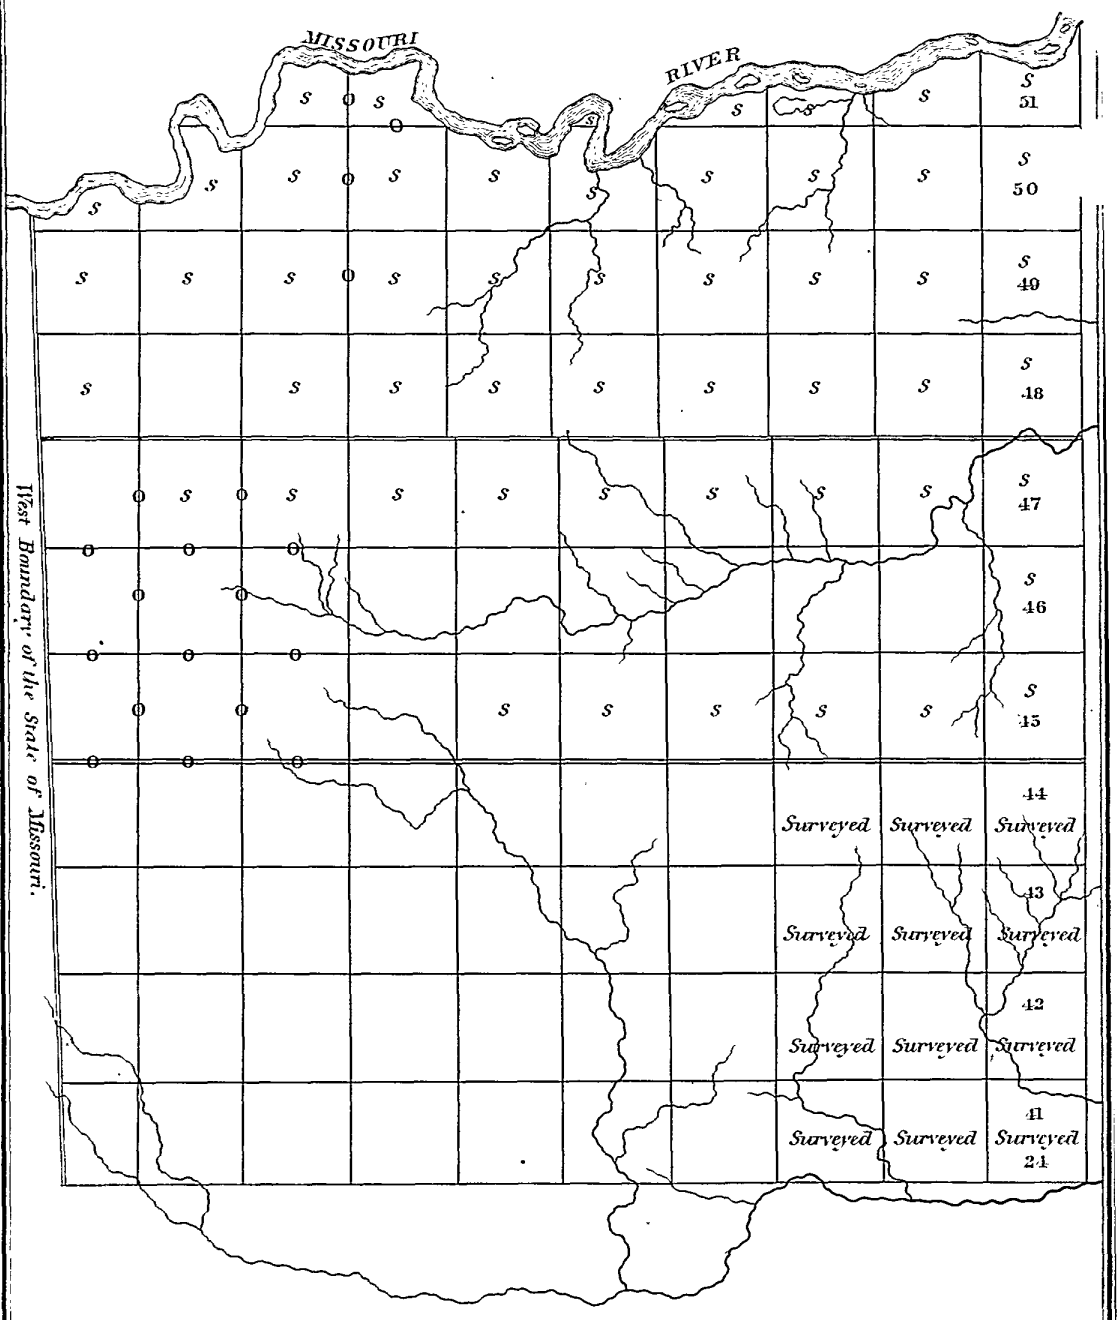
which lies

SOUTH OF MISSOURI.



Lith.ed Bourn & Co. Phil.

Third.—In the military district, Illinois.

The survey of many of the townships on the Illinois, Mississippi, and Spoon rivers, together with some others, are incomplete, and the almost daily request of actual settlers for the survey of parts thereof, is unerring evidence of the propriety of attending thereto without delay. A detailed list of these incomplete surveys cannot just now be made, because of other pressing demands on the force of the office, but from the examination already had, it is believed that to put said district in proper order, the surveying and resurveying will amount to at least 1,000 miles.

Fourth.—Palmyra District, Missouri. (See the accompanying sketch, marked D.)

The townships in this district south of the old Indian boundary line, have all been subdivided, except townships 61, 63, 64, 65, and 66 north, range 11 west; townships 62, 63, 64, 65, and 66 north, range 1 west; townships 63, 64, 65, and 66 north, range 13 west; and fractional townships 67 north, ranges 11, 12, and 13 west.

The settlements have extended across these townships, which indicates the expediency of subdividing the whole of them, except perhaps the fractional townships, which it might probably be as well to defer until the north boundary of the State is surveyed and established, so that we may avoid making fractions on the old Indian boundary.

The survey of townships 51 and 52 north, range 1 west, should be completed and put in proper order. Of the necessity of this work there is already sufficient evidence on file in the General Land Office, orders having heretofore been given to that effect, but which have not been fulfilled for reasons which will be the subject of another communication.

The demands for this district are therefore as follows:

	Miles.
Subdivision of 14 townships	840
Completing and correcting the surveys of townships 51 and 52 north, range 1 east	120
Aggregate	960

Fifth.—Howard district, Missouri, north of the Missouri river. (See accompanying sketch, marked E.)

All the townships south of the standard line between townships 60 and 61 north, except township 58 north, in ranges 17, 18, and 19 west, and 59 and 60, ranges 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, and 21 west, have been subdivided.

None of the township boundary lines north of said standard line, except the east boundary of range 14, nor the dotted line south of said standard, have been surveyed. The settlements are extending fast over this section of the country. I would, therefore, recommend the survey of all the unsurveyed township lines, except those which close the old Indian boundary: and from the best information I can obtain, at least 10 townships ought to be subdivided for immediate use.

Which gives for this district:

	Miles.
Township boundary lines south of the standard, 162 } North of the standard, 720 }	882
Subdivisions of 10 townships	600
Aggregate	1,482

Sixth.—Howard district, south of the Missouri river. (See sketch, marked F.)

All the townships of this portion of Howard district, except townships 41 and 42 north, ranges 21, 22, and 23 west, have been surveyed.

Five of these six unsurveyed townships ought now to be surveyed to accommodate the settlers therein: the other unsurveyed township, viz.: 41 north, 21 west, is not wanted at present, as I am informed, by the report of the surveyor who run the boundary lines thereof.

	Miles.
Subdivisions of 5 townships	300
Meanders	30
Aggregate	330

Seventh.—Western land district of Missouri, north of the Missouri river. (See sketch, marked G.)

The contracts now in progress embrace all the townships in this section of the district south of the standard line between townships 60 and 61 north, and not heretofore surveyed. The surveyors have completed their operations on the ground, and will shortly make complete returns of their field notes to this office.

Arrangements should be made for subdividing the townships of this district north of the aforesaid standard line, whenever it may be demanded by the inhabitants of the country, who are pushing the settlements in that direction, and have, in some places, gone to the western limits of the State.

The estimate for this part of the western district, therefore, embraces all the unsurveyed township boundary lines, except the fractions which close the old Indian boundary.

It is expected also that 10 townships at least are wanted for immediate use, and should, therefore, be subdivided.

The contract of Joseph C. Brown, dated 10th of June, 1833, (and transmitted to the General Land Office on the 9th of January, 1834,) for surveying in this district, has been in part cancelled, and a new contract entered into, as per a copy hereof enclosed herewith, and numbered 6; his bond was amended in conformity therewith. (See the copy numbered 7.) Mr. Brown has finished the work on the ground, and will shortly make his return to this office.

The contract and bond of Messrs. Porter and Glover, of the 20th September, 1833, was also annulled, and a new one entered into as per the enclosed copy thereof, numbered 8. For reasons beyond their control, they did not commence work under this contract during the summer, and circumstances rendered it expedient to release Mr. Glover, which was done in a letter of the 10th October, 1834, of which the enclosed paper, numbered 9, is a copy. Mr. Glover being released from this contract, a separate one was entered into with Mr. Porter, of which the accompanying paper, numbered 10, is a copy. Mr. Porter commenced operations under this contract, and died before he had completed the survey of one township. I then entered into a contract with Mr. Applegate; see the copy thereof, numbered 11. Mr. Applegate has completed the surveys under this contract, except of the township commenced by Mr. Porter, and is daily expected with his returns.

Mr. Robinson's contract of the 24th of October, 1833, was also cancelled, because of the change in the contract of Mr. Brown, and a new contract entered into, of which the enclosed paper, numbered 12, is a copy; he has finished operations in the woods, and returned his notes to this office for examination.

Eighth.—Western land district of Missouri, south of Missouri river. (See sketch, marked H.)

The townships in this district marked with the letter "S" are old surveyed townships, and the 12 townships with the word "surveyed" written therein, are surveyed under contracts of 1834.

Three of the old surveyed townships by Talton Turner, viz.: 49, 50, and 51 north, range 30 west; and the township boundary lines marked thus, —o— have been suspended for correction.

I have no certain information relative to any of the unsurveyed townships of this portion of the district, except townships 41, 42, 43, and 44 north, range 27 west, which are reported by the surveyor who run the exterior lines to be valuable, and well worthy subdividing at this time. The general information on this subject induces me to believe that the present demands of the actual settlers require at least 800 miles of surveying.

Ninth.—The southwestern land district of Missouri. (See sketch, marked I.)

The township and fractional townships of this district are equal to about 420 entire townships, of which the following have been surveyed and returned to this office.

Old surveys.

Townships 30, 31, 32, 33, and 34 north, ranges 11, 12, 13, and 14 west; township 40 north, ranges 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, and 20 west; in all, 30 townships.

Recent surveys.

Township 39 north, range 12 west;
" 36 north, ranges 15 and 16 west;
" 22 north, ranges 19 and 20 west, south of White river, equal to one whole township.
In all, three townships and two fractional townships, equal, in the whole, to four entire townships.

New surveys under contracts of 1834.

Townships 26, 27, 28, 29, north, range 22 west;
" 27, 28, 29, 35, 36, and 37 north, range 23 west;
" 27, 28, 29, 35, 36, 38, and 39 north, range 24 west;
" 36, 37, 38, 39, and 40 north, range 25 west;
" 35, 36, 37, and 40, and the two southern ranges of sections in township 38 north, range 26 west; in all, 27 townships, and one third of a township of new surveys, under contracts of 1834 and 1835. The contracts of 1834 and 1835 include the subdivision of 86⅔ other townships, viz.: 10 each, by Messrs. McDonald, Drinker, Holliday, Barcroft, Montgomery, and Stansbury, to be selected in the districts assigned them, so as to accommodate the greatest number of actual settlers; 15 by Mr. Christy, being the extent of his district, as designated on the diagram, and 11⅔ by Mr. Applegate, viz: 30, 31, 32, 33, and 34 north, range 25 west; the four northern ranges of sections in township 38 north, of range 26 west; township 39 north, range 26 west; townships 35, 36, 37, 38, and 39 north, range 27 west, or as many thereof as contain a due proportion of tillable land.

Messrs. McDonald, Holliday, Barcroft, and Drinker, have returned from the woods, and Mr. Barcroft has placed his field notes in this office for examination. I have no certain information as to when Messrs. Applegate, Montgomery, Stansbury, and Christy, may be looked for; their return, however, is daily expected.

This district is, therefore, as regards the surveys, conditioned as follows:
30 townships of old surveys;
4 townships of recent surveys;
27⅓ townships of new surveys, under contracts of 1834;
86⅔ townships of the contracts of 1834 and 1835, not yet returned:
In all, 148 townships, which will be surveyed when the present contracts are completed, leaving 272 townships unsurveyed, of which I have certain information of only the following townships, viz.: 36 north, range 11 west; 35, 36 and 38 north, range 12 west; 35, 36 and 39 north, range 13 west; 35 and 39 north, range 14 west; 38 north, range 15 west; 37 north, range 16 west; 37, 38 and 39 north, range 17 west; 35 and 39 north, range 18 west; 36 and 38 north, range 19 west; 35 north, range 20 west; and 40 north, ranges 23, 24 and 27 west; in all 22 townships, (each marked with the letter A,) which are reported by the surveyor who run the exterior lines as containing good land, and actual settlers sufficient to require their immediate subdivisions.

And the following townships, viz.: 35, 37, 38 and 39 north, range 11 west; 37 north, range 12 west; 37 and 38 north, range 13 west; 36, 37 and 38 north, range 14 west; 35, 37, and 39 north, range 15 west; 35 38 and 39 north, range 16 west; 35 and 36 north, range 17 west; 36, 37 and 38 north, range 18 west; 35, 37, and 39 north, range 19 west; 36, 37, 38 and 39 north, range 20 west; 35, 36, 37, 38, 39 and 40 north, range 21 west; 25, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39 and 40 north, range 22 west; 25, 26, 38 and 39 north, range 23 west; 25 and 26 north, range 24 west; and 35 north, range 25 west; in all, 47 townships, which are reported by the surveyors, who surveyed the boundary lines thereof, as being generally too poor and broken (with thin soil and without settlers therein) to require their present subdivision.

Much of the unsurveyed country lying east and south of the contracts of 1834 and 1835, is broken with thin soil. There are, however, some bodies of good land, settled by persons desirous of becoming the owners thereof.

On Grand river and the southern fork of the Osage, and their tributaries, in townships 35 to 41 north, ranges 28 and 33 west, there are many settlers, who are anxious to have the country brought into market; and it is very probable that much of the land within the districts to be laid off into townships, and in part to be subdivided by the deputies who have not yet made their returns, will be reported of good quality, with thick settlements.

Taking all these things into consideration, a proper regard to the people of the country induces me to recommend an appropriation for the surveying of 3,400 miles within this district.

Tenth.—Cape Girardeau district, Missouri. (See sketch, marked K, of the southwestern part thereof.)

The township boundary lines which have been surveyed in this district are drawn with black, and those not surveyed are drawn with red ink. The letter S denotes the townships which have been subdivided.

Of the townships and fractional townships which have not been surveyed, many are known to contain large bodies of swamp and inundated land. It is, however, equally certain that there is much good land, thickly settled, (particularly northeast of the town of New Madrid, between the St. Francis and the swamp in Stoddard county; also, on and near the Mississippi river, between the town of New Madrid and the south boundary of the State,) which has not been surveyed, and which the people are very anxious to have brought into market. I therefore think their just expectations will require an appropriation for the survey of 240 miles of township boundaries, and 1,226 miles, equal to 20 townships, of subdivision, allowing 26 miles for meanders of navigable streams.

RECAPITULATION.

1st. In Illinois—

4,956	miles in the	Northeast land district.
2,344	do.	Northwest land district.
1,000	do.	Military district.
8,300	miles, aggregate of Illinois.

2d. In Missouri—

960	miles in the	Palmyra district.
1,482	do.	Howard district, north of the Missouri river.
330	do.	Howard district, south of the Missouri river.
1,300	do.	Western district, north of the Missouri river.
800	do.	Western district, south of the Missouri river.
3,400	do.	Southwestern district.
1,466	do.	Cape Girardeau district.
9,738	miles aggregate for Missouri.
Add 8,300	miles, the aggregate for Illinois,

And we have 18,038 miles.

The next item is for surveying the private confirmed claims, and connecting them with the lines of the public surveys, which is estimated at $6,000. However, unless the report of the commissioners for examining the private land claims in Missouri, and which is now before Congress, be sanctioned thereby, the appropriation under this head need not exceed $1,200.

Next in course is the estimate for surveying the town and village lots, out-lots, and common field lots, in, adjoining, and belonging to, the several towns and villages in the State of Missouri, confirmed by the act of Congress of the 13th of June, 1812, and other acts in relation thereto.

The estimate includes the entire expense of surveying all the confirmed lots in and adjoining the towns embraced by the law, (there being upward of 1,500 confirmations,) and is based upon the terms of my contract with Mr. Brown for the survey of the lots in the town of St. Louis.

This business has been delayed from time to time, to the manifest injury of the several towns and villages, principally for the want of an appropriation making adequate allowance therefor.

In obedience to your instructions, I have contracted for the survey of the lots in the city of St. Louis, in order to designate and set apart the vacant lots granted for school purposes, as contemplated by the 2d section of the act of the 26th of May, 1824.

It would be a losing business for a surveyor to undertake these lots at the rate which is paid for surveying public lands; I therefore engaged Mr. Joseph C. Brown, at an allowance of six dollars per day for his personal services and expenses, and likewise to pay him all other necessary expenses.

I hope my contract with him (of which the enclosed paper, number 13, is a copy) will be sanctioned by Congress, and meet your approbation.

Then follows the town of Galena, which was ordered to be laid off by the act of Congress of the 5th of February, 1829; but as no appropriation has been made to defray the expenses thereof, it has, of necessity, been delayed; of which the inhabitants of the place, in both their individual and corporate capacities, and the officers in charge of the county affairs, very earnestly complain.

The estimate for clerk-hire is the same in amount appropriated at the last session of Congress, which is paid to nine clerks, according to the enclosed statement, numbered 14.

In my letter of the 26th of January, 1835, to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, I gave him a statement of the arrears in furnishing the district land offices with plats and descriptions; and informed him that the progress already made justified the expectation that all the plats, and the greater part of the descriptions, would be furnished the registers within six months from that date.

With but few exceptions, the plats were furnished, and also many of the descriptions, within the time specified, as stated in the accompanying list, numbered 15.

Sickness of several of the clerks, of from one to three and four months duration, prevented a portion of the plats and descriptions here referred to, being furnished within the expected time; and has also prevented me from furnishing the General Land Office and the district land offices, with the plats specified in the statement transmitted to the General Land Office on the 16th of May, 1835, and referred to in my letter of the 30th of April, of the same year. The same cause has likewise been a great drawback on the general operations of the office.

The field notes of new surveys copied up to the present time, for the General Land Office, are as follows:

In Missouri.

The notes of Shields, Barcroft, and Eiler, under their contracts of 1833, amounting to about 2,100 miles.

In Illinois.

The notes of the surveys by Messrs. J. M. Moore, James Moore, J. M. and B. F. Messenger, Edward Smith, John A. Clark, and Charles R. Bennet, under contracts of 1833, making in all about 4,200 miles of surveying; which, with the field notes of the new surveys of Missouri, amounts to 6,300 miles.

Also, during the past season, and up to the present time, there has been copied of the old surveys:

The notes of the subdivision of townships 21 to 23 (inclusive) north, ranges 1 and 2 east; and of townships 21 to 28 north, range 3 east of the 5th principal meridian, being about 2,040 miles.

And the notes of the survey of the 5th principal meridian from the mouth of the Arkansas north, to its intersection with the Mississippi river, and of the other surveys adjacent thereto, on either side, and north of the Missouri river, amounting to about 1,000 miles, and contained in volumes 1, 2, 3, and 4, of original field notes of Missouri surveys, making together about 5,140 miles.

Plats of the following new surveyed townships have been constructed from the field notes, and the contents of the sections adjoining the north and west boundary lines thereof, and of the fractional sections on the navigable water courses and Indian bonndaries, have been calculated.

In Missouri.

L. M. Eiler's contract of 1833; 9 townships, viz.: 38 and 39 north, ranges 5, 6, 7, and 8; 40 north, range 5 west of the 5th principal meridian.

Elias Barcroft's contract of 1833; 3 townships, viz.: 39 north, range 12 west; 36 north, ranges 15 and 16 west of the 5th principal meridian.

Jesse Applegate's contract of 1834; 4 townships, viz.: 38 and 39 north, range 25 west; 35 and 36 north, range 26 west of the 5th principal meridian.

George M. Wright's contract of 1834; 8 townships, viz.: 40 north, ranges 25 and 26 west; 41 and 42 north, ranges 24, 25, and 26 west of the fifth principal meridian.

William Shield's contract of 1834; 12 townships, viz.: 43 and 44 north, in ranges 21 to 26 (inclusive) of the 5th principal meridian.

In all, plats of 36 townships; of 8 of these there are duplicate copies, and of the other 28 one copy each, making 44 copies of township plats.

In Illinois.

John Milton Moore's contract of 1833; 10 townships, viz.: 26, 27, 28, 29, and 30 north, ranges 1 and 2 east of the 3d principal meridian.

James Moore's contract of 1833; 10 townships, viz.: 26, 27, 28, 29, and 30 north, ranges 3 and 4 east of the 3d principal meridian.

John M. Messenger's and B. F. Messenger's contract of 1833; 10 townships, viz.: 26, 27, 28, 29, and 30 north, ranges 7 and 8 east of the 3d principal meridian.

Edward Smith's contract of 1833; 9 townships, viz.: 28, 29, and 30 north, in ranges 11, 12, and 13 west of the 2d principal meridian.

Daniel W. Beckwith's contract of 1833; 11 townships, viz.: 31 north, ranges 10 to 14 east; 32 north, ranges 9 to 14 east of the third principal meridian.

D. A. Spaulding's contract of 1833; 11 townships, viz.: 33 north, ranges 10 to 15 east; 34 north, ranges 11 to 15 east of the 3d principal meridian.

John H. Clark's contract of 1833; 9 townships, viz.: 35 north, ranges 12, 13, 14, and 15 east; 36 north, ranges 13, 14, and 15 east; 37 north, ranges 14 and 15 east of the 3d principal meridian.

C. R. Bennett's contract of 1833: 13 townships, viz.: 22 and 23 north, range 4 east, 21, 22, and 23 north, range 3 east; 19, 20, and 21 north, range 2 east; 18, 19, and 20 north, range 1 east; 18 north, ranges 1 and 2 west of the 4th principal meridian.

W. L. D. Ewing's contract of 1833: 15 townships, viz.: 27, 28, 29, and 30 north, ranges 9, 10, and 11 east of the 3d principal meridian; 28, 29, and 30 north, range 14 west of the 2d principal meridian.

In all, plats of 98 townships; of these duplicate copies have been made of 141, 1 copy each of 22, and no copies of the other 35.

Making in all of the new surveys in Illinois, 134 plats constructed from the field-notes, 148 copies of plats.

Attending to the increasing applications of individuals for information, and furnishing authenticated copies of plats and field notes to be used in judicial investigations, and other miscellaneous duties for the benefit and convenience of the public, who are mainly dependent therefor on this office, occupies, upon an average, at least the time of one clerk.

Calculating and dividing the fractional acres under the law of 1832, and making plats thereof, consume much time, and will continue to do so, until the business is brought to a close. Upon an average, one clerk has been employed thereat during the past season.

The field notes and copies thereof, of the surveys returned to this office, by the contracting deputies, are closely examined, and all defects or discrepancies therein, or in the surveys, are properly explained and corrected before they are approved and received; during the past season this business has given employment nearly equal to the labor of one clerk.

Much time is needed to comply with the calls of the different registers for information in the discharge of their official duties; to instruct the deputy surveyors relative to the execution of the public surveys, and to adjust difficulties which often arise from various causes in the practical operations on the ground; to state and make out the accounts of the deputy surveyors; and to perform numerous incidental services which are of almost every day's occurrence.

All of which has been attended to with due diligence, and continues to receive that care which the high responsibilities attached to this office requires.

From what is here stated you will be able to judge whether or not the last year's appropriation has been properly and beneficially applied. With regard to the present year, I have already given you a detail of the work to be done in the field, and proceed now with the proposed operations of the office:

	Days' Labor.
1st. To furnish the registers with the plats and descriptions of the old surveys yet due, as per list, No. 15—13 plats and 40 descriptions	50
2d. To furnish the registers with other descriptions yet due, particularly of the townships south of the base line in the military tract in Illinois, and some others, of which precise information cannot be given until I am more particularly advised in relation to the wants of their offices	200
3d. To examine 84 of the 134 township plats constructed from the field-notes of new surveys, as before stated in this communication, making the necessary statements thereon, and on the fifty already examined; writing the certificates, referring to the field notes and accounts, in connection with the circular from the General Land Office, of the 23d of September, 1831.	75
4th. To complete and examine the duplicate copies of said 134 township plats for the General Land Office, and for the district land offices	150
5th. To examine the field-notes of surveys already copied for the General Land Office, will require two persons 68 days	136
6th. To construct from the field-notes the plats of the 28 townships by Messrs. Robinson, Porter, Applegate, and Brown, in the Howard and western land districts (see sketches marked E and G); the plats of the ten townships surveyed by L. M. Eiler, in the southwestern land district, viz.: 35, 36, 37 north, range 23 west; 35, 36, 37, 38, and 39 north, range 24 west; and 36 and 37 north, range 25 west; the plats of 13 townships surveyed, and to be surveyed, by Jesse Applegate, in the southwestern land district, viz.: 30, 31, 32, 33, and 34 north, range 25 west; 37, 38, and 39 north, range 26 west: and 35, 36, 37, 38, and 39 north, range 27 west; the plats of 85 townships surveyed, and now being surveyed, by Messrs. Holliday, Barcroft, Montgomery, Stansbury, Christy, Drinker, Garrison, and McDonald, in the southwestern land district of Missouri, (see sketch marked I;) and plats of the 10 townships contracted for by Mr. Spaulding, in the northwestern district of Illinois, (see sketch marked C; in all, plats of 136 townships	272
7th. To make duplicate copies of the plats of said townships for the General Land Office, and for the district land offices	340
8th. To make the descriptions, and examine the same yet due, the district land offices of the new surveyed townships, up to and including all the present contracts	350
9th. To copy for the General Land Office the field notes not yet copied, of the new surveys, up to, and including all the present contracts, say 16,000 miles of surveying, at twenty miles per day, including the services of two persons, 80 days, equal 160 days' labor, in the examination thereof	960
10th. Preparing the contracts, bonds, and instructions, for the surveys, estimated to be contracted for during the present year, including the descriptions of the corners of the adjacent surveys, which must be furnished, in order to enable the deputies to connect the surveys therewith; say 25 contracts, at 4 days each	100
11th. To prepare contracts and instructions for the survey of the private confirmed claims, and furnish descriptions of the corners of the adjoining public and private surveys, if the report of the board of commissioners for examining the unconfirmed land claims in Missouri is sanctioned by Congress; examining the surveys when executed and returned; making plats thereof, and the adjoining fractional sections, and calculating the acres of said fractional sections; furnishing the General Land Office, and the district land offices, with copies of the plats of the surveys and adjoining fractions; recording the plats and notes of the surveys; and furnishing the parties concerned with the copies thereof	500
12th. To examine the field notes of the surveys yet to be returned under existing contracts, and of those already in the office for examination, and to compare the copies thereof	160
13th. To answer the call of registers, prepare for their offices and the General Land Office, parts of fractional sections subdivided under the act of Congress of the 5th of April, 1832	300
14th. Attending to the various applications of individuals for information, and furnishing copies of such documents as their necessities require	300
15th. Aggregate	4,143

This aggregate, divided by 300, the average number of days' labor that may be expected in a year, will require more than the services of thirteen persons.

To reduce the business within the present estimate, the work which may most properly, and with least injury to the public, be postponed, is that specified in the 5th, 8th, and 9th items, and a part of that specified in the 11th item; this will bring the aggregate within limits that may with certainty be fulfilled.

The $600 which I have estimated for bookbinding, is intended to be applied principally to binding the original field-books of the notes of surveys, which stand much in need thereof. The notes are generally in small books, made up of the sheets of paper folded and stitched (sometimes rather loosely for documents of so great importance) in such manner, and of such sizes, as seem to have suited the convenience of the surveyor in the field. The injuries which many of these books have already sustained by long use in their present condition, clearly indicate the measure here proposed as a necessary means of guarding them therefrom in future; and point it out as the plan which ought to be applied hereafter to all field-books when first returned.

The other items of expenditure, viz., for stationery, office-rent, fuel, and office furniture, are about the amounts that will be wanted for those purposes, as found by the experience of former years.

I must particularly call your attention to the contract of Mr. Brown, (No. 13, enclosed herewith,) for the survey of the lots of the town of St. Louis, in order that it may be referred to the Congress of the United States for an approval thereof, and to obtain an appropriation to survey all the confirmed town and village lots, out lots, and common field lots, adjoining, and belonging to the several towns and villages in the State of Missouri.

This contract with Mr. Brown is for the execution of work required by the 2d section of the act of Congress of the 26th of May, 1824; and by the instructions of the Commissioner of the General Land Office of the 20th of August, 1835; and is upon as moderate terms as a competent surveyor can be had to attend thereto.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. T. LANGHAM.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1510. [1ST SESSION.

APPLICATION OF KENTUCKY FOR THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE PROCEEDS OF THE SALES OF THE PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, APRIL 18, 1836.

PREAMBLE and RESOLUTIONS in relation to the revenue arising from the sale of Public Lands.

The legislature of Kentucky, mindful of her rights as a member of the confederacy, and ever ready to assert and maintain them, feels itself called upon by a sense of duty to the people of Kentucky, to express its opinion on a question of vital importance to her as a State, and to the other members of the confederacy; one which has for some time attracted the attention of the Congress of the United States, and at this time forms a subject of deliberation in that body.

The vacant and unappropriated land situated in the different States and Territories, is the common property of all the States, held in trust by the federal government as a common fund, under the terms of the acts and deeds of cession and treaties by which they have been acquired. Heretofore they have been devoted as a sacred pledge to the redemption of the national debt by the authority of the general government; to which pledge the States felt themselves bound by every consideration of patriotism and devotion to the prosperity of the Union, to yield their free assent; and not until the payment of that debt had been completed, did the State of Kentucky feel herself justified in demanding, as a matter of right, of the Congress of the United States, a faithful and honest compliance with the conditions upon which the public domain had been ceded to the States. These conditions are all in the same language, in substance, and declare "that they shall be considered as a common fund, for the use and benefit of such of the United States as have become or shall become members of the confederation, or federal alliance, (including all the States making the cession,) according to their usual respective proportions in the general charge and expenditure, and shall be faithfully and bona fide disposed of for that purpose, and for no other purpose whatever."

The proceeds arising from the sales of these lands are no longer required for the payment of the debts of the Union. They are not needed, (having a due regard to the protection of our domestic manufactures,) to pay off the annual or current expenses of the general government. The revenue arising from the impost duties, and from other sources, greatly exceeds the most extravagant estimate of the annual expenditure.

At this time, there appears to be a surplus of more than twenty-one millions in the treasury—money not needed for national objects. Twelve millions of that sum are the proceeds of the sales of public lands during the present year. By the year 1837, it is estimated that the surplus will amount to thirty millions. If the whole of this immense revenue was the result of the revenue laws, a wise policy would dictate that an alteration in our tariff should be made, and such a scale of duties should be adopted, that the receipts should not exceeed the expenditures, or by some other mode the fund should be distributed among the several States for the purposes of internal improvement and education. Safety to the purity of our institutions demands that it should be speedily withdrawn from its present position, and placed beyond the reach of ambition, or the possible grasp of corruption. Upon the power of Congress to collect a revenue, for the purpose of distribution among the several States, this legislature would not be understood to express any opinion favorable to its exercise. But upon the power of Congress to direct a distribution, among the States, of the net proceeds of the public lands, this legislature entertains no doubt. That Congress is bound to make this disposition, from the terms of the grants by which the lands were ceded, is equally unquestionable. In no other mode or manner so appropriate, so beneficial, can the general government now execute the trust, and dispose of the fund which she holds as the common property of all the States. It becomes, therefore, a duty which the legislature of Kentucky owes to itself, and the people of the State, whose voice she undertakes to speak on this occasion, to demand of the Congress of the United States, a distribution of the proceeds arising from the sale of the public lands, among all the States, according to their respective ratio of population. This State does not ask this as a boon, but claims it as a matter of right. Therefore—

Be it resolved, by the general assembly of the commonwealth of Kentucky, That our senators in Congress be instructed, and our representatives be requested, to sustain and to vote for the passage of a law providing for the distribution of the proceeds of the public lands among the respective States, according to their respective federal numbers.

Resolved, That the acting governor of this State be requested to forward to each of our senators and representatives in Congress, a copy of the foregoing preamble and resolution.

JNO. L. HELM, Speaker of the House of Representatives.
CYRUS WINGATE, Speaker of the Senate.

Approved, February 11, 1836.

J. T. MOREHEAD.

WM. OWSLEY, Secretary.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1511. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO A CREEK RESERVATION IN ALABAMA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 20, 1836.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom were referred the papers in relation to the claim of Us-se-yoholo, a Creek Indian, to a certain reservation of land in the State of Alabama, reported:

That, by the second article of the treaty made between the United States and the Creek tribe of Indians, at the city of Washington, on the 24th of March, 1832, it is provided that the heads of families shall be entitled to a reservation of one half section of land each, to be by them selected; for which purpose there shall be a census taken under the direction of the President of the United States, &c.

That, by the provision in said treaty, the said Us-se-yoholo claims the right to a reservation of the south half of section number fourteen, in township nineteen, of range four, in the State of Alabama. In support of which he produces the following evidence: An extract from the location rolls of Creek reservations, returned to the department by Colonel James Bright, locating agent—Us-se-yoholo, S. 14, 19, 4.

It is stated, from good authority, that the Indian gave in his name to the census taker, but it does not appear upon the roll. He is justly entitled, having a large family, and is an old settler on the tract of land to which he is located.

The deposition of William W. Morris, taken before John Council, a justice of the peace in the county of Talladega, in the State of Alabama: The deponent states, that in the month of August, 1832, he came to the place, since called Mardisville, where he shortly afterward became acquainted with the Indian called Jony, or Us-se-yoholo; that he continued to be acquainted with him till the census was taken in the fall of 1832, and was present when the Indians of the Talladega town were inserted in the census; that, among others, he distinctly recollects that Jony, or Us-se-yoholo, came with his wife and children, and gave his name to the census-taker, who, he supposed, took it down; that he recollects this case particularly, because his attention had been drawn to the subject by the suspicion in his mind that the Indians were practicing impositions on the agent, by lending each other children to make them seem to be heads of families, and he noticed that Us-se-yoholo brought up, as he thought, all his children; that said Us-se-yoholo then lived on the land where he has since continued to live, he thinks, and on which he lived when he first knew him.

Extract of a letter from R. J. Meigs to the Secretary of War, dated Mardisville, Alabama, September 27, 1834.

"SIR: I enclose the deposition of William W. Morris, a respectable merchant of this place, in the case of Us-se-yoholo, who was omitted in the census. There is no doubt of the justness of this claim. He was residing at the time of the treaty on the south half of section 14, in township 19, range 4 east, where he yet resides. He has several children by a daughter of Mad Wolf, a chief who distinguished himself by his friendship for the United States in the war," &c.

Your committee are of the opinion that the evidence is sufficient, and that the said Us-se-yoholo is entitled to relief, and therefore report a bill.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1512. [1ST SESSION.

IN FAVOR OF GRANTING BOUNTY LAND TO THE MILITIA WHO SERVED DURING THE LATE WAR WITH GREAT BRITAIN.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 20, 1836.

Mr. CASEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom were referred the memorials of the General Assemblies of the States of Illinois and Indiana, praying for additional remuneration to the militiamen and rangers who defended the frontier of the United States, during the late war with Great Britain; and also, a preamble and joint resolution of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, proposing the passage of a law of Congress to place the officers and soldiers who served for a less term than five years in the United States army, in the last war with Great Britain, on a just equality with the soldiers of that army, in the distribution of the public lands; with instructions by the House of Representatives "to inquire into the propriety of passing a law in accordance to the said preamble and resolutions," reported:

That, by an act of Congress, passed the 2d of January, 1812, the President of the United States was authorized, whenever he should have satisfactory evidence of the actual or threatened invasion of any State or Territory of the United States, by any Indian tribe or tribes, to raise, either by the acceptance of volunteers, or enlistment for one year, unless sooner discharged, as many companies as he should deem necessary, not exceeding six, to serve on foot, or be mounted, as the service might require, and who should act upon the frontier as rangers; each of the said companies was to consist of one captain, one first, and one second lieutenant, one ensign, four sergeants, four corporals, and sixty privates.

The above recited act further provided, "that the commissioned officers should receive the same pay and rations as officers of the same grades in the army of the United States; and when the rangers should arm and equip themselves, and provide their own horses, they should be allowed each one dollar per day. The manner of arming, equipping, and organizing the said corps, was placed under such regulations and restrictions as the nature of the service, in the opinion of the President, might require. This act, of course, took effect from its passage, and was to continue in force for one year, and from thence to the end of the next session of Congress.

On the 1st day of July, 1812, Congress, by a supplementary act, authorized the raising of one additional company of rangers, under like conditions and restrictions.

On the 25th day of February, 1813, Congress provided a further increase of ten additional companies of rangers, and placed them upon a similar footing; and on the 24th of July following, the same acts referred to were continued for one year from that time, and until the end of the next ensuing session of Congress. And so efficient had the rangers proved themselves to be, that these ten companies were made the substitute for a regiment authorized to be raised by a previous law.

The companies thus authorized to be raised, were organized, and entered the service of the United States. The nature of that service, its hazards and hardships, are well described in the memorial of the Illinois legislature. They show that this class of citizens, now for the first time attempted to be brought forward to the consideration of Congress, are not the least deserving the aid of the government, though they are the last almost of the defenders of our country who have asked for any remuneration. Their claims to the attention and favor of the government, will be better understood from a brief outline of the condition of the country when they were its defenders, and the nature of their services. Previously to the year 1812, the settlements of the country were confined to the margin of the rivers Ohio and Mississippi, while all between was a wilderness but little frequented by the whites, and the constant abode of the Indians; and when the late war broke out, these settlements were always exposed to their attacks, and subject to their perpetual hostilities. The weakness of their situation forced the inhabitants to use extraordinary exertions for their defence; they erected stations, and abandoning their homes, and in many instances all they had on earth, they devoted themselves wholly to the defence of their country; they were thus of great benefit to the inhabitants of the adjacent States, who, but for their adventurous boldness, would have been equally exposed; they formed the advance guard of the country, during a fierce and ferocious Indian war; and their privations and sufferings were almost unparalleled.

The late war with Great Britain raging at this time, the great body of the troops of the United States was engaged in defending the more populous parts of the Union, and what is now the States of Illinois, Indiana, and Missouri, were left to rely on their own strength and courage for their defence; and it is a proud reflection, that these brave men did effectually defend, not only their own widely extended frontier, but also the citizens and property of the adjacent States.

The individuals composing these companies were not like those who made up the regular army of the United States in many respects; they were citizen soldiers, acting upon an extended frontier, surrounded on all sides by powerful and warlike tribes of Indians; many of them expended their all in equipping themselves for the service; their clothing, arms, and horses, were furnished by themselves; neither rations nor forage were supplied by the government, for the ranger was bound, out of his small wages, to furnish himself with a horse, arms, ammunition, clothing, and provisions; not one cent was ever contributed by government toward their subsistence—no convenience provided but what their own hard earned money paid for. Many of them had families, whose whole reliance for support was upon those who were on duty, and who were provided for out of their wages. While in service, they were often prevented from cultivating their farms for an entire season, and the loss of a crop was to them a loss of no ordinary magnitude. Add to this, that all articles of consumption, use, or necessity, bore an exceedingly high price, and then deduct from their pay those articles of necessity, without which they were not qualified for the service, and then, it may well be asked, what remains as a remuneration for the time, services, and devotion, of these citizen soldiers? Your committee answer, respectfully, but unhesitatingly, nothing! The same may be said of the militia and volunteers in every part of the United States. They left their firesides, families, and farms, penetrated, in many instances, the uninhabited wilderness—traversed countries without roads or bridges—and met, without a murmur, all the inclemencies of the weather, and all the hardships incident to the nature of the service, to rid the country of violence, outrage and death.

The battle of Baltimore was fought mainly by the militia and volunteers of the country; the bloody field of Fort Erie was mainly won by the militia; the ever-memorable battle of the Thames was achieved by a charge of mounted volunteer gunmen, a military operation unparalleled in the history of any country; all General Jackson's battles with the Indians were won by volunteer militia; and to close the late war with Great Britain, a battle was fought and won on the plains of Orleans, by the gallant but undisciplined sons of Tennessee and Kentucky, under the direction of their able chief, without a rival, and which covered the country with imperishable glory and renown.

These brave men now come forward, and relying confidently upon the justice and liberality of Congress, ask a bounty in land proportionate to their services. Your committee are disposed to view favorably this application.

By estimates furnished the committee on the public lands by the Treasury Department, it will be seen that the quantity of land to which the Indian title has been extinguished by the United States up to September 30, 1835, was 268,348,942 acres; the quantity of land surveyed and offered for sale on the date aforesaid, 166,897,082 acres; the quantity of land sold at said date, 44,499,620 acres; the quantity of land remaining unsold and liable to private entry on said date, 122,397,462 acres; the quantity surveyed, but not offered for sale at said date, 9,772,739 acres; the quantity within the limits of the United States west of the river Mississippi, and west of the organized limits of the States and Territories, 715,000,000 acres.

It is true that the public domain has stood pledged for the redemption of the public debt, and that fact may have justified the argument that Congress could not dispose of it by granting it in bounties, or making donations to our meritorious citizens. But your committee are glad to have it in their power to say, that the time for the use of that argument has gone by, and now that the last cent of the public debt has been paid, and that the vast quantity of the public lands held by the government is free of all incumbrances, your committee hope, and believe, that a more liberal policy will hereafter characterize the legislation of Congress on the subject of those lands.

By two several acts of Congress, passed the 24th of December, 1811, and on the 14th of January, 1812, it is provided, that whenever any non-commissioned officer or soldier of the regular army shall be discharged from the service, who shall have obtained from the commanding officer of his company, battalion or regiment, a certificate that he had faithfully performed his duty whilst in service, he should be allowed, in addition to the bounty in money that those acts provided, three months' pay, and one hundred and sixty acres of land: and the heirs and representatives of those non-commissioned officers and soldiers who might be killed in action, or die in the service of the United States, should likewise be paid and allowed the said additional bounty of three months' pay and one hundred and sixty acres of land, to be designated, surveyed, and laid off, at the public expense, in such manner, and upon such terms and conditions, as should be provided by law.

By an act passed December 10, 1814, it is provided, that in lieu of the bounty of one hundred and sixty acres of land then allowed by law, there should be allowed to each non-commissioned officer and soldier thereafter enlisted, when discharged from the service, who should have obtained from the commanding officer of his company, battalion or regiment, a certificate that he had faithfully performed his duty while in the service, three hundred and twenty acres of land, to be surveyed, laid off and granted, under the regulations prescribed by law. In the same act it is provided, that the widow and children or parents of every non-commissioned officer and soldier, enlisted according to law, who might be killed or die in the service of the United States, should be entitled to receive the three hundred and twenty acres of land.

Thus it will be seen that the principle of giving bounties in land, for faithful military services, has been fully recognized by the government, and approved by our fellow-citizens generally.

It is believed by your committee, that no class of troops engaged in the military service of the United States during the late war, performed their duty more faithfully, or rendered services more hazardous in their nature, or more beneficial in their results to the country, than those organized militia men, volunteers and rangers, whose claims on the liberality and justice of the government are now brought before Congress by the memorials of the legislatures of Illinois and Indiana, and joint resolutions of the legislature of Kentucky, who have received no bounty in land from the United States, but who bravely defended their country during the trying scenes of the late war with Great Britain, against all her foes, whether civilized or savage.

A liberal bounty in land to these brave men would be of great advantage to them, and an easy method of remunerating such signal services so faithfully rendered.

Your committee therefore report a bill; they also adopt as part of this report, letters from the Hon. J. Reynolds, of Illinois, and the Hon. J. Carr, of Indiana, addressed to the committee; they also append to this report the estimates before alluded to, from the Treasury Department.

WASHINGTON CITY, February 8, 1836.

GENTLEMEN: Having introduced, both at the last and present session of Congress, the subject of a bounty in lands to the United States rangers and other troops, and having also addressed you a short letter on the subject at the last session, I hope it will not be intrusive to call respectfully your attention again to a subject which is so interesting to a very worthy and meritorious class of citizens. I feel great confidence in the committee acting on this subject in such generous and proper manner as to be worthy of themselves and the subject. The subject having already been before Congress, and some of the committee being fully impressed with the justice and propriety of the measure, I will, on that consideration, confine myself to the prominent features of the subject.

Serving myself in the late war with Great Britain, as a private in the United States ranging corps, I an enabled by that service to speak with more confidence on the subject, and I hesitate not to say, that these and other similar troops are, in justice and equity, entitled to a bounty in land, in proportion to the bounties other soldiers received for their services. These soldiers, and others, suffered all the hardships and privations incident to such service in the defence of the country, and performed that service not only to the satisfaction of the government, but to the entire approbation and satisfaction of the country itself, that they defended.

An act of Congress passed on the 2d January, 1812, creating several companies of mounted rangers for the protection of the frontiers. It is true that these rangers received one dollar per day for their services, and were on consideration thereof compelled to furnish themselves in everything complete for the service; out of this compensation, each man was required to provide himself with a horse, gun, clothing, provisions, forage, and all other equipments necessary for the service. It is almost useless to inform the committee, that on the frontiers of a thinly inhabited country, all those articles necessary to equip the United States ranger for the service of his country, were not only dear, but difficult to be procured at all.

I will not trouble the committee with a minute detail of the price of articles, to show that these troops were in fact worse paid than the regular army, but will content myself with a general statement:

One horse, per year	$100 00
One gun	30 00
Provision for ranger	70 00
Forage for horse	30 00
Clothing, saddle, &c	50 00
Incidental expenses	40 00
	320 00

I have made a very low estimate of the equipment for a mounted ranger for one year. Some of these articles may be of service at the expiration of the year, but others will be used or lost within the year, so that the above is a fair estimate of the expenses, and a very low one, when we take into consideration the very dear price of these articles on an exposed frontier. At the end of a year, each ranger, by this calculation, will receive for his service, forty-five dollars, when the soldier of the regular army will receive ninety-six; being fifty-one dollars more than the United States ranger received.

I would respectfully suggest to the committee, if it be just and proper, that this disparity in the pay of troops of equal grade and standing, both sworn into the service of the United States, and fighting in the same war, under the same government, should exist? This consideration alone, separate and apart from all other views of the subject, would give to these troops a strong claim on the bounty and liberality of the government; but when we know that the United States observed toward other troops a policy that was not only patriotic and just, but also liberal and generous, in granting bounties of land to them, we are constrained to believe that the same policy will be extended to the United States rangers, and other similar defenders of the country.

By two several acts of Congress, passed on the 24th December, 1811, and on the 14th of January, 1812, it is provided that each soldier or non-commissioned officer of the regular army, who shall receive an honorable discharge from the proper officer, or die in the service, shall be entitled, together with other bounties, to receive one hundred and sixty acres of land for his services.

In another act, passed on the 10th December, 1814, it is provided, that all soldiers and non-commissioned officers hereafter enlisted, in lieu of other bounties in land, shall receive three hundred and twenty acres for their military services. This liberal and enlightened policy of the government demonstrated its beneficial effects in the late war, by organizing an army that through the means of their gallantry and noble bearing, the character and standing of the country was not only sustained at home, and throughout a contest with the most powerful nation on earth, but our high standing for honor and chivalrous deeds were known and acknowledged by every nation on the globe.

The United States rangers, and similar troops, "acted well their part" in the defence of the country during this war. The frontiers of Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri, were much exposed to the enemy at that trying period. The settlements at that day were sparse, and in many instances separated from each other for hundreds of miles around the boarders of this region of country of which three States are now formed.

The committee will at once see the importance of this service, and the great hardships, privations and dangers in performing it. These soldiers were not provided with baggage-wagons, tents, barracks, and other necessaries which were furnished to the regular army, but were compelled to penetrate the wilderness country of the enemy for months at a time, without any of the conveniences which the government provided for the regular army, over and above their pay. These hardships, perils, and privations, were endured, and the service performed with cheerfulness and alacrity for honor, character, and defence of their country.

The country at that time was embarrassed with a war and in debt. The public lands were pledged for the payment of this debt, and the beneficial influence of peace had not yet reached the people. On that consideration, these brave men, with the same patriotism which induced them to defend their country, without an equivalent, caused them to suspend a presentation of their claims. But now they present it to a country crowned with prosperity, and, in fact, the admiration of the world, for its growth and prosperous condition. The public debt is liquidated; the lands of the government, which were pledged for its payment, are now clear of that embarrassment, and in the hands of Congress for beneficial purposes; and the treasury itself is in such a prosperous situation, as is unparalleled in this or any other country.

Resting the claims of these soldiers on this unvarnished statement of facts, I appeal to the committee in their behalf, and solicit for them a bounty of a part of the very lands which they defended in the most gloomy and dark periods of the war. Many of these brave defenders of the country are now advanced in years and poor; and, in fact, need this bounty of the government. It would gladden the hearts of many of the rangers to know that the government for which they spent many of their best days, had at last recollected them, and restored them to plenty and happiness. All that these claimants expect, is to be placed on a footing with other troops, and thereby to receive such bounty in land as they are entitled to.

Your obedient servant,

JOHN REYNOLDS.

Hon. COMMITTEE on the Public Lands.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, March 10, 1836.

GENTLEMEN: On yesterday I had the honor of presenting to the House of Representatives, and referring to your committee, a memorial and joint resolution of the general assembly of the State of Indiana, praying the Congress of the United States to grant a bounty in land to the militiamen, mounted militiamen, and rangers, who so successfully protected the frontier during the late war with Great Britain.

This subject has been presented to Congress by the official acts of the legislatures of Illinois and Indiana, within whose limits reside some of the individuals for whom the memorials pray Congress for relief, and within whose borders reside some of the widows and orphans of those who performed service in defence of their country, and whose fate was the fate of war, for whose benefit the memorials aforesaid were also presented.

Gentlemen, the people of the States of Illinois and Indiana have shown to you, through their respective legislatures, that they remember with the deepest gratitude, and appreciate most highly, the patriotism and signal service rendered to the country by the troops named in the memorials, and under circumstances peculiarly hard, and in times that tried men's souls.

This service was not only performed at the sacrifice of time and of property, but it was performed at the expense of many robust and sound constitutions. Nor was this service the business of a day, or a month, or of a year's duration, but of years; nor yet were the beneficial results of this service confined to the frontier of the now flourishing States of Illinois and Indiana, but extended far north and west.

I have said that this service was performed at the sacrifice of time, of property, and of health; this is true. Nor was the incentive that of pleasure, or of speculation; those who rendered this service were actuated by the same spirit, and resolved to maintain that independence so dearly won by the toil and the blood of their forefathers.

I have also said that this service was performed under circumstances peculiarly hard. It is true. There were instances where the father went into the service of his country under circumstances which left no alternative other than for the wife, with her own hands, to till the ground, thereby making a scanty support for her helpless family; this, too, was done cheerfully by her, with a fond hope that the labors of her husband and his associates in arms would be crowned with success, and that he would return home, and enjoy with his family and friends peace and happiness. In some instances this fondest hope was realized, while in many other instances the wives and the mothers of those in the service of the country, whose anxiety was beyond imagination or description, were saluted with the woful intelligence that a husband, a son, had fallen in the battle field, never to return. It may be thought by some, and said by others, that these troops have been amply paid for their services and losses sustained. To this I cannot assent; I think it can be clearly shown that the pay received by them would not, in many instances, half equal the losses of property incurred; and that the committee may have some idea of the expense and liabilities incurred by some of them, I beg leave to refer you to a letter which I had the honor to address to the Committee on the Public Lands at the last session of Congress, which, I think, clearly shows that their pay was not equal to the pay received by the regular troops who served in the late war, exclusive of the bounty on lands which was given to the regular soldiers.

The States of Illinois and Indiana now come forth, and ask Congress, in behalf of those who are still living, and in behalf of the widows and orphans of those who served their country in time of peril and of danger, and who are no more, a small bounty in land, upon which to locate their families in their declining years, and which they may call their freeholds and their homes.

It is to the citizen soldier that this country looks to avenge her wrongs; standing armies in time of peace to eat out our substance, we will not have. It has been by the citizen soldier that this country has, in all times past, been mainly defended against the savage foe and the foreign enemy; and it is to the citizen soldier that this country will confidently look in time to come to repel all invading foes.

Gentlemen, your treasury is full to overflowing, a plenty and to spare; in addition to this, the United States government is the proprietor of some hundred millions and more acres of unappropriated lands, but which is fast going into the hands of speculators and monopolists, consequently to be vended out to the honest and laboring classes of the community at exorbitant prices. Under these circumstances, can it be considered as unreasonable to grant to those surviving patriots, and to the widow and orphan of those who spent so much of their youth and manhood in defending their country's cause, and braved all the perils and underwent all the privations incident to a warfaring life, a small portion of this vast public domain, in part consideration for their invaluable services, and which they can call their own and their homes.

Having the utmost confidence in the committee to do full and ample justice to so meritorious a class of our citizens, I look with the most sanguine hope for a favorable report in their behalf.

With profound respect and esteem, I have the honor to be, your most obedient and most humble servant,

JOHN CARR.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, January 13, 1836,

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1513. [1ST SESSION.

ON CLAIMS TO LAND IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 20, 1836.

Mr. HUNTSMAN, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of the inhabitants of East Baton Rouge, and, also, the resolution of the legislature of Louisiana, on the subject of land titles in that part of said State which formerly belonged to West Florida, reported:

That they have examined the subject with that consideration which belongs to a district of country, embracing nearly one third of the agricultural wealth and population of Louisiana; and viewing the subject of great importance, they deem it their duty to make a detailed report of the causes which have produced such universal difficulty in that quarter of the country, in relation to titles to land.

This portion of Louisiana embraces seven parishes, to wit: West Feliciana, East Feliciana, East Baton Rouge, St. Helena, Livingston, Washington, and St. Tammany, all being east of the Mississippi river and the island of New Orleans. These parishes were all a new country, comparatively speaking, when the United States took possession of them in 1812; and their population is principally derived from emigration from other States in the Union before and since that period.

Previous to taking possession of this part of the country, on the part of the United States, the inhabitants derived their titles from the government and authorities of Spain. There were no squatters on the public lands at that period; for the obvious reason, that the policy of the government of Spain was to give away lands to settlers, on condition of actual settlement, as prescribed by law.

The principal rules on this subject, are to be found in the decrees of St. Lorenzo, dated October 15, 1754; of Count O'Riley, dated 18th February, 1770; of Don Manuel Gayoso de Lemos, dated 9th September, 1797, these being governors general of Louisiana, and the regulations of Don Juan Ventura Morales, intendant general, of July 17, 1799, to which officer this duty was transferred by the King of Spain.

By these regulations, whenever a new colonist wanted lands, he made application to the nearest commandant of a post, by petition (requette) for a tract of land; upon this an order of survey was granted, and on complying with the conditions of settlement prescribed by the regulations above referred to, and simply paying the fees of office, amounting to a few dollars, the settler obtained his final concession; owing, however, to the negligence incident to a new country, most of the settlers had not attended to the completion of their titles, at the time the change of government took place, although they had performed the conditions of settlement. They frequently had requettes, in virtue of which they possessed; many had their surveys and plats, but very few their final concession; all, however, had some written evidence of title until the revolution at Baton Rouge, when the Spanish authority ceased in this portion of the country. In this revolution, a convention was the government, de facto. The convention invited American emigrants to the country, and stipulated to give them a section of land. They governed the country until Governor Claiborne took possession of it in 1812, as agent of the United States, and ratified all the previous proceedings of the government de facto. The government of the United States paid the debts, and became obliged to confirm all the settlement rights which had been guaranteed by the convention.

In accordance with this pledge, the first land law was passed by Congress, on the 25th April, 1812, by which provision is made to carry into effect all the titles derived from these different sources, to wit: from requettes, orders of surveys, final concessions, and lastly, actual settlement.

A commissioner and clerk were appointed to collect all evidences of written title, as well as a list of actual settlers, and report to Congress. Thus early did the national government commence redeeming its pledges, given to the people of the country, in the treaty of cession of Louisiana, that the ancient titles of the country should be respected in good faith; and the promise of their agent, Governor Claiborne to the convention, while they were the government de facto, that settlers should be guaranteed in their titles, not to exceed a section of land.

The commissioner appointed under this act made his report conformably to its provision, and Congress, by the law of the third of March, 1819, confirmed the titles embraced into it, both as regards settlers with written titles, and actual settlers without written titles, prior to the 15th April, 1813.

We now proceed to an investigation of the title, in opposition to this claim of title on the part of the actual settlers. After the ratification of the treaty of Paris, by which Louisiana was ceded to the United States, the intendent general of Louisiana, Don Joseph Ventura Morales, made certain cessions of land in the foregoing parishes to sundry individuals. The government of the United States refused to sanction these cessions, on the ground that West Florida (as far as the Pedido) was embraced within the original limits of Louisiana, and that all these large grants were void, inasmuch as Spain had parted with her domain. These grants covered a portion of the tracts which were comprised in the list that Congress had confirmed by the act of 1819. The doctrine that these grants were null, on the ground of Spain having ceded her domains to the United States, was sanctioned by the executive in taking possession of the above Territory in 1812; by the taking of Fort Charlotte, at Mobile, in 1813; and by annexing the former to Louisiana, and the latter to the Territory of Mississippi, and, finally, the same point was decided by the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Foster and Elam vs. Neilson (see Peter's Reports, 2d vol. p. 254), where it is decided that the cession of Louisiana embraced all the country to the Pedrido, and that, of course, after that cession, Spain had no public domain to convey in this part of Louisiana.

Here then, it may be asked, is there not a perfect chain of title on the part of the settler? Written evidences of titles derived from the former government of Spain, donations and actual settlements under the government de facto, of the convention reported on under the law of 1812, and finally confirmed by the act of April 20th, 1819, and the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the above entitled cause.

The obstacle to this chain of title presents itself in the treaty with Spain for the cession of Florida. The government of the United States, probably to prevent any doubts as it respects the eastern limits of Louisiana, saw fit to describe the territory ceded by that treaty, in the following terms: "His Catholic Majesty cedes to the United States, in full property and sovereignty, all the territories which belong to him east of the Mississippi river, known by the name of East and West Florida." And by the eighth article of said treaty is the following stipulation; "all the grants of land made before the 24th January, 1818, by his Catholic Majesty, or by his lawful authorities, in the said territories ceded by his Majesty to the United States, shall be ratified and confirmed to the persons in possession of the lands, to the same extent that the same grants would be valid if the territories had remained under the dominion of his Catholic Majesty."

The decisions of the Supreme Court upon this article of the treaty have been as follows: In the first case, Foster and Elam, vs. Neilson. (See Peter's Reports, 2d vol., page 254.)

The court decided two points: 1st, that by the treaty of Paris, all the country as far eastward as the river Perdido, was included within the cession of Louisiana; and they also decided that the large grants, commonly called the Morales grants, which were made after the cession of Louisiana by France, were null and inoperative in relation to settlers whose claims had been confirmed by the act of Congress of 1819. They decided also in that case, that the Morales grants were not ipso facto, confirmed by the Florida treaty so as to vest the title itself in the grantees. The contract, in the language of the Supreme Court, only being a contract to confirm, but not vesting a title to the land itself in the grantees, and decided that case against them and in favor of the title of the settler, by confirmation by the United States. But in the 6th volume of Peter's Reports, page 691, the United States against Arredondo and others, the court have overruled this construction of the Florida treaty, and have decided that, by the eighth article the grants mentioned in the article, are absolutely confirmed, and the rights which they give are vested rights in the grantees.

It may not be material to inquire into the real validity of these two titles, in point of priority, for it appears to the committee that, whichever of them fails, the government is equally bound to indemnify its proprietor. The treaty of Paris recognizes the then existing relations of property, all the bonafide settlers under the laws of Spain, in relation to incipient titles, such as requettes and orders of survey, were entitled to absolute concessions as soon as they had completed the condition of settlement; and if they were ousted from these titles by any act of our government, it would be a palpable violation of the treaty. On the other hand, if the government have made a bonafide stipulation in the Florida treaty to confirm the large grants, and their previous confirmations to the settlers prevent them from complying with it, then it is a violation of the Florida treaty in relation to the grantees, and they are equally bound to indemnify them. But still, although the question of priority of title is not material in explaining the duty of the government, yet it may not be unimportant for the committee to express their opinion on it.

The act confirming the settlers in their lands, bears date of the 3d of March, 1819. The Florida treaty, although purporting to be negotiated in February, 1819, was not ratified by the Senate until February, 1821. According to our constitution, it is apprehended that the treaty has no force nor validity until its ratification; hence, the United States having parted with their property to the lands confirmed in 1819, to settlers, these settlers could not be interrupted or disturbed, as it respects third persons, by a treaty not ratified until 1821.

Your committee are therefore of opinion that the proper course for the government to pursue, is to indemnify the Morales grantees; that if they undertook to indemnify the settlers, millions would not be sufficient to effect that object in the improved value of the property as it has been effected by the industry of the settlers. In ascertaining what indemnity would be a fair one to the Morales grantees, we must take into view that the increased value of the lands has been entirely effected by the settlers themselves; they have opened plantations, constructed railroads, founded villages, established schools, and introduced the comforts of civilized life; they have, moreover, gallantly defended the country from invasion; for almost every adult male from these seven parishes, at the time capable of bearing arms, was in the ranks at the memorable defence of New Orleans. The Morales grantees, (now residents) have on the other hand contributed nothing to the settlement and prosperity of the country. Under these circumstances, the committee are of opinion that one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre (the price of government lands) would be a reasonable indemnity to the claimants under these Spanish grants.

The committee further beg leave to state that, by the laws of Louisiana, occupants of lands under title, even if proven to be defective, are protected in the value of their improvements, and cannot be evicted until they are paid for them; and this possession in good faith, under a title translative of property, has been applied to the cases of government confirmations by a decision of the supreme court of Louisiana.

The next question is, in what manner the authenticity of these titles shall be established. The committee have come to the conclusion that there can be no fairer mode than to institute a bill or suit against the United States, and to refer the question to the courts. For this purpose they submit their bill. Other questions connected with the subject committed to your committee will be reported in a supplemental report.

ON A CLAIM FOR A BOUNTY LAND WARRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 20, 1836.

Mr. HUNTSMAN, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition and accompanying documents of Aaron Stout, praying for the benefit of bounty lands, having had the same under consideration, reported:

That, from the papers and documents presented by the petitioner, it satisfactorily appears, that he enlisted in the month of June, 1813, under Captain James Haslett, then of Baltimore, who belonged to the regiment of Colonel Peter Lyttle, of that portion of the army commonly called the "twelve months' men;" that he continued in service until March, 1814, when President Madison issued his proclamation, offering money, bounty lands, &c., to those who should enlist during the war, when the petitioner re-enlisted for and during the whole war, and faithfully served his time out until peace was restored in 1815, when the petitioner was at Craney island, near Norfolk. The government not being ready to pay the troops immediately at Craney island, upon the disbandment of the army, he did not, at that time, get his discharge, but entered the service of a merchant vessel, and continued for many years at sea; upon his return, however, he applied to his captain, who was at Baltimore, and obtained an honorable discharge, which was countersigned by his colonel, and that said discharge has since been lost in travelling through the State of Tennessee. The proof of those facts are satisfactory, and the committee think the petitioner is entitled to the relief prayed for, and have reported a bill accordingly.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1515. [1ST SESSION.

ON CLAIM TO PRE-EMPTION RIGHTS COVERED BY INDIAN RESERVATIONS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 22, 1836.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the memorial of the legislature of Alabama, and the petition of certain citizens of that State, asking Congress to grant relief to such settlers on the public lands as were deprived of their rights of pre-emption under the act of 19th of June, 1834, by reason of the location of Indian reservations on their improvements, reported:

That it is stated, that the class of settlers for whom relief is asked, removed into the country ceded by the Creek and Choctaw Indians, in some instances before, and in others after, these treaties, and made valuable improvements, with the intention of becoming citizens of the country; that at the passage of the said pre-emption law, they were clearly embraced within its provisions, having lived upon and cultivated at the time required by that act.

These individuals, as your committee believe, were equally meritorious with the other more fortunate settlers, who secured their right of pre-emption. They contributed as much, and even more, than most of the original settlers, to the general improvement of the country, giving additional value to the neighboring public lands. Like other emigrants into a new country, they expended their means, (which, with this class, are generally limited,) in opening their plantations, building houses, making roads, &c., under a confident expectation that their homes would be secured to them, as they had been to others under like circumstances. In this, however, they have been disappointed; and, instead of securing the places they had improved at so much labor and expense, as it was the intention of Congress to allow them to do, by the act aforesaid, their plantations have been located upon by Indian reservees, and they forced, with their families, from their improvements, either by the Indians, or the more cruel and relentless speculators, who purchased the reservations from the Indians. Under these circumstances, they appeal to the Congress of the United States, directly, and through the legislature of their own State, for relief. Your committee believe their claim may be sustained, not only upon principles of true policy, but strict right.

If it were necessary, in the present inquiry, for the committee to show that the policy so long pursued by Congress, in granting to the actual settlers on the public lands a right to enter their improvements at the government price, it is believed that arguments are not wanting to establish the proposition. They do not, however, consider it as at all involved in the present investigation. The claims of the individuals asking relief rest upon even higher grounds; as far as their case is concerned, the pre-emption policy has been adopted and recognized, but by events, unforeseen at the time, they have been deprived of the benefits of the law, without any fault of their own. The right to enter the land they had improved at the government price, has been granted by the act of 1834, to all settlers who resided upon and cultivated public land in 1833. The individuals who now ask relief, come completely within the language of the act. They resided upon and had possession of the public land at the passage of the act, and cultivated the preceding year. They were ready to establish their right by proof, and pay the minimum price, and, in many instances, offered to do so at the proper land office. Under this view of the subject, your committee cannot conceive how a stronger claim to relief can be made out, independent of all arguments derived from former precedents, which appear to have been established by Congress under similar circumstances. Your committee do not believe that the cases are very numerous which can come within the description of those for which relief is asked. But yet, it is a fact, generally understood, that in the location of the reservations under the Indian treaties, the most valuable improvements have been taken, and thereby the most industrious and frugal class of the early settlers of the country, for whose protection the pre-emption law was passed, have been deprived of all benefits under it.

Your committee recommend, therefore, that all persons entitled to pre-emptions under the act of 1834, which have been located upon by such claims, be allowed to enter a like quantity of other lands in lieu thereof, at the minimum price, or to enter one quarter-section of any of the public lands which have been in market, by paying the fees of office, and report a bill accordingly.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1516. [1ST SESSION.

IN FAVOR OF GRANTING LANDS TO ALABAMA FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF A RAILROAD.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 22, 1836.

Mr. CHAPMAN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the memorial of the legislature of Alabama, asking authority for a railroad company, lately incorporated by the said State, to obtain a portion of the lands of the United States, through which the road will pass, by paying therefor the assessed value, reported:

That it is represented by the memorial, that a company has been lately chartered, to construct a railroad through almost the whole length of that State, from the southern to the northern boundary, commencing at the city of Mobile, or at some point on the waters of Mobile bay, and running to a point on the Tennesee river; that the road must necessarily pass through a considerable portion of the United States lands lying in that State, that are waste, barren, and unproductive, and have been some years in market, at the minimum price. The legislature ask Congress to authorize the said company to condemn for their own use, lands belonging to the United States, for three miles on each side of the road, by paying the assessed value therefor, in such mode as may be prescribed. Your committee consider the subject of this memorial as one of the most important character, and have bestowed upon it that degree of reflection to which it is so justly entitled. The present state of prosperity in the country, unexampled at any former period in our history, has produced a spirit for internal improvement among our citizens, which, if not obstructed, must lead to the most beneficial results. Nothing can tend more to perpetuate the union of the States, than the free intercourse and frequent association of the citizens of each. This can only be effected by affording facilities of trade, and the means of speedy travelling from one point to another, by internal improvements. Then the diversified, and even opposite interests of the several parts may be expected to harmonize. Instead of that jealousy of sectional interests, which has heretofore existed, mutual benefits and advantages will be derived by the several classes who are engaged in different pursuits. The agricultural products of the south and west may be transported to the north and east, and the manufactured articles of those taken in return with but little cost or risk. The resources of the country will be soon developed, and lands which are now lying as a mere barren waste, will be brought into useful employment. In the prosecution of this system of improvement, those States in which no public lands are situated, have nothing to ask from the national legislature; but in the new States, where most of the public domain remains undisposed of, and dispersed in almost every section, a barrier is at once presented to any improvement of importance, until it is removed by the consent of Congress. It is in vain that the local legislature incorporate a company to execute a proposed work, giving to it power to condemn individual property by paying the assessed value for it, when in almost every few miles in the progress of the work, the lands of the general government intervene, over which the local authorities have no power. It becomes absolutely necessary, therefore, that some policy should be adopted to remedy the evil. The numerous applications, by memorials and petitions on this subject, during the present session of Congress, shows the deep and important interests involved. Sound policy and equal justice would seem to require on the one hand some general plan providing for every case that has or may occur, while on the other, it is ascertained that scarcely any two applications are made under circumstances so similar as to authorize the same rule. In some parts of the country the lands are fertile and valuable, and have never been in market, while in others, they are barren, unproductive, and have been for some fifteen or twenty years offered at the minimum price. This is particularly the case in the country over which the contemplated Mobile and Tennessee road must be located. The government lands over which it will pass, are known to constitute a perfect barren, unproductive tract of country, only serving as a barrier between the fertile valley of the Tennessee river, and the rich country on the waters of the Mobile bay. This land has been offered at government price for upward of fifteen years, and remains now, and will continue unsold, unless value be given to it by means of the improvement of the country. From the character of the public land in this region, your committee have no difficulty in arriving at the conclusion that, upon the score of revenue alone, the government would be greatly benefited by granting, without any other consideration than the increased value given to the remaining public land, all that is asked by said memorial. Your committee believe that few improvements have been projected that will be superior to this in a national point of view. A direct communication from the northwestern States, through the interior, to a military post like Mobile, which this work will accomplish, is an object well worthy the consideration of Congress. The principle upon which appropriations of land have been made by Congress heretofore for works of internal improvement, the committee believe, will fully justify such a grant for this. Independent of the great national advantages, in a commercial point of view, that will be produced by this improvement, none could be accomplished better calculated to facilitate the operations of the government in time of war, afford protection to the citizens in an exposed situation, and increase the means of defence.

The memorial asks for the company authority to condemn the public lands over which the roads may be constructed, for three miles on each side, by paying therefor the assessed value to the United States. Your committee believe, that a different plan in making the grant, would be preferable. The public lands in that part of the country now unsold, are known to be of bnt little value. Without the aid of some improvement to bring them into public notice, they perhaps will not be sold for many years. The work in contemplation will evidently increase their value, and perhaps cause the sale of a considerable quantity on the line of the road, and thereby greatly add to the revenue arising from that source. The committee therefore recommend, in lieu of a condemnation of the land by the company at the assessed value, an absolute grant of the right of way for the road over the public lands, and each entire alternate section on the line of the road, and report a bill accordingly.

APPLICATION OF INDIANA FOR THE EXTINGUISHMENT OF THE TITLE OF THE POTTAWATAMIE AND MIAMI INDIANS TO LANDS IN SAID STATE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, APRIL 23, 1836.

A MEMORIAL and JOINT RESOLUTION in regard to the Pottawatamie and Miami Indians in this State.

The memorial of the general assembly of the State of Indiana respectfully showeth: That the interest in the extinguishment of the Indian titles to lands within, and removal of the Indians from her limits, is held by her citizens and this general assembly, of continued and increasing importance. That, acknowledging the paternal care and benevolent policy of the government, in securing the rights of humanity and justice to the Indians; the interest, peace, prosperity, and happiness of the people of the State, require that they should as soon as possible be separated from us. The memorialists, therefore, respectfully ask the renewed attention of the President of the United States to the extinguishment of the remaining title of the Miami Indians, and that the government provide the most efficient means to cause the peaceable, prompt, and effectual emigration of the Pottawatamie and Miami Indians from the State of Indiana, consistent with the policy, faith, and honor of the nation.

Resolved, That our senators and representatives be requested to urge the object of the above memorial on the President and Congress of the United States.

Resolved, That the governor be requested to forward a copy of this memorial and joint resolution to the President of the United States, and each of our senators and representatives in Congress.

PUBLIC LANDS: QUANTITY SURVEYED, SOLD AND UNSOLD—GRANTS FOR COLLEGES, INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS, AND OTHER PURPOSES—EXPENSES OF SURVEY AND SALE, AND RECEIPTS THEREFROM.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, APRIL 28, 1836.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 28, 1836.

SIR: In compliance with a resolution of the House of Representatives, dated the 16th instant, I have the honor to transmit:

1st. Statements marked A and B, accompanied by a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, containing the information called for in the first branch of the resolution.

2d. A communication from the acting Register of the Treasury in reply to the remaining inquiries embraced in the resolution referred to.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. SPEAKER of the House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, April 27, 1836.

SIR: In conformity with the resolutions of the House of Representatives of the 18th instant, "that the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to furnish this House with a statement showing the quantity in acres of public land unsold at the time of the last quarterly return of sales, and within the limits of the several States and organized Territories; also the number of acres which have been appropriated for internal improvements, education, or charitable institutions; showing, under separate heads, the quantity of land unsold in each State and Territory, and to what States and Territories, or bodies politic, grants of land have been made, and the quantity to each;" also, "that the Secretary of the Treasury inform this House what amount of money has been paid by the United States for the title to the public lands, including the payments made under the Louisiana and Florida treaties, the compact with Georgia, the settlement with the Yazoo claimants, the contracts with the several Indian tribes, and the expenditures for compensation to commissioners, clerks, surveyors, and other officers employed by the United States for the management and sale of the western domain; also the gross amount of money received at the public Treasury as the proceeds of sales of public lands, and the sum still due from the supposed solvent purchasers," and which you have referred to this office; I have the honor herewith to transmit two statements, marked A and B, which purport to comprise such items of information sought for by those resolutions as appertain to the duties of this office.

The moneys that were due in years past from purchasers of the public lands have been long since forfeited to the United States by law, and made repayable to such purchasers in the shape of scrip, which is receivable in payment of public lands. At the present time there are no moneys due from purchasers.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

The interest paid on the stock up to the periods when, agreeably to the terms of the convention, it became redeemable, amounted to	8,529,353 43
		$23,529,353 43
By the treaty with Spain, of the 22d February, 1819, there was paid for "Florida" the sum of	5,000,000 00
The interest on the stock created by the act of the 24th of May, 1824, to provide for the payment of the awards under the treaty with Spain, amounted to	1,489,768 66
		6,489,768 66
There was paid, under the "compact with Georgia," including the value of arms furnished the State		1,250,000 00
And there was paid in money at the Treasury, "in the settlement of the Yazoo claimants," the sum of		1,832,375 70

"The expenditure for compensation to the commissioners, clerks, surveyors, and other officers employed by the United States for the management and sale of the western domain," to the 31st of March, 1836, including the sum of $78,223 71, estimated as the amount of salaries and incidental expenses of the registers' and receivers' offices for the first quarter of the present year, being the same as for the fourth quarter of 1835, amounts to		$7,246,214 22
The sums paid under "contracts with the several Indian tribes," as far as they can be selected from the sum of $18,887,896 50, the aggregate payments, on account of Indians, amount to		10,867,488 76
		51,215,200 77
The following items, although not specifically called for by the resolution, having been heretofore reported in reply to other calls on this subject, are submitted as expenses also incurred in the acquisition and sale of the public lands, viz.:
Cost of the Cumberland road, east of Ohio.....	$1,657,325 20
Cost of the Cumberland road, east of Ohio, repairs.....	1,105,681 13
Cost of the Cumberland road in Ohio.....	1,553,449 00
Cost of the Cumberland road in Indiana.....	635,000 00
Cost of the Cumberland road in Illinois.....	346,000 00
Survey of road from Wheeling to the Mississippi.....	10,265 85
		5,307,721 18
Payments on account of the Indians over the amount above stated, as having been applied to the extinguishment of titles to their lands under "contracts".....		8,020,407 74
And the three per cent. on the amount paid into the Treasury for lands, to the 18th instant, paid or payable to the States in which the sales were made.....		2,089,493 54
		$66,632,823 23
The receipts into the Treasury from lands to the 31st December, 1835, amounted to.....	$64,210,134 91
And during the first quarter of 1836, as exhibited in the bank returns, rendered up to the 18th instant.....	5,439,650 00
		$69,649,784 91

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

MICHAEL NOURSE, Acting Register.

IN FAVOR OF GRANTING LANDS FOR A ROAD FROM JEFFERSON CITY, MISSOURI, TO LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MAY 10, 1836.

Mr. A. G. HARRISON, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred a resolution of the House, instructing the Committee to inquire into the expediency of making a grant of lands for the purpose of constructing a road in the State of Missouri, reported:

The resolution proposes that the road shall run from Jefferson City, the seat of government of the State of Missouri, through the town of Little Rock, in the Territory of Arkansas, to some point on the Mississippi river, in as direct a line as possible. Your committee, from the best information they have been enabled to collect on the subject, are of opinion that such a road is necessary to this section of our country. It would be of great advantage to Missouri, Illinois, Arkansas, and the whole southern part of our country bordering on the Mississippi river. A large portion of the exports of Missouri and Illinois is live stock. If the road was constructed, those engaged in this business would not only be enabled to go and return any season of the year, but they would, in fact, be thrown from one hundred and seventy to one hundred and eighty miles nearer to this important market than they are at present; for the proposed road is at least that much nearer than the existing one. The river communication to the southern market is so seriously obstructed during the winter by the ice, that the intercourse between these points is thereby suspended, which thus seriously affect the live stock trade of Missouri and Illinois. The construction of this road would entirely supersede this difficulty. The point at which the road is contemplated to terminate, is below the point where the ice either runs or forms, and those engaged in the trade of live stock would, in all cases, take them to market by land instead of doing so by water, as far as the road would run, because there would be no difficulty in going by water after getting to this point.

But another most important consideration, which has a more general bearing upon the interests of the whole country, is, that the contemplated road would be of incalculable benefit in time of war. New Orleans is an important point, being the key to the whole valley of the Mississippi, and would probably more readily attract the attention of the enemy than any other point in the Union. If this place was endangered by the presence of an enemy during the winter, when the communication by water is closed up, how would it be possible, without this road, to render the timely assistance which such an exigency might require? This fact is of so important and striking a character, that your committee would be willing to rest the propriety of the measure upon it alone; for, in taking a general survey of the country, and looking at those points most likely to invite attacks, the government should not only turn its attention to the means best calculated for their defence, but also to all those circumstances which strike the mind as likely to afford the readiest relief in cases where they may be in imminent peril of falling into the hands of the enemy. But the facilities which such a road would have in the event just mentioned, for the transportation of men, provisions, and munitions of war, would also extend to the transportation of the mail between the same portions of the country during the time that the rivers are blocked up with ice. For the mail from New Orleans and the immediate points could come by water to the point where the contemplated road is to terminate, and then be taken on by land without delay or any further impediment.

The country generally through which the road would run, particularly that portion of it which lies in Missouri, is exceedingly broken and sterile. It is, therefore, not only less valuable than the lands generally in that State, but there is less hope that this portion of the State will, or can, ever be settled.

The contemplated road will not only invite the settlement of this part of that State to every practicable extent, but will, unquestionably, add to the value of the public lands in that quarter, and lead to the purchase of many, which, without such an inducement, would never be taken up.

Your committee, therefore, being of opinion that a grant of the alternate sections along the proposed road should be given to the State of Missouri and the Territory of Arkansas, for its construction, have herewith reported a bill for that purpose.

ON A CLAIM FOR THE RELINQUISHMENT OF INTEREST ON A DEBT INCURRED BY A PURCHASER OF PUBLIC LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MAY 11, 1836.

Mr. EWING, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred a bill for the relief of the heirs of John Brahan, late receiver of public moneys at Huntsville, Alabama, reported:

That they find, among the papers referred to them, a report of the Committee on the Public Lands of the House of Representatives, bearing date the 13th of January, 1835, which contains a very full statement of the grounds on which it has been thought proper to extend to the petitioner the relief prayed for; and as your committee are desirous of bringing the subject, with all its merits, fully before the Senate, they here refer to that report, and adopt it as a statement of the petitioner's case, and a summing up of the arguments in favor of his right, while, at the same time, they are constrained to differ entirely from the conclusion to which that report comes.

The ground on which the equitable claim for relief rests is, that Brahan became the purchaser of the public lands, not for the purpose of private speculation, but really and bona fide as the agent of the government; that agency not duly created but assumed by an officer, because of a sudden and pressing necessity, to prevent a loss which the government was likely to sustain. If this state of things be not shown to have existed, all right to relief fails.

Your committee entertain no doubt of the fact that a combination or combinations of speculators were formed to put down competition in the purchase of the public lands. That Brahan bid against them, and thus became largely a purchaser, is also established; but the motives which induced his competition, and the character in which he bid, as agent for the government or for his own personal profit, is a matter to be determined by an examination of the evidence.

It is suggested that the prices which he gave for the land which he purchased, were so high, that he could not reasonably hope to make a profit on them, and that hence it is to be presumed that he did not bid them in for personal profit, but to save the government from loss. But this argument, it seems to your committee, destroys itself. If the lands were bid up to their full value, or very nearly to their value, it was not necessary for the protection of the rights of the United States that any one should step in as their agent, and run up the lands beyond that value. In a sale at auction by a private individual it would be a fraud upon other bidders to do so, and the United States cannot be presumed to have created such agency, nor can they, after the fact, recognize the act of any such self-created agent as their own.

But it appears, by contemporaneous communications between Brahan and the Treasury Department, that he did not at that time pretend to any such agency, or to have acted in any capacity as the guardian of the rights and interests of the government. To this correspondence, and other explanatory statements* your committee refer, and make the same a part of this their report.

From this document, your committee are irresistibly led to the conclusion that Mr. Brahan, taking advantage of his situation as a public officer, and the advantages it gave him, entered, in his own name, at private sale, at the minimum price, about one hundred tracts of the public lands; that he became a purchaser at the public sales for a very large amount; that, having purchased beyond his means of payment, he kept back his returns under various pretences, for the purpose of concealing his defalcation; that there were circumstances which induced a strong suspicion at the time that he was engaged in the purchase of Mississippi stock, then selling at fifty cents on the dollar, and turning it in to himself, as receiver, to pay for the land which he had bought, and for which he was a defaulter; that this suspicion was communicated to him by the Secretary of the Treasury, and he did not deny or contradict it; that after sundry efforts to bring him to account, he confessed his defalcation, and pretends that part of it is occasioned by loss which occurred in the hurry of business. He was thereupon dismissed from office. He has, under the relief law of 1821, relinquished so much of his purchase as he saw fit, reserving a large amount of it. He has paid up, it is believed, the principal debt, and his widow and heirs now ask to be relieved from the payment of the interest. Your committee are of opinion that the bill ought to be rejected.

ON CLAIMS TO RESERVATIONS UNDER THE FOURTEENTH ARTICLE OF THE TREATY OF DANCING RABBIT CREEK, WITH THE CHOCTAW INDIANS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MAY 11, 1836.

Mr. BELL, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom were referred the memorials of certain Choctaw Indians, claiming reservations under the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, and the resolutions and other proceedings of the legislature of the State of Mississippi, together with the memorials of sundry citizens of said State, remonstrating against the confirmation of said claims, reported:

The subject submitted to the committee under the several orders of the House, in relation to claims for reservations under the 14th article of the treaty made with the Choctaw Indians, at Dancing Rabbit creek, on the 27th September, 1830, involves interests of considerable magnitude, both to the government and to the Indian claimants, and the committee have given to it a correspondent attention.

The 14th article of Dancing Rabbit creek is in the following words:

"Each Choctaw head of a family, being desirous to remain and become a citizen of the United States, shall be permitted to do so, by signifying his intention to the agent within six months from the ratification of this treaty, and he or she shall thereupon be entitled to a reservation of one section of six hundred and forty acres of land, to be bounded by sectional lines of survey; in like manner shall be entitled to half that quantity for each unmarried child which is living with them, over ten years of age; and a quarter-section to such child as may be under ten years of age, to adjoin the location of the parent. If they reside upon said lands, intending to become citizens of the States, for five years after the ratification of this treaty, in that case a grant in fee simple shall issue; said reservation shall include the present improvement of the head of the family or a portion of it. Persons who claim under this article shall not lose the privilege of a Choctaw citizen, but if they ever remove, are not to be entitled to any portion of the Choctaw annuity."

All the embarrassments which have arisen in the execution of this article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, and the only question of any difficulty now presented for the decision of Congress, will appear, upon a full consideration of the subject, to have originated in the neglect of the agent, whose duty it was to receive and register all applications for reservations under that article, and in the policy pursued by the government of bringing the lands in the Choctaw district into market before the number and location, under this article of the treaty, were ascertained and adjusted.

There does not appear to be any room for doubt or cavil as to the proper construction of this article of the treaty: First, it is clear that no reservation can be allowed to any head of a family who did not, in some form or other, signify his intention to become a citizen of the State, and to take a reservation according to the provisions of this article, within six months from the ratification of the treaty. Secondly, that every such claimant must be shown to have had in his possession or occupancy at the date of the treaty an improvement of some kind, a house or cabin, a field or enclosure of some size. Thirdly, that before a patent can issue to such claimant, he or she must be shown to have continued to reside upon the land claimed during the term of five years from the date of the treaty, unless prevented by violence or the act of the government.

The treaty was ratified on the 24th day of February, 1831, and on the 24th day of August following, the time limited for making declarations of an intention to take reservations under this article of the treaty expired. It does not appear that the agent, William Ward, whose duty it was to receive and register these declarations, was advised of the ratification of the treaty, or that he received any instructions in relation to his duty under it, until a communication from the Department of War, bearing date the 21st of May, 1831, reached him, at the Choctaw agency, which would allow less than three months for those who desired to take reservations under this article of the treaty, to signify their intention to do so to the agent. It does not appear that the agent received any instructions as to the manner in which he should execute his duty under this article of the treaty, except that he should be careful in keeping a register of the reservations under it, and that he should transmit a certified copy thereof for the information of the Department of War. The terms of the treaty were to be his only guide, all besides was left to his discretion. No further step appears to have been taken by the government in the execution of this article of the treaty, until the 26th of June, 1833, when George W. Martin was appointed by the President to make the selections, and to locate all reservations under the 15th and 19th, as well as the 14th article of the treaty. The locating agent was advised of his appointment, and received his instructions, on the 5th of August following. By the latter he was directed to apply to Col. Ward and Capt. Wm. Armstrong, at the old agency, for copies of the registers of each class of reservations under the treaty, and to make them the guide of his conduct in assigning and making reservations. Upon application to these gentlemen on the 11th of September, 1833, he was informed that he could not be furnished with perfect copies of the registers under either article of the treaty. He was, however, supplied with two lists, having the appearance of duplicates, one of which was certified by the agent, containing the names of heads of Choctaw families, who had signified their intention to become citizens, and to take reservations under the 14th article, but they did not correspond. Col. Ward stated that he had transmitted the original register to the Department of War: that he had kept no official copy, and he would not answer for the accuracy of the copies which he furnished at that time. Capt. Armstrong, at the same time, informed him that these lists were imperfect. The locating agent immediately informed the department of these facts, and requested copies of the registers transmitted to the department. On the 8th day of September, the locating agent had received a letter from the Department of War, under date of the 8th of August, 1833, by which he was advised that the President had determined to offer the lands ceded by the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek for sale, on the third Monday (21st day) of October following, and that it would be necessary that the locations of all the reservations provided for in the treaty, should be completed and entered in the proper land offices before that time. The region of country in which these locations were to be made, extended three hundred and fifty miles in one direction, and one hundred and fifty in the transverse direction, and the communications between the different sections of it at that time difficult and uncertain. There were five distinct land offices, at each of which some portion of these locations were to be entered, viz.: Chocchuma, Columbus, Clinton, and Augusta, in Mississippi, and Tuscaloosa and Demopolis, in Alabama. These offices were situated at great distances from each other; and when it is recollected that the public sales were to commence within less than three months from the time at which the locating agent was advised of his appointment, and in less than two months of the time when he was notified that the lands were to be brought into market, it will appear that the agent could not have complied with the expectations of the government in completing his duties under the several articles of the treaty granting locations, even if he had been furnished with the registers and other useful information. But it appears that the locating agent was not furnished with maps or plats of survey of any of the districts or sections of the country within which it was made his duty to make the numerous locations required by the treaty; and after having waited in vain for copies from the General Land Office, which had been promised him, he was again disappointed in his application to the office of the surveyor general of the district, and to the several land offices in the same. Finally, he was informed that he was expected to make such use as he could of the plats in the several registers' offices, as his only resource in this respect. It also appears that no copies of any of the registers returned by Col. Ward to the War Department, were received by the locating agent until within three days before the commencement of the public sales, and even then no copy was received of the register under the 14th article. On the 15th of September, the locating agent advised the department fully of the difficulties which would, under these circumstances, attend the execution of his duties in so short a space of time; and he pointed out the great injustice and embarrassments which would arise, if no other reservations should be withheld from sale, than such as could be satisfactorily and finally ascertained and located before the sales commenced.

The locating agent, under these circumstances, proceeded to locate the reservations of all such heads of families whose names appeared on the certified list furnished by Colonel Ward, under the 14th article of the treaty, and also of those who produced separate certificates of Colonel Ward, that they had made the proper declaration in due time. All others who applied to have their reservations located and reserved from sale, were informed that they could not be allowed reservations, inasmuch as their names did not appear upon the register of the agent. The lands of all other claimants were, of course, sold in all those sections of the country which were surveyed and brought into market at that time, subject, however, to the condition expressed in the proclamation offering said lands for sale, that if any reservation secured to any Indian by the treaty should be sold, such sale would not be confirmed.

It was soon ascertained that there were many who claimed reservations under the 14th article, whose names were not to be found upon either of the lists furnished by Colonel Ward, and who had no certificate of the necessary declaration. It was objected by some that Colonel Ward had neglected to register their names, although they made the proper declaration in due time; others affirmed that their names had been registered, but that a part of the register, or the paper upon which their names had been taken down, was lost; and others alleged that he had refused to register their names when applied to for that purpose.

The complaints upon these grounds became so numerous, and the individual applications to the government for relief increased in such a degree, that on the 13th of October, 1834, the locating agent was instructed by the Department of War, under the direction of the President, to give public notice, that those Indians who considered themselves entitled to reservations under the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, and whose names were not upon the register of Colonel Ward, should exhibit to the locating agent the evidence of their claims. These instructions further authorized the locating agent to make locations for all such heads of families as should bring themselves within the provisions of the 14th article, and who should satisfy him by proof that their names were not registered by reason of the mistake or neglect of the agent. In all cases in which the lands claimed had been sold, the locating agent was directed to designate lands of equal quantity, and of as nearly equal value as practicable, and all reservations located under these instructions were directed to be reserved from sale, and were only to become valid and absolute by the confirmation of Congress. The locating agent was strictly enjoined to make detailed reports, showing the names standing, and credibility of the witnesses, and all the facts and circumstances in each case, with copies of the papers presented by each claimant, that their claims might be laid before Congress. The locations made under the instructions of the 13th of October, up to the 24th of December, 1834, with the accompanying evidence, were submitted to Congress by the President, on the 9th of February, 1835, referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs in the House of Representatives, and a bill was reported to the House, providing for a more full and satisfactory investigation of the claims, but it was not fully acted upon. The locating agent was informed by letter from the Department of War, under date of the 11th of March, 1835, of the failure of Congress to act upon the claims which had been presented; and he was further directed to report the locations he had made, and those he might make, under the instructions of the 13th of October, to the department, that they might be laid before the next (present) Congress. These instructions of the 11th of March, 1835, were accompanied with the assurance that the lands located should be reserved from sale until Congress should act upon them. The locating agent, it appears, under these renewed instructions, proceeded to make numerous additional locations. All the locations made under the instructions of the 13th of October, 1834, and of the 11th of March, 1835, and which it is estimated amount to 615,686 acres, with the evidence upon which they are founded, are now submitted to Congress, and the question is, shall the whole or any part of them be confirmed?

If the committee were satisfied of the justice of these claims they would hesitate to recommend their confirmation without further investigation, under all the circumstances attending them. The great number of them has caused general surprise, and created a strong suspicion in the public mind that they cannot be well founded. But a deeper feeling has been excited in the State of Mississippi, by the interferences with the rights and expectations of the settlers, which a confirmation of these locations would produce, and this consideration of individual interest, with the spirit of patriotism which revolts at the idea of a fraud so gross as the allowance of these claims would be, in the opinion of many, has excited a ferment and dissatisfaction of a nature so intense that it would be proper to institute a more rigid scrutiny into the origin and justice of these claims, for the sake of giving satisfaction to a community so large and respectable, if no other reason could be shown for such a course.

The committee, therefore, have not been disposed, if it had been practicable, to investigate the evidence upon which each of these claims is founded, with a view to their immediate rejection or confirmation; they have proceeded in their examination rather with a view to ascertain if there existed any facts or circumstances of so conclusive a nature as to stamp them manifestly with the character of fraud and injustice, and to justify their immediate rejection without further expense to the government, and without further suspense to all the parties concerned, on the one hand; or whether, on the other hand, there existed such plausible grounds of belief that "these claims, or a great portion of them, are founded in right and justice," as to authorize the delay and expenditure necessarily incident to the establishment of any tribunal necessary and competent to make a thorough investigation into their merits. But there are other reasons which have appeared to the committee of sufficient weight to justify this course. As the evidence upon which these claims are founded is almost exclusively oral and personal, and therefore deriving its chief weight and importance from the circumstances of the character and disinterestedness of witnesses, whatever plausibility may be given to any application from the statements and number of the witnesses, whether white men or Indians, the committee would feel far less competent to decide upon such evidence when presented to them only on paper, than they would were the witnesses brought before them, and all those facilities for ascertaining character afforded them, which would exist in the country or districts in which the claims originated. The remaining arguments and facts submitted in this report, will therefore be intended to sustain and justify the recommendation of a course conformable to these views.

The committee will first inquire whether there are any facts or circumstances in the origin of these claims, and the evidence by which they are attempted to be supported, to justify their immediate rejection. The circumstances which appear to have had the greatest effect upon the public mind against their validity, are first, the fact that the claimants were not registered within six months after the ratification of the treaty; second, the great numbers of them: third, the late period at which they have been brought forward; fourth, the circumstance, which is quite notorious, that a few active and sagacious white men have been instrumental in causing these claims to be presented, that they have acted as the agents of the Indians in all, or nearly all the cases, and that they are known to have existing contracts with the Indians, for one half the lands secured by them; and lastly, that a great number of Indians who emigrated to the west of the Mississippi, have been prevailed upon to return to the ceded country, and set up claims to reservations under this article of the treaty.

1. The committee are of opinion that but little attention is due to the first general objection to the validity of these claims. The proof is clear and conclusive, that the late Choctaw agent, Col. Ward, at the time it was made his duty to receive the declarations, and keep a register of the names of the heads of such families as desired to become citizens of the State, and to take reservations under the 14th article of the treaty, was incompetent to the accurate and proper discharge of his duty. He was often capricious and arbitrary in his conduct in receiving declarations. In some instances he appears to have refused to place the names of Indians upon his register, because they did not make their applications at the agency where his office was usually kept; at other times he appears to have given certificates of declarations made at other places. In the instance of an entire band or company of applicants, the proof is very strong and satisfactory, that he declined registering their names, when their names and objects were stated to him symbolically, by bundles of sticks, according to the Indian custom: he is proved on that occasion to have taken their sticks into his hand and thrown them away, saying that there were too many of them, and they must go west. There are many circumstances stated in the proof before the committee, which show that all the agents in the employment of the government in carrying this treaty with the Choctaws into execution discouraged all applications for reservations under the 14th article, and Colonel Ward is stated to have advised the removing agents to threaten them with punishment if they did not emigrate. The following extract of a letter written by Colonel Ward to the War Department, on the 21st day of June, 1831, is full and decisive as to the credit that is due to the register transmitted to the department, so far as it purports to contain the names of all the heads of families who signified their intention to take reservations under this article of the treaty; and it also affords a strong presumption that a considerable number of heads of families besides those names appear upon the register, may justly claim reservations under this article of the treaty: "I will observe that there are many more who wish to stay five years than had been expected. There were upward of two hundred persons, from one section of country, applied a few days since, at a great council held near this place. I put them off, as I did believe they were advised to that course by designing men, who were always opposed to the treaty; and this I trust is the last effort they will be able to make to thwart the views of government." But there are still further proofs that but little credit can attach to the register kept by Colonel Ward of the applicants for reservations under the 14th article, as evidence of the whole number entitled. The time prescribed by the treaty, within which any head of a family could bring himself within the provisions of that article, expired on the 24th day of August, 1831, and it was then the duty of the agent to have forwarded the register, or a copy of it, to the Department of War, agreeably to his instructions. He does not appear to have transmitted it until some time in 1832, and after repeated applications from the department. The register then transmitted to the department contained only sixty-nine heads of families. The certified list, afterward furnished by Colonel Ward to the locating agent, contains the names of persons not found on the register in the Department of War, and the other list, furnished the locating agent at the same time, though not certified by Colonel Ward, contains the names of some twenty persons who are not upon either of the other lists. Upon this point the following extracts from the examination of Colonel Ward before a committee of the legislature of Mississippi is important:

"Question 3. Did you refuse to register the application of any Indian claiming, under said treaty, when that application was made according to the treaty?

"Answer. I did not; I only refused to register such applications as these, viz.: When one Indian applied for many; when one Indian proposed to apply for many I refused to permit him to do so; but when I thus refused I told such Indian that each one must apply for himself; and when they did thus apply in their own proper persons I always permitted them to register. I bought a book in which I registered all applications, which I sent up to the War Office.

"Question 4. Did you not lose any part of the register?

"Answer. I think one leaf of the memorandum paper was lost in taking it round by M. Markee. This memorandum paper was not the regular register, but only a sheet of paper folded up, which was loose, and which was made at the trading-house, and which I made only for the accommodation of these men, and I did not consider myself bound to register any application which was not made at my office at the agency; and these names (which were between three and six only in number) which I suppose were lost, were not made at my office at the Choctaw agency. These Indians, from three to six in number, I thought might be entitled to claim, and I gave a certificate to Dr. John H. Hand that such was my belief."

It is not undeserving of note, as a circumstance showing how little reliance is to be placed upon the official acts of the late Choctaw agent, that the register transmitted to the Department of War is not a bound book, but merely a few sheets of common letter paper slightly fastened together. Here we also find an admission by the agent that he did not consider himself bound to register any application not made to him at the agency, and also that he refused to register the names of any applicants except such as made their applications in person. The treaty prescribes the conditions upon which the head of any Choctaw family should be entitled to a reservation under the 14th article.

The first is, that he should signify to the agent his intention to remain and become a citizen of the State within six months from the ratification of the treaty. There is no stipulation that this intention shall be signified to the agent at any particular place or in any other particular form or manner; nor is there any stipulation that any record or register shall be kept of the fact that such intention was signified or made known to the agent; or that the Indians who might think proper to take reservations under this article of the treaty were to be subject to any other terms or conditions besides those expressed in the treaty, whether prescribed by the government or at the discretion of the agent. That an accurate register should be kept of all those who signified their intention to become citizens, and take reservations under this article of the treaty, was for the benefit of both parties to the treaty. It would have saved the Indian claimants under this article of the treaty the trouble of making any further proof of this fact, as well as secured the government against the frauds of artful persons; but the fact that the name of an Indian claiming a reservation under this article of the treaty is not to be found upon the register kept by the agent, would, under no circumstances, be conclusive against the right of the claimant, and under the actual circumstances of the case it does not appear to afford even a plausible presumption against the right of any claimant. If the treaty had stipulated that a register should be kept of all those who might declare their intention to take reservations under this article, and the agent of the government had neglected his duty, or kept a false register, the Indians ought not to lose their reservations on that account. It also seems to the committee that an Indian head of a family might signify his intention to the agent to remain and become a citizen of the State, and take a reservation under the 14th article of the treaty, as well by letter addressed to the agent of the government, or by his captain, headman, or other customary agent, as in person; and that such intention, signified to the agent at any place and in any manner, whether by signs, symbols, or in the Indian language, or by written characters of any description, provided they were intelligible to the agent, would have been a compliance with this provision of the 14th article of the treaty.

2. As to the argument that the number of these claims affords a presumption that they are fraudulent, the committee are of opinion that this presumption is not so conclusive as to justify the rejection of the claims without further inquiry, and they found the view they have taken of this objection upon the following facts and calculations. The census of the Choctaws, taken by the late Major F. W. Armstrong, who was in every respect a most faithful agent of the government, soon after the ratification of the treaty, exhibits a population of 19,554 souls. From the nature of the country, the character of the people, and the detached and wild districts and settlements in which the Indians resided, it cannot be supposed that this census was entirely full and accurate. The presumption is, that there were several hundreds, to say the least, who were not found by Major Armstrong. But the number of those who emigrated to the west of the Mississippi could be ascertained with greater certainty, as they went under the guidance of the agents of the government, and were subsisted by it. By the report of Major Armstrong, it appears that the whole number of those who crossed the Mississippi were 15,000, leaving a balance of 4,554 still east of the Mississippi, and in the country ceded by the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek. Taking the census of Major Armstrong as the basis of the calculation: in computing the number of families in a population of 4,554 Indians, to allow six souls to a family, would be a fair estimate among savages, and this would give 759 as the number of heads of families yet residing east of the Mississippi. Computing the number of families upon the supposition that each family, upon an average, consists of seven souls, which would probably exceed the true proportion among any uncivilized race, the number of heads of families yet in the ceded territory will be 650. The number of locations made by the locating agent, under the 14th article of the treaty, for those heads of families whose names are to be found upon the register kept by Colonel Ward and others, who produced his certificates of registration, is 52. The whole number of conditional locations made by Colonel Martin appears, by the evidence before the committee, to be 520, making, together, 572 heads of families claiming reservations under the fourteenth article. It is true that a proportion of the Indian families which now reside east of the Mississippi, were provided for by special reservations in said treaty; but the number is not sufficient to weaken materially the view presented of the probable number of heads of families yet residing east of the Mississippi. This calculation is presented as by no means conclusive that there are as many heads of families as is above estimated, who may justly claim reservations under the fourteenth article. It must be borne in mind, that there are other prerequisites besides being the head of a family required by the provisions of the fourteenth article, before the claimant can be allowed a reservation. In further corroboration of this view of the subject, the statement of Colonel Ward, already quoted, that at a council held by Indians of a single section of the Choctaw country, in his neighborhood, there were 200 heads of families who determined to make application for reservations under the fourteenth article, may be adverted to.

3. The late period at which the greater number of these claims have been presented, may, in the opinion of the committee, be sufficiently accounted for from the facts and circumstances already set forth in this report, and a few others, which will be here noticed. The very short time allowed for the adjustment of these claims before the commencement of the public sales of the ceded country, in the fall of 1833, and the discouragements and denial with which all applications were met by the locating agent at that time, not founded upon the registration of the names of the applicants, probably caused many others to forbear to press their claims. It is in proof that an entire band, or company, of heads of families, who applied for reservations under the fourteenth article, in the fall of 1833, alleging that their names had been registered by Colonel Ward, when they were informed by the locating agent that their names did not appear upon his register, and that they would not be allowed reservations, actually despaired of that object, and most of them, in consequence of their disappointment, removed west of the Mississippi. It may also be stated under this head, that the surveys were not completed in many small districts of the ceded country in 1833, and of course the Indians were not interrupted in their possessions by purchasers, nor made to feel the necessity of securing their lands until the year following. The first notice which the Indians had that those whose names were not upon the register would be permitted to make proof of their title to reservations, and have them located conditionally, was on the 12th of November, 1834, when the locating agent received the instructions of the 13th of October.

4. The objection to these claims which has grown out of the fact, that white men, and principally known speculators in the public lands, have been the agents of the Indians in arranging and bringing forward the proofs of the title to reservations, and that they are understood to have stipulated for the enormous compensation of one half the lands which may be secured by their exertions, while it increases the probability that frauds have been practised in the case of numerous individuals where the temptation was so great, and the cupidity of the agents so absorbing, yet it affords no decisive presumption that a large proportion of these claims are not well founded. Most of the Indians are grossly ignorant; and having once despaired of their claims, it is very probable that but few of them possessed the intelligence and energy to have asserted them if they had not been prompted and assisted by the interested activity of white men, nor ought the interference of these white men, or their lucrative expectations, to prejudice any claim which is otherwise well supported. It is the duty of government, while it does justice to the Indians, in allowing them reservations in all cases when they can bring themselves clearly within the provisions of the fourteenth article, to provide also that they shall not become the victims of their own improvidence, as far as the government has the power to shield them. And, at all events, all contracts entered into before the title is perfected by patent, should be regarded as wholly void.

5. As to the last objection, that Indians have returned from the west of the Mississippi, and set up claims to reservations, the committee cannot find, from any evidence, that any such cases exist, except in the general assertion of the fact in some of the memorials and remonstrances of the citizens of the State of Mississippi, which has been referred to them.

The committee, after a full and careful consideration of the subject, are unanimous in the opinion that the most safe and satisfactory plan which can be adopted for the examination and adjustment of those claims, will be to institute a commission to take the evidence for and against them, in the several land districts in which they originated. It would afford a high degree of security to the public against imposition and fraud in the examination and decision of those claims, if William Armstrong, who assisted in taking the census of the Choctaws in 1831, who is now the Choctaw agent, west of the Mississippi, and who possesses a high character for firmness and fidelity, should be a member of the commission; and that the other members of the commission should be selected from sections or States disconnected, as much as possible, with the interests and excitements which have arisen out of those claims. The committee are also decidedly of opinion that the decision of the commissioners should be final, and they recommend that such compensation be allowed as may enable the Executive to secure the services of those whose talents and character for integrity, shall afford a satisfactory guarantee of the fidelity with which they shall discharge their duty. Experience has demonstrated that, whenever the responsibility of deciding upon a mass of claims of this nature may, in any event, be devolved upon Congress, it will be done; and there are so many thousand claims for reservations already waiting the action of the Executive, under various Indian treaties, that the committee think it would be improper, and requiring what could not be reasonably performed, to provide that the President should review the proceedings of the commission which it is proposed to establish.

The committee have had some difficulty in laying down the principles and in agreeing upon the details of the relief which should be granted in those cases, in which the lands reserved by the treaty have been sold, and are now in the possession of purchasers under the government. These purchasers have, in many instances, made valuable improvements, and to deprive them of these possessions would be unjust, and productive of great discontent. On the other hand, the committee fully recognize the right of the Indian to the land which he can show he was in the possession of at the date of the treaty, and upon which he continued to reside until he was deprived of it by the purchaser under the government. That the rights and interests of both parties may be protected and secured as far as possible, without doing absolute injustice to them, the committee recommend that, in all such cases, the government should offer to pay the Indian claimant for his reservation in money, at the rate of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre; and if that should not be satisfactory, the other lands of equal value shall be sold, so as not to interfere with the rights of others. To protect the Indians against improvident contracts, the committee recommend, in this class of cases, that the title to be made to the Indian should be so qualified as to prevent any sale or alienation, except at public auction.

Testimony of Colonel G. W. Martin.

APRIL 18, 1836.

Col. George W. Martin, being duly sworn, answers to the following interrogatories:

Interrogatory 1. State what directions you received from the War Department relative to the location of Indian reservations under the 14th article of the Choctaw treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, and your proceedings under the same.

Answer. The instructions I received from the War Department relative to the location of Indian reservations under the 14th article of the treaty, are contained in papers marked A, B, and C. A summary statement of my proceedings under these instructions will be found in papers marked D, E, and F. My first notice was the paper G, No. 1, followed by notices Nos. 2, 3, and 4. The publication of Notice No. 2 was continued in one of the public newspapers for several months from its date. No. 3 was also published in the public newspapers, and No. 4 I caused to be posted at the public land offices, and other places.

Interrogatory 2. What number of heads of families were returned by Col. Ward to the War Department, as having given the notice required by the treaty to entitle them to reservations?

Answer. The answer to this will be found in document No. 266 of the Senate documents, pages 186, 187, marked H, from which it appears that the number returned by Col. Ward is 69 heads of families.

Interrogatory 3. What number appears on his register to have given such notice who were not returned by him?

Answer. On the certified list, handed to me by Colonel Ward, there are three names which are not on the list returned to the department. On the uncertified list which I received from Colonel Ward at the same time, there are twenty names not to be found on either the certified list handed to me, or on the list returned to the department. This uncertified list, however, wants a number of names which are on both the certified lists.

Interrogatory 4. State when you came into possession of said register, and its present condition, and whether it is in the same condition now as when you received it.

Answer. I received the register from Colonel Ward on the 11th of September, 1833. It contained two lists of claimants under the 14th article of the treaty, one of which was certified by him. The uncertified list contained twenty names which were not on the certified list, and the certified list contained twenty-three names which were not on the uncertified list. The other names, about fifty in number, were the same on both lists. The names and numbers of their children also varied. These lists were each of them written on a sheet of letter paper, and fastened in the back part of the register of claimants under the other articles of the treaty. It is here produced in the same condition as when I received it. For a corroboration of this statement, I refer to two letters of Colonel Armstrong, marked I and J.

Interrogatory 5. What information did Colonel Ward give relating to said register, and what communication did you make to the War Department in consequence thereof?

Answer. Colonel Ward stated that he had sent the original register to the War Department. The lists referred to in the last interrogatory, marked K, Nos. 1 and 2, furnished to me by Colonel Ward, I understood from him were imperfect, and that he would not vouch for their correctness, and had taken no particular care of them. I got the impression that a part of the register had been lost; but whether Colonel Ward stated it specifically or not, I am unable to say. I think I received the impression from both Ward and Armstrong. I refer to Colonel Armstrong's letters alluded to in the last answer.

Interrogatory 6. Do you know to what extent the Indian claimants have interested white persons in obtaining reservations for them?

Answer. I did not consider it as a part of my official duty, in receiving evidence of these reservations, to inquire into the nature or extent of the interest which the agents for the Indians had in securing them, by contract with the Indians. I never saw any contract of the kind; but it is the general reputation of the country, that the agents were to get one half of the lands which might be secured. I have heard this fact stated in the presence of some of the agents, and it was not denied.

Interrogatory 7. What number of heads of families, whose names were not on the register, have presented Colonel Ward's certificate of notice?

Answer. In order to give an intelligible answer to this question, it is necessary to remark, that there are three different lists of claimants under the 14th article made out by Colonel Ward, one of which was certified and returned to the War Office, and two were handed to me, one of which was also certified. These lists contain generally the same names, although there are a few names upon each which are not on either of the others. The following are the names of all who presented to me Colonel Ward's certificates, and whose names are not on the list returned to the War Office, viz.:

William and Judy Turnbull, on neither list.
William Simmons, on neither list.
James Oxberry, on neither list.
John Homer, on neither list.
Benjamin W. Garvin, on neither list.
Mary Johnson, on neither list.
Sampson Moncrief, on certified list handed to me, and on no other.
Betsy Buckels, on uncertified list handed to me, and on no other.
William Thompson went west, no land required.

Interrogatory 8. What number have claimed locations whose names are not on said register, or who did not produce certificates?

Answer. There are 520 heads of families who have claimed locations who did not produce certificates, and none of whose names will, I think, be found on either of Colonel Ward's lists.

Interrogatory 9. What is the probable number of the Choctaws who have remained on this side the Mississippi since said treaty?

Answer. From the testimony which has been presented to me, in connection with other sources of information, I am induced to believe that the number of the Choctaws who have remained on this side of the Mississippi since the treaty, does not vary materially from 3,500, the number set down in a condensed report of Indian removals, in Doc. No. 2, of House of Representatives, 1st sess. 24th Congress, page 296, as the number of Choctaws east of the Mississippi. This number is ascertained by subtracting the whole number of emigrants, after the completion of the removal, from the number of the population taken before the removal. My own observation of these people, while travelling through the country, the information I have derived from others, and the testimony produced before me in my official capacity, induce me to believe that the number of Choctaws who have remained, and are still living, in the district of country ceded by the late treaty, is at least equal to that above stated.

Interrogatory 10. What is the average number of Choctaws to the head of a family?

Answer. Taking the families for whom locations have been made as the basis of a calculation, the number of Choctaws to each head of a family would be about four. I think it a fair estimate to adopt that number.

Interrogatory 11. What number of the locations you have made, have been made to include the original improvements of the claimants at the date of the treaty?

Answer. I think that all the claimants whose names are upon Colonel Ward's lists, and all who produced certificates, except William Simmons, have been located upon the places they occupied at the time of the treaty. The improvements of Simmons, and most of those for whom lands were reserved under the instructions from the department, were, according to the testimony adduced, sold by government previous to their applications, and other lands were reserved from sale.

Interrogatory 12. Under whose agency was the testimony in behalf of the claimants taken?

Answer. The testimony in behalf of the claimants was presented by a number of different persons acting as the agents of the Indians, most of whose names were set down, under the head of general remarks, upon my register of locations, opposite the names of the claimants, as will appear by a reference to the copy of said register before the committee. In many instances, these agents were accompanied by the claimants, or some of their captains or head men, who were examined by me personally.

Interrogatory 13. State the names of all the white persons who you know, or have reason to believe, are interested in procuring such reservations, and your means of such knowledge.

Answer. With respect to the interest which white persons have in procuring reservations, I know very little. The applications for locations under the different articles of the treaty have generally, and I suppose in most cases necessarily, been made by white men, sometimes accompanied by the claimants, and sometimes by producing powers of attorney from the claimants. I have always endeavored to satisfy myself that the persons acting for the Indians were duly authorized by them, but have never inquired how far they were interested in procuring reservations, or whether they were employed as agents, or were parties concerned. I do not recollect of ever having seen any contract between a white man and an Indian claiming under the 14th article; but I am induced to believe that such contracts do exist, by which white men are interested in the claims of the Indians. My belief is, however, founded more upon general rumor, and the conduct of these men in the troublesome and expensive management of this business, than upon any declarations I have ever heard them make. I state the names of the following persons who have appeared before me as the agents of the Indians, and who, I am compelled, for the reasons just stated, to believe, have some interest in these claims, viz.: F. E. Plummer, Wiley Davis, A. A. Halsey, James A. Girault, John B. Davis, E. Loyd, Richard Barry, James Brown, Charles Fisher, John Johnston, sr., D. W. Portis, G. D. Boyd, —— Bates, Thomas J. Crawford, John D. Boyd, J. Whitsett, William M. Gwin, S. B. Marsh, and E. Williams.

Interrogatory 14. Have you now, or have you had, any interest, directly or indirectly, in any claim for any reservation under the 14th article?

Answer. In the month of September, 1832, eleven months before my appointment as locating agent, I became interested in the claim of James Oxberry, a Choctaw, claiming under the 14th article, who had the agent's certificate of registration. My contract was a conditional one, dependent upon Oxberry's ability to perfect his claim. This is the only claim under the 14th article in which I have ever had an interest, directly or indirectly; and I have never obtained or received, either directly or indirectly, any interest in any claim under any article of the treaty since my appointment as locating agent, except a small interest in the special reservation granted to John Donly, obtained some time after its location.

Interrogatory 15. Do you know whether any Choctaws have returned since their emigration west of the Mississippi; and if so, whether any attempts have been made by them to procure reservations in violation of the treaty?

Answer. I know certainly of but one head of a family, Captain Anthony Turnbull, who has returned; and his claim being a local reservation, was disposed of before his first removal. His brother, Robert Turnbull, made a visit to the west at his own expense, but not having removed his negroes, soon returned, and is one of the claimants under the 14th article. I have seen a man named Nelson, who has recently returned from the west, but he has not since his return presented any claim for land. This man was one of a company of about eighty heads of families who said they were registered by Colonel Ward, under the 14th article of the treaty, and applied to me soon after my appointment, for reservations. Not finding their names upon Colonel Ward's lists, I informed them that they could not obtain lands, advised them to go west, and notified Colonel Armstrong, the removing agent, of their situation. The most of these people were accordingly taken west the last year of the removal, and I have never heard that any of them have returned, except Nelson, just named. I was also informed by General S. Cocke, in the month of October, 1835, and previous to the last sales at Columbus, that a man named Durant, who had procured a location under the 14th article, had emigrated, and returned from the west; and in consequence of this information, I notified said Cocke to produce the evidence of the fact before me, at Columbus, on the 1st day of November following, and gave him a notice addressed to Durant to appear at the same time and place, (which notice the said Cocke undertook to serve,) that the claim of said Durant might be fully investigated, and, if found fraudulent, that the location granted might be raised and the claim rejected. No such evidence having been presented, the location remained as previously made. These are the only persons of whom I have any information respecting their return from the west. I have always made it a point of inquiry, upon the presentation of claims under the 14th article, whether the claimant had always, since the treaty, remained and continued to live in the country ceded. I did not consider myself authorized to reserve lands under the 14th article for any who had ever removed west.

Interrogatory 16. Have any of the emigrants to the west of the Mississippi attempted to procure reservations by agents, since their emigration, in violation of the treaty?

Answer. No emigrant to the west of the Mississippi has ever attempted in person, or by an agent, to procure reservations at all under the 14th article, since their emigration, nor under any other article in violation of the treaty.

Interrogatory 17. Do you know of the existence of any contracts between the Indians and the persons who acted as their agents, by which the agents are to have the remainder or other half of the land, at $1 25 per acre, or at any other price?

Answer. I do not know of any such contracts.

Interrogatory 18. State how many reservations you have located for claimants under the 19th article of the treaty.

State also what number of reservations you have located for claimants under the 14th article, whose locations are considered final.

State also what number of reservations you have located under the 14th article, which are considered constitutional, and subject to the confirmation of Congress, since your appointment as locating agent.

State also what number of special reservations you have located under the Choctaw treaty.

State also whether you know of any grant of a reservation made by the treaty which has not been located—and state the names of the reservee or reservees.

Answer. I have located 343 reservations for claimants under the 19th article of the treaty, as appears from my returns to the War Office; 52 reservations under the 14th article, which are considered final; 520 under the 14th article, which are conditional, and 58 special reservations. The number of reservees, under the 19th article of the treaty, exclusive of those specially named in the 1st section, is limited to 1,600. It appears, however, from Colonel Armstrong's return, that only about 739 reservations, including the special ones, were allowed under this article. Of this number, 288 were relinquished to government, leaving 451 to be located, of which 343 have been located, leaving 108 yet unlocated. The whole number of claims in the supplement is 77, of which 60 have been located, leaving 17 unlocated. The whole number of claims therefore, under the 19th article, and the supplement of the treaty, still remaining unlocated, are about 125. The names of the reservees yet unprovided for, who claim under the 19th article, except those who are specially named in the 1st section, cannot, without an examination, which would require a great deal of time and labor, be given. I am enabled, however, by a reference to documents in the War Office, to give the names of most of the reservees, under the 19th article specially named, as well as those named in the supplement, whose claims have not yet been located. They are as follows, viz.: J. Garland, Jo-ho-ke-be-tub-bee, and Eay-cha-ho-bia, under the 19th article; and the following named in the supplement of the treaty, to wit: Allen Gates and wife, G. Nelson, J. Vaughn, Choc-le-ho-ma, Susan Colbert, D. McCurtain, Oak-la-ho-ma, Polly Fil-le-cu-they, Henry Groves, James D. Hamilton, W. Juzan, Tobias Leflore, Jo. Doke. Chief Nutackachie, provided for under the 15th article, is also unlocated.

Interrogatory 19. You have stated you received your appointment of locating agent on the 5th of August, 1833, and procured Colonel Ward's lists of names under the 14th article on the 11th of September, 1833; state at what time you commenced the location of claims under the 14th article,—what plan you adopted to give notice to the Indians of your authority to locate their reservations,—at what time the land sales took place,—whether you have reason to believe that the Indians generally received the notice of your appointment as locating agent, in time to apply for a location of their lands, before the same was offered at public sale—and whether any portion of the Indians for whom you have made conditional locations, applied to you and claimed reservations, under the 14th article of the treaty, before the sales, or within any short time thereafter—and if so, state what number applied as near as you can.

Answer. As soon as possible, after obtaining Colonel Ward's lists of claimants under the 14th article, on the 11th of September, 1833, I commenced receiving applications for locations under the 14th article of the treaty, as well as the other articles, and immediately caused 200 copies of the notice, marked G No. 1, to be printed, and to be distributed as speedily as possible throughout the Choctaw country. A few copies of this notice were sent to each land office. The land sales commenced on the 21st day of October, 1833, and I am inclined to believe that most of the intelligent Choctaws had received the notice of my appointment in time to apply for their locations before the commencement of the sales. Whether this notice was sufficiently understood by the more ignorant people, in parts of the country remote from the land offices, I am unable to say. Among the first applications under the 14th article, were those of Charles Frazier, Joseph Perry, Rachel Davis, Coleman Cole, Moses Perry, Moontubbe, for himself and others, Samuel McGee, We-shoc-she-homa, with several of his men, for himself and his company, together with a number of others not now recollected. We-shoc-she-homa, at the time of his application, informed me that Captains Cobb and Pickens, with their respective companies, were claimants under the same article. I was also informed about the same time, from other sources, that Little Leader and Post-Oak, with their companies, were also claimants under this article. The applications above mentioned were all made previous to, and during the first sales of the Choctaw lands, commencing as above stated. The applicants insisted before me, that they had been registered by Colonel Ward under the 14th article of the treaty; but finding none of their names upon Colonel Ward's lists, except the two names of Captain Cobb and Pickens, I informed them that I could reserve no land for any of them, except the said Cobb and Pickens. During the same time, Garret E. Nelson presented to me a list containing about eighty names, which he said were the names of Choctaw heads of families who had been registered by Colonel Ward upon the application of said Nelson, as a friend and agent of said Indians, with a view, as I understood, of ascertaining whether I would reserve lands for them. Upon examining this paper, and comparing it with Colonel Ward's lists, I discovered that not one name upon the list presented by Nelson was to be found upon Colonel Ward's list. I therefore told him that none of the persons whose names he had produced, could get land, and advised them, as I have stated in my answer to a former interrogatory, to go west, which most of them accordingly did. With respect to many of these applicants, I was satisfied by testimony which they produced that they had been duly registered, but taking Colonel Ward's lists as my guide, I could take no further notice of their applications than to inform the department of their complaints, and request that a register of the 14th-article claimants, which I had not yet received from the War Office, should be forwarded to me immediately, as will be perceived by a reference to my letter of 8th November, 1833, marked L.

The intelligence with respect to the number of names upon Colonel Ward's lists, copies of which lists were furnished to the different land offices, and my course in relation to locations under the 14th article, was circulated through the country, and I do not recollect that any more applications under the 14th article, except by those whose names were on Colonel Ward's lists, were made until after the receipt of the instructions from the department of October 13, 1834, directing conditional reservations. It is probable that the claimants for locations under this article, had desisted from making any further applications to me, on account of the failure of those who applied, and the reports which were circulated in consequence.

Interrogatory 20. Do you know whether the Indians mentioned on your list of conditional locations, asserted claims to reservations under the 14th article, from the date of the treaty, and if so, why their locations were not made before 1835?

Answer. I did not commence my residence in the Choctaw country until about two years after the treaty, and of course am not, from my own knowledge, able to say whether the Indians mentioned in the list of conditional locations, asserted their claims from the date of the treaty or not. From the time, however, that my official duties brought me in contact with these Indians, I have always understood that the facts were notorious in certain neighborhoods, that the Indians residing in those districts, and who are included in the number of those in the list of conditional locations, endeavored, upon the execution of the treaty, to avail themselves of the benefits of the 14th article, and had uniformly ever since asserted their claims to land under that article. In answering the latter part of this interrogatory, "why these Indians did not apply for locations before 1835?" I must refer to the answer of the preceding interrogatory, which accounts for their not procuring locations before the receipt of the instructions of October 13, 1834. These instructions were received by me the 12th November, 1834, and I gave notice to those interested by posting at Chocchuma, and notifying the registers at the other offices to do the same as soon as practicable. See my letter marked M. The applications were commenced and continued from that time onward through 1835, and in all applications for other lands than those occupied at the time of the treaty, I required evidence of the sale by government of the original improvements. The reason why most of the applications were not made before 1835, I presume may be, that the Indians did not become acquainted with the purport of the above notice in time to have the lands they claimed reserved before the sale, which commenced December 8, 1834, nor, considering the time it would necessarily take to circulate intelligence through an extensive and wilderness country, 350 miles long and 150 miles wide, so as to convey it to the understanding of an ignorant and scattered population, and the additional time which would be required to prepare the necessary testimony to sustain their applications, and have the lands reserved at five different land offices, could it be expected that these applications should have been made for some time after the sales.

Interrogatory 21. Have you in any instance refused the application of any Indian to locate land for him? and if so, state the number refused as near as you can.

Answer. In answering this question, I must again refer to the answer of a previous interrogatory. The rule upon which I acted previous to the instructions of October 13, 1834, was to reject the application of every claimant whose name was not to be found upon Col. Armstrong's register furnished to me by the department, or upon the certified lists of Colonel Ward, and his certificates of claimants under the 14th article. As to the number of applications refused, I cannot from my recollection speak with certainty: under the 19th article, very few applied whose names were not on the register. The applications rejected under the 14th article have been spoken of in a previous answer.

Interrogatory 22. Are there now remaining in the country ceded by the treaty of Dancing Rabbit, any Indians who claim reservations under any provisions of the treaty, who have not received a location, either conditional or otherwise? and if there be any, state the probable number, and the article of the treaty under which they claimed.

Answer. I know of no Indians now remaining in the country ceded by the late treaty, who claim reservations under any other provision of the treaty except the 14th article; and how many there are of this class who have not received locations, I am unable to say; but from the testimony presented to me, and other sources of information, I am induced to think there are about two hundred heads of families, including those heads of families who have made applications for reservations, but which were not allowed by me.

Interrogatory 23. Were you acquainted with Colonel Ward during the years 1831, 1832, and 1833; and if so, what were his habits and qualifications for business?

Answer. My acquaintance with Colonel Ward commenced in 1833, during which year I had occasion to call upon him twice only; I cannot, therefore, speak fully of his habits and qualifications for business from personal knowledge. From what I observed, however, of such of his official acts as came under my notice, and what I have learned from the testimony adduced to me, and the information of others, respecting his character and official conduct, I must believe that he was an extremely intemperate man, and, consequently, a very negligent officer. In corroboration of this opinion, I refer to the testimony of the following persons, viz: Gabriel Lincecum, Grant Lincecum, Adam James, Reuben Grant, and Jefferson Clements, John Whitsett, James Oxberry, and George S. Ganes, in papers marked N, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7.

Interrogatory 24. Who selected the locations you made; the agent of the claimants or yourself?

Answer. The agents or representatives of the Indians, in general, designated the land they wished to be reserved, in their written applications. In some cases, this was not done, and the locations are not made. I required proof of the quality of the lands sold, with a view to locate lands of equal value; but of the value of the lands located, I could not judge myself, except by referring to the field notes of the surveyor.

Interrogatory 25. Were any persons whom you have named as agents for the Choctaw claimants, witnesses in support of any claims?

Answer. I have no recollection that any of those agents were witnesses, except in some cases where certificates were given as to the credibility of other witnesses. But I cannot be positive without an examination of the evidence in the several cases.

Interrogatory 26. Have any Chickasaw Indians claimed reservations, as Choctaws, under the 14th article of the Choctaw treaty?

Answer. Not to my knowledge.

Interrogatory 27. Have you made any locations under said article to any Choctaw heads of families who had no improvements at the date of said treaty?

Answer. I made no locations in any case, unless I believed from the evidence that there was such an improvement as was required by the 14th article of the treaty.

Interrogatory 28. Have you knowledge or reason to believe that two or more reservations have been claimed by, or made to, the same Indian, under different names, under said article?

Answer. I have no knowledge, nor any reason to believe, that the same individual has procured more than one location, under different names.

Interrogatory 29. Have you, in any instance, changed locations (under said article) from the place where first laid, and placed them upon lands purchased by pre-emptors?

Answer. I have not.

Interrogatory 30. Did Colonel Ward, at any time, state to you in what kind of book he made the original entry of the names of the Choctaw heads of families who gave notice under said 14th article? if so, state the same.

Answer. I do not know that he ever did. Colonel Ward stated that he had sent the official register to the War Department, and retained the one given to me as a copy for his own use.

Interrogatory 31. Did said Ward state whether he had refused to enter applications not made by the applicant in person, or which was not made at the agency?

Answer. He made no such statement to me.

Interrogatory 32. Do you know William and Henry Garvin? and, if so, state their character.

Answer. I know both, but do not know enough of their character to speak of their truth and veracity.

Interrogatory 33. Has any agent of any applicant for a reservation under said 14th article, or any other person on behalf of himself or such agent, or applicant, at any time directly or indirectly, proposed to give to you any money, or other thing of value, or any interest, present or future, in any of such reservations, or in other lands, or any benefit or emolument whatever, to induce you to do, or forbear to do, any act in the execution, or under color of the execution, of your duty as locating agent under said fourteenth article? if so, state the same.

Answer. No such offer has ever been made to me by any person, either directly or indirectly.

Interrogatory 34. Were the following persons, or any of them, witnesses in support of any of the claimants: Benj. A. McKelven, John Carter, Daniel Green, Lewis Whitsett, J. Garrotts, Hugh McDonald, William Herbert, D. W. Wright, A. F. Young, D. H. Morgan, Lemuel U. (N.) Hatch, Rollin Williams, Henry L. Bennett, F. M. Tucker, Armstrong Hodge, William Humphreys, Richard Evans, Briscoe Bennett, Samuel Garland, —— Holsey?

Answer. I do not find, upon the examination of my papers, that any of the persons mentioned in this interrogatory were witnesses, except John Carter and Hugh McDonald, nor do I believe that any of the others were.

Interrogatory 35. Were any of the persons whom you have named in the answer to the 13th interrogatory, as being agents of the Choctaw claimants, witnesses in support of any of the claims?

Answer. I recollect none, except Mr. Whitsett, who has certified to the credibility of one of the witnesses.

Interrogatory 36. Did you appoint commissioners to meet at the house of Little Leader, in 1835? and if so, what instructions did you give them, and what were the proceedings and report of said commissioners?

Answer. I did appoint such commissioners. My instructions to them are contained in the commission here produced, marked O. And the proceedings under it in the report of the said commissioners, marked P.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, June 26, 1833.

SIR: You are hereby appointed to make the selection of the locations of the tracts of land granted to the Choctaws by the 14th, 15th, and 19th articles of the treaty of September 27, 1830, concluded at Dancing Rabbit creek. Your compensation will be five dollars per day, to include services and expenses, while engaged in this duty. And you are authorized to employ an interpreter, if one attached to the agency cannot be detailed to attend you, and to allow him two dollars and a half per day, in full for his expenses and services. These claims will be paid upon accounts certified by both yourself and the interpreter. The department is informed, that plats of the surveys of one hundred and twelve townships have been received at the General Land Office, and that the exterior lines of one hundred and seventy-six townships have been run, the sectioning of a majority of which is in progress. Copies of the plats received here will be forwarded for you from the Land Office to the care of General Coffee. You will please to apprize the department of your address, that copies of the other plats may be sent to you direct. Upon application to Colonel Ward, or William Armstrong, esq., at the old agency, you will be furnished with copies of registers of the different classes of reservees in the three districts, and may obtain all the information you will require in the fulfilment of this duty. These registers are supposed to be complete, and you will be governed by them in the location and assignment of reservations in all cases, unless otherwise directed by this department. The general provisions of the treaty are, that the reservations shall be bounded by sectional or quarter sectional lines of survey, and include the improvements of the reservees. An exception to this rule occurs in the 15th article, and in the first clause of the 19th, by which two of the four sections granted to the three chiefs and to Colonel Folsom, are to be located "on unoccupied, unimproved lands." You will consult the wishes of these persons in locating these sections, taking care not to interfere with the possessory rights of any other Indian. The half-sections and quarter-sections allowed to heads of families, in the 14th article, for their children, will adjoin the location of the parents. The number of reservees provided for in the 3d and 4th clauses of the 19th article, is limited, and the extent of their respective reservations is proportioned to the number of acres in cultivation. You will learn from the register the names of the persons entitled to lands under the several classes. In locating the three quarter-sections granted to those who shall have cultivated thirty acres or more, you will observe that the treaty provides they shall be "contiguous and adjoining." The reservations allowed under these two clauses are also to be so located, as to include that part of the improvement which contains the dwelling-house. If the contingency should happen contemplated in the latter part of the fourth clause, that the number of reservees should exceed the number stipulated for, you will call upon one or more of the chiefs of the district to which they belong, to decide who shall be excluded. For instance, one half-section is granted to the cultivators of from twenty to thirty acres, the number not to exceed four hundred. If there should be four hundred and fifty claimants, the chiefs are to decide upon the fifty whose claims must be rejected. The fifth clause provides for the assignment to the captains whose cultivated possessions may entitle them, under the previous clauses, to less than a section, of an additional half-section. This half-section must adjoin the tract which includes their improvements and dwelling-house. The registers, also, will show you the names and number of the orphans entitled to reservations. If any of the Choctaws have no improvements, or if the location of a tract would include the improvements of more than one of them, in that case you must exercise a sound discretion respecting the person to whom such tract shall be assigned. It is desirable that the parties interested should decide for themselves, or agree to submit to the determination of their chief; but if they will not do either, perhaps the best method will be to draw lots in their presence. It is also desirable that the reservees of each district should be located together, and as near to each other as the preservation to each of them of his improvement will permit. You will establish such permanent marks upon each reservation, as will show its extent and boundaries. You will also open a new register, and enter upon it the names of the reservees, and the number of the sections, half-sections, or quarter-sections, as marked on the plats of survey assigned to them respectively; the originals of this register you will leave with the sub-agent, William Armstrong, esq.; a copy you will forward to this department. The department relies upon your zeal and exertions to execute every part of your duty under these instructions, in a manner accordant with the obligations of the government, and satisfactory to the Indians. I enclose a copy of the treaty.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN ROBB, Acting Secretary of War.

GEORGE W. MARTIN, Esq., (care of General Coffee,) Florence, Alabama.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, October 13, 1834.

SIR: The applications that have, from time to time, been presented to this department by persons claiming reservations under the 14th article of the Choctaw treaty, that the sale of the sections they claim may be suspended, have been submitted to the President, who has directed the following instructions to be communicated to you: In the cases that have been brought to the notice of this department, it has appeared from the evidence exhibited, that the names of the claimants were registered, and the record has been lost; or that the record was made on separate slips of paper that cannot now be found; or that they applied verbally, and were led by the agent to believe that this was a compliance with the treaty; or that their application to be registered was refused without sufficient reason. There has also been evidence exhibited to show that the agent certified that persons "caused their names to be registered, whose names are not upon the register returned by him." In this state of things, the President deems it to be his duty to modify the order that precluded you from locating sections for persons not upon this register, in order that the parties may have an opportunity to obtain the action of Congress upon their claims. You will, therefore, give public notice that persons who consider themselves entitled to reservations under the 14th article, and whose names are not upon the register of Colonel Ward, will exhibit to you the evidence in support of their claims. This evidence must show that they were citizens of the Choctaw nation, heads of families, and did signify their intention to become citizens within the time prescribed by the treaty. It must also show the time of their application to be registered, and the conversation, and circumstances relating to it. If they bring themselves within the requisition of the 14th article, and the evidence of credible and intelligent witnesses induces you to believe that the omission of their names on the register was caused by the mistake or neglect of the agent, you will make locations for them in the manner pointed out in the instructions heretofore given to you. These locations, it must be understood, are contingent, and will be complete only in the event of their being confirmed by Congress. If the whole or a part of any reservations that may be claimed have been sold, you will designate upon the plats tracts of equal dimensions, and of as nearly equal value as practicable. The register and receiver of the proper land offices will be instructed to reserve from sale the reservations you may locate under this order, until the views of Congress are ascertained. The President specially directs that you transmit, in season for the action of Congress at its next session, detailed reports, showing the names, standing, and credibility of the witnesses, and all the facts and circumstances in each case, with copies of the papers presented to you, and your communications to the land offices upon this subject. The execution of these instructions will require your prompt and vigilant attention, that justice may be done to the Indians and the government.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

MAHLON DICKERSON, Acting Secretary of War.

Col. GEORGE W. MARTIN, Columbus, Mississippi.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR, Office Indian Affairs, March 11, 1835.

SIR: The reports of locations, transmitted by you to this office, in compliance with the instructions of the 13th October, 1834, were submitted to Congress by the President, but no definite legislative action was had upon them. In the opinion of this department, nothing more can be done until the next session. The locations you have made, and those you may make, under the instructions above named, will be reported by you to the proper land offices, and to this department, and the lands will be reserved from sale until the decision of Congress is known. You are requested to inform the claimants of the course contemplated.

Very respectfully, your humble servant,

ELBERT HERRING.

CHOCCHUMA, Mississippi, December 24, 1834.

SIR: As per my instructions from the War Department, of the 13th of October last, which came to hand on the 12th of November, I herewith transmit a list of claimants under the 14th article of the treaty at Dancing Rabbit creek, for the purpose that said claims and accompanying testimony may be laid before Congress. A register of the locations will be forwarded to the War Department so soon as the lands are designated on the plats of survey, and a complete list can be procured and regularly made out; all of said claims have been conditionally reserved for the final action of Congress.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. W. MARTIN.

Hon. LEWIS CASS, Secretary of War.

CHOCCHUMA, Mississippi, December 29, 1834.

SIR: I have the honor, in addition to the list of claims transmitted on the 24th instant, to the War Department, herewith to forward the following testimony, in support of a number of Indian claimants therein embraced. These Indians claim to be entitled to lands under the 14th article of the treaty, having, as they alleged, fully complied, on their part, with all its requisitions, notwithstanding their names do not appear on the agent's books. The 14th article provides that each Choctaw head of a family, being desirous to remain and become a citizen, shall be permitted to do so, by signifying his intention to the agent within six months from the ratification of the treaty, and thereupon shall be entitled to receive certain allowances of land, in manner as set forth in the treaty. These claimants allege that they did so signify their intentions, as required by the treaty; and say, if their names do not appear on the agent's book, it is no fault of theirs, and consequently they ought not to be deprived of their just rights, by the neglect or default of the agent, or anybody else, over whom they had no control. This being the nature of the claims set up by them, I have, in each case presented, inquired, first, "Is this a case coming under the 14th article?" and next, "Is there [in the language of the President's letter] probable evidence of credible witnesses, of their rights under the provisions of said article; and that their failure to obtain such reservations has been caused by the mistakes or neglect of the agent appointed to make a list of reservees?" Wherever it has been satisfactorily proved to me by indisputable testimony, that the claims came under the 14th article, and that the failure to have their names registered was not their fault, but arose from the neglect, or mistakes of the agent, or other cause not embraced in the treaty, I have located their lands, and directed the register to withhold them from sale, conditionally. The letter of the President directs "that, in all cases, the locating agent will make special reports of the names of the witnesses, and of the facts and circumstances submitted to the War Department."

In obedience to these instructions, I have caused all the testimony offered to be taken in writing, under oath, and in due form of law. A list of the names of the witnesses is annexed to this report, and copies of the depositions themselves are herewith transmitted, the originals being retained for the use of this office. The instructions require that I should report the facts and circumstances submitted to me. By reference to the papers, it will be seen that the depositions establish the following facts, viz.: 1st. That within the time limited by the treaty for registration, on one occasion a number of the Indians, then living at Suckenatchie, and some of them living yet on the same, did actually go forward to the agent, then at the old factory, for this and other purposes, and did not only offer their names for registration, but their names were duly and formally entered down in a book opened for that purpose; nevertheless, few, if any, of the names then and at that place taken down, are now to be found in the agent's book in my possession. The conclusion is inevitable, that the small book or sheet of paper on which their names were entered, has been either lost by the agent, or destroyed by those who might possibly wish the Indians to emigrate. It appears that a portion of these Indians have since gone away, while others remain on their lands, and now contend for their claims. 2d. That there are instances where individuals went forward and had their names entered down on the book, and yet they were afterward erased, or blotted out by (possibly) those who had free access to the agent's book. 3d. It further appears, from the testimony of several witnesses of unquestionable character, that, in the month of June, 1831, a number of Indians attended at the council-house, for the purpose of entering their names to become citizens, and take lands. Being ignorant of the English language, they appointed one or two head-men, or leaders, to go forward for them, and give in their names accordingly. As is customary among the Indians, they collected a parcel of small sticks, designating the number of them that wished to register. With these sticks in their hands, the spokesman went up to the agent and gave them in, at the same time informing the agent, through the interpreter, that these sticks showed the number they came forward to give in, and that they would give the name of each head of a family, and the number and ages of their children. It appears further, that the agent took the sticks in his hand and threw them away, and directed the interpreter to tell the Indians that there were too many of them, and that they ought or must move over the Mississippi. Being thus repulsed or turned off, it appears that many of these Indians abandoned their claims, and have gone west, while some of them yet remain, and now assert their claims, under the foregoing signification of their intention to remain.

I have, &c.,

GEO. W. MARTIN, Locating Agent.

WASHINGTON CITY, April 5, 1836.

SIR: In compliance with an order from the department, dated January 22, 1836, requiring me "to report, without delay, the proceedings which have taken place" in the location of claims under the 14th article of the late Choctaw treaty, and "the reasons that have governed me," as locating agent, in making conditional reservations of land to satisfy said claims, I have the honor to present the following history of my proceedings, with the documents upon which, in accordance with my instructions, they are founded. It will be necessary, for the purpose of giving a connected view of these proceedings, to commence with my first instructions as locating agent for the Choctaws, and trace thence the course I have since pursued in relation to claims under the 14th article of the treaty. My first instructions, accompanying my appointment, bear date June 26, 1833, and were received by me the 5th day of August following. By these instructions I was directed to apply to Colonel Ward, or William Armstrong, esq., at the old agency, for copies of registers of the different classes "of reservees, and such other information as I might require in the fulfilment of my duties;" and was advised "that copies of the plats of survey would be forwarded to me from the land office."

I immediately visited the agency, made the requisition directed, upon Colonel Ward and Mr. Armstrong, and was informed by them that perfect copies of the registers of reservees could not be furnished at that office, and I was advised by Mr. Armstrong to apply to the department for such registers. The only document or information obtained at that time from the office of the old agency, relative to the claimants under the 14th article, was a register, represented by both Colonel Ward and Mr. Armstrong, as being mutilated and very imperfect, which contained two lists of claimants under the 14th article, having the general appearance of duplicates, with numerous discrepancies, and embracing together ninety-one names, one of which lists was certified. I then applied to the department for a correct register, which was furnished complete as to all the classes of claimants, except those under the 14th article, which were not contained in it; and no other register of these claimants has ever been received by me, except the imperfect one above alluded to, although, urged by the numerous complaints of claimants under this article, I frequently presented the subject to the department. As the first public sale of Choctaw lands was to occur within less than two months after my obtaining from Colonel Ward the imperfect register above alluded to, and commenced three days after I received the one from the department, not containing the claimants under the 14th article, I felt authorized to reserve lands for all of the last-mentioned claimants, whose names were on the certified list, obtained from Colonel Ward, as well as for some others whose names were not on said list, but who presented to me certificates from Colonel Ward of their registration. On the 12th of November, 1834, I received a communication from the department, dated the 13th October preceding, instructing me "to make contingent locations for all such applicants under the 14th article of the treaty, whose names were not upon the register of Colonel Ward, as should produce evidence of credible and intelligent witnesses, inducing me to believe that the omission of their names on the register was caused by the mistake or neglect of the agent, and to report thereon in season for the action of the next Congress, that justice might be done to the Indians and the government." Under these instructions, I made a number of locations upon the application of claimants, whose names, with the evidence in support of their claims, were transmitted to the department within the prescribed time, and were submitted to the last Congress. In the month of April, 1835, I received another communication from the department, dated the 11th March preceding, stating that "no definite legislative action was had during the preceding Congress upon the locations submitted as above mentioned, and that, in the opinion of the department, nothing more could be done until the next session." In this communication, I am instructed to "report to the proper land offices, and to this department, the locations I had made, and those I might make under the former instructions;" and am advised "that the lands would be reserved from sale until the decision of Congress should be known;" and am required "to inform the claimants of the course contemplated." From the tenor of this communication, in connection with my previous instructions, urging "my prompt and vigilant attention, that justice might be done to the Indians and the government," and various other communications from time to time received from the department, directing me to make reservations for individual claimants under the 14th article, whose testimony had been submitted to the department, and whose cases were, in all material respects, similar to those presented to me, I felt compelled to continue my notice to all claimants of this character to present their applications. An additional fact, showing the propriety of extending the time for receiving applications of this nature, is, that much testimony in support of a large class of claims since located, was presented to me and reported to the department, but for want of time, the individual applications for location could not be made so as to be embraced in that report. The locations made since my last report, are contained in the document marked F, and the evidence in support of them, in documents marked A, B, C, D, and E, and Congressional document No. 138, herewith transmitted to the department. In the prosecution of my duties as locating agent, especially those which pertained to the claims under the 14th article of the treaty, I have had many and serious difficulties to encounter. The want of copies of the plats of survey which I was assured, before I entered upon those duties, should be furnished, but which were never received, and when applied for at some of the land offices, were peremptorily refused, has occasioned me much embarrassment. The necessity of making numerous reservations in the same district of country, without any maps upon which to mark them, has probably, in some instances, occasioned conflicting locations. This, under the circumstances of my situation at the time, could not completely be guarded against. I have also felt considerable embarrassment on account of the number of the claims, and the danger there might be that some of them would ultimately prove to have been sustained by false testimony. To guard against any attempt at fraud or imposition, I caused a notice to be inserted in the public newspapers, at the commencement of my official duties, requesting all honest citizens who might know of any fraud or misrepresentation in procuring locations, to make such facts known to me. Notices of a similar import, and for the same object, were repeatedly published in the newspapers, during the whole term of my official duties. Upon hearing any rumor of fraud in connection with these locations, I have invariably taken pains to search for the evidence, and in two instances felt myself authorized to institute a board of commissioners: one during the month of December last, to sit in Columbus, and near the same time, another to sit in the interior of the Choctaw country, to summon witnesses and procure testimony in relation to any frauds perpetrated or attempted, respecting these claims. The results of these commissions have already been communicated to the department, no fraud having been detected. I do not pretend to say that frauds may not have been practised upon me, but I do say, that upon the most cautious investigations, I have failed to discover any. I have endeavored faithfully to adhere to my instructions, to keep in view the principle enjoined upon me by the department, "to do equal justice to the Indians and the government;" and to proceed just so far as the evidence of credible and intelligent witnesses, bearing upon the facts I was compelled by my instructions to act upon, necessarily led me, and no farther. I considered it my duty to inquire into the justice of the claims, agreeably to my instructions, and not into their number or the aggregate amount of land to be reserved for them. I cannot close this communication without stating my opinion, that, under the present circumstances of excitement on the subject, there is no way in which justice can be done to the Indians, while the interest of the government may be completely guarded, except by some provision constituting a board of commissioners, to sit at a convenient point in the Choctaw country, for the purpose of receiving testimony, examining the facts, and deciding upon the claims.

All which is respectfully submitted.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, yours,

GEORGE W. MARTIN.

Hon. LEWIS CASS, Secretary of War.

G—No. 1.

To those who claim reservations under the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek.

By a communication from the War Department, under date of July 23, which was not received until the 5th of August last, I learned that I was appointed to make the selections and locations of the reservations of lands granted to the Choctaws, under and by virtue of the provisions of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, made and entered into on the 27th of September, 1830, between the United States of America and the Choctaw nation of Indians. It was contemplated by the department, before I proceeded to the discharge of the duties required of me, that I should be furnished with the plats of all the townships of land within that district of country ceded by the treaty aforesaid, which have been surveyed, and also with copies of the register of all persons entitled to land under the same. I have not yet been furnished with any of the plats of survey, and with but imperfect copies of the registers. By a communication from the War Department, dated August 8, which I received on the 8th instant, I am informed that the President of the United States has directed the lands ceded by the treaty aforesaid to be offered at public sale, to commence on the third Monday in October next, and that it is necessary for the reservations provided for under the treaty to be located prior to the day of sale, and I am directed to proceed without delay to execute the duty required of me. My instructions seem to require of me to go in person on the ground, and examine the improvement and lines of survey, corner posts, &c., of each local reservation claimed under the treaty: this I am unable to do before the day of sale. For the information of those interested, I have prescribed the following rules and regulations, to be observed in presenting claims under the treaty, and in making locations, which are as nearly in conformity with my instructions as the circumstances of the case will permit. I will open an office in each land district within that tract of country ceded by the treaty aforesaid, for the purpose of receiving applications and registering the names of applicants for reservations as soon as practicable, and keep the same open until the day set apart for the commencement of the sales in each district. In the northwestern district the office will be opened at Elliot; in the northeastern district at Columbus; in the Augusta district, at Augusta; and in the Mount Salus district, at Clinton.

The applicants must proceed to the place designated in their respective districts prior to the day of sale, and adduce to the agent, or such person as may be appointed to represent him, satisfactory proof that he or she is entitled to a reservation of land under the treaty, designating the numbers of the reservations so claimed. The name of the reservee will then be registered, the number of the section, half-section, quarter-section, or other quantity to which he may be entitled, marked on the plat of survey, in the proper land office, and the land reserved from sale. The reservations granted to heads of families, under the fourteenth article of the treaty, to those who desire to remain five years, and become citizens, will be bounded by sectional, half-sectional, or quarter-sectional lines of survey, and so located as to include the improvement of the head of the family at the time of the making of the treaty, or a portion of it. The half-sections and quarter-sections, allowed for their children, must adjoin the location of the parent. The reservations granted under the third and fourth clauses of the nineteenth article of the treaty, will also be bounded by sectional and quarter-sectional lines of survey, and so located as to include that part of the improvement which contained the dwelling-house of the head of the family, at the time of the making of the treaty. When the dwelling-house of two or more persons, entitled to reservations under this article, shall be included within the same section, half-section, or quarter-section, they will be so located as to take such legal subdivisions of adjacent sections as will give to each reservee his claim in as square a form as practicable; thus, if different improvements are so situated upon the same section, or subdivision of a section, as to allow the parties, by taking legal subdivisions, to retain that part of their respective improvements containing their dwelling-houses, they will have to take such legal subdivisions, together with such adjacent lands, as may be necessary to give the required shape and contents to their claims. If, however, two or more reservees have settled upon and improved the smallest legal subdivisions of a section, and thus rendered it impracticable to make a division of the improvements by the selection of legal subdivisions, they will have to make an arrangement among themselves as to the manner in which their reservations are to be located. If they cannot agree among themselves, they will be permitted to cast lots for the same; and those who lose their improvements take the quantity to which they are entitled out of the adjacent lands.

Where a reservation, based upon an actual improvement, falls on a fraction, and that fraction is short of the number of acres to which the reserve is entitled, he will be allowed to make up the complement from the adjoining fraction, provided that the subdivision which may be located to complete the quantity, be so designated as to give an entire reserve a square form. If the contingency should happen contemplated in the latter part of the fourth clause of the nineteenth article, that the number of reservees should exceed the number provided for, the chief of the proper district will be called on to decide who shall be excluded. Captains entitled to less than a section, who claim an additional half-section under the fifth clause of the nineteenth article, must locate the same on lands adjoining their improvements and dwelling-house. Those claiming local reservations granted to them by name in the treaty, or the supplement thereto, in designating the boundaries of their claims, will have to be governed by the rules prescribed in the particular clause under which they claim. Those persons claiming floating reservations granted to them by name in the treaty or supplement, will be permitted to locate the same on any lands which were unoccupied and unimproved at the time of the making of the treaty, unless confined by the treaty to a particular district. In making the locations, they will be confined to sectional, half-sectional, or quarter-sectional lines of survey, and will not be permitted to cross sectional, half-sectional, or quarter-sectional lines. If they locate them on fractional sections, they will be compelled to take such fraction, if less than the complement, in full satisfaction of the whole quantity claimed under such floating reserve. In no case whatever can a floating claim be divided. Where application is made at the same time to locate two or more floating claims of equal size, on the same tract of land, the same course for the adjustment of the matter as is prescribed in case of conflicting claims under the third and fourth clauses of the 19th article, will be pursued as near as practicable, and all conflictions will be settled in the same manner. Where application is made at the same time to locate two or more floating claims of different sizes, the largest will have the preference; thus, a section will have precedence over a half-section, and a half-section be preferred to a quarter-section, &c. In all cases the claim will be confined within the section lines of the section run and marked by the surveyor of the United States, and will not be permitted to go into an adjoining section or fraction, unless the quantity of land, or the terms of the treaty in which the grant is made, requires or authorizes it to be done. I intend to examine, on the ground, after the sales, the several local reservations, if it should be deemed necessary to a final adjustment and settlement of the claim, before I return a register thereof to the War Department, or adopt such other course as I may be instructed to pursue in relation thereto. It is important that every claimant should, in person or by his agent, attend promptly to his interest, and make his application, particularly describing the land claimed within the time prescribed, in order to exclude his land from sale. I have thus given explicitly my views, and the substance of the instructions to me, which I hope will be satisfactory to all interested. If any additional information is desired in relation to any clause of the treaty, which I have inadvertently omitted, I will take great pleasure in giving it on application. It is the intention of the President, as well as the War Department, and the undersigned, in making the locations of the several reservations granted under the treaty, to conform to the letter and spirit of that instrument in every particular, and to construe the same, wherever well founded doubt shall arise, and any discretionary power is to be exercised, "favorably toward the Choctaws."

GEORGE W. MARTIN, Agent for locating Indian Reservations.

September 15, 1833.

G—No. 2.

To all those interested in reservations in the late Choctaw purchase at Dancing Rabbit creek: "Let no white man interfere with you in those locations; receive no representatives from any one. Any conveyance made by the Indians is yet wholly void, and the President does not recognize the right of a single person claiming lands in the Choctaw country under a deed of conveyance from any Indian. The representatives of the Indians themselves, you are at liberty to receive, and it is proper they should be received." I take the earliest opportunity to give publicity to the above extract, as part of my instructions from the War Department, for the information of those whom it may concern.

GEORGE W. MARTIN, Commissioner of Indian Claims.

N. B. The commissioner for locating Indian reserves is desirous of any information relative to such claims, as may have been already located, and takes this occasion to request all honest citizens residing in the late purchase from the Choctaws, who may know of any fraud or misrepresentation in procuring locations on lands, to which the claimants are not justly entitled under the treaty, to make such facts known to the commissioner.

G—No. 3.

We are requested to give notice to all who are interested, that Col. G. W. Martin, the locating agent, under the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, will be in Columbus on the first Monday of November next, for the purpose of making a final location of the lands claimed by the Choctaws under said treaty, when all proper testimony in favor of or against any location will be heard and determined upon.

October, 1835.

G—No. 4.

NOTICE.

The undersigned, locating agent for registering and locating claims under the provisions of the treaty made with the Choctaw Indians at Dancing Rabbit creek, is desirous of any information touching all or any of said reservations, and more particularly the locations recently made, and now making, under the late instructions from the War Department, directing me to make conditional reservations to Choctaw citizens, under the provisions of the 14th article of the treaty, and which are subject to the final action of Congress. It is expected that the information furnished will consist of facts, not vague rumors; that is, information of such character as will justify the agent in taking the proper steps to correct errors or frauds, that may be attempted on the government, by any applicant reservee, his agent or attorney.

W. WARD, United States Agent.

I.

CHOCTAW AGENCY. September 11, 1833.

SIR: I have just returned from the lower district, and find here Mr. Martin, the agent selected to locate the land claims under the late treaty with the Choctaws. Mr. Martin has shown me his instructions, in which he is directed to apply to me and Colonel Ward for a copy of the register of those entitled to land under the cultivation section. The register in the possession of Colonel Ward is in part destroyed. I acted as an agent in taking the census, and examining the fields in Mushulatubbee district, which was returned to the War Office. Before Mr. Martin can act, he will have to be furnished with a copy of those entitled to land, as will appear by the books returned by my brother, F. W. Armstrong, and also a list of those who have relinquished their land to the government, on which payment, in part, was made west of Mississippi, last winter. The books will show the locality of the land, and enable the agent to discharge his duty. The lands are advertised for sale, and knowing that not a moment is to be lost, I have taken the liberty of addressing you on the subject.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. ARMSTRONG, Superintendent Choctaw removal.

Hon. LEWIS CASS, Secretary of War.

CHOCTAW AGENCY, September 14, 1833.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of yours of the 30th of August last, requesting me to act in valuing the improvements and other property belonging to the board of American missions within the Choctaw purchase. I will endeavor to perform this duty as early as practicable, and report as directed. The several missionary stations are located in the three districts of the nation, at some distance apart. I shall, however, notify Mr. Kingsbury, who, I understand, is the agent for the board, and proceed immediately. I took the liberty of writing to the Secretary of War, by last mail, in reference to what would be proper to furnish Mr. Martin with, the agent for locating the land under the treaty. This I did, because, in Mr. Martin's instructions, he had been directed to call on me, with Colonel Ward, for a register, &c. I was one of the agents who took the census, and surveyed the fields under the cultivation section in the Choctaw nation, which was returned by my brother, F. W. Armstrong, to the War Department. A copy of those who were entitled to land by cultivation, will have to be furnished Mr. Martin, which copy will show the locality and quantity of land; also a copy of those who relinquished their lands to the United States; as also a copy of those who registered to remain five years, and become citizens. The register of those entitled to land, left by F. W. Armstrong with Colonel Ward, was left exposed, and, indeed, a leaf or two lost. Mr. Martin took it with him to Chocchuma, and, I presume, will act, as far as he can, until he receives other instructions. Seeing the lands advertised for sale, and the time so short for Mr. Martin to make return in, must be my apology for addressing you at all on the subject. The citizens of this State are deeply interested in the proper location of those claims. I hope, however, I have been anticipated, and that the copies, as above, have been before this sent to Mr. Martin.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. ARMSTRONG, Superintendent Choctaw removal.

ELBERT HERRING, Esq., Commissioner, &c., Washington.

COLUMBUS, November 8, 1833.

SIR: I arrived here this morning at eight o'clock, having left Choccuma on Tuesday night, 5th instant, having closed the business in that district at present, having, as I believe, located all claims justly entitled under the treaty, (when found on the register furnished me as my guide, &c.,) except, perhaps, some floating claims, which possibly may be held up by owner. I am happy to have it in my power to say that I believe I shall have the same success here, from the great number of claims already located in this district.

I left Choccuma on Tuesday, in the second week of the sale of the public lands. As I am extremely pressed with business at this moment, I shall write to the department again, in a short time, more fully, and after progressing further with matters here. I am happy to say to you, I am in possession of the registers sent me from Washington. I received them on the 18th of October, by an express from this place. Your esteemed favor of the 27th of September came to hand on the 18th of October, with regard to all of which I will write you more fully in a few days.

I am, &c.

GEORGE W. MARTIN.

Hon. LEWIS CASS, Washington.

P. S.—The registers I received from Washington are deficient as regards the citizens' or five years' claims, as I find no such claims alluded to in any part of the said registers. These claims are under the 14th article of the treaty. If there is any such register, I should like to know it. There are many complaints of the defects of the one furnished by Col. Ward.

Respectfully, G. W.

M.

CHOCCHUMA, MISS., November 14, 1834.

DEAR SIR: I am in the receipt of instructions from the War Department, dated the 13th of October, to the following effect: "You will, therefore, give public notice that persons who consider themselves entitled to reservations under the 14th article, and whose names are not upon the register of Colonel Ward, will exhibit to you the evidence in support of their claims. This evidence must show that they were citizens of the Choctaw nation, heads of families, and did signify their intention to become citizens within the time prescribed by the treaty. It must also show the time of their application to be registered, and the conversation and circumstances relating to it." "If they bring themselves within the requisition of the 14th article, and the evidence of credible and intelligent witnesses induces you to believe that the omission of their names on the register was caused by the mistake or neglect of the agent, you will make locations for them, in the manner pointed out in the instructions heretofore given to you. These locations, it must be understood, are contingent, and will be complete only in the event of their being confirmed by Congress.

Now, sir, you will readily see the impossibility of my attending at all the different land offices prior to the day of sale, and I have already given notice to the claimants to apply at this place for the purpose of having them laid before Congress; and it would appear to me that all those who will come before you with their claims fully authenticated, under the rule laid down by the department in the instructions of the 13th ultimo, these lands should be reserved from sale, and the claimants are required to produce their claims, with a description of the land, together with all the requisites as set out with regard to the testimony, to me, at Chocchuma, at the earliest time practicable, that the same may be communicated by me to the proper department for the consideration of the next Congress, and it is expected they will have their immediate attention, and presented here for examination.

Respectfully, &c.,

GEO. W. MARTIN.

WILLIAM HOWSE, Esq., Register of the Land Office, Augusta, Miss.

A similar letter to the above was transmitted to Major William Dowsing, the register at Columbus

GEO. W. MARTIN.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Oke-tibbe-ha County:

Gabriel Lincecum having been summoned before me, the subscribing justice of the peace, in and for the county and State aforesaid, to declare what he may know respecting the claims of certain Choctaw Indians, under the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, after being duly sworn, deposeth and saith, as set forth in his answers to the following interrogatories, to wit:

Question. Where did you live in the years 1830 and 1831?

Answer. In the year 1830, I lived in the Choctaw nation, about one half mile east of the agency; and in 1831, I moved to another place about one mile and a half west of the agency, on the Robeson road, where I now reside.

Question. Were you at Dancing Rabbit creek council ground when the treaty was made? If so, please to state whether the Indians reluctantly made that treaty, and what induced those to consent to it who did consent.

Answer. I was there during the time, and was extremely anxious that the treaty should be made, and I know that many of the Choctaws were altogether opposed to making the treaty, and utterly opposed to removing west; from all I heard and witnessed, I am entirely confident that no treaty could have been made, but for the solemn assurances of the commissioners, made in public council, that all might stay and keep their homes who did not wish to go; and the Indians distinctly understood that this was put down as a part of the treaty.

Question. What settlements of Indians were most opposed to removing?

Answer. There were many from every part of the nation who seemed determined not to go; but I think the Indians living on Bogue-chitto and the Mogalush-as, and those living on Sook-e-natche, and on the head waters of Pearl, Leaf, and Chickasaw-hay, were the most open in their opposition to removing. It was a very common declaration among them, that they would die before they would go west.

Question. Did these Indians afterward change their opinions and go west, or are they yet here?

Answer. A great many of them were afterward induced to remove; but a considerable number of them yet remain, and claim their lands by the treaty.

Question. Did you, during the six months allowed for registration, ever see any of these Indians who yet remain here go forward to the agent, and signify their wish or intention to stay and retain lands?

Answer. Yes, many of them. As stated in a former deposition, I saw the representatives of some of these Indians go forward to the agent with a large bundle of sticks, as is the Indian custom, and offer to register the families thus represented; but the agent refused to receive them, and threw them away, saying that there were too many of them, and that they had sold their lands, and must go west. I have also, on various occasions, seen the agent object to register the names of Indians who went to him on purpose; I have seen him at other times register a good many names, and I have seen him put down names which afterward could not be found on the book.

Question. You resided a near neighbor to the agent during this important period of his agency; will you state what were his habits of business?

Answer. I lived near the agency, as before stated, and was very often at the agent's house, where he did all his business; and must say that his habits of business were very loose and careless. He kept his book lying on the table at all times, free to the inspection of all who wished to look into it. I have often seen persons take the register out of the room where it was deposited, to other parts of the house, and out into the yard, and inspect it as much as they wished. I have seen it loaned out and taken off by persons. Several times the agent sent the book to my house by persons who wished to find names in it, for me to examine, he himself not wishing to take the trouble to do so.

Question. You, then, often saw the register, and looked over it; can you form any opinion as to the number of names that were actually entered down?

Answer. I cannot undertake to say what number of names were registered, as I never made any count; but I am certain there must have been several hundred at least. I know that I have frequently spent one or two hours in looking over it, before I could find some particular name that I was in search of.

Question. What were the habits of the agent, and of his deputy, Stephen Ward?

Answer. The habits of both were very intemperate, to such a degree, indeed, as totally to disqualify them for business. The agent himself was often absent from the agency during the six months allowed for registering, and in his absence, Stephen Ward had charge of the business. I have often seen him so much intoxicated that he could neither read nor write. I have seen the mail arrive when he would be too drunk to open it, and he would tell me to do it. I have often opened the mail under these circumstances; and sometimes the driver would open it, and sometimes one, and sometimes another.

Question. Were the agent and his deputy opposed to the Indians taking the five years' stay to become citizens?

Answer. Most certainly they were; and Colonel Ward was so much so, that he seriously advised the emigrating agents to whip such as did not wish to go, and force them off.

Question. Was David Fulsom often at the agency, and had he free access to the register?

Answer. Yes; he lived near the agency and was often there, and had just as free access to the book as Colonel Ward himself. He was very much opposed to any of the Indians staying, and I always suspected that he had some agency in destroying the register of names, though I have no certain knowledge of it.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Lowndes County:

Grant Lincecum being called on to state what he knows touching an application made to William Ward, late United States agent, by certain Choctaw Indians, to have their names registered according to the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, deposeth and saith as follows, to wit: That he was present at the assembly of Indians, called at the council-house, near the agency, in June, 1831, for the purpose of distributiug the annuity, and of affording to all such Indians as did not wish to emigrate, an opportunity of registering their names to become citizens and hold lands, as provided for under the 14th article of the treaty. He states that when the business of the day was opened, the agent directed the interpreter, Middleton McKee, to tell the Indians that all who did not wish to emigrate had a right, by the treaty, to stay and hold lands, and that he was then ready to receive their names, and register them in his book; all of which the interpreter did make known to the Indians. This deponent further states, that after the business of the day had considerably advanced, and while he was standing near the agent's table noticing what was going on, he saw a parcel of Indians come up, with an Indian they called the Red Post Oak, as their spokesman, and one or two others as sort of leaders. One of them had a bundle of sticks in his hand, which he gave in to the agent, and told the interpreter to inform the agent that these sticks represented a number of Indians who were unwilling to go away, and who wished to remain, become citizens, and hold their lands, and that they would give in the names of each head of a family, the number and sizes of their children.

The interpreter explained all this to the agent, who took up the sticks and threw them away, and said there were too many of them, and told the interpreter to tell them that they must move west of the Mississippi.

Question. Did the interpreter tell the Indians what the agent said?

Answer. Yes, he did, and it gave great dissatisfaction to them. Some of them talked a good deal about it, and said it was not what the treaty promised them; they said they would never move away; that the treaty promised them that they might stay here and live on their lands if they did not wish to move away. Some of them said they would die before they would go; others said they would go home and live on their lands, for they had confidence that the government would not drive them off. There were some white men present, who advised the Indians to go home and stay on their lands, and told them that the government would treat them honestly.

Question. Do you understand the Choctaw language?

Answer. Yes, I understand and speak it very well. I have lived in constant intercourse with the Choctaws for the past twenty odd years.

Question. Is it a common method for the Choctaws to give in and enumerate by sticks in the manner you mentioned?

Answer. They always use sticks, or corn, or something of the sort, to count by; most commonly small sticks.

Question. What became of those Indians after they were repulsed in the manner you stated by the agent?

Answer. They all went to their homes. After a time some of them became discouraged, thinking they could get no lands, and concluded to move off to Arkansas. But others of them still stick to their homes, and say they will never move, but will die first. The last time the emigrating agent was collecting a company to go, one of the sub-agents went among the Indians to get them to go. Finding that persuasions would not do, he used all kinds of threats, and told them if they did not go, the soldiers would soon come with their muskets and drive them off. About that time I passed through one of their little settlements, and found, in some places, the women and children had left their houses and fled into the woods and swamps to keep out of the way of the soldiers. They were told that the soldiers were coming with guns and bayonets to drive them off. I told them it was all false, and quieted their fears as well as I could, and they returned to their houses. They have since lived on their lands, except in some cases where white settlers would drive them off and take possession of their houses and lands; and those who occupied good lands have generally met with this fate. The coming on of the land sales has alarmed them, as they are told by the whites that their lands will now be sold. This has made them employ counsel, and apply to the government for relief and aid.

Question. Have any of these Indians, to your knowledge, ever received any reservations, such as field or cultivation claims, for their improvement?

Answer. No. I have frequently been among them, and I am very certain that not one of those now applying to Congress ever received any reservations, or other benefits of the treaty. All they wanted was their lands and homes, and they say they wish to become citizens, and live under the white men's laws.

Question. You say that the agent, in the morning when the business opened, gave notice that all who wished might come forward and register, and then, after a time, he refused to register the names offered. How do you account for this conduct?

Answer. All who know the agent's habits can very easily account for it. In the morning he was sober, and in the evening he was drunk.

Question. Was the agent in the habit of intemperance?

Answer. Hundreds beside myself can answer that question in the affirmative.

Question. Do you recollect of seeing Samuel McGee, in May or June of the year 1831, at the agency give in his name, and did you see the agent register it?

Answer. Yes. I think it was in May, 1831. I was with McGee at the agency, and saw him give in his name, and saw Colonel Ward enter it down; but I understood that his name was not afterward to be found, and McGee's land was sold from him at the sales. It was first quality land. He has never yet got any land.

And further this deponent saith not.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Lowndes County:

Adam James being called upon to state what he knows respecting the application of certain Choctaw Indians to Mr. Ward, the late agent, to register their names for citizenship and land under the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, deposeth and saith, as set forth in his answers to the following interrogatories, to wit:

Question. Were you present at the meeting of Indians held at the council-house near the agency, in the spring of 1831, which was called for the purpose of distributing the annuity, and of receiving names of such as wished to register for citizenship, and to hold their land?

Answer. Yes, I was present at the council or meeting.

Question. Did you see any Indians offer to register their names, and refused by the agent, and their sticks thrown away?

Answer. Yes, I did. I was standing, among others, close by where the agent was at his table, and saw a number of Indians from the settlements on the head waters of Pearl, Leaf, and Suckenatchie rivers, with Red Post Oak and some other leaders at their head, come up to register. They handed in a bundle of sticks, and said they wished to register the families that these sticks stood for, and that they would give in the names, and numbers, and ages of the children; they said they would not move off, but wanted to stay here and live on their lands. When the interpreter, old McKee, told this to the agent, he took the sticks and flung them away, and said there were too many of these Indians, and that they must move away.

Question. What became of these Indians after this refusal on the part of the agent to take their names?

Answer. They retired very much hurt and dissatisfied, and said it was not what was promised them in the treaty, and by Major Eaton, in his last talk at Dancing Rabbit creek. Old McKee, the interpreter, also said it was a violation of the treaty, and he did not like it, for the agent had made him, in the morning, tell the Indians that all had a right to register and stay here, and hold their lands, if they did not choose to move; and now to turn them off in this way looked very bad, and the Indians might say he did not interpret right.

Question. What became of the Indians?

Answer. They said they would go home and stay on their lands, for they belonged to them. Some said the agent was drunk, and they did not believe the government would take their lands from them; others said they would die rather than go to Arkansas. Since, however, a good many of them have been persuaded to go away, but others still stick to their houses, and say they will never go; they are now in hopes of getting their lands from government, as all that have not moved away are trying to get their lands.

Question. Have the whites intruded on the improvements of these Indians?

Answer. Yes, they have; and in many cases taken their good lands from them, and pushed the Indians on the poor land. I understand that a great deal of the best land of the Indians, that was not sold at the first land sales, has been now taken by pre-emption rights.

In answer to questions, he further states that Mr. Ward was very often disqualified for business in consequence of drinking, and that he believes he was intoxicated at the time he threw the sticks away.

He also states that Middleton McKee, the interpreter, has been dead these two years.

Question. What became of the sticks that were thus thrown away by the agent?

Answer. They were picked up by an Indian by the name of Hol-lo-tubbe, who said he would keep them to show hereafter.

Question. Where is Hol-lo-tubbe?

Answer. He afterward moved west of the Mississippi, and I hear that he is now dead.

And further this deponent saith not.

Ward, to refuse and reject a good number of applicants, saying, "that they might go west of the Mississippi river;" that it would be better for them. Being requested, we further state, that the agent, Col. Ward, was frequently incapable of attending to business, from intoxication; and, when not intoxicated, was so negligent and careless, that any persons who wished books and papers did pretty much as they pleased with them; and that said agent was much opposed to the Indians availing themselves of the advantages of the fourteenth article of the treaty aforesaid.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Lowndes County:

Before me, Wm. H. Walsh, a justice of the peace in and for the county aforesaid, John C. Whitsett, of Sumter county, Alabama, personally came, and upon oath deposed and said, that some time in the month of October or November, 1831, this affiant went to the Choctaw agency for the purpose of examining the register of Choctaw claims. Soon after this affiant arrived at the agency aforesaid, a man rode up and said to Col. Ward, the then United States agent, that some men who had stopped at Col. D. Fulsom's (who lived about four miles from the agency) wished to have the register of Indian claims sent to them. Col. Ward, without hesitation, delivered the register to the man, and it was carried off by him.

At that moment this affiant supposed the book sent was a copy. But soon afterward, this affiant wishing to transact his business with the agent, inquired for the register of claims, and was informed that the book loaned out as aforesaid was the book desired. Whereupon this affiant suggested the impropriety of such a course to the agent, who said he would not lend it out in future, and promised to send for it. The book was returned the next day.

Further this affiant saith, that during several days which he spent at the agency, he saw the register of claims exposed during the whole time to the access of every one who might think proper to meddle with it; he remembers to have seen Col. Ward strike a name from the register with his pen, saying at the time he did it, the individual had applied to him to have his name registered, and had been refused by him, the said agent; that some person had inserted his name in his absence, and that he, the agent, was determined that the individual should not have land. Further this affiant saith, that so far as he saw and knew of the agent's manner of transacting the business of the Choctaw claims, it was extremely loose, and greatly liable to afford error and mistakes.

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI, Holmes County, ss:

This day personally appeared before me, Robert L. Walton, clerk of the circuit court in and for said county, James Oxberry, who being duly sworn, deposes and says, that some time in the month of July, in the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one, and within six months after the ratification of the late Choctaw treaty, this deponent visited the office of the then resident agent for the Choctaw Indians in the State of Mississippi, (Col. William Ward,) for the purpose of registering his name for the five years' stay or citizenship, under the 14th article of said treaty, and that the name of this deponent was then duly registered by said agent in a book which this deponent understood was kept by said agent for the purpose of registering the names of Choctaw citizens applying for the benefit of said treaty. And this deponent further saith, that the book in which the name of this deponent was registered, appeared to contain about six quires of paper, larger than common size foolscap paper, the back and sides covered with leather, with a piece of leather of a different color on the back, with letters on it, as this deponent believes; that this book contained the names of the following persons with whom he was acquainted, to wit:

John Perry, James Perry, Joseph Perry, Hardy Perry, Charles Frazier, Molly Frazier, Polly Frazier, Nancy Frazier, Harry Frazier, Nelly Dyer, Lewis Perry, Garret E. Nelson, George Nelson, Isaac Nelson, Eden Nelson, Blount Nelson, Solomon Nelson, Moon-tubba, Tish-o-pia, Shok-wa-hubba, How-a-chubba, Halla, Hopac-ka-nubba, Sti-mo-na-noka, Ano-nan-tubba or Aun-ta-tubba, Sham-pi-ka, Im-ma-hoy-a, Ma-chubba, O-chin-chi-pona, E-la-no-au-chi, Ano-no-ka, Rachel Davis, Nancy Moore, Tick-ba-pa-lubba, I-ya-na, I-imma-tubba, Tu-nish-pa, Par-sish-to-nia, Ho-litta-no-ma, John T. Hammonds, William Thompson, and a number of others which this deponent cannot now name, all of which were Choctaw heads of families; and this deponent further states, he acted as interpreter to the locating agent, Col. Martin, and that previous to the land sales in the fall of 1833, he saw and examined a book in the possession of the locating agent, which said agent informed him he had received from Col. Ward, the resident agent, as the register of the names of all the Choctaw citizens who had given in their names to be registered for the benefits of said treaty, which last mentioned book appeared to contain about two quires of paper, sewed together without any cover, and which this deponent verily believes is a different book entirely from the one in which his name was registered at the office of said Ward as aforesaid.

Interrogatory 1. Please state what you know as to the habits of Col. Ward and his sub or assistant agent.

Answer. I cannot say of my own knowledge much about the habits of Col. W. Ward, but I have always been under the impression from information, that he was a very intemperate man; and further, I was very well acquainted with his brother, Stephen Ward, the sub-agent, and know he was an exceedingly intemperate man, subject to excesses of intemperance by the too great use of ardent spirits, unfitting him for any kind of business; and I believe that said Stephen Ward had much, if not the greater part of the business of the registering of the citizens, or what is called the five years' claims under the treaty.

Interrogatory 2. State the object of your visit to the resident agent, and all you know about the matter, and particularly what transpired while you were at the agency.

Answer. Wm. Thompson and myself arrived at the agent's (Col. Ward's) about two or three o'clock on the 2d July, 1831, and were there some five or six hours; finding Col. W. Ward was not there, we applied to the sub-agent, Stephen Ward, to register our names as citizens to stay the five years, and receive the benefits of the 14th article of said treaty. I found, on examination of the aforesaid book, that my name had been registered by Mr. G. E. Nelson, and I then applied to the agent for his certificate to the fact; that my name, the number of my children, and their ages, were actually placed on said book which he gave me, and I have previous to this placed the same in the hands of the locating agent for the purpose of having my land secured to me, agreeable to the provision of the said 14th article of the treaty aforesaid; and after the agent (Ward) had given me my certificate, I inquired of him who had registered the names of the above-named Indians, and he informed me it was Mr. Garrett E. Nelson; and further said that the said Garrett E. Nelson had applied as the agent of about one hundred and fifty Indians, heads of families, and had their names registered as citizens under the 14th article of said treaty, the names of Mr. Thompson and myself being included in the number. The said Stephen Ward seemed to discourage us from registering our names under the 14th article, by stating if our wives went away we could not be benefited, and that he was instructed to reject the names of white men who had Choctaw families, as the United States would not let them have land, as they would not be considered Choctaw heads of families; and in consequence, Mr. Thompson, who had a certificate granted him, determined to go west, as he had been told he could not hold land, and on finding that his name was not on the register handed over by Col. Ward to the locating agent; that said Thompson always considered himself entitled to land, having done all the treaty required of him, and went west much deceived and disappointed; and on further conversation with the agent, he stated that there were a great many persons not Indians, whose names were registered under the 14th article, (and the truth of which this deponent then saw;) but he the agent further stated he knew the Indians had much better go west of the Mississippi, for they never could stand the laws of the whites, and under this impression he had registered their names merely to satisfy their minds and keep them from pestering him any more.

Interrogatory 3. State what you know concerning your people, and anything concerning yourself, which you may think proper to state.

Answer. I am a half-breed Indian, bred up in the nation; we have no way of communication except by hearsay; I have always understood that the Moglushes, the Six Towns, and many of the Sou-chi-na-chee Indians, as well as the Cobb and Pickens Indians, had stayed, and I know myself, of my own knowledge, many of the Indians whom I have put down and named above by name, have none of them got land, unless it should be allowed them by the government hereafter, or by the confirmation of the late locations.

Interrogatory 4. Are there any of your former neighbors now remaining who have not emigrated, and what are the circumstances attending, and what the object of their stay?

Answer. There are a number of my immediate acquaintances, relations, and friends, who had their names registered under the five-year citizen clause of the treaty, and who are now somewhere, not a great way off, in a strolling condition, the most of them. Their lands, which they lived on, and expected to own, having been sold by the government of the United States, leaving them no spot on which to rest the sole of their foot, which they could call their own, and they complain much of such treatment by their white brethren, and contend it is not what the treaty promised them. It is my belief that there cannot be less than forty to fifty heads of families, of my friends and acquaintances, now in this condition, who were my former neighbors, and not one of the individuals herein named, and who were registered by Ward, in the aforesaid book, have ever received the benefits of the 14th article of the treaty, nor were their names on the book which I saw in the hands of the locating agent, and which he said he had procured from Colonel Ward, as the five years' register of Choctaw heads of families. And I further know that many of the individuals above alluded to, are completely destitute, and depend upon game and charity for their support. And, further, this deponent saith not.

DEMOPOLIS, ALA., November 15, 1834.

SIR: I have met here Mr. Williams, the bearer of this letter, who was in pursuit of me, in order to obtain my testimony of the fact of Imponah, alias Billy, and Cunneubbee, two Choctaws, residing on factory creek, having applied in due time to Colonel William Ward, late United States Choctaw agent, to be registered for citizenship, in conformity to the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, the former having one child over ten years of age, and the latter two children under ten years of age.

I well recollect of interesting myself for the Indians residing in the neighborhood of the factory, who desired to become citizens, and of going with them to the agent's room when at the factory, and seeing that he took down their names, and described their families for registration, as the parties called upon me for that purpose, and I do verily believe the above-named Indians were of the number; and that they, with others, who, I am told, are not found on the register in your hands, did what was required of them to entitle them to the lands occupied by them.

I have, some two weeks ago, addressed the Hon. Secretary of War on the subject of the omission of the agent mentioned to record upon his book the applications for citizenship of many families, made to him at the factory, and full minutes of the same, made by him for that purpose in my presence, requesting an order from him on the proper authority to reserve from sale the lands claimed until the parties could produce proof of their applications in due time. But as there may not be time to receive such an order at the land offices before the public sales next month, I would respectfully suggest to you, whether, under the circumstances, it would not be your duty to cause to be reserved from sale all the lands claimed by the parties mentioned, including all those named in my letter to the Hon. Secretary, a copy of which Major Whitsell will lay before you. It is beyond doubt that the parties are entitled to their lands, and that justice would be subserved by the course suggested, and the government saved much trouble.

I am, &c., GEORGE S. GAINES.

GEO. W. MARTIN, Locating Agent, Choctaw Claims.

Mr. Gaines, I expect, is well known as a respectable and intelligent man; I conceive him such, from information; with Mr. Williams, the other witness, I am unacquainted.

GEO. W. MARTIN, Locating Agent.

O.

To Doctor JOHN J. DILLARD, of Sumter County, Alabama, greeting:

Reposing trust and confidence in you, I do, by these presents, appoint you a commissioner to take testimony and depositions in writing, touching the validity of the claims of Hotah Eye-a-tubbee, His-tubbee, Ona-hambee, Ano-kac-tu-tubbee, La-lo-mah, Jan-in-tubbee, Noah-timah, Anolah, Ispia, Tevara-a-tucha, No-wa-ho-nah, and Little Leader, under the 14th article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek, and touching any frauds which the said Choctaws may have practised, or attempted to practise, on the government, or which other persons may have practised, or attempted to practise, in their, or either of their names. For this purpose, you will attend at the house of Opia-stittina, (otherwise called Little Leader,) in Kemper county, Mississippi, on Monday, the 14th day of December next, and there remain, from day to day, for the space of two weeks, unless your business is sooner concluded.

Before you enter upon the discharge of your duty, you will make and sign an affidavit before some person authorized to administer an oath: "That you are not in any manner interested, for or against the claims of said Indians, or the claims of other persons who claim adversely to said Indians, or either of them, or interested in the claims which have been purchased of said Indians, or either of them." You must procure the attendance of some justice of the peace, or other officer authorized by law to administer oaths; and all testimony and depositions, taken before you, must be taken under oath.

The opposite parties, or their attorneys, to this contest, will serve each other, or their attorneys, with a list of the names of each of their witnesses respectively, before or by the 27th day of this instant; and the testimony of no witness shall be taken by you, unless his name appears on such list so served or acknowledged; and for all such witnesses, so ratified to the opposite parties respectively, you shall issue subpœnas on application of either party. You will take the depositions of Choctaw Indians as well as white persons. The testimony and depositions so taken by you, together with this commission, you will seal up and send to me by a special messenger to Chocchuma, Mississippi. Two other persons are appointed besides yourself; any two of you may act, and in case only one of you shall attend, that one may appoint another to act with the one in attendance.

Christopher C. Scott is the attorney for the Choctaws, and Messrs. Acee and Grant, for Wm. H. Capers and others, who complain against the Indian claims.

In testimony, I have to these presents set my hand and seal this 4th day of November, 1835.

[L. S.] GEO. W. MARTIN, Locating Agent.

P.

William H. Capers and others vs. Hotah, Eye-a-tubba, Ki-a-tub-ha, Ooa-ham-ba, Anoch-ack-tubbee, La-la-mah, Jan-im-tubba, Noah-timah, Ano-lah, Ishpia, Tevara-a-tu-ha, Nowah-honah-ana, Little Leader, Choctaw Indians.

This is to certify that, in pursuance of a commission to us directed from George W. Martin, locating agent of the United States for the Choctaw nation of Indians, dated on the 4th day of November, 1835, appointing us, the undersigned, commissioners to take testimony and deposition in writing, touching the validity of the claims of the abovenamed Indians, and any frauds which the said Indians may have practised, or attempted to practise, on the government, or which other persons may have practised, or attempted to practise, in their, or either of their names—we did attend at the house of the Little Leader, in the county of Kemper, in the State of Mississippi, on the 14th day of December, 1835, and then and there remained until the 15th of December, 1835, when William H. Capers and others, by their attorney, Pryor M. Grant, duly appeared, and the said Indians, by their attorney, C. C. Scott, and Murphy and Wilson, before the undersigned commissioners, and then and there the question arose, which party should first introduce testimony; upon which the undersigned commissioners did then and there determine and decide that, in their opinion, the said William H. Capers and others should first introduce testimony against the claims of the Indians; and the counsel of the Choctaw Indians then and there made known, and proclaimed to the undersigned commissioners, that all the Indians aforesaid were ready, with their witnesses, to go to trial, if William H. Capers and others should make out a case, or introduce testimony against them, or either of them. And the said William H. Capers and others, and no other person or persons for them, and no other person or persons whomsoever, making any proof against the said Indian claims, and no testimony being introduced, on account of the decision, as the atterney alleged for Capers et alias, the undersigned commissioners then and there adjourned sine die.

Done and signed by us, at the house of the Little Leader, in the county of Kemper, in the State of Mississippi, on this the 15th of December, A. D., 1835, as witness our hands and seals.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1524. [1ST SESSION.

IN FAVOR OF GIVING EFFECT TO THE COMPACTS WITH ALABAMA AND MISSISSIPPI, IN RESPECT TO THE FIVE PER CENT. FUND AND SIXTEENTH SECTIONS, LOST BY THE CHICKASAW TREATY OF 1832.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MAY 12, 1836.

Mr. WALKER, from the select committee, to whom was referred the "bill to reduce and graduate the price of the public lands, in favor of actual settlers only, to provide a standing pre-emption law to authorize the sale and entry of all the public lands in forty-acre lots, and to equalize the grants of certain portions of the public domain among the several States in which the public lands are situate," on leave given, reported, in part, as follows:

Reserving until the information called for from the Treasury Department is received, the questions presented by the first four sections of this bill, the committee will confine their report, at this time, to the last two sections of the bill. In the opinion of the committee, the subject involved in the last two sections, above alluded to, should not be involved in the fate which may await the other portions of the bill. By the treaty concluded with the Chickasaw Indians on the 20th of October, 1832, all the lands ceded by this treaty to the United States are either covered by reservations for the benefit of certain individuals, as specified in the treaties, or required to be sold for the sole benefit of the Chickasaw nation, by which the cession was made. These lands are situated in the States of Alabama and Mississippi, and are estimated by the Secretary of the Treasury at six millions four hundred and twenty-two thousand four hundred acres. As, however, the President of the United States has directed a change of the line marked as the southern boundary of this territory, so as to require said line, conformably to the treaty, to be run many miles north of the present designated boundary, the estimate of the number of acres presented by the Secretary of the Treasury will be very greatly reduced. The claim also urged by the State of Tennessee, to a large and valuable portion of this territory, may possibly still further diminish its dimensions. As the treaty now stands, and is carried into effect by the Executive Department, the sixteenth section in every township, for the use of schools therein, and the five per cent. fund, heretofore universally reserved to the new States, under various laws and compacts, are lost to the States of Alabama and Mississippi, so far as regards the lands ceded by this treaty. The question now presented is, should Congress furnish to these States an equivalent for the loss of this fund and school lands? The committee will first examine the question in relation to the sixteenth sections.

In the ordinance of Congress of the 20th of May, 1785, the system of disposing of the lands of the United States is established. By this ordinance, it is made a fundamental provision that "there shall be reserved the lot No. 16 of every township, for the maintenance of public schools within the said township." Having in view this wise and salutary provision, it is declared, in the ordinance of Congress of the 13th of July, 1787, "for the government of the territory of the United States northwest of the river Ohio," that "schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged." The ordinance of the 20th of May, 1785, establishes the reservation of the 16th section in every township for the use of schools, and this provision, or some equivalent for it, is perpetuated in the ordinance of the 13th of July, 1787. Congress, in their directions, under date of the 23d of July, 1787, to the Treasury board, for the sale of the western territory, declare "the lot No. 16 in each township or fractional part of a township to be given perpetually for the purposes contained in the said ordinance." As regards the reservation of the sixteenth section, or an equivalent, for the use of schools, the people in each township, in the States of Alabama and Mississippi, have been placed on the same footing as the people of the Northwestern Territory. The territory embracing the States of Alabama and Mississippi, north of latitude 31, was ceded by Georgia to the United States, by articles of agreement and cession, dated April 24th, 1802. By these articles, the same privileges are conceded to the people of this territory as those heretofore conferred on the people of the Northwestern Territory, and it is expressly declared that the ordinance of the 13th of July, 1787, "shall, in all its parts, extend to the territory contained in the present act of cession, that article only excepted which forbids slavery." The fundamental provision in favor of "schools and the means of education," contained in the ordinance of the 13th of July, 1787, was therefore extended to the entire territory now in question, then ceded by Georgia to the United States. Here, then, upon the solemn obligations of the very compact by which the United States obtained this territory, the committee might safely repose the case, for the provisions of this compact expressly extended throughout the whole ceded territory, embracing in terms the country thus acquired, "to which the Indian title has been or may hereafter be extinguished."

But the right of the people of this territory is still further confirmed by the act of Congress of the 3d of March, 1803. This act, expressly embracing this entire territory, declares that section number sixteen "shall be reserved in each township for the support of schools within the same." Under the various titles confirmed by this act of the 3d of March, 1803, it often happened that the sixteenth section was covered by adverse and paramount titles, and it was specifically provided by the act of Congress of the 21st of April, 1806, that, in all such cases, "the Secretary of the Treasury shall locate another section in lieu thereof, for the use of schools, which location shall be made in the same township, if there be any other vacant section therein, and otherwise, in an adjoining township." Here the principle of an equivalent, whenever the people of any township might lose the sixteenth section, is established, and extended throughout the territory in question. Indeed, the principle of an equivalent is here extended to the case even of a "British grant" covering a sixteenth section, although that British grant may have originated prior even to the ordinance of 1785. That this act of the 21st of April, 1806, in its spirit and principle embraces the present case, your committee entertain no doubt.

By the act of Congress of the 1st of March, 1817, the people of the territory now including the State of Mississippi, were authorized to form a State government. By this act, the principles of the ordinance of the 13th of July, 1787, and by the compact with Georgia, are expressly applied to the people thus emerging from territorial pupilage, and assuming the attitude of a sovereign State. By this ordinance and compact, we have heretofore shown that the sixteenth section, or its equivalent, was reserved to the people of each township, and, therefore, by this reference to, and adoption of, that ordinance and compact, by the act of the 1st of March, 1817, the sixteenth section or its equivalent is clearly reserved to the people of each township in the State of Mississippi; for the rights of the people in this respect are necessarily rendered co-extensive with the limits of the State. But independent of this reservation of the sixteenth section, by the act of the 1st of March, 1817, this section was reserved by pre-existing laws and compacts, unrepealed by the act in question. Indeed, in the constitution of the State of Mississippi, (subsequently adopted by Congress,) all rights created under the territorial government are expressly preserved and continued, unaffected by the assumption of State sovereignty. In further demonstration of this position, the act of the 6th of March, 1817, passed in relation to the Mississippi Territory, almost contemporaneously with the act above quoted, expressly continues to reserve the sixteenth section in every township in future sales of the lands of the United States. Again, by the act of the 6th of May, 1822, "providing for the disposal of the public lands in the State of Mississippi, section numbered sixteen in each township," it is expressly declared "shall be reserved for the use of schools within the same." Similar acts of Congress, in regard to Alabama, might be cited, but, as a matter of superabundant caution, it is expressly declared in the act of Congress of the 2d of March, 1819, authorizing the people of the Alabama Territory to form a State government, "that the section numbered sixteen, in every township, and when such section has been sold, granted, or disposed of, other lands, equivalent thereto, and most contiguous to the same, shall be granted to the inhabitants of such townships, for the use of schools." We will cite but one other act of Congress in relation to the State of Mississippi upon this subject. It is the act of the 28th of January, 1833, and relates, by reference to township and range, to the sixteenth section in a part of the territory within the limits of the State of Mississippi, acquired long after the assumption of State government, by a treaty concluded with the Choctaw Indians. In that treaty, no allusion is made to the sixteenth section, yet the right of the people of each township embraced in the ceded territory to this section has been distinctly recognized by Congress as created by pre-existing laws. Certain individuals had a settlement upon and claim to the sixteenth section, in the township and range last referred to. This claim conflicted with the right of the people of this township to this section for the use of schools. By the act of Congress of the 28th of January, 1833, these individuals were permitted to retain their claim to this sixteenth section, but section eleven of the said township and range was provided as a substitute for the use of schools in the township, in lieu of the sixteenth section, taken by the above-mentioned claim. So sacred, however, was the light in which Congress viewed the right of the people of the township to the sixteenth section, that the exchange was only authorized to be made in case "that the Secretary of the Treasury shall first be satisfied that a majority of the inhabitants of said township desire said exchange." Indeed, throughout Alabama and Mississippi, as well during their territorial pupilage as since their admission into the Union as States, the right of the people of each township to the sixteenth section, or an equivalent, for the use of schools, has been universally recognized by every department of the government. This right is engrafted in an unbroken series of laws and compacts, from the ordinances of 1785 to 1787 down to the present period, either by the adoption of those ordinances, or by express reservation. It is impressed upon all the public surveys of the public domain, in every State and Territory of the Union. It is incorporated into all the operations of the old Treasury Board, and of the present Treasury Department, from its organization to the present period. It is a sacred, fundamental, and inviolable reservation of the sixteenth section, or its equivalent, in behalf of the people of each township, in every State and Territory, formed out of the public domain, and especially was this right rendered co-extensive with the limits of Alabama and Mississippi, by the acts of Congress of 1833 and 1806, before cited.

The country ceded by the Chickasaws is within the limits of Alabama and Mississippi, and the right of the people of each township to the sixteenth section, or its equivalent, is just as sacred and inviolable in the country ceded by the Chickasaws, as in every other portion of these States. If this specific section cannot be had without violating the treaty with the Chickasaws, then the right of the people to an equivalent section is full and complete. Throughout all the new States and Territories composed of the public domain, the principle of an equivalent has been universally recognized whenever the sixteenth section was taken by an adversary claim. Your committee have heretofore shown the express adoption of this principle, as regards Alabama and Mississippi, and they will now cite a few from the numerous instances in which it has been applied in the other new States of the Union. By the act of Congress of the 3d of March, 1823, it is enacted "that, in all cases in which section number sixteen, in any township within the State of Mississippi, has been sold, or otherwise disposed of, it shall be the duty of the register and receiver of the respective land office in whose district such land may be, so soon after the passage of this act as may be, to select the like quantity of other lands, equivalent thereto, from any of the unappropriated lands of the United States in that State." Here the principle of an equivalent of the sixteenth section is adopted co-extensively with the limits of the State of Missouri. By the act of Congress of the 20th of May, 1826, entitled, "An act to appropriate lands for the support of schools in certain townships and fractional townships not before provided for," an equivalent for the loss of the sixteenth section is directed, in all cases, "in those States in which section number sixteen, or other lands equivalent thereto, is by law directed to be reserved for the support of schools in each township." As by the acts of Congress of 1803 and 1806, and various other enactments of Congress before cited, the right of the people of each township to the sixteenth section, or its equivalent, is expressly recognized and established throughout the limits of Alabama and Mississippi, this act of May, 1826, would provide a remedy in the present case, were not a probable obstruction to the practical operations of this act presented by the provisions of its second section. That section is in these words: "That the aforesaid tracts of land shall be selected by the Secretary of the Treasury, out of any unappropriated public land within the land district where the township for which any tract is selected may be situated; and, when so selected, shall be held by the same tenure, and upon the same terms, for the support of schools in such township, as section No. 16, is or may be held, in the State where such township shall be situated." The principles of this law embrace the case in question, and might be practically extended to it, by enlarging the land districts in Alabama or Mississippi, without violating the rights of the United States or of the Chickasaw Indians.

By the act of Congress of the 29th of May, 1830, the Territory of Arkansas was authorized to select other equivalent lands, wherever the 16th sections were covered by other valid claims. The committee will cite but one remaining example; but it is a case so closely parallel to the present, as to merit particular observation. By the act of Congress of the 28th of April, 1800, the right of the United States to the western Connecticut reserve was ceded to the State of Connecticut. This western reserve is known to constitute now a very large and valuable portion of the flourishing State of Ohio. There being no sixteenth section appropriated for the use of schools in all the townships of the western reserve, the legislature of Ohio, in 1828, applied to Congress for "a grant of so much land from the United States, for the use of schools, in the Connecticut western reserve, as, together with the lands heretofore granted for that purpose, shall be equal to one thirty-sixth part of the land contained in said reserve." By the Indian treaty at Fort Industry, of the 4th of July, 1805, the Indian title to all the residue of the reserve, amounting to upward of a million and a half of acres, was extinguished by the United States, for all which no school sections were reserved. The application above mentioned, of the State of Ohio, was referred to the Committee on Public Lands of the House of Representatives of Congress, from which committee Mr. Vinton made a report in favor of the application, which report concluded as follows: "The committee are of opinion that the spirit of the compact and the reason of the case require that this tract of country should be placed upon an equal footing with the rest of the State of Ohio, and indeed of all the western States, in the provision that has been made for the support of schools." But "all the western States," as this committee supposed, will not be placed on "an equal footing" in this respect, if the present application on behalf of portions of the States of Alabama and Mississippi is now refused. In pursuance of this memorial of Ohio, an act of Congress was passed on the 19th of June, 1834, entitled, "An act to grant to the State of Ohio certain lands for the support of schools, in the Connecticut western reserve." By this act a quantity of land in other sections of Ohio, "equal to one thirty-sixth part of said western reserve," was appropriated for the use of schools therein. Thus, while Congress derived nothing from the sale of the lands in the western reserve, this section of the State was placed on the same footing as the other portions of Ohio, in regard to a section for each township for the use of schools therein.

The various committees of both Houses of Congress, which may at any time in their reports have referred to this subject, have invariably sustained the right of the people of every township in the States created out of the public domain, to the 16th section, or its equivalent, for the use of schools. This committee will present extracts from but two of these reports, one from a committee of the House, and the other from a committee of the Senate. In the first of these reports, made by Mr. Hunt, from a select committee, it is stated, "Congress has granted one entire section of land, equal to 640 acres, in each township of six miles square, in all the States, upon the national territory, amounting in the whole to upward of 5,000,000 acres, to be enjoyed forever by the inhabitants of such township, for the use of schools." Here the broad and comprehensive principle which embraces the present case is distinctly recognized. The other report to which your committee would refer, is the celebrated report of Mr. Clay, from the committee on manufactures of the Senate, in favor of the distribution among the several States of the proceeds of the sales of the public lands. In this report the committee say: "By voluntary compacts between the new States, respectively, and the general government, five per cent. of the net proceeds of all the sales of the public lands, included within their limits, are appropriated to internal improvements, leading to or within those States; that a section of land in each township, or one thirty-sixth part of the whole of the public lands embraced within their respective boundaries, has been reserved for purposes of education." Here the principle is again distinctly admitted, that the rights of the new States to this five per cent. and school sections is co-extensive with the "boundaries" of each of the new States, where the public lands are situated.

The various branches of the executive department, in all their communications on this subject, have uniformly adopted the same principle, both before and since the Chickasaw treaty. We will quote from but one of these reports, that of the Secretary of the Treasury, under date of the 28th of April last, in answer to a call from the House of Representatives for information in regard to the public lands. In this report the Secretary says, in relation to all the new States, specifying Mississippi and Alabama among the number, "one thirty-sixth part of the public lands granted for the support of common schools, is calculated on the superficial contents of each State;" presuming, as a matter of course, that equivalent sections would be given for the loss of the 16th sections under the Chickasaw treaty.

But, suppose that all the departments of the government have been mistaken on this subject, and that Congress might, in the present case, withhold these 16th sections, or an equivalent, without the infraction of any positive law or compact, would it be proper to do so? Would it be proper to deprive portions of the States of Alabama and Mississippi of privileges coeval with our land system, and extended to all the other new States? Would it be a wise or salutary course to strike out this grant of the 16th sections in the present case, and thus deprive the people of these townships of that sacred grant, for the noble purpose of planting schools in the wilderness, where virtue and knowledge might be instilled into the minds of that rising generation which we hope is destined to perpetuate our republican institutions? Shall these village and township schools be prostrated, these glorious lights be extinguished, in portions only of Alabama and Mississippi, when every township in all the other new States and Territories erected out of the public domain, are enjoying the advantages of the ordinances of 1785 and 1787? Your committee cannot believe that Congress will now abandon its settled policy upon this subject, and create a most odious distinction between the case of Alabama and Mississippi, and that of all the other new States where the public land is situated.

Having demonstrated, as your committee conceive, the propriety of granting to the States of Alabama and Mississippi an equivalent for the loss of the 16th sections, under the Chickasaw treaty, we will now proceed to investigate the question in regard to the five per cent. fund. And here we might refer to most of the acts of Congress heretofore cited, in relation to the questions of the 16th sections, as applicable to the inquiry in regard to the five per cent. fund. As, however, the organic acts by which the States of Alabama and Mississippi were authorized to form State governments, both provided particularly for the reservation to each of these States of this five per cent. fund, it cannot be necessary to repeat the citation of the other numerous acts on this subject. The act of the 1st of March, 1817, entitled, "An act to enable the people of the western part of the Mississippi Territory to form a constitution and State government, and for the admission of such State into the Union on an equal footing with the original States," provides, in its fifth section, as follows: "That five per cent. of the net proceeds of the lands lying within the said Territory, and which may be sold by Congress, from and after the first day of December next, after deducting all expenses incident to the same, shall be reserved for making roads and canals, of which three fifths shall be applied to those objects within the said State, under the direction of the legislature thereof, and two fifths to the making of a road or roads leading to the said State, under the direction of Congress." The act of the 2d of March, 1819, entitled, "An act to enable the people of Alabama Territory to form a constitution and State government, and for the admission of such State into the Union on an equal footing with the original States," provides as follows: "That five per cent. of the net proceeds of the lands lying within the said Territory, and which shall be sold by Congress, from and after the first day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, after deducting all expenses incident to the same, shall be reserved for making public roads, canals, and improving the navigation of rivers, of which three fifths shall be applied to those objects within the said State, and two fifths to the making of a road or roads leading to the said State, under the direction of Congress." The two provisions are nearly substantially the same. These lands, ceded by the Chickasaws in October, 1832, were, in the language of these organic laws, "lands lying within the said Territory," both as regards Alabama and Mississippi; and they are also lands, in the language of said laws, to be "sold by Congress;" the sales of them by Congress are now progressing, but these States cannot receive this fund, because, under the treaty with the Chickasaws, the net proceeds of all the sales are to be paid over to them; but this does not release Congress from its solemn obligation to pay to each of these States a sum equivalent to this fund. The same reservation has been made as regards all the new States erected out of the public domain; and these funds are to be expended in making roads in and leading to these States; the value of the public lands therein are thereby greatly enhanced, and it is consequently the interest of the nation, as a mere question of dollars and cents, to provide this fund for all these States, and to permit no portion of this fund to be subtracted or diminished. In conformity with these principles, the committee have reported a bill, which they unanimously recommend to the early consideration of the Senate.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1525. [1ST SESSION.

STATEMENT OF THE QUANTITY OF LAND SECURED BY CLAIMANTS UNDER THE PRE-EMPTION LAWS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MAY 14, 1836.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, May 12, 1836.

SIR: In obedience to the resolution of the Senate of the 20th ultimo, directing me to report "the quantity of public lands secured by claimants under the various acts of Congress granting pre-emptions," &c., I have the honor herewith to transmit a report from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, to whom the resolution was referred.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. M. VAN BUREN, V. P. of the U. S., and President of the Senate.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, May 10, 1836.

SIR: In obedience to a resolution of the Senate of the United States, passed on the 20th ultimo, which has been referred to this office, and which is in the following words, viz., "Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be requested to ascertain and report to the Senate, with as little delay as practicable, the quantity of the public lands of the United States secured by claimants under the various acts of Congress granting pre-emptions, since the adoption of the cash system, specifying in said report the quantity so secured each year," I have the honor to transmit the enclosed statement, which affords the information called for, so far as the abstracts of sales made at the several district land offices, from which this statement is principally prepared, afford the means of discriminating between the lands secured by purchasers under the pre-emption laws and those bought at private sale.

The district land officers have been directed, in latter years, to distinguish the pre-emption cases in those returns; but it is found that observance of this order has not been without exception. The registers in the General Land Office of purchases in several districts are greatly in arrear; and the detection of every omission of this sort would require the examination of an immense mass of certificates, that cannot yet be speedily accomplished without a suspension of much current duty, too pressing to be long deferred; while circumstances seem to forbid so long a delay in complying with the resolution as would be required to render this exposition quite perfect.

This statement is believed to fall short of the quantity of land entered by virtue of the pre-emption privilege, during the period since the commencement of the cash system; but it is submitted as the nearest approximation to exactness that can be attained by the means in the power of this office, without the dilatory scrutiny alluded to, which, it is apprehended, would retard this report too long for the purposes of the Senate during the present session.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, sir, your obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1526. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO A BOUNTY LAND-WARRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MAY 17, 1836.

Mr. PATTERSON, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the claim of Thomas Todd, a soldier of the late war with Great Britain, reported:

That, by reference to the War Department, they find that he enlisted as a private soldier for during the war, on the 23d of May, 1813; that he continued in the service until some time in August, 1814, when he was made prisoner of war at Fort Erie; after which time he has never been heard of, nor is there any further account of him at the department.

The law granting bounty land requires an honorable discharge, to entitle soldiers to a warrant, and for want of such discharge, the heirs of said Todd have been deprived of the bounty land to which he or his heirs were entitled by his enlistment and service; and as nothing has appeared, connected with his service, to deprive him of being honorably discharged, had he lived to ask such discharge, your committee, under these circumstances, think that a special law ought to be passed by Congress for the relief of the said Todd or his heirs, and have reported a bill accordingly.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1527. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MAY 25, 1836.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, May 25, 1836.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit a further report from the register and receiver at New Orleans made to this department under the provisions of the acts of Congress, approved the 6th February and 3d March, 1835, accompanied by a communication from the Commissioner of the General Land Office upon the validity of the claim.

I am respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. SPEAKER of the House of Representatives.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, May 23, 1836.

SIR: The Commissioner of the General Land Office having examined the papers which the Secretary of the Treasury has been pleased to refer to him, concerning the claims of Robert Bell, reported and recommended for confirmation by their register and receiver at New Orleans, has the honor to submit his views of the case as required by the statute.

Robert Bell claims, as direct purchaser from Santiago de la Rosa and Joseph Alvarez, two contiguous tracts of land on the west bank of the bayou Grosse-Tête, in the parish of Iberville, containing each forty arpens front by the ordinary depth of forty arpens, being in all three thousand two hundred superficial arpens.

The claimant asserts, on the 20th of April, 1836, that the two tracts in question are claimed by virtue of two separate orders of survey, issued by Governor Miro. The first in favor of Santiago de la Rosa, on the 21st October, 1787, the second in favor of Joseph Alvarez, on the 15th February, 1789, and that the claim is supported by evidence of habitation and cultivation, on the 20th of December, 1803, and for several years prior thereto.

Two documents are presented, purporting to be orders of surveys, signed "Miro," of the substance and date above described, accompanied by the respective petitions.

Daniel McCloud testifies, that, in 1797 or 1798, he went, in company with Gobo, a Spaniard, to Grosse Tête, where several people were settled, and recollects Joseph Alvarez and Santiago de Loxaga there.

Lopas Gobo confirms the statement in all but the date, which he does not recollect, but it was several years before the change of government. That he lived with Loxaga at that place for more than two years, till the latter was employed with his neighbor, Joseph Alvarez, by Noland, to go to the Spanish country to catch horses. Witness mentions a report that Noland was killed and his companions made prisoners.

Charles Sallier, called Savoyard, swears on the 17th November, 1823, that in 1800 or 1801, the persons named Santiago de la Rosa and Joseph Alvarez, at his dwelling at Cazkouchiou, on their way to join Philip Noling, at Nacogdoches, deposited in his hands, to be restored on their return, different papers, &c.; that some time after, when the defeat of Noling had came to his knowledge, not seeing Rosa and Alvarez return, and not knowing how to read, he caused the papers left in his care to be read by one named Peyrault, as well as he remembers, who told him that among those papers were two concessions, or surveys, each of forty arpens front by forty arpens deep, at the bayou Grosse-Tête, &c.; that, in the year 1822, the same Rosa and Alvarez returned, who told him that having been made prisoners, on the death of Noling, they had only been able to escape within some months; and that he restored them their papers upon their demand.

Thomas Peyrault, sworn on the 17th November, 1823, confirms the statement of Sallier so far as to his reading papers of that import, at the request of Sallier, at Cazkouchiou, in 1804.

The register and receiver must be supposed to have become acquainted, by experience, with the ordinary marks of authenticity of the old title papers in Louisiana, and, therefore, their judgment in such matters is entitled to much consideration; but the inherent evidence of these alleged concessions raises some doubts of their genuineness. That to Rosa is for an extraordinary quantity of land, even upon the representation of his being the owner of four slaves. That to Alvarez of equal extent has no such pretence. Neither of them appear to have been registered under the Spanish government. Their deposit of their papers with a stranger in the Attakapas; their sudden appearance to reclaim them after 21 or 22 years of pretended captivity, and their equally sudden disappearance (no subsequent intelligence of them being pretended) are extraordinary, and all these circumstances tend to render the claim somewhat suspicious to my mind, admitting the witnesses Sallier and Peyrault to be entitled to the full credence which the land officers at New Orleans seem to have given them. It is also worthy of remark that none of the evidence in support of these claims was taken before the land officers, and that their favorable report is made on the very same day on which the application bears date.

The Commissioner does not consider the act of the 11th of May, 1820, et sequentes, which extended the time for exhibiting and proving claims derived from the Spanish government, as dispensing with all the other conditions required by the act of the 2d March, 1805, one of which requisites is the actual habitation and cultivation of the tract claimed by the inhabitant on the 20th of December, 1803. The witnesses McCloud and Gobo, represent that Joseph Alvarez and Santiago de la Loxaga, or Loxoga, resided, in 1797 or 1798, at the bayou Grosse-Tête, but the identity of the latter with Santiago de la Rosa is not in any degree established by the evidence reported by the register and receiver. None of the ancient settlers found there by these witnesses depose on this subject. If such were the fact it would appear from the testimony of Gobo and Sallier, that they departed as early as 1800 or 1801, and the latter dates their return in 1822, at the distance of 21 or 22 years, consequently they could not have been inhabitants nor cultivators of the lands in question on the 20th of December, 1803.

Lastly, the register and receiver at New Orleans have not reported when, where, nor by what mode of conveyance, this claim was assigned to Robert Bell, nor how they arrive at the conclusion that he was a purchaser from Rosa and Alvarez, whence their opinion is formed that he ought to be confirmed in his claim.

From all which, the opinion that the evidence does not warrant the confirmation of the claim, is submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury.

With great respect, by his obedient servant,

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury.

No. 10.

LAND OFFICE, New Orleans, April 20, 1836.

Robert Bell claims two certain contiguous tracts of land, situate and lying on the west bank of the bayou Grosse-Tête, in the parish of Iberville, and containing each forty arpens front on the said bayou, by the ordinary depth of forty arpens, being in all three thousand two hundred superficial arpens.

The said two tracts are claimed by virtue of two separate orders of survey issued by Estevan Miro, one of the governors of the late province of Louisiana, while under the dominion of Spain, as follows, to wit, one in favor of Santiago de la Rosa, on the 21st day of October, 1787, and the other, in favor of Joseph Alvarez, on the 15th day of February, 1789; which said claim is also supported by evidence of habitation and cultivation on and for several years prior to the 20th December, 1803, and is held by the said Bell by means of purchase direct from the said grantees.

All which will more fully appear by reference to the accompanying documents herewith respectfully transmitted as the evidence filed in the case.

We are of opinion that this claim ought to be confirmed.

MAURICE CANNON, Receiver of Public Moneys.

Hon. LEVI WOODBURY, Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

No. 1.

To the Register and Receiver of the land office, in and for the southeastern district of Louisiana:

The notice of Robert Bell, of the parish of Iberville, respectfully shows: That he is the owner by purchase of two certain contiguous tracts of land, situate and lying on the west bank of the bayou Grosse-Tête, in the said parish of Iberville, and containing each forty arpens front on said bayou, by the ordinary depth of forty arpens; being in all thirty-two hundred superficial arpens.

The said tracts are held by purchase immediately from Santiago de la Rosa and Joseph Alvarez, who received regular orders of survey for the same respectively from the Spanish government, to wit: the former on the 21st day of October, 1787, and the latter on the 15th day of February, 1789, which said orders are herewith presented, together with evidence of habitation and cultivation of the said land, by the said grantees, on the 20th December, 1803, and for several years prior. All which, duly considered, said claimant prays that the said accompanying evidence of his claim may be duly admitted to record, pursuant to the provisions of the act of Congress now in force, touching the final adjustment of land claims in this district, and that he may receive a favorable report, &c.

IN FAVOR OF THE CREATION OF A NEW LAND DISTRICT IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, MAY 27, 1836.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, March 16, 1836.

SIR: On the subject of the resolution of the general assembly of the State of Louisiana, respecting the passage of a law by Congress, creating a land office at Natchitoches, in Louisiana, to be styled the "Red River land district," and to which you have requested my attention, I have the honor to submit to you a copy of a communication made to the Hon. R. Chapman, of the Committee on Public Lands, House of Representatives, on the 18th of January last, accompanied by a copy of the diagram therewith submitted.

ETHAN A. BROWN, Commissioner.

Hon. THOMAS EWING, Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands.

(For this letter, see ante., No. 1407.)

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1529. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN LOUISIANA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, MAY 31, 1836.

Mr. DUNLAP, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of Thomas M. Burland, and other citizens of the parish of Carroll, in the State of Louisiana, reported:

That, in consequence of directions issued by the proper authority, considerable portions of the public lands lying on the Mississippi, and other rivers, in the State of Louisiana, were not surveyed in the usual manner, by sections, half-sections, quarters, &c., but in conformity to the method pursued by the French and Spanish governments, while they possessed that country; that is, having a front of from two to five acres on the river or watercourse, running back forty acres by parallel lines. It appears that township No. 17 north, range No. 13 east, or that part of it lying on the river, was surveyed in this manner, consequently there was no 16th section in that township that could be preserved for the use of schools; but the Secretary of the Treasury very properly directed the register of the land office for the district north of Red river, to select a number of fractional sections or lots, equal to six hundred and forty acres, to be reserved for the use of schools, which was done by the late John Hughes, then register at Monroe, in said district. It appears that fractional quarter-section No. 1, of section No. 28, was a portion of the land selected; but from some oversight, or other reason unknown to the committee, no mark or other evidence of such selection was placed on the maps in the office, whereby a succeeding register could know which lots or fractional sections had been selected, though the necessary information, it appears, had been forwarded to the Commissioner of the General Land Office. About 1829, Mr. Hughes resigned his office, and another register was appointed.

On the 11th of November, 1830, the petitioner went to the land office, and purchased the aforesaid fractional quarter-section, neither he nor the register nor receiver knowing it had been reserved from sale, or selected as school land. He took possession of the land in good faith, cleared a portion of it, and it is stated, it now forms a part of his plantation. This possession was quietly continued until about the month of November, 1833, when the petitioner was informed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, that the entry made in 1830 was illegal, and would not be recognised, as the lands had been set apart for schools in 1826. The object of his petition now, is to confirm the purchase he made, and authorize the selection of an equal quantity of land elsewhere, for the use of schools.

As it is apparent to the committee that the petitioner and register both acted in good faith, but in ignorance of a fact that was very material, they think that upon principles of equity, the prayer of the petitioner ought to be granted, and they report a bill for the purpose.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1530. [1ST SESSION.

IN FAVOR OF GRANTING TO THE INHABITANTS OF A TOWNSHIP IN ILLINOIS OTHER LANDS, IN LIEU OF THEIR SIXTEENTH SECTION—COVERED BY PRE-EMPTION CLAIMS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JUNE 1, 1836.

Mr. CASEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the petition of sundry citizens of Madison county, State of Illinois, reported:

That the subject, which is presented in the petition, is of importance and of great interest to the inhabitants of the township mentioned in said petition. Your committee have given to it that consideration to which it is entitled.

It is known to all, that there exists a solemn compact, and law between the United States, and all the new States which are formed on the public domain, that one section of land, being the sixteenth, in each township of six miles square, is appropriated to the inhabitants of said township for the use of schools.

The petitioners, in the case before the committee, state that they are inhabitants of one of these townships, to wit: township three north, range nine west, of the third principal meridian, in the county of Madison and State of Illinois; and that the sixteenth section of land in said township is "good land," on which there are three good farms, and is now worth three thousand dollars.

Having considered the statement made by Mr. Reynolds, which is made a part of this report, together with the statement of the petitioners, your committee are fully satisfied that the said sixteenth section was of the first quality of land in the township, and is very valuable.

The petition further states, that the said sixteenth section was appropriated, under the pre-emption laws, to the use of private citizens, and a section in lieu of it selected, in an elm-swamp, on which there is, perhaps, not forty acres of dry land, and therefore of little or no value.

An act of Congress, which passed on the 26th April, 1816, authorized and permitted "every person" and their legal representatives, who, before the 5th of February, 1813, settled on and improved any tract of land reserved for the use of schools or seminaries of learning, and who, if the same lands had not been reserved, would have had the right of the pre-emption, shall be, and they are hereby authorized and permitted to enter the same with the register and receiver of public moneys at the land office at Kaskaskia.

Under the proceeding of the above-recited act of Congress, the said sixteenth section of land was purchased at the land office at Kaskaskia, and appropriated to the use of private citizens. The section and township at the time above mentioned were situated in the Kaskaskia land district.

Now, by an act of Congress, the said township is included in the district of lands sold at Edwardsville, in said State.

It is provided by the second section of the said act, "that the registers and receivers of public money shall have power, and they are hereby authorized to select any other vacant and unappropriated lands, within the tract set apart to satisfy confirmed claims as aforesaid, in lieu of such of the lands formerly reserved for a seminary of learning, and for the support of schools, as have been appropriated in satisfaction of ancient grants, or confirmed improvement claims, or as shall be entered in right of pre-emption, according to the provisions of the preceding section of this act; provided, that the lands thus to be selected shall be taken as near adjacent to those in lieu of which they are selected as an equal quantity of land of like quality can be obtained, and shall be reserved and appropriated for the same purpose."

Your committee are clearly convinced, that the inhabitants of said township had no agency, or gave no consent, to the removal and exchange of the school section of land in said township. The same was effected by the operation of the said act of Congress allowing the pre-emption to the settlers on the said sixteenth section.

The act of the register and receiver of public moneys at Kaskaskia in making the selection of the section, in lieu of the sixteenth section, was not the act of the inhabitants, but the act of the government, and there exist no reasons that the citizens of said township should be injured in their rights for the act of the government which was not in their control or power.

Your committee can arrive at no other conclusion than that the inhabitants of said township are entitled to relief, and therefore report a bill.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1531. [1ST SESSION.

IN FAVOR OF CORRECTING AN ERROR IN THE ENTRY OF LAND IN ILLINOIS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JUNE 1, 1836.

Mr. CASEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the claim of John Wigle for relief in the purchase of a lot of land, reported:

That the committee have examined the evidence in this case, and have no doubt that John Wigle made a mistake in entering and purchasing of the United States, in the Kaskaskia land district, in the State of Illinois, the west half of the northeast quarter of section number thirty-one, in township twelve south, range two west, in said district.

The county surveyor of Union county, State of Illinois, in which county the land is situated, states on oath, "that one half of which (meaning the land) is entirely covered with water, the same lying in a lake, or pond; it is not suitable for cultivation; nor is it practicable to cultivate any part of it."

It was the intention of Mr. Wigle to purchase the west half of the southeast quarter of section number thirty-one, in the same township.

Your committee deem it an act of justice to John Wigle, and in pursuance of the policy of the government on such occasions, to afford him relief, and to permit him to enter a like quantity of land in said district, which is subject to private entry. Therefore, your committtee report a bill.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1532. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM FOR THE RE-ISSUE OF A LOST BOUNTY LAND-WARRANT.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JUNE 1, 1836.

Mr. CRANE, from the Committee on Revolutionary Claims, to whom the petition of Levi Chadwick was referred, reported:

It appears that on the 4th day of December, 1818, warrant No. 716, for one hundred acres, issued from the bounty land office, in the name of Levi Chadwick, alias Shadwick, a soldier in the New Jersey continental line. No location has been made on this warrant, nor has it been surrendered at the General Land Office, for the purpose of obtaining either a patent or scrip, and from the testimony it appears to have been lost. The petitioner, who is shown to be the person to whom the original warrant issued, prays that a duplicate warrant may be issued to him; and the committee report a bill accordingly.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1533. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM FOR BOUNTY LAND AS A CANADIAN VOLUNTEER.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JUNE 1, 1836.

Mr. CHAMBERS, of Pennsylvania, from the Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of William Clark, asking a grant of bounty land, as a Canadian volunteer, during the last war, reported:

That the committee have considered this application, and the law and evidence in relation to it.

In the petition it is stated that the petitioner is a natural-born citizen of the United States, and that he had removed to Upper Canada anterior to the late war with Great Britain, where he resided at the commencement of hostilities; and that, being drafted and pressed to do military duty by the authorities of the British government, he deserted and returned to his former residence in the State of New York, where, in March, 1814, (as he believes,) he voluntarily enlisted in the army of the United States, under the command of Captain John Lytle, of the rifle corps, for the period of the war, and that he remained in service, and was honorably discharged in the summer of 1815. The evidence accompanying this petition is the affidavit of a Francis Clark, who deposes that he is the father of William Clark, the petitioner, who testifies that his son William resided in Upper Canada at the commencement of the late war.

Congress, by an act passed on the 5th March, 1816, granted bounty land to such persons as had been citizens of the United States anterior to the late war, and were, at its commencement, inhabitants of the province of Canada, and who, during the said war, joined the armies of the United States as volunteers, and were slain, died in service, or continued therein till honorably discharged. By a subsequent act of March 3, 1817, the act referred to was amended, and declared to be continued in force for the term of one year and no longer. The discovery of many frauds and impositions practised and attempted on the government under the provisions of the original act, induced Congress, it is believed, thus to limit its duration for a short period, not remote from the time of alleged service.

The propriety of now legislating for individual cases as they may be presented, and which might have been embraced under the provisions of those acts of Congress, had they been presented to the proper department and substantiated, is, to your committee, very questionable. As there are many applications to Congress for this bounty, if they be meritorious and deserving of it, it would be the better policy to extend the provisions of the former law on the subject, for a short time, and leave their investigation and proof to the rules and attention of the war department, in which there would be some uniformity of proof as well as certainty of right and security to the government.

By inquiry at the War Department, the committee learn, that from the records of the bounty land office, it appears that a land warrant for 160 acres was issued in favor of William Clark, who was a private in Captain Lytle's company, 4th rifle regiment, which warrant was delivered to the honorable John Savage; and the original discharge of the said William Clark is filed in the same office, by which it appears he was enlisted by Captain John Lytle, on the 3d March, 1814, and discharged on the 14th June, 1815, and that he was born in the prov ince of Canada.

To the committee it is manifest that the William Clark who has already received a warrant for 160 acres of bounty land, as a soldier of the United States during the late war, is the same individual who now asks Congress to pass a law granting him bounty land as a Canadian volunteer.

Your committee do not suppose that Congress intended to give cumulative bounties of land to the same soldier, for the same service; but the committee are relieved from the necessity of considering the claim of the petitioner under this aspect, which is a very strong one against the claim, even if they should adopt the provisions and policy of the acts of Congress of 1816 and 1817 referred to. The bounties extended by the said acts of Congress were confined to such persons as had been citizens of the United States anterior to the late war, and were, at its commencement, inhabitants of the province of Canada; and to bring himself within the provisions of those acts the petitioner, in his petition, states that he was a natural-born citizen of the United States; and though the only witness, his father, to prove his citizenship and residence, testifies to his residence in Canada, without specifying where he was born, and of what government he was a citizen at the commencement of that war. The omission to give the particulars of birth, residence, and citizenship, by the father, Francis Clark, whose deposition is taken to support the claim of the son, William, savors of an intended suppression of circumstances material to be known as determining the right. The original discharge of the said William, filed in the War Department, which was made at a time antecedent to said acts of Congress granting bounties to Canadian volunteers, and when there was no inducement to misrepresent, is evidence more to be relied on than representations at this time accompanying the claim. In that discharge the said William Clark is stated to have been born in the province of Canada. From the evidence, it appears that said William Clark was not a citizen of the United States, and would not have been embraced by the provisions and policy of the said acts of Congress, even if they were still in existence. How the petitioner would attempt to reconcile the incongruity and contradiction as to the place of his nativity, as exhibited in his original discharge and his petition to Congress, it is not in the power of the committee to conjecture. Enough does appear to satisfy them that the petitioner is not entitled to the relief desired.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1534. [1ST SESSION.

ON A CLAIM TO LAND IN FLORIDA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JUNE 1, 1836.

Mr. CHAMBERS, of Pennsylvania, from the committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Joseph E. Padro, agent for the heirs of Pedro Palao, reported:

That they have considered this claim, and the documents exhibited in relation to it. It appears that Don Pedro Palao, captain of a regiment of infantry of Louisiana, in the month of April, 1813, applied to the intendant of the province of Florida for a grant of eight hundred arpens of land, fronting upon the bay of Pensacola, with certain boundaries, affirming that he was desirous of locating and cultivating the same, with a view to the preservation and support of some cattle which he had. There does not appear to have been any allowance or concession at the time of the application, which was again renewed in October, 1815; and on the 23d January, 1816, a concession purports to have been made by Governor Soto of eight hundred arpens of land to the said Don Pedro Palao, at the place indicated.

The claimant's ancestor represented, in his application of April, 1813, that he was desirous of locating and cultivating the land applied for, with a view to the preservation and support of some cattle which he then had; and the only evidences of cultivation, improvement, or possession, are to be found in the affidavit of the agent and petitioner for the heirs of Pedro Palao, and also the affidavit of another individual, which affidavits are made on the 12th of March, 1836, and testify to survey this land in 1816; and that the improvements consisted of two small houses, and about two acres cleared and enclosed. In the absence of all evidence of a continuation of possession and extension of cultivation for a period of twenty years, it may well be presumed that a possession and improvement so limited and circumscribed as that stated to exist in 1816, had been discontinued and abandoned by the applicant.

The presumption is strengthened by the circumstance that the said Pedro Palao resided in the island of Cuba, and did not, as required by the act of Congress, present his claim of title to this land to the United States commissioners, appointed by the law of the United States to investigate the claims of individuals to lands in West Florida under Spanish grants.

By act of Congress of May 8, 1822, claimants to land in Florida under Spanish grants, were required to file their claims with the commissioners under the provisions of that law, on or before the 31st of May, 1823, and if not so filed they were declared void. The power to file claims in said Territory was extended, by subsequent acts of Congress, till the 1st of September, 1824, with the provision "that all and every claim not filed by that time shall be held and deemed void, and of none effect."

The excuse alleged on the part of the claimant, that the said Don Pedro Palao lived in the island of Cuba, and had with him there the original title papers, cannot be allowed to exempt him, and those claiming under him, from the limitations of a law necessary to the protection of the government against fraudulent, dormant, and defective claims; and that the government might be enabled to adopt the necessary measures for the survey and sale of the public lands.

Public policy, as well as the provisions of the act of Congress, required non-residents, as well as resident citizens, to file and present their claims within the time allowed, under the penalty of having them declared "void, and of none effect."

The committee are therefore of opinion, that the said claimants are not entitled to any confirmation of a concession, not prosecuted as required by the Spanish laws for the government of Florida, and barred also, and declared "void, and of none effect," by the acts of Congress; and therefore report that the claimants are not entitled to relief.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1535. [1ST SESSION.

APPLICATION FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF LEVEES ON THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER, AND THE RECLAIMING OF INUNDATED LANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JUNE 1, 1836.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

The undersigned memorialists, residents on the Mississippi river, now in the State of Louisiana, most respectfully represent: That there is a large scope of country lying west of the Mississippi river, within the State of Louisiana and the Territory of Arkansas, the greater portion of which is property belonging to the United States. This country is bounded on the east by the Mississippi river; on the south and southwest by Red river, on the west and northwest by the Ouachita river and its tributaries.

The Tensas is a large navigable stream, which takes its source in Lake Providence, about two miles distant from the bank of the Mississippi, and about twelve miles below the southern boundary of the Territory of Arkansas. Its general course is to the southwest, nearly parallel with the course of the Mississippi, diverging, however, to the west, until, at the distance of thirty miles from the Mississippi, it joins the Ouachita, which here takes the name of Black river. This latter river keeps its course to the southwest, at the distance of thirty miles from the Mississippi, until the Black river joins the Red river, thirty miles above the junction of this latter with the Mississippi.

In Old river, in the Territory of Arkansas, about forty miles above the Arkansas and Louisiana division line, the bayou Macon takes its rise, and flows southwest, gradually increasing the space between it and the Mississippi, (four miles at its source,) until it falls into the Tensas, about the distance of twenty miles from the Mississippi, and about sixty miles above the confluence of the Ouachita and the Tensas. This stream is navigable through almost its whole course for steamboats and other craft. Its western bank is skirted in almost its whole course, after it leaves Arkansas, by lands that rise above all overflow.

The bayou Bartholomew takes its source in some hilly land lying north and west of the source of the bayou Macon, runs for a short distance parallel to the Mississippi; but at a point nearly opposite the town of Columbia, in Arkansas, turns off to the west, and joins the Ouachita, about thirty miles above the town of Monroe, and two hundred miles above the point at which this latter river takes the name of Black river. It is navigable in part of its course for steamboats, and affords large bodies of public land, a great portion of which may be reclaimed by the contemplated improvement hereinafter mentioned.

The river Au Bœuf is a small stream, taking its rise in Arkansas Territory, between the bayou Macon and the bayou Bartholomew, and running down to the southwest, at the distance of twenty miles in its general course from the bayou Macon, and finally falls into the Ouachita, thirty-three miles above its junction with the Tensas and Little river. This latter river rises between the Ouachita and Red rivers, perhaps in Arkansas, and, in its general course, runs south and southeast, until it falls into the Black river, a quarter of a mile below the mouth of the Tensas.

A line starting from a point on the north bank of Red river, about fifty miles above its junction with the Mississippi, running northeast to Little river; thence nearly east to the Ouachita, a few miles below the town of Harrisonburg; thence along said river to a point on the same, three miles above said town; thence along the bluff of Sicily island, easting about seven miles first, and then running fifteen miles due north; thence along the bayou Macon to the division line between Arkansas and Louisiana, and thence crossing over to the head of the river Au Bœuf, and running to the bayou Bartholomew, and along the same to the hills in Arkansas, will form a western and northwestern boundary of an area which is flooded at high tide by the waters of the Mississippi. Within this space are contained perhaps about two millions of acres of public lands, which may be reclaimed and rendered fit for cultivation, by raising, on the west bank of the Mississippi, a levee of earth, only six feet perpendicular height, of twenty-four feet breadth at the base, and four feet at the summit. The cost of such a levee would be about twenty-five hundred dollars per mile; and assuming the distance from the mouth of Red river to the town of Columbia, at the head of the bayou Macon, in Arkansas, to be three hundred and thirty miles, the whole cost will be eight hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars. The land reclaimed by the improvement will produce at auction from six to eight millions of dollars. The several back concession laws, granting certain lands to front proprietors on the Mississippi, &c., are totally inadequate to the purpose for which they were intended.

By reason of the serpentine course of the river, many proprietors can have no benefit from those laws. In a great number of instances, the lands immediately contiguous to the tracts owned by front proprietors are worthless, and in numerous cases, the back lands have been entered by other persons than the front proprietors before the passage of these several acts, granting back concessions, &c. Neither the State of Louisiana nor the Territory of Arkansas is able, without inconvenience, to make this levee; the burden is too great for the front proprietors: and even if it were not too onerous on them, the difficulty of concert and unanimity among them is not to be surmounted. Your memorialists, then, have no recourse but to pray the aid of a liberal and enlightened government, and this they hereby do with great confidence, considering those claims and that of the government will itself be a great gain, by doing them justice. Some persons have entertained doubts as to the practicability of confining the waters of the Mississippi within its channel in case of very high floods, such as came in the years 1811, 1813, 1815, 1823, and 1828.

Others have thought, that if the waters be confined within the channel of the river for several hundred miles above the mouth of the Red river, the height will be so great in the part of the river which lies below Red river, that New Orleans, and all the country for one hundred and fifty miles above that city will be flooded in time of high water.

Many reasons can be given to show the fallacy of these opinions, but they would unnecessarily swell this memorial to an unwarrantable length. Your memorialists will, therefore, content themselves with the following demonstration of the truth in regard to this subject.

The great overflow in the year 1828, the highest water ever known in this country, rose to an average height of two feet above the natural bank of the river; then the whole course of the waters of the Mississippi, except that portion which flowed out by a depth two feet over the banks, were contained in a channel which consisted of a natural basin of earth of the height of one hundred feet, (say for instance,) and of a column of water of two feet perpendicular height. The breadth of the river is one mile. Erect on the natural bank a basin of earth two feet in height, which shall stand instead of the column of water of the same height; there will be now, on each distance of a mile on the line of the river, a column of water of two feet, and of the superficial extent of one mile square, which runs with the same velocity of the waters of the river, say five miles per hour, not in the direction of the natural current, but at right angles with it; mount this column of water on the top of that which is contained within the banks natural and artificial, now of the height of one hundred and two feet, and change the course of the current of this column, by adding two feet more to the artificial bank, and its course will be that of the ordinary current of the river.

The consecutive flow of each mile space of this column of water will prevent any accumulation of water in the channel* beyond two feet; indeed, the velocity of this column of water will be so much increased by running with a body that runs at the rate of five miles per hour, instead of running over a stationary plain which has a rough surface, that, we feel assured, it will not add to the height of the waters in the river more than one foot and a half at the utmost. The waters that run out by the various small channels, called bayous, will not, by being confined within the channel, add materially to the height of the column of water that runs down the river. The extent of augmentation of height in the Mississippi from this source can be easily ascertained with sufficient exactitude to answer all practicable purposes, though, at this time, your memorialists have not the data on which to found a calculation. It is to be observed that the channel of the Tensas, the bayou Macon, Little river, and

* The distance from the mouth of Red river to Columbia, in Arkansas, is one hundred and fifty miles on a direct line; there is, consequently, only one hundred and fifty miles of water to be thrown into a channel that is three hundred and thirty miles in length; this reduced to the maximum augmentation of two feet more than one half; the velocity with which the waters in an overflow pass over the banks is not more than one fourth as great as the velocity of the waters of the channel o the river, consequently th‹re is a large deduction on this score to be made from this maximum of two feet.

Black river, are deep and spacious, and are amply sufficient, at all times, to contain their own waters. Although the Upper Ouachita overflows its banks, such is not the case in any portion of its course in Louisiana.

The inclination of the whole plain contained within the boundaries above specified, is sufficient to drain all transportation waters that may pass through the levee, and all rain-waters, into the streams that run through it in various directions.

The soil is everywhere of the best quality, its products being equal to those of any lands in the world.

In consideration of all the premises, your memorialists respectfully ask that your honorable body will take such measures for the accomplishment of the desirable object herein before mentioned, as shall be found most expedient, and as in duty, &c. All which is most respectfully submitted, &c.

24TH CONGRESS.] No. 1536. [1ST SESSION.

BRIEF OF THE EVIDENCE IN DEFENCE OF SAMUEL GWIN FROM CHARGES AFFECTING HIS OFFICIAL CONDUCT AND CHARACTER AS REGISTER OF THE LAND OFFICE AT CHOCCHUMA, MISSISSIPPI.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, JUNE 1, 1836.

WASHINGTON, May 31, 1836.

To the Senate:

I transmit, herewith, the response of Samuel Gwin, esq., to the charges affecting his official conduct and character, which were set forth in the evidence taken under the authority of the Senate, by the Committee on Public Lands, and which was referred to the President by the resolution of the Senate bearing date the 3d of March, 1835. This resolution, and the evidence it refers to, were officially communicated to Mr. Gwin by the Secretary of the Treasury, and the response of Mr. Gwin has been received through the same official channel.

ANDREW JACKSON.

BRIEF SUMMARY OF THE EVIDENCE IN DEFENCE OF SAMUEL GWIN, HERETO APPENDED.

No. 1.—Thomas L. Sumrall, register at Mount Salus land office.

Witness states that there are many marks on the maps of said office, indicating that the lands are sold, in the handwriting of Samuel Gwin, which he believes were the result of mistakes in him. From a recent examination he believes that about fifty of those marks, above alluded to, are in the handwriting of Samuel Gwin, and of them fifteen or twenty are correctly marked on the maps, but not entered in the tract-books. He believes that other cases of the same kind do exist; explains how applicants frequently apply to enter land, and, by giving a wrong description of it, are informed that it is entered, when in fact the land wanted may not be entered, in which case the register is usually blamed; believes that had Samuel Gwin been present and permitted to cross-examine the witnesses, acts that now appear criminal or improper would have appeared perfectly innocent; knows of no acts of said Gwin in violation of law, or that would result in an injury to the government, or to individuals; does not believe that impartial justice could be given said Gwin by William S. Jones or Isaac Caldwell, from the hostility of the parties of long standing; finds many marks on the maps not made by the officers but by fraudulent persons, to prevent said land from being sold; states that the present desk, constructed by said Gwin, was intended to prevent these practices, and without such a one it could not be prevented; states that Joseph D. Peebles admitted to him that he, Peebles, had falsely marked the maps of said office; (see Peebles's deposition, Doc. 22, p. 32;) believes that said Gwin, while register of said office, conducted it to the best of his ability and to the interest of the United States; that he, the deponent, has found marks on said maps in his own handwriting, that are not in the tract-books, and that he is liable to such mistakes in a press of business; states that Samuel Gwin entered but one tract of land before he, Sumrall, took charge of the office, and that tract was a single eighth, jointly with a Mr. Green. [This is from the records of the office, and clearly disproves that part of the report of the committee that states that these officers "appear on their sale-books to be purchasers of lands in their own names."] Witness explains and gives a diagram of the land entered by Samuel Gwin, adjoining Robert Matthews. (See Doc. No. 22, p. 73.)

No. 2.—James McLaran.

Witness lives in same town (Clinton) and has had much business in said office; was in public business himself and had a good opportunity to know public sentiment in regard to Gwin and Dameron, which was highly favorable to them as public officers, more so than in any other office in the State; details the great debility and sickness of Mr. Dameron in 1832, [to which may be attributed the errors in the cases of Jacob Williams, Burrass Haley, Ramsey Cox, and others;] explains fully the situation of Mr. Dameron at this period; never heard that Samuel Gwin and George B. Dameron were notoriously engaged in land speculations; never heard that they ever marked lands as sold that were not, but has good reason to believe that others, unconnected with the office, have so marked the maps without the knowledge of said officers; does not know or believe that either of them ever represented lands as sold to applicants that were not; never heard that either of them ever attempted to sell at private sale, and at a "suitable profit" any lands thus marked as sold, nor does he know or believe that either of them ever entered themselves lands thus marked as sold; never heard of their marking land as sold, for particular friends, when it was not; explains how the maps might be falsely marked by other persons until Samuel Gwin constructed the present confined desk; never heard, nor does he believe said Gwin and Dameron were in the habit of selling land on a credit, receiving a "bonus" or interest for the same; such an occurrence would have been spoken of, if done, and he never heard of any such acts; never heard them charged of "partiality" or favoritism, but, on the reverse, were unusually accommodating to all; knows that Gwin has gotten out of his bed to accommodate persons who wished to enter land; had a conversation with Avery Nolan in relation to his deposition, (see Doc. 22, p. 6,) who admitted to him that he had no "hand in wording" or "authorizing the offensive part alluded to;" that it was "not mentioned while he was with Jones, and that it was made up and added after he left Jones's office, without his knowledge or approbation, and that could he have written it would not have occurred;" states that Joseph D. Peebles, when intoxicated, is very abusive, and can easily be induced to do anything while in this situation; gives the general character of William S. Jones, from a five years' acquaintance, which is not very good; speaks of the hostility between Gwin and Jones, of a challenge being sent by the latter, which was accepted, but that he then refused to fight, or appear on the ground; represents that the public generally disapproved of the appointment of the commissioners by the Senate, knowing their hostility to the officers; explains fully the object of the land company at Chocchuma in 1833; speaks of the conduct of Samuel Gwin at said sales in high terms of praise, as not liable to the censure attempted to be cast upon him by the report of the committee; denies that the company "monopolized" all the good lands, or "overawed bidders," or that Samuel Gwin "connived at" or participated in any of the acts of the company; speaks of the conduct of said Gwin at the private entries in the highest terms of praise; states that Samuel Gwin adopted the only rules that could be devised to give a fair chance to all; speaks of the conduct of Samuel B. Marsh and John Jones, on that occasion, as highly improper, and as attempting to practise a deception; states that Samuel Gwin threatened to stop the sales if advised of any company violating the laws of the United States, and read the law frequently to them; disproves John Jones's testimony, and also part of R. H. Sterling's deposition.

No. 3.—Seneca Pratt, Esq., clerk in the receiver's office at Mount Salus.

Witness was a clerk in receiver's office, and frequently, in the absence of the register, or when he was present but otherwise engaged, filled up applications and attended to the business of the register; this he continued for the register after he was not considered as attached to either office. Both offices were either in the same room or adjoining rooms in the same building. Witness was conversant with all or most of the transactions of Gwin and Dameron, and never discovered any disposition in either of them to conceal any of their transactions from him; speaks of the illness of Mr. Dameron in the latter part of 1832; of his being often confined for days, unable to get to the office; that he, witness, although his clerk, did not not feel himself authorized to take up and complete any unfinished business in the office that was left undone by Mr. Dameron; states that Mr. Dameron frequently, while thus in bad health, and where the applicants were not pressing for their receipts, filed the money of the the applicant with his application in his strong box, until he had more time and was better able to make out receipts; that the application and money would thus remain for weeks perhaps; that this occurred with Dr. William M. Gwin and Samuel Gwin to his knowledge; states that he is well aware that after those severe attacks of disease, and on his return to the office, he, Mr. Dameron, would forget for weeks or months papers thus laid aside, until his attention was called to them by the applicant, or on finding the papers in the strong box; speaks positively that Gwin and Dameron were not "notoriously engaged in extensive land speculations," nor has the witness ever seen anything to induce him to believe that Gwin and Dameron ever "marked as sold vast bodies of the most valuable lands," when it was not; nor does he know or believe that the register ever represented, knowingly, lands as sold that were not; does not know or believe that they, or either of them, ever attempted to sell at private sale and a suitable profit, any lands marked as sold, but that Samuel Gwin informed him that he had discovered various tracts marked as sold, but could not be found on the books, which he informed the department of, and was waiting an answer before he would suffer them to be entered; does not know or believe that Gwin and Dameron ever entered themselves lands thus marked as sold, nor does he know or has he reason to believe that they, or either of them, ever marked lands as sold for particular friends that were not; knows that improper marks were put on the maps, indicating that the tracts were sold without the knowledge of Samuel Gwin; describes how the maps were kept before Gwin constructed the present desk; does not know, or has he reason to believe, that they (Gwin and Dameron) sold the public lands on a credit, but they did in a few instances enter lands with their own funds for others, at a small premium; has heard them charged with partiality, which charge he knew to be unfounded and unjust; knows that Gwin and Dameron took uncommon pains at unusual hours to accommodate the public. Witness heard Joseph D. Peebles admit that he, Peebles, had marked on said maps lands as sold that were not, without the knowledge of Samuel Gwin, and who also admitted that he wanted the land and had not the money to enter it, which was the cause of his marking it as sold; knows that the register, in the press of business, is liable to mark the wrong tract as sold, leaving the one sold unmarked; witness states that he himself has made these errors while attending to the register's office. Witness believes that individuals, through mistake, have taken off the application with their receipt, from the receiver's table, leaving no evidence in the office of the sale of the land save the marks on the maps, and that applications were liable to be lost before they could be entered in the books; states that he has discovered, while posting up the books, numerous numbers that were missing, and he attributes most of the marks on the maps originating from this cause; knows of instances where tracts marked as sold, and reported to the department as not sold, which were in fact sold, and stood registered in all the books except the tract-book.

No. 4.—John J. McCaughan.

Witness was at Chocchuma during the public sales in 1833, and for ten days thereafter; explains the conditions of the land company formed at said sales: represents that the actual settlers were greatly benefited by the conditions of said company; knows of no combination or threats or unlawful means being used of any kind to intimidate or prevent any person from bidding for any lands he chose; proves Edmund Row's deposition to be false, where he states that individuals were compelled to sign a paper binding not to bid in opposition to the company; does not know, nor has he reason to believe, that Samuel Gwin was either directly or indirectly interested in said company; states that Samuel Gwin took the legal advice of Hon. John Black as to the propriety of his suspending the sales, if the company were violating the laws of Congress, and was informed by him that such a course would not be proper or legal, and that the company was violating no law; speaks of the conduct of Samuel Gwin with commendation for vigilance and attention, and as being entirely clear of partiality to the company or any one else. Witness has had much business in the Mount Salus office while Samuel Gwin had charge of it, and states that he, Gwin, "was and ever has been the most efficient register I have ever known in the State;" states that Joseph D. Peebles has admitted that he, Peebles, had marked the maps without the knowledge of Samuel Gwin.

No. 5.—Colonel Robert L. Scott, clerk in receiver's office.

Witness was a clerk in receiver's office; speaks in terms of high praise as to the official conduct of Gwin and Dameron, and that their conduct was universally approved of by the public; never saw or heard anything that would in the remotest degree warrant the statements made in the depositions taken by Jones and Caldwell; does not know or believe that either of their them (Gwin and Dameron) ever marked on the maps of said office lands as sold that were not, or that they ever informed individuals that lands were sold that were not, knowingly, or that they ever sold lands on a credit, receiving a separate note as a "bonus" or interest; never saw either of them act partially or oppressively to any one having business in said office; speaks in terms of severe reprobation of the conduct of Jones and Caldwell, appointed commissioners by the chairman; of their deadly hostility toward the officers before and since they received the said appointment; believes that they could not act impartially in any matter that Gwin and Dameron were concerned in.

No. 6.—General Henry S. Foote.

Witness states that it was impossible for Jones and Caldwell to do Gwin justice; speaks from an intimate acquaintance with the general character of Samuel B. Marsh, in terms of severe reprobation and detestation, which is the general opinion among the respectable members of the bar in the State; details his wanton attack on the character of Colonel Thomas G. Nixon, who was afterwards slain by said Marsh.

No. 7.—Thomas G. Ringgold, Esq.

Witness was a clerk in land office at Chocchuma from 9th March, 1834; was an acting magistrate in Tallahatchie county, and took down all the evidence under the pre-emption law of 19th June, 1834; speaks in terms of praise of the conduct of Samuel Gwin in deciding on claims under this law; that he was rigid in his duties, because his political opponents had placed spies around him to misrepresent all his actions; states that he was at Chocchuma during the whole time James R. Marsh (commissioner) was taking depositions, and heard many of the witnesses declare that great partiality was manifested by him against Samuel Gwin, and in favor of the receiver of the said office; that one witness had told him that his deposition was not read to him, "and he had no doubt much unfairness and management was carried on to ruin said Gwin;" has often heard S. B. and James R. Marsh denounce said Gwin in the grossest language; that the whole proceeding was "the sheerest mockery of justice that could possibly be exhibited;" that James R. Marsh did everything to embarrass said Gwin in his official duties, while his claim was under examination, much to the annoyance of other claimants; states positively that the public interest did not suffer in consequence of the occasional absence of said Gwin; that R. B. Sterling was disconcerted at the loss of the fees for drawing copies of the map, which was one cause of his giving a deposition against said Gwin; that said Gwin had, alone, unaided by the receiver, to take all the testimony under the pre-emption law, and all the responsibility, the receiver not paying the least attention to the claims or claimants, except to receive his fee; controverts Mr. Sterling's evidence in regard to Gwin's answers to the Messrs. Marsh as to what constituted a legal subdivision under the act of 1829; testifies as to the forbearance of Gwin toward these men when taking the evidence of their claims, although these men disregarded all those courtesies that ought to characterize gentlemen; disproves, in positive terms, that part of the report of the committee that charges "profligate scenes" in said office, "which have continued to characterize the conduct of the register, who controls the sales at private entry, up to the present time;" details the cause that led to an attack made by Colonel T. G. Nixon on Samuel B. Marsh, who had charged said Nixon as being a "perjured villain;" disproves that part of the report of the committee as implicating Colonel Nixon, whose evidence had not been correctly written down by the said Marsh, who was the deputy commissioner under his brother, James R. Marsh. Proves, conclusively, that numerous witnesses whose depositions had been taken, and therein named, were not legally sworn, as falsely represented by James R. Marsh, and so certified by him to the Senate, and as expressly required by the resolution of the Senate; gives copies of these false certificates of the said Marsh, which purported that the witnesses were "duly sworn," and which have tended to deceive the Senate, mislead the committee, and deceive the public; and that the said S. B. and J. R. Marsh held no judicial station authorizing either of them to administer oaths in the State of Mississippi.

No. 8.—John S. Young, Esq.

Witness proves that he saw an individual mark a quarter-section of land, as sold, on the maps of the Mount Salus land office, that was not sold, while Samuel Gwin had charge of said office, without the knowledge of said Gwin; has no reason to believe that Samuel Gwin was either directly or indirectly interested in the land company at Chocchuma in 1833; disproves, in toto, Edmund Row's evidence in regard to E. C. Wilkinson at said sales; speaks in favorable terms of the conduct of Samuel Gwin at said sales.

No. 9.—John W. Coghlan.

Witness explains a certain transaction as detailed in the deposition of Eli Garner, (see doc. 22, p. 45,) and releases Gwin of the slightest blame in said transaction; speaks in terms of commendation of Gwin and Dameron as regards their conduct in the Mount Salus office.

No. 10.—Colonel Eli Garner.

Explains his former deposition; (see doc. 22, p. 45;) speaks in high terms of commendation as to the official conduct of Gwin and Dameron in the Mount Salus office, and that the general sentiment was decidedly favorable to them as having no superiors; states that a large majority of the public highly disapproved of the appointment of Jones, the personal enemy of Gwin, by the chairman, as one of the commissioners; never saw anything illegal or improper in the official conduct of Gwin and Dameron.

No. 11.—Thomas Barnard.

Witness gives a full and specific history of the manner the Chocchuma Land Company was formed in 1833, the objects in forming it, and the benefits secured by it to the settlers on the public land. This is, perhaps, the most accurate exposé of the operations and object of the company that is contained in any of the depositions, and its perusal is recommended; saw nor heard of none of the "profligate scenes" at said sales, as detailed in the report of the committee; that the conduct of Samuel Gwin at said sales was above reproach, as far as he saw or heard, or believes; disproves the report of the committee as to the charge of monopoly," "over-awing bidders," and everything of the kind, or that the company had an office in the vicinity of the register's office for the sale of their lands; that Samuel Gwin did not "participate" in the profits of said company, nor "connive at it;" that the whole statement in the report on these subjects is destitute of foundation in truth; speaks in terms of unqualified praise as to the conduct of Samuel Gwin during the press at private entry, and of the rules he adopted for conducting them; states that there were from two to five hundred persons attending the sales at private entry, and unless the rules had been drawn up with great care, and if the register had not acted with the utmost caution and firmness, the greatest confusion would have arisen; saw no partiality in said Gwin to any one, but the reverse of it toward the members of the company; heard Samuel Gwin frequently declare that he would, on his own responsibility, suspend the sales, if the company was violating law; and witness saw said Gwin hand the Hon. John Black the acts of Congress on the subject, and heard him, Gwin, ask him for his legal opinion whether or not the company was violating the laws or not, and witness heard Judge Black inform him that the company was not violating any law of Congress, and was perfectly legal; corrects Joseph Person's testimony about turning persons out of the office, (see doc. 22, p. 98;) describes how said Gwin received the applications for private entry.

No. 12.—James A. Girault.

Witness was at Chocchuma sales during the four weeks in 1833, and for a week after their close: explains the benefits of the company; knows that Samuel Gwin was not either directly or indirectly interested in said company, but heard him declare that he would suspend the sales if advised they were violating law: that he condemned the formation of the company; witness disproves nearly every allegation contained in the deposition of Edmund Row, and gives copies of the sales that clearly rivets falsehood on Row. Your attention is particulary requested to this deposition, and also the deposition of Edmund Row, as taken by the chairman of the committee; speaks favorably of the official conduct of Samuel Gwin; witness resides in the neighborhood of Chocchuma, but has never seen any of the "profligate scenes" spoken of in the report of the committee as characterizing the conduct of Samuel Gwin; heard nothing of "over-awing" bidders, "monopolizing all the good lands," or "driving all competition out of the market" at said sales in 1833 by said company; the company did not establish an office in the vicinity of the register's office, as stated in the report of the committee; no one was prevented from bidding at said sales, as charged by the committee; the agents of the company did not undertake to dictate terms to the actual settlers, as also charged in said report; does not know or believe that Samuel Gwin "connived at" or participated in any "fraudulent transactions," but firmly believes to the reverse; gives an account of the death of Colonel G. T. Nixon by the hands of Samuel B. Marsh, (the same as alluded to in the report of the committee;) that Marsh had called at the house of said Nixon, and charged him, Nixon, with perjury; that they mutually agreed to submit it to friends; upon the day Nixon had changed his purpose, and he was resolved that Marsh should retract the charge, or he would punish him.

No. 13.—Wiley Davis.

Witness neither saw nor heard of any of the "profligate scenes," as charged against Samuel Gwin by the committee in their report at the Chocchuma land sales; denies that the company was guilty of "monopoly," or of "overawing bidders;" said company had no office in the vicinity of the register's office, as also charged by said committee; does not know or believe that Samuel Gwin "connived at or participated in" any of the company transactions; that said Gwin acted with the utmost impartiality at said sales; knows from Gwin's violent opposition to said company that he would have suspended the sales had he not been advised that they were not violating law; speaks of the manner that Samuel B. Marsh attempted to enter a piece of land for John Jones; that his conduct in said attempt was looked upon by all present as a low, dirty trick, that no gentleman would have been guilty of; the witness speaks generally and highly favorable of the conduct of Samuel Gwin, and disproves all the charges alleged against him by the committee as arising at Chocchuma; details the charge of perjury made by Samuel B. Marsh against Colonel T. G. Nixon, at the house of the witness, which led to the rencontre between Marsh and Nixon, which resulted in the death of the latter.

No. 14.—Hon. A. R. Govan, (late of South Carolina.)

Witness has no knowledge that Samuel Gwin was either directly or indirectly interested in the Chocchuma Land Company.

No. 15.—R. H. Sterling.

Witness states that, during the land sales at Chocchuma, in 1833, James R. Marsh exhibited a letter to him, purporting to be from Hon. George Poindexter, authorizing him, the said Marsh, to draw on him, Poindexter, for a sum of money, (amount not named,) to purchase lands at the then pending sales.

[It will be recollected that this honorable senator is here attempting to pass off as cash his own drafts in payment for the public lands, through his particular friend and agent, who was afterward his commissioner, appointed by himself to inquire into "frauds in the sale of public lands," and was particularly instructed by him to inquire if any of the officers had "sold public lands at any time otherwise than for ready money." If it was a violation of law, and a fraud on the government, in 1834, to receive this kind of payment for the public lands, it was equally so in 1833. He and his commissioner are then both guilty of fraud, in fact, for the fault was not theirs that the arrangement was not carried into effect. This speaks volumes as to the purity of intention, and of the patriotism in the getter-up of this investigation. That it was not the public good that prompted him must be apparent to all.]

No. 16.—Samuel F. Purvine.

Witness proves that James R. Marsh, (the commissioner appointed to inquire into "frauds in the sale of public lands," did pay him, the witness, and J. Francis, the sum of one hundred dollars, "not to bid on the south-west quarter of section 21, township 22, range 1 west, at the public land sales in December, 1824, at Chocchuma; and that the said quarter was transferred to the said James R. Marsh, it having sold at $1 25 per acre. [Here is the individual in whom the committee of the Senate "repose entire confidence in his prudence and fidelity," guilty of bribery in the sale of the public lands, and in violation of a solemn act of Congress, and that in but a few months after he was moving heaven and earth to ruin others on pretended charges, not to be compared, if true, in enormity, to this. The 4th section of the act of Congress of 1830, page 43, it is enacted "that if any person or persons shall, before or at the time of the public sale of any of the lands of the United States, bargain, contract, or agree with any other person or persons, that the last-named person or persons shall not bid upon or purchase the land so offered for sale, or any parcel thereof, or shall, by intimidation, combination, or unfair management, hinder or prevent, or attempt to hinder or prevent, any person or persons from bidding upon or purchasing any tract or tracts of land so offered for sale, every such offender, his, her, or their aiders and abettors, being thereof duly convicted, shall, for every such offence, be fined not exceeding one thousand dollars, or imprisoned not exceeding two years," &c.

The original of the above deposition was in the hands of a senator in Congress during the session of 1834 and 1835, at the time the committee made their report, and must have been known to at least the chairman of the Committee on Lands, for his political friend had it in charge. Why it was not noticed in the report of the committee, the public may infer. The person implicated then held the commission of the chairman of the committee, was his personal and political friend, and his agent to purchase lands in 1833 on drafts; and his bribing an individual not to bid against him at the public sales is no offence.]

No. 17.—John T. Hammond.

Witness fully explains the operations of the company at Chocchuma, in 1833; states that Samuel Gwin opposed the company by all the means in his power; that he threatened to suspend the sales; refutes the statements made by Edward Row, in his deposition; states that he was called on by James R. and S. B. Marsh to give a deposition, and "believes that parts of his statements were not put down by them;" was not qualified to said statement, nor was it read to him, nor did he ever sign it; protests against its being received as his deposition; states that "the said James R. Marsh, in his examination of witnesses, was prejudiced against said Samuel Gwin," and is "personally opposed to him;" that said James R. Marsh "pretended to administer an oath to the deponent," he not being authorized to administer oaths under any law in Mississippi.

No. 18.—Samuel McCall.

Witness states that part of his evidence was omitted by Marsh; states in his present deposition what he then stated to Marsh, and if it is not contained in his deposition it was omitted by design; saw nothing improper or illegal in Samuel Gwin at said sales; by referring to document 22, page 50, you will discover his deposition as published, and by a comparison you will find a material difference, which was by design no doubt, as it materially affected Governor Runnels, with whom the Commissioner had a difficulty of old standing, and which was used at a late election to his injury.

No. 19.—Thacker W. Winter.

Witness explains the objects and conduct of the company at Chocchuma, in 1833; states that, to his knowledge, propositions were made to Samuel Gwin to become a member of the company, who refused, and declared that he would protect the interest of the United States to the utmost of his ability; never heard it suggested by any member of the company, or any other individual, that Samuel Gwin was interested in said company in any way.

No. 20.—Nicholas Gray.

Witness was a clerk in the land office. During the time he was there, saw nothing improper or illegal in the conduct of Samuel Gwin; that he conducted the sales with fidelity not only to the government, but to the purchasers; saw or heard nothing that led him to believe that Samuel Gwin was a member, or in any way interested in said company, but knows said Gwin did oppose the company to the utmost extent of his power; saw no partiality or favoritism in said Gwin; his rules were well adapted to put all on an equal footing.

No. 21.—Colonel William Pratt.

Witness disproves part of the testimony of Edmund Row; knows that said Gwin was violently opposed to the company; so violent was said Gwin to it, that he was led to believe he was opposed to the settlers getting their lands at government price; believes said Gwin conducted said sales to the best of his ability as regards the interest of the government; saw no partiality or favoritism in said Gwin to any one.

No. 22.—William Fanning.

Witness gives a history of the formation of the company; saw no combination to prevent by force, threats or other means, any one from bidding at said sales; that the settlers might bid or not for their lands at their discretion, but if bid off by the company, it was transferred to the settler at cost; saw nothing in the conduct of said Gwin that induced him to believe he was in any way interested in said company, or received any profits arising from it; believes said Gwin conducted said sales to the best interest of the government, and that he was vigilant and persevering in his endeavors; learned from J. R. Marsh in June, 1834, that he was unfriendly to Samuel Gwin; saw none of the "profligate scenes" alluded to in the report of the committee; has been frequently at Chocchuma since the sales in 1833, particularly during the time of proving up pre-emptions, and believes said Gwin acted with the utmost impartiality on that trying occasion.

No. 23.—James T. Crawford.

Witness was at said sales; saw nothing that led him to believe Samuel Gwin was in any way interested in said company; saw no partiality or favoritism in said Gwin.

No. 24.—Augustus L. Humphrey.

Witness was at said sales; disproves many of the statements contained in the depositions of Edmund Row; sates that Samuel Gwin conducted said sales to the interest of the United States as far as he could; saw no partiality or favoritism in said Gwin during said sales, or at any other time.

No. 25.—Olsimus Kendrick.

Witness was at the sales in Chocchuma in 1833; saw or heard nothing that induced him to believe that Samuel Gwin was in any way interested in the land company at that place; saw nothing in the conduct of Gwin that tended to favoritism or partiality; but that the said Gwin acted with due vigilance in guarding the interest of the United States; saw none of the "profligate scenes," or "over-awing bidders," or the "driving off all competition," or that the settlers should not bid for so much land as they chose, as reported by the committee; nor did he ever hear it insinuated that Samuel Gwin "connived at" any fraudulent acts at said sales, or at any time, or that he participated with the company in any of their transactions; nor did he hear that the company had an office near the register's office. Speaks favorably of the course of Samuel Gwin under the pre-emption law.

No. 26.—John Reed.

Witness was at the sales in Chocchuma, in 1833; has no reason to believe that Samuel Gwin was in any way interested in the land company formed at said sales; that he managed the sales as far as he could to the interest of the United States.

No. 27.—James T. Howard.

Witness was at the sales in Chocchuma, in 1833; does not know, nor has he any reason to believe that Samuel Gwin was, either directly or indirectly, interested in said company; believes said Gwin managed said sales to the best of his ability, and to the interest of the United States.

No. 28.—John H. McKinney.

Witness speaks very favorably of the conduct of Samuel Gwin at the sales at Chocchuma in 1833; that he was at said sales, and saw nothing improper, illegal, or unjust, in said Gwin, or that led him to believe he was in any way interested in said land company. If there were complaints against said Gwin, it was because he was too rigid in behalf of the United States; that his rules were well calculated to put all on an equal footing; saw no partiality or favoritism in him to any one at any time; that his conduct as an officer, up to the present time, has been highly meritorious for vigilance, activity, and accommodation. Corrects his former deposition about the members of the company having access to the office, to the exclusion of others; saw no one turned out of the office; states that, if there is anything in his former deposition (see doc. 22, p. 102) in the slightest degree implicating Samuel Gwin at said sale, or at any time since, it was not so given in by him, but was written incorrectly by Mr. Marsh.

No. 29.—Colonel Thomas Coapwood, of Alabama.

Witness alluded to said sales; corrects several charges attempted to be proved by the Messrs. Marsh on R. J. Walker; speaks in terms of high praise of the conduct of that gentleman in behalf of the settlers; does not know nor has reason to believe that Samuel Gwin was interested in said company in any way, and believes his conduct was impartial, legal, and perfectly in accordance with his duty.

No. 30.—Governor Hiram G. Runnels.

Witness was at said sales at Chocchuma in 1833; details a conversation Samuel Gwin had with him as to the propriety of his, Gwin's, suspending the sales on account of the formation of the land company. Witness, as an old land officer, and conversant with all the public land sales in the State, gives it as his opinion that the company was violating none of the acts of Congress, and that said Gwin had no right to stop the sales; gives information of two individuals who had marked lands as sold, on the maps of the Mount Salus land office, that were not sold, without the knowledge of Samuel Gwin, who had charge of said office.

No. 31.—Guilford Griffin.

Witness was the regular appointed auctioneer at the sales in 1833, at Chocchuma; attended said sales the first two weeks, and left on account of sickness; disproves the statement of Edmund Row, that Samuel Gwin was present and heard the speech of R. J. Walker; states of his own knowledge said Gwin was at his desk in the office during the time said speech was delivering; refutes various parts of Row's testimony about the company and Samuel Gwin; describes the local situation of said Gwin while the sales were going on, &c.; states that Samuel Gwin was not a member of the company, but was opposed to it. Hon. Mr. Black informed witness that he had been called on by Samuel Gwin to know if there was anything improper or illegal in the company agreement, or whether the officers could break up the company or suspend the sales, and that he, Judge Black, informed him that there was nothing illegal or improper in the company agreement, and that the officers would not be justifiable in suspending the sales; speaks in favorable terms of R. J. Walker on behalf of the settlers. Witness saw nor heard any of the "profligate scenes" alluded to in the report of the committee, and, as auctioneer, had constant and free intercourse with Samuel Gwin, and disproves every allegation contained in said report against said Gwin.

The evidence of this witness is very full and complete, and from his intimate connection, as auctioneer, with Samuel Gwin, exposes many falsehoods, not only contained in the report of the committee, but also of witnesses, and your particular attention is solicited to its perusal.

No. 32.—Colonel Hardin D. Runnels.

Witness was at said sales during the entire period of said sales, and heard every tract knocked off that was sold; controverts various parts of the report of the committee as well as the witnesses; heard the speech of R. J. Walker, and was a close observer of the conduct of said Walker, and speaks of it in high terms of praise; saw none of the "profligate scenes" or "great enormities," as reported by the committee; states it is not true that the company established an office in the vicinity of the register's office; states that Samuel Gwin was not, either directly or indirectly interested in said company, but knows he was very much opposed to it, and that he, the said Gwin, did caution the witness not to have anything to do with said company; never saw anything illegal, improper, or unjust, in said Gwin, who was a vigilant and faithful officer of the United States.

No. 33.—Joseph A. McRaven.

Witness heard the whole of R. J. Walker's speech at Chocchuma, in 1833, at the forming of said company; controverts various parts of Edmund Row's deposition, and the report of the committee in regard to the conduct of R. J. Walker at said sales; did not see Samuel Gwin at the delivery of that speech, nor was he a member of said company to his knowledge, nor did such an impression prevail at said sale; speaks in high terms of praise of the conduct of R. J. Walker in behalf of the settlers.

No. 34.—George Dougherty.

Witness was at the land sales in Chocchuma in 1833; gives a detailed history of the manner the land company was formed, and the causes that led to its formation, and the agency that R. J. Walker had in forming it. This witness gives a clear and lucid history of the whole transaction, which is highly honorable to R. J. Walker. The means of the witness's information was better than most others, as he heard the first proposition as to forming a company, and Mr. Walker's opposition to it, unless on certain conditions highly favorable to the settlers. Your attention is particularly requested to this deposition.

No. 35.—Hiram Coffee.

Witness was at said sales in 1833, and heard the speech of R. J. Walker; controverts various parts of the report of the committee, as also the evidence of various witnesses on the subject of the company operations; explains the company agreement, and controverts various parts of the report of the committee; states, had it not been for the exertions of R. J. Walker the settlers would have generally lost their lands; that the settlers gave said Walker a public dinner at the close of the sales as a testimony of their respect for his exertions in their behalf at the sales; does not know, nor has he any reason to believe, that Samuel Gwin was in any respect interested in said company; states that he conducted the said sales with diligence and fidelity to the government as well as to individuals.

No. 36.—D. W. Connelly.

Witness was generally in the land office; describes the situation of Samuel Gwin while the sales were progressing; that his whole time was engrossed in his official duties, which required his strict and undivided attention; disproves the testimony of Edmund Row in regard to Samuel Gwin, and believes said testimony to be false; has no doubt that Samuel Gwin was not a member of said company or concerned with it in any way. Witness bid against the company, and no attempts were made by it to restrain or interrupt him; recollects that members of the company did bid against the agents of the company; heard Samuel Gwin express strong opposition to the company, and heard him threaten to stop the sales if any combination was formed to depress the price of the public lands; disproves Row's testimony in regard to Wilkinson; saw nothing improper or illegal in the conduct of Samuel Gwin.

No. 37.—John Maxwell.

Witness speaks of the company and conduct of R. J. Walker in much the same terms as the preceding depositions, and of the conduct of Samuel Gwin. [I would also refer you to the depositions of this witness as taken by the commissioners, doc. 151, p. 74.]

No. 38.—Hon. W. L. Sharkey, chief justice.

Witness saw nothing illegal or improper in the company agreement, and advised a friend to join it.

No. 39.—Colonel Joseph Persons.

Witness described the manner of making applications at private entry, and controverts various attempts of the Marshes to prove Samuel Gwin acted partial and improper on this occasion; saw nothing illegal or improper in the conduct of Samuel Gwin; states if there is [and there is] any discrepancy between his present deposition and the one taken by Marsh, the error was not in him but in Marsh. Witness was sworn to his former deposition by Marsh.

No. 40.—David Kerr.

Witness speaks of the company and the advantage it was to the settlers; does not know or believe said Gwin was either directly or indirectly interested in said company, and that he managed said sales to the best of his ability, and for the interest of the United States.

No. 41.—Martin Loggins.

Evidence pretty much the same as the last in regard to the company and its advantages to the settlers; does not know or believe that Samuel Gwin was in any respect concerned with said company, but understood he was violently opposed to it.

No. 42.—Captain Titus Howard.

Witness states the object of the formation of the company and its benefits. Does not know or believe Samuel Gwin was interested in any way or manner in said company, or that he showed any partiality or favoritism in conducting said sales, nor was there an opinion to the reverse of this among those present, as far as he heard or believes. Witness was sworn to his former deposition by James R. Marsh.

No. 43.—William Pruitt.

Witness does not know of Samuel Gwin's being a member of said company at Chocchuma, in 1833, and believes that he managed the said sales with the utmost fairness, and to the interest of the United States.

In addition to the above depositions, I would respectfully call your attention to the following depositions, taken by order of the Committee on Public Lands, and published in the documents referred to, and opposite the following list of names, making in all seventy-seven (77) depositions in my favor to six (6) opposed. This number might have been run up much higher had my official duties permitted my attention to them. It is hoped and believed that, from the respectability of the witnesses who have deposed in opposition to those who have been selected by the commissioners from personal dislike to me, it will satisfy you that the public good had but little to do in the matter.
